Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, as we may with true repentance ſeeke to be reformed by his holy ſpirit, that we may follow his holy commaundements, and alſo that it may pleaſe him to beare with vs & to bury all our offences, vntil hee haue clothed vs with his owne righteouſnes, and rid vs of all the imperfections wherewith we be now inuironed. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

The Cix. Sermon which is the third vpon the eighteenth Chapter.

10.11.12.13.14.15 There ſhall not anie bee found among you, &c.

WE haue ſeene howe our Lorde, to make his worde preuaile among the Iewes, hath willed them to put away all ſuperſtitions from among them. For in verie deede the trueth of God cannot be cupled with ſatans lies & corruptiōs: we muſt be either altogether the ones or altogether the others. Alſo I haue declared vnto you, that this order of Preaching Gods word, muſt be obſerued to the worldes ende. In doing whereof I haue reſerued hitherto the declaring of the ſeuerall ſorts of the ſuperſtitions that are ſet down here: Firſt of all it is ſaide That the Iewes muſt not make their children to paſſe through ẏ fire. And ẏ may be taken two waies. For we know they were caried away ẇ ſuch rage, ẏ they burnt their childrē in ſacrifice, & ẏ was a terrible thing. But ye may ſee how fooliſh ẏ deuotiō of men is, when they eſtrange thēſelues frō God. Needs muſt they be all humane ſenſe, and needs muſt the deuil poſſeſſe them & driue thē into ſuch furie as is horrible to al men. Yet notwithſtanding, this miſcheefe befell among the Iewes, that they ſacrificed their children to Moloch. But there was yet an other faſhion of making their children to goe through the fire, whereof Moſes doeth rather ſpeake in this place, according to the obſeruing thereof among the heathen. They tearmed it a manner of purging or cleanſing when they vſed ſuch Ceremonies. As for example,* there haue remained ſome remnant thereof in the Popedome, in their Bonfires on Midſommer night. They had ſuch a kinde of witcherie as they did beare themſelues in hande, that it was a kinde of purging to go take the aire of that holy fire (as they eſteemed it) in going about it. But our Lord putteth ſuch ſuperſtitions among the number of inchauntmentes. Likewiſe the Papiſtes haue their holy water: and what elſe is that than a kinde of cleanſing inuented by them ſelues to ſet againſt the bloode of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and againſt Baptiſme, which is the true ſigne thereof? Then let vs marke well that here our Lorde condemneth all manner of purgings or clenſings which mē deuiſe of their own braine, when they will bee clenſed by any other meane than he hath ordeyned, which is, by the onely ſacrifice of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and by receyuing the records and aſſurāces of the ſame by the Sacramentes. True it is that the Sacraments of themſelues haue not this power in thē to make men cleane: it is not the water of baptiſme ẏ waſheth away our ſins before God: but it is a figure that putteth vs in minde of the trueth and ſubſtance, which ſealeth in vs the thing that was brought to paſſe by the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Thus much concerning this one point, that here our Lordes meaning is that men ſhould not inuent meanes or faſhions of purging themſelues, but bee contented with that which he hath ordeyned in his lawe.

Alſo he ſpeaketh of ſuch as haue regard of the flying of birdes, and obſerue times. Although it bee lawfull for vs to marke the courſes of the times according to the ſtarres: yet is it a curſed ſuperſtition well worthie to be condemned, when we goe beyond the order of nature. The meaſuring of the yeare by the courſe of the Sunne is according to Gods rule. So likewiſe is the meaſuring of the monethes by the courſe of the moone, and the obſeruing of the other thinges which God hath ſet in all the planets and ſtarres. For it is not ſaide for nought that God hath ordeyned the Sunne and the Moone to do vs ſeruice: but yet therewithal they haue a kind of gouernment ouer the day and the night: and thereof ſpringeth the difference of times, as is ſaid thereof. Then if men holde themſelues within thoſe bounds, no euil wil come of it: but if they range without them, and fall to inuenting of other thinges beyonde the ordinarie courſe of nature: then it is diueliſh ſuperſtitiō, like as that is which men call iudiciall Aſtrologie. For there are a great ſort of fantaſticall perſons nowadayes, which will take vpon them to tel mens fortunes by the diſpoſition of the Starres. Such a one (ſay they) ſhall come to ſuch an ende: or elſe if hee take his iourney on ſuch a day, ſuch a thing ſhall betide him, becauſe ſuch a planet reigneth and hath his aſpect to the taile of ſuch a one. Againe if a man be borne vnder ſuch an aſpect, then muſt he die after ſuch a ſort. When men inuent thinges after this faſhion beyond Gods limitation, they be but diueliſh deuiſes to corrupt the order of nature. Therefore let vs marke wel that here Moſes forbiddeth all ſuch diuinations as are made vppon the time: not meaning but that we ſhoulde haue reſpect of winter and ſommer, that we ſhoulde ſowe and reape, that wee ſhoulde dreſſe our vines according to the ſeaſon of the Moones, and as we ſee that opportunitie will ſerue beſt: For otherwiſe it were an vtter vndoing of all thinges, and an aboliſhing of the order that God hath ſet. But his meaning is that men ſhoulde not through their fonde and wicked deſires, paſſe the boundes which God hath appointed. So then let vs keepe our ſelues to this playnneſſe that God hath ſet downe.

Moreouer, whereas he ſpeaketh of Diuinatiō by the flight of birdes; It was too common a vice among the heathen, as I ſaide afore. When they were to take anie thing in hand, they went gaſing abroad in the aire, and they might not conclude vppon any thing, till they had ſeene ſome birde flying. And there were three or foure of them, or if they came frō the Eaſt or the North, they tooke them by & by for ſignes: and that was a curſed kinde of diuination. For why? we muſt holde it for a generall rule, that wee marre all when wee drawe Gods creatures to anie other vſe than he hath ordeyned them vnto. Let vs marke (ſay I) after what maner God will haue his creatures to be vſed. For as ſoone as we turne from that point, ſuch diſguiſing of his workes is a curſed corruption of them. God hath not created the birdes to ſpeake vnto vs by their flying from one place to another, nor to the end that we ſhoulde make account whether there be foure or fiue of them, or take their flying out of this coaſt or that coaſt to be a token of euil luck. Theſe are ſtarke witcheries, forged by men out of their owne fonde curioſitie, and blowen into their eares by Satan. And therefore let vs not maruell though our Lord haue forbidden vs ſuch thinges: for as ſoone as wee happen to bee imbrewed ẇ ſuch ſuperſtitions and follies, we muſt needes bee turned away from Gods trueth. Yea and there followeth iuſt puniſhment vpon ſuch curious perſons, ſo as they bee euer doubtful & in perplexitie.

For in as much as they reſorte to deade creatures, or to ſuch creatures as haue no reaſon nor vnderſtanding; they muſt needes bee alwayes vncertaine. But if wee feare our God; we ſhallbe ſure of all things. The feare of God is the beſt hold that wee can haue. I meane ſuch Pſal. 33. 1, 2 a reuerende feare of GOD, as therewithall we take him for our father. For if we be agaſt at him, we ſhall ſtil be in neuer the leſſe anguiſh & vnquietnes. But if wee ſubmit our ſelues to God for loue ; ſurelie his protection ſhall auaile vs to reſt vppon,ſo as we may defie Sathan and all that he practiſeth againſt vs. On the contrarie part, when we feare not God, we ſhall be afraid both of the birdes and of the beaſts,of the winde and of the rayne, of the Sun and of the Moone, of the earth and of the heauen; and to be ſhort, euen our owne ſhadowes(as men ſay)ſhal make vs afraide. And as for them which ſubmit them ſelues to the Sunne and Moone,and make Idols of them as though they had dominion ouer vs: all ſuch doe ſhowe in deede that they haue no feare of God in them , and therefore needes muſt they bee caried away anewe. Ier.10.2. And that is the cauſe why the Prophete Ieremie expreſſely forbiddeth vs to be afraide of the ſignes of the heauen, at leaſtwiſe according to the inchauntmentes which the Infidels haue inuented; as is ſaide alreadie. For if wee be afraide of them after yͤ maner,we bereaue God of his dominion, and impart it to the Stars and other dead creatures.But God wil haue the Sunne & the Moone to giue vs light,and to doe vs ſeruice with their natural vſe,(as the Sun to heate the earth,& the Moone and the Stars to giue their influences:) I ſay he will haue all theſe ſo to keepe their natures and proprieties; as that he himſelfe alone be the gouernour notwithſtanding. For when we imagine that the Sunne or the Moone haue ſuch power ouer vs,that we cannot goe one ſtep without they bring vs ſome miſaduenture or proſperitie by their aſpectes towardes vs : is not God himſelfe ſo much debaced? Yes verily. If it be ſaid that God worketh by his creatures: that is true: but yet will he not doe it after that faſhion. We muſt haue an eye to the meane which he hath helde,and we muſt not go beyond that. And therefore as many as rend Gods dominion in peeces and impart it ſo to the liueleſſe creatures, are ſtarke mad, and it is good reaſon that they ſhould alwayes bee as men in a traunce or afrighted,& not know where to become.Wherefore let vs learne to put our ſelues in ſuch wiſe vnder the hand & guiding of our God:as we fall not to paſſing beyond the courſe of nature.That is the thing which wee haue to remember here.

As touching the other kinds, indeede a man might diſtinguiſh thẽ,as many haue laboured to doe: but it is enough for vs to vnderſtande that here is mention made of Inchaunters, Sorcerers, Calkers, workers with Familiars, and of ſuch as aske counſell at the dead. As concerning Inchaunters, they be not theſe Iugglers that bleare mens eies with ſlight of hand,and make men beleeue they doe the things which they doe not: but the diuell hath ſuch dominion ouer the vnbeleeuers, that although a thing be not done in very deed; yet the illuſion is ſuch, as makes men beleeue they ſee that which they ſee not. And ſo it is a kinde of Inchauntment,that is to ſay of diueliſh illuſion, when a man ſhall bee made to thinke that one is transformed into a wolfe,or that hee ſees the ſhape of a thing that hath no ſubſtance or trueth indeede. Now it is demaunded whether ſuch thinges can be done or no. Exod.8.7. And why not?we haue an example in Pharaoes ſorcerers, who made frogges to come vp as well as Moſes did: not that the diuell hath any thing in his owne power: for we muſt not imagine that hee can fight againſt God to doe aught whether he will or no: we knowe he is vnder Gods hande,& can doe nothing without leaue or licence. Hee may well attempt much, but yet can he not ſtir one finger, as ye woulde ſay. And hereof wee haue example euident enough in Iob: Iob.1.6. for we ſee yͭ the diuel is there among the Angels,that is to ſay,that he is faine to come yeelde an account before Gods ſeate,and to haue leaue of him,and to be admitted. As much is ſaide when God will haue Achab to bee beguiled for his Idolatrie. 1.Kin.32 21. Ye ſee then howe the ſcripture ſheweth that the diuell hath not a ſeuerall dominion by himſelfe,as though he could attempt any thing againſt God. But yet by permiſſion he may indeede trouble the aire,and alſo do other thinges, after which maner God is ſaide to ſend tempeſtes & hailes. And by whome doeth he it? By the wicked Angels. Pſal.78.49. For he ſpeaketh not there of the heauenly Angels,but of the diuels by name, which execute Gods vengeance vpon men.And therefore let vs marke,that (as experience alſo ſheweth) yͤ diuels may worke many ſuch illuſions by inchauntmentes. And truely ſuch thinges are not done but in the dark.For ſo long as we be inlightened by GOD, we neede not feare that a man ſhall ſeeme a wolfe to vs, or that ſuch triſhtraſh ſhall get the vpper hand of vs.But if we be faithles,it is a iuſt reward for our quenching of yͤ light yͭ ſhould haue ſhone into vs, & of our turning of our backes vnto God. And when we wil not bee ruled by him,then diſcern we no more between white and black, but men ſeeme vnto vs to bee wolues,and al things are out of order,& that iuſtly. Therefore whereas here is mention made of ſuch as miſhape things by their inchantments: Let vs note yͭ the law is not ſuperfluous.For ſith yͤ caſe ſtandeth ſo,it is to be cõcluded yͭ ſuch things may befall,as whereof we haue examples.

But yet for al that, it is abhominable before God:and ſo likewiſe are Soothſayers.It is a queſtiõ whether it be poſſible for mã to foretel of things, for it is Gods office to foreknow things to come: and how then may it belong to the diuell? Sure it is(as ſaith yͤ prophet Eſay)that idols can foreſee nothing. Eſa.41.23. And as for Satan, hee muſt alwayes needs be the father of lies,& deceiue al ſuch as aske counſyl of him. Yet notwithſtanding God doth nowe & then ſuffer ſatan to tel of things to come,and yͭ is for the more hardening of ſuch as wil not obey the truth, 2.Theſſ.2.11 12. (as we haue ſeene by example in the thirteenth chapter) Deut.13.3. & it hath been treated of partly already. Yet notwithſtanding it is true alſo,that ſoothſayers do ly moſt cõmonly, and by that meanes our Lorde deludeth them yͭ ſeeke counſel of ſatan after yͤ faſhion. And beſide let vs not thinke it ſtrange,though inchaunters, ſoothſayers,& ſuch other like do now & then tel of things to come:for it is gods iuſt ſufferance,to yͤ intent they ſhould be yͤ deeplier plunged in error.For aſmuch as they wold needs be willingly deceiued,he letteth thẽ be ſo,yͭ they may periſh. Thus ye ſee why the law was made concerning ſuch as diuine of thinges to come. Alſo hee ſpeaketh of Sorcerers: And this ſort conteyneth manie thinges: For what a ſinne is it, that men ſhoulde forſake God, and giue themſelues ouer to Satan? Muſt they not needes fall into horrible confuſion? Yes: For after Satan hath once poſſeſſed vs and ſtopped our eyes, and that God hath withdrawen his light from vs, ſo as we bee deſtitute of his holy ſpirite, and voyde of all reaſon: then follow infinite abuſes without ende or meaſure. And thereof come ſorceries. Manie incredible thinges are reported of Sorcerers. And truely when wee heare them ſpoken of, we ought not onely to miſlike of them, but alſo bee ſorrowfull in our heartes, yea & the very haires of our heades ought to ſtand vp thereat. But yet therewithall we muſt conſider that they bee reuengementes of God caſt vppon ſuch as haue forſaken him. And that the ſame may be a cauſe to holde vs in awe and feare, let vs learne not to tempt our God nor to play with him, ſith we ſee men become ſo brutiſhe after they be once turned away from the right path. Truely if there were no moe but two or three examples hereof; yet might it well ſeeme ſtraunge vnto vs. But we know that in al ages and in al Nations Sorcerie or witchcraft hath borne ſway, yea and yͤ more ſway for yͤ reiecting of Gods truth. Inſomuch yͭ where men haue once fallen to withſtanding yͤ truth & haue diſdained to be taught by the pure worde of God; there haue followed the moe illuſions of Sathan, yea and the more exceſſiue, which haue alſo beene the more manifeſt and greeuous. And whereof commeth this, but of 2.Theſſ.2.11 12. the cauſe which Saint Paul ſheweth vs in his epiſtle to the Theſſalonians? namely that ſuch as will not obey the trueth, are vtterly peruerted by leaſinges: and that thence forth the diuell muſt needes worke with the greater force, bycauſe God giueth him the bridle to carie men ſo away as they become ougly monſters. To be ſhort, wee muſt beare in minde, that whereas God ſpeaketh to vs of inchauntmentes and ſorceries, it is to holde vs ſhorte vnder the obedience of his worde, leaſt wee ſhoulde fall into ſuch a maze as the wretched Infidels are in, yea and proceede ſo farre as to wander quite away, when we haue once forſaken his worde. Therefore let vs abide in this ſimplicity of obeying him and of ſubmitting our ſelues to his mouth.

Alſo here is mention made of workers with Familiars. As touching the which, needes muſt Satans illuſions be horrible. But what? There haue beene of them in all ages, and wee ſee a 1.Sam.28.7. notable example thereof in king Saule when he went to the Witch. He as king had erſt forbidden all inchauntmentes and all kinde of damnable craftes, and hee had behaued himſelfe vertuouſly in executing Gods lawe. And yet in the ende he became ſo wretched, that hee fell to running after a Witch. And what was yͤ cauſe thereof, but that he diſpiſed God? Whereuppon in the ende he fell into deſpaire, and gaue himſelfe ouer altogether to Satan: which thing hee ſhewed full well. For if ye looke aduiſedly into the matter, ye ſhall finde that Satans illuſions doe then get the vpper hand of men, when their wittes bee amaſed by reaſon of ſorrowfulneſſe that gnaweth them inwardly, & for that in ſteede of receiuing ſome comfort of Gods word, they bee ouerwhelmed with ſuch anguiſhe, that they fall into vtter deſpayre. When doeth Sathan meete a man in ſome bodily ſhape, and tangle him in his ſnares? When a man is in ſome greefe of minde, or in ſome hatred againſt his neighbour, or when a woman ſpiteth her husbande. Well then, although ſuch affections beare ſway, yet doeth not God by and by giue Sathan the bridle, to raigne ouer men, vntill they be come to ſuch extremitie that they fall to chawing vppon the bit, and become ſo wilfull in their ſorowe, that they fall into deſpaire and will no more admit anie comforte, but refuſe all remẽbraunce of G O D, and woulde that his name were buried: for there is the gate open to Satan, and he entereth to worke his illuſions, which a man is not able to withſtande. Hereof we haue a faire warning in Saul. For hee had offended God, and therefore was to be bereft of his kingdome, becauſe it was Gods pleaſure it ſhoulde be ſo, and there was none other ſhifte for him but to humble himſelfe. But he would not doe that. And when hee ſawe there was no meane to appeaſe Gods diſpleaſure, but that for 1.Sam.15. all his flattering of Samuell, yet hee auayled ſo 27,28.
litle thereby, that when hee had rent the Prophetes Cote, the Prophete ſaide vnto him, euen ſo will God rende the kingdome from thee: hee cryed out and flang himſelfe out of his bounds, ſaying thus: What ſhould I doe more? Seeing that God hath forſaken mee, I alſo on my ſide muſt forſake him. And what was the end hereof? He went after Witches. Whereas hee hadde puniſhed inchaunters before; nowe he goeth to ſeeke them. And what came of it? Samuell was ſhewed him in a ſhape, that is to ſay in a ſhadowe and imagination, ſo as he thought the Prophete to haue beene raiſed vp againe by meanes of the Witch. Sith we ſee it befell thus to ſuch a king as God had choſen, and to whom hee had giuen the ſacred authoritie, til the kingdome of Dauid were ſet vp: what ſhall wee ſay to it? Let vs applie it to ſuch inſtruction as I haue touched alreadie, to make vs liue in feare. For when men doe feele themſelues after that ſort in euil, and wilfully ſhrinke away from God: Satan muſt needes take poſſeſſion of them, and then is there not any thing vnpoſſible vnto him. Wee ſhall heare incredible thinges reported of Witches, and wee muſt not maruell though God execute ſo exceeding great vengeaunce. For when men haue once turned their backes vpon him, and forſaken him euen of wilfull malice: they muſt needs become ſtarke beaſtes.

Finally here is mention made of ſuch as aske counſell of the deade. For it is not our Lords will that wee ſhoulde haue anie thing to doe with the deade. Therefore they that vſe ſuch coniurations, goe about to peruert the whole order of nature. For doe men what they can, yet can they not bring the liuing and the deade together: but the deuill ſteps in betwixt them and pretendeth the perſons of the dead,ſo as to outward ſeeming,the dead man himſelfe appeareth (as was not long ſince rehearſed) whereas in very deed it is the diuell that worketh ſuch illuſions. And therefore let vs marke wel, that ſeeing our Lord hath forbidden vs to haue to doe with the dead, we cannot be deceiued ſo long as wee keepe within our bounds, and attempt not anie thing which we ſee not to bee compriſed within the order which he hath ſet. And thereby we ſee alſo, that al the things yͭ euer haue bin ſaid of yͤ comming vp againe of dead mens ghoſts, haue bin but ſleights of ſatan: & when men haue bin beguiled by thã,it was al one as if they had wilfully yeelded thẽſelues ſlaues to ſatan. And yet was it held for great deuotion in Poperie. The cauſe why they made pilgrimages, and Maſſes to be ſung, yea and their feaſt of all ſoules to be kept once a yeare, was by reaſon of a Reuelatiõ or dreame of ſome deuout Monke that had an idle head. He heard yͤ crying of deadmens ſoules: and thereupon the Papiſtes concluded, that a ſolemne feaſt was to be kept for the dead,& ſuch and ſuch things were to be done for them. To be ſhort,in that men haue inuented ſeruice for the dead in the Popedome,that was nothing els but meere witcherie, euen ſuch as God diſliketh in this text and vtterly abhorreth. And all they yͭ haue their deuotion after yͤ faſhion to pray for yͤ dead,are witches and ſorcerers:for they beleeue in Satans inchantments in deſpite of God.

And now let vs marke that theſe thinges here are not noted as ſmal & tolerable faults: but it is ſaid expreſly, that they be abhominable before God, & that the people of Chanaan were to be rooted out for ſuch crimes & miſdeeds. Wherby we ſee yͭ although other vices were to be pardoned, yet ought this to be puniſhed and vtterly roted out. Therefore if we willbe taken for Gods people,let vs ſee that we vnderſtand what this word Abhomination betokeneth: namely yͭ we muſt be very ware of ſorceries, inchauntments,& ſuch other like things. And indeed wee ſee how ſuch things haue euer bin miſliked,euen among yͤ heathen. How much ſoeuer witchcraft had raigned,yet was it a great thing for a man to haue asked,is this well done? For euery man would haue ſaid,How ſo? It is a monſter: it is a ſhamefull & curſed thing. After yͤ maner did the heathen ſpeake thereof. For it was Gods will yͭ it ſhould be ſo ingrauen in mens harts,as it might be reproued euen without yͤ doctrine of the lawe. True it is yͭ in Poperie all are witches in their idolatries:for in yͤ fiftenth of the 1.Sa.15.23. firſt booke of Samuel, God cuppleth thoſe two ſins togither:yea & I haue told you already,yͭ the ſeruice of yͤ dead is a kind of witchcraft. Yet notwithſtanding they alwaies abhorre yͤ terme,and vtterly miſlike thereof. And why? Becauſe God hath ſuffered it to make thẽ yͤ more vnexcuſable. So then let vs marke,yͭ it is not for vs to ſuffer either inchanters or witches amõg vs. And if theſe be forbidden;we muſt vnderſtand therwithall,yͭ all other kinds of Wiſardrie are deadly crimes before God. And if Iudges & Magiſtrats do their duties,it is certain yͭ they wil no more beare with them than with murthers. It ſeemeth a ſmal fault to turne about yͤ ſiue (as we terme it in this coũtry):but it is more worthy to be puniſhed,than yͤ fleaing of a man quicke. For why? It is an ouerthrowing of Gods ſeruice, and a peruerting of yͤ order of nature. Were it not worthy of puniſhment and puniſhment againe, if the order of nature ſhould bee confounded betweene men and bruit beaſts? Were there any reaſon in ſo doing? And ſurely when men begin with ſuch inchauntments,it is certain yͭ they fall into a deeper and dreadfuller dungeon,than if they giue ouer their bodies to companie with the bruit beaſtes. And yet we ſee the ſelfe ſame illuſions to bee wrought by ſatan vpon al witches & ſorcerers. And what is the originall cauſe thereof, but that they bee turned away from Gods truth? Although there were no further euill in it than the attributing of Gods office vnto ſatan: yet were it a matter in no wiſe to be borne with. There is a thing concealed from me,& I wold know it:yea, but God is not minded to diſcouer it vnto thee. Thats no matter, I will find it out by ſome meanes or other though he ſay nay to it, yea I will haue vnderſtanding of it by diueliſh illuſion. Is it not a making of warre againſt God, if this be ſuffered? So then let vs marke,that if we will be taken for Chriſtians;Witchcraftes,inchantments,& ſuch other like thinges muſt bee leſſe borne with among vs,than Robberies and murthers.

Alſo it ought to make indeede the hayres to ſtand vpvpon our heads,when it is ſaid yͭ the heathen which were neuer trayned vp in the law,were roted out becauſe of ſuch things. For if God pardoned not yͤ infidels which neuer had any knowledge of his truth: what ſhal become of vs yͭ are ſo wel warned, to whome God crieth aloude, that hee will not ſuffer it, and that ſuch abhominations ſtinke before him,and that we muſt be cleanſed from them, or elſe he vtterly diſclaimeth vs? I pray you ſhall we hope to bee ſpared, when wee lie ſtill aſleepe, hauing ſuch warning from heauen? God muſt firſt giue ouer his office. Againe, whereas it is ſet downe here, firſt that God cannot away with ſuch abhominations, & ſecondly hath ſhewed in effect what puniſhment ſhall inſue vpõ it, by rooting out thoſe that rebelled not wilfully againſt him, but had euer bin hardened in their ſuperſtitions, and neuer knew ne taſted of the good doctrine: ſeeing that ſuch are rooted out for hauing to doe with ſatan: it ſtandeth vs in hande to take the better heede, and to learne to withholde our ſelues in ſuch wiſe from all illuſions and wiles,that if there be either ſorcerer,witch,or wiſarde among vs,they be liuely repreſſed. If there be a poyſoner or a theefe; euery man runnes vppon him. For it is knowen that they be the common enemies of mankinde which do ſo peruert al lawe, and indeuour to aboliſh all policie and order of nature. But theſe are much worſe. For God hath commaunded that his worde ſhoulde raigne among vs: and ought not euery one of vs to be diligent in preuenting the miſcheefe when the diuell goeth about to ouerthrowe all and to bring all thinges Eſa.2.3.4. to horrible confuſion? Verily it is not to be douted but that becauſe manie ſuperſtitions are ſuffered, God alſo doeth giue Satan head, to ouerwhelme vs altogether. Wo worth them that haue plaide the blinde buſſardes, and woulde ſee nothing, but haue ſuffered the miſcheefe to ſettle among vs. For it muſt needes increaſe more and more, vntill it come to the top, and that wee be ſo far and ſo deepely plunged in it, as it is vnpoſſible for vs to get out againe. That is yͤ thing which wee haue to remember vpon this Text.

And further let vs marke well, that whereas Moſes ſaith here, that the Iewes muſt not doe ſo; but that they muſt giue eare to Gods Prophet: it is according to that which I haue expounded alreadie: namely that foraſmuch as God hath giuen vs ſo good a remedie by being taught at his mouth, it is good reaſon that wee ſhould hearken vnto him. If we had no witnes of Gods will it were halfe an excuſe for vs to alledge, yea but ſhould wee knowe nothing? The Infidels haue meanes to finde out thinges by their illuſions. True it is that they ſerue idols: but yet are they in better caſe than we bee. After this maner might we ſpeake. But our Lorde telleth vs, that wee ſhall haue teaching enough, if we liſt to hearken to his worde. He addeth that he will raiſe vp Prophets from among vs. As if hee ſhoulde ſay vnto vs, Wretched men, ſeeing that I am ſo gratious to you as to condeſcende to your rudeneſſe and infirmitie, and to ſpeake to you by the mouthes of men: are ye not too too vnthankefull and malicious in turning away for my doctrine, to ſatans traſhe, ſo as ye can not finde in your heartes to acquaint your ſelues with the manner of teaching which I haue choſen as fitteſt and conuenienteſt for you? Then is it not ſuperfluous that God ſaith here, that hee will raiſe vp a Prophet from among vs which ſhal be one of our brethrē. Indeede we coulde well finde in our heartes that the Angels ſhoulde come downe from heauen to ſpeake vnto vs: but our deſiring thereof, ſpringeth of a fooliſh luſt. For as ſhal be ſhewed more fully hereafter) yͤ people of Iſrael hauing founde by experiēce what it was to heare Gods voice in his heauenly maieſtie: were ſo afraide, that they beſought God to ſpeake to them by the mouth of Moſes. Now then, if the choice were put vnto vs, it is certaine that wee ſhould euer finde it beſt for vs that God ſhould ſpeak vnto vs by the mouthes of mē. And it was knowē to be ſo: as we haue ſeene heretofore, and as God himſelfe auoweth there againe, ſaying: I like wel of the peoples requeſt, that there ſhoulde bee a meane betwixt them and me, and that there ſhould be a man to bring them worde from me in my name. And ſo here our Lord vpbraideth men with their vnthankfulnes, in that they wil not receiue his worde when it is brought them by the Prophets and teachers whom he hath appointed & placed in his Church. If he had ſaid, I wil ſend mine Angels; it had bin much. But we ſee how men abuſe euen the heauenly reuelations alſo. God therefore applieth himſelfe ſo much yͤ more vnto vs, & commeth downe one ſtep lower vnto vs, in yͭ hee ſaith, I wil raiſe you vp a Prophet frō amōg your brethrē. Sith we ſee that God cōmeth ſo familiarly vnto vs, & ſpeaketh with vs as it were mouth to mouth: were wee not worſe than mad, if wee ſhould ſay I would that God would ſend mee his Angels, I would he would worke ſome miracles, I would hee would ſend mee ſome reuelations, or raiſe me vp the dead, & tel me ſome newes of the things that are done in the other world? Needs muſt it be yͭ we be driuen by the diuell, when we haue ſo inordinate deſires. For behold our God intendeth to teach vs familiarly. After what maner? I will raiſe vp men. Now ſeeing we bee wont to be fellowlike one wͭ an other: what a prerogatiue doth he giue vs in applying himſelfe ſo vnto vs? We be lyers by nature, we be full of vanitie: & yet doth God appoint vs to be preachers of his word, and meſſagers of his vnfallible trueth: he appointeth men as his inſtruments to ſpeake in his name.

And ſo let vs beare in minde, that when God graunteth vs the grace to haue his word faithfully expounded vnto vs, and to haue ſhepeheards to teach vs: it is ſuch a priuiledge as ought well to holde vs in ſuch ſingleneſſe of faith, that all curioſitie be laide away among vs, and none of vs be led with fond deſires, as they be which are euer ſeeking and neuer attaine to the knowledge 2.Tim.3.7. of the trueth.. Let vs beware (I ſay) yͭ we be not ſuch queſtioners, and diſputers of this and that: and let it ſuffice vs to heare our God ſpeake, aſſuring our ſelues that he hath ſo ratified that order as we neede not to doubt but that it is the verie way to be taught by him. For (as ſhall bee declared more fully hereafter) let vs marke that whereas our God hath ratified his lawe: yet to yͤ ende it ſhoulde be helde for the more certaine, he hath alſo left vs the Prophetes, and that the Goſpell hath yet had a more full approbation when it was publiſhed. For at that time (as is ſaide by the Prophet Haggeus) God ſhooke, not Agge.2.7. onely the earth, but alſo the heauen. And therfore when we come to heare the doctrine that is drawen out of the lawe as out of the verie fountaine, and out of the Prophets, and out of the Goſpell which is the perfection of all our wiſedome: when we take that touchſtone to trie the things that are ſet afore vs, and are deſirous to be taught of God: Let vs not doubt but we ſtand vppon a ſure grounde, and ſhall haue whatſoeuer is needfull for our ſaluation, and therefore let vs leaue al vnprofitable ſpeculations; to ſuch as can not find in their heartes to bee taught in Gods ſchoole; and let it ſuffice vs that our Lord ſpeaketh not to vs by halues, nor as it were to leaue vs hanging in the aire that we might know neuer the more what to doe: but that he giueth vs ſuch a knowledge as we may be throughly aſſured, and ſafely reſt vpon the ſaluation of our ſoules. Thus ye ſee howe we ſhould put this text in vre, tarying till the reſt may bee laide foorth more fully.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgment of our ſins, praying him to make vs feele thē better than we haue don, & yͭ we may more & more be drawē to him wͭ ſuch repētāce, yͭ forſaking al our own luſts our whole deſire may be to be gouerned by him, & to be held in ſuch awe to him, as we may not ſwarue ex-either to the right hande or to the left, by withdrawing our ſelues from his obedience;but that ſeeing he hath once ſhewed vs the way of ſaluation,wee may neuer turne away from it for any practiſe of ſatan,howſoeuer he ſeeke to blind our eyes with his illuſions & inchantments, nor bee ſuffered by our good God to fall into his ſnares, to be trapped by him,& in ỷ end to be ſwallowed vp and drowned; but ỷ we be ſo inlightened by ỷ holy Ghoſt,as we may ſhunne and eſchew all ſatans allurements, which tende but to our ruine. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely to vs,but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth &c.

On Tewſday the iij. of December. 1555

The Cx. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the eighteenth Chapter.

16 According to all that thou deſiredſt of the Lord thy God at Horeb, in the day of the aſſemblie, when thou ſaiedſt, Let mee henceforth heare the voice of the Lord my God no more, nor ſee this great fire any more,leaſt I die.

17 And the Lord ſaid vnto me,they haue done well,to ſay ſo:

18 I will raiſe them vp a Prophet from among their brethren,like vnto thee: and I will put my words in his mouth,and he ſhall ſpeake vnto them,all that I commaund him to ſay.

19 And it ſhall come to paſſe, that whoſoeuer obeyeth not my words that hee ſhall ſpeake in my name,I will call him to account for it.

20 But the Prophet that ſhall preſume to ſpeake words in my name, which I haue not commanded him to ſpeake,or which ſpeaketh in the name of other gods: that Prophet ſhall die for it.

AFter that God hath declared that he wil gouern his church by meanes of his word preached by men: he addeth that the ſame is done at ỷ requeſt of the people themſelues. As who ſhoulde ſay, that they which will not obey the doctrine of the law,are dubble guiltie. For they deſpiſe the maieſtie of God:and that is too outragious a rebellion. And beſides that,they be alſo thankleſſe, in that God vſeth them after their owne deſire. For how was the Lawe publiſhed? Did not God giue ſignes of his preſence as though he had come down from heauen, and ſpoken viſiblie to the Iewes? But they perceiuing that Gods glorie amaſed them and made them at their wittes ende, deſired to haue ſome Prophet to ſpeake to them, and to bring his meſſages to them: which thing was graunted vnto them. Nowe if they cannot like of the condition that they themſelues required: what excuſe is there for them? Wee ſee then what the meaning of Moſes was, in ſaying that GOD woulde raiſe vp Prophetes from time to time among the Iewes, yea euen according to their owne requeſt, as who ſhould ſay that nothing coulde be better for them. Sith it is ſo, it was for them to holde them to that order. For if they coulde not abide the thing that was graunted them at their owne requeſt; what a thing were that? Should they not ſhewe themſelues vtterly vntractable and vnruly?

Exod.20.18.19.

Moreouer it behoueth vs to wey yet better the circumſtances that are ſet downe heere, namely according to all that thou deſiredſt at Horeb. God thinkes it not ynough to ſay that it came of the Iewes themſelues to deſire a Prophet:but he doth alſo ſhew that he condeſcended in al points to their deſire. For the Gentler that God ſheweth himſelfe towards vs, and the more he faſhioneth himſelfe to our nature: the more are wee bounde vnto him:and if wee drawe not nigh vnto him,ſurely we bee dubble to blame. We heare how S. Paul ſaith; Brethrē,be ye as I am;for I deſire not but to be as you are. If a mā ſpeake after ỷ maner,ſhal he not be heard? If God thē ſhal appeare in his glorie,and ſhal ſay: That hauing pitie of vs, he will for our ſake ſtoope downe & debaſe himſelfe; and we hereupon remaine hardharted,& can at no hand bow our ſelues to obey him: muſt it not needs follow,that we are vtterly void of all ſenſe, and ỷ the diuell hath ſo blinded vs,that there is no more natural vnderſtanding in vs? Yes: For it muſt needes be a horrour to vs, not to followe our God when he ſheweth vs ſuch example. Who are we that our GOD ſhoulde as it were transforme himſelfe (as wee ſee hee maketh himſelfe both a father and a mother,and a nource towards vs,) and that wee on our ſide ſhoulde holde skorne to bowe any whit vnto him? Thus yee ſee what we haue to marke vppon this ſaying, where Moſes telleth vs that God gaue his people all that they had deſired of him.

Gal.4.12.

But therewithall we muſt alſo remember the fearefulneſſe of the people. It is ſaide, Let vs not heare the voyce of our God any more,nor ſee this great fire any more, for feare leaſt we die. I haue tolde you you already howe it was Gods will to authoriſe his Lawe by doing the myracles that were ſeene at mount Horeb. And it was meete that the Lawe ſhoulde be ratified after that faſhion, to the intent men might knowe that Moſes deuiſed it not of his owne heade, nor added any thing to it of his owne: but that God was the author thereof. When the trumpettes ſounded in the aire, when the skie was on a fire, when the greate thunders were hearde, and when the order of nature was chaunged: the Iewes ought well to haue vnderſtoode, that God ſhewed himſelfe to bee their gouernour, and that the Law came of him, and that he auowed it to be his. Yee ſee then that that was as a ſeale to make the Law of God to bee of authoritie. But there was yet another reaſon; which was that God meant to make the Iewes perceiue that the Law could do them no good, but onely make them at their wits ends, I meane the Lawe ſo farre foorth as it ſheweth vs the rule to liue well. For whereas God commandeth vs to do the thinges that hee alloweth; indeed it is the way of life and welfare. But what are wee? Wee haue a frowarde nature: and in ſteede of obeying and of behauing our ſelues as becommeth vs; wee ceaſe not to offende God. Nowe hee pronounceth his curſe vpon all ſuch as tranſgreſſe his commaundements. All of vs therefore are condemned by the Law, and there is no remedie but God muſt be our Iudge. And therefore it was meete that all the tokens which God gaue at yͤ ſetting forth of his Lawe, ſhould be terrible, and that the people ſhould be made afraide with them. And in the ſame reſpect doth S. Paul ſay that we receiue not the ſpirite of fearefulneſſe in the Goſpel; & after the ſame maner alſo is it ſpoken of in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes.

Exod.20.20

Deut.27.26.
Rom.8.15.
Hebr.7.25.

Alſo heere is a thirde reaſon alledged by Moſes, which is, that God ment to ſhew howe it was good for the maintenance of the Church, that men ſhoulde be the bringers of the doctrine of ſaluation. For ſurely, God knowing that the beſt way to gouerne vs, was by ſending vs Prophets and teachers to ſpeake vnto vs in his name: would that the people alſo ſhoulde knowe the profite thereof. True it is, that whenſoeuer God ſpeaketh wee ought to bowe downe our neckes and yeelde him ſuch reuerence, as none of vs refuſe to obey him, though hee ſpeake to vs by the mouthes of mortall men. Yet notwithſtanding, his meaning is not that his worde ſhould but onely haue ſuch maieſtie among vs as to make vs afraide: but that it ſhould be ſweete and amiable to vs, and that wee ſhoulde receiue it with a free heart, and take pleaſure in it, and knowe that to reſt vppon it is our ſoueraigne welfare. So then, Gods intent was to make men deſirous to bee taught by the Prophets and preachers whom he woulde ſende vnto them. And that is the thing which Moſes toucheth in this preſent place.

Now then, we muſt vnderſtand firſt of al, that our Lorde will not come downe from heauen viſiblie to ſpeake vnto vs: for that were not for our benefite. In deede many men are of that minde that they would faine haue God to ſende them his Angels: and they thinke it a matter of no great authoritie that a man which is but a fraile creature and but an earthen pot, ſhoulde goe vp into the pulpet: but yet doth God know it to bee for our behoofe. And therefore wee muſt vnderſtand, that foraſmuch as the Iewes found by experience that it was a dreadfull thing to them to heare God ſpeake: it behoued God to alter that manner of declaring himſelfe, and to ſend Moſes vnto them. Therewithall let vs marke alſo that Gods authoriſing of the Lawe was not for the Iewes onely; but to the ende that wee alſo at this day ſhoulde receiue the ſame with all humbleneſſe, and vnderſtande that whoſoeuer deſpiſeth it, aduaunceth himſelfe againſt the maieſtie of the liuing God, and maketh warre againſt him. That is the thing which wee haue to remember where mention is made of the terribleneſſe of Gods voyce, and of the fire that filled the aire. And thereuppon let vs marke (as hath beene treated of alreadie), that God promiſed a Prophet, not onely to the Iewes, but alſo to vs; and that it is a continuall order in his Church. So then, will wee bee reckened for the children of God? Let vs ſuffer our ſelues to bee gouerned by his word. Yea, and let vs not hold ſkorne to heare men that ſpeake to vs in his name. But although they bee from among vs and of our owne companie, ſo as wee might alledge that we owe them no ſuch duetie as in reſpect of their perſons: yet notwithſtāding ſeeing they be ſet in Gods ſteed, and by his will; let that ſuffice vs. And if we intend to honour God, and to haue him to reigne ouer vs: it behoueth vs to ſhew it in this caſe, by yeelding ſuch obedience to his worde, as thoſe whom he ſendeth to vs be heard of vs. And hereof wee ſee what is ſaide by the Prophet Eſay. For like as Moſes had foretold yͤ God would raiſe vp a Prophet: ſo yͤ Prophet Eſay ſaieth that at the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and in the time of his reigne, God would put his worde into his mouth, & into the mouth of his ſeed, and of his childrēs children. This thing then ceaſed not when yͤ Goſpel was publiſhed throw yͤ world: but rather it was newly confirmed, as I haue alſo ſhewed before. For who was this Prophet, but our Lord Ieſus Chriſt? True it is that in that ſaying are comprehended all the Prophetes from Moſes to Zacharie and his fellowes. But yet did GOD reſtore all the propheſies in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, which had beene as it were broken off for a time. For the Iewes had beene berefte of that benefite a long time together, and GOD had not appeared to them any more as hee had beene woont to doe before. And the reaſon was, to the ende they ſhoulde with the earneſter deſire looke for the Meſſias that had beene promiſed them, and vnderſtande that hee ſhoulde bring them the full perfection of all wiſedome. Our Lorde Ieſus therefore is nowe come to performe all Propheſies, and to make ſuch a reſtitution as men might perceiue that God had then laide foorth the treaſure moſt bountifully: which he had ſpokē of afore by Moſes. And this was not done alonely for our Lord Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe, himſelfe as S.Paul ſheweth in the fourth to the Epheſians, where he ſaieth that Ieſus Chriſt being gone vp into heauen, hath prouided for the ſtate of his Church to the end that it might bee mainteined by the foreſaide meane, ordeining ſome to be Apoſtles,ſome Prophets,ſome ſhepherds, and ſome teachers. To be ſhort, it is the will of Ieſus Chriſt,to execute his office by the mouthes of thoſe whom he ordeineth to be miniſters among his faithful.And herein is accompliſhed the forealledged text of Eſay, that the ſeede of Ieſus Chriſt and his childrens children ſhall haue the worde in their mouth at this day. God ſaieth not, I will ſende you my worde from heauen, or, I will cauſe it to bee preached vnto you by mine Angels: What ſaith he then? I wil put my word into thy mouth. In deede our Lord Ieſus is ſet there in higheſt degree: but yet there followeth; and into the mouth of thy ſeede,and of thy childrens children.Then let vs conclude, that euen to the worlds ende, if we wilbe members of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt,and (to be ſhort) if we wilbe taken for Chriſtians: wee muſt hearken to the worde which God putteth into mens mouthes,whenſoeuer it is preached vnto vs.

Eſa.59.21.

Eph.4.8 11.

Iams.1.21.1

And in that reſpect is it ſaide, that the man which will not heare the Prophet, ſhall die without releaſe. Here God thinkes it not ynough to haue exhorted the Iewes to receiue his woorde with meeke and lowly mindes: but alſo threateneth them, becauſe thinges are neuer ſo well ordered among men, but that there is ſome incountering and rebelling. Our Lord therefore is faine to vſe heere ſome rigor. Which thing he doth, ſaying: Looke to your ſelues, for my ſending of Prophetes vnto you is to your benefite, and it were as much eaſe for mee to make my voice ring from heauen: but I know what is meeteſt for you, and you yourſelues haue found by experience that it is moſt for your behoofe. Therefore ſee that ye heare my woorde,and receiue it meekely, and ſubmit your ſelues to mee with all mieldneſſe. And hereunto alſo doeth S. Iames leade vs, ſaying that if wee wilbee edified by Gods word,we muſt be meeke. And as the earth that ſhal receiue ſeede to yeeld fruite,muſt firſt be well tilled: euen ſo the true preparation that God requireth of vs,is to humble ourſelues: for our Lorde Ieſus began at the ſame ende. Howbeit foraſmuchas there are ſome ſo blockiſh,that they cannot be moued by gentleneſſe: therfore is this threatening added, wherein our Lorde declareth that if wee deſpiſe his worde when it is brought vs ſo by men, ſuch a fault ſhall not ſcape vnpuniſhed: for I will require a reckoning thereof, ſaith hee, As if he ſhould ſay,Indeede it may well bee that ſuch contempt ſhall bee let alone, and not once thought vpon in the worlde: but yet ſhall I continue ſtill to warrant my worde, and yee muſt come to account before mee though yee bee ſcaped the handes of men. And this is to bee well marked. For when our Lorde will haue men to obey him, hee ſaieth not ſingly,hee that will not obey my worde; but he that will not heare the Prophetes whom I ſende. For wee ſee many nowadayes which proteſt that they bee readie to ſubmit themſelues to God; but yet in the meane while they cannot finde in their heartes to yeelde him obedience in reſpect of his Lawe, or in reſpect of the holy ſcripture, or alſo in reſpect of the order of the Church. Yee ſhall ſee a ſort of skoffers which will needes bee taken for good Catholikes, but as for ſermons, they let them alone, and they thinke them to bee ſuperfluous.And if they chaunce to come to any,it is but in a ceremonie,and for faſhions ſake,as men terme it: ſo as if it were not for ſhame of men, they woulde neuer come at the Church.Ye ſhal neuer heare that they be deſirous to be taught: And what Chriſtianitie is that?Contrariwiſe we heare howe it is ſaide heere, that God will haue vs to hearken to him. As howe? They can ſay wellynough that they bee willing to obey. But he addeth whoſoeuer heareth not the Prophets whom I ſende. I haue ſhewed already that ſeeing God hath ſet this order in his Church: it ought to be helde as vnuiolable. Therfore whoſoeuer hee bee that maketh none account of Sermons,ne reſorteth to them; doeth ſhew him ſelfe to be a rebell againſt God. Who ſayes ſo? Euen he himſelfe.We neede not go to reaſoning thereupon.For our Lorde telleth vs that all ſuch as will not quietly ſubmit themſelues to the order which hee hath appointed, are rebelles againſt him. Yee ſee then that the thing which we haue to marke here in the firſt place, is that we muſt not ſeeke ſtarting holes to deceiue God withall; for if wee deſire that he ſhould reigne ouer vs,the men that haue the charge and office to ſpeake to vs in his name, muſt be receiued,& all of vs both great and ſmall muſt frame themſelues thereafter.

Hebr.3.5.6. & 10.28.29.

Gal.3.19.

Moreouer let vs proceed to yͤ cõpariſon which yͤ Apoſtle maketh in the Epiſtle to yͤ Hebrewes. For he ſheweth (as trueth is)that Moſes and his fellow Prophets were but ſeruaunts.The maſter himſelfe is come: and that is the onely ſonne of GOD, who hath ſuperioritie ouer the whole Church,and he ſpeakes by his Goſpel:which if a man deſpiſe he is not to be borne withal.He that tranſgreſſed the Lawe of Moſes, was ſtoned to death as we haue ſeene before. But nowe our Lorde Ieſus ſpeaketh more liuely in the Goſpell: and ſhall men make no account of hearing him? Let vs marke then that all ſuch as ſtriue nowadayes againſt the doctrine of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, offend much more greeuouſly,and ſhalbe puniſhed more rigorouſly, becauſe they ſpite God openly, as though they proteſted in effect, that they paſſed not to prouoke him to battell, and to deface his maieſtie vtterly. Therefore let vs beare in minde, that as oft as the Goſpell is preached vnto vs, it is all one as if the ſonne of God ſpeake to vs himſelfe: and therefore that hee ought much rather to bee hearde than Moſes. True it is that the Lawe is of God likewiſe, and it was giuen by the verie ſpirite of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. But as nowe we ſtand vpon the meanes that God hath vſed in the Lawe and the Goſpell. For the more that our Lord hath vttered his glorie, the more ought wee to be prouoked to ſubmit our ſelues vnto him: and that is done in the Goſpell. Wherefore let vs conclude, that as nowe we muſt haue a greater regard to harken to the things that are brought vs and ſet forth vnto vs in the name of our God, than our forefathers had in the time of the law. And that is the thing which our Lorde Ieſus ment by this ſaying, that Iohn Baptiſt excelled Matt.11.11. al the prophets, ſo as there was neuer any man that had ſo excellent an office as he had, and yet that the leaſt of them which preach the Goſpell nowadayes, excelleth Iohn Baptiſt. Ieſus Chriſt ſpeaketh not there of the holineſſe of mens perſons: but magnifieth the doctrine of ſaluation which is preached to vs at this day, inſomuch that Iohn Baptiſt was preferred before all the Prophetes, as in reſpect that he brought the tydings that the Redeemer was come.

But wee proceede yet further; for wee ſhewe 2.Cor.5.19. & Heb.9.27 1.Iohn.1.7. & 2.1. that our Lorde Ieſus hath performed his mediatorſhip in reconcyling vs to God his father; that his death and paſſion are the euerlaſting ſacrifice whereby perfect righteouſneſſe is purchaſed to vs; that all our ſinnes are waſhed away Rom.5.19. Eph.1.5. by his bloude; that he continueth ſtill our aduocate and ſpokeſman at this day, to procure vs fauour in Gods ſight: that his obedience is imputed to vs for righteouſneſſe: and that God adopteth vs in him to make vs heires of his kingdome. All theſe thinges then are at this day declared vnto vs largely in the Goſpell. And ſeeing that God is ſo gracious to vs in preferring vs before all the kings and Patriarks that liued vnder the olde teſtament: Wo worth vs if we cannot fare the better by ſuch a prerogatiue. Seeing that the kings (I ſay) which were deſirous to haue Luke.10.24 hearde the thinges which wee heare, and to haue ſeene the thinges which wee ſee, obtained not their deſire; and nowe GOD hauing giuen vs more than them, can winne nothing at our hands by ſo doing but ſkorne and deſpite: what will our rewarde bee? Hee may well vpbraide vs as hee did the Iewes in olde time, ſaying: Eſa.5.4. My people what haue I done to you? My vyneyard, I haue planted thee, I haue husbanded thee, and I haue taken great paines about thee: and thou bringeſt foorth bitter grapes that are able to choke their maſter. If GOD blamed the vnthankfulneſſe of his people after that faſhion in olde time: howe much more may hee blame vs in theſe dayes? Are not wee worthie to receiue a hundred folde more damnation than they? Yes certainely. So then let vs marke well, that if God coulde not beare the deſpiſing of his Lawe: he will much leſſe nowe ſuffer the ſkorning of his Goſpell, or that men ſhoulde make none account of the order which hee hath ſet for them to reſort to ſermons, there to bee taught by the mouthes of thoſe that are in that degree and office. For as I haue declared, it is not ynough for vs to ſay, Gods worde is worthie to bee hearde: but wee muſt alſo ſhewe the ſame by proofe. Whenſoeuer our Lorde ſpeaketh, although it bee by the meane of creatures: yet let vs receiue him quietly and obey him.

Let vs note further, that where as it is ſaide hee will require an account of it: the meaning thereof is: that wee ſhall haue gained nothing by ſcaping the handes of men. For why? God will maintaine his owne honour. And this is notable in many reſpectes. For oftentimes yee ſhall ſee, that they which ſhoulde holde the ſterne to make Gods worde to bee receiued with reuerence, haue no regarde of it at all. The Princes, Magiſtrates, and Iudges of this worlde, doe puniſh thinges which they knowe to bee to their owne domage: ſuch offences are ſtraitely looked to. And why? For if they ſhoulde goe vnpuniſhed, great diſorder woulde inſue thereof. This reſpect were not amiſſe, ſo they did not ſet the cart before the horſe. For if God be offended, they let that ſlippe. And why? Becauſe they thinke there growes no inconuenience of it. And in verie deede it is growen to a cōmon byword to ſay, Who is hee that accuſeth mee? Whome haue I wronged? The partie that ſhall haue ſpited God openly, and therefore deſerueth to bee rooted out of the worlde, ſhall but wring his mouth or rather his groyne, and ſteppe forth with a ſhameleſſe foreheade to aſke who accuſeth him. The verie Angels of heauen, yea and all other creatures crie out againſt him; and yet hee hath not offended. And why ſo? Becauſe no bodie is againſt him heere among men: for it may chaunce that no man will ſtande in Gods defence. Euerie man will wellynough pleade for themſelues: but they be not ſo zealous as to ſet themſelues againſt ſuch as offende God. And yet in the meane whyle the Iudges are aſleepe, and let all ſuch manner of vngodly dealings ſlip. Yea there are ſome which are worſe than Iewes and Saraſins, ſhewing no token of Chriſtianitie, but openly deſpiſing both Sermons and vſe of Sacramentes. Otherſome are not contented with ſuch contempt, but they doe alſo make warre againſt God, and play the venemous beaſts in ſpewing out their vileneſſe to make all religion to bee ſet light by. Theſe thinges are to bee ſeene: and yet men winke at them. Therfore doeth God tell vs that hee will call them to account for it. Verie wel (ſaieth hee) let men bee as negligent as they will: yet wil not I forget theſe things, whatſoeuer come of it.

Heereby wee bee warned to receiue Gods worde when it is ſet forth vnto vs, and to inure our ſelues to the hearing thereof, not for feare of men onely, but to eſchew the wrath of the heauenly Iudge, ſeeing hee is minded to defende the authoritie of his worde. Were this well marked, men woulde bee better diſpoſed to ſuffer themſelues to be taught by Gods worde than they be. Men woulde make more ſpeede when they heare the bel tol, than they doe. But what? We can ſcarce finde in our heartes to goe three ſteppes to a Sermon. And why? For feare leaſt wee ſhoulde afterwarde be cenſured. If I go continually to ſermons, men will point at me with their fingers, and I ſhalbe called afterwarde into the Conſiſtorie for it: and in the end I ſhalbe cēſured. After ẏ maner do theſe Saraſins ſpeake that dwell among vs here, who haue neither faith nor Chriſtianitie in them more than dogs. Their comming hither commonly is but to ſcrape the ground with their pantoples in mockage of God. But it were better for them to breake their neckes, than to come to vnhalowe Gods temple after that ſort. Others come with gay Ceremonies and outwarde ſhewes: and in the meane while haue no affection at all. But let vs bethinke vs howe it is ſaide here, that our Lord wil not let men alone ſo: for although no mã maintain his glorie, but preſume malapertly to deſpiſe him: yet ſhall not their ſo doing boote them. For why? He telleth vs that he will doe his office, & not bury things in forgetfulnes. Then if men winke at the deſpiſing of Gods worde: God himſelfe muſt in the end ſhewe, that he ſetteth ſuch ſtore by it, that hee will be auenged of them for it. Thus yee ſee what we haue to mark, in Gods vttering of ſuch threatnings againſt all the deſpiſers of his Law.

Beſides this, it is his minde alſo to prouide ẏ wee be not deceiued nor abuſed vnder pretence of this honourable title of Prophet. For as it becommeth vs to obey God by being taught by ſuch men as he hath ſet in the office of teachers: ſo on the other ſide it is not for any man to take that charge vppon him, thereby to deceiue the plaine and ignorant people. God then hath prouided here for both twain. Firſt he ſheweth how there is no cauſe why the people ſhould grudge ſeeing there was no want of teaching: and therfore that they which turne away after Witches, Soothſayers, and Inchanters, are leawd and vnthankfull. For why? God commeth to vs, and requireth no more but to teach vs familiarly. Therefore when men ſtep aſide after that maner to ſuperſtitions, and cannot bee contented with Gods trueth which is the perfection of all wiſedome: muſt it not needes bee that they are poſſeſſed of Satan, and worſe than ſtarke madde or out of their wits? Yes truely. And therefore ſeeing our Lord proteſteth that he hath ſo prouided for his Church, as men may well holde themſelues to that which he hath done: Let euerie man bee readie to heare and receiue the doctrine which he ſetteth forth.

Nowe he commeth to thoſe that are appointed to be teachers. Let no man (ſaith he) Preſume to ſpeake in my name. For I muſt put my worde in the mouth of the Prophetes. Eſa.59.21. Hee ſaieth expreſly, I will put my word in their mouthes: and therunto anſwereth the text of Eſay which I cyted afore. Whereby it is ſhewed vs that God raiſeth not Prophets vp to lay the bridle in their necks, and to giue them full libertie to preach what they liſt: but hee raiſeth them vp to be as his inſtrumentes to deliuer the thinges faithfully which they haue heard of him. Yee ſee then with what condition God hath raiſed vp prophets in all ages, namely ẏ he put his word in their mouthes. And whereas we preach nowadayes; it is not for that Chriſt hath giuen vp his office. Matt 17.5. Eph.5.23. For he is alwayes a teacher, he is the heade of the Church, yea & the only head, not to be as an ydoll, but to rule vs with his doctrine. Therfore we muſt not preſume to alledge any thing which we receiue not of the only ſonne of God. Wherefore let vs marke well, that as it was Gods will heere to ſubdue folk to humble themſelues, ſo as they ſhould not refuſe to bee taught by his worde when it is preached: ſo on the otherſide he hath prouided that ſuch as haue commiſſion to ſpeake, muſt not bring their owne dotages and dreames, nor deuiſe any newe doctrine, but onely firſt learne of their maſter, and afterwarde deliuer the ſame faithfully to others, without adding any thing at all of their owne. For whatſoeuer men inuent of their owne heades, is vtter corruption: there needs no more Leauen to ſower the whole lump of paſte. 1.Cor.5.6. And if a man take heade neuer ſo little, he ſhall vtterly peruert Gods truth, and turne it into vntruth. And this ſerueth alſo to put al men in mind vpon what condition they ſhould heare the Prophetes. For here are two extremities, as in deede wee neuer keepe any meane, vnleſſe our Lorde drawe vs to it by force. If wee keepe it not, wee become heatheniſh, and his worde is skorned of thoſe to whom hee ſendeth vs: which contempt wee ſee in the moſt part of the worlde. Howe deale wee when wee come to framing of our ſelues? We vſe a kinde of fond and beaſtly deuotion, without putting any difference betweene good and euill, and God will none of that. Indeede hee will haue our faith matched with humilitie, but not that we ſhould be ſtarke blockes without diſcretion. For cleane contrariwiſe hee willeth vs to trie mens ſpirites. 1.Iohn 4.1. Then muſt wee haue skill to examine thinges whether they be true or no, when men ſpeake to vs in the name of God. The way therefore which wee muſt holde, is that when Gods name is alledged, wee muſt bee touched with reuerence to hearken earneſtly to the thinges that are ſpoken, and howſoeuer the world go, wee muſt bee prepared to receiue them. And when wee haue this modeſtie of yeelding our ſelues teachable by the thinges that are ſet forth in the name of God: Wee muſt alſo pray him to giue vs his holy ſpirite, that wee bee able to diſcerne aright and not be beguiled, nor imbrewed with lyes vnder falſe pretence of his name, but that although Satan transforme himſelfe into an Angell of light, 2.Cor.11.14. yet he may not ſo blind our eyes, but that wee may perceiue what is good. That is the way which wee muſt holde. And it is the thing whereto God intendeth to leade vs, ſaying that although he will haue vs to hearken to the Prophets, and addeth this threat that the deſpiſing of them ſhall not abide vnpuniſhed: yet notwithſtanding hee meaneth not therefore to bereaue vs of all diſcretion, and to ſtop our eyes that we ſhould not knowe what to followe. No: but he wil haue vs to examine mens doctrine, & to ſift the Prophetes whether they teach aright or no. We muſt not be ſo doltiſh as to admit al that euer is tolde vs without exception: but (as I ſaide,) when men ſpeake to vs in the name of God, we muſt ſerch whether it be truth or falſehood. And now muſt we lay forth the things particularly which are conteined here.

Firſt of all let vs marke, that God meant not to exempt the preachers of his woorde from all examination, but will haue the faithfull to conſider what is ſet foorth vnto them, according to the generall rule that is giuen vs thereof. It is 1.Cor.14.29 ſaide that they which haue the gift of Propheſying muſt ſpeake in order, and that the reſidue muſt iudge. It is not ſaide, whatſoeuer they ſay, let it bee receiued: but, let men iudge and diſcerne of it. Lo howe the holy Ghoſt ſheweth vs howe to meaſure our faith, and after what manner we may keepe a meane betweene the contempt and rebellion which we ſee in the heatheniſh ſort, and the beaſtly blockiſhnes of ſuch as ſay, as for mee, I am ſo well minded that I receiue whatſoeuer is tolde me. Yea, and thou art a good gooſe for thy labour. But God will haue ſuch children as be of diſcretion & knowledge. And although our faith be not a worldly ſcience: Yet doth it require skill to be taught vs at Gods Eſa.54.13. hande as the Prophet ſaieth. One point then is this, that when we preach Gods word, it is not for vs to ſay that men ſhoulde not iudge of our doctrine, or that we ſhoulde not yeelde any account thereof. For that were in vaine to be ſpoken, and not onely needeleſſe, but alſo vnreaſonable, that a falſe Prophet ſhould be puniſhed and no examination had of him, nor any means to try him and to take knowledge of his caſe. We ſee heere in fewe words then, that God hath giuen his Church leaue to inquire of mens doctrines, and that hee woulde haue his prophetes accountable, ſo as they ſhoulde bee bounde to yeelde a reaſon of their doctrine, and to ſhewe that it is of God. And this condition was neuer refuſed, neither of the Prophets nor of the Apoſtles, who at all times when they were accuſed of falſe doctrine, were readie to ſhewe openly that they were ſent of God, and that they had behaued themſelues faithfully. And eue͂ ſo muſt we do at this day. And thereby will all tyranny be ſhut out. If a man woulde nowadayes examine the doctrine of the Pope: he ſaieth it is not lawfull. And why ſo? Becauſe I ſit in the Apoſtolike ſea, ſaith he. And ment not God to prouide for his Church? He ſaith expreſly that the Prophet which is ſent of him, ſhall haue his woorde in his mouth. To whom doeth God ſpeake? He ſpeaketh generally of all that euer were ſent by him. For I haue prooued alreadie that this text is not meant of Moſes alone, and of them that liued vnder the olde Teſtament: but that it extendeth euen vnto vs alſo, and comprehends in it the whole reigne of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Seeing then that God hath not excepted either Pope or any man elſe: it is to be concluded, that their doctrine may, yea and ought to be examined. And ſo wee ſee that the Papiſts in theſe dayes haue but a buckler of ſnowe, in that they beare men in hande that they bee exempted from yeelding any account. For our Lord hath declared the cleane contrarie as we ſee.

And we muſt marke further, that it is not ynough to haue the title of a Prophet, but the effect muſt be had alſo. And wherein doth that conſiſt? In this, that they which ſpeake in Gods name, haue his worde in their mouth. He ſaith not, they muſt but onely haue his ſpirite, howbeit that hee addeth that alſo. And euen in this text of Eſay hee ſaieth, My ſpirite ſhall reſt vpon him. Eſa.59.21. But doth that ſerue to exclude the worde? No: they bee thinges linked together with vnſeparable bonde. It is ſaide, my ſpirite ſhall bee vppon thee, and my worde ſhall bee in thy mouth. But what ſaieth the Pope to aduaunce himſelfe? I haue Gods ſpirite. And where is his worde? O: let that come behinde for I haue a greater and farre excellenter reuelation of mine owne. As for Gods worde, it is but an Apſie: the greate myſteries haue beene reuealed to mee by the holy Ghoſt. See how this diuell will needes ſet vp himſelfe aboue all order of the Church, and aboue all direction that God hath ſet downe to rule his Church by, in that hee will haue the Goſpell to bee preached nowadayes in his name, and his worde to bee in the mouthes of thoſe whom hee hath ſet in that office. Is it not a helliſh kinde of diuorcement, to breake the thinges ſo aſunder, which God hath ioyned together? It is all one as if a man woulde clyue the skies, and plucke downe one halfe of the ſtarres, and more too. For neither Sunne, nor Moone, nor any other creatures are comparable to Gods Maieſtie, which vttereth it ſelfe both by his ſpirite and by his word.

Nowe he hath cuppled them two together, and it is not lawfull to take the one of them and to leaue the other. And therefore let vs learne that as many as will nowadayes bee taken for teachers in the Church, muſt haue the charge to bring Gods worde with them, and alſo muſt haue his ſpirite: that is to ſaye, they muſt haue the gift of expounding the holy ſcripture, they muſt haue ſuch vnderſtanding as belongeth thereto, and they muſt bee faithfull ſo as they put forth nothing of their owne, but onely follow the trade that is appointed them, ſo as they may euer proteſt in the ende, that God hath ſpoken vnto vs. And that if any man doe ſteppe vp againſt them, they may ſay with Moſes, Who am I? As for mee, I haue brought you Exod.16.7. the meſſage that was committed to mee of God: nowe goe your wayes and ſtriue with him for it. All they then that will bee knowen to bee teachers of the Chriſtian Church, muſt haue the ſaide modeſtie: and then may wee boldly (as ſhalbe ſhewed more at large to morrowe) deſpiſe all ſuch as preſume to ſpeake in Gods name, & in the meane while go beyond their bounds, and will not ſubmit themſelues to the condition which God will haue to be common to all his Prophets.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgment of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than wee haue done, and to leade vs to ſuch amendment, as we may be willing to be ouermaſtred of him, and perceiue that all our affections are frowarde, and that all the ſenſe and wit which wee haue in vs, is vtter confuſion. Wherefore let vs be willing to ſubmit our ſelues wholy to his will, deſiring him to cauſe the ſame to be ſo vttered vnto vs, as wee may not walke wanderingly and at alauenture, but be throughly certifyed and aſſured by his ſpeaking vnto vs, that we ſhall be guided to him, becauſe the doctrine of his Goſpell is the right way to ſaluation, wherein we cannot goe aſtray: and yͭ we may be confirmed more and more in the ſame, vntil we haue no more need to be taught by yͤ meanes of men, but are come to the ſinging of eternall prayſes vnto him in the company of the Angels. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wednesday the iiii. of December. 1555.

The Cxi. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the eighteenth Chapter.

21 And if thou ſay in thy heart, howe ſhall wee knowe the woorde which the Lord hath not ſpoken vnto him:

22 When a Prophet ſpeaketh in the name of the Lorde, and the thing that hee hath ſpoken commeth not to paſſe: that is a woorde which the Lorde hath not ſpoken vnto him, but the Prophet hath ſpoken it preſumptuouſly; and therefore be not afraide of him.

Yeſterday was ſhewed why Moſes ſetteth downe here a Lawe for falſe Prophets, to the ende they ſhoulde bee puniſhed for ſeeking to corrupt Gods truth, and for abuſing their office. For he had declared before, that as many as wil be knowen to be of Gods houſe and ſheepfolde, muſt ſubmit themſelues to the common order, which is to heare the Prophets whom hee hath ſent. But yet muſt there be a meane in ſo doing. For were the bridle layd in their neckes which ſpeake, and were there an abſolute authoritie giuen them: what a thing were that? Great confuſion would inſue thereof. Therefore like as our Lorde bindeth the whole body of his Church to the hearing of his word and doctrine when it is preached: ſo wil he haue thoſe to bee ruled, which haue the charge to teach others, to the intent they preſume not to put forth any doctrine of their deuiſing, but faithfully deliuer the things that are commanded them of God, and which they haue receiued as it were from his owne mouth. That was the meaning of Moſes, to the end that ſuch as haue preheminence ſhoulde not abuſe it, and that the people alſo ſhould al of them yeeld themſelues teachable, and ſo there might bee no tyranny in Gods Church, but good order in all poynts. For if it might bee Lawfull for euery man to refuſe the doctrine, as who would ſay, I am wiſe ynough, I know how to behaue my ſelfe, I am able to teach others: and againe, I can reade it at home in mine owne houſe: if ſuch libertie were giuen; all woulde goe to hauocke. And on the contrarie parte, if the partie that hath commiſſion to beare abroade the word of God, ſhould ſay, I am not to yeeld account to any body, it is not for any man to examine my doctrine whether it bee good and true or otherwiſe: it were a tyrannous Lordlyneſſe, whereby God ſhould be excluded from hauing any preheminenc or audience among vs. So then, we muſt keepe the meane that is ſhewed here by Moſes, which is, that al ſuch as diſobey the common order muſt bee puniſhed and cut off from Gods people: and therewithall, that they which are in office to ſpeake, doe take good heede that it is not for thē to ſet foorth their owne dreames and dotages, but to behaue themſelues as Gods meſſengers, faithfully and without adding any thing of their owne.

Now let vs come to that which Moſes addeth here: If thou ſay in thy hart, how ſhall I know when a Propheſie is not of God? It is ſayd, If the Prophet tel thee a thing which commeth not to paſſe, aſſure thy ſelfe he is not ſent, but he doth it altogether of pride: and therefore he ſhall be puniſhable. Here wee haue to marke, that in this place God hath not ſet downe al the tokens whereby the falſe Prophets may be diſcerned from the true. And for proofe hereof, the office of Prophets was not onely to tell of thinges to come, but alſo to giue folke good inſtruction, to exhort them to amendment of lyfe, and to edify them in faith. As for example, wee ſee that the Prophets did not onely ſay ſuch a thing ſhall befall: but alſo confirmed the couenant whereby God had adopted the people of Iſraell, and tolde them of the comming of the redeemer on whom the hope of all Gods children was grounded. Moreouer they comforted the ſorrowfull, by preaching the promiſes of Gods fauour vnto them; therewithall they threatened the people when they became diſordered; they diſcouered their faultes, and tranſgreſſions; they cyted ſinners to Gods iudgement to make them humble themſelues. All theſe thinges belonged to the office of the Prophet. So then there were other tokens beſides that which Moſes ſetteth downe here, whereby to diſcerne falſe Prophets aright. And in very deed if we will know whether a Prophet ſerueth God faithfully or no; wee muſt compare the thinges that are cleane contrarie. We knowe that the true touchſtone whereby to try the goodneſſe of any doctrine, is the referring of all thinges vnto faith, (as Saint Paul ſaith thereof,) and to the gloryfying of God, that men be taught to put their whole truſt in the grace of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, to miſlyke of themſelues and to be aſhamed of their own doings, & to frame themſelues to a true amendment. Thus is it a true tryall of good doctrine, when we ſee ẏ preacher indeuour that God may be purely honored and ſerued, and that the prayſe of all power, wiſedome, and righteouſneſſe be yeelded vnto him. That doctrine is alwayes good, and that is an infallible rule. When men are condemned in themſelues; when they be ſhewed that there is nothing but corruption in their nature, and that they be accurſed of God; when they be ſo beaten downe as they wote not what to doe, but onely to craue forgiueneſſe lyke wretched ſinners: that is a ſure doctrine. For faith leadeth vs thereunto, and compaſſeth it as a certeine rule. Againe, when ſinnes are condemned by Gods lawe, and men are ſhewed what true repentance is, to wit, a miſlyking of their ſinnes & a deſiring to be gouerned by Gods ſpirit, and to bee altogether chaunged: that is a ſure doctrine. Moreouer, when men are tolde that they muſt flee to God for refuge, and call vppon him onely, and not be vnthankfull to him for his helping and ſuccoring of them: the doctrine alſo is of the holy ſcripture, and men cannot faile in embracing of it. If it be ſayd that the very vſe of the Sacraments is to leade vs to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and to aſſure vs the better of the benefites which he bringeth vs that we may be partakers of them, and that God alſo putteth vs in poſſeſſion of thẽ: that alſo is a trueth which ought not to be reuoked nor doubted of. And hereof there is no diſputing to be made: for men knowe that in thoſe pointes is nothing but good doctrine. On the contrarie part, a man may iudge that a doctrine is falſe, when it darkeneth or diminiſheth the glorie of God. If the thing that belongeth to God bee plucked away from him to be beſtowed vpon creatures: it is a practiſe of Satans to turne vs out of the right way. Againe, if one doe puffe vp men with pride and ouerweening; and make them beleeue that they be able folke, & ſo rock them aſleepe in their ſinnes: or if he teach them to ſerue God with pelting toyes, and to forget his Lawe, and in the meane while to giue mens inuentions their ful ſcope: or if the Sacraments be vſed but as light or fond paſtimes: a man may eaſily ſee that ſuch doctrine is leawd and curſed, and that it was forged in Satans ſhop.

Furthermore, whereas nowadayes men are inquiring whereon to ſtay in ẏ middeſt of theſe troubles and diuerſities of opinions that are in the world: it is no very hard thing to doe, ſo they be attentiue and diſcreete in diſcerning after the maner that our Lord hath ſhewed vs. For all the whole doctrine of poperie tẽdeth to none other end, but to aduaunce men, and to puffe them vp in ſuch wiſe with their owne deſerts, as they may be halfe at defiance with God, as though they could accuſe him. Againe, it ſendeth men too and fro. In ſtead of putting their truſt in the onely freegoodneſſe of God, and in ſtead of imbracing our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: men are taught other infinite meanes to ſaue themſelues. Moreouer, in ſteed of hauing the only Lawe of God for their onely rule in all thinges, and for their onely holyneſſe and perfection: men haue ſet out their owne trifling traditions. Thus may ye eaſily iudge of theſe thinges. And what is to be ſayd of their Sacraments? It is euident that they be meere witcheries in the Popedome, ſo as Ieſus Chriſt is driuen a great way off by them. and men make idols of the viſible ſignes & liueleſſe creatures, and Satan hath ſo imbrued the wretched world with his illuſions, that men are become ſtarke beaſtes. Now then, if a man intend to make trial of a good doctrine; he ſhal find the thinges which I ſpake of afore, to be ſure & infallible markes thereof. But in this text our Lord meant onely to tel vs that he will diſcouer the falſe prophet, at leaſtwiſe one way or other, whereof hee ſetteth downe one kinde here.

I haue told you alreadie that there are diuers other meanes to diſcerne the true doctrine from the falſe: but none of thoſe come in queſtion here. Our Lorde hath tolde vs, No no, yee ſhall not be beguiled ſo long as ye indeuour to follow the trueth that proceedeth from me. If a deceiuer haue any countenance among you; I will make his leawdnes to be layd open: I will giue you ſome ſuch token thereof, as ye may always keepe your ſelues vndefiled, ſo ye haue the mind and zeale to ſticke to my pure worde. Thus much concerning this text, which importeth a kinde of promiſe, as if our Lord ſhould tell his people that he would diſcouer the hypocriſie of deceiuers, and not ſuffer them to reigne euer. but that in the end they ſhall in ſome reſpect or other come to confuſion. Now we ſee the principall drift of Moſeſes wordes.

But here a queſtion might be moued. For heretofore in the thirteenth Chapter, it was ſaid that if a Prophet tolde a thing to come, and the ſame came to paſſe in deede: yet was he not to be beleeued, becauſe God would ſuffer ſuch thinges to try his people withall. And here it is ſayd that a falſe Prophet ſhall be knowen and iudged by the not falling out of the things which he propheſieth. Now here ſeemeth to be ſome contrarietie. But the ſolution is eaſie, in marking that though a falſe prophet be knowen by his lying: yet it followeth not that he ſhould be takẽ and deemed a true Prophet becauſe it falleth out that he ſpeaketh ſome trueth. Truely if he ſpake the trueth at all times and in all caſes, then were he a true Prophet. But hee may well ſay the trueth in ſome reſpect, (which may be done for ſome iuſt puniſhment from God, as is declared in this ſame text:) and yet he ſhall be but a deceiuer neuertheleſſe. As how? Put the caſe that folke ſeeke to bee ſoothed in their vices, and are loth to be waked and quickened vp as they ſhould be, and had rather to be borne with: (for ſuch hath the faſhion of ẏ world euer bin:)

Well, God ſeeing ſuch leawdneſſe, ſuffereth deceiuers to plaſter them, and to beare the folke in hand (which are ſo deſirous to ſleepe in their wilfulneſſe) that their faultes are nothing. Here ye ſee how thoſe men are beguiled, becauſe of the deſire which they had before. And God addeth the ſame thing moreouer, namely that thoſe falſe Prophetes and deceiuers ſhall haue wherewith to confirme their doctrine, that they which were imbrued wͭ lyes before, may become more wilful. For they will thinke then, yͭ there is no more daunger in beleeuing them. And what is the cauſe hereof? Euen Gods iuſt vengeance. Foraſmuch as men ſhut their eyes at the light, & wil needs dwel in darkneſſe: God giueth Satan the bridle. By meanes whereof it commeth to paſſe, yͭ the falſe prophets doe ſometimes ſpeake yͤ trueth; as is to be ſeene euen at this day. For what a number are there to be found, which ſeek after witchcraft to aboliſh yͤ authoritie of Gods word? Ye ſhall ſee on yͤ one ſide a ſorte of curious heads, & on yͤ other ſide another ſorte yͭ haue no feare of God: & yet yͤ mark which they all ſhoote at, is to put away Gods word, yͭ they might not be ruled by it. And in yͤ meane while they wil needs haue ſome Wizard to tel them of their good fortunes: & our Lord ſuffereth thẽ to be drawen by ſuch meanes into al yͤ deceites of Satan, notwithſtanding yͭ ſome trueth bee mingled therewͭall. Now thẽ, though a falſe Prophet ſpeake yͤ truth, yet is not that a warrãt that his doctrine is true: our Lord will not haue men to credit him a whit yͤ more for yͭ: for we ſee for what cauſe he putteth the trueth oftẽtimes into the mouthes of deceiuers. And ſo, notwithſtanding the thinges that are ſet downe here, yet doth it abide true ſtill, yͭ when our Lord is minded to haue pitie vppon his people, and not to ſuffer them to bee abuſed by falſe doctrine: he giueth them ſome token whereby to find the deceiuer: and whereas earſt he was in eſtimation, and might haue amazed the wretched world: God bewrayeth his leawdneſſe, & ſo he is found to be a lyer. Thus wee ſee now the whole meaning of Moſes, concerning the thinges that are conteyned in this text.

Theſe thinges were performed among the people of olde time, and the examples thereof which we ſee, ought to ſhewe vs the vſe of them and what fruit we ſhould gather of this warning which Moſes giueth. When the Prophets meant to proue that they were ſent of God: they would ſay, I am no prophet if this come not to paſſe. See how Ieremie ſubmitteth himſelf to the Law, Ier.28,9. ſaying: I tell ye, ye ſhall be led captiue to Babylon, and thinke not your ſelues to be diſcharged by yͭ which hath hapned vnto you already: (for the citie had bin taken once before, and therefore they thought themſelues diſcharged by being become tributaries after that faſhion to the king of Babylon: and ſo they thought themſelues eſcaped:) No no, ye muſt indure yet more. This chaſtiſement, which hath not amended you at al, ſeemeth ouer hard and too ſharp a rod vnto you. But foraſmuch as god hath called you, and you continue ſtill vnamended: he is feine to deale now more roughly with you: the temple muſt be beaten downe, the citie muſt be razed, you your ſelues muſt be no more a people, there muſt be no more ſacrifice, all thinges muſt be ſo cleane taken away, as ye may ſeeme to bee vtterly periſhed. To this extremitie muſt yee come, becauſe ye haue abuſed Gods patience euen vnto this houre. And if it come not ſo to paſſe, take me no more for a Prophet, but let me bee ſtoned to death, for I am well worthie of it. But I am well aſſured of that which I haue foretold you, for God himſelf hath told it me. We ſee how the Prophets ſubmitted themſelues to the Lawe, & alſo did ſet themſelues againſt the falſe-prophets; as we ſee by the example of Ieremie, when Ananias came and ſayd, No, the veſſels of the Temple ſhall be brought again from Babylon, and the kingdome of Dauid ſhal be ſet vp againe in our time, and we ſhall floriſh more thã euer we did: and thereupon did breake the chain of Ieremie, who walked about the ſtreetes as it were with a with about his necke. For it behoued him to repreſẽt the captiuitie, becauſe men were ſo blind in their ſinnes, that they tooke all Gods threatnings to be but a ieſt, and thereupon did make euen a mocke of them. And therefore it behoued the Prophet to goe about the citie after that faſhion with a with about his neck, as who ſhould ſay, Euen thus ſhall you be miſerably haled into captiuitie, yee make a goodly ſhewe, nowe yee triumph, ye thinke it a goodly thing to beſot your ſelues in your pleaſures and delightes; but this yoke that I weare, ſerueth to ſhewe that you your ſelues ſhalbe put vnder the yoke of ſubiectiõ. Behold, Ananias breaks me this yoke aſunder, ſaying: no, we ſhall liue ſtill at libertie, and be deliuered from that bondage. It is a wonder. Yea, but how did theſe wretched and wicked folkes afterward behaue themſelues? How did God ratify the thing that Ananias had ſpoken? I wiſhe it might be ſo, (ſayd Ieremie:) but yet muſt I goe further and tell him his condemnation, ſeeing the Lord hath commaunded mee ſo to doe. So then, we ſee that Ieremie ratifyed the thing which hee had vttered in the name of God, and that maner of dealing was common among all the Prophets. Wherefore let vs marke that our Lordes intent here was to declare that he wil not ſuffer vs to be beguiled, ſo wee be willing to receiue his worde, and to bee taught thereby, and be diligent in diſcerning betweene trueth and falſhood. Although there be neuer ſo many falſe Prophets, and that Satan ſtriue continually to turne vs away from goodnes: yet ſhall we euer haue ſome diſcretion; that is to ſay, God wil giue vs ſome token whereby to keepe ourſelues from being deceiued. It is a promiſe that can neuer faile vs. And therefore let vs holde vs thereto, and ſeeke to obey our God. His reaching out of his hand is enough for vs: and though there be neuer ſo many meanes to deceiue vs; yet will he not ſuffer them to preuaile, according to that that is promiſed here. Wherefore let vs looke to our ſelues. Whereas we haue no Prophets nowadayes to foretell vs thinges to come, or yͭ haue reuelations aforehãd of warre, peſtilence, and famine: it is becauſe we haue greater perfection of doctrine, than the people had in old time. We therefore muſt hold our ſelues contented with the Goſpell, for it is yͤ fulnes of light. But yet therewithall let vs alſo haue an eye to the thinges which are written, and let vs examine the doctrines that are preached vnto vs: and if we finde them to be drawen out of the Lawe, the Prophetes, and the Goſpel: let vs be aſſured of them that they are certein. And if we vſe that touchſtone continually to try things by: ſurely God wil preſerue vs frõ all Satans falſhoods. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vppon that text.

Now it is ſayd expreſly that ſuch a Prophet ſhal dye the death. And that is a cauſe alſo why our Lord ſayth, that he wil giue the ſayd marke. For it were foule treacherie to iudge & condemne a Prophet without knowing why or wherefore. If a guiltleſſe perſon ſhould bee condemned vnder colour of ſome euill deed not vttered: it were too great wrong & vniuſtice to be done to a mortall man. But if a bringer of Gods word be condemned, euen as though he had done amiſſe in his office, without being found faultie: that toucheth not the creature only, neither is the wrong done to a mortal man alone: but it is an outrage done vnto God alſo, & that is high treaſon to his perſon. Ye ſee then that the cauſe why Moſes ſaith here, that God will diſcouer the falſe Prophets, is to the end they ſhould bee iudged, and alſo to warne folk that they ſhould not couet to be foaded with vaine hope, as I haue tolde you that yͤ maner of the world is cõtinualy to doe. The prophets had hard hold from time to time with the moſt part of yͤ Iewes, becauſe they brought nothing but threatnings. Theſe Prophets (quoth yͤ Iewes) doe trouble vs, & are too importunate vpon vs, they ſpeak of nothing but of Gods wrath & curſings: & ſhould they not as well tell vs of gladſome and pleaſant things? Thoſe are the thinges which the world requireth. Yea but in ſo dooing we prouoke Gods wrath. We would haue him to be our friend: & wee on our ſide are enemies to him. If we came to God wͭ true repentãce & ſought him as our father: wee ſhould haue no tydings but of peace & proſperitie to delight in. But what? We ſuffer not God to be fauorable to vs, nor to ſhew his loue towards vs. For we make war againſt him as I ſaid afore. Therefore let vs learn yͭ god wil turn yͤ ſayings of yͤ falſe Prophets to the contrarie, ſo as when they promiſe folke welfare and peace, miſchief ſhall inſue, whereby they ſhall be found to haue vſed vaine flatterie. Wherfore let vs not deſire to be rocked aſleepe with mens deceitfull ſpeeches. For what ſhall it boote vs to be acquit by them yͭ haue no power at all: when we ſhall be condemned before God? And let vs not tary till God to our coſt doe bewray yͤ leawdneſſe of the falſe Prophets, & ſo we be caught in ſome calamitie. But let vs preuent Gods wrath as ſoon as we ſee our ſins, & let vs be touched with them. And if there be any yͭ flatter vs, let vs not giue eare to them to bee ſeduced to our confuſion.

Now our Lord ſetteth downe here two ſortes of falſe Prophets. The one is of thẽ that ſpeake falſely in his name: and the other, is of them that ſpeake in the name of ſtraunge Gods. Then is it not enough for a Prophet to ſhroud himſelfe vnder yͤ name of the liuing God: but he muſt alſo execute his office faithfully. Neither is it enough for him to be put in commiſſion by God, except he execute it with a pure and vpright conſciẽce. For we ſee yͭ the deceiuers haue ſometimes obiected thus againſt Gods ſeruãts: what? Am not I a Prophet as well as thou? Yes verily, thou art in office: but ſee how thou diſchargeſt thy ſelfe of it. Let vs marke then, yͭ all the matter lyeth not in ſpeaking in Gods name: and yͭ doth experience well ſhewe vs. For the Pope at this day will ſpeake in Gods name; and yet we ſhall finde nothing but ſtarke abhominations in his doctrine: there is nothing there but a gulfe of hell to ſwallowe vp mens ſoules into deſtruction. And therefore let vs marke well, that when a Prophet ſpeakes in Gods name, we muſt examin whether it be truly or no. For if Gods name bee abuſed, yͤ expreſſing thereof is dubble wickedneſſe. And yͭ is yͤ cauſe why Moſes declareth here, firſt that if a Prophet bring vs word in yͤ name of yͤ liuing god, we muſt conſider whether the word be committed vnto him or no. That is one point which wee haue to marke here. And becauſe the wretched worlde hath bin beguiled vnder falſe pretence of Gods name: let vs learne to make narrower ſearch, and not ſuffer our ſelues to be ſeduced at alauẽture, and ſo to be led by the noſes lyke brute beaſts. True it is that Gods name ought to haue ſuch reuerence among vs, yͭ we ſhould all hũble our ſelues to hearkẽ to yͤ things yͭ are ſet foorth or ſpokẽ of him. But yet muſt we hold yͤ meane, as was declared yeſterday; which is, yͭ wee muſt not receiue all things indifferently yͭ are ſpoken; but yͭ our faith muſt be the tryer of them. For our Lorde hath not left vs his holy Scripture for naught. It is yͤ true touchſtone whereby we muſt try all doctrines, yͭ we may iudge of them aright.

The ſecond ſort of falſe Prophets which Moſes hath ſet downe heere, is of thoſe which ſpeake in the name of Idols; which abuſe crept in at length euen among the Iewes. For after that thinges were once growen out of kinde; All tooke vpon them to be Soothſayers and Prophets: but that was altogether in the name of idols, according to the cities wherein they dwelt. Whereſoeuer there was a Temple: there was a Iewe that ſaid, we haue the foreknowledge of thinges to come, euen by byrth: and yet in the meane while they ſolde their Propheſies, as theſe deciuers doe which trot vp and down the world, and ſay they can tell folkes their fortunes. And it was a common practiſe of all the Iewes, as appeareth euen by the prophane hiſtories, when they were once become idolaters. Surely it is a great vnſhamefaſtneſſe of them, to make ſuch boaſt of the gift of Propheſie. And why ſo? They haue that gift becauſe they be the linage of Abraham, becauſe they be circumciſed, becauſe they bee Gods owne people and heritage, and becauſe they haue the Lawe, and looke for their promiſed redeemer: and yet for all this, they giue ouer themſelues to ſuch abhominatiõs, that they will needes borrowe the meanes of idolaters. And we ſee in maner the lyke altogether nowadayes in the Popedome: For the Prieſtes and Monkes boaſt themſelues to haue the office of praying for yͤ whole Church and yet in yͤ mean while they will ſing a Maſſe of our Lady, and a Maſſe of ſuch a Saint & ſuch a Saint: and ſo idols are intermingled with the maieſtie of the liuing God. For although yͤ Saints as in reſpect of thẽſelues, be no idols: yet doe they make them ſo, which doe ſo abuſe their names. And therefore let vs learne to keepe our ſelues from both theſe ſorts of falſhoodes, by hearing no man ſpeake but in the name of God. For wee know there is nothing but vanitie in mans minde, and that we ſhall be deceiued if we giue our ſelues to any mortall creature: and therefore onely God is to be heard. Againe, when Gods name is pretended, let vs try whether it be in trueth or no: we haue his word, we cannot lye: and hee will giue vs the vnderſtanding thereof, if we be lowly and meeke. And if we ſubmit our ſelues wholy vnto him; it is certeine that he will neuer ſuffer vs to be deceiued. Well may we be tẽpted, as we haue ſeene in the thirteenth Chapter, yͭ God wil try vs whether we loue him or no. But if there be ſuch an vpright minde to be found in vs yͭ we wil ſeeke to ſerue him purely, & to obey him: ſurely hee will deliuer vs frõ all deceit. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to remember vpon this text.

Now in the end it is ſayd, that when a falſe prophet is found out by tryall, then it ſhall appeare that he ſpake vppon preſumption, and therefore be not afraid of him. Here are two ſayings which import two good and profitable warninges. The one is, yͭ he which aduanceth himſelfe beyond meaſure, ſpeaketh proudly. For is there a more diueliſhe pride, than for a mortal man to thruſt forth him ſelf as if he were an inſtrument of Gods ſpirit, as though he were an Angel frõ heauen, whẽ in very deed he is but a lyer, and hath nothing but winde in him? If I take vpon me another mans name, & ſay, ſuch a one hath giuen me commiſſion: is it not too leawd a falſhood? The partie to whom I haue done yͤ wrong may come and ſay, Ah thou lyar, how durſt thou abuſe my name? Such dealing (I ſay) would bee counted great iniurie. Then if a mortal man auaunce himſelfe in the name of God, (as for example, if I ſtep vp into yͤ pulpit & require audiẽce in yͤ name of God, & yet notwͭſtanding doe fal to ſeducing of yͤ people:) yͭ is a pride which paſſeth al others, as I ſaid afore. For it is not ſimple lying, it is not ſingle deceit, it is not a ſimple falſifying of this or yͭ: but a turning of Gods trueth into vntruth, & a wrapping of God in our falſhoods, & an vnhallowing of his holy & ſacred name. Therfore let vs mark wel, how it is not for naught yͭ Moſes ſayth yͭ the falſe Prophets ſhall be condemned, yea euen becauſe of their proud & preſũptuous dealing, and for their vntollerable raſhnes. And hereby as many as haue yͤ charge to beare abroad Gods word are warned to walke warely & circumſpectly, & to take heed yͭ in their preaching of yͤ word, they intermingle nothing of their owne: but yͭ they haue a ſpeciall care, yͭ all their ſayinges be referred to the true & pure expounding of yͭ which is written, & that they doe nothing elſe but apply Gods word to yͤ vſe of the people: As for exãple, I ſtand not here to make newe Lawes, nor to forge new articles of faith. What then? Our Lord hath vttered his whole will vnto vs in the holy ſcripture, & it is not lawful to ad any thing thereto. What am I to do thẽ? wherfore do we preach yea & that continually day by day? To the ende yͭ the ſcripture ſhould be well vnderſtood, that it ſhould be applyed to our vſe, & that men might know how to benefit thẽſelues therby; as how to imbrace Gods promiſes, how to order their lyfe aright, & how to liue quietly euery man after his owne calling. The ſhewing of theſe thinges is to miniſter force to yͤ holy ſcripture yͭ wee may vnderſtand it and fare the better by it, and bee edifyed therewith. Such (ſay I) as haue yͤ charge of preaching Gods word, ought to haue a ſpecial regard of theſe thinges.

Deut.12.32

Howbeit foraſmuch as no creature no not euen yͤ Angels of heauen, are able to execute ſo high & noble a cõmiſſion: we muſt pray God to guide & gouern vs, bearing in minde therewithall (as S. Paul ſayth) yͭ no man could ſay yͭ Ieſus is yͤ Lord, (yͭ is to ſay, no man can giue glory to yͤ ſonne of God,) but by the holy Ghoſt: & to bee ſhort, yͭ he which is aduanced higheſt to teach others, ought to abace himſelf loweſt, for feare leaſt any thing may ſcape him which hee hath not receiued of God, ſo as he may ſafely proteſt yͭ he hath not amed at any other end, than the worſhipping & ſeruing of God, euen according to yͤ doctrine which hee hath deliuered heretofore in his holy ſcripture. Againe the people are to be exhorted to take heede yͭ Gods glory bee not defaced. For yͤ Papiſtes think it an humilitie allowable before God, & a very good & commẽdable deuotion, to be ſo brutiſh as to receiue all yͭ euer is put vnto thẽ. O ſay they, we muſt ſubmit our ſelues to our mother holy Church, yea but in ſo doing they be guiltie of yͤ defacing of God himſelf & of yͤ bereauing & robbing of him of his authoritie. For why? The Pope & his cleargie are ſo full of ſtinking pride & ſtatelyneſſe, that they make Lawes & ſubdue mens conſciences to thẽ at their pleaſure. Ye ſee thẽ yͭ that is an vſurping of tyrannie ouer Gods people. They excommunicate all good doctrine, to ſet forth their owne corruptions, & ſo they defile the pure ſimplicitie of Gods worde. Well, they be ſuffered in theſe thinges, yea & mainteined & defended in their malitiouſneſſe. And in the meane while God is halfe ſhaken off, & no account is made of him: for men doe ouermaiſter him. For as for all them that hearken to falſe prophets after that faſhion, doe they not ſet vp their diueliſh pride to the intent to thruſt downe God thereby?

1.Cor.12.3.

Let vs mark well then, yͭ whereas Moſes ſpeaketh here of yͤ pride or ouerheaddineſſe of yͤ deceiuers: it is not onely to make them to bee miſlyked, puniſhed, and cut off from among yͤ people: but alſo to warne vs that if a man preſume to mingle any of his inuentions with Gods word or goe about to alter any part of the order yͭ he hath ſet: wee muſt bee no fauorers of ſuch raſhneſſe. For in ſo dooing wee diminiſhe Gods honor, and become guiltie of the vtter defacing of him as much as in vs lyeth. And therefore all of vs in general, as well the preacher as the hearer, are warned to conſider what the plaine reuerence is which God requireth at our hand. It conſiſteth not in ceremonies, nor in vaine bablinges as men ſay: but in this, that he onely doe ſpeake and all mens mouthes be kept ſhut. Not ẏ there ſhould be no Shepheardes, to preach the doctrine vnto vs: but that all ſhould be fetched from him, and he be held as chiefe Maiſter. The way then to beate down all pride and raſhneſſe, is that the holy ſcripture haue his full force, ſo as men vnderſtand that that is the ſtandard vnder which we muſt gather our ſelues, and that God will be obeyed by mens ſubmitting of themſelues therunto. For without that, there will be nothing but pride and ouerſtatelyneſſe among vs. And ſo ye ſee that the deuotion of the Papiſtes is diueliſh, becauſe they haue left God to ſubmit themſelues to creatures, and ſuffer thēſelues to be led lyke beaſtes without any diſcretion.

And in the ſame reſpect is it ſayd in the end, Thou ſhalt not be afraid of ſuch a Prophet. He ſaith not, thou ſhalt not feare ſuch a prophet: but word for worde it is, thou ſhalt not be afraid of ſuch a Prophet. For here God meant to arme his faithfull ones with conſtancie, that they might not be put out of countenance by any faire diſguiſement: but that when they are once inſtructed in the faith, they ſhould defy all ſuch as vaunt thēſelues and come to make gay ſhewes vnder the name of God, as I haue tolde you afore, that ſometimes men are too fearefull. In deed there are that mocke at God and haue no feeling of conſcience at all, but ſet as light by the trueth as they doe by leaſings: & euen at this day, there are that make as much account of the Goſpell, as of ẏ abuſes of the Popedome: Ieſus Chriſt & the Pope are all one to them. What a ſorte of mockers are to be ſeene, which will needes bee coūted good Chriſtians becauſe they hold ſkorn of the popiſh ſuperſtitions; and yet in the meane while are deſpiſers of God and his word? Surely they be but dogges and hogs, without any feare of God or ciuil honeſtie. And yet is the worlde too ful of ſuch corruption and infection. Againe there are otherſome very tenderharted. Not ẏ it is not a vertue to ſtand in ſome feare: but becauſe they be ouerfearefull: when they be vexed with any ſcruple of conſcience, they wote not which way to turne them. For if an error be put vnto them, they dare not receiue it for feare: againe on the other ſide, if the trueth be put vnto them, their agreeing to it (if they doe agree) is not with any certeintie. Ye ſhall ſee a number ẏ are euer wauering, lyke reedes ſhaken with the winde. The Maſſe is holy with them, & the Goſpell is holy with them alſo, and yet they be certeine of none of both. Now our Lord will not haue vs to ſtand in any ſuch feare. He will haue vs to be ſure of his worde; & when his trueth is throughly proued vnto vs, he will haue vs to defy the world; & all the diuels of hell; Inſomuch ẏ if the very Angels of heauen ſhould ſet themſelues againſt the Goſpell, wee ſee how S. Paul ſayth that we muſt hold them for accurſed and excommunicate. God then will haue his worde honored ſo highly, that whē we once knowe it & are ſure of it, we muſt not be any more afrayd.

Gal.1.8.

It ſtandeth vs in hand to put this leſſon in vre nowadayes, becauſe the Popes thundring were able to make all the world to quake, if men were not armed aforehand againſt him, with ẏ thinges that are told vs here by Moſes. The Pope names himſelf Chriſtes vicar, ẏ head of the Church, S. Peters ſucceſſor, & the mainteiner of the Apoſtolike ſea, ſo as there is no Church of God but ẏ Church of Rome: nor any Shepheard, or Prelate, if the Pope be not head of all: nor any kingdome of Ieſus Chriſt, otherwiſe than in ẏ Popes perſon, who hath the keyes of the kingdome of heauen. Woulde not the alledging of all theſe thinges make the ſtouteſt of all to ſhrinke, if we were not armed againſt them? Yes: but when al theſe thinges are pretended, wee muſt conſider whether the reporter of thē do diſcharge his dutie faithfully. For if he ſpeake in Gods name, and yet be found to be a falſe harlot; hee is ẏ more to blame for abuſing ſo honorable a title. And the more he was eſteemed before, ẏ leſſe is he to bee regarded afterward. Let him thunder his belly full; yet ſhall all his excōmunications paſſe into ſmoke, and all his threatninges ſhall be but mere vanitie. The effect therefore of ẏ thinges which our Lord ment to ſay in this text, is ẏ being well aſſured of Gods word, and hauing examined all doctrine, (howbeit with humilitie,) & hauing vſed ẏ foreſayd touchſtone of the holy ſcripture: we may wel defye all thē ẏ cloke thēſelues vnder ẏ gay mantle of Gods name, abuſing their commiſſion & executing tyranny in ſtead of ſeruing the Church of God. I ſay we may defy all ẏ rable of them, & cry out againſt ẏ Pope & his abhominable wickedneſſe, & not be afraid of any thing ẏ he can doe vnto vs. For ſo lōg as we haue God on our ſide, wee may boldly hold ſkorne of the whole Popedome, how proude & ſtately ſoeuer they be there. That is the thing in effect which we haue to marke, ẏ wee bee not fearefull where God will haue vs to be ſtout. But ẏ when we haue his doctrine & truth, we muſt ſo profit our ſelues by thē, that whatſoeuer ẏ diuell doe practiſe, he may not turne vs aſide from ẏ way of ſaluation: but wee muſt hold on our courſe, according to this ſaying which we ſhall ſee hereafter, This is the way, walke ye therein: and alſo according to the Prophet Eſayes account who ſaith, This is the reſt. Therefore let vs continue therein, and holde on to the marke whereunto God calleth vs: and then can we not doe amiſſe.

Deut.30.19. Eſa.30.21.& 28.12.

Now let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them better thā we haue done, & to ſtrengthen vs more and more by his word, ẏ his kingdome may be aduaunced among vs, & we indeuour ſo to ſerue & honor him, as we may be vnder his protection, and he mainteine vs in ſuch wiſe, that we knowing him to be our good father & Sauiour, may take the more courage to giue our ſelues wholy to him, all our lyfe long. And ſo let vs all ſay. Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the v. of December. 1555.

The (Cxij Sermon which is the firſt vppon the nineteenth Chapter

WHen the Lord thy God ſhal haue rooted out the nations, whoſe lande the Lorde thy God giueth thee, ſo as thou arte owner of them and dwelleſt in their Cities and houſes:

2 Then ſhalt thou ſet thee out three Cities in the middeſt of the lande which the Lorde thy God wil giue thee to poſſeſſe.

3 Thou ſhalt prepare a way to them, and diuide the bounds of the land (which the Lorde thy God will giue thee to inherite) into three parts, that whoſoeuer hath committed manſlaughter may flee thither.

4 They ſhal ſerue for the manſleaer to flee thither, that he may liue: namely if he haue ſtriken his neighbour ignorantly, and haue not hated him aforetimes.

5 [As for example] if a man goe with his neighbour to the wood to fel timber, and he caſteth backe his hande with the axe in hewing the wood, and the head flieth off of the helue, and hitteth his neighbour that he dieth: he ſhall flee to one of thoſe Cities and liue:

6 To the intent that the next of his kinne followe not the manſleaer, while his heart is chafed, and ouertake him if the way be ouerlong, and put him to death though he bee guiltleſſe of the other mans death, foraſmuch as he hated him not before.

7 Therefore commaund I thee to appoint out three Cities.

ALthough yͤ Lawe that is ſet down here, ſerued for yͤ commõ weale of Iſrael: yet may we alſo fare the better for it at this day. For therby god meant to declare what puniſhment ought to be executed vppon ſuch as commit wilfull murder thorow malice and of ſet purpoſe. Alſo it ſheweth that we muſt not take yͤ for a crime, which a man dooth not willingly, but by chauncemedly as they terme it. True it is that ſuch thinges are not ſo caſuall but that God gouerneth them frõ aboue, as is ſhewed in another place, where it is ſayd, that if a man be lopping of a tree, and Exod.21.13 a bough thereof doe hitte one vppon the head that he dye, it is God that had determined it ſo. And the holy ſcripture will not haue vs to attribute the falling out of thinges to fortune, but that wee ſhould knowe that God directeth all thinges, to the intent that although we ſee not his hande, yet wee ſhould vnderſtand by faith, that he ſetteth ſuch ſtore by our lyfe, that hee Luke.12.7. hath numbred all the hayres of our heades, as is ſayd in another text. Moreouer, to come againe to the matter, it is ſhewed here that all faultes are willing, that is to ſay, that men doe them wittingly and of ſet purpoſe. But let vs goe foreward with the text that is ſet downe here. God commaundeth the people of Iſraell to chooſe out three Cities, vntill he haue inlarged their boundes further. For it behooued them to haue ſixe in al as wee ſhall ſee in the next lecture, and as is declared Iosu.20.1.7. in the twentith chapter of Ioſua. Neuertheleſſe, vntill ſuch time as the people were in full and peaceable poſſeſſion of the land, Gods will was that they ſhould appoint out but three Cities of refuge, for all ſuch to flee vnto as had committed any manſlaughter by chaunce meddely (as they call it.) Notwithſtanding, leaſt any man ſhould abuſe that priuiledge, hee addeth what maner of manſleaers ſhoulde haue protection thereby. Such (ſayth he) as haue killed their neighbours vnwittingly: and thereof hee alledgeth an example. If a man goe to fell timber, and the Axe ſlippeth out of his hand, and hitteth one ſo as hee dye, foraſmuch as the man purpoſed not to doe any ſuch deede, hee may flee and haue himſelfe in one of thoſe Cities. Now wee muſt marke that it was not enough for a man to proteſt that he had done it but by miſchance: but it behooued him to haue it well proued, ſo as the partie that Luk.22.35. was to inioy the priuiledge ſhould bee worthie of it, and the matter well knowen and the trueth of al thinges tryed out how the caſe ſtood by iuſt examination:and ſpecially that there had bin no hatred betweene the parties aforetimes, ſo as it might appeare that there was none other cauſe of the committing of the ſlaughter, than Gods only determination,without any act done on mans behalfe otherwiſe than of minde to doe well. And the manſleaer that was able to prooue this, ſhould flee to one of thoſe Cities, and there tary till the death of the high Prieſt: and then hee was to returne home againe, becauſe in that while the heartburning of the deadmans kinſemen might bee appeaſed.

And hereby God ſheweth, firſt how greatly he would haue vs to abhorre the ſhedding of mans bloud: and it is a point which we ought to marke well. For thereby we perceiue what loue he beareth vs, in that our lyfe is ſo deare vnto him, and that he is ſo charie of it. If God made no more account of vs thā he doth of the brute beaſtes, hee would not ſet ſo much ſtore by our lyues. Therefore muſt wee needes conclude that he loueth vs with a fatherly loue,ſeeing our lyfe is ſo pretious to him. Beſides this, euery of vs ought to take knowledge hereby of his own duetie: for wee cannot doe any outrage or violence to our neighbor, but we muſt offend God deadly. And not without cauſe. For in ſo doing wee deface his image, as is ſayd in the ninth of Geneſis. Foraſmuch as God hath printed his image in men; whoſoeuer hurteth his neighbor maliciouſly, ſpiteth God to the vttermoſt of his power. And ſo are wee warned to abſteine from all euill dooing, and to liue in ſuch ſorte among men as no man bee hurt by vs. And in deede we ſee that the manſlaughters which are committed euen of neceſſitie, cary with them neuertheleſſe a kinde of defiling. As for example, when enemies are ſlayne in battel,although the thing bee lawefull, yet doth God ſay that it is a defiling of mens handes. Not that hee imputeth it for a crime, but to the intent that the man which is conſtreined to fight againſt his enemies, ſhould bee ſory to ſee the order of nature ſo troubled by reaſon of mens ſinnes, that whereas wee ought to bee as brethren, and to acknowledge our owne fleſhe in euery man that is made after our owne lykeneſſe: yet notwithſtanding wee be driuen to deſtroy them after that faſhion. Yee ſee then how that euen in the time of warre, he ẏ putteth on armour againſt his enemies ought to doe it, being ſorie in his heart, and to bethinke himſelfe that ſuch outrage happeneth not but through the great leawdneſſe of men. The meaning of all this, is that wee ſhould liue quietly, and euery man indeuour to maintein peace and concord, and haue our handes tyed for committing of any euill deedes.

1.Chron.22 8,& 28,3.

And wheras God declareth how greatly manſlaughter diſpleaſeth him: let vs marke that(as ſaith Saint Iohn) before him all maner of hatred is accounted for murther. Then ought we to eſchewe all wrong dealing that may be done againſt men, for if wee haue any rancor or enmitie towardes them in our hartes, wee be guiltie of murther alreadie afore GOD. Marke that for one point. But here our Lorde acquitteth the partie that ſhall haue ſlayne a man vnwittingly. Behold (ſaith hee,) there ſhall no iudgement of death paſſe vppon ſuch a man: for there is none offence in him. Seeing that the heauenly Iudge hath pronounced ſuch ſentence: what creature dareth reply againſt it? Yee ſee then that ſuch a one is guitleſſe, and ſo declared to bee before God. Yet notwithſtanding hee muſt bee faine to forſake his owne houſe and inheritance,and go dwell in a ſtrange place, and ſuffer many incommodities. And why doth God vexe him ſo, ſith he findeth him guiltleſſe? Hee ſheweth vs that although the partie be faultleſſe, yet is it done for examples ſake, to the ende wee ſhoulde not admit any murderers among vs, but puniſh them as grieuouſly as may bee, and vtterly abhorre them. That is the cauſe why the partie that offendeth vnwittingly, ſhall neuertheleſſe abide ſome puniſhment, and become as a man that is put to his penance, to the intent that hee may humble himſelf and acknowledge in this wiſe: Truely, I meant not to doe any harme; and this miſchaunce is befalne mee vnwittingly: whereby God warneth mee that I haue great neede to pray him to rule both my handes and my feete. And moreouer foraſmuch as mans bloude hath bin ſhed by me; although there were none euil meant on my part: yet muſt I bee ſorie for it, and beare in minde that our Lorde maketh ſuch account of mans lyfe: as he wil haue it alwayes to bee had in eſtimation of vs. Let that ſerue for one point, concerning this lawe.

1.Iohn.3.15

And nowe for the ſecond poynt, Our Lord ſheweth vs that wee ought to preuent all daungers and occaſions, in reſpect whereof hee addeth that the manſleaer ſhal flee to one of thoſe Cities. And why? For feare leaſt any of the deadmans kinſemen being moued to wrath, ſhoulde reuenge his neighbors death, and ſo ſhoulde the miſchiefe bee dubbled. Now then, to auoyd this inconuenience, There muſt be Townes appointed for refuge. And hereby wee ſee that (as I ſayd afore) the Lorde will not haue vs to tary till the miſchiefe light vpon vs, but hee will haue vs to take the remedie of it. It might ſo fall out that ſome kinſeman of the deadmans being angrie with the matter would ſay; hee hath ſlayne my couſin, or my brother, and thereupon come running vppon the innocent partie in his rage, and kill him; whereby the land ſhould haue bin defiled with bloud. Therefore Gods will is that the partie which hath committed manſlaughter, ſhould get him out of the ſight of thoſe that might bee ſtirred vp to anger againſt him. But it is certeine that hee coulde not excuſe himſelfe, which ſhoulde ſo beare malice to the guiltleſſe partie. For what could he require of him? Lyeth it in man to ouerrule the things that come to paſſe by Gods prouidence, which is hidden to vs? Are wee able to withſtande it? Needs then muſt it be too ſpitefull hartburning and malice, that ſhould ſo moue a man to wrath againſt the partie that neither intended nor thought any euil . But although this commeth of infirmitie and of ſinne, yet hath our Lorde voutſafed to remedie that inconuenience. And ſo wee ſee that the lawes ſerue not to bring men to perfection, I meane the politike lawes that are made for ciuill gouernement. They ſerue not to ſtabliſhe perfect holineſſe among vs, but to remedie the vices whereunto we be inclined. Becauſe wee bee not throughly clenſed, our Lorde is faine to ſet barres about vs, to the intent that if our hearts incline to naughtineſſe, our handes may bee withhelde from performing the naughtie deſires that we haue conceiued in our mindes. Gods lawe is giuen vs to rule our hearts and minds by. For our Lorde not only commaundeth vs to abſteine Rom.7.7. from all euill, but alſo will haue our ſoules ruled altogether by his wil, I meane the moral lawe or ten commaundementes which I haue expounded heretofore. But as touching the earthly policie or outwarde gouernement, we muſt vnderſtand that Gods intent was to bring his people to honeſtie, that there might be good order among them; and yet for all that, he reſtreined their affections that they might not come to effect. As for example, in this place, if we were required to ſhew what were euery mans dutie and what he ought to do: it might be ſaid that when a man hath giuen a blowe with his hand vnwittingly, ſo as the ſame be ſufficiently verified: thē the next friend or kinſman muſt not ſteppe to reuenge it: for in ſo doing he offendeth God in two ſorts: firſt in ſetting vppon the partie that hath not done him any harme by his will, and ſecondly in fathering that thing vppon a mortall man which God had ordeined by his owne ſecret prouidence. After that maner would God ſpeake, if hee ment to bring vs to a perfect doctrine. But when he maketh a poſitiue lawe, he thinks it ynough to ſay that men ſhould haue an eye to the inconueniences that may inſue, and preuent them, and not tarie till the harme be done, but eſchew it aforehand, and ſhut the doore againſt all occaſions. In like caſe is it whē a manſlaughter is committed: the offender muſt get him out of the way, and ſaue himſelfe in one of yͤ Cities of refuge that the next kinſmā which is deſirous of reuenge, haue none occaſion to do it; but that all further ſtryking may bee layde aſide, and the purſuer preace not into the citie, to followe the rage of his choler; but that the offender may be pardoned, ſo as if there bee any fault in him, the ſame may bee borne withal, and furthermore that the partie which is ſo dealt with may liue in ſafetie, according as it is ſayd in another place that thoſe cities of refuge ſhould belong to the Leuites, thereby to ſhew that God had appointed them there, to bee as protectors of ſuch as came thither for Num. 35.6. ſuccor: ſo as if any body came to purſue the quarel againſt the offender, the Prieſts and the Leuites ſhould ſet themſelues againſt him, and take vpon them yͤ protection of the partie. Thus much concerning that text.

Now to bee ſhorte wee haue to gather hereof, that God meant not to make ſuch Fraunchiſes as are deuiſed in the Popedome. For (to their ſeeming) God is well honored, when a murtherer, a theefe, or a robber taketh ſanctuarie in a Church, ſo as the officer of Iuſtice may not bee bolde to lay handes vppon him. In deede it is an auntient ſuperſtition; but yet it ceaſeth not for all that, to be euill. For God neuer meant to hallowe his temple after that faſhion. True it is that ſuch as were in daunger, were woont to flee for ſuccor to his Temple: but yet it booted not the parties that were guiltie. It ſerued for ſuch as being wrongfully purſued by their enemies, thought that the reuerence of God might appeaſe the wrath of their purſuers: and therefore they fled into the Temple. But yet for all that the offenders eſcaped not vnpuniſhed, neither was it any let that they receiued not a puniſhment according to their deſertes. As for example, Salomon ſware that although Adonias had caught holde of the hornes of the altar of the Temple; yet ſhould hee be taken thence 1.Kin.1.51. and put to death. Salomon was not ſo blind, that the reuerence of the Temple coulde make him to let the partie ſcape vnpuniſhed that had deſerued it. For why? It is a mocking and ſcorning of God, when his Iuſtice is diſplaced or diſappoynted vnder pretence of his name and Maieſtie. Beholde, God commaundeth vs to puniſh murthers and robberies: and yet we will make him a bolſterer of them, in ſo much that if a cutthroate get him into a Church, hee muſt bee preſerued there from the hand of Iuſtice for the honor of God: and ſo God ſhould be contrarie to himſelfe. Nowe then the bringing vp of ſuch Fraunchiſes in the Popedome was a fondneſſe, I meane before ſuch time as the tyrannie thereof confounded thinges in ſuch ſorte as wee ſee they be nowe: and it was done of wicked ſuperſtitiō. True it is that in old time there were certaine kinds of priuiledges: but they were but for the poorer ſort that were vexed out of meaſure. As for example, if a bondman were cruelly handled by his maiſter; hee might flee for refuge to ſome image. To ſay the trueth, the Emperors made themſelues idols in ſo dooing: but yet the end whereunto it was done was not euil. For thereby their caſe came to examination. If a maiſter would needes cut his bondſeruants throate, or miſuſe him without cauſe: he was compelled to ſell him away, and to take mony for him: and ſo the innocent was deliuered from death. But the ſanctuaries that were deuiſed among Chriſtians, was a peruerting of all ciuill order and equitie among men. And in very deede our Lorde helde skorne of that fond kinde of deuotion, and ſhewed by the effect that hee miſlyked it. For in olde time, they that tooke Sanctuarie in Churches were thoſe that neuer came at Sermons. Wee ſee howe complayntes haue bin made thereof by the auntient doctors that haue written thirteene hundred yeeres ago. For thus doe they ſay, As for them that take ſanctuarie here among vs; they bee none of thoſe whome wee knowe, they bee none of thoſe whome wee ſee dayly, they bee none of thoſe whome wee take for our diſciples, and which come hither to receiue Gods Doctrine: none of that ſort do euer take ſanctuarie among vs. Who bee they then that are deſirous to inioy the priuiledges of the Church? Vnthriftes, deſpiſers of God, and dayly haunters of Tauernes and brothelhouſes. When they haue committed any faulte or offence, by and by they take ſanctuarie and flee to vs for refuge. And how happeneth that? No doubt but our Lord hath declared that hee cannot abide any ſuch diſorder, that men ſhould Ier.7.11. make his Church a denne of theeues, as is ſpoken of it by the Prophet Ieremie. In deede it is otherwiſe meant: but yet is this a generall ground, that God will not haue his temple to ſerue for a couert for any euill dooers. And therefore let vs note that although the Churches of the Popedome had bin dedicated to God; yet were they vnhalowed againe by that meanes, foraſmuch as they ſerued to priuiledge offenders, and beſide to greeue the creditors, and for ſuch other wicked thinges. Howbeit foraſmuch as at this day they be Satans brothelhouſes and nothing elſe but dennes of idols: they may wel haue ſuch priuiledges, & we ſhould not hate them for it. But in the meane while wee ſee how all manner of diſorder reigneth there.

And now for our part let vs marke, that Gods wil was not to giue protection to miſdemeanors. For on the contrary ſide it is ſayd, That the partie which committeth ſuch a manſlaughter ſhall offer himſelfe: (That ſaying is ſet downe expreſly:) and againe, that the Iuſtices ſhall make diligent inquirie of the matter, to knowe whether the partie that hath committed the manſlaughter did hate his neighbor aforetimes, or whether he had any quarell againſt him or no. Herein our Lord ſheweth that no excuſe may bee admitted. And this diſcretion ought to bee in all Iudges to beware that they admit not the anſwere of a man that would couer his owne misbehauiour. For the deed muſt bee looked into, and the trueth boulted out. Oftentimes Iudges are contented to bee beguiled and to ſee and not ſee when ſome color is ſet vppon the matter, and to admit the excuſe though it bee neuer ſo trifling, Tuſh (ſay they) hee excuſeth himſelfe of ſuch a matter. Yea and if the offender may bee beleeued, hee will excuſe himſelfe euer. Therefore muſt wee make inquirie as God commaundeth vs, and wee muſt doe it throughly. So then let vs marke that when God gaue protection to ſuch as commit manſlaughter vnwittingly, he meant not yͭ the ſame ſhould ſerue for wilfull offenders; and therfore he hath ſhewed the meane how yͤ thing being good of it ſelf, might be kept from turning into abuſe. And hereby wee bee done to vnderſtand that if priuiledges bee good and vpright, they ſerue not for the wicked: and the graunters of them ought to conſider that thing well: and they muſt haue an eye aforehande to all other reſpectes, whereby men may from time to time drawe their dooinges to euill libertie to the ouergreeuing of ſuch as are worthie to be mainteined. But now whereas hee hath made a lawe of vprightneſſe, for pitie of ſuch as deſerue to bee regarded at his hand: by and by the wicked ſorte being ſuttle, doe take the aduauntage thereof to themſelues. Men therefore had neede of diſcretion in that behalfe, to diſappoint ſuch as would abuſe priuiledges, which are grãted for none but for ſuch as are worthy of them & deſerue them. That is the thing which we haue to beare in minde concerning the inquirie which God commaundeth to be made when manſlaughter is committed.

And heere wee haue a dubble leſſon to gather of this text. The one is for ſuch as ſit in the ſeate of Iuſtice. They (as I haue ſayd afore) muſt take good heede that they admit no trifling excuſes: but that when any open offence is committed, they trye out who is faultie thereof, that hee may be puniſhed for it. For wee ſee Deut.21.1. how God hath commaunded that if a mans body were found dead, the Iuſtice ſhoulde make diligent inquiſition of it out of hand without any forſlowing or partialitie: and that if the murtherer could not bee found, yet if it were neere the boundes of any Towne or Citie, inquiſition ſhould be made for it round about, and ſolemne proteſtation ſhould bee made by thoſe Cities that they were guiltles of the bloudſhed before God, and that if they knewe the dooer thereof, they would bewray him: and after all this, it behoued them alſo to offer a ſacrifice. And there is not any thing that can better ſhewe vs how greatly God abhorreth the ſhedding of mans bloud, than this that wee ſee that hee willeth the magiſtrates to come together after that faſhion, to doe Iuſtice for dueties ſake of their owne accord, though no man require it at their hand: and alſo to offer themſelues before God in the open face of the world, with proteſtation that their intent is not to conceale the miſdeed, but that they would to the vttermoſt of their power auenge it, if it came to their knowledge, without cloaking of it. And yet is not that enough: but they muſt moreouer adde a ſacrifice, to craue pardon at Gods hand, foraſmuch as it was his will to humble them, by ſuffering a manſlaughter to be committed within their iuriſdiction, and in that they were not able to cleare the land thereof. So then let vs learne, that ſuch as ſit in the ſeate of Iuſtice muſt bee watchful, to ſee that no miſdemeanor bee foſtered. And if it bee concealed, they muſt looke diligẽtly to it that it may be brought to light. And when they haue proofe of the matter, they muſt not bee ſlacke in puniſhing of it, vnleſſe they will be taken for acceſſaries before God to yͤ deed doers. Mark yͭ for one point.

And further, in all examinations of matters let Iudges and Iuſtices haue their eyes open, to ſee whether folke deale craftily and couertly or no. And if they did ſo, there ſhould bee better regard had to proofes than there is. But they let many thinges ſlippe, and are contented that they ſhoulde not come to knowledge. And yet doth God ſhewe here how men ought to behaue themſelues in the examination of offences. Wherein we haue a generall leſſon that concerneth vs all. For although all of vs bee not ordeined to bee Iuſtices to beare the ſworde for the punishing of offenders: yet doth God graunt vs the honor to bee our owne Iudges. Therefore let vs examine our ſelues diligently, when any matter befalleth vs, that wee flatter not our ſelues in our offences and miſdealinges. And if we ought to be ſo diligent in examining our ſelues, that although wee feele no remorſe or heartbyting of conſcience, yet notwithſtanding wee ſhould ſift our ſelues whether wee bee worthie of blame or no: what ought we to do whẽ we be conuicted by the witneſſe of our owne conſciences, ſo as we perceiue there was ſome euill diſpoſition in vs? Let vs beware that wee can well iuſtifie our ſelues then. And ſo yee ſee how wee may proceede from one thing to another: namely that inaſmuch as wee perceiue that Magiſtrates are here warned to doe their ductie diligently; wee may gather vppon that particular poynt, that God hath inioyned euery of vs to preferre inditementes againſt our ſelues, and to take good heede that wee flatter not our ſelues in any wiſe.

1.Cor.11.31.

But now by the way, to come againe to the examinations which our Lord hath ſet downe here: it is ſayd that conſideration muſt be had whether there haue bin any hatred betweene the partie that is ſo ſtriken that hee dyeth of it, and the other that gaue the ſtroke: Let it be conſidered (ſaith he) whether there was any hatred betwixt them or no. Here we ſee yet better the thing that I touched afore, that is to wit, that all crimes are willing, and that wee muſt repaire to that fountaine to know whether it bee a crime or no. As for example, if a man haue committed a manſlaughter, how may it bee knowen that hee is guiltie of crime or no? By knowing whether hee bare any hatred or malice to the partie or no, ſaith the Lord. And here we haue to marke firſt of all, that forasmuch as hatred or malice is the welſpring of murther, it is not to bee wondered at, or to be thought ſtraunge, that God ſhould denounce all them to bee murtherers, which hate men in their hartes, and that he ſhould condemne the rancor though it lye hidden within. For why? when a murtherer commeth to examination, is the hand to blame? is the ſwoorde to blame? or is the ſtroke to blame that was giuen? No. But the blame is in the malice that was conceiued afore, which led the hand and prouoked the man to commit the murther. Therefore marke it for a point, that it is not without cauſe that our Lorde deemeth all thoſe to be murtherers, which doe ſo hate their neighbors. And the ſame muſt warne vs to preuent all daungers, that the ſunne go not downe vppon our malice; for in ſo dooing wee giue Satan poſſeſſion of vs. Beware my brethren (ſayth S. Paul) that ye giue not place to Satan. And how doe wee giue him place? It is (ſayth hee) by ſuffering the Sunne to goe downe vppon our wrath; for when we feede any hartburning within vs, and multiply rancor in our mindes; although wee perceiue it not at the firſt, yet are we caught with ſo curſed affection, as we cãnot ouercome it afterward. Seeing then that hatred procureth ſuch wickedneſſe; let euery man looke to himſelfe, and when wee be moued to any ill will, although ſome diſpleaſure be done vnto vs, and it may ſeeme that we haue iuſt cauſe of reuenge as in reſpect of men: yet notwithſtanding let all ſuch thinges be layd aſide, and let vs ſtriue earneſtly to ouermaiſter our ſelues, that our hearts be not hardened for feare leaſt the diuel doe ſo worke in vs, that the hatred which we haue cõceiued to day, do make vs ready to ſlea & kil to morrow, ſo as yͤ hart being inuenimed doe cary yͤ hande away wͭ it. Yee ſee then how it is a thing worthie to be marked.

Eph.4.26, 27.

And generally let vs learne, that to examine our faultes well, we muſt not onely haue an eye to the thinges that are done by our hands, feete, eyes, & eares: but we muſt alſo goe to the inward parts & ſearch our thoughts, our wicked deſires, and all the thinges that doe tempt and prouoke vs: for there lyeth the right examination of our ſins. When a man goeth about to Iuſtify himſelf becauſe he hath committed no murther, theft, or whoredome in actuall deede, & yet is infected with wicked luſts in his hart: his laboring to acquit himſelfe after that ſort, is in vaine before God. And therefore let vs beare in minde, that to ſearch our ſelues duely of all our offences and miſdooinges, we muſt enter into our owne conſciences, & not only cõdemne our wicked luſtes, but alſo euen our thoughts wherby we were prouoked & induced to euill, and we muſt vnderſtãd that euen that is a damnable ſin already before God. Thus ye ſee what we be taught in this text where it is ſayd that inquirie muſt be made whether the man hated his neighbour before or no.

And here is expreſſe mention made of the time that went before. In deede in the Hebrewe it is, yeſterday or before yeſterday: but it is but their common phraſe of ſpeach, whereby they doe betoken all time that is paſt. And hereby our Lord meant to declare, that men muſt not looke onely at the preſent deede, but that they muſt proceede further, and ſee whether any miſchief lay lurking afore. For if a man alledge circumſtances to cleere himſelfe, and bee not found faultie out of hand; that is not yet enough: an eye muſt be had what went before: the thing may be found out in a moneth which can not be found in a day: and the thing will bee found in a yeere, which is not to be found in a moneth. Now if this ought to be done in earthly Iuſtice: let euery of vs practiſe it lykewiſe in our owne behalfe. When wee enter into the conſideration of our owne faultes, let vs not looke onely vppon the thinges that are preſently falne out; but let vs goe yet further and ſay; How is this befalne me? It is becauſe I haue nouriſhed this vice long time in me, whereas if I had cut it off at the firſt, God would not haue left me ſo much to my ſelfe. But what? I haue ſoothed my ſelfe in mine euill dooinges, and ſuffered this curſed ſeede to take roote in my heart, without regarding to repreſſe it, ſo as it may ſeeme that I haue bin minded to tempt God wilfully. And therefore it is good reaſon that I ſhould fall ſo groſly, ſith I my ſelfe am the cauſe thereof. Such examination ſhould we make of all our faultes, and not onely condemne our ſelues for the preſent deede done, but alſo proceede further and ſay; Alas, if I had armed my ſelfe againſt Satan or if I had not of long time ſet open the way for him, or if I had not wrought the meanes for him to beguile me: God had preſerued me. But mine owne negligence is to blame for it, thereof it commeth that I haue yeelded my ſelfe to this wicked luſt, againſt the which I ſhould haue ſtriued at the firſt. And ſo yee ſee yet againe what we haue to marke when wee be to examine our ſelues well; and what doctrine wee haue to gather of this ſaying, yͤ inqurie muſt be made whether there haue bin any former hatred betwixt the parties that are ſpoken of in this place.

Now finally, whereas it is ſayd, That there is no iudgement of death vppon ſuch a man, it ſerueth to proue the thing better, which I haue ſpoken already: namely that if a man be not guiltie by his own purpoſe, intẽt, or wil; he ought not to be taken for an offender. God acquitteth him, and therefore he ought not to bee condemned by men or by any creature. This ought to ſerue vs for a further confirmation of the doctrine which I take in hand to expound. Men can alwayes wel grant yͤ faults are willing. Whẽ yͤ Heathen wrate of yͤ matter, they ſpake after this maner: the Lawe puniſheth not the euentes of thinges, but the intentes of them. And when the Philoſophers wrate thereof, they could wel skill to ſay, there is neither vice nor vertue which proceedeth not of the will. Yet for all this, we ceaſe not to bleare our owne eyes, neither doe we thinke our ſelues to haue offended, vnleſſe our handes bee bloudy, or that there appeare ſome euident token to the worldward, or (to be ſhort,) yͤ we be conuicted of the doing of ſome wicked deed. But yͤ is againſt my former ſaying, yͤ is to wit, that all ſinnes proceede of the wil. Therefore when wee intend to examine our ſelues throughly, let vs learn to begin at our wils And if we finde no euil deed in our ſelues, yͤ is to ſay neither malice, nor euil wil; thẽ is it no crime. And whereas I ſay that euill affection is willing, yet for all that I exclude not mens inquiries: for it is not for naught that God hath diſtinguiſhed ſinnes and miſdeedes into two ſortes; whereof the one ſorte are called crimes, and the other ſorte are called ignorances. Although then that men haue no intent or meaning to doe amiſſe, yet is it not to bee ſayd that therefore they bee righteous. But my meaning now is that there be no wicked affection or deſire in vs, ſo as wee bee not diſpoſed to it of any will, but that the whole matter ſtandeth vppon miſchaunce that inſueth. And I call it miſchaunce after the cuſtome of common ſpeach. For it behooueth vs to referre all thinges to Gods prouidence, and not to thinke that any thing can fal out through fortune. Neuertheleſſe it is a common manner of ſpeach among vs, to ſay that a thing happeneth by chaunce or fortune, when it commeth to paſſe on our ſide. That then is the thing in effect, which we haue to note, in that our Lorde ſayth that there ſhall no iudgement of death paſſe vppon a man that ſhall haue giuen his neighbour a deadly blowe, without any malice borne to him before: but that hee ſhall bee quitte, if his ſtryking of him were without forepurpoſe or intent of will.

And furthermore wee ſee here in few words, how our Lorde meant to forbid vs to be moued to anger one againſt another, and hath voutſafed to beare with our imperfections ſo farre, that to eſchew greater inconueniences, hee will haue the guiltleſſe perſon to get him out of the way for a time. True it is (as I haue declared heretofore) that his intent is alſo to ſhewe how greatly wee ought to abhorre murther. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, yet it doth behooue vs to marke well Gods gratious goodneſſe, in mainteining peace and concorde by all meanes poſſible. Were wee ſuch as wee ought to bee, there ſhoulde bee as it were but one common league of fellowſhip among vs: but now are wee faine to be ſeparated aſunder; ſo as euery man getteth himſelfe alone, euery man hath his goods by himſelfe, euery man hath his poſſeſſions ſeuerall, and euery man hath as it were a proprietie alone: and that is becauſe of our infirmitie. And true it is that this Lawe might bee generall: but there are many other meanes whereby God ſheweth vs how he beareth with our infirmities. Is it not a pitious caſe that two brethren cannot liue quietly together, without contention and ſtrife; and that euen the father and the ſonne alſo ſhould be at the ſame point? Theſe are ſhamefull thinges and vtterly againſt nature, ſo as it may well bee ſayd that we be worſe than wilde beaſtes, ſeeing that euen they which are linked together in ſo neere and holy bond, cannot beare one with another that they might liue together in friendſhip. But what? The vices of men are ſo great, that to eſchewe greater miſchiefes, ſometime the parties that ought to be neereſt together, are faine to be ſet furtheſt aſunder. And the ſame maner of dealing doth God vſe in this place. Hee will haue a man to forſake his owne houſe and poſſeſſions, and to goe into a ſtraunge place. And wherfore? To the end that the partie which was mooued to wrath for loue of his neighbour, ſhould haue no occaſion to doe worſe, nor bee prouoked by ſeeing him before his eyes. Now then ſith wee ſee this, let vs briefly marke the goodnes which God vſeth towardes vs, which is more than the loue of a father, in that hee beareth with vs in our vices, and findeth fit meanes to keepe vs from flinging out at randon, and moreouer giueth vs warning by his owne example to preuent or cut off all occaſions of euill. Therefore let vs beware: for the diuell is alwayes watching & will ſoone take vs in a trip, if we admit neuer ſo ſmall an occaſion of dooing euill. So then let vs bridle our ſelues ſhort, and be well aduiſed,ſaying thus to our ſelues : O, if I commit ſuch a thing I may bee tempted with ſuch an euill, and therefore I had need to labour to keepe my ſelfe from it. For why ? The diuell ,is ouer wylie for me , and if I caſt my ſelfe once into his nettes , what will become of mee ? For God ſheweth vs howe we ought to liue, and howe to cut off all occaſions of euill, and that if there bee any thing that may leade vs to any euil,we muſt ſhunne it aforehande . Seeing then that God hath ſung vs ſuch a leſſon , let vs take heede not onely that wee abſteine from all euill deedes, whereby wee may corrupt and defile our whole life and vtterly caſt our ſelues into all diſorder; but alſo that wee eſchewe all thinges that may leade vs to euill by any indirect wayes.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good God , with acknowledgement of our faultes,praying him to make vs feele them more and more , that euerie of vs may ſo bethinke vs of our ſinnes,as wee become our owne Iudges and learne to condemne our ſelues, that wee may obtaine forgiueneſſe of the heauenly Iudge , ſo as hee may pitie vs and bury all our tranſgreſſiōs by which we be guiltie before him : and that wee may examine our ſinnes narrowly dayly more and more , to the ende that being mortified vnto them , wee may dayly draw neere to his righteouſneſſe , whereunto hee calleth vs by his worde . That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace , not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth &c.

On Friday the vj. of December. 1555

The Cxij. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the nineteenth Chapter.

8 And when the Lorde thy God ſhall haue inlarged thy borders , as hee hath ſworne to thy fathers, and hath giuen thee all the lande which he promiſed to giue to thy fathers:

9 (Condicionally that thou haue an eye to all his commaundementes, to doe them , which I commaunde thee this day , and that thou loue the Lorde thy God, and walke continually in his wayes:) then thou ſhalt adde three other townes to thoſe three,

10 To the intent that innocent bloude be not ſhedde in the midſt of the Lande which the Lorde thy God giueth thee to inherite, and that bloude bee not vppon thee.

11 But if a man haue hated his neighbour, and haue lyen in waite for him, and riſen vp againſt him,and ſmitten him that he die , and thereupon be fled into one of thoſe Cities:

12 Then the Elders of that Citie ſhall ſende and take him thence , and deliuer him into the hand of the next kinſman,and he ſhall die.

13 Thine eye ſhall not ſpare him:but thou ſhalt take away the guiltleſſe bloude from Iſrael,that it may go well with thee.

WE ſawe yeſterday howe it was Gods will to haue the inconueniences preuented , which are wont to be ſeene when men ſuffer occaſions of euill vncut off. And that is ſomwhat better expreſſed in this ſaying which Moſes addeth : Beware(ſaith he) that guiltleſſe bloud bee not ſhed in thy lande. Then it is not ynough to puniſh murthers after they be committed, but we muſt alſo haue the wiſedome to preuent them aforehande and to take ſuch order as they may not bee committed . And foraſmuch as Satan needes but a ſmall gap to thruſt vs out at , let vs be watchfull in this caſe of preuenting occaſions of euill as hath bin ſaid afore. Moreouer let vs alſo marke this ſaying, that the bloud ſhalbe vppon thoſe that ſuffer things to ſlip ſo. For though a man can proteſt that hee conſented not to the doing of an euill deede,yet notwithſtanding if he ſuffered it ſo as it came to paſſe through his negligence: he ſhalbe taken as acceſſary. The olde prouerbe is true,ẏ he which ſuffereth a thing to be done and may let it,is the doer of it. And therefore if a Iudge that hath the ſword in his hand do ſuffer euil deeds to be done and puniſh them not: it is al one as if he committed them himſelf. It is not ynough for him to ſay I would it were otherwiſe: but he muſt ſhew it by his doings. To bee ſhort, when men beare with ſuch as trouble the order of the common weale; it is al one as if they bolſtered them in it. Again, by ſuch examples thinges are ſet at a generall libertie , ſo as cuſtome is taken for lawe. And therefore looke what miſchiefe or inconuenience inſueth afterwarde , the blame of it is to bee imputed to thoſe that remedyed it not when time was . That is the cauſe why it is ſaide that the bloude ſhall bee vppon a whole Nation , when men haue not beene held ſhort that they might not commit murthers.

For that maner of ſpeech is verie rife in the Hebrue toung. And in the ſame reſpect alſo did the Iewes ſay, his bloude be vpon vs and vppon our Matt.27.25. children: that is to ſay, let the blame lyght vpon vs. We muſt not bring here fantaſtical imaginations as the Rabbines (that is to ſay the Iewiſh doctors) doo, who alledging alwaies their owne dreames, do ſay that the ſoules of the murthered doo aske vengeance continually at Gods hande, vntill they haue had Iuſtice done vnto them. All ſuch ſayinges are but dotages. For although their bloud cry not atall, yet doth God heare them, as he himſelfe declareth; and there needeth neither ſollicitor nor attourney to require iuſtice at his hande; hee can tell well ynough howe to doe his office, without any importunate calling vppon him. The very Gen.4.10. cauſe why it is ſaide that bloude crieth, is for that God hath an eye to the euill that is committed, and it is all one with him as if the caſe were followed with neuer ſo great ſuite. Worldly Iudges make no greate force of a crime when it is committed, vnleſſe they bee called vppon verie earneſtly, and that the matter bee ſtoutly purſewed. But God declareth himſelfe to be no ſuch, and that his owne ſeeing of the miſdeede is ynough, for nothing can ſcape him, and therefore it is all one with him as if the whole worlde tooke the quarell in hande, and euerie man followed the ſuite of it with tooth and nayle. God then taryeth not for our ſpeaking, but as one ẏ knoweth his office welinough, hee can skill to put to his hande when neede is: and therefore let vs tarie his leaſure. And ſurely it is a doctrine of great comfort. For although wee holde our peace when men miſuſe vs; yet doeth not God faile to haue his hande lifted vp to ſuccour vs. Therefore let vs bee patient in our afflictions and wrongs, and whatſoeuer come of it God will not foreſlowe: it is ynough that he ſeeth mē perſecute vs wrongfully: let vs content our ſelues with that: the leſſe that wee ſpeake of it, the readier will he be to releeue vs: yea though wee ſpeake not one worde of it: Not that it is not meete for vs to call vppon him, that hee may vouchſafe to pitie vs: but that wee ſhoulde not bee deſirous of reuenge, nor beare any malice to our enemies. If wee holde our peace in that reſpect, and tary Gods leaſure for the ſuccour which it ſhall pleaſe him to ſende vs: let vs not doubt but he will doe his office, and therfore let vs comfort our ſelues with that hope.

Moreouer foraſmuch as it is ſaide that the bloude ſhall be vppon vs; let vs bee afraide of it: and although wee bee not purſued nor complaind of by men, yet let vs aſſure our ſelues our market is neuer a whit amended by it, for God ſleepeth not, but marketh all the miſdeedes that are done, and they muſt all needes come to account. Therefore let vs bee pure before him: and let vs not onely abſtaine from euill deedes, but alſo beware that wee conſent not to any euill, for then ſhall wee bee helde as acceſſaries, and wrappe our ſelues in the ſame condemnation with the deede dooers, as it is witneſſed vnto vs heere. For God ſpeaketh not onely to the murtherers themſelues, but alſo to all the people. When this Lawe is broken and murthers are freely committed for want of good execution of Iuſtice, God ſaieth not that hee will require it at the hande of two or three, but at the handes of all in generall. Nowe then ſeeing the caſe ſtandeth ſo, what ſhall become of thoſe that are in authoritie and reigne in the ſeate of Iuſtice, when they themſelues are acceſſaries? Shall not they bee the firſt that ſhall anſwere for it? To bee ſhort, wee haue to gather vppon this text, that when an outrage or wrong is done to any man, not onely the principall ſhall bee puniſhed, but alſo the whole Nation in common ſhall haue the curſe lye vppon them, and muſt come to reckening for it before God. To our ſeeming it is ynough when wee can ſay, that wee woulde faine that men ſhould liue in peace, and yet in the meane while wee ſee men grieued and vexed before our eyes, and wee vouchſafe not to open our mouthes to ſuccour the innocent, but though wee haue both opportunitie and abilitie, yet we let al ſlippe, & we beare our ſelues in hande that God ought not to require it at our handes: but heere wee ſee the contrarie. Let vs marke well then, that to the vttermoſt of our power, wee muſt ſet our ſelues in defence of the innocents ſo as they may not bee vexed, fleeced or troubled, nor might bee ſuffered to ouercome right, as they ſay. Let euery of vs in his degree looke to the remedying hereof. Let ſuch as haue the ſworde of iuſtice ſhewe themſelues ſtout in this caſe and not ſuffer diſorder to haue full ſcope. And as for thoſe that are not of abilitie, let them yet at leaſtwiſe doe the beſt they can to comfort ſuch as haue no bodye to vpholde them. And when wee ſee theſe luſtie gallantes ſteppe vp and take more vppon them than is lawfull; let vs become their enemies, let vs hinder their miſdealings, and let vs withſtand them. That is the thing which we be bounde vnto by Gods worde; otherwiſe wee ſhall bee helde as acceſſaries to their miſdoings. If wee haue not preuented them, it is a conſenting to them, and God muſt demaund an account of it at our hands.

Heere it is to be noted further, that whereas God ſaieth that the people of Iſrael ſhall adde three other Cities of refuge, after that their boundes are inlarged: thereby wee bee done to vnderſtande, that the more power and abilitie that GOD giueth vs, the more are wee bounde to imploy it, to comfort innocentes, and to ſuccour them at their neede. And this ought to be put in vre generally by all men of authoritie and gouernours. The more power then that a Magiſtrate hath, the more ought hee to thinke himſelfe bounde to maintaine the good and guiltleſſe vnder his protection, and to bee a help to them that they be not trobled. Oftimes hee that woulde releeue good men, is not able: yea and peraduenture he himſelf alſo ſhalbe oppreſſed. In ſuch caſes we muſt haue recourſe vnto God, & bow down our ſholders, tarying till he haue pitie vppon vs, and in the meane while we muſt arme our ſelues with patience. But when a man is armed with Gods power; then it ſhall not be ynough for him to miſlike of thinges, and to bee ſomewhat ſorie for them; but hee muſt alſo imploy the authoritie that God giueth him, and the ſame rule ought to be obſerued of euery of vs particularly. To be ſhort, foraſmuch as God giueth power to Kings, Princes, and all other Magiſtrates; they ought to imploy all that euer they haue, to the defence of thoſe whome God hath committed to their charge, and to deale in ſuch ſort as their ſubiects be not wrongfully moleſted. Lo heere a rule that concerneth ſuch as haue the ſworde of iuſtice in their hand. Neuertheleſſe, it behoueth euery of vs to follow the ſame order. And although we be not armed with the ſworde of Iuſtice; yet notwithſtanding if God giue vs any abilitie or opportunitie, let vs looke to it that we help the good and ſuccour them in their neede. Therefore if a rich man ſee a poore man ſuffer wrong; let him helpe him and releeue him. If a man of diſcretion ſee a poore man deſtitute of counſell, ſo as he knoweth not what to doe: let him giue him his aduiſe as the caſe ſerueth. If a man haue credit whereby he may deliuer them that are in diſtreſſe: let him likewiſe imploy it for his part. Thus yee ſee howe wee ought to put this ſaying in vre, When God ſhall haue inlarged thy bounds, then ſhalt thou adde three Cities moe. Yee ſee heere howe our Lorde meaſureth his ordinance for the releef of good men, and of ſuch as were in daunger without deſeruing it or without any gilt. Therefore his will is to haue the thing doubled which he had ordeined for their reliefe. And why ſo? It is to doe vs to vnderſtande, that the mo benefites we haue receiued at Gods hande, the more are wee bound and indetted both to God and to our neighbours.

But nowe let vs come to that which Moſes interlaceth heere, inſomuch as thou ſhalt obſerue all theſe thinges which I commaunde thee, to loue the Lorde thy God, to keepe all his commaundements, and to walke in his feare. Heere hee maketh (as yee would ſay) a kinde of coniuratiõ, as if he ſhould adiure the people after this manner; Looke wel to this commaundement that yee deſpiſe it not, if yee loue the Lorde your God and ſeeke to obey him. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, In deede a man woulde thinke at the firſt ſight that this were nothing: but be you ſure that your God wil haue you to obſerue ſuch humanitie diligently. And therein hee trieth whether yee bee louing and obedient vnto him or no. To bee ſhort, Moſes meant to ſhewe heere, that this commaundement is of greate importance before God, to the intent that men ſhoulde not deſpiſe it. And heerewithall wee haue to marke, that wee cannot omitte any of the thinges that God commaundeth, without doing wrong to the Lawmaker: for it is an imbaſing of his authoritie. And for that cauſe is it ſaide that hee Matt.5.19. which deſpiſeth any of the leaſt thinges that are conteined in the Lawe, and imbreweth men with the like contempt, ſhal be called the leaſt in the kingdome of heauen; that is to ſay, ſhall be vtterly ſhaken off. Our Lorde then wil haue vs to reuerence his Lawe, and to obſerue it without reſpect of this or that, ſo as wee muſt not alledge, This is a ſmall matter, this a veniall ſinne, there is no greate conſcience to bee made of it. When GOD hath opened his holy mouth, and vouchſafed to ordeyne one thing or other; becommeth it vs to make ſmall account of it? If a Lorde Great maſter ſpeake a thing, men ſay not; is the matter greate or ſmall? but thus they ſay, the king ſpake it. And if that that may ſuffice in mortall creatures; ſhall wee replie to the contrarie, and make it an occaſion of euill doing and of rebelling againſt the liuing God, when he declareth his will vnto vs? Shall wee ſay it is a thing of no great importance, and that it is not ſo grieuous and heynous an offence? Indeede there are ſome commaundementes which our Lorde vrgeth more than otherſome, but yet muſt wee in all caſes and all reſpectes obſerue that which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſaieth: Thoſe things ought to bee done, and the other not to bee left vndone: Matt.23.23 ſo that foraſmuch as God hath giuen vs his Lawe, it behoooueth vs to keepe it, and not to diuide it; as who ſhoulde ſay, I will keepe this point, and let that point alone. Nay, if wee beleeue God, wee muſt looke that wee ſubmit our ſelues to him, yea euen to the vttermoſt title. But nowe let vs conſider howe it is ſaide here, inaſmuch as thou obſerueſt theſe thinges. Here Moſes driueth men to the obſeruing of the Lawe, when any particular thing is to bee done which God hath ordeined. And it is as much as if hee ſhoulde ſay, Haue an eye to the Lawmaker which ruleth you. Therefore when wee haue any thing to doe; we muſt alwayes haue this conſideration with vs, to thinke that God declareth his will therein: and that muſt ſuffice vs. Why ſo? For there is but one rule of weldoing; and to call the thinges in queſtion which are conteined in his Lawe, is al one as if we refuſed to bee ruled by the mouth and worde of God. Therefore the Lawe muſt haue his full courſe, and we muſt not go about to ſeparate the thinges which God hath ſo knit and vnited together.

But heerewithall Moſes bringeth vs backe againe to the thing that hee had treated of afore; that is to wit, which is the true keeping of the Lawe, and to what ende it tendeth. The true keeping of the Lawe is to giue eare vnto God in all that hee ſaieth. Keepe all the commaundementes (ſaieth hee), as if hee Deut.6.24.25. ſhoulde ſay, wee muſt not ſerue God after our owne liking, when thinges come to paſſe according to our heartes deſire: neither muſt wee take leaue to diſpence with our ſelues, when wee meete with any thing that is harde. It is not for vs to parte ſtakes with GOD after that manner: but wee muſt call to minde howe Sainct Iames ſaieth, that he which breaketh any one point is guiltie of the whole law. Iames.2.10. The reaſon is the ſame which I haue alledged afore, namely that when wee incounter Gods ordinaunce, wee deface his maieſtie as much much as in vs lieth.

True it is that wee can neuer fulfil Gods law, I ſay there was neuer yet ſo perfect a man in the worlde, but hee came farre ſhort of the perfection that God ſheweth vs. But yet muſt wee tende towardes it: though wee bee farre off from the marke, and but halfe way onwarde of our iourney; yet muſt wee goe forwarde ſtill, and not thinke to content God by doing ſome little peece of it for the loue of him, and in the reſt take leaue to behaue our ſelues as wee liſt. Let vs not thinke that God admitteth ſuch compoſitions: but that wee muſt in all pointes conforme our whole life to his will. And although wee attaine not to the full performance;yet our deſire muſt bee to doe ſo as I haue declared afore.

And nowe let vs come to that which hee addeth, namely to what end the keeping of Gods Lawe tendeth,that is to wit that we ſhould loue him. Whereby wee bee done to vnderſtande, that our Lordes intent is not to drawe vs to a ſlauiſh fearefulneſſe, but to haue vs to take pleaſure and delight in honouring him, and in doing his commaundementes: for it is certaine that without this loue, all our ſeruice ſhalbee refuſed as vnprofitable. In deede this matter hath beene expounded alreadie heeretofore: neuertheleſſe it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde bee put in rememberance of it, as oft as the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh thereof: for heere is no ſuperfluitie. And it is a doctrine that wee cannot be perſwaded of at the firſt,that it behoueth vs to ſerue God freely and with a willing loue. Truely wee muſt not loue God as our fellowe or mate: but wee muſt ſtande in awe of him, not as inforced by neceſſitie, ſo as we ſhoulde grinde our teeth in grudging againſt him; but as yeelding our heartes to him, by ſetting all our delight in his Lawe, as Dauid Pſal. 19.11. proteſteth himſelfe to haue done, by which example of his hee ſheweth vs alſo our dewtie. Yee ſee then howe GOD requireth that wee ſhoulde ſerue him of free will, yea and that wee ſhoulde alſo loue him. And indeede whence proceedeth true obedience, but of the knowledge of the will of our GOD, and that wee take him for our father, to the ende that wee on our ſide might behaue our ſelues like childrē towardes him? Vntill wee be come to that point, it is vnpoſſible for vs to goe about to ſerue our GOD with a good will: wee ſhall haue nothing but ſtubborneneſſe in vs, ſo as (if it were poſſible) wee coulde finde in our hearts neuer to come at him. But when wee haue once taſted of his goodneſſe; then are wee allured to loue him out of hand.

Seeing then that men haue felt God a father towardes them; it becommeth them to anſwere him in like ſort againe, and to bee as children towardes him. And ſo wee ſee heere againe, howe the Lawe may bee duely kept by vs: that is to witte, by louing our GOD. For thereuppon it will come to paſſe that wee ſhall walke in all his wayes, for God cannot bee diuided from his worde. If we loue him,it is certaine that wee will indeuour to pleaſe and obey him. And this is ſeene euen among mortall men: but yet there is a peculiar cauſe thereof in God. For (as I ſaide afore) God is neuer ſeparated from his righteouſneſſe, which hee declareth vnto vs in his Lawe. Then if wee loue him, we muſt needes like well of his Lawe, and take pleaſure in obſeruing the ſame. And therefore if a man ſay, I loue GOD, I feare him, I honour him, and in the meane while deſpiſe his worde, and make no reckening of it: it is but hypocriſie matched with ſhameleſneſſe. For as I haue ſaide already, it is vnpoſſible that God ſhoulde transforme himſelfe, to become as an ydoll by ſurceaſing from his righteouſneſſe which in verie deede is his owne proper being. So then it is to be concluded, that we cannot otherwiſe loue our God, than by giuing our ſelues ouer vnto him, by indeuoring to ſerue and pleaſe him.

But nowe let vs come to that which is ſaide concerning ſuch as woulde needes abuſe the priuiledge by withdrawing themſelues to the Sanctuarie when they had committed a murther. If it happen that a man which hated his neighbour and killed him, doe flee to the place of priuiledge: let the Elders of that place, that is to ſay the Rulers or Gouernours, (for it is a name of office): let the Gouernours and Iudges and Magiſtrates, take him and fetch him thence, that is to ſay,let thē fetch him from the priuiledged place by ſtrong hand, and put him into the handes of him that ought to reuenge the bloudſhed, or of him ẏ demaundeth Iuſtice, that he may be put to death, and let not thine eye ſpare him,that is to ſay,haue no pitie nor compaſſion on him. Bycauſe we be moued when we ſee a man lament, and our eyes relent at it: that is to ſay, if wee ſee a man in extreame heauineſſe of minde, by and by wee bee mooued to pitie his caſe: our Lorde ſaieth that hee will not haue him to bee pitifull, nor in any wiſe to relent, which ought to execute Iuſtice. Goe to worke ſtoutly (ſaieth hee), and let the offender bee puniſhed, notwithſtanding his miſclaiming of the priuiledge which GOD had graunted for ſuch as are guiltleſſe and not for ſuch as are faultie. This was declared partly yeſterday: but it is well worthie to bee laide foorth more at large. To bee ſhorte, let vs haue an eye to the expounding of Moſeſes wordes, and it will ſuffice vs: for thereuppon wee eaſily gather a leſſon greatly to our behoofe. The wordes are, If a man that hath ſlaine his neighbour of prepenſed malice and lying in waite for him, doe get him into one of thoſe fraunchiſed Cities. Wherein wee ſee that the wicked doe alwayes ſeeke to abuſe the thinges that are ordeyned for the ſuccour of good men, and are boldeſt in taking the benefite of them. The Magiſtrats therefore muſt haue an eye thereunto,and beware that the wicked abuſe not the things that are graunted for the releefe of Gods children: for that is too great a skorning of Lawes. And it is not without cauſe that our Lorde ſpeaketh of it heere: for it ſheweth that the like kinde of corrupt dealing hath beene in all ages: and we muſt not maruell at it, ſeeing that the world is not amended ſince, but rather appaired. Let vs looke well about vs therefore, that if a man which hath committed any miſdeede doe go about to hide himſelfe or to ſcape away by ſome vndirect meanes, it may not auaile him. That is the thing which wee haue to marke in the firſt place.

And whereas it is ſaid that the Iudges ſhall pull him away: it ſerueth to ſhewe that it is not ynough for men to make good Lawes & ſtatutes, but there muſt alſo be corage to execute them; there muſt bee a ſtoute and conſtant minde in thoſe that beare authoritie. For although that Lawes be proclaimed by the ſound of the trumpet, and written of recorde with neuer ſo great ſolemnitie: yet are they but deade and all is nothing worth, except that they which ſit in the ſeate of Iuſtice, haue the conſtancie that our Lorde inioyneth heere, and be ſtout in maintaining the things that are inacted, that men may not laugh them to skorne as we ſee that the wicked ſort do, which make but a mocke at them. If a Lawe haue once beene proclaimed, they beare themſelues in hande that it will be buried within three or foure dayes after. Yee ſee then howe it is a good and profitable warning for all ſuch as haue the ſworde of iuſtice in hande, to haue this ſtoutneſſe of minde and conſtancie. And for as much as it is not to be founde in men, (for it is a ſpeciall vertue attributed to the ſpirite of God): let ſuch as are in office beſeech God to ſtrengthen them, ſo as they may vſe force of hande when neede requireth, and not be afraide when they ſee ſuch troubles as might abaſh them, but ſtoutly withſtande them, yea and alſo outſtande them. That is one thing further which wee haue to marke vpon this place.

Now this thing is to be applyed likewiſe to yͤ inſtructing of euery of vs. I ſay let priuate perſons alſo looke well to the repreſſing of euill doings, and that with ſuch ſtoutneſſe that although they be threatned to put them in feare, yet it may not turne them away from doing their dutie. For what a thing were it if we ſhould bee afraide at euery turne? The lifting vp of a mans litle finger would ſcarre vs; and though we were neuer ſo willing to doe our duetie, yet if any mã ſtepped afore vs to turne vs from our purpoſe, euery word of his mouth (as I ſaide) would bee ynough to put vs out of hart. But the caſe concerneth the ſeruing of our God, wherein we muſt ouercome all the aſſaults of Satan, and all the impediments that the world can deuiſe. Nowe if it behooue vs to fight ſo valiantly againſt Satan & all his indeuors: ſhould we be afraide of men, or ſtand in dreade of them? Should they ſo ſcarre vs that we ſhould leaue our God behind? So thẽ, to the intent we may do our duetie, let vs learne to ſtrengthen our ſelues. And at one word, it ſtãdeth vs in hande to marke wel, that no man ſhal euer diſcharge his duetie towardes God, except he inforce himſelfe and haue ſuch a couragious conſtancie, as may ſurmount al temptations: and that is a thing greatly for our behoofe to marke. For a hundred times a day ſhall we haue occaſions to thruſt vs out of the way; & we reſiſt them full coldly. Againe, if we be to do any good, wee make excuſes and ſay, I would faine do my duetie, but I ſee ſuch an impediment, and by that meanes I am helde backe. Becauſe that they which are vnder the tyranny of the Pope in theſe dayes, cannot haue leaue to doe well and to ſerue God purely, without putting of their liues in hazard: they beare themſelues in hande that they bee diſcharged, when they can make this excuſe to ſay, I woulde faine doe otherwiſe, but I am not ſuffered to do it, it ſhall neuer come to account before God. And we neede not to go farre for proofe of the matter. Euen here where there is no perſecution to hinder the ſeruing of God, but rather incoragement to men to do wel, yet neuertheleſſe wee haue many diſtreſſes. For Satan is ſuttle ynough to finde euerie day newe inuentions to turne vs from the right way. What remaineth then, but to go to it with force, and to doe our indeuour to ſerue our God in ſuch wiſe, that if we meete with any lets to turne vs aſide, they may bee ouercome by the conſtancie and corage that I ſpake of, which it behoueth vs to require of the holy Ghoſt.

Furthermore let vs marke, that the offender muſt bee deliuered into the hande of him that is to reuenge the bloudſhedde, or elſe of him that demaundeth iuſtice: Whereby we may perceiue that God alloweth no [priuate] reuenges. For wee knowe what rule is giuen vs in the holy ſcripture: My brethren, (ſaith S. Paul) forbeare reuenge, yea, Rom.12.19. deſire it not: but put it altogether into the handes of the heauenly Iudge, to whome it belongeth. Nay (which more is) wee bee commaunded Matt.5.44. to render good for euill, to pray for them that curſe vs, to doe good to our enemies and to ſuch as perſecute vs. Sith it is ſo then, wee muſt aſſure our ſelues, and be fully reſolued of it, that our Lorde will haue our affections bridled, ſo as we deſire not any reuenge though cauſe thereof bee miniſtred; but rather ſtriue to ouercome the euill by doing good. Lo whereunto God calleth vs. And why then is it ſaide heere, that the offender ſhall bee put into the hande of him that requireth Iuſtice? Let vs note that the Lawes which are made for ciuill or outwarde gouernement, ſerue not to ouerrule mens affections: they be things that go aſunder. Trueth it is that they bee not repugnant, neither is there any contrarietie in them: but we muſt haue the diſcretion to conſider, that when God ſpake as king of Iſrael and made ſtatutes but for cõmon policie, he reſpected not the ſpirituall perfection that is contained in the law which is our rule to all holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. A Iudge therefore may well agree to one that requireth Iuſtice at his hande; and although he bee ledde with wicked affection, yet ought the Iudge to graunt him his right. And that is for our profite. For many men beare thẽſelues in hand, that ſo they vſe the ordinary way of Iuſtice, it is lawfull for them to doe what they can, & they ſhall not be condemned for it before God, if their quarell bee iuſt. But it may fall out many a time, that a quarell ſhalbe iuſt, and a man ſhall purſue it by good meanes; and yet in the meane while hee ſhall not faile to be worthie of blame before God. For there are three thinges required. The quarell muſt firſt bee iuſt and good: ſecondly the meane muſt be lawfull: and thirdly the affection muſt bee pure and well ruled. Nowe this thirde point wanteth in moſt men. As howe? Some man perchaunce is miſuſed, and hee hath iuſt cauſe to require redreſſe at the Iudges hand: hee intendeth neither to ſtrike nor to practiſe any thing againſt his aduetſarie by treacherie, but reſorteth to the Iuſtice: this is a lawfull remedie, it is ordeined of God, wee may ſafely vſe it with good conſcience. So are there two of the pointes to bee founde heere. But yet this man that hath the iuſt cauſe, and ſeeketh no remedie but by order of Iuſtice, faileth not ſomtimes to doe amiſſe. As howe? If he haue a deſire of reuenge in his heart, if hee conceiue ſuch rancour that hee ſeeketh to bee ſo reuenged as the partie may perceiue he hath done euill; and cannot bee contented and ſatisfied till hee ſee himſelfe to haue requited like for like to him yͤ hath offended him: ſuch a man is blameable before God. For he taketh couert vnder the name of Iuſtice, to be reuenged of his enemie. It is in vaine for him to alledge the goodneſſe of his quarell; for hee doeth but abuſe the remedie that God had ordeined. What is to be done then? When wee bee deſirous to demaunde Iuſtice, let euery of vs enter into our ſelues and examine what our affections are, and ſee that wee bee cleare from all ill will. When there is ſuch ſoundneſſe in vs; then is it Lawfull for vs to purſue offences done againſt vs, and to require that they may be puniſhed, namely ſo there be no rancour nor malice in our heartes. Nowe then if a man haue none other reſpect than the puniſhing of the miſdeede, and that he hate not the partie ne bee ledde by any wicked deſire: then ſhal he bee allowed of God, and not otherwiſe. But ſuch examples are verie rare. For as ſoone as men begin to go to Lawe, by and by enmitie bewrayeth it ſelfe, and ſuch a fire is kindled as cannot be quenched, ſo as this prouerbe is verie true, that ſuit in Lawe and friendſhippe are two thinges that can hardly ioyne to together. Nowe then let vs bethinke our ſelues, and not imagine that the hauing of good right, and our ſeeking of it by order of Law, can vtterly excuſe vs before God: for our hearts muſt be clenſed from all euill will, and from all wicked affection as I ſaide before. Moreouer let vs marke wel the concluſion which is added in this place: When Moſes ſaith thine eye ſhall not ſpare the man that hath ſo treacherouſly murthered his neighbour of ſet purpoſe; if a murther bee committed in heate of choler as they ſay, it ſhall not bee helde excuſed, but the lande ſhall abide ſtill defiled, vntill it be puniſhed. This was declared ſufficiently yeſterday. Now he treateth here of a more heynous murther: which is, that a man hauing conceiued hatred and rancour againſt his neighbour, lyeth in waite for him, and killeth him wilfully: for that is the terme that is proper to the murthers that are committed of ſet purpoſe and prepenſed malice. And that kinde of murther is vnpardonable: to graunt fauour in ſuch a caſe, is to ouerthrowe the whole order of nature, and al lawes written. So then, it is not without cauſe yͤ God ſaith here, thine eye ſhall not ſpare him. For ſometime wee make our market of other mens welfare, of their profite, or of their harmes, according to the common prouerbe, which ſaith that wee cut large thongs of other mens lether. When a man hath offended, the Iudge, who was not hurt by it, ne ſuffered any harme, will eaſily pardon it. What, ſaith hee? It was a ſmall matter. But if a man had done the like to him: he could finde in his heart that God ſhoulde thunder downe from heauen for the puniſhing thereof: and yet [in another mans caſe] hee doeth make a mowe at it. Tuſh (ſaies he) this may well be let ſlippe, this will vaniſh away of it ſelfe. See howe a man ſhall oftentimes be moued to pitie and compaſſion towards ſome one, and deale cruelly with ſome other: yea he wil become cruel to a whole realme to ſpare one man. This is dayly ſeene: O ſay they, this poore man is to bee pitied. Yea, but in the meane time, if a wicked deede do paſſe vnpuniſhed, all yͤ whole realme is defiled and corrupted by it, and it is a prouoking of Gods wrath againſt the whole Nation. Againe, others take example by it to giue themſelues to all leawdneſſe, when they bee in hope that crimes ſhall ſcape vnpuniſhed. Men conſider not that ſuch kinde of mercie is the cauſe of innumerable cruelties, and that it turneth to the common confuſion of all men. And therefore whereas our Lord ſaith that we muſt not ſpare him that hath done ſuch euill deedes; it is to ſhewe that wee muſt not be mercifull after our owne manner, to ouerthrowe a great number for the ſparing of one man; but that we muſt haue an eye to right and indifferencie.

And herewithall he ſheweth vs againe, howe deare our liues are to him, in that hee will not ſuffer a murther to be committed, without vengeance for it. Herein wee ſee (ſay I) his fatherly care ouer vs. Now if he ſet ſuch ſtore by this trãſitorie life, and ſhewe himſelfe to be the defender thereof· what will he do touching the life of our ſoules? Well hath hee ſhewed by one gage howe greatly he loueth it, and what ſtore he ſetteth by it, in that he hath not ſpared his onely ſonne for it. Then let vs bethinke vs heere, that ſeeing our Lorde telleth vs howe he hath a care of this tranſitorie life, and vouchſafeth to take it into his cuſtodie, whereby hee ſheweth his fauour and goodnes towards vs in that behalfe, in ſo much yͤ although our bodies bee but wormes and rottenneſſe, yet notwithſtanding he vouchſafeth to ſtoope ſo lowe as to haue regarde of it. We ought to conſider well ſuch goodneſſe, and to beare in minde that ſeeing God loueth vs ſo much, we ought not to bite one another, nor to be as cats and dogs, ſith our God wil haue vs to be knit ſo together in yͤ bonde of brotherly loue.

Therefore inaſmuch as we knowe Gods goodneſſe and fatherly loue towards vs; let vs learne to reſtraine our ſelues from doing any harme or wrong to our neighbours. And afterwarde let the ſame leade vs yet further: that is to witte, that for aſmuch as God holdeth vs vnder his protection, and holdeth out his hand to ſuccor vs: we in the mean ſeaſon muſt looke vp higher; namely to the heauenly life which he hath prepared for vs; not douting but that hee will preſerue our ſoules much more then our bodies. Let vs be fully reſolued of that, to the intent that wee may call vppon him with full boldneſſe. And although wee bee beſet with infinite dangers; yet let vs go forwarde ſtill, aſſuring our ſelues that our God wil ſtrengthen vs, ſeeing hee hath a care of vs. And moreouer, that although no man require reuenge for vs; yet he himſelfe will require it. Therefore let vs be contented to bee in ſuch wiſe vnder his protection, that if any man do vs any outrage, hee will haue his hande lifted vp to ſuccour vs at our neede. Let vs content our ſelues therewith, ſay I; and let vs walke on in ſimplicitie and vprightneſſe being patient in all our aduerſities, waiting Gods leaſure til he prouide conuenient remedie for vs. And as for thoſe that ſit in the ſeate of Iuſtice, and haue authoritie in their hand; let them alſo doe their office duly, ſo as they may yeeld a good & faithfull account of their doings at the laſt day.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better thã we haue done, that we may be drawen more and more to true repentance, and be ſo caſt downe in our ſelues, as wee may riſe vp againe in him & ſeeke him, and ſo reſt vppon his promiſes, that through his inuincible power we may fight valiantly both againſt Satan and all his champions, and alſo againſt the worlde: and that although wee bee ſometimes hindered to ſerue him, yet we may go through with our race, vntil wee be come to the marke whereunto hee calleth vs. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not only to vs, but alſo to all people & nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the vij. of December. 1555.

The Cxiiij. Sermon which is the third vpon the nineteenth Chapter.

14 Thou ſhalt not remoue thy neighbours boundes which bounded thy predeceſſours in thine heritage that thou ſhalt poſſeſſe in the lande which the Lord thy God giueth thee to poſſeſſe.

15 Let not one witneſſe alone riſe vp againſt a man for any matter of treſpaſſe or ſinne, or for any fault that he offendeth in: but at the worde of two or three witneſſes ſhall the matter be ſtabliſhed.

For the better vnderſtanding of that which is commaunded and forbidden heere concerning bounds or limits; we haue to marke firſt of all, that God in giuing the land of Chanaan to his people, had ordeined that partitions ſhould bee made, and his intent was the ſame ſhoulde cõtinue for euer. For although ſales were made; yet behooued it that in the yeare of Iubily, all thinges ſhould returne to their former ſtate againe. (Leui. 25. 28.) And Eleazer the highprieſt & Ioſua were to make thoſe partitions, which ſhoulde indure to the end. Nowe there was moreouer aſſigned to euery houſe an inheritance. For the trybes hauing parted the lande after that manner, agreed afterward as touching the heads of their houſes: but yet for al that, it behooued the former partition to continue ſtill, and that ỹ others neuertheleſſe ſhould inioy their goods; and that if any ſale were made, it ſhould bee vnder ſuch condition, as euery man might afterwarde returne to his owne inheritance, at the time that God had appointed. Now let vs come to that which is ſaid here. Gods wil is that the boundes (which we in this countrey call limites) ſhoulde remaine faſt, ſo as no man might alter any of them: and this ſerued as well for the vniuerſall inheritance of the whole body of the nation, as for the peculiar poſſeſſions of euery ſeueral perſon. And although there was a ſpecial reaſon for the people of Iſrael (as I haue touched heretofore:) yet did the heathen know well ynough, ỹ if the ſame thing were not obſerued otherwhere alſo, there woulde bee no vprightneſſe among men, but all would go to confuſion. And therefore they held it for a crime, when any man altered the landmarks, & it was counted a kind of falſhood euen among the Heathen. And to the intent it ſhould be taken for a holy matter, they made a God of it, according to their cõmon maner, which was to mingle ſome ſuperſtition with their matters to hold folke in awe, when they intended to bridle them. Now it was a diueliſh inuention to ſet vp an ydol for the maintenance of equitie betweeen men. Yet notwithſtãding, we ſee how nature hath alwayes taught vs this principle, that if bounds & limits were not kept and maintayned, there would be a horrible confuſion among men, and no lawes would be any longer kept. Therefore to benefite our ſelues by this text, we muſt marke two things. The one is not onely that the children of Iſrael had the poſſeſſion of the lande of Chanaan of Gods gifts; but alſo that the partitions therof were made by his apoyntment & authoritie. The other is, yͤ if the like order be not kept among other men; there wilbee neither equitie nor vpright dealing, but al wilbe full of theeuerie & quareling.

Now as touching Gods bounding of the land in that wiſe; wee may vnderſtande thereby what care he had of his people, how yͤ in ſo doing hee ſhewed himſelſe a father. Againe it was to yͤ end that the trybes ſhould alwayes be ſeuered, ſo as there might be no confuſion, becauſe the trybe of Leuie was to haue the prieſthood, & the redeemer was to come of yͤ tribe of Iuda. In theſe reſpects it was Gods will that this order ſhould be kept among his people: the mainteining of yͤ bounds was not for their poſſeſſions ſake, but for the reſpects afore mentioned. And wee in theſe days muſt aboue all things marke yͤ aforetouched thing, that is to wit, the ſaide equitie, which cannot be continued betweene man and man, vnleſſe their grounds be bounded out, ſo as euery man may knowe his own poſſeſſions. And this ſerueth as wel for kingdoms & lordſhips, as for priuate poſſeſſions. It is ſaid in the Pſalme yͤ our Lord pitched the bounds of kingdomes, at ſuch time as it pleaſed him that the natious ſhould be diuided aſunder. But we ſee howe the couetouſneſſe, ambition, and vnſatiable greedineſſe of princes hath put all out of order, & there is not ſo holy a thing that can ſtay them from incroching vppon the bounds of their neighbors & next borderers. For when they ſeeke ſo to inlarge their own dominions, it is a breaking of yͤ order of nature. Behold, God hath ſeparated one nation from another: and it is to the ende that all ſhould liue, and communicate one with another, and that there might bee no confuſed diſorder. Ye ſee then how all men ought to hold themſelues contented with their own boundes. But men play the looſe colts; their couetouſnes carryeth them away; al their ſeeking is to make themſelues ſtil greater. We ſee then yͤ the wars which are taken in hand vpon ambition, or couetouſnes, are as a ſpiting of God, by peruerting the order which he hath ſet in nature, & which he would haue kept as moſt holy. Now then ſith we ſee ſuch confuſion, we haue good cauſe to be ſorie; & to think it no wonder though ſo great a miſchiefe drawe a long taile after it. For when God is ſo deſpiſed, by the peruerting of his order; needes muſt horrible curſes inſue vppon it. Thus much concerning the firſt point.

Gen.49,10.

Deut,32,8.

And herewithal let vs marke, that when men go about to inriche themſelues by wicked and vnlawful meanes, it is a plucking vp of yͤ bounds and limits as men terme them: and that is a plaine falſhood. What is to be done then? Like as weights and meaſures ought to bee maintained iuſtly, & likewiſe coynes, becauſe that if faithfulnes be not obſerued in them, there can be no more dealing between mã & man: ſo are boũds and landmarks to be kept & mainteined alſo. If weights and meaſures be falſe, there wilbee no more merchandiſe: there can bee neither bying nor ſelling: men ſhall become as wilde beaſtes among themſelues. If coyne bee not lawfull, all muſt needs turne to theeuerie & ſtelth. The like reaſon is in bounds & limits. And therefore let vs marke that Gods commaunding of vs to maintaine them is not without cauſe: but that vnder that one particular kind, he comprehendeth all other things: ſhewing thereby, that wee muſt be careful to keepe the thinges which wee know to be neceſſarie for the maintenance of yͤ cõmon weale, & of louing kindnes between man & man. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vpon this part of the text.

Alſo it is expounded allegorically by ſuch as wold haue men to hold themſelues in al things & in al reſpects to antiquitie. They be of opinion yͤ God would haue men to direct themſelues by the lawes & ordinances of their aunceſters, & that nothing ſhould be changed which had ſeemed to be good aforetimes. Yea, but we know, yͤ though a thing be ancient, if it be not alſo good, antiquitie doth but increaſe the euilneſſe of it. And therefore what a thing were it, if we ſhould be bound to obſerue al things without exceptiõ which our auncetors haue done or ſaid? In deed changes are always to be feared, & we muſt eſchue them as much as we can: but yet are yͤ Papiſts ſo much the more fond & fooliſh to ſay, O, we may not alter the bounds which our aunceſters haue ſet: & therfore wee muſt not nowe receiue any new thing. Truely they miſunderſtand the caſe, in taking vs to bring any noueltie into the world. For what require we, but yͤ gods word which hath bin at all times, ſhould bee ſet vp againe? Whereas it hath bin troden vnder foote heretofore, & vtterly forgotten; wee ſeeke to ſet it in yͤ former ſtate & authoritie. That is all yͤ we deſire. But vnder pretence of the ancient boũds the meaning of yͤ Papiſts is to maintaine themſelues in poſſeſſion of all their errors, ydolatries, & abhominations, which are ſo groſſe as it would pitie a mans hart to think on them, & euẽ blind folks may feele them. Seeing thẽ that they be ſo wilful; it is a flat mockerie to allcage thoſe things in defence of their ſo long continued errors, which our Lorde hath ordeined heere for worldly policie, & to the end yͤ equitie & vpright dealing might be maintained among men.

Let vs marke then, yͤ as touching Gods word, & as touching the doctrine of ſaluation, we had neede of another maner of antiquitie than the antiquitie of men. In this caſe it is not for vs to ſtand vpon the decrees of our forefathers: but God muſt be he by whom our faith muſt bee directed. Ye ſee then how we muſt reſort to Gods euerlaſtingnes, if we wil make a ſure foundatiõ. Neuertheleſſe, as concerning mennes lawes, antiquitie is to be honoured, ſo as thinges bee not changed vpon fooliſh curioſitie and raſhnes: for that were to bee euer newe to begin. Therefore let men hold them to the anciẽt lawes as much as is poſſible. But when neceſſitie requireth alteration; there our Lorde wil haue vs to vſe the means yͤ he ſheweth & putteth into our hands: & thẽ to be wilfully addicted to antiquity, is vtter beſtlines. As touching equity, (as Moſes ſaith here) let men beware of remouing their bounds, & let euery man content himſelf wͨ his owne, & not incroche vpon his neighbor or next dweller by. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to mark vpon this place.

Now here is another lawe, That one witneſſe alone ſhal not be belieued in any criminal caſe, whether it be treſpaſſe, offence, or forfeit, but that the caſe ſhall ſtand in the mouth of two or three witneſſes. This law hath beene admitted by men, without knowing that euer Moſes ſpake it. For in very deede our Lord hath printed the things in mens heartes, which he did ſet forth in writing to his people. Surely it was a ſpeciall grace that he vouchſafed to take vppon him the office of a lawgiuer to the people of Iſrael. Yet notwithſtanding he woulde not haue men ſo brutiſh, as to bee without theſe groundes of equitie, euen as they are conteined in the law of Moſes. Seeing then that there is ſuch agreeablenes, let vs note that God neuer left mankinde without ſome ſeede of vprightneſſe remaining in them. True it is that men are ſore blynded by reaſon of Adams ſinne: but yet hath our Lorde left ſtil a certaine diſcretion ingrauen in their hearts, and that is but only to make them vnexcuſable, as ſaith S. Paul Rom.1.20. in the firſt chapter to the Romanes. Howbeit, there was this further regard alſo, that mankind might be maintained, & that there might bee ſome difference betweene men & beaſts. That is the thing which we haue to learn by the agreeablenes yͭ is found to be betweene the law of Moſes & al the ſtates of gouernment that haue bin among all the Heathen in the world.

Moreouer wee muſt vnderſtande howe it was Gods intent to ratifie the thing among his own people, which was alreadie knowen & obſerued of all men, to yͤ intent that it might be of yͤ more authoritie. For not only the conſciences of the people of Iſrael did prooue it vnto them yͭ there could be no order among men, without yͤ things yͭ are contained here: but alſo they were taught it by Gods own mouth, & therfore it behooued them to condeſcend to his ſaying with all feare & reuerence. Yee ſee then that the people of Iſrael had a great aduantage, & ſo haue wee at this day, inaſmuchas wee be ſucceeded in their roome. But nowe let vs come to that which is ſaid here.

Our Lord wil not haue any one witneſſe to be beleeued in any caſe: that is to ſay, hee will not haue his euidence credited, to giue ſentence vpon it. In deede witneſſes muſt needs be admitted: for vntill they haue beene heard, a man can not tell what they wil ſay. Sometimes it falleth out, yͭ foure or fiue witneſſes are brought forth in one caſe, & none of them all depoſeth according to yͤ parties intent. And men beare themſelues in hand, yͭ they haue witnes in their ſleeue: & yet when they haue brought men forth, all is found to be but ſmoke. A man thẽ may wel take one witneſſe alone: but yet muſt not iudgement be giuen vpon yͤ hearing of him onely. What a thing were it, if one perſon ſhould be ſo credited that vpon his bare word a man ſhould be put to death, & be puniſhed by law? Ye ſee it were too rigorous a thing. So then, it is not without cauſe yͭ God hath ordained yͭ there ſhould be two witneſſes before a caſe were iudged, yͭ is to ſay, that a man ſhould be conuicted by two or three witneſſes before ſentence were giuen vpon him as guiltie, or before he were cõdemned to any puniſhment. For his ſpeaking of three, is ment of any number aboue two. But by this expreſſe number, God ment to ſhew how it were no reaſon yͭ any one witnes alone ſhould be beleeued, & his ſaying ſo ſtoode vppon, yͭ a body ſhould be condemned for it: but that it is meete there ſhould be a larger & more ſufficient proof of the matter. The third witneſſe then is not of neceſſitie, but as it were of ouerplus. It is all one as if he ſhould ſay, If there bee three witneſſes, they bee mo than neede; but at the leaſt there muſt needes be two. In deed here is no mention yͭ the witneſſes ſhould be vnblameable: but our Lord hath ſhewed alreadie in other places, Deut.19.11 that inquiſition muſt be made of the hatred & rancour yͭ is among men; which ought to extend to witneſſes as wel as to other men: for although it bee not ſpoken of them, yet doth Moſes preſuppoſe yͭ the witneſſes muſt be worthie of credit, & ſuch as haue no ſufficient cauſe in them why they ſhould bee reiected. That in effect is the thing that is contained here.

Now we be taught firſt & formoſt by this text, yͭ if any of vs know of any euil, we muſt beare wͭ it patiently vntill our Lorde do bring it to light. For we ſee a number of men led with ſo vnaduiſed zeale, that they thinke themſelues to haue wrong, if iudgement bee not giuen vppon their bare word. O ſay they, I know a man yͭ hath cõmitted ſuch a wicked deede, I would therfore yͭ he ſhould be condemned for it. Yea, but he is not yet conuicted of it. I know it, ſaith he, yea, but we muſt not peruert yͤ order of nature. Let vs keep our ſelues therfore from running headlong to be both witneſſes & iudges in any caſe: & let vs tarry til our Lorde bring things to light. And very needeful it is yͭ we ſhould ſo do. For we ſee daily exãples of great numbers yͭ are ſtraight in a chafe if a man beleeue them not. Yea, but yet for all yͭ, was not our Lorde wiſer than wee? Then let vs learne to reſtraine our ſelues, & remember how S. Paul ſayes, yͭ there are ſome ſins 1.Tim.5.24. which make haſt to come to their condemnatiõ, as though God did thruſt the men forth by the ſhoulders, yͭ they might come of themſelues to diſcouer their own ſhame: & that there be ſome other ſinnes which God reſerueth to himſelf, & thoſe lye lurking a long time. And in deed if wee conſidered how God gouerneth the worlde; this thing were apparant ynough. But what? Wee iudge at alauenture, without conſideration of our Lords doing. We be not worthie to reape yͤ benefite of his workes, ſeeing we haue not yͤ modeſtie to refraine our ſelues, & to wait patiently & quietly til God haue performed his worke, at which time we ſhould perceiue yͭ hee was not a ſleepe when we were grieued that things came not forward. Ye ſee then yͭ ſinnes may bee committed, & ſome ſignes & tokens therof ſhal com to ſight, yea & it may hap that many men ſhall know of it. Behold there is a wicked man, & his faults are knowen: but yet it is not poſſible that he ſhould be conuicted of them by order of law. This is a ſin that lyeth ſtil in couert. Now of all Gen.4.7. this while (as it is ſaid in Geneſis) the party may go forth where he wil, & wander in his own affection; but his ſin is ſtil at his doore, & watcheth him ſurely for going out. God then letteth men take their pleaſure after that faſhiō for a time: & afterward bewrayeth thē when it pleaſeth him. And we ſee examples hereof as I ſaide afore. There are ſome other ſinnes which come to knowledge at the firſt puſh, as though God had ſifted them out. Therefore we muſt marke this rule, that we may brydle our ſelues, and not bee too haſtie to iudge, but tarrie patiently for the conuenient time. Alſo we haue to follow ẏ rule Mat.18.15.16 which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt giueth vs; namely that if any man haue done amiſſe towardes vs, wee warne him ſecretely; & that if hee receiue not our warning wee take two or three witneſſes to vs, that in their mouth the thing may be the better ſtabliſhed. Nowe it is certaine that in ẏ place our Lord ſpeaketh of ẏ faults that are vnknowen: for if there be an open offence giuen, ſo as the partie may be openly conuicted: it is not meant that I ſhould ſay to him ſecretely in his eare, Sir you haue done amiſſe. We ſee that our Lord Ieſus Chriſts meaning was nothing ſo. As for thoſe that alleage that text nowadays when they haue offended in the open face of ẏ world, and ſay, Why do ye not warne me of it ſecretely betweene you & me? [We anſwer them,] & why did not you hide your ſelf to doe your naughtines out of ſight? Thou cōmeſt hither to poyſon a whole ſtreete; & thou wouldeſt haue mee to draw thee aſide into ſome corner to tell thee of thy fault. Wee ſee a number of theſe nyce perſōs which know not one word of ẏ goſpel more than this text; & yet they do falſifie that too. Our Lord ſpeaketh there of ẏ ſins that are vnknowē, & wherof they haue no witneſſes. Therfore it behooueth vs to follow the order which we heare in that behalf. When a man hath done amiſſe & there is none to beare witneſſe of it, he muſt be admoniſhed ſecretly, & haue his faulte layd afore him: & if hee bee wilfull, then muſt I take two or three witneſſes with me, & proue it to his face: for otherwiſe it cannot be done. If we were ſo delt with, we ſhould not be ſo luſtie as we be, at leaſtwiſe as a number of vs are: but wee would vnderſtand ẏ it is our Lordes wil to keepe vs in vre, & that wheras our faults come not to light at the firſt committing of them, but God ſeemeth willing to conceale them: the ſame is not without cauſe. And although it be a temptation that is hard for vs to beare, yet doth God do it to our benefite, to the intent that we ſhould inure our ſelues to patience, & ſtriue againſt the euill, though wee cannot diſcouer it when wee would.

Moreouer let vs marke alſo, that wheras our Lorde puniſheth not a number of faultes in the ſight of men, ne ſuffereth thē to come to knowledge: therby it is his wil to ſhew vs, that we muſt walke before him, & that wee muſt content our ſelues with his record, although men knowe not what wee be. It is ſaide in the common prouerb, that a mans owne conſcience is as good as a thouſand witneſſes: and they that haue ſaide ſo, knew neither why nor wherefore. Yet notwithſtanding God wreſted that ſaying out of their mouthes, as if a man ſhould drawe an offender to execution. On our part we muſt vnderſtande, ẏ the reaſon is, that inaſmuch as God inlighteneth our conſciences & is the Iudge of them; we haue mo than a thouſand witneſſes. For our ſinnes muſt be layd open, not only before ẏ Angels of heauen, but alſo before al creatures. Seeing then that our conſciences are inlightened by God, & muſt aunſwere before him: let vs not thinke it ſtrange that it ſhoulde counteruaile a thouſand witneſſes. But now let vs come to that which I ſpake of. It may bee that I liue honeſtly & vprightly, ſo as my deſire is to ſerue God, and to diſcharge my ſelfe towardes my neighbours alſo, & al this ſhalbe ill taken, & no man wil cun me thanke for my labour. If it greeue mee that men perceiue not the ſoundneſſe that is in me, & therupon do ſeeke the more to bee knowen; I receiue my reward in this worlde, as ſayeth our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Neuertheleſſe let vs marke, Matt.6.5. that God to draw vs to him, will oftentimes not ſuffer vs to be knowen of men, but will haue vs to be taken for other than we be. And that is (as I ſaid afore) to the end we ſhould hold our ſelues contented with his only record, & that ẏ ſame ſhould wey ſo much with vs, as wee might defye the whole worlde, ſo God allowe of vs. Marke that for one poynt. Againe, when men grudge againſt vs, wee muſt haue the courage and conſtancie to appeale continually vnto God, and to take him for our ſufficient warrant. Thus ye ſee on the one ſide what we haue to beare in mind.

But in the meane whyle wee ſee howe the wicked doe mocke both God and the worlde, & harden themſelues in their leaudneſſe, becauſe they bee not called foorth to Iuſtice for it, nor are puniſhed for it. For ſometimes they be born with, and ſomtimes alſo our Lord holdeth them at that ſtay to encreaſe their condemnation. Yet notwithſtanding let not vs bee tempted to reſemble them, neither let vs be grieued at their eſcaping ſo from the handes of men, and that they be not condemned out of hand by order of iuſtice. For what ſhall they gaine by it? So litle is their market mended by it, that it ſhall ſerue to increaſe their confuſion before God, as hath beene ſaide alreadie. If our Lorde bring a mans ſinne to knowledge, it will ſurely grieue him at the firſt, and when hee ſhalbe driuen to his ſhiftes, it will make him to looke about him and to think thus with himſelfe: What though I am falne and haue committed this fault? Is it reaſon that men ſhoulde come and rebuke mee thus roughly at the firſt daſh? I ſee ſuch a one haunt theſe things more than I, and I ſee ſuch a one offende more groſſely than I, and yet they ſcape vnpuniſhed. I in the meane whyle haue chanced to make a ſcape, rather of ouerſight than of any euill purpoſe; and muſt men bee ſo rough and fierce vppon mee? Such complaintes and murmurings ſhal a man heare; or if the partie that is greeued make not complaint after that manner before men , yet ſayeth he not to repine in his heart. But we regard not the foreſaid things as we ought to do. And therefore our Lord perceiuing vs to bee in danger of falling aſleepe,if our miſdoings ſhould be ſuffered and let ſlip at the firſt : putteth vs into the handes of men to bee corrected by Iuſtice. And his ſo dooing is for our benefite. For wee muſt alwayes come backe to this ſaying, that God chaſtiſeth thoſe whome he loueth, ſhewing thereby that hee hath his eye vpon them as vpon his children,& that therefore hee holdeth them the neerer to him.That is the thing wherunto it would behoue vs to haue an eye.Neuertheleſſe if our Lord giue the wicked the brydle, ſo as they heape ſin vpon ſin before it come to ỹ knowledge of men, & no countenance is made towards them of puniſhing them.it is an increaſing of their condemnation,by rancling in their owne poyſon, & the diuel wholly driueth them into a reprobate ſenſe, vntill they bee come to Gen.15.16. their ful meaſure.Let vs ſee what the inhabiters of the land of Chanaan fared ỹ better by Gods bearing with them by the ſpace of foure hundred yeres. They were alreadie malicious and froward, there was no faithfulneſſe nor loyaltie among them,they were extremely cruel: moreouer, whoredome, extortion,& ſuch other like things raigned among them:& for all that, God maketh as though he ſaw it not. But what came of it? It was tolde Abraham that their iniquities were not yet come to the full. That ſaying is ſet down to vs for a general rule. And therfore whē our Lord forbeareth to condemne the wicked at the firſt puſh, let vs aſſure our ſelues that their iniquitie is not yet ful rype. And how ſo? Is the ſinne of Gods children come to ful rypeneſſe at the firſt day as ſoone as they haue done amiſſe? No: but our Lords intent is to chaſtice his children in ſuch wiſe as amendment may inſue of it, that his correcting of thē may ſerue for a ſalue to heale them: wheras his ſuffering of the wicked folks ſinnes to come to full rypeneſſe, is for that he puniſheth them not but deadly.Thus ye ſee what wee haue to beare in minde, where mention is made of two or three witneſſes.

Furthermore , hereby we bee warned not to make delay till wee bee conuicted by witneſſes before men. Let the remorſe of our owne conſcience be a ſufficient rebuke vnto vs: for it is as much as if God cyted vs before him, & made vs to be indyted,& impanelled a queſt vppon vs, & condemned vs. Doth our own conſcience ſpeak to vs? It is as much as if God had made great Regiſters of our ſinnes , & wee ſawe witneſſes brought in againſt vs,not one or two,but a hundred. For(as I haue ſayd alreadie)our own conſcience is of more force than a hundred witneſſes. Ye ſee how euery man ought to looke neerly to himſelfe, ſo as wee wrye not our mouthes when wee haue done amiſſe, vnder colour that no man hath perceiued vs, & that there bee no witneſſes that can ſhame vs for it before men. Alſo let vs marke, ỹ inaſmuch as our Lord hath ſent vs his Prophets and Apoſtles, they be ſuch ſufficient witneſſes as ſhalbe heard before all ỹ priuate perſons that can bee brought foorth at this day againſt vs. S. Paul ſpeaking to the Corinthians 2.Cor.13.1. ſayeth,that ſeeing hee had written to them alreadie, & told them of their faultes,and doth likewiſe againe the ſecond time: if they amend not , it was all one as if they were conuicted by two or three witneſſes. Yea & he vſeth this ſelfeſame text,ye know (ſayth he)that God hath ordeyned that two or three witneſſes ſhold be credited. Now,I come to you againe;& looke how many times I ſpeake,ſo many recordes will it be againſt you before the heauenly Iudge. I ſummon you not here before men: neither will God forget the things that I doe towardes you: for his ſtirring of mee vp to giue you warning,is to hold you the more conuicted.

Now let vs apply theſe thinges to our ſelues; & let vs vnderſtand (as I ſayd afore)that ſeeing we haue Moſes & the Prophets, wee haue witneſſes ynow . True it is, that they ſpeake not as now before men, they let vs alone and trouble vs not:but yet for all that let not vs fal aſleepe, for our flattering of our ſelues will ſtande vs in no ſteede, but to plunge vs the deeper in Gods curſe. But foraſmuch as our Lorde ſetteth vs theſe witneſſes before our faces : let euery of vs bethink himſelfe; & ſeeing wee haue here our Lord Ieſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles,let vs be the more moued to make our own inditements and to preuent Gods iudgements. For if wee condemne our ſelues, it wilbee a meane to obtaine 1.Cor.11.31. fauour at his hand: and our faults ſhalbee forgiuen vs; if we craue pardon wͭ vnfained miſliking of them,deſiring to depart quite & cleane from them.And not only ỹ Prophets & Apoſtles ſhal be our witneſſes before God;but alſo all ỹ faithfull that euer haue beene in the worlde ſhall reproue our vnbeliefe & diſobedience , if wee become not the better by the doctrine that hath been preached vnto vs. And for that cauſe doth the Apoſtle in the twelfth to the Hebrues ſay, ỹ we muſt haue a good eye to the great and thick Hebr.12.1. clowd of witneſſes . Hee vſeth this ſimilitude there,which at the firſt may ſeeme fond; neuertheleſſe it is not without cauſe that hee ſaieth there is a great & thick clowd of witneſſes, after he hath made mention of the Martyrs that had ſuffered. For we ſee that the faithful were conſtant to death,& held out to the vttermoſt when men went about to turne them away from the lawe of God,ſo as they could not bee made to ſwarue or ſtep aſide for any torments that were put vnto them.All they(ſaith he) are witneſſes: As if he ſhould ſay , there needeth none other proces againſt vs before god,for our negligence in theſe dayes : in ſo much that if wee faint for feare,& forſake God & his worde; our proces is ſufficiently concluded,& information is already giuen againſt vs ſaith he.And why ſo? For it is not a two or three witneſſes onely , but a great cloud of witneſſes that ſtand vp againſt vs,which are able euen to ſtop our eyes. Seeing then that the caſe ſtandeth ſo with vs : let vs note that it behoueth vs to ſet our eyes more aduiſedly vpō God, & to better our ſelues in ſuch wiſe by the thinges wherewith hee enlighteneth vs in his worde, & by the doctrine which he will haue to bee confirmed vnto vs by ſuch witneſſes as hee raiſeth vp, & daily bringeth foorth, as wee tary not til he ſhame vs & confound vs before men: but let euery of vs condemne himſelfe. Thus ye ſee what we haue to marke in making compariſons betwixt the iudgementes of men and the iudgements of God. Namely that although mē do let vs alone, we muſt not think we haue ſped the better, for our inditement is throughly framed afore the heauenly Iudge, though our faults were hidden & buried before men, ſo as neuer any mention or incling were made of them.

Now to make a concluſion of this text, wheras he ſaith that all caſes ſhalbe ſtabliſhed in the mouthes of two or three witneſſes: it was our Lords will to ſpeake here generally, doing vs to vnderſtand that if that were not, there woulde bee no more order among men. For if men will not be contented with two witneſſes, offences muſt needes be foſtered, & there wilbe euery day greater diſorder than other, whereby Gods wrath ſhalbee prouoked againſt the whole countrey, as hath bin ſaid before. Therefore is it requiſite that all matters ſhoulde bee ſtayed & concluded at the mouth of two or three witneſſes. That is yͤ drift of Moſes in ſpeaking ſo. Howbeit, men wil allege thus: It is a dangerous matter; for falſe witneſſes may be ſuborned, & if they be belieued, a mā may ſoone be oppreſſed, & he might be wronged in a rightful caſe. It is true yͤ ſuch allegation may be made, & examples therof are to be ſeene. But yet doth it not follow yͤ there ſhould not be ſome certeine rule for men to direct themſelues by, & to hold themſelues vnto, whatſoeuer inconueniences may be alleaged. For we ſee that when mē be minded to do euil, they ſeeke the darke by all the meanes they can, they ſounde no trumpet, they call no witneſſes to their doings. If it bee a thing that is for their aduantage & profite, they can skill welynough to call witneſſes: but when they do euil, they hyde themſelues: & though they be ſpyed, yet they go about to bleare mens eyes. And what woulde come of it then, ſeeing there are ſo many ſhiftes vſed to conceale euill doings, if two witneſſes might not bee admitted in a matter? Neuer could any thing be condemned, but all iuſtice muſt needs go to wreck, & we ſhould liue together like brute beaſts. Not without cauſe therfore doth our Lord tel vs heere, yͤ two or three witneſſes muſt be credited, yea euē in all caſes: though it concerned a mans life an hundred times, yet ought it to ſtande for good. But wee ſee how the diuel hath practiſed continually to ouerthrow this order. And why? For he knoweth that hee coulde not deuiſe a better way to win vs, than by couering our faultes, becauſe that by that meanes Gods wrath is kindled daily more & more, & euery man taketh yͤ greater & more exceſſiue libertie to do what he liſteth: inſomuch that the nonpuniſhing of his leawdnes, maketh him to think it lawful, & ſo he goeth on from one wickednes to another. Yea, it becommeth a cōmon infection like yͤ plague: if it be not remedied in time, it will poyſon all. In like caſe is it with euil deedes. That is yͤ cauſe why the diuel hath alwayes practiſed that there might be no proofe of things, or elſe that there might be ſo many ſtartingholes, as mens offences might not come to knowledge, to be cōdemned. And therfore our Lord ſaith expreſſely, that the matter muſt be tryed at the mouth of two or three witneſſes. It is not Gods wil yͤ there ſhold be any exemption in that behalf. For they that be in high degree, ought to giue yͤ greater light: & if they offend, the fault is double, & deſerueth to be the grieuouſlyer puniſhed. Therfore they muſt hold themſelues to that, & there ought to be as great rigor at the leaſt vſed towards them, as towards thoſe yͤ may better be bornwithall. And ſo let vs marke, yͤ ſeeing our Lord hath told vs that two witneſſes ought to be beleeued in all caſes; it is an ouerthrowing of that good lawe, to alleage that inconueniences may inſew of it, as ſome always do, caſting this dout & that dout to bring al things to confuſion. O ſay they, ſuch a thing may come of it. A man may alleage that yͤ clouds wil fal out of the aire. And we haue ſeene examples therof. For without going any further, when one [was to be puniſhed which] went about here to ouerthrow Gods order, & yͤ things that our Lord Ieſus hath ordained by his word: O we will none of that, ſaid ſome: And why? For ſuch an inconuenience might inſue of it. And was that incōuenience ſeene? No. But a man can not tel what might come. And their meaning was, that Ieſus Chriſt ſhoulde not reigne by his word. After that maner did they greeue God. And vnder what pretence? For ſooth that ſome inconuenience might enſue of it. Lo here a diueliſh wiſedome. Nowe then if wee ſee neceſſitie pinch vs & hold vs ſhort; whatſoeuer impediment or quarel doe ſet it ſelfe againſt vs, let vs learne neuertheleſſe to follow Gods cōmandement without diſobedience in word or deede. And that is a thing which we haue to gather vpon this text, ouer & beſide the things that haue beene declared.

Nowe let vs caſt our ſelues downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to vouchſafe to hold vs ſo within our bounds by his word, as that the great number of our vices & imperfections hinder vs not from obeying his holy wil, & from abyding within the liſtes which hee hath ſet vs, but that we may be quickened vp by yͤ witneſſes which he giueth vs; And ſeeing hee draweth vs to him by ſo many means, we may not be ſo vnthankful as to drag backe when he calleth vs, & to ſeeke ſtarting holes to hyde our ſinnes, & to bury them before men, but rather giue him glorie by confeſſing them, & conceiue not any other hope of ſaluation than through his meere mercie: & that euery of vs may ſo looke to himſelfe, as we may be witneſſes and Iudges to our ſelues, yͤ he may receiue vs to mercie, when hee ſhall ſee that the euill diſlyketh vs, and that we haue not gone about to ſhrinke away from yeelding obedience vnto him. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Munday the xvj. of December. 1555.

The Cxv. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the nineteenth Chapter.

16 If a falſewitneſſe riſe vp againſt any man, to beare witneſſe againſt him for any tranſgreſſion:

17 Then the two men that are at variance ſhall ſtande before the Lorde in the preſence of the high Prieſtes and Iudges that ſhalbe in thoſe dayes.

18 And the Iudges ſhall make good inquirie, and if it be founde that the falſe witneſſe hath giuen falſewitneſſe againſt his brother:

19 Then ſhalt thou do vnto him, as he ment to haue done to his brother. And ſo thou ſhalt rid away euil from among you.

20 And others hearing thereof ſhall be afraide, and not doe any ſuch wicked deede among you from thencefoorth.

21 Thine eye ſhall not ſpare him: but life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hande for hande, and foote for foote.

WE haue ſeene heeretofore after what maner God wold haue all thinges brought to end: namely by prouing the truth by good record: and yet that no infinite number of witneſſes ſhould be required, but ȳ men ſhould hold themſelues contented with twain that could beare record of the deede. For as I ſayd, offences ſhould abide vnpuniſhed, if men ſhould not ſtand vpon the recorde of two witneſſes. Yea and we ſee how a number of men conceale the truth and foreſweare themſelues, inſomuch that when the proofe of a crime committed commeth to triall, a man ſhall haue much ado to finde one faithfull witneſſe among three or foure. Therefore if the nūber were not determinate, what a thing were it? Notwithſtanding foraſmuch as ȳ witneſſes doe more in a caſe than the Iudge himſelfe as the common prouerb ſaith: it behooueth them for their part to be held in awe, and that they haue no libertie giuen thē nor gap opened to them to oppreſſe giltleſſe perſons. For if ȳ might be ſuffered, it were better for men to be in the woods among theeues, than to be in a citie where law is to be executed: for falſe witneſſes woulde murther ſuch men with their tongues, as could defend thēſelues from the robbers. And therfore our Lord addeth, ȳ if an vnfaithfull witneſſe be falſly depoſed; and that the defendant feeling himſelfe greeued alledge that the record is falſe and wicked: he ſhalbe heard. Now a man may miſlike of the witneſſes before they giue their euidence, if there be iuſt cauſe, or at leaſtwiſe if there be ſome colour: but here it is for the defendant to ſhewe that the witneſſing was falſe.

And it is ſayde, that both of them ſhall come before the Highprieſt and the Iudges that ſhalbe in that time, and the Iudges ſhall inquire diligently of the matter. And if they find that the guiltleſſe perſon is greeued, the falſedealer muſt be puniſhed, yea euen without any ſparing: inſomuch that if he appeached his neighbour of a matter of life, his owne life ſhall aunſwere for it: or if he intended any hurt to him, he ſhall forgoe eye for eye, foote for foote, hande for hande: that is to ſay, hee ſhalbe ſerued of the ſame ſauce himſelfe. That is the very effect of our Lorde his meaning in this text. And let vs marke that here our Lord ſheweth vs that witnesbearing is a holy thing: and in deede, when witneſſes are brought foorth, they ought to thinke that it is God whome they come to ſerue in ȳ deede: True it is that men may well bring thē forth; but yet in the meane while, who is the founder of that order? Is not God the author thereof? Then muſt men haue an eye to him aboue all. Againe, he that bringeth foorth a witneſſe, can not ſay that he is to be examined in his name: But God is there to receiue the oth: & when a man is made to lift vp his hand when he ſhould giue euidence, he is called as it were before God. Therefore to be ſhort, let vs marke, that whenſoeuer we beare witneſſe in any matter of Lawe, we do as it were a holy deede; in reſpect whereof we ought to goe to it with the more reuerence and care. For periurie carrieth with it high treaſon againſt God: inſomuch as we blaſpheme againſt the name and maieſtie of God; And it is he, againſt whom the trecherie is committed, and not againſt a creature. And that is the cauſe why ſo greeuous puniſhment is heere expreſly appointed vnto it, inſomuch that God will not haue that witneſſe to be ſpared. True it is that hee hath an eye to the wrong and wicked dealing which hee offered to the guiltleſſe perſon. Neuertheleſſe his intent is alſo that there ſhoulde be a reuerence hadde to the order which he had ſet downe for the common benefite of all men. And moreouer foraſmuch as he himſelfe beareth chiefe ſtroake there, hee will haue men to honour his maieſtie, and not to dally with him after that faſhion. And in deede, we ſee how men take more libertie in forſwearing thẽſelues, thã in any other miſdoings. And why is that? Becauſe they beare themſelues in hande, that God will eaſily forgiue it. Yea forſooth, as who ſhoulde ſay hee made not more account of his owne glorie than of all that euer concerneth vs. Againe in all other faultes men haue ſome ſhame to holde them backe, they be afrayde leaſt it ſhould be prooued by them, or that it ſhoulde be perceiued. But the wicked ſort make but a mouth at it when they forſweare themſelues; Tuſh (ſay they) who ſhal aske vengeance of it? Who ſhall followe the ſuite of it? Yea, as who ſhould ſay there were no GOD in heauen. Nowe then let vs marke, that foraſmuch as men take leaue & diſpenſe with themſelues ſo eaſily in committing of periurie; and that it is not looked vnto of men, but it is let ſlip without puniſhing: that therefore God muſt bee faine to reſerue it wholly to his owne examination, and the crime muſt be ſo much the more accountable before his iudgement ſeate, where it ſhall be puniſhed dubble. Marke well therefore what we haue to beare in minde, that euery man may looke to himſelfe, and that we may be fully reſolued, that we be bounde to yeelde recorde to the trueth, as oft and whenſoeuer wee be called thereto: and that wee defraude both God and our neighbours of that which is due vnto them, when we can help them in any good caſe and doe not; which is all one as if we robbed them of that which belongeth vnto them. That is an Item to them that conceale and diſſemble the trueth when they be required to ſpeake it.

Furthermore let vs beare in minde that our comming to doe that, muſt be as though GOD called vs before his owne face, and did ſet downe his name there before vs ſaying, as ye haue any eſtimation of my name, ſee that ye beare faithfull recorde, without fauour or hatred: bee not led by any affection, but onely doe what yee can to report what ye knowe, without reſpect of any perſon. Were this well obſerued, wee ſhould ſee another manner of feare of God in all giuing of euidence than we doo. How great libertie ſoeuer the world take, & although moſt men paſſe their boundes without any awe of God: yet muſt not this leſſon be loſt: but we muſt learne to practiſe it, euen with horrour to beholde the great blockiſhnes which reigneth euery where, in that men do ſo mocke God, and ruſh againſt him with ſuch boldeneſſe and preſumption.

And nowe it is ſayde expreſly, that the partyes muſt come both into the preſence of the Lorde, before the Prieſtes and Iudges. Whereby Moſes doeth vs to vnderſtande, that God is preſent at the executing of Iuſtice, becauſe all is done by his authoritie and in his name. And this text is yet verie well worthie to be noted. For when men come before a Iudge, they thinke they haue hyed them well, if they may deceiue him: but there are very fewe that conſider the Iudge to be Gods lieutenaunt. In deede men can finde in their hearts to confeſſe that Iuſtice is a diuine thing, and that God beareth chiefe ſway therin, it coſteth them nothing to ſay ſo: but as for to be touched with it to the quicke, and to beare well in minde that when we appeare before a Iudge, God doth preſently beholde vs, ſo as we can not conceale any thing from him, but he writes vp all thinges in his regiſters, inſomuch that although wee be ſpared by men, yet we muſt come to account for it before God: wee neuer thinke of that. But yet doth this text warne vs, yͭ we muſt neuer goe to law, but wͭ intẽt to demeane ourſelues as in Gods preſence: aſſuring ourſelues yͭ although nothing in the worlde be hidden from him; yet hee will haue men to acknowledge a certain ſpeciall preſence of his maieſtie in the order of Iuſtice. True it is that euen when men be in their chambers or in their beddes, they ought to thinke ſtill that they be continually in the ſight of God: and although it be his propertie to ſearch all things & to examine euen the bottom of mens thoughts: Pſal.7.10. yet notwithſtanding, it is his will to haue a notable marke of his maieſtie and glorie to appeare Heb.4,12.13 in the order of gouernment which he hath ſet in the worlde, by appointing Iudges to bee as his liuetenauntes and officers, and he will haue men to knowe that he himſelfe is there, and that hee guideth and gouerneth the whole action. In the Popedome, becauſe men knowe not that God is preſent at the executing of Iuſtice, they haue Puppets and Paintinges, and Crucifixes, and I wote not what elſe. For thoſe beaſtes beare thẽ ſelues in hande, that images are laymens bookes as they terme them. But it ought to ſuffice vs that God telleth vs here with his owne mouth, yͭ he himſelfe ſitteth in the ſeate of Iuſtice where earthly men be ordeined in his name; and that whereas there be Prieſts and Iudges, he wil haue men to know that that is not done without him, but that he mainteineth that order becauſe hee hath once eſtabliſhed it among vs. When wee heare ſuch doctrine proceeding out of Gods own mouth, muſt it not needes be that we be too too dull, and yͭ the deuill hath made vs ſtarke beaſts, if wee be not touched with it? Nowe then let vs not looke to haue ſtockes and puppets ſet before our eyes to gaze vpon: but let vs haue Gods liuely image printed in our heartes, and let vs conſider that ſeeing it is his will to haue mankind gouerned by that meane: he doth alſo aſſiſt it, and is at hande vnto it, ſo as the thinges yͭ are doone there, are guided by him, & ought alſo to be referred vnto him: And that whẽ we come thither, it is to appeare as it were before his maieſtie, as I haue declared already.

And this ſerueth, not only for earthly Iuſtice, but alſo much more for the meetings yͭ are made to the ende yͭ God ſhould teach vs by his worde. For when we come hither to heare the doctrine of the Goſpel; God is much more apparãtly preſent with vs therein than in the order of Iuſtice. True it is (as I haue ſayd already) that when we come before a Iudge, we come before God: but here is the ſpirituall doctrine whereby we ſhould be lifted vp to heauen, & mens lawes are of no account here; becauſe there is none yͭ ſpeaketh but God. Therefore let vs marke, that when we come to the Church to be taught, or when any of vs openeth the byble at home in his owne houſe; Ieſus chriſt muſt needs be there as though we ſawe him before our eyes. Not that wee muſt haue any fleſhely conceite of him: but that we muſt approch vnto him by fayth, and conſider howe it is not in vaine that he hath tolde vs, Matt.18.20. that wheresoeuer two or three meete together in his name, there is he in the middes of them. Then let vs conſider that not onely we be heere before the Angelles of heauen, but alſo that the ſonne of God beholdeth vs. And as hee liketh wel of the confeſſion of the faith which we make vnto him; and of our obedient reſorting hyther to knowe the will of GOD his father, and to ſuffer ourſelues to bee gouerned by him and by his doctrine: ſo likewiſe when we come hyther fayn edly, ſo as wee make none account of his worde, or beare ourſelues in hande that wee be diſcharged for tarrying heere an houre or twaine: wee muſt come to a reckening for it; for we vnhallowe the thing which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt had made holy for our ſaluation. Wherefore is the doctrine preached vnto vs? Is it that God hath any profite by it? No, but for our benefite. Nowe if the ſame be diſappointed through our vnthankefulneſſe; is it not a trampling of the precious ſtones vnder our feete which were offered vnto vs? It is the foode of our ſoules, and wee will not eate of it, but will needes faſt ſtill: or rather wee bee filled with winde, there is no true ſuſtenaunce in vs. Of whome is it long but of our owne leaudeneſſe, that wee thruſt away the grace which God did put into our handes? And therefore, that wee may bee the better diſpoſed to receiue the Goſpell, let vs vnderſtande that wee muſt neuer repayre to the Church, but we muſt thinke that our comming thyther is to offer ourſelues into Gods preſence, ſo as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſte may beare ſuch ſway there, yea and bee ſo preſent, as it may appeare that the grace and power of his holy ſpirite accompanie him, that his worde may haue ſuch force as to enter into our heartes, to touch vs to the quicke, and to edifie vs. But if wee haue our eares beaten with the thinges that are preached vnto vs, and in the meane while our liues bee nothing aunſwerable to the ſame; but wee continue as colde as wee were before: that commeth to paſſe becauſe we conſider not that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is preſent to make his worde auaylable, which is vttered to vs by the meanes of men. That is the thing which we haue to gather vppon this text, where it is ſayd that the parties which are at variance muſt appeare in the preſence of the Lord.

And it is added, that they muſt alſo appeare before the Prieſtes and Iudges for the time beeing. It is an expoſition of theſe wordes of God. And to what ende ſerueth that? That folke ſhoulde not haue an eye to mennes perſons; but rather conſider what ſtate they repreſented there? Were the prieſtes made at their owne pleaſure? No. No more were the Iudges. GOD was the author of them both. Nowe then foraſmuch as he hath ſette them in that office, and gouerneth them by his power: hee will haue men to knowe that he himſelfe is there. And Moſes will in any wiſe haue the prieſtes to be there: not that the ciuill iuriſdiction is allotted vnto them, (as I haue declared heeretofore): but to ſtrike the greater reuerence into ſuch as hadde to deale or to doe in matters of ſo greate importaunce. For if a man be anoyed by falſewitneſſes, hee is as good as halfe dead already. And therefore he was to be ſuccoured by an extraordinary means. That is the cauſe why God ioyneth the Prieſtes and the Iudges together.

Yet notwithſtanding it is ſayde that the Iudges ſhall make good inquirie of the matter. Wherein he ſheweth that which wee haue ſeene heeretofore: namely that to comforte one man, wee muſt not greeue an other. For it is no ſmall thing to ouerthrowe an euidence: I haue tolde you heeretofore howe it is a holy thing. Nowe if any man abuſe it, he muſt be puniſhed for his labour. But yet on the other ſide, it muſt alſo be well knowen and verified that ſuch an abuſe is committed. Therefore is it ſayde expreſly, that diligent inquirie is to be made. For it is a ſore matter to alter or reuerſe a thing that hath paſſed by order of Lawe. And for the ſame cauſe it is ſayde, If hee be founde to haue giuen falſe euidence, and to haue practiſed to doe his neighbour wrong: let him be puniſhed with the ſelfeſame puniſhment, and let not thine eye ſpare him, but ridde away the euill from among you: to the ende that they which heare thereof may be afrayd, and no moe ſuch deedes be committed afterwarde. Heere Moſes noteth the circumſtances, which euen the heathen themſelues knewe. For we muſt alwayes come backe to that which is ſpoken in the eight Chapter of Salomons prouerbes, where it is ſayde, that Prou.8.15. it is through Gods wiſedome that kinges reigne and that Lawes and ſtatutes are made thereby. Therefore when as the heathen made Lawes, it came not firſt of all of their own brayn: for whereas they made fonde and blockiſh Lawes, therein God gaue them the brydle, and it was to the ende that men ſhoulde knowe that when men followe their owne wit, they ouerſhoote themſelues pitifully, yea euen in the thinges that concerne this preſent life. And what muſt they needes doe then, when they be to paſſe beyond the worlde? In that caſe men are vtterly blinde. God then ment to ſhewe by ſome thinges, that mens wits are too weake to iudge well of equitie and vprightneſſe; and yet notwithſtanding, that foraſmuch as he was minded to ſhewe his prouidence ouer all mankinde; he inſpired thoſe with equitie and vprightneſſe, whoſe duetie it was to make Lawes & ſtatutes. And it is the very ſame thing which I was about to tell vnto you out of Salomons prouerbes, that the wiſedome of God chalendgeth this to be her office. The heathen knewe that thing well ynough, affirming ỹ Lawes were Gods gifte, and not the inuention of man. And God wreſted out that confeſſion frõ them, to the intent that their vnthankfulnes ſhould be the leſſe excuſable, as we ſee here.

For whereas Moſes ſayeth, that the partie ſhall bee puniſhed which hath but euen practiſed againſt his neighbour: hee ſayeth not ſimply, againſt the trueth. And thereby he excludeth ouerſight, ſo that if there were any error he wold not haue the puniſhment to bee ſo greeuous. Againe whereas he ſetteth downe that the offender ſhould not be ſpared: his meaning is that if a man ſpare one that hath procured the death of the guiltleſſe, hee is dubble cruell to him that was in danger of his life.

Whereas he ſayeth that others hearing thereof ſhall commit no more any ſuch act: hee ſheweth the principall ende, which is alſo ſet downe by ciuill Lawes, namely that puniſhmentes ſhoulde be executed for examples ſake. The puniſhing of a theefe is not onely for his miſdeedes ſake or for the crimes ſake: but alſo to teach others by it, and to holde them in awe, ſo as they may be aſhamed of ſuch dealing and abhorre it. In like caſe is it with murthers when bloudſhed is reuendged. And why is that? Is it onely for the faultes ſake that is doone and paſt? No, but to prouide for afterwarde that murthering and all maner of ſhedding of mans bloud may be eſchued. Ye ſee then howe puniſhmentes doe ſerue for example. And that is a thing well worthie to be marked: for we may gather a dubble leſſon thereof. Firſt that ſuch as occupie the roome of Iuſtice, ought to thinke themſelues worthie of blame before God and the worlde, for all yͤ faults which they let ſlip vnpuniſhed. And why? For it is an opening of the gate and a giuing of libertie to all others to do the like. Beholde, one that is founde to be a theefe, a murtherer or a whoremonger, is winked at and let ſlip. And why? becauſe he is pityed. And by that meanes the offender ſcapeth ſcotfree. By reaſon whereof other become the bolder to doe the like. For why? It is an increaſing of the miſchiefe, when men ſee offences ſcape vnpuniſhed; and the bridle is let looſe which otherwiſe had bin reſtreined, if euill doinges had bin puniſhed without reſpect of perſõs. Behold, one aduoutry is cõmitted after an other, two or three murthers are cõmitted together, and three or foure robberies are done one in an others necke. And who is the cauſe of all this? Euen the Iudge himſelf; he is the principall theefe, he is the principall adulterer, he is yͤ principall murtherer. It is he that hath robbed God of his glory and men of the right which he would haue to be obſerued, it is he that hath as it were made open proclamation that offenders ſhould make their hand and ſcape ſcotfree for it. Now then let vs marke well, that whereas Moſes hath declared that wicked witneſſes muſt be puniſhed, that other men may beware by them, and be afraide when they heare of it, and doe no ſuche deede any more: hee ſheweth thereby, that if Iudges haue not the ſternneſſe to puniſh miſſedeedes without relenting, when they come to their knowledge; they be the cauſe of all the miſcheefes that are committed afterwarde. For they did as it were giue leaue to them, in that they puniſhed not the partie as they ought to haue done, whome they ſawe to haue offended. And therefore let them looke wel to their charge vnleſſe they will bee blamed as procurers of horrible confuſion aboue all other men, for want of executing of Iuſtice as they ſhoulde haue done. Let that ſerue for one point.

And herewithall we be taught further, that wee muſt learne to make our gaine of other mennes harmes. The puniſhmentes of other men for their offences muſt be a brydle to vs, or elſe wee bee verie blinde, for they bee as lookingglaſſes vnto vs. When we ſee a theefe puniſhed, it is as a warning giuen vnto vs by our Lorde, to put vs in minde that robberie is condemned before him. The ſame is to be ſayde of murthers, of adulteries, and of other like things. True it is that euen without thoſe examples wee ought to be wiſe ynough to reſtreine ourſelues: but yet if we be ſo harde hearted and negligent, as not to haue ſufficient regarde of the brydling of our ſelues without warning by ſuch viſible examples: at leaſtwiſe lette vs learne to fare the better by thoſe thinges, when they be added for our help. But when a theefe is whipped or hanged, or when a murtherer is beheaded, if the ſight therof wey no further with vs than to make vs refraine for feare of men or for feare of puniſhment by order of Lawe: it is a ſmall matter, and we be neuer the better by it. Nay, we muſt ſteppe one ſteppe further: which is, to conſider that GOD who reigneth ouer vs in heauen, will haue the puniſhmentes of offenders to be as liuely pictures to ſhewe vs that murtherers, & theeues, and al ſuch like, ſhal not ſcape his hande, but that although they be not puniſhed here beneath, yet they muſt come at length before the heauenly Iudge. Let vs then conſider that: and let vs take ſuch warning by it, as euery of vs may brydle ourſelues. For that is the ſeconde point whereto wee muſt come, if we intende to receiue good inſtruction by any of the puniſhmentes that are executed vpon mens crimes and miſdeedes. Yea and lette vs not tarrie till men ſet to their handes: but whenſoeuer GOD executeth his iudgementes, let vs awake to thinke vppon them more aduiſedly, as Saint Paule exhorteth vs. Beware (ſayeth he) that no man deceiue you: for by reaſon of ſuch thinges doeth Gods wrath come vpon the diſobedient. Eph.5.6. He ſayeth not that the diſobedient ſhall bee puniſhed by earthly Iuſtice, for manie times Iuſtice ſleepeth vpon earth, and is not executed with ſuch force and liuelineſſe as were requiſite. But Saint Paul ſayeth, that Gods wrath is wont to come vppon the diſobedient; and therefore take heede (ſayeth hee) that vaine wordes deceiue you not. And in that place hee ſpeaketh of Theft, Murder, Whooredome. O, will ſome ſay, It is lawful for a man to reuenge himſelfe: and if a man haue done mee a diſpleaſure, I may requite him with the like. Likewiſe concerning Lecherie, the deſpiſers of GOD and theſe leaude perſons which are not worthie to goe vppon the grounde, ſay it is but a naturall ſinne. But Saint Paul ſayeth, Looke well about you, and although euill deedes ſcape vnpuniſhed in this worlde, thinke not that GOD will therefore omitte his dewtie: all thinges muſt come to account before him. Neuertheleſſe, when yee ſee that he layeth his hande vpon an offender; lette it be as a ſommoning to euery of you, and let it doe you to wit, that his graunting of you the fauour to ſee otherfolkes puniſhed before your faces, is to the ende you benefite your ſelues by his correction. And ſo yee ſee what wee haue to marke in that Moſes ſayeth that the puniſhing of crimes muſt ſerue for common example and inſtruction, yea euen when they bee but heard of.

Nowe beſides our Lordes chaſtiſing of ſuch as haue offended; hee doeth alſo make vs to heare of his Iuſtice by his worde, in that the threates of his Lawe be dayly rehearſed vnto vs, and in that we be tolde of the examples which are ſette downe in the holy ſcripture, concerning ſuch as haue beene puniſhed at Gods hande: and are not we too too dulwitted if we take no heede by them? Albeit that GOD ſpake not at all, but onely wrought in the puniſhing of murtherers, theeues, blaſphemers, periurers, aduouterers, and whoremongers: yet ought wee not to be ſo blockiſhe as to take no heede by it. But nowe ſeeing that God by ſtretching out his arme after that faſhion againſt the tranſgreſſers of his Lawe and ordinaunce, doeth put vs in minde that his ſo doing is not for nought, but rather to call vs to amendment: muſt it not needes bee that we be too too harde hearted, if we continue ſtill in our former ſtate? Nay let vs followe that which Moſes telleth vs heere, and learne to open our eares when God ſpeaketh vnto vs, and to marke well not onely the examples of the puniſhmentes which we ſee preſently executed vpon the wicked: but alſo all the examples that haue beene ſince the beginning of the worlde, ſo as we may apply them to our owne vſe, & learne by them to liue in awe, that no ſuch act may bee committed among vs. For hee ſayeth not heere that the puniſhing of miſdeedes ſhall be to the ende that men ſhould onely condemne them in wordes: but to the ende that all men ſhould be afraide and doe no more ſo. And that is a thing very worthy to be well noted. For we beare our ſelues in hande that it is ynough for vs to haue condemned a crime, and to haue liked well of the Iuſtice that is executed for it. O (ſay wee) he deſerued it right well. We condemne an other man, and in the meane while wee ourſelues are oftentimes more faultie than he. But God will haue euery man to be his owne Iudge. Therfore when we ſee offences puniſhed, let vs be afraide, and let vs reſtraine ourſelues, that no ſuch thinges be done among vs any more. Ye ſee then that that was one thing more which wee had to remember vpon this text.

And let vs marke, that whereas here is mention made of feare, although Moſes treate but of outwarde gouernment, yet muſt we conceiue a better kinde of feare, that is to wit a reuerende awe of God. To ſay the trueth, the onely feare which we haue of puniſhment would not ſuffice. It were too ſlender a thing, and God ſhoulde be too ill ſerued at our hands, if there were none other ende: yet neuertheleſſe, becauſe of our infirmitie, the puniſhmentes that are executed ought to bee as prouocations vnto vs, to liue in the more awe. Good reaſon woulde that the loue of GOD ſhould goe before, and that the reuerence which wee beare vnto him, ſhoulde breed an earneſt deſire in vs to faſhion ourſelues all wholly to his righteouſneſſe; but foraſmuch as we be ſlouthfull and ſlowe: God vouchſafeth vs this helpe for our weakeneſſe, that wee may take warning to amende, by all the puniſhments which he executeth. Alas that I ſhoulde bee ſo madde as to goe make warre wilfully againſt GOD. I knowe by ſuch an example which hee hath giuen me, that hee abhorreth ſuch a crime: and ſhall I nowe runne headlong into it? Were it not an open fighting againſt him, if I ſhoulde deale ſo againſt all wit and reaſon? Yee ſee then howe we ought to be reſtreined by the chaſtiſementes which GOD executeth, and that the feare of him ought to beare ſuch ſway in vs, as to make vs indeuour to faſhion ourſelues according to his righteouſneſſe, and to ſubmit ourſelues to his good will.

But nowe let vs come to the puniſhment that Moſes addeth. His ſaying is that there ſhalbee Life for life, Eye for eye, Tooth for tooth, Foote for foote, and Hande for hande. As if he ſhould ſaye, that hee which hath gone about to do his neighbour harme, ſhall be ſerued of the ſame ſawce himſelfe. For when one man practiſeth an others death, if he ſhoulde be but put to his fine, and ſo diſcharged of it for a peece of money without aunſwering any further: what a thing were it? Is all the goods of any man able to counteruaile the life of an other? Peraduenture the partie whoſe life is ſought is but a poore man that hath nothing: but yet is hee ſuch a creature as is faſhioned after the image of God. There commeth a riche man to oppreſſe him, and in deede, the poore ſoule is as good as halfe dead aforehande, if hee bee oppreſſed by falſe witneſſe.

Nowe if it be ſayde, yea, but his aduerſarie is a rich man, hee may well make him good recompence: what recompence I pray you, can be made for a mans life? Therefore our Lorde minding to take away all ſuch ſhiftes, ſayeth, that if any man haue practiſed the death of his neighbour, he himſelfe ſhall dye for for it without any pitie or compaſſion. If hee haue gone about to hurt him in his eye, or in his arme, or in his foote, he himſelfe muſt abide the like puniſhment in himſelfe: that is to ſaye, if I haue gone about to doe any reproche, or diſhoneſtie to my neighbour; the ſhame thereof muſte light vppon my ſelfe. We ſee as nowe whereat GOD aimed. Like as when hee ſetteth downe the Lawe concerning women with child in the xxj. of Exodus, he ſayeth that if a man Exod. 21, 22 23. haue hurt them, and any miſchaunce followe thereof, the partie that hath doone the hurte ſhall be puniſhed for it: ſo alſo doeth hee adde heere, eye for eye, tooth for toothe, foote for foote, and hande for hande. As if hee ſhould ſaye, no recompence is to be admitted in that behalfe: the purſe muſt not bee pinched, but the life it ſelfe muſte aunſwere for it, at leaſtwiſe if the deede concerne life. And ſo wee ſee nowe in effecte, howe it hath euer beene Goddes will, to ſhewe that hee ſetteth great ſtore by mans life, as he will declare it, yet better hereafter: but yet we haue here a good recorde thereof in the meane while.

Moreouer he ſheweth that wee muſt haue no reſpect of perſons: but that although a man bee neuer ſo wel able to forbeare money to ſaue himſelfe withall; yet muſt not that bee admitted in matters of Iuſtice. Let ranſoming be let alone for warre matters: But in caſes of Lawe, faultes muſt be regarded as they bee in deede. If the fault bee ſuch as may be puniſhed by fyne or amercement, and that the Lawe will beare it; very well, it is good reaſon it ſhoulde be ſo. But if it be a crime that deſerueth death, and that the Lawe it ſelfe doe iudge a man to death for it: if the puniſhment of death bee turned into a fine, vnder colour that the partie offended ſhall become wealthy, or for that it ſeemeth better that it ſhould be ſo; yͤ law is by that meane peruerted, and the common order is altered by hauing reſpect of perſons: and ſo all goeth to confuſion. And therefore let vs marke well, that whereas our Lorde hath ſayd, life for life, eye for eye, and ſo foorth: hee hath ſhewed vs that in iudging, there muſt no regarde bee hadde of the perſons that are to be condemned. But if it be not a matter of life and death, but a ſingle miſdeed or treſpaſſe (as they terme it) that is to ſay, a light fault and ſuch a one as deſerueth not the puniſhment of death: it is to be puniſhed according to yͤ qualitie of the offence, and according to the Lawe prouided in that behalfe. But if it bee a deadly crime, the Iudge muſt ſhut his eyes as in reſpect of the perſon, and deeme ſimply of the crime and deede it ſelfe: accordingly alſo as it is ſayd here, that no pitie muſt be ſhewed in that behalfe. For the alleadging of mercie and pitie towarde offenders, is a thing that alwayes deceiueth many men. What, ſay they? Should we not bee pitifull? Would not God that wee ſhould reſemble him? Seeing it is ſayde, that if we be his children wee muſt be kinde hearted and inclined to pitie and compaſſion; is it not a barre to all rigour? Yes, but though it be ſayde that wee muſt pitie the partie, yet is it not ment that the fault ſhould be vnpuniſhed. If a malefactor be brought afore a Iudge ſitting vppon the bench, the Iudge may well be ſorrie to ſee a poore creature that is ſhaped after the image of God, to go to deſtruction. Yea, he muſt be moued therewith, and haue pitie and compaſſion of him. But yet for all that, he muſt alſo looke to his cōmiſſion, what charge he hath receiued, and he muſt doe Iuſtice. Hee ſitteth vpon the bench to puniſh offenders, it is not now for him to ſhewe pitie, or to alleadge any ſuch thing. Nowe then it is Gods will here to cutte off all by ſhiftes of pitie and compaſſion that can be alleadged; and to ſhewe that Iuſtice ought to haue his courſe, ſo as in examining of crimes and miſdeedes, the Iudge muſt be blinde as in reſpect of perſons, and haue both his eyes ſette faſt vppon the deede, and vpon the deſerte of the caſe. Yea and to the ende there ſhoulde be no gaineſaying; let vs marke that heere God hath vſed a worde wherein there is ſome ſhewe of vertue, ſaying: Thine eye ſhall not ſpare him, neither ſhalt thou haue any pitie on him. Howe ſo? It is ſayde that our eye ought not to ſpare him, nor our heart to pitie him. And what is to followe then, but ſuch extreeme rigour as is next couſen to crueltie? In deede ſo will men thinke. But yet is this rigour acceptable to GOD. For we muſt call to minde howe Salomon ſayth, that Prou.17.15 he which iuſtifieth the wicked is as faultie before GOD, as he that condemneth the innocent. Is it not a great and ougly abhomination, that a ſillie innocent ſhoulde be condemned to death? Yes: and yet if an offender be let goe, God miſliketh it as much as the ſheading of guiltleſſe bloud. So then, let vs not deceiue our ſelues any more, vnder the ſhadowe and colour of any of theſe faire pretences that are made at aladuenture. There are that abuſe the holy ſcriptures by wreſting them euerie way; and this pitie is alleadged continually though they wote not why nor wherefore. Nowe then let vs vnderſtande, that as GOD commaundeth vs to be mercifull, ſo he ſheweth vs after what maner and howe farreforth hee alloweth our mercie: that is to wit, ſo farreforth as the courſe of Iuſtice be not letted. Yea and let vs looke vppon ourſelues. Is it gentleneſſe to be cruell to one man for the ſparing of an other? Beholde, there are two men, both of them be my neighbours, we be all three created after the image of God, wee bee all of one nature, they bee my fleſhe and my bone as wel the one as the other: one of theſe playes the falſe witneſſe of purpoſe to haue his neighbour put to death, and it is not long of him that his neighbour is not dead already: Hereupon one comes vnto me and ſayes, O ſir, ye muſt haue pitie vppon him. Very well: I ſhall be pitifull to the one and cruell to the other. Yee ſee howe the poore man which was at deathes doore is preſerued by miracle, and ſhall I nowe goe ſell away his life ſo good cheape? Is it not an horrible matter that mercie ſhould be pretended after that ſort? Yes. But if wee were well aduiſed and had good ſtay of our affections: ſurely wee woulde neuer pitie any ſuch crime, for any mans vpbrayding of vs with crueltie. But it is yet farre worſe when a falſe witneſſe ſteppeth vp againſt his neighbour: for that is much more than the oppreſſing of ſome one man priuily, that is falne in his daunger. For if the ſillie ſoule beeing ſo falſely accuſed, had beene executed: by whoſe hande had he beene puniſhed? The Iudges had beene halfe acceſſarie, Gods wrath had beene prouoked againſt the whole countrey, and moreouer a gappe had beene opened for the like inconueniences euer after. A falſe witneſſe therefore ſinneth not againſt one or two, nor againſt two or three: but firſt againſt his aduerſarie, ſecondely againſt the Lawe, and thirdely againſt his whole Countrey, in that hee prouoketh Gods wrath againſt it. For his intent is to deface Iuſtice, and (as much as in him lyeth) to put all thinges to hauocke. Nowe then if the Iudge haue pitie vppon him; hee ſheweth himſelfe to beare neither loue nor feare vnto GOD; nor reuerence vnto Iuſtice. For hee ought to thinke thus with himſelfe: Of whome had it beene long that I had not beene guiltie of manſlaughter, if I had iudged an innocent to death? Indeede I had not done it wittingly: but yet had I not bin excuſable for al that. Then was I in danger to haue beene guiltie of murther, and in what caſe were I then, if I ſhoulde ſuffer ſuch a fault to ſcape vnpuniſhed? Now then if a Iudge bethinke him not of theſe thinges: it is a token that he hath no feare of God in him. Therefore it behooueth vs ſo much the more to marke well this ſaying of Moſes, that yͤ Iudges eye muſt not ſpare the partie that hath done a fault worthie of puniſhment. For it is but crueltie to vſe ſuch wrongfull mercie, as maketh vs to runne headlong to the breaking of al order ſet by God, and of all vprightneſſe among men.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowlement of our ſins, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, as we may be drawen to true repentaunce, and learne more and more to repaire vnto him, not tarying till hee hale vs thither by force, but ſeeing hee vouchſafeth to allure vs ſo gently by his worde, let vs come willingly vnto him, and prouoking our ſelues forward, become our owne iudges, yͭ in condemning ourſelues we may ſeeke to be acquit by his mercie: And that it may pleaſe him to guide vs in the meane time, as that being rid of our wicked affections, & cares that holde vs backe from comming to him, we may ſhewe by our deedes that we be his true children, and that we beare the marke of his holy ſpirit. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xvii. of December. 1555.

The Cxvj. Sermon which is the fifth vppon the nineteenth Chapter, and the firſt vpon the twentith Chapter.

19 Thou ſhalt doe vnto him as he meant to haue done to his brother: and ſo thou ſhalt rid away euill from among you.

20 And others hearing thereof ſhalbe afraid, and not doe any ſuch wicked deede among you from thenceforth.

21 Thine eye ſhal not ſpare him, but life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foote for foote.

The twentith Chapter.

VVHen thou goeſt forth to warre againſt thine enimies, and thou ſeeſt horſes and Chariots, and a greater multitude of people than thy ſelfe, be not afraid of them. For the Lorde thy God which hath brought thee vp out of the lande of Egypt, is with thee.

2 And when yee come neere to giue battell: then ſhal the Prieſt come forth and ſpeake to the people,

3 And ſay vnto them: Hearken ô Iſrael, now that ye be come hither this day to giue battell to your enimies, let not your heartes faint, be not afraid, neither be ye diſcouraged or abaſhed at the ſight of them.

4 For the Lorde your God goeth with you, to fight for you againſt your enimies, and to preſerue you.

WE ſaw yeſter day what puniſhment God ordeined for ſuch as practiſe miſchefe againſt their neighbours And that concerneth Iudges and ſuch as haue the ſword of Iuſtice in their hande. But as for vs, we for our parte ought to ſuffer the wronges patiently that are done vnto vs. Or elſe if we purſue them that they may be puniſhed, it muſt not be done of malicious ſpite, nor with deſire of reuendge: but to the intent that the partie which is to be puniſhed, may bee kept from offending any more afterwarde; and alſo that no outrages or violent dealinges may bee ſuffered, leaſt others ſhoulde growe bolde to doe ſo too; but that all men may bee made to ſtande in feare, by beholding the example of him that is puniſhed. And by this meanes wee ſee howe the doctrine of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, agreeth verie well with the doctrine of the Lawe. For hee telleth vs that wee muſt not reſiſt euill.

The Lawe commaundeth that hee which procureth the death of his Neighbour, ſhall bee put to death, and not bee ſpared. Nowe at the firſt ſight heere ſeemeth to be ſome contrarietie. But wee muſt conſider to whome our Lorde ſpeaketh, when hee ſayth that the offender muſt bee puniſhed: namely that hee ſpeaketh to thoſe whome he hath put in authoritie, When hee ſaith, reſiſt not euill with euill: hys meaning is that euerie of vs ſhoulde liue quietly, and put vp wronges patiently, rather than require like for like. And that is the cauſe why hee ſayth in the fifth of Matthewe, yee haue Matt.5.38. hearde howe it hath beene ſaide to the men of olde time, An eye for an eye, and a hande for a hande: but I ſay vnto you, if a man ſtrike you on the one cheeke, turne him the other alſo: and if a man take awaie thy Cloake bee willing to giue him thy Coate too: or if hee take awaye thy Coate giue him thy Cloake too. We ſee howe the Iewes abuſed the ſaide Lawe. For vnder pretence that GOD woulde haue no iniuries to ſcape vnpuniſhed, they bare themſelues in hande that euerie man might ſeeke to bee reuenged of his enemies. But wee muſt in aniewiſe put a difference betweene the lawes of policie, and the Lawes of GOD, which require a perfection, and ſerue to rule our heartes and affections by, ſo as it is not Lawfull to procure harme to anie man, though hee haue deſerued it. The ciuill Lawe and earthly policie giue men leaue to ſeeke amendes of the wronges doone vnto them; and the Iudge is bounde to ſatisfie their demaunde: but yet for all that, if the partie that is wronged haue a malicious hearte, and his accuſing of his enemies is to bee reuenged of him; hee is not excuſed before God. Although hee haue right miniſtred vnto him before men, and they ſay that his cauſe is good and lawefull; yet for all that doeth GOD condemne him. And why ſo? Becauſe (as I tolde you before) wee muſt bee patient. For what vertue is it, to bee friendlie to ſuch as loue vs, and to wiſhe no euill to ſuch Matt.5.46. as doe vs pleaſure and ſeruice? Doe not the heathen as much? But if men vexe vs and put vs to ſhame and trouble, and wee beare with it; indeuouring to ouercome their euill by doeing good: then doe wee ſhewe our ſelues to be Gods children, and followers of his example who cauſeth his day ſunne to ſhine both vppon good and badde. Therefore let vs firſt marke this foretouched difference betweene the Lawes of policie and the Lawe of GOD, which is ſpirituall, and ſerueth to rule all the affections of a mannes hearte. Nowe in policie, there is no more to bee looked for, but that no man attempt anie thing agaynſt his neighbour, that men doe one an other no harme, that men worke no diſpleaſure one to an other, neither in goods, nor in perſon, nor in name, and that whoſoeuer offendeth, bee puniſhed. But when GOD ſheweth vs howe wee ſhoulde liue, hee ſaith not onely refrayne your ſelues from euill, and let him that offendeth bee puniſhed: but hee telleth vs alſo, that it is not lawfull for vs to looke vppon a woman with Matt.5.28. fleſhely luſt of deſiring to committe vncleanneſſe with her: nor to hate our Neighbour any more than to murder him. Yee ſee then howe the Lawe of GOD mounteth higher than the earthlie policie. God will haue vs to walke before him in all pureneſſe. In ſo much that, beſides that it is not lawfull for vs to aſſaulte our Neighbour, or to hate him without cauſe: Nay not then, when wee haue iuſt cauſe and couerture for the ſame to the worldewarde. For wee muſt euen then not onely forgiue the wronges that are doone vs, and not requite like for like; but alſo pray for our enemies: and Matt.5.44. although they ſpeake euil of vs, and coulde find in their heartes that wee periſhed a hundred times; Yet muſt wee worke their welfare to the vttermoſt of our powers. Marke that for one point.

Indeede it is a verie harde thing to bridle our affections after ſuch a ſorte, as to deſire the welfare of our enemie when hee hath goone about to doe vs harme: but yet muſt wee ſtrayne our ſelues to doe it. For though wee feele a gainſtriuing in vs, yet will not that ſerue vs for an excuſe: neyther muſt wee doe as the Papiſtes doe, who perceyuing this to be cleane contrarie to mans nature, haue gone aboute to ſalue it with this gloſe, that it was a counſell, and not a plaine and expreſſe commaundement: and that is a manifeſt blaſpheming of God. For hee ſaith, that if wee will bee taken for his children, wee muſt faſhion our ſelues after his goodnes in pardoning thoſe that haue offended him. Therefore let vs not haue an eye to our owne ſtrengthes, nor to the inclynation of our owne nature: but if wee feele anie heartburning in our ſelues; or bee deſirous of reuenge through heate of impatiencie when a man hath vexed vs: Let vs reſort to our GOD, praying him to ouermaſter the exceſſiue paſſions that are in vs; and to giue vs the ſpirite of meekeneſſe when wee bee in ſuch heates, that wee may become patient, ſo as the harme or iniurie bee not too harde and cumberſome for vs to beare, but that wee may paſſe it ouer mieldelie.. After that manner ought we to deale. And therfore let vs learne to beware that wee beguile not our ſelues with vaine colours.

Seeing that our Lorde hath giuen vs a good Lawe; Let vs not turne it vpſide downe by pretending our owne wicked and corrupt affections for an excuſe: Yea and let vs marke, that mannes nature is ſo frowardlie diſpoſed, that if they looke not verie narrowlie to themſelues, they ſhal alwayes abuſe the name of GOD. The Lawe which I expounded Yeſterday, namely that the partie which ſhall haue practiſed the death of anie innocent perſon, is not to bee borne withall, is verie rightfull. But yet for all that, is it meete that wee ſhoulde haue leaue to auenge our ſelues? Shoulde the bridle be layde looſe in our neckes to requite euill for euill? No ſurely. And yet doe men make it their excuſe. Wee ſee then that naturally we ſhould be euer inclined to abuſe Gods name: and therefore wee haue ſo much the more neede to be watchfull, and to conſider at what ende God aymed in ſaying this or that, that is, that wee ſhoulde not be blinde therein. For it will not auaile vs at all, if wee make as though wee ſawe it not. And therefore let vs firſt and formoſt correct our vices, and lay aſide all our wicked affections: and then may we vſe the lawes that are good and holy. As for example: If a man deale by order of lawe, and in the meane while haue his heart full of rancour, ſo as he ſeeke to ouerthrowe his enemie by crooked meanes: It is a wicked manner of proceeding, and condemned of God. Yet notwithſtanding, it is almoſt an ordinarie cuſtome. For there are few that goe to lawe, which are not enemies one to an other, according to this cõmon ſaid ſawe, that ſuite in lawe and friendſhippe doe ſeldome match together. And yet for all that, if a man haue anie ſuch hartburning, he offendeth God. Yea, but hee vſeth the meane of Iuſtice; and is not that lawfull? Is not that manner of dealing permitted? Yes: but it woulde behooue vs firſt of all to haue our wicked affections ſubdued according to this ſaying, that all Gods creatures are good to ſuch as are of a pure and cleane hearte. Tit.1,15. Saint Paul ſpeaketh there of meates; but wee may applie the ſame ſaying to all other thinges, namely that whenſoeuer God appointeth any thing to our vſe, the ſame is good and behoouefull; yea verily, ſo wee on our ſide defile it not by our wicked affections. If wee haue any filth in vs, by and by all that euer wee touch becommeth filthie out of hande. Ye ſee that the order of Iuſtice is a holy thing, appointed of GOD to our vſe and benefite: and yet if I haue a ſpitefull hearte, and beare anie malice to mine aduerſarie; then do I defile ẏ thing which God had dedicated to a holy vſe, and which was pure and cleane of it ſelfe. And therefore let vs learne to reforme our wicked affections. When wee haue done ſo, then may wee ſay that the thing which GOD hath ordeyned, is good and profitable to vs: For wee turne it not contrarie to his meaning and will. That is the thing which wee haue to remember in effect concerning the Text that was treated of yeſterday.

Nowe let vs come to that which GOD addeth concerning matters of warre. When thou goeſt out agaynſt thine enemies (ſaith hee) bee not afraide nor diſmayed at them, though thou ſee them more ſtrong than thy ſelfe, though the number of their people bee farre greater than thine, and though they haue both chariotes and horſes: that is to ſay, Although they bee better furniſhed and ſtored of all things than thou art; yet let not thine hearte ſhrinke for all that. And hee addeth the reaſon: For thy God (ſayth hee) goeth with thee, and it is hee which brought thee out of the Lande of Egypte. Therefore put thou thy truſt in his goodneſſe and might. Nowe, wee muſt preſuppoſe, that in ſo ſaying GOD giueth not leaue & libertie to his people to make warre when they liſt at their owne pleaſure: but onely vppon iuſt cauſe. As for example, when the Iewes entered into the Lande of Chanaan, they made no warre but by the expreſſe commaundement of God: in ſo much that they were forbidden to ſaue anie of the people of that countrie aliue, and it behooued them to put all to the ſwoorde ſauing the young infantes and women which were reſerued to make ſlaues of: but as for the men, they were all appointed to the ſworde; for God had giuen that iudgement vppon them, and not without cauſe. For it was a great matter that he had borne with them ſo long a time; and yet that they continued ſtubborne and vnreformable ſtill. Beſides this, when the people of Iſraell had once made a full conqueſt of the lande of Chanaan which was giuen them to inherite: then might they ſitte at reſt; and they might not make any inuaſion vppon their neighbours vnleſſe they were troubled by them, as in deede it fell out afterwarde: yet is it true that the people of Iſraell neuer poſſeſſed the whole Lande that was giuen them. And that was through their owne faulte and vnthankfulneſſe, ſo as they were euer in trouble and vexation vnto the time of Dauid. Did Dauid ſubdue all his enemies? Did he ſet the people in full poſſeſſion of the heritage that had beene promiſed them? 2.Sam.7.10. If hee had done ſo, then was he to make warre by and by vpon his neighbours: howebeit not by picking any quarels to them, nor to ſeeke to inlarge his kingdome by conqueſt. But he was prouoked vnto it; and therefore hee was to maintaine the ſtate of his owne people. And ſo let vs marke that this text treateth of ſuch warres as GOD alloweth, as when a Prince is vniuſtly aſſayled, then may hee withſtande his enemie by force. For why? The man that enterpriſeth to trouble an other bodies poſſeſſion, or the territorie of a Citie, or the prouinces of a countrie; is no better than a robber. True it is, that men indeede call them Kinges and Princes, but yet are they but honourable theeues in deede, which doe ſo abuſe the power that GOD hath giuen them, and are not contented with their owne bounds, but will needes inlarge them without iuſt cauſe or title. Such then are but Robbers. And as a Iudge ought to puniſhe a theefe or a robber: ſo likewiſe they that haue the power ordeyned of God, may enter into armes againſt all ſuch as fall to troubling and vexing of their ſubiectes; and ſuch manner of warres are not onely lawfull but alſo of neceſſitie to bee vndertaken by them. It is not without cauſe then that God doeth incourage his people, ſaying that they muſt not bee faint hearted and cowardly when they goe to warre againſt their enemies.

That is the thing which wee haue to marke firſt of all, leaſt wee might ſurmiſe that Gods will is to helpe ſuch as maintaine an euil cauſe:

for then ſhoulde he renounce himſelfe. And therefore whenſoeuer he promiſeth to bee with his people; his meaning is that their quarel muſt be iuſt and reaſonable. And hereupon wee may gather by the way, that it is lawefull to make warre vppon neceſſitie, conditionally that the war be to none other end than to procure peace & to obtain it. There are ſome fantaſtical perſons which imagine that this ſerues but for the olde teſtament, and that the caſe ſtandeth not alike in theſe dayes. But we muſt make this a general rule, that whereas God graunteth to ſuccour his people againſt their enemies; his promiſing to do ſo, is not for once only, but for euer. Indeed Mich.4.3. it is promiſed that vnder the reigne of our lord Ieſus Chriſt, ſwordes and ſpeares ſhall be turned into Plowſhares and Coulters, and that there ſhall be no more anoyance nor violence. That is verie true as in reſpect of ſuch as ſhall be truely conuerted and reformed by the ſpirit of God. For if we will be Chriſtians, we muſt become as Eſa.11.6. Lambs. Inſomuchas it is ſaid expreſly, that the Beare and the Lion ſhall dwell together, & that a litle babe ſhall rule them both. This muſt bee vnderſtoode of ſuch as God ſhal haue chaunged and renewed by his holy ſpirit. But we ſee that ſo farre off is it that the worlde is conuerted to God, when the goſpell is preached, or that all of them chaunge their maners: that many of thē become worſe and worſe, and otherſome more and more inuenimed, hauing heard Gods word: and therefore worthie are they to bee deliuered vp to Satan through a reprobate ſenſe, becauſe they haue hardened their hartes againſt God, & haue manifeſtly deſpiſed him, by refuſing the grace that is offred them. Is it not reaſon (ẏ premiſſes conſidered) that God alſo ſhoulde turne away from them, and ẏ Satan ſhould drawe them and carie them away into all euill? Marke I pray you how a number of people become worſe and worſe after they haue heard the preaching of ẏ Goſpel. All then are not ſo conuerted as to become Lambes: but rather their rage is inflamed more & more. And therefore foraſmuchas there are wicked men continually in this world, yea & the Princes themſelues are ſo caried away by their own ambition, couetouſnes, and other wicked luſtes, that they keepe no meaſure in their doings, but wil needs turn al things vpſide down, and make hauocke of all, for ẏ ſatisfying of their owne wicked wils: God hath left the vſe of the ſword to men of authoritie, & ordeyned ẏ they ſhould bee ſtronghanded, as S. Paul declareth. Rom.13.4. Whereupon it is to be concluded, that if a war be lawfull, this promiſe of Gods ſtandeth in force ſtil. For otherwiſe what a thing were it? True it is that we ought to poſſeſſe our ſoules in patience, as our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſaith: but yet doth it not follow, ẏ therefore the office of the magiſtrates ſhould ceaſe, & that his arming of them is to no purpoſe, & that they ſhould be but as idols. Nay rather they ought to hazard their liues ſo far as God inableth them, whenſoeuer their ſubiectes are aſſaulted & tormented. And for this cauſe I haue ſtood the longer vpon this text, to the end we might know that faithful Princes haue Gods promiſe ſtil at this day, that he wilbe their guide in the time of war, and take their part when they be to fight with their enemies, & giue thē victory to the intent they ſhould aſſure thēſelues of his helpe, and alwaies flee to him for refuge. And ſo ye ſee how that is one point which wee haue to marke vpon this text.

Neuerthelater we muſt vnderſtand alſo, that there is no war iuſt, vnleſſe God be the author of it. For if we intend to be armed with ẏ ſtrength of his hand, we muſt alſo aske counſel at his mouth: & his ſpirit muſt be the ouerruler of the aduiſe which we haue taken: for we ſee that al interpriſes are accurſed, which men do take in hand vpō their owne head, without inquiring of his wil. As for example, when the Iewes made leagues with the Realme of Egypt, or entered anie other familiaritie with them, Curſed be thoſe (ſaith he) Eſa.30.1. which weaue a webbe, but not by mine aduiſe. And by and by hee addeth the expoſition, yea (ſaith hee,) for yee determine vppon matters without taking counſell at my mouth; that is to ſay, without conſidering by my worde whether the thing be lawfull or no. Ye will not hold your ſelues to my will, nor ſuffer my ſpirit to be your gouernour, or to haue the ouerruling of you: Wo to you therefore, ſaith he. And the Realme of Egypt ſhall be as a Reed ẏ wil breake vnder you if yee leane vnto it, it ſhall ſerue but to breake your neckes; yea and it ſhall pricke yee like a ſharpe reede that runnes into the hande of him that leaneth vppon it. Then let vs marke, that if we intende to be ſuccored by our God, we muſt faſhion our ſelues wholy to his will, and not attempt any thing which is not permitted by his worde, or which we be not ſure that he alloweth. And then may wee throughly aſſure our ſelues, that he will bee on our ſide, and that wee ſhall be ſo fenced with his power, that we ſhal get the vpper hand of al our enemies.

But it behooueth vs to wey well the words ẏ are ſet downe here. Although thou ſee that thine enemies are ſtronger than thou (ſaith hee) and farre better furniſhed with horſes and Chariotes, and that they haue a greater number of people: yet bee not afraide. Hereby hee ſheweth (as king Ioſaphat declared) that we muſt not meaſure Gods power 2.Chron.20.6.12.15.20. by the thinges that are ſeene with our eyes, for it is no harder matter with him to diſcomfite an hoſt of an hundred thouſand men, than to diſcōfit an handful, or to giue victory to a doſen perſōs as wel as if they were a great army. The thing ẏ moueth vs is this: If we be wel furniſhed of worldly ſtrength, then we think ẏ God helpeth vs and fauoureth vs: but if we be bare & naked, and our enemies too ſtrong for vs; then are we diſmayed. And why? Becauſe we bind God to theſe inferiour meanes, and we beare our ſelues in hande that he can do nothing, vnleſſe he tel aforehand how and wherewͭ he wil doe it, and that he giue vs a good pawne of it as they ſay. But that is too great an imbacing of his mightines, and a turning of al order vpſidedowne. For how ſhal God be honored at our handes? Euen by continuing vndyſmayed, though our enemyes bee too ſtrong and mightie; for God needs no more but to blowe vppon them, and by and by all their power is daſht. The thing wherein God ſheweth himſelfe almightie, is that the creatures which ſeeme to be of moſt power are able to do nothing at all, but God maketh euerie whitte of it to vaniſhe away. If God coulde doe no more but ſay, I wilbe a let to men that they ſhal not aduaunce themſelues, I will take away their courage and ſcatter them: it were a ſmall thing: but he hath diuerſe wayes to ſuccour thoſe that are his. Sometime he ſetteth our enemies on ſuch a fire, that they be as madde folkes againſt vs, or elſe they haue all thinges in a readineſſe againſt vs: and ſometime when they haue practiſed to ouerthrowe vs, hee letteth them haue heartes like Lions, by meanes whereof they be inraged with ſuch furie, that by all likelihoode they muſt needes beare downe all things before them like thunder. Hath hee permitted all this? Yet when it commeth to ÿ verie puſh: then ſhal they haue no ſtrength at all, inſomuch that the thinges which they had purpoſed, ſhall vaniſh away. Although they come onwarde ſo terribly at the firſt, as that they make al things to quake againe: yet will he ſtrike the ſworde out of their hand, ſo as they ſhal not be able to put any thing in execution: to be ſhort, they ſhall ſlide away like water. Therefore let vs marke here, that in ſuch caſes wee muſt wey well the power of God, not doubting but that when hee ſhall haue ſuffered men to aduaunce themſelues, and all thinges to bee fully furniſhed according to their deſire; he will daſhe it all vnder foote. Marke that for one point. True it is that when wee fall to the conſidering of our owne ſtate and condition, we muſt not imagine that God is not mercifull towardes vs, ſo wee haue our recourſe to him. Yet notwithſtanding, nowe and then to giue the greater gloſſe to his owne goodnes and power, he will ſuffer vs to bee in ſome diſtreſſe: inſomuch that when we looke about vs, we ſhall crie out alas, howe ſhall I doe, what will become of mee? We ſhal not knowe to whome wee may betake our ſelues: and when wee haue made all the ſhiftes we can, we ſhall bee as folke halfe vanquiſhed afore hande. But our God hath wherewith to ſupplie all our wantes: onely let vs tarie his leaſure and ſay with Ioſaphat, It is as eaſie for our God to giue victorie to a ſmal number againſt an infinite number, as to giue victorie to a great armie againſt a fewe folke: all is one with him. So then, let vs truſt in him, let vs ſtay our ſelues vppon his ſtrength, and let vs not doubt but hee will giue vs wherewith to withſtande all temptations that ſhall bee laide afore vs. And ſpecially when Satan goeth about to weaken our courages, and to caſt vs into deſpaire: let vs reſiſt that. Thus ye ſee what wee haue to remember vppon this ſaying here, that although our enemies be neuer ſo ſtrong, and neuer ſo able to ouercome vs: yet wee muſt not be diſmayed at it.

And indeede, wee muſt take this for a generall rule, that the welfare of the Church conſiſteth neither in horſes, nor in Chariotes, nor in Speares, nor in any manner of armour or artillerie; but in the power of God, as is oftentimes auouched by the Prophetes. And Eſa.31.3.
it is a leſſon which is more than neceſſarie for vs: For if we ſhoulde tryumph to the worldward, and were of ſuch power as were glorious to ſee too: what a thing were it? Gods glorie ſhoulde bee diminiſhed among vs, and wee woulde ſurmiſe our ſelues to bee preſerued by our owne meanes, ſo as wee woulde not call earneſtly vppon God as were requiſite we ſhoulde, but our calling vppon him woulde be but in way of Ceremonie, or rather our heartes would be puffed vp with pride and ouerweening. Nowe becauſe we bee ſo giuen to this ouerloftineſſe, God bringeth vs lowe. And for the bringing thereof to paſſe, his will is to haue vs to bee as ſheepe among wolues, deſtitute of all force and furniture, and hemmed in on all ſides with ſuch enemies, as are armed, furniſhed, and fenced in all points: ſo as by al likelihoode we bee as ſheepe that are dragged eueriday to ÿ ſlaughterhouſe, and haue the knife ſetted continually to our throate to kill vs. Sith we be in ſuch ſtate, let vs vnderſtande that our Lorde will be glorified by vs, and that hee calleth vs to him, to the ende that we reſting wholy vppon him, and putting all our truſt in his goodneſſe and protection, ſhould cal vpon him, when we ſee the neceſſitie pinch vs, as they that ſhoulde not know where to become, if he ſhoulde not reache out his arme to helpe vs. Thus yee ſee after what manner wee ought to put this leſſon in vre, where it is ſaide that in conſidering the power of our enemies, we muſt not bee diſcouraged at it, be it neuer ſo great.

And let vs marke howe Moſes vſeth manie wordes here; the cauſe whereof is, that we can not by and by ouercome the feare wherewith we be caught when any perill ſeemeth to bee towardes vs. Thou ſhalt not feare it ſaith hee; thy heart ſhall not quayle, nor ſhrinke; thou ſhalt not bee diſmayed at it; thou ſhalt not be afraide of it. See howe hee vſeth foure ſundrie tearmes, to betoken one onely thing. And yet is it no ſuperfluitie of ſpeech. Whereat then did he looke? Let euerie of vs examine our owne heartes, and we ſhall find ÿ God doth not without cauſe ſtand ſo much vpon this point, namely ÿ we muſt not be afraid, nor aſtoniſhed, nor diſmaid, nor out of heart, nor diſcouraged, when we ſee the force & puiſſaunce of our enemies. Trueth it is that as long as wee are farre from blowes, we can ſleepe ſoundely enough, and a man would wonder to ſee howe blockiſhe we bee: and we beare our ſelues in hande that neuer anie daunger can come neere vs. But if it come to good earneſt, and that wee bee once pinched: then it woulde pitie ones hearte to ſee howe farre wee be out of countenaunce. Let GOD comforte vs, and let him incourage vs neuer ſo much, and all will not cheere vp our hearts. For why? we be forepoſſeſſed with fearefulneſſe which beareth ſuch ſway in vs, as wee cannot bee releeued of our diſcouragement. Wee ſee Eſa.7.12. in what taking Achaz was, when he ſawe the Citie Ieruſalem at the point to bee beſieged.

Albeit that the Prophete Eſay beeing ſent vnto him, promiſed him deliuerance in ẏ name of God · yet was he ſtill like the leafe of a tree, as the ſimilitude likeneth him in the ſame place, inſomuch that he was in vnquietneſſe and vexation of minde, yea and quite beſides himſelfe for feare. True it is that hee went about to repaire the bulwarkes of the citie: but yet neuertheleſſe he quaked ſtill for feare. Be of good courage (ſaith the Prophet to him) and feare not. Indeede thou haſt two mightie Kinges againſt thee: for the king of Syria had alied himſelfe with the king of Iſraell. Well, well, in deede it is their meaning to burne vp all: but yet for al that they bee no better than a cupple of ſmoking fire brandes that doe nothing elſe but ſmoke. There is ſome likelihoode that they ſhoulde make hauocke of all thinges: but all this is nothing, God will ſet a ſtoppe in their way, bee thou quiet and ſtill. Yet notwithſtanding, this wretched man was ſo ſore afrayde, ẏ he could not take any cõfort. True it is that he did ſet a good face vpon the matter, and he played the hypocrite ſo ſtoutly, that hee woulde not aske a myracle when GOD offered it him. Demaunde ſome token of thy God, ſaide the Prophete. What, ſaide hee, ſhall I tempte my GOD? And yet neuertheleſſe, hee tempted him through his vnbeleefe. And the Prophete Eſay ſaide vnto him, Is it not enough for you to tempt the Lorde, but yee muſt alſo greeue thoſe whome he ſendeth vnto you, O you houſe of Dauid? Ye royall and holy houſe, ought there to bee ſuch hypocriſie among you? Nowe ſith wee ſee ſuch an example in the ſucceſſor of Dauid who was a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, let vs bethinke our ſelues well, and vnderſtande that when we bee ſo aſtoniſhed, there is no way nor remedie to cheere vp our heartes agayne, but by Gods owne working after a maruellous faſhion. And the caſe ſtandeth ſo with vs, that wee haue ſuch a roote of vnbeleefe in vs, that vntill ſuch tyme as we bee grounded in GOD and in his promiſes, euerie fiſking of a flie before our eyes wil make vs by and by afraid, accordingly as it is ſaide that the wicked ſhall tremble for feare when no man purſueth him. And wee ſee that among other curſes of the lawe, God threateneth ſuch as leane not vnto him, that they ſhall bee euer in a maze, not knowing where to become. Seeing then that this infirmitie is ſo rooted in vs by nature, let vs learne to arme our ſelues againſt it.

And moreouer, let no feare ſo ouermaiſter vs when wee come in daunger, but that we may wade out of it agayne. And that wee may ſo do, let vs marke howe it is ſayde here, Bee not diſmayed, let not your heartes faint, bee not diſcouraged. When as our Lorde vſeth ſuch maner of ſpeech, it is all one as if hee ſaide, Goe to, If I ſaide no more to you but bee not afraide: it ought to ſuffice you. But I ſee well that yee will not ceaſe to bee afraide, euen when ye bee aſſured on my behalfe. Nowe therefore plucke vp a good heart, and gather newe ſtrength to you, and ſtande to your tackeling ſo ſtoutly, as yee may in the ende get the vpper hand of all temptations that come before you. And hereby wee be doone to vnderſtande in fewe wordes, what we haue to doe when wee feele ſuch trouble of minde in our ſelues, that wee cannot bee comforted againe out of hande. If one promiſe of God be not enough for vs; let vs goe to another: and ſo foorth to a thirde: yea and let vs inforce our ſelues to get the vpper hande of all diſtreſſes, ſo as the ſeede of vnbeleefe may bee vtterly rooted out of our heartes. After that manner muſt wee deale. When a man hath heard one of Gods promiſes, if his minde bee ſtill out of quiet, let him ſtriue with himſelfe, and bethinke himſelfe thus: Although I be weake, yet muſt I not feede mine owne follie, but I muſt ſtrengthen my ſelfe in God. And howe may I doe that? Indeede I am too vnthankefull if I quiet not my ſelfe with any one promiſe of his. Is not the very opening of Gods mouth enough for mee? Am I not too too froward, if I beleeue not his ſaying? Yes: but for aſmuch as this curſed vnbeleefe raigneth in mee, I muſt fight againſt it: and the harder that the battell is, the more muſt we inforce our ſelues. Then muſt God be honoured at my hande, euen in deſpite of the miſbeleefe that is in me; ſo as his promiſe may preuaile and I perceiue the fruite thereof in me. And howe ſo? [If one promiſe will not ſerue,] we muſt take a ſeconde. It is not once only that my God hath ſaide, I will helpe thee: but all the whole ſcripture is full of ſuch promiſes. Againe, when wee ſee that that doeth not yet ſufficiently auaile vs: we muſt proceede further and take holde of an other of Gods promiſes, and reſolue our ſelues by that. To be ſhort, we muſt heape them vp one vppon another, ſo as Satan may bee beaten backe. And if we be not able to wreſtle with him hande to hande, let vs make vs a foretreſſe, or bulwarke of Gods promiſes, yea let vs make a Rampyre and a double Ditch of them, ſo as the enemie may by no meanes come at vs, but that we may boldely defie him. Thus yee ſee that the thing which wee haue to gather vppon this texte, where Moſes doeth ſo oft repeate, that wee muſt not bee afrayde of our enemies; is, that wee muſt firſt conſider the diſeaſe that is in our nature, namely that we be afraide as ſoone as anie daunger appeareth: and ſecondly that wee muſt ſeeke the remedie thereof, not by taking ſome ſmall taſt of Gods promiſes as it were at a glaunce onely; but by ſetting our mindes vppon them, and by exerciſing our ſelues dayly in them.

After this here followeth the reaſon. Becauſe thy GOD goeth with thee: yea euen thy GOD which brought thee out of the Lande of Egypt. Here Moſes ſheweth vs ẏ there is none other meane wherby we may ouercome the feare of our enemies: but only by hauing recourſe vnto God. For as long as we ſtand weying of our own ſtrength, and ſtande gaſing about vs: alas in what taking be we? Needes muſt we be continually turmoyled with a number of terrours and carefull thoughtes. Therefore if we will haue good aſſurance & ſtoutnes of courage, let vs learne to reſort ſimply vnto God, and to keepe our ſelues cloſe vnder the ſhadow of his wings. And heereby we be warned, that all the hardineſſe which men do build vppon themſelues, is accurſed. If wee put our truſt in this or that, becauſe wee haue maintenance and aide to ouercome our enemyes: if wee tie our truſt to that; woe to vs. True it is that for a time wee may bee puffed vp with winde, and we may beare our ſelues in hand that nothing can daunt vs: but in the end God will laugh ſuch malapeartneſſe to ſkorne, & ſhew howe it was no better than ſmoke. And that is the cauſe why I ſaid that the foundation of true ſtoutneſſe, courage, and conſtancie, is to haue our eye vpon God, and to aſſure our ſelues that he is on our ſide. Notwithſtanding, it is not in vs to ſend it; but we muſt imbrace ẏ promiſe which he maketh to vs. Thy God (ſayth he) will goe with thee. Yea verily, ſo wee attempt not any thing without the warrant of his word, as I haue ſayd afore; and ẏ we runne not a head: For God will not be our tennis ball to trotte whereſoeuer we will ſend him. But when we doe him the honour to take him for our Captaine and king, ſo as we fight vnder him, and enterpriſe not any thing which is not permitted vs by his woord; but yeeld him the whole ſoueraintie ouer vs: we ſhall neuer be deſtitute of his helpe. Now then, whenſoeuer we be ſcarred, and there is any occaſion to make vs afrayde: let vs learne to caſt our eye vppon God, and imbrace the warrant that is giuen vs heere, which is that he will be euer at hand to ſuccour vs at our neede. Yea verily: for he hath not only taken vpon him ẏ tuition of vs; but alſo telleth vs ẏ he wil be an enemie to our enemies. Is it not a ſingular priuiledge, that beſides that our God auoweth himſelfe to be the mainteiner of our welfare, he telleth vs alſo that if men vex vs and goe about to doe vs any harme, they ſet themſelues againſt him, and he putteth himſelfe as a ſhield betwixt them and vs? The holy ſcripture is ful of ſuch ſimilitudes. Sometime God is called our Rampyre, ſometime our high tower, ſometime our bulwarke, and ſometimes our ſhield. Againe, when he will ſhew how greatly he loueth vs: he that toucheth you (ſaith he) toucheth the apple of mine eye, which feeleth or perceiueth all the harme that can bee purpoſed againſt vs. Deut.32.10 Seeing it is ſo then, that wee haue this warrant that God watcheth for vs; let vs not doubt but he is ſtrong ynough to confound all our enimies. And therefore let vs yeeld him his deſerued honour, in making no account of all the force of the worlde, foraſmuch as wee knowe that all that euer men can bring of their owne, is but vtter vanitie and leaſing in compariſon of Gods arme. So then, it is a ſpeeche of great importance when as Moſes ſendeth folke vnto God, ſaying, My friendes, Neuer ſtand muſing what ye bee of your ſelues, but know for a certaintie that yee be able to doe nothing. Though yee had neuer ſo great furniture for the warres, yet haue your recourſe ſtill to your God, and be ſtrong in him, and take courage there.

And he addeth that it is God which brought them out of the Land of Egypt. Whereby he meaneth that they had found already by experience, that God was ynough for them, and that they ought not to be aſtoniſhed at the power of men. So long as God is on your ſide and maintaine your parte, neuer be afraid. For when the people came out of Egypt, what lykelyhood was there of their ſafetie? When they were come to ẏ red ſea, was it not like that they ſhould haue bin vtterly vndoone? The ſea was on the one ſide of them, and on the other ſide was Pharao with ſuch a power, as it was vnpoſſible for them to haue ſcaped his hand. Exod.14.10 True it is that the Iſralites themſelues were a great multitude of people. But what? Were they inured to feates of armes? No verily, they were as a flocke of ſheepe, which had a rout of wolues harde at hande. There it appeared howe God wrought for them. And therefore Moſes putteth them in mind of the things which they had felt and knowen before. As if hee ſhould ſay, your God hath ſhewed you ſufficiently already by his doinges, that yee ſhall not bee diſappointed if you hang vppon him. And his power is no whit abated. For aſmuch then as ye knowe that it is ynough for you to bee vnder his protection, hold your ſelues ſtill thereunto. Now the remouing of the Iſralites out of Egypt, was a putting of them in minde that God had giuen them a preſident after what maner he would maintaine the ſtate of his Church: that is to wit, after ſuch a maner as paſſeth the reache of mans capacitie. And let vs marke that euen at this day we muſt haue the ſame rule ſtill. For (as I haue alleaged already out of the Prophetes) the welfare of the faithfull conſiſteth not in the multitude of horſes or of Chariots, or in the ſtrength of armour or men of warre; but in the goodneſſe and helpe of God. And this is to be referred moſt peculiarly to our ſtate vnder the raigne of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For it is the Chriſtian Church which the Prophets ſpeake of, when they vſe ſuch kind of ſpeeches. 1.Pet.1.10.12. Sith it is ſo, let vs aſſure our ſelues that the wonders which God wrought in bringing his people out of Egypt, are a ſure warrant vnto vs that hee will maintaine vs. So that, although it ſeeme vnpoſſible to men, and although we bee diſmayed when wee behold the power of our enimies and the weakeneſſe that is in our ſelues: yet will God woorke aboue our capacitie and vnderſtanding. That is one thing which we haue to beare in minde.

Againe, let vs alſo marke therewithall, that all the experiences which God hath giuen vs afore, muſt aſſure vs the better of our ſaluation, and make vs to truſt the more vnto him, for his former ſuccouring of vs. And let vs gather thereuppon, that he can wel find other meanes which we neuer thought of: and moreouer, that his goodnes diminiſheth not, and that he is alwaies alike ſtrong. Let vs conclude that he is able to ſaue vs, ſo we reſorte vnto him. And therefore let vs bethinke vs of the gratious goodneſſe that God hath extended towardes vs aforetimes, and of the ſuccour that hee hath giuen vs. And in conſidering thoſe thinges, let vs not onely giue him thankes for his ſhewing of himſelfe to bee our preſeruer heretofore: but alſo let vs take further matter and occaſion to truſt to him afterward, and to reſort boldly vnto him, and not to doubt but that he will continue as he began, vntill he haue brought our ſaluation to full perfection. Nowe if this bee ſpoken concerning our bodily enemyes: much more reaſon haue we to apply the ſame to Satan, to ſinne, and to al other things that fight againſt the endleſſe ſaluation of our ſoules. But I cannot as nowe make any larger diſcourſe of this matter. Let it ſuffice vs for this time to make our benefite of this doctrine: which is, that if we reſort vnto our God, he hath promiſed to preſerue vs, ſo as euen whē wee bee hemmed in on all ſides, and wee ſeeme to be out of al hope, and men ſeeme to haue the vpper hand of vs, yea euen yͤ vnbeleeuers whoſe onely deſire is to ouerthrowe vs: yet euen then we may boldly and ſafely keepe on our way. For why? We paſſe not what wee ourſelues bee, nor what wee can doe: but foraſmuch as God telleth vs that he will be at hand with vs, and haue pitie vpon vs, and that he loueth vs in ſuch wiſe that he will vtter his wrath againſt our enemies, and bee ſo inflamed at them as if their dealing were immediately with himſelfe, and take the quarell vpon him as though the diſhonour were offered to himſelf, and that defiance were made to his owne perſon: foraſmuch (ſay I) as we haue ſuch promiſe at his hand, let vs truſt boldly vnto it, and walk on ſtill in feare and reuerence, praying him to vouchſafe to giue vs peace, and to maintaine good agreement among vs. And although it bee his will to giue bridle to the wicked, ſo as they doe what they can againſt vs: yet let not vs ceaſſe to reſorte to him, foraſmuch as wee bee ſure that if wee put our life into his handes, he will ſhewe himſelfe a good and faithfull keeper of it.

But now let vs kneele downe before yͤ Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue done; and that when we once know the wicked affections that are in vs, it may cauſe vs not only to miſlike of them and to condemne them, but alſo to reſort to the remedie of them, and to pray him to reforme vs ſo according to his own image, as our whole deſire may bee to ſhewe our ſelues louing and gentle to all men, and to ſeeke peace and to procure it as much as we can, remouing all occaſion that any man may haue to doe vs any harme. And moreouer, that it may pleaſe him to receiue vs ſo into his protection, as we may be bold to proceede in our conuerſation: and that ſeeing he ſheweth himſelfe to bee our defender aforehand euen in this bodily and tranſitorie life, we may not doubt but yͤ he watcheth ouer vs to defend vs againſt Satan and all manner of ſinne, and that wee may be more and more confirmed with aſſurance of his goodneſſe, in ſuch ſort as wee may not liue any more in our ſelues, but to him, as good reaſon woulde that our life ſhoulde bee dedicated vnto him, ſeeing that hee vouchſafeth to take the care of it. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

The Cxvij Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the twentith Chapter.

2.3.4. And when yee come neere, &c.

5 And the Officers ſhall ſpeake vnto the people and ſay, Is there any man here which hath builded a new houſe, and not dedicated it? Let him goe hence and tarry at home, leaſt he dye in the battell, and another man dedicate it.

6 What man is there that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not gathered of the grapes? Let him goe hence, and returne home, leaſt he dye in the battell, and another man gather the grapes.

7 And what man is he that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? Let him depart hence, and goe home againe to his houſe, leaſt he dye in the battell and another man take her.

8 Moreouer the Officers ſhal ſpeake to the people and ſay: What man is he that is afraid and faint hearted? Let him get him hence, and goe home to his owne houſe, that he make not his brothers faint hearted as well as himſelfe.

9 When the Officers haue made an ende of ſpeaking to the people, they ſhall ſet Captaines of the Armie ouer the people.

WEe ſawe yeſterday what exhortation God commanded to bee made to his people when they came in danger, and I told you ſhortly that forſomuch as vnbeleefe is hard to be corrected in vs by reaſon of the deepe roote which it hath taken in vs, our Lorde would that a much more vehement kinde of ſpeache ſhoulde bee vſed towardes vs. And thereupon I ſayd that wee haue greatly profited, when we haue once ouercome the fearefulneſſe which turneth vs away from our truſt in God, and from abilitie to call vppon him with aſſured faith. Now remaineth the applying hereof to our ſpirituall battels. If we haue any enemies that trouble vs, and ſeeke to deſtroy vs; wee muſt reſort vnto God, and aſſure our ſelues that ſeeing he hath taken vs into his protection, he will not faile vs at our neede. And if this perſwaſion take place in the daungers of this preſent life which are nothing; what muſt we doe in caſes concerning the ſaluation of our ſoules which are much more precious before God? Thinke we that he will fayle vs in that behalfe? And therfore let vs ſo apply this promiſe where it is ſayd that our Lorde will goe with his people to helpe them in their neede, as our ſoules may be gouerned by our God. And if the diuell aſſault vs roughly, and we fall into ſo great perplexities that we wote not where to become, ſo as to our ſeeming we be vtterly ſonke: Let vs hope ſtill that our GOD hath not forgotten vs, but that he goeth ſtill with vs, that is to ſay, that he is ſo neere at hand, that his fauour and power ſhall ſtill ſuccour vs. And this is a thing more than needefull. For we ſee how feeble wee bee to incounter againſt Satan, and againſt all the aſſaultes which he maketh againſt vs: If wee bee not afraid, we be too blockiſh: for there is none other remedy for vs, but to flye to our God for refuge, and to depend vppon the ſuccour that hee hath promiſed vs. For if wee ſeeke our helpe in our ſelues for the withſtanding of Satan and of his ſpirituall battels: we ſhall be diſappointed of our hope, and God (as good reaſon is) will laugh our ouerweening to skorne. Therefore there is none other way for vs, but to ſeeke in God that which wanteth in our ſelues; and vpon the knowing of our owne weakneſſe, to looke for ſtrength at his hand. And when he hath once ſtrengthened vs, let vs not doubt of our deliuerance, but let vs extend the ſame deliuerance to our whole lyfe, yea euen to our death. For it is not ynough for me to hope ẏ God wil helpe mee for the preſent tyme: I muſt be throughly perſwaded both for to day and for euer after. Thus yee ſee what we haue to remember vpō this text, where God comforteth his people, and forbiddeth them to be aſtoniſhed, faintharted, fearefull, or diſmaied. His vſing of ſo many words ſheweth that although wee haue neuer ſo much cauſe to miſdoubt, to be afraid, to be agaſt, or to be diſmayed; yet muſt Gods promiſes come alwayes to our mind, that wee may make a buckler, yea and a rampyre of them to reſolue vs throughly that our Lord will helpe vs howſoeuer the world goe, ſo as we ſhall be ſuccoured by him, and be ſure of victorie in the ende, and bee recouered by his mightie and inuincible hand, how great extremities ſo euer we be falen into.

And now we haue to note, how it is not without cauſe that God would haue this doctrine vttered by the mouth of the Prieſt. It may ſeeme that it was ynough to haue the Law written and proclaimed, and that euery man ought to haue minded this leſſon by himſelfe. But yet it was Gods wil expreſly that the Prieſt ſhould be there preſent, to ſpeake in his name and by his authoritie. True it is that our eſteeming of Gods word muſt not depende vppon the perſons that bring it: for then ſhoulde it bee of verye ſmall authoritie among vs. As for the Preachers of GODS will vnto vs, what are they but frayle veſſelles of earth? 2.Cor.4.7. To bee ſhort, all that euer they coulde ſaye vnto vs were to no purpoſe, if wee ſhoulde haue an eye but to their perſons. But when wee once knowe their office or Commiſſion, then is it not for vs to gaſe vppon the creatures, but wee bee to looke vnto GOD himſelfe, who hath commaunded his woorde to bee preached to vs by perſons choſen and pycked out for that purpoſe. Therefore when wee heare them, it is a meane to wake vs that wee may be the readyer to heare GODS woorde, aſſuring our ſelues that he which ſpeaketh is not brought in by himſelfe, ne thruſteth himſelfe in on his owne heade: but that GOD hath ſet downe that order, and will haue it to be obſerued in his Churche. Nowe then, if any man preache vnto vs the thing that is for our ſoule health, although the partie that ſpeaketh were a little Babe; yet doeth it behooue vs to receiue with all reuerence, the thinges that wee knowe to come of GOD. The trueth muſt neuer bee euill intertayned, neither muſt wee make an excuſe of the partie that ſpeaketh. For whoſoeuer hee bee that commeth and bringeth vs the trueth: hee is as a Meſſenger of GOD. And if wee deſpiſe him, it is a diſhonouring of his Maiſter, and wee doe him wrong when wee will not receyue that which is brought from him. Notwithſtanding, bycauſe wee bee ſo colde and ſlowe to bee edifyed in the doctrine of our ſaluation: GOD hath giuen vs this helpe, that there ſhoulde bee men appoynted to repreſent his perſon and to ſpeake in his name. Therefore whenſoeuer a Miniſter of GODS woorde that is choſen in the Church ſpeaketh: let vs knowe that GOD wakeneth vs, and giueth vs as it were a preparatiue, to the ende wee ſhoulde giue the better eare to the thinges that are tould vs. Wee will take yet a more particular Example. When a poore man is in anguiſh of mynde, thinking himſelfe to bee as good as forlorne by reaſon of the ſinnes which hee knoweth in himſelfe, ſo as hee is caſt downe and woteth not where to become, bycauſe of the vnquietneſſe that vexeth him through remorſe of conſcience: if a faithfull man come vnto him and ſet the mercie of GOD before him, and tell him that in the holy ſcripture, ſillie ſinners are called to mercie, and that GOD neuer refuſeth them when they ſeeke him in fayth and with repentaunce; it is a rayſing of him vp agayne, and hee hath cauſe already to taſte of GODS goodneſſe and to thinke thus with himſelfe; Alas, I haue beene as it were in hell, and GOD is come to ſeeke me heere, by ſending me this man which ſpeakes not as of himſelf, but bringeth me things which God himſelf hath giuen me. Thus the poore ſinner hath cauſe to reioyce, and to be diſcharged of the ſorrow that ouerwhelmed him before. But if the doctrine be vttered by one that is a Shepheard, and hath publike charge: therein we haue yet a better aſſurance. For it is ſayd 2.Cor.5.19. that they be ſent to preache the forgiueneſſe of Eſa.61.1.2. ſinnes. The Prophet Eſay ſpeaking of the raigne of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and of the ſtate of the Chriſtian Church, ſayth that the office both of Ieſus Chriſt and of all thoſe that preache the Goſpell in his name, is to hearten the feareful, to heale the diſeaſed, to aſſwage the ſorrowes of them that are in anguiſhe of minde, and to let out them that are in priſon. And this is declared yet more plainly by the mouth of Gods own ſonne where he ſaith, Go your waies, whatſoeuer Matt.18.18. ye binde vppon earth ſhall be bound in heauen. To whome ſpeaketh he? To his Apoſtles. And he preſuppoſeth that they will preache the promiſes of ſaluation in his name. For hee ment not to ſet vp heere a tyrannie as the Pope beareth vs in hand, who taketh couert vnder that text, and wickedly defyleth the holy Scripture. And that (as ye ſee) is a diueliſh ſhameleſneſſe. But our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt will ſurely authoriſe the meſſage of his Goſpell, ſpecially when it is brought by the mouth of his Shepheardes, and of ſuch as he hath called to the like ſtate. Therfore when wee ſee a man that is choſen of God, to preache the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes: it is as if a bargaine were paſſed by a publike and ſworne Notarie. That then is the cauſe why God in this text hath expreſſely commaunded the Prieſt to come into the Armie and to ſpeake thoſe words. Why ſo? To the ende they ſhould bee receiued with the greater reuerence.

Hereupon let vs gather, that we haue neede to haue the Goſpell preached vnto vs, to confirme vs in the ſtrength of our GOD, and to giue vs full aſſurance of his ſuccour, ſo as he can neuer fayle vs. And let vs not bee as theſe fantaſticall folke are, which thinke it ynough for them to reade the word at home in their houſes, and abſent themſelues eaſily from the common doctrine which God wil haue publiſhed to al his people: aſſuring our ſelues ẏ the ſame is no ſuperfluous order. And ſeeing that our Lorde woulde haue the Prieſt to open his mouth to ſpeake to the people, that they might not bee afrayde of the daungers of this preſent life: much more reaſon is it that wee ſhould neede to bee taught that our Lorde Ieſus is alwayes readie to ſuccour vs, and that wee ſhall bee deliuered by his ſtrong hand as in reſpect of our ſoules, and therfore that wee muſt leane vnto him. Wee haue neede (ſay I) that theſe things ſhould bee pronounced by the mouth of thoſe whom God calleth, and vnto whom he committeth the charge of teaching in his Church: ſo as our faith muſt thereby growe double, and wee muſt gather our wittes the better about vs, as if wee ſhould ſay, Truely it is God that ſpeaketh, though it be but a childe that vttereth the wordes vnto vs. For he hath an eye to our rudeneſſe, and beareth with it, in that he ſo qualifieth the perſons of them that beare the name and tytle of Shepheards, and that they be as his Angels. Nowe then let vs ſo much the more receiue his woord, and giue the better heede to it, and be the more touched with it, knowing that our Lord offereth himſelfe the more liuely vnto vs, and therefore let vs not pretend any moe excuſes. For he ſheweth himſelfe the more expreſly, in that hee vouchſafeth to haue a man choſen thereunto. Wherfore let that man ſpeake; and let vs receiue his ſayings as though God himſelfe ſpake them to vs after a viſible maner, as we haue ſeene already heeretofore in the eyghteenth chapter. Deut.18.7. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember as touching this ſentence.

Nowe let vs proceede to that which Moſes addeth. Hee ſayth, that before they goe to battell, the Gouernours of the people ſhall giue leaue to depart, to ſuch as had builded newe houſes and had not yet dwelt in them; to ſuch as had planted vineyardes, and had not yet gathered of the fruite; and to ſuch as had betrothed themſelues to wiues, and had not yet maryed them to take them home into their houſes. Heere are three kind of men to whom God giueth leaue to depart, whome hee will not haue compelled to goe to warre againſt their enimies. And afterward in the end he ſayth, that if there bee any fearfull or fainthearted men, thoſe alſo muſt bee ſent home againe to their owne houſes: not hauing like lybertie as the other ſortes, but as men caſt off in way of reproche. And hee ſetteth downe the reaſon; namely leaſt they ſhoulde diſcourage the heartes of their brethren, and make them lyke themſelues. This being doone, His will is to haue Captaines ſet ouer them: not as though they ſhould then demaund truce or reſpite of their enimies for the appointing of their Captaines: but his meaning is, that when warre is to bee made, the cheefe point is not to haue men of great experience and skill: What then? Aboue all thinges to truſt in God, and to reſorte vnto him firſt; and then to proceede according to the order which hee alloweth. When all this is done, then may Captaines and officers of ſkill be choſen. But if men think to ſtrengthen themſelues with worldly ayde, and in the meane while forget God; ſo as they reſorte not to him; it is an abuſe and they ſhall find themſelues beguiled. That in effect was the meaning of Moſes.

Nowe as touching that hee giueth libertie to ſuch as had newly taken wiues, and had not yet maryed them: to ſuch as had planted vineyards, and had not yet gathered the fruite of them: and to ſuch as had builded houſes, and had not dwelt in them: it is to ſhew that there is a kinde of vpright dealing to be vſed, to the ende that thoſe of whome any regard was to be had, ſhould not bee conſtreyned out of meaſure. Therefore vnder theſe three ſortes God ment to ſhewe, that albeit there bee great neede, yet ought ſuch to bee ſpared as are worthy thereof. For it were a kind of crueltie to hale out a man to death, before he had taken the benefite of dwelling in his owne houſe, and of gathering the fruit of his vineyard, ſpecially whē there were other men ynow beſides him to goe to battell. Againe they bee euen naturall greefes alſo. For this cauſe Moſes exempted ſuch perſons from the warres by Gods commaundement. But yet muſt wee cheefely come backe to this point (as I ſayd,) that although neceſſitie pinch vs and conſtraine vs: yet muſt we vſe ſome gentleneſſe in bearing with ſuch as are meete to haue ſome priuiledge and freedome more than other men.

Moreouer whereas hee ſpeaketh of dedicating of houſes: although it ſignifie to dwell in them: yet was it not Lawefull for the Iewes to ſettle themſelues in their houſes, before they had made a kinde of dedicating of them, that is to ſay, till they had vſed ſome kinde of Ceremonie of bleſſing the houſe in the name of GOD. That Ceremonie was obſerued vnder the Lawe: howebeit that as nowe it is not any more in vſe among vs. But yet the inſtruction thereof abideth vnto vs, that is to ſay, that it is not Lawefull for vs to vſe any thing without thankes giuing, and without praying vnto GOD that all may be pure and cleane vnto vs. Saint Paule ſayth that our meate and 1.Tim.4.5. our eating and drinking are ſanctified: And howe? By prayer and by the woorde. The bread (as yee ſee) is a creature whereunto GOD hath giuen vertue to nouriſhe vs: and yet if wee eate thereof without regarding him that feedeth and ſuſteyneth vs by it, wee defile it. When the thing that GOD had created for our ſuſtenanee, is peruerted by our defiling of it, it is treaſon agaynſt GOD. And therefore there is none other meane for our foode to become pure vnto vs, than to acknowledge GOD to bee the giuer of them, and to yeeld him thankes for the ſame, praying him to guide vs as his children, that wee may Lawfully receiue the benefites which hee beſtoweth vppon vs. For although the wicked and the faythleſſe be fedde in this world as well as wee, and haue the ſame Sunne ſhyning vpon them which we haue, and eate of the ſame bread that wee doe: Yet notwithſtanding, all deſpyſers of GOD, all vnbeleeuers, all Cormorauntes that fall to their meate like ſwine and Aſſes, without praying vnto GOD or without lifting vp their heartes vnto him, are all theeues; and they eate not one bitte of bread whereof they ſhall not yeeld an account. And why ſo? For there is none but Ieſus Chriſt that Hebr.1.2. is vniuerſall heire of this world, as he is named. And wee muſt bee his members, or elſe wee can haue no parte in any of GODS benefites. And howe may wee bee members of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, except wee bee graffed into his bodie by fayth? Wee ſee then howe all our meates are vncleane, and that wee on our part doe defile them, vnleſſe we yeeld thankes for them vnto GOD, and pray him to gouerne vs as his children, that we may receiue ſuſtenance for our lyfe at his hande as at the hand of our father. In lyke caſe is it with apparell and with all other thinges: GOD muſt be faine to bleſſe them to our vſe. For to that condition is our apparell, ſuſtenance, and dwelling tyed. Now then, when a houſe is to bee dwelt in; we muſt not vſe the olde figure of the Lawe in dedicating it: but yet muſt the partie that is to dwel in it, acknowledge that it is GOD which lodgeth him there, euen as hee hath lodged vs alreadie vppon the earth, making the waters to withdraw by themſelues, that wee might haue ſome roome to dwel on heere beneath. Alſo let euerie of vs thinke thus with himſelfe: although I haue but a little cottage, yet notwithſtanding ſeeing that our Lorde hath placed mee heere, it becommeth mee to acknowledge it: and although my houſe bee of myne owne purchaſing, or that I haue it by inheritaunce, or by leaſe, or by any other tytle whatſoeuer; yet am I alwayes the tenant of the Lorde my God. Let vs haue an eye to that, and let vs call vppon the name of God: for that is the right hallowing of thinges, and ſo ſhall Gods fauour dwell with vs, bycauſe wee defyle not our houſes at our comming into them, but acknowledge that GOD hath had pitie vppon vs, and that it is hee which hath giuen vs the commodities of this lyfe. Thus ye ſee to what ende this Ceremonie of the Lawe tended, and what wee haue to gather thereof at this day.

Nowe it is ſayde on the contrary part, that a vine is vnhallowed or made common, when the fruite thereof is gathered, bycauſe it was not lawefull Leu.19.23.24.25. to gather the fruite of their vines vntill the fourth yeere. It behoued the firſt croppe thereof to bee common, and then the Owner thereof was to take the benefite thereof afterwarde: In that reſpect therfore it is ſaid that the Vyneyard was to be made common. But we haue no ſuch cuſtome nowadayes. For we be not bound to the yoke of the Lawe, ſince the tyme that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt deliuered vs from it. But howeſoeuer the caſe ſtande, although the bondage bee paſt away: yet muſt wee holde faſt the inſtruction that commeth by it, that is: That wee muſt enter into an account of the benefites that GOD beſtoweth vppon vs, and giue parte of them to ſuch as want. The riche muſt vnderſtand that hee is a detter to ſuch as haue neede: and although hee be not taxed and ſeſſed, as who ſhoulde ſay thou ſhalt giue thus much of thy goods: yet ought it to ſuffice vs, that GOD putteth them into our handes with condition to bee as his receiuers, and that our inioying of the goods which wee poſſeſſe through his goodneſſe, is in ſuch wiſe, that wee bee bounde to ſuccour them that haue neede. Thus yee ſee how the old figures are profitable to vs ſtill at this day; not that we be bound to obſerue them, but for that the truth of them belongeth vnto vs. To be ſhort, we ſee how in al the commodities of this preſent lyfe, we be taught firſt of all to magnifie the goodneſſe of our GOD, for that hee hath a fatherly care of vs, and prouideth vs all things that are requiſite for vs. And we muſt alſo haue a regard of our neighbours, & of the Communion or fellowſhip which our lord commandeth. Not that there ſhould not be any ciuill order, or that no man myght keepe that which is his own: but that euery man ſhold ſtrain himſelfe to be liberal of the things yͤ God giueth ſo as the needy may be ſuccoured by vs. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to remember as touching the exemption that was giuen to the three ſortes of men ſpoken of before.

Nowe let vs come to that which Moſes addeth. He ſaith that if there be any fearfull and fainthearted fellows, they muſt be ſent home to their houſes, leaſt they diſcourage their brethren lykewiſe. Here our Lord declareth yͤ he would haue the wars which yͤ Iewes were to make, to be made in his name. And therefore hee woulde haue ſouldyours that ſhould goe to it with a franke courage. For if a man bee afrayd, it is a token that he hath no truſt in GOD: for faith hath power to ouercome and to kill all fearefullneſſe. Not that wee ſhoulde bee without feeling; for although wee reſt vppon the fauour of GOD, and call vpon him not doubting but that hee heareth vs: yet are wee not ſenſeleſſe ſo as wee ſhoulde ſhewe no token of infirmitie at all, but wee ſhall alwayes get the vpper hande of it. Then if wee bee ouertaken with fearefulneſſe, it is a ſigne that wee haue no truſt in GOD. And howe ſhoulde hee helpe vs, when we do him not the honour to truſt vnto him? And if we be not hardy hauing his promiſe; whom may we blame but our ſelues, that wee obtaine not the victorie? Nowe then if wee truſt not to that which our Lord hath promiſed; then is it meete that hee ſhould withdrawe himſelfe from vs and giue vs ouer. Thus ye ſee why expreſſe commaundement is giuen to Gouernours in this text, to ſend home faintharted and couwardly ſouldiours. I haue tould you already howe it was not lawful for the Iſraelites to enterpriſe warres vpon ambition or couetouſneſſe, as wee ſee men doe noweadayes, who vppon an eager deſire of bearing rule in the worlde, become vnſatiable gulfes in making warres and in ſhedding of mans bloud: but the warres which the people of Iſraell made, were vppon neceſſitie, and GOD auowed them and bleſſed them in ſo dooing. And bycauſe it was ſo, hee woulde haue the ſouldiours to looke vnto him, and thereby to aſſure themſelues of his helpe. Therefore ſuch as were weakehearted were not worthy to bee in the hoſte of GOD: for they ſhould but haue bred confuſion, and that two wayes. Moſes noteth the one heere to bee that they ſhould haue diſcouraged their brethren. But there was this more, that it was as a nouriſhing of GODS curſe, when ſuch men were mingled with thoſe that ought to haue their eye vppon the banner or ſtandard of GOD diſplayed before them. And this reaſon is to bee well weyed, where Moſes ſayth that they might diſcourage the heartes of their brethren; and that as their owne heartes faynted, ſo they might make the reſt of the people afrayde and diſmaied too. And (as I ſayde) this reaſon is to be marked well: for we haue experience of it in all things. Let vs looke vpon any other buſineſſe: if there be but one loytering lubber, he is a diſcomfort to all the reſt of the company. For one giueth courage to another: and when men goe luſtily to their worke, there is no labour nor occupation ſo harde, but it is gone through with: and it not halfe ſo much payne to them, when they doe their indeuour with a good will. Contrarywiſe when any one falles to loytering, hee makes al the reſt of the company to droope. But that is not all the ill yet. For beſides that ſuch a ſlouthfull body will not ſtraine himſelfe to doe his duetie: he will euer finde ſome occaſion to cloake his ſhame, and he will fall to murmuring and grudging, ſo as a man were better to haue but two or three luſtie fellowes that are well diſpoſed to take paines; than to haue two doſen of lither loyterers, of whome one is ynough to marre all his fellowes. This is manifeſtly ſeene. If there bee any trouble, what is commonly the cauſe of it? It is, that if ſome diſordered perſon thruſt himſelfe into a companie of men, hee is as a firebrand to kindle ſuch a fire as cannot eaſily be quenched. He falleth to ſowing of his Darnell, which ſpreadeth ſo farre from one to another, that at length the trubble and diſquietneſſe growe ſo great, as they cannot bee appeaſed agayne. This is to bee ſeene in all our lyfe throughout. And when yee come to publyke offices, if there bee ſix ſkoore perſones moe or leſſe well diſpoſed to gouerne the people, and there bee but a two or three that drawe backe: thoſe feaw ſhall bee able to doe a hundred fould more harme, than all the reſt to doe good. As for example, in drawing of a cart; wee ſee howe one reſtie Iade ſhall hinder foure or fiue good horſes, which woulde haue gone away roundely with the loade, if that naughtie beaſt had not bin among them. Likewiſe if in a common Councel or in a great companie there bee but one or two ill diſpoſed perſons, which ſhall goe about to ouerthrowe all good order: You would wonder to ſee howe vntowardly thinges will fall out. And although a man woulde make an account of the contrarie bycauſe the greater parte ſeeme willing to doe good: yet thoſe two or three are ynough to ouerthrowe all, and to put al to hauocke. So then it is not for nought that GOD woulde haue all ſuch to bee cutte off from his armie, and that if men intended to haue GOD to beare ſway among them and to ſhewe his power in giuing them victorie, they ſhoulde at their going to warre, ſhake off al that rabble, which are good for nothing but to marre the reſt by their miſtruſtfulneſſe and leaud behauiour. Wee ſee howe Gedeon went to woorke: and Iud.7.3.5.6 his example is notable aboue all others, bycauſe that then GOD ſhewed himſelfe after a moſt viſible manner, and by myracle more woorthie to bee had in rememberaunce than euer before. And in deede, it is not without cauſe that the Prophet Eſay ſpeaking of the deliueraunce which GOD woulde woorke by the hande of the Redeemer: ſayeth that it Eſa.9.4. ſhall bee as in the day of Madian, that is to ſay in the victorie that was giuen againſt the Madianites by the hande of Gedeon. For when hee had aſſembled a great multitude of men: in the ende hee was commaunded to ſend home the moſt part of them againe, bycauſe GOD intending to giue the greater glorie to his owne power, woulde haue but a ſmall nomber of men to doe it withall. And who were they whome Gedeon reſerued for that purpoſe? GOD gaue him a token to know them by, which was that when they came to drinke, as many of them as lapped the water or kneeled downe to drinke, ſhould be ſent away; and that thoſe which tooke vp water in their hands to drinke as they paſſed by without ſtaying, ſhould goe on agaynſt the enimies. GOD gaue that marke. And to what end? To doe them to vnderſtand, that he would haue none to bee of his Crewe, but ſuch as were throughly diſpoſed and well willing to go to battell againſt their enimies. For that thing could not proceede but of an aſſured truſt that GOD was with them. For howe coulde three hundred men haue fought againſt a great armie, ſpecially with pitchers, Lanternes, and Lampes, (as though they had caryed bladders full of peaſe made for little children) to ſcarre their enimies withall? Woulde they euer haue gone that way to worke, if they had not all of them beene certainly perſwaded in their heartes after this manner? It is GOD that gouerneth and directeth vs, and therefore if wee goe foreward according to his wil; ſhal we doubt ỹ he is not able to ſuccour vs at our neede, and to diſcomfite the infinite multitude of the Madianites when they ſhall ſet themſelues againſt vs? So then let vs marke howe our Lordes intent was to ſhewe hereby, that all ſuch as goe a warfare, muſt marche as it were vnder his ſtandard, and put their truſt in him; and that the ſtoutneſſe which he requireth in them, muſt bee as a record of their faith.

Nowe let vs apply this to our owne vſe. In deede this doctrine ought to be put in vre nowadaies by the princes that cal themſelues Chriſtians. And when they goe a warfare, they ſhould conſider firſt what reaſon mooues them theretoo, whether their warres bee rightfull or no: and then ought they to followe the order which GOD ſheweth them heere. But they ſeeke no further noweadayes than to blynde themſelues with vaine ouerweening. In deede when they goe to their warres, they make proceſſions to their Idolles. But all is but flat mockerie, I meane euen of their ſuperſtitions, wherin they bee as deuoute as they that knowe no diuinitie at all. For wee ſee howe they bee blynded in their couetous deſires, and all their truſt is in their owne force and furniture. They haue thus many footemen, thus many horſemen, thus much artillerie, ſuch and ſuch intelligence, ſuch and ſuch alyances, and ſuch and ſuch I wote not what. True it is that all theſe things are neceſſarie for the warres: but yet ought they to begin at another ende, which is, to walke in the feare of God, and to reſt vppon that poynt, and to referre themſelues to him that hath all power in him, and not to ſtay vppon their owne ſtrengthes, but to waite altogether vppon God who giueth the victorie. But there is none of all this.

Nowe haue wee a more generall doctrine, in that wee bee all ſouldiers of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and that our ſtate is ſuch, that we muſt fight, not for one day onely, but all the tyme of our lyfe. Wee cannot ſerue our GOD otherwyſe than by fighting. Sith it is ſo, let vs apply this doctrine to our inſtruction. As how? Let vs take an expoſition of it out of the hundred and tenth Pſalme. It is ſayde there, that Pſal. 110, 3. in the day of the Muſters which the King ſhall make whom GOD hath ſet ouer vs, (that is to ſay our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt) the people ſhall come vnto him willingly and with a free courage. The marke then which Dauid attributeth to all Chriſtians, whereby they may be knowen to bee Chriſtes good ſouldyers, and bee auowed to bee of his armie and company; is that they muſt preſent and offer themſelues to him, with a pure and free heart, not as folke that come by conſtraynt, or inforced as ſlaues; but as they that offer vp and dedicate themſelues wholly to him. That is the true practiſing of this doctrine, I meane as in reſpect of all priuate perſons. In deede this doctrine ought to beare ſway among the faithfull in the neceſſitie of warre: and without that, it were better for them to ſuffer their throates to be cut a hundred tymes, than once to drawe a ſworde in their owne defence, vnleſſe they goe to it with a pure conſcience, acknowledging after this manner: God alloweth and admitteth vs, and for as much as we fight vnder his guydance, hee will ſurely bee on our ſide. If a man haue not this: it were better for him a hundred thouſand times to periſh, than to ſtirre one finger towardes the ſauing of his lyfe, as it were in deſpite of GOD, hauing no leaue nor licence of him to doe it. Therefore in neceſſitie of warre, the faythfull ſhoulde bee armed with this doctrine, of ſtrengthening themſelues in GOD, and of calling vppon his name without doubt or feare. But wee (as I ſayde afore) 1.Pet.5.8. Rom.8.7. haue a continuall warfare all our lyfe long, bycauſe Satan neuer ceaſſeth, and wee haue ſinne fighting againſt vs, yea and euen within vs. We neede not goe farre to incounter with our enemyes: for looke howe many thoughtes and affections wee haue in our nature; ſo many enemyes haue we againſt GOD, which procure the deſtruction of our ſoules. Then ſtandeth vs it in hande to bee diſpoſed to fight. And how may that bee doone? If wee knowe not the ſuccour that GOD vouchſafeth to giue vs, ſurely wee ſhall bee put to the foyle at euery turne. For why? How great is our weakeneſſe, as I ſaide afore? Needes muſt wee bee aſtraught or rather vtterly blockiſh; for wee are not able to make any reſiſtaunce. Beſides this, our enemie is Prince of the world, Eph.6.12. & Rom.7.14. ſinne holdeth vs as it were in his bondes and cordes, and wee cannot ſcape from him except GOD ſet vs free. So then let vs learne that our Lorde calleth vs to himſelfe, to the ende wee ſhould bee confirmed, and fight valiauntly vppon aſſurance of his helpe. But doe wee ſo? Can wee call vppon our GOD? Can wee aſſure our ſelues that hee will aſſiſt vs? Wee ought to reſort vnto him with a pure and free heart, and to chooſe to be beſeeged with infinite perilles, and to indure ſore aſſaultes: rather than to bee at reſt and to haue him farre from vs, ſo as hee ſhould not bee our head, nor our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt be our King. Therefore although it bee a hard and painfull ſtate to the fleſhe, yet let vs chooſe this condition, namely: to fight vnder Chriſtes Standard, and to appeare at the day of his muſters rather than to ſit idle at home and to doe him no ſeruice. Nowe this day of muſters is all the tyme of our life, yea and alſo of our death. For looke howe oft we be exerciſed by diuers temptations; ſo oft doth Ieſus Chriſt make his muſters in vs. It is not for naught that Saint Paule ſayth hee was ſet as vppon a ſcaffould, 1.Cor.4.9. to bee ſeene by the Angels of paradiſe. Hee ſpeaketh of himſelfe and of his companions. But yet doth the ſame concerne euery one of vs, namely that GOD will haue vs to bee heere as it were to make our muſters before the Angels of heauen, that we might knowe that his looking ſo narrowly to vs after that manner, is to the end wee ſhould ſhew good example one to another. Seeing it is ſo, let vs learne to offer our ſelues to God with ſuch obedience, as wee may bee accounted of the number and company which Dauid ſpeaketh of in the forealleaged text, that is to wit, of ſuch as offer themſelues to their King with a free courage, vnconſtrained and not forced.

Nowe then foraſmuch as the ſtate of the Church is a warfare: we know that firſt of all it ſtandeth vs in hand to gather ſuch as are of a good courage, and that if we ſee any weakelings, wee muſt bee well ware that wee match not our ſelues with them: for there is infirmitie ynough in euerychone of vs, without procuring any more frõ elſewhere. Though no other body intice me to naughtineſſe, or make me cold in goodneſſe: I am Lazie and colde ynough of my ſelfe, vntill God doe heate mee and ſtrengthen mee. And therefore what a thing is it when I ſhall bee furthered in euill by my companion, and bee made the weaker by him? Seeing then that wee be to liue in this world, yee ſee howe it ſtandeth vs in hand, to take heede that wee meddle not with ſuch as may diſcourage vs. Why ſo? Becauſe we be ſubiect ynough of our ſelues to our owne luſtes, and foreward ynough to all vanities and delightes, and ready ynough to ſhrinke away from the ſeruing of God: al of vs (ſay I) are too much inclined to euill of our ſelues, without further prouocation. But now if I match my ſelfe with drunkards and gluttons, with whoremongers and ſwearers: what ſhall become of mee? Whereas I haue the ſeede of vice and ſin in mee already: will it not bee an increaſing of it, if I ſeeke occaſions of euill? Is it not a tempting of God, and a caſting of my ſelfe away? And yet ye ſee we doe it ordinarily, inſomuch as we may ſeeme to ſeeke occaſions to miſcheefe our ſelues, and if any body goe about to drawe vs from wicked companie: wee grate our teeth at him as though he did vs great wrong. But contrariwiſe wee ought to put this leſſon in vre, by thinking thus with our ſelues: God hath graunted me the grace to be of his campe, & will haue me to fight againſt ſinne, againſt the world, againſt all mine own luſtes, yea and euen againſt Satan himſelfe. In deede it is a very harde incounter: and when I haue gotten the vpper hand one day, I muſt enter into new battels againe the next day. What wil become of mee therefore, if I be not minded to play the valiant champion? Seeing I not onely find ſuch a number of impediments in mee as is pitie to thinke on, but alſo doe vtterly faint afore hand: what ſhall become of me, if my God ſtrengthen me not? But hee hath promiſed mee to doe it, and therefore I will call vpon him. Againe, when I ſee great numbers of ſtumbling blockes, and impediments that may hinder me or put mee to trouble: I will looke to the helpe which God giueth me, and that will bee ynough to make me ouercome all diſtreſſes: ſpecially if I bee guided by his holy ſpirite, that will ſuffice to repulſe all feare, and all diſtruſt that myght diſcourage mee. Were wee then wiſe and well aduiſed, wee would thinke better vppon theſe thinges than wee haue beene woont to doe: and euerie of vs woulde followe ſuch as are of good courage, and ſhewe vs good example by marching on before vs, and haue beene tryed afore in the ſeruice of GOD. With ſuch would wee keepe companie, and with ſuch would wee haue familiaritie, knowing that nothing is better than to linke in together one with another, and to keepe our ſelues occupyed in that exerciſe, ſeeing wee haue ſuch neede thereof. Thus yee ſee howe wee ought to put this ſentence in vre.

But yet it is then to bee doone moſt ſpecially, when the caſe concerneth them that ſhould ſhewe the way howe to fight, as thoſe that are in publike office, whether it bee of gouernment and execution of Iuſtice, or of preaching Gods woorde: for if faynthearted and cowardly men be put in thoſe places; what ſhall they doe but ouerthrowe all? And therefore men ought to make better choyce than they doe, when officers are to be appointed in the houſe of God, ſo as they muſt not goe and chooſe at aladuenture without conſidering who bee meete and fitte for the purpoſe, or without regarde whether they haue a good will and bee rightminded to ſerue God and to imploy themſelues as they ought to doe or no. And no maruell though oftentimes thinges be out of ſquare in the world, and that all thinges are ſeene to be out of order: for men refuſe the meanes that God offereth them. And when they ſo forſake him: it is good reaſon that they alſo ſhould bee forſaken of him, and that they ſhould finde themſelues to bee forlorne. But yet muſt wee aduiſe our ſelues the better to followe the rule that is giuen vs heere, and euery of vs muſt haue a regarde of himſelfe to gather courage: and if we be faintharted, we may bee ſure that it is not for vs to bee of the armie and companie of GOD. What is to bee doone then? The Miniſters muſt doe as the Prophet Eſay commaundeth them, that is to ſay, they muſt ſtrengthen the weake kneees, and Eſa.35.3.

incourage the weake heartes. For the right vſe of Gods woord is, that when wee ſee mens handes quake and their knees ſhake, wee muſt rayſe them vp and ſtrengthen them againe by our liuely incouragements. And haue the Miniſters once doone their dewtie; euery other man alſo muſt do the lyke, as the Apoſtle ſayth Hebr.13.12. in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. For this text of Eſayes is alleaged there, to ſhew that not onely ſuch as haue the charge to preach Gods word muſt ſtrengthen the weake: but alſo that euery man muſt doe the lyke towardes himſelfe. Therefore let vs examine our owne weakeneſſe. And where as wee ſee our ſelues ſo feeble: let vs knowe that God hath giuen vs a good helpe by his woord. Let vs applye his promiſes to our vſe, that when we feele our knees ſhake wee muſt quicken them vp; and when our handes quake we muſt ſtrengthen them, and our hearts muſt be ſo fenced with conſtancie and courage, as wee may not bee afrayde to offer our ſelues to the incounter, as they that are ſure that our Lorde goeth before vs, ſo as wee ſhall be backed by him, and his grace ſhal neuer fayle vs: and that moreouer our neighbours bee led to him by our example, ſo as wee may with one common accorde bee ſtrengthened to fight againſt Satan, hauing Chriſt for our head, who guideth and gouerneth vs in all incounters and aſſaultes which we haue to indure; vntill he haue taken vs vp into his heauenly reſt.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them better, & to forgiue vs them, and to gouerne vs henceforth in ſuch wiſe, as wee may bee the better diſpoſed to fight vnder him and vnder his hande, vntill wee haue gotten the victorie againſt all our enimies, and haue inioyed the fruite of our victorie, being gathered all togither vnto him. And ſo let vs al ſay. Almighty God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xix. of December. 1555.

The Cxviij. Sermon, which is the third vpon the twentith Chapter.

10 When thou commeſt neere any Citie to fight againſt it, thou ſhalt offer it peace.

11 And if they aunſwere thee peaceably, and open vnto thee, al the people that is in it ſhall bee tributarie vnto thee and ſerue thee.

12 But if they will not make peace with thee, but make warre with thee: then ſhalt thou lay ſeege to it.

13 And the Lord thy God will giue it into thy handes. Thou ſhalt ſlea all the males in it with the edge of the ſword.

14 But the women, the children, and the cattel, and al that is in the Citie beſides, and all the ſpoile thereof thou ſhalt take to thy ſelfe: and thou ſhalt eat the ſpoyle of thine enimies which the Lord thy God giueth thee.

15 After that manner ſhalt thou doe to all the Cities that are farre off from thee, which are not of the Cities of this nation.

16 But of the Cities of the nations which the Lord thy God giueth thee to inherite, thou ſhalt not leaue any ſoule aliue.

17 But thou ſhalt vtterly deſtroy thẽ: namely the Hethites, the Amorrhites, the Chananites, the Phereſites, the Hiuites and the Iebuſites, as the Lord thy God hath commaunded thee:

18 Leaſt they teach you to doe according to all the abhominations which they haue done to their gods, and ſo you ſinne againſt the Lord your God.

IT might well ſeeme at the firſt bluſhe, that wee haue no great need to haue ẏ doctrine expounded to vs which is conteyned heere; bycauſe it declareth howe men ought to beehaue themſelues in warfare. But when all is well looked vppon, wee ſhall finde that wee may gather good and profitable fruite to our inſtruction, of the thinges that GOD hath commaunded his people heere. For firſt wee ſee what a care hee had to teach thoſe of whome hee had taken charge, that they myght knowe howe to behaue themſelues in all thinges. Nowe ſeeing that GOD hath ſuch a care: let vs learne to walke in his obedience, not doubting but wee ſhall finde ſufficient inſtruction in his worde, whereby to rule our whole lyfe well. I ſay that all they which yeeld themſelues teachable vnto GOD, and are ready to faſhion themſelues after his will, ſhall finde ſufficient in his worde wherewith to guide themſelues aright without any want at all; inſomuch that whereas men are diſordered in their dealinges, and knowe not what to doe: the cauſe thereof is, that they ſubmit not themſelues wholly to GOD, but take counſell by themſelues, and runne gadding heere and there, whereas all they that ſeeke to be taught by Gods worde, as well in matters of ſtate as in priuate matters, and as well in time of warre as in tyme of peace, ſhall finde a perfect doctrine and ſuch as is fitte for them. The thing then which wee haue to marke vpon this text, is that GOD woulde not faile them in any one point, whom he had taken into his tuition.

But there is yet more. For it may well ſeeme that where open warre is, there all thinges ſhould bee put to hauocke. But our Lorde ment to ſhewe, that all his ſeruauntes muſt alwayes brydle themſelues, yea euen where they ſeeme to haue moſt exceſſiue lybertie, to breake the bondes of all humanitie and vprightneſſe. GOD ſheweth that ſuch as belong to him muſt euen in thoſe caſes keepe and mayntayne themſelues vndefiled; ſo as howeſoeuer the worlde goe, they muſt ſtande in continuall awe, that no extremitie may driue them beyond their bondes, but that they holde them ſtill to this ground; Wee muſt obey GOD. True it is that euen the heathen coulde skill to ſay, that euen in tyme of warre it was not Lawefull to aſſault or beſeege a Towne, vntill they had offered it conditions of peace. But yet wee ſee there was nothing but furie and crueltie: for as ſoone as they were entered into armes, they bare themſelues in hand that it was Lawfull for them to beare all thinges downe before them without ſparing. GOD then ment to ſhewe heere, that his people ought to bee ſo courteous as to ſpare their enemies, euen in tyme of warre. That is the thing which is conteyned heere. A man ſhall finde in the bookes of the heathen, that they alſo commended this vprightneſſe, that although there was iuſt cauſe of warre; yet the ſhedding mans bloode was to bee forborne; but this rule was not well kept. And howeſoeuer the caſe ſtande, our Lorde hath heere ſeparated his people from all the reſt of the worlde, ſhewing that they which are led by his worde, muſt looke more ſtraitely and narrowly to themſelues, than they that followe their naturall inclination, and are not taught as they ſhould be.

And nowe let vs come to the doctrine that is conteyned heere. It is ſayde, When thou commeſt to a Citie to beſeege it, thou ſhalt offer them peace: and if they yeeld or bee willing to fall to compoſition, thou ſhalt receiue them to mercie, ſo as no bloud ſhall bee ſhedde. The inhabitants ſhall but onely bee ſubiect to thee and pay thee Tribute. In ſo ſaying GOD ſheweth that although there bee iuſt cauſe of warre, yet muſt not men bee ſo whot and fierie at the firſt daſhe, as to put all to the ſwoord and ſlaughter: For howeſoeuer the worlde goe, men are created Gen.9.6. after the Image of GOD: and there muſt we beholde our nature. Wherefore it muſt needes bee that wee are caryed away from all reaſon, if the ſame withholde vs not, and that wee haue no pitie of thoſe which are our owne fleſhe and bones, and which beare Eſa.58.7. the marke of our GOD, euen of the ſame GOD which hath faſhioned vs after his own lykeneſſe. If this (ſay I) bee not able to aſſwage our paſſions, which myght carie vs away to crueltie: it muſt needes be ſayde that wee bee bereft of all reaſon, and woorſe than the brute beaſts, which knowe their owne kinde, and doe not ſo deadly purſue one another. That is the thing which wee haue to marke in the firſt place. And hereof we may gather a good leſſon expedient for vs all. For heere God ſpeaketh of thoſe againſt whom he armeth his people. But we cannot ſay the like of our enemies. If a man haue done me all the wrong that is poſſible, yea and haue euen ſought my death: yet doeth not that arme me to be auenged of him: God doeth not giue mee leaue to requite like for like, but I am commanded to render good for euill. Howbeit the caſe ſtandeth otherwiſe with Princes and Magiſtrates which haue the ſword: for God Rom.12.19. hath ſet them in his owne ſtead to execute vengeance. Ye ſee then that heere is a people armed with Gods authoritie, as if God had ſayde, draw your ſwords, for I diſpence with you at this tyme, ſo as ye may ſlea your enimies, and it ſhall not be layde to your charge for a cryme. When a warre is rightfull, and God giueth men leaue: it is a permiſſion or priuilege which he granteth them. And yet for all that he will not haue men to goe to it at alauenture, but that they ſhoulde ſeeke peace, and abſtayn from ſhedding of bloud if it be poſſible, ſo as no man may be hurt or wounded in his perſon. Seeing that God wil haue men to brydle themſelues after that manner in the tyme of warre, I pray you what is to bee doone where our handes are ſo tyed vp, as it is not lawfull to giue our enimie a philluppe, but to loue them rather, that haue grieued vs or wrought vs Matt.5.44. any wrong or iniury? Ought we not to offer them peace, & to be al ready to receiue them to mercy when we ſee them willing to be reconciled to vs? So then, ſeeing that euen in the tyme of warre, when all thinges ſeeme to be lawfull, our Lorde will haue vs to offer peace to them that haue dealt amiſſe with vs and haue deſerued to be puniſhed in their bodies: Seeing (I ſay) that God will haue vs to ſeeke meanes to ſaue them, and that wee ſhould not deale rigorouſly with them:

much more ought euery of vs in our owne priuat caſes, to be inclined to beare with our aduerſaries. If we be troubled and moleſted, ſo as we haue iuſt cauſe to the worldwarde, to purſue the iniurie doone vs: yet ought wee rather to fall to compoſition, if it be poſſible: And if we doe not, what excuſe will there bee for vs? If thoſe whom God hath armed againſt their enemies, may not ſtrike one ſtroke at them vntill they haue aſſaied to make peace with them: what ſhall become of vs who ought to be men of peace, and to loue our enemies; if we be vnreconcilable, fierce as Lyons, harde as ſteele, and ſuch as can bee brought to none attonement? Muſt it not needes be ſaid that we haue ſhaken off all feare of God? Yes: and yet we ſee howe men doe ſooth themſelues in this caſe. Inſomuch that if a man bee grieued; he is ſo far off from warning ẏ offender of his fault quietly, to bring him to good attonement againe; that (to all lykelyhoode) he will rather turne the whole world vpſide downe, than he will by any meanes be reconciled. Wee ſee that this wilfull ſtubbornneſſe is vtterly paſt amendment in moſt men. And ſo wee perceiue now what fruite wee ought to reape of this text: namely that although he ſpeake of warre, yet he giueth good inſtruction to his people and to euery of vs.

And therefore let vs remember, that whenſoeuer any man hath offended vs, wee muſt as much as in vs lyeth indeuour to fall to agreement with our enemyes. As howe? By warning them of their faultes. For reconciliation preſuppoſeth that the offender ſhoulde vnderſtande his offence and miſlike thereof, and that wee ſhoulde bee ready to receiue ſuch as are ſo minded, ſo as wee ſhoulde bee deſirous to bee at one with them as with our brethren, notwithſtanding that they had beene as enemyes to vs before ſo much as in them lay. And if wee ought to yeelde this courteſie towardes them that haue broken the bond of all peace and brotherly vnitie: howe much more ſhould wee maintayne peace and concorde with our neighbours that haue not doone vs any wrong? And ſo wee muſt come by degrees, euen to Rom.12.18 the procuring of our peace with all men as much as wee can poſſibly, bicauſe it is Gods will that all men ſhoulde bee linked together in one bonde; as in very deede the nature ẏ is common to vs all, ought to bee as a common kinred to vs all. Nowe then, ſeeing it is ſo that wee ought to maintayne peace and brotherly loue among vs: let vs ſee that we offer peace to all men, not onely in wordes, but alſo in ſuch wiſe as our life may beare record that we be deſirous of nothing more than to be friendes to all men. Inſomuch that if there happen any quarel, wee muſt not miniſter occaſion thereunto, nor kindle the fire on our behalfe, but ſo refraine our ſelues, as wee prouoke not our neyghbour to enmitie. Thus yee ſee howe after the order aforementioned, wee muſt come to the doctrine which the holy Scripture ſheweth vs in other places: That is to wit, that it muſt not bee long of vs that wee bee not as brothers to al men, and that wee communicate not together, without any iarring or diſagreement. That (ſay I) is the meane and maner to offer peace accordingly as GOD commaundeth. And nowe let vs proceede to that which followeth.

When a Citie will not receiue peace, God giueth his people leaue to deſtroy all the men, reſeruing onely the young Children, the women, and the Cattell. True it is that although a Citie fall to compoſition, yet will hee haue it to become tributarie. For (as I ſayde afore) hee preſuppoſeth that the warre muſt bee rightfull, and allowed by him, as made in his name and by his authoritie. And therefore it is not to bee wondered at though he lay trybute vpon thoſe that ſubmit themſelues. For why? It is as a penaltie. Lyke as in Miniſtration of Iuſtice, men puniſhe offenders according to the Lawe; and when the caſe requireth not the puniſhment of death, there is ſome other chaſtiſement or amercement layde vppon them for a penaltie: Euen ſo our Lorde giueth leaue to ſuch as haue iuſt tytle of warre, to lay ſome correction vppon thoſe whom they ſhall haue vanquiſhed and ſubdewed. And heerein wee ſee howe we ought to take good heede, that wee giue no cauſe of warre. For whereas wee ſee our Lorde hath giuen his people leaue to lay trybute vppon others, it is all one as if hee ſhoulde ſay that all ſuch as miniſter occaſion of trouble, are to bee puniſhed, and that if they bee borne with, it is but of fauour and courteſie: but yet are they woorthy to haue ſome correction for all that.

Therefore let vs learne heereby to bee ſo peaceable, as wee moue not any trouble or diſcord on our ſide. For by ſetting downe ſuch a Lawe, GOD hath ſhewed that whoſoeuer ſoweth any diſcord among men, or procureth any trouble, deſerueth alwayes to bee puniſhed; and that although hee bee ſpared, yet hee is to bee chaſtiſed after ſome ſorte neuertheleſſe. And although warre bee not made againſt vs, nor any tribute bee layde vppon vs: yet notwithſtanding wee muſt not therefore omitte to acknowledge our ſelues faultie before GOD. For if a whole Nation bee not ſpared: what ſhall a priuate perſon bee? I ſee that GOD condemneth a whole Citie or a Countrie: and what will become of mee, when I ſhall haue kindled the fire of diſcorde, and giuen occaſion of enmitie? Am not I much more worthy to bee condemned? Is it meete that I which am but one man, ſhoulde bee more borne with than a whole Nation? This therefore ought to bee a good warning to vs, to liue in peace and to maintaine myeldeneſſe, ſo as no man bee troubled or vexed by vs. For ſith wee ſee ſo ſharpe execution, that God giueth leaue to put the men to death, and to reſerue ẏ women to bondage and ſlauerie: is it not a thing that ought to make vs afraide? Yes: and this doeth vs to vnderſtande, that when ſwoordes are once drawen, there muſt needs be horrible confuſion, and it is not poſſible to remedie it. For it is GOD that ſpeaketh heere, and hee ſetteth downe the beſt order of gouernment among his people, that is poſſible to bee founde: and yet ſo horrible is that kynde of dealing, that when a Citie is aſſaulted and taken by force, all the men muſt bee deſtroyed. Surely ſuch ſhedding of bloud ought to make the hayre to ſtande vp vppon our heades. And yet for all that it is GOD that ſpeaketh it, and (as I ſayde afore) hee intendeth to ſet downe heere the perfecteſt Lawe of armes that can bee among men. Then let vs conclude, that if warre bee once kindled, there is no remedye to appeaſe it. And therefore it behooueth men to haue the more ſtaye of themſelues beforehande, and to conſider thus: What a thing is it to come to battell, wherein ſo manie murders are to bee committed, and ſo manie ſlaughters are to bee doone, as though the whole world ſhoulde goe to confuſion, and all bondes of nature were to bee forgotten, and men ſhoulde ſhutte their eyes wilfully to the intent they myght not ſee whether the folke whome they ſo murther bee men or no? Ought it not to bee a good brydle to vs, when wee ſee ſo great enormities inſue thereof? Let ſuch as take warres in hande looke well to themſelues, and bethinke them thus: What? Peraduenture I muſt come to the ſacking of a Citie: and ſo from one to another, and battell vppon battell ſhall bee fought. What a nomber of poore widowes and fatherleſſe children ſhall bee made thereby? What a heape of confuſions wil inſue thereof, ſo as ye woulde thinke that the worlde ſhould bee turned vpſide downe? And ſhall I bee the cauſe of all this? If Princes conſidered that they ſhoulde fall into ſuch extremities by taking warres in hande, ſurely they would deale much more myldly than they doe.

But if they benefite not themſelues thereby, yet let vs looke to our ſelues, and conſider that the miſchiefe which our Lord ſheweth vs to bee in warre, may alſo befall to priuate perſons. For when two men fall at variaunce, and runne out into heates of euill ſpeeches, ſtrypes will enſue of it, and when ſwoordes bee once drawen, bloudſhed doeth lyghtly followe after. And in this caſe there is no lawfulneſſe at all: it is not as when God giueth men leaue to kill their enemyes in battell: for whoſoeuer ſleaeth a man for any priuate quarell, is a murtherer. So then, wee muſt looke neerelyer to our ſelues, and eſchewe quarels and debates the more, knowing that it is a giuing way and an opening of a gappe to Satan, that hee may raygne among vs, whenſoeuer wee ſeeke occaſions of quarelling, or when wee ſhunne them not as we ought to doe.

Yee ſee then howe the warning which wee haue to gather vppon this text, is that ſeeing GOD hath giuen leaue (as it were of force and neceſſitie) to kill ſuch as reſiſt the aſſault of a Towne: it behooueth vs to take good heede, that quarelles, troubles, and contentions proceede not ſo farre through our faulte, as there is none other remedie but the ſhedding of bloud. For if wee be ſlaine in any ſuch fray, vnhappie bee wee; and if wee chaunce to ſlea our aduerſarie, vnhappie bee we ſo too. For wee ſee that GODS ſpirit beareth not the ſway in that caſe. True it is, that if a man that is aſſaulted, doe ſlea him that aſſaulteth him, hee ſhall not bee puniſhed for it, neyther ought hee to bee: but yet is hee not excuſable before GOD. For why? Who is hee that can ſo brydle himſelfe, that hee is not inflamed with choler, or with ſome exceſſiue and inordinate paſſion? Seeing then that ſuch thinges doe raigne in vs, wee bee blame woorthie though wee haue iuſt cauſe to doe it. For it is not ynough for vs to haue a good caſe; but it muſt alſo bee well ordered, that is to ſay, it muſt bee done with a quiet minde, ſo as wee proceede not into ſuch extremitie as to commit manſlaughter. And therefore let vs learne to preuent Sathan, and to ſeeke meanes of attonement, that our quarelles may not proceede into ſhedding of bloud.

Beſides this, wee haue alſo one other leſſon to gather, namely that if there bee any agreement among vs, or any meane of reconcilement whereas wee were deadly enemyes before: the cauſe thereof is, that God ſtabliſheth a holy brotherhood among vs, by calling vs to him, and by adopting vs to bee his children. And in that reſpect is the Goſpell called the meſſage of peace. For why? Eph.6.15. Whereas we bee at warre with GOD, and he muſt needes hate vs in as much as wee be corrupted, and there is nothing in vs but vtter curſedneſſe: hee vouchſafeth to become our friend, and receiuing vs as his owne children, promiſeth to forget and to burie all our faults. The Goſpell beareth vs recorde hereof. And therefore not without cauſe is it called the doctrine of peace, ſeeing it vniteth vs againe to our GOD. Sith it is ſo, wee ought in deede likewiſe to bee at one among our ſelues. For howe is it poſſible that GOD ſhould acknowledge vs for his children, if there bee not vnitie and agreement among vs? And if wee receyue not the ſayde meſſage, then muſt greater warre bee proclaymed againſt vs than euer there was afore. And therefore our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſayde to his Diſciples, Into whatſoeuer houſe yee enter, greete the ſame with peace. For (as I ſayde afore) it is the propertie of the doctrine of ſaluation, to ſhewe that God is minded to come vnto vs and to receiue vs to mercie though wee bee not woorthie thereof. Therfore all the Miniſters of his word are commaunded to beare witneſſe thereof: and to tell men that if they refuſe it, caſt it off, and make none account of it; there is a harder battel towards than this is. For the caſe concer-neth not the deſtruction of their bodies onely, but alſo of their ſoules. It is not onelie the males that ſhall bee ſlaine for it; but both males and females muſt paſſe vnſpared. Not the greate ones onely ſhall beare the puniſhment, but both great and ſmall ſhall feele the whole weight of Gods vengeaunce. Nowe then, if men accept not your peace, gette you out from among Matt.10.14 them, and ſhake the duſt off your feete. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, Such folk are ſo accurſed, that yee muſt not haue anie thing at all to doe with them. But for aſmuch as they carrie nothing about them but infection; yee muſt ſhewe by outwarde tokens, that yee woulde faine bee ſeparated from them, euen as it were into another world. Thus ye ſee how the things that are ſpoken here concerning the law of armes, ought to be applied in way of ſimilitude to the peace which our Lorde ſendeth vs by the preaching of Rom.8.7. his Goſpell. For there was enmitie betweene

Eph.2.3.12 him and vs before: by nature (as I haue ſaid al-2.Cor.5.20. readie) we be all ſtranngers to our God, and we cannot but ſet our ſelues againſt him. Yet for all this, hee ſeeketh attonement with vs. Vppon what condition? Not that we ſhoulde pay him tribute, as though hee were minded to inrich himſelfe with our goods. True it is that hee liketh wel to haue vs to ſerue him: but ẏ is for our benefite and welfare, and not for anie aduauntage to himſelfe. For hee hath no want of anie thing, neither needeth he to be inriched: but by poſſeſſing vs, he would that wee likewiſe ſhould inherite him. And that is as amiable a condition as can be. Nowe what is to bee doone, but to receiue his peace? Yea verily: and therefore let vs not tarie til God inforce vs; but let vs preuent him, by imbracing the ineſtimable prerogatiue which he offereth vs in vouchſafing to forgiue vs all our ſinnes. But if wee be ſo wretched as to refuſe ſo great a benefite: let vs mark that wee bee not onely caſt vp as it were to the ſpoile, and that GOD ſhaketh vs quite & cleane off: but alſo that his wrath muſt needes bee vttered vppon vs, becauſe of ſuch vnthankfulnes and churliſhneſſe, in deſpiſing our GOD ſo wilfully and ſtubbornely, that wee had leuer to haue him our deadly enemy than our protector. Seeing then that his intent is not to haue vs as ſubiects that are conquered by right of warre, nor to raiſe tributes vpon vs to increaſe himſelfe withall; but to reigne ouer vs for our welfare; and yet wee will not abide it, but ſhake him off vtterly and purſue him ſtill with a venemous heart to prouoke him to anger: is not our deſeruing ſuch as hee may iuſtlie bee ſo rigorous vnto vs, as to commaunde his ſeruauntes to withdrawe themſelues from vs, and to ſhake off the duſt of their feete? As who ſhoulde ſay, wee bee not worthie to treade vppon the earth, becauſe wee defile it. The verie thing therefore which wee haue to marke, is that wee cannot prouoke Gods wrath any way more, than by refuſing the peace that is offered vs by the Goſpell, ſo as wee vouchſafe not to hearken to it. For then, becauſe God findeth vs paſt grace, God alſo is faine to arme himſelfe with terrible and dreadfull vengeaunce againſt vs, and not onely to puniſh vs in our bodies, but alſo to extende his vengeaunce vnto our ſoules, and ſo to roote vs out quite and cleane, in which behalfe women are no more to bee ſpared than men. For when as God calleth vs all in Chriſt Ieſus, there is no difference of male and female (as ſaith Saint Paul,) but faith reconcileth vs Gal.3.28.
all vnto God. Likewiſe vnbeleefe and ſtubbornneſſe make vs enemies to God, both men and women, the puniſhment whereof extendeth both to great and ſmall. For ſeeing wee are become traitours and rebels to our God, it is good reaſon that all our whole ofſpring ſhould periſh with vs: becauſe Gods curſe lies vppon the wicked euen vnto the third and fourth generation, Deut.5.9. as the law auoweth & we haue ſeene heretofore. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to remember vpon this text.

And let vs marke herewithall, that ſeeing God doeth ſo preuent vs aforehand to ſeeke attonement and to ſende vs tydings of peace: we alſo ought to ſeeke meanes to bee friends with ſuch as haue offended vs, and to followe the example of our heauenly father, as if wee ſhoulde ſay, What ſhal become of mee who am but a worme and rottenneſſe, if I continue wilfull, and holde ſkorne to come to attonement with mine enemie when he hath once offended mee, ſo as I chawe vppon my bridle ſtill and will not by anie meanes bee pacified, when in the meane time my God ſeeketh mee? Beholde, my GOD is wel contented to ſtoope vnto mee which am but rottenneſſe: and ſhall I not withſtanding refuſe to be reconciled to him that is my fellowe and brother? Although he haue offended mee, yet can I not renounce mine one nature: yet can I not bring to paſſe but that he is ſtill a humane creature ſhaped after the image of God as well as my ſelfe. So then let vs learne to meeken our ſtomackes though they bee neuer ſo ſtout, and let this example of God induce vs to greater gentleneſſe and compaſſion than wee bee woont to haue.

Hereuppon Moſes addeth, That this lawe ſerueth but onely for the Nations that were farre off. For as for thoſe nations (ſaith he) whom God giueth you now preſently, as the Chananites, the Hethites, the Amorrhites the Phereſites, the Heuites, and the Iebuſites; all thoſe you muſt vtterlie roote out, and inherite their lande, howbeit hauing firſt purged it cleane from all abuſes. Here wee ſee howe the lawe which I haue expounded alreadie, ſerued for the time then to come when the Iſraelites ſhoulde haue any newe warre againſt ſuch as had not beene their enemies before. But as for the people of the Lande of Chanaan which God had promiſed for an inheritaunce to the Iewes: it was his wil that they ſhoulde bee vtterly rooted out, which thing at the firſt ſight might ſeeme ouerharde as I haue ſaide thereof heerebefore, [but it was not ſo indeede.] For to the intent that men ſhoulde not accuſe God of crueltie, it was ſhewed why hee vſed ſo great rigour. But foraſmuch as all of you [perchaunce] vnderſtood it not; it is requiſite to declare againe wherefore fore our Lorde commaunded all thoſe Nations to bee rooted out and to bee put to ſworde and hauocke without any mercie at all. For they were no ſuch enemies as had doone any ſpeciall wrong to the children of Iſraell, but they were enemies to God, yea and enemies alrea- Gen.15.16. die condemned euen by the ſpace of fourehundred yeares afore. True it it that the children of Iſraell had iuſt cauſe of warre againſt them, becauſe Abraham came into that coũtrie by Gods appointment to dwell there. And although GOD did not yet put him in poſſeſſion of the ſoueraigntie thereof which he had giuen vnto him: yet was it his will that hee ſhoulde bee an inhabiter of that lande. But they draue him from place to place: ſo did they alſo to his ſonne Gen.12.19. & 26.16.19. 20. Iſaac, and likewiſe to Iacob, inſomuch as they euen denied them water. Not that they went about to borrow water at their neighbours pits: but that their neighbours ſtopped vp the pittes which they had digged, and draue them from them without al humanitie. Howbeit there was yet a much higher reſpect: which was that God knowing the exceſſiue wickedneſſe of all thoſe nations to be vtterly vnreclaimable, determined to take them quite and cleane out of the world, and yet woulde not that their lande ſhoulde lie waſt without inhabitauntes: and therefore hee appointed it for an inheritaunce to his owne people. Here therefore wee muſt behold Gods ſpeciall iudgement, to the ende wee accuſe him not as I ſaide afore, ne diſpute as a number doe, which preſume to replie and to ſay, why was GOD ſo ſeuere? What cauſe had he ſo to do? To the intent therefore that wee may honour God in his iudgementes, acknowledging him to bee vpright, and iuſt, yea without fault in all thinges: let vs marke that the condemning of this people here is not without cauſe. Might not God (if he liſted) wipe vs out of the worlde euen at the firſt? And what ſhoulde we gayne by pleading agaynſt him or by going to Law with him? Nowe if hee may ſo deſtroy vs at the firſt daſh, and yet we may not complaine thereof or goe to Law with him therefore, but that he ſhall continue righteous ſtill in his puniſhing of vs: what may hee doe to vs when we be paſt grace, when he hath borne with vs long time, and patiently taried for vs, and yet wee growe euer worſe and worſe, and ceaſe not to increaſe his wrath ſtill againſt vs? If God finde vs ſo hardhearted, is not our wickedneſſe then ripe? Is it not come to the full growth, as hee ſpeaketh of theſe Nations here? Yes verily is it. For we ſee how theſe people were ſo wicked long aforehand euen in the time of Abraham, that it woulde greeue ones hearte to thinke on it, ſo as they were not to bee borne with anie longer. They ſawe what befell to Sodome and Gomor, which Gen.19.24. were their Neighbour cities; and yet they became neuer the better for it, but continued ſtill in all manner of outrageous wickedneſſe. Yet notwithſtanding, it was Gods will to holde his hand, and not to puniſhe them at the firſt. And howe long a time did hee waite for them? Not a tenne or twentie yeares onelie: but he ſaith, I haue condemned them, and giuen diffinitiue ſentence vppon them, and yet will I giue them, fourehundred yeares reſpite, ſo as Gen.15.16. I will not execute my iudgement til then. God (I ſay) deferred the execution of his iudgement againſt thoſe that were worthie to haue beene rooted out of the worlde at the verie firſt. And yet for all his long delay what commeth of it? Did they amende? Did they bethinke them of their faultes to miſlike of them and to craue forgiueneſſe at Gods hande? No: But they grewe ſtill worſe and worſe; inſomuch that the thing which God had foretolde to Abraham fell out to bee true: namely that the wickedneſſe of the Chananites was not yet as then growen to the full. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, Indeed the meaſure is full enough alreadie: but yet there muſt be ſuch an ouermeaſure, as they may come to deſtruction of themſelues, and their owne wickedneſſe may be their ouerthrow.

Sith we ſee that God did ſo refrayne himſelfe and vſe ſo mielde a kinde of proceeding towardes theſe Nations: what ſhall wee ſay, but that wee haue good cauſe to glorifie him, and to confeſſe him to bee ſo kindehearted towards mankinde, as yet notwithſtanding wee muſt not dallie with him, but liue in his feare? But if God beare with vs, wee take occaſion to mocke him for his labour, and we thinke our ſelues eſcaped when hee hath delayed his puniſhing of vs. But beholde, GOD on the one ſide is loth to giue vs anie cauſe to complaine of ouergreat rigour: and therefore hee is patient and longſuffering, as hee termeth himſelfe in the holie Scripture. Howbeit foraſmuch as wee abuſe his goodneſſe, and become the bolder to doe euill: hee ſheweth vs that wee muſt come to a reckening for it in the ende, and that hee will pay the moſt vnrulie ſorte of vs for the arrearages that he is behinde hande with vs. The thing then which wee haue to remember at the ſight of this fayre lookingglaſſe which wee haue in the Amorrhites, Hethites, Chananites, Pheresites, Iebuſites, and their like; is to conſider with our ſelues, that if GOD anie time do let men alone as though hee had layde the reines in their necke, and do wincke at them, and make no countenance at all of puniſhing them: it is no conſequent that therefore hee acquiteth them, and that nothing is regiſtred vp before him, and that their ſinnes ſhall ſcape quite and cleane vnpuniſhed. No no: but hee waiteth for them with patience, and in the ende they muſt come to their account. And therefore let it not trouble vs when we ſee ẏ our Lord puniſheth not the wicked at ẏ firſt daſh; neither let it ſpite vs to ſee them ruffle it out in the meane while, & to make good cheere: for their triumphing ſhall coſt thẽ right deare, becauſe they haue deſpiſed God; yea & euen falſely abuſed his grace, in making it a ſhrowdingſheete of their noughtineſſe. Therefore let it not be a meane to drawe vs to follow their example: but let vs patiently abide Gods leaſure til he worke, & vntill the conuenient time bee come for him to execute his wrath: and that wil ſerue vs for a double leſſon.

For on the one ſide, when wee ſee that G O D puniſheth not the wicked: we woulde by and by take part with them, if we bethought vs not of this threate. Well though G O D ſhewe not his arme to day, yet doeth it not follow but that hem ay doe it to morrowe. If wee were not reſtreyned by this feare, wee woulde ſoone be out of all order, and the verie Angels woulde be corrupted by the example of the diuelles. Marke that for one point. Againe, wee muſt bridle our affections and luſtes that carrie vs away becauſe wee bee amaſed yea and aſtoniſhed, to thinke howe G O D leaueth thoſe vnpuniſhed which haue offended him ſo ſore: and that on the contrarie part, whereas he letteth them alone, yea and giueth them full ſcope to doe what they liſt in this worlde: in the meane time hee ſeemeth to forget vs as though hee had no regarde of vs at al. [Wherupon we think thus with our ſelues:] If wee be his children, where is the pitie that he hath promiſed vs? Such complaint doe they make, which haue not an eye to Gods longſufferance. And ſo the ſeconde leſſon which he ſhoulde receiue, is that ſeeing wee perceiue that our Lorde taried ſo long a time for thoſe nations which had offended him as highlie as could be, and we ſee him delay their puniſhment ſo long a time, that their ſins ſeemed to lie buryed by the ſpace of fourehundred yeares, and that yet neuertheleſſe God executeth his ſentence at the ende of thoſe fower hundred yeares, which was foure times beyonde the remembrance of men: Let the beholding hereof make vs to feare the rigour of our God afarre off: and though no tokens of his wrath appeare; yet let not vs fayle to foreſee them by faith. As for example; when Hebr.11.7. yͤ Apoſtle ſpeaketh of Noe, he ſaith that he foreſawe the flud by faith. While men were ſotted in their delightes, and gaue themſelues to feaſting; Noe behelde the fludde. And howe behelde he it? For it was yet faire weather, and euerie man tooke his pleaſure and paſtime. Yet did hee ſee all the worlde drowned and deſtroyed: For hee ſawe it by faith, becauſe God had threatened that it ſhoulde bee ſo. Nowe, the ſame threate haue we, and therewithall wee haue the proofe of it alſo, euen in this, that our Lorde puniſhed theſe nations that are ſpoken of here, at the end of fourehundred yeares, when they thought not of it, ne tooke anie heed of it, inſomuch that if a man had then threatened them any ſuch thing, they woulde haue blurted out their tongues and ſhaken their heads at him. But their inditement was framed in heauen, iudgement was giuen vpon them alreadie, and the Iudge had power & might to put it in execution in ſpite of their wilfull ſtubborneſſe. And therefore let the ſight hereof make vs to ſtand in awe of our God. And when he letteth vs alone in quiet, and ſpareth vs, let vs not thinke our ſelues to bee ſcaped his hande: but let vs enter into account, and euerie man quicken vp himſelfe, and looke into his owne faults, and that in ſuch wiſe as we may preuent his wrath, and let vs not tarie till he be armed againſt vs to proclayme war againſt vs, but let vs preuent the rigor of his iudgement, that by comming vnto him, whereas we ſhoulde elſe finde him our Iudge in the end, wee may finde him to bee our pitifull and kinde hearted father.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them continually more and more. And for aſmuch as there is none of vs which hath not prouoked his wrath exceedingly, ſo as we be all guiltie before him; let vs ſeeke to returne to the refuge of his mercie. And ſeeing there is no meanes to come at him except he reach vs out his hande and drawe vs by his holy ſpirit: let vs not refuſe to goe to him when he calleth vs, nor tarie till yͤ gate be ſhut againſt vs: but let vs vſe the opportunitie of the time when he cauſeth his Goſpell to be preached vnto vs, and let vs imbrace our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt with the peace which he offereth vs, reſorting to his death and paſſion, that we may haue him for the gage of our righteouſneſſe, and the verie raunſome whereby to come in fauor with our God againe, ſo as all our ſinnes may be buried through his mercie, and we labour to drawe others alſo vnto him, that all of vs with one common accord may tend vnto our God, and he be ſerued and worſhipped of al mē. And for the bringing hereof to paſſe, it may pleaſe him to raiſe vp true and faithfull miniſters of his worde, &c.

On Fryday the xx. of December. 1555.

The Cxix. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the twentith Chapter.

16.17.18 But of the Cities of &c.

19 When thou ſhalt haue beſeeged a Citie a long time, in fighting againſt it to take it, thou ſhalt not marre the trees therof by putting an Axe vnto them: for thou maiſt eate of them, and therefore cut them not downe: for the life of man is the tree of the feelde to come with thee to the ſeege.

20 Onely thou maiſt deſtroy and cut downe the trees which thou knoweſt to be no trees to eate of,and thereof thou maiſt make bulwarkes againſt the Citie which holdeth warre againſt thee,vntil thou haue wonne it.

Yeſterday was ſhewed why God gaue ſo rigorous ſentence againſt the Nations that had dwelte in the Lande of Chanaan: It was tolde you that hee had borne with them ere that time, and ſuffered them till ſuch time as they were condemned: and thereupon that we muſt benefite our ſelues by ſuch examples, partlie that wee abuſe not Gods patience when hee ſpareth vs and delayeth the execution of his iudgements; giuing vs leaſure in the meane while to returne to repentaunce: and [partly] Rom.2.4. that when wee ſee him execute ſo extreeme rigour vppon men, we ſhoulde aſſure our ſelues it is becauſe hee knoweth them to bee vtterly paſt grace, and haue heaped vp ſuch condemnation vppon their heades a long time afore hande. Now remaineth to note that GOD appointed the Iewes to bee the executers of the ſaide ſentence, ſo as the Chananites and ſuch like were to bee rooted out by the hande of the Iewes. And why? It is ſaide expreſſely in the Text, As the Lorde thy God hath commaunded thee. Then was it not for the Iewes to enterpriſe it on their owne heade, except they had had Gods worde for their warrant: for it is not lawfull for vs to attempt anie thing, vnleſſe it bee our duetie, and that God haue commaunded it. And it is a generall rule for vs to beare in minde and to obſerue all our life long. For men may doe goodly and commendable thinges, which notwithſtanding ſhall not bee reputed for vertues before God, when they paſſe their boundes, that is to ſay, when they holde not themſelues within the liſtes of that which God hath vttered vnto them. For if a man ſhoulde ſay, It were good to doe thus,and therefore I will applie my ſelfe thereto; and yet in the meane while God calleth him not to it,neither hath he anie word yͭ commands him to deale ſo:his vnaduiſed aduēturing vpon things after that ſort, ſhall alwayes be condemned at Gods hand. If we alledge that the deede is good and excellent of it ſelfe, that is not enough:for god wilbe obeied at our hands whatſoeuer come thereof. And therfore let euery man haue an eye to himſelfe & conſider how farre his duety wil beare him. If a man that hath but a little houſehold to gouerne ſhould take vpon him the office of a magiſtrate: what were to bee ſaide vnto it? There would be verie great confuſion in that. Likewiſe if he that is a ſeruant in a houſe ſhould take more vppon him than belonges to him, yee ſee that all were out of order. Againe if the wife ſhoulde ouermaſter her huſband, and make him her vnderling; yͤ honeſtie of nature were quite goone. So then, it behooueth all men to holde themſelues warely within their boundes, and to followe what way ſoeuer God calleth them. And when we haue Gods commādement, we muſt not be helde back nor letted by men. If God bid vs goe, we muſt goe, & though all the worlde ſhould ſet themſelues againſt vs, yet muſt wee not turne head, but goe on ſtill. As for example, in theſe dayes the Magiſtrates & miniſters of Iuſtice haue the ſworde in their hand, and that not in vaine (as ſaith Saint Paul) Rom.13.4. for God wil haue them to puniſh offenders. Now if they do nothing therein, and yet in the meane ſeaſon will needes alledge ſome excuſe to God: they deceiue themſelues. For in aſmuch as our Lorde hath ſet them in office, he hath tolde thē alſo that hee will haue them to be ſtout and full of courage in maintaining their ſtate. And ſo looke what commaundement was giuen to all the Iewes in olde time for the rooting out of the Phereſites, Amorrhites, Chananites, Iebuſites, and their like, the ſame is giuen to all miniſters of Iuſtice at this day: namely that they muſt rid the earth of all ſuch as do nothing elſe but bring vp all maner of infection. As for vs, it is not ſaide to vs that wee ſhall roote out and put to death ſuch as may put vs to any plunge: and therefore let euerie of vs looke to the rooting out of our owne vices, for we ſhall haue an incounter hard enough there.

And beſides this, let vs beware alſo that wee haue not to doe with ſuch as may corrupte and marre vs: for we be but too forward of our owne nature. For like as it was ſaide to the Iewes, you ſhall put the Chananites to death: ſo let vs ſhun the companie of ſuch as wil intice vs to nothing but euill, nor can doe aught elſe than prouoke vs to naughtineſſe. For wee bee as frayle as is poſſible, and the leaſt occaſion in the world will thruſt vs out of the way, and make vs to leaue God behinde vs, as hath bin declared not long ſince afore. And moreouer, let vs to the vttermoſt of our power indeuour to rid Gods Church of all ſuch as could finde in their hearts to ouerthrowe the order of the Church and Gods ſeruice, and all honeſtie. As for example, when S. Paul ſaith, rid away the euil from among you, he 1.Cor.5.13. commaundeth not the Corinthians to vſe the material ſword for the puniſhing of ſuch as haue committed anie crime: for they were not in eſtate of Magiſtrates: but he meaneth excommunication, ſo as if a man be found to be a whoremaſter, a drunkerde, or a ſwearer, he ſhould not be borne with all. For why? It were a corrupting of Gods church which ought to be his holy temple, & it is a making therof a ſwineſtie. Shold filthines lie there? & what a dealing were that? Therefore wee muſt cut off all ſuch folke as leade a wicked and laweleſſe life. And that is the leſſon which wee haue to gather vppon that Text. For wee haue not the ſworde in our handes to kill the deſpiſers of GOD and ſuch as leade an vnrulie and diſordered life. But yet muſt we caſt them out from among vs, and therewithall remember the warning that is giuen vs in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. Take Hebr.12.15 good heede (ſaith the Apoſtle) that there growe vp no roote of bitterneſſe among you, leaſt it be a meane to infect all the reſt. Experience ſheweth that there needeth but a verie little corruption to marre all, by reaſon of the infirmitie that is in men. And therefore let vs learne to remedie the matter, that wee bee not an occaſion to feede vice ſtill. The way then for vs to bring to paſſe that the Church of God may be mainteyned in all pureneſſe of his ſeruice, is that ſtumblingblockes bee not nouriſhed and mainteyned, and alſo that euerie of vs indeuour to roote out vice in all men, ſparing the perſons themſelues, and doing the beſt we can to drawe them to ſaluation. Whereas the Iewes were commanded to kill the Chananites: what ought wee to doe inſteede thereof? I ſee a leawde man running into deſtruction; & yet notwithſtanding he woulde bee borne withall, and flattered, and haue neuer a worde ſpoken to him. Againſt ſuch a one I muſt vſe rigor. And how ſo? To bring him to ſhame? No, not if it may otherwiſe bee. Truely if hee holde on, and continue ſtubborne againſt God, hee muſt needs become the more vnexcuſable, and wee muſt procure his ſoulehealth euen by rebuking him ſharpely, as it were by letting of him bloud, or by miniſtring ſome loothſome medicine vnto him. Thus yee ſee howe wee muſt ſpare mens perſons and yet kill their vices to yͤ vttermoſt of our power. And in that reſpect doth Saint Paul liken yͤ doctrine Pſal,2.17. of the Goſpell to a ſworde wherewith wee bee ſacrificed to God. For the mortifying of our wicked affections is an offering of ſacrifice vnto God: and whereas wee were vnholy before, thenceforth we be dedicated vnto him when we be ſo brought downe, that we liue no more after our owne luſtes, but doe vtterly renounce our ſelues. Yee ſee then that that is one kinde of death, which is not wrought vppon our perſons, but vpon al the vices that reigne in vs. And after that maner ought we to deale for the rooting out of ſinne.

Nowe if it bee demaunded heere, whether it bee not lawefull to bee conuerſant with the wicked and frowarde to winne them: I aunſwere, yes verilie, vntill a man finde them to bee paſt remedie. For to giue ouer a man at the firſt daſh when hee hath doone amiſſe, or when hee is as it were in the high way to deſtruction: is a furthering of the deſtruction of the wretched ſoule that was redeemed by the bloudſhed of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. So then, a man may well labour to bring them backe agayne which are ſtrayed out of the right way: but yet muſt wee not hazard ourſelues. If I knowing my ſelfe to bee weake, doe ouerthrowe my ſelfe with him vnder pretence of winning my neighbour that is miſaduiſed: what winne I by that? And yet wee ſee it fall out ſo continually. And therefore let vs beware how we tempt God in that behalfe, and let euery of vs look narrowly to himſelfe, and not deale after his owne imagination.

Notwithſtanding let vs herewithall put in vre the ſaying of the Pſalme concerning the hating Pſal.139.20 of all ſuch as deſpiſe GOD, yea and of hating them in ſuch wiſe as we cannot by any meanes abide them, but that foraſmuch as we ſee them deſpiſe God after that faſhion, wee bee ſo ſorie and greeued at it, that wee ſeparate our ſelues from them, and vtterly ſhunne their companie, refuſing euen in good earneſt to haue anie conference with them: according whereunto it is ſaide in the next verſe of the ſame Pſalme, that Pſal.139.21 wee muſt beare a perfect hatred againſt all ſuch as doe ſo make warre againſt God, ſo as we become their deadlie enemies to the vttermoſt of our power, not in reſpect of their perſons, but in reſpect of their vnrecouerable wickedneſſe.

Beſides this wee muſt alſo maintaine the order of the Church. For if anie one bee caſt off as a rotten member, and wee goe and keepe him companie ſtill: is it not a ſeparating of our ſelues from the bodie of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and of all the faithfull? Haue wee not made a Rent (as much as in vs lay) to ſhewe that wee liſt not to be members of the Church? When we bee ſo familiar with thoſe that are ſo caſt off, and wee fall to rubbing of our ſelues with them: is it not a ſkorning of all Gods children, and a letting of them goe, as though we had nothing to doe with them? True it is that (as Paul ſaith in an other place) wee muſt not take euen thoſe 2.Theſſ.3.15 for enemies, which are caſt off by the Church, but wee ought to warne them ſtill as brethren. Yea verily. Notwithſtanding, when men doe haunt their companies familiarly, and to enter ſo farre into friendſhippe with them as to bee partakers of their naughtineſſe: it is a token that they bee willing to intangle themſelues with them, and they bee woorthie to receiue like condemnation with them. Thus ye ſee in effect howe wee ought to put this leſſon in vre nowadayes, namely that the Magiſtrates ought to bee verie carefull to rid their Landes from all corruptions, and to vſe the ſword which is committed vnto them, in the puniſhing of all crimes, euil deedes, and diſorders: And moreouer, that euery man in his owne behalfe doe looke to the keeping of the ſame order, and yet neuertheleſſe that euery of vs doe learne to keepe this rule among vs, that if there bee any ſtumblingblockes in the Church, they bee not borne with, but that ſuch as ſerue to infect the reſt of the flocke like ſcabbed ſheepe, bee thruſt out; and that although they bee not killed with the materiall ſwoorde, yet they bee caſt out of the companie of the faithfull, ſo as they may bee aſhamed of themſelues, and other men may beware leaſt they defile themſelues with them, that they may bee made after ſuch a ſorte to knowe themſelues to bee deſpiſers of GOD, as that men can not away with them, nor abide their acquayntance, but that they be to be ſhunned as deadly plagues. That is the ſecond point.

The third point is, that we muſt labor to root out the vices, and yet to ſaue the parties themſelues:and yͤ when we ſee wretched men miſaduiſed we muſt bring them back againe into yͤ way of ſaluation if it be poſſible. But yet in the mean while wee muſt ſacrifice all their affections vnto God; that is to ſay, wee muſt mortifie all euill in them, for the bringing whereof to paſſe, wee muſt vſe the ſworde of Gods worde, as indeede the preaching of the Goſpell ought to haue that power, as I haue ſaide afore. And afterwarde, let euerie man enter into himſelfe; for it is not enough for vs to haue rooted out the vices that are in our neighbours, but the cheefe point is to amende and reforme our ſelues, and to beware that the miſcheefe ſettle not in vs: for it will be no time to remedie it, when we bee once hardened in it. Therefore wee muſt preuent it.

And here it is to bee noted alſo, that ſeeing God ſpeaketh here of Idolatrie, wee may ſee thereby howe greatly hee miſliketh the corrupting of his ſeruice. Truly this point hath beene expounded alreadie heretofore: but yet we haue neede to bee put in minde thereof oftentimes. For manie of vs will neuer ſticke throughly to the ſoundeſſe of Gods ſeruice, that is to ſay, to the Religion that is well ordered according to his worde. Wee haue alwayes ſome fonde deuotions of our owne, which carie vs away: and whatſoeuer wee thinke well doone doeth like vs ſo wel, that to our ſeeming, God doth vs wrong if hee allowe it not too: and that is a deueliſh ouerweening. For it becommeth vs, if wee will ſerue God well, alwayes to beginne at obedience, that is to ſay, wee muſt not attempt anie thing which is not according to his wil & agreeable to his worde. Nowe then as God hath declared heretofore that hee abhorreth all ſuperſtition and Idolatrie: ſo he confirmeth it againe
Deut.18.9. in this place, euen in the worde Abhominations, which is as much to ſay, as thinges loothſome, yrkeſome, deteſtable, and ſuch as hee reiecteth and cannot away with. When wee ſee God ſo ſtirred, and his wrath ſo prouoked by our ſuperſtitions; alas what thinke we to doe? Therefore let vs holde vs to the pure doctrine that GOD hath giuen vs, and whenſoeuer he is to bee ſerued, let vs not ſwarue aſide one way nor other, as I haue ſaide herebefore: but let vs hearken to that which God hath ſaide, and imbrace it with all ſingleneſſe of minde. Let that ſerue for one point.

Again let vs mark on the otherſide, that whē God ſaith, Leaſt they ſeduce thee, and teach thee the abhominations which they haue doone to their gods. Hereby hee ſheweth that naturally we be eaſily miſſeledde in this behalfe. True it is (as I haue declared not long ſince) that as touching vices, wee will ſoone be ouerthrowen if the bridle bee ſlacked neuer ſo little. Whoredome will raigne to the vttermoſt, and ſo will theft, and ſo will drunkenneſſe and all manner of looſeneſſe, and ſo will blaſphemie. For as it is harde to bring vs into the right way; ſo on the contrarie part we bee ſoone turned from it, inſomuch that the whisking of a flye will make vs ſtreightwayes to runne aſtray, ſo as wee can no more skill of ſeruing GOD though wee were well entered therein before. And that is the cauſe why wee ſee ſo fewe holde out in weldoing. Many make faire wether for a time, ſo as yee woulde thinke them to bee maruellous good men: but in the turning of a hande all is marde. Otherſome are not ſo ſoone peruerted, but yet in proceſſe of time yee would wonder to ſee how they bee chaunged, and howe they haue turned their backes againſt God: And what is the cauſe thereof? Euen for that (as I haue ſaide afore) wee take not heede to our ſelues, ne conſider howe frayle wee bee, ne therewithall watch in praying vnto God, ne ſeeke to preuent the occaſions of wickedneſſe. And becauſe men truſt ſo much to their owne ſteadineſſe, and thinke themſelues well able to withſtande euill: they ouerthrowe themſelues headlong, and God puniſheth ſuch preſumption, becauſe it is not without a kinde of ſelfeweening, and conſequently is the cauſe that wee liue not in the feare of God, ne reſorte for refuge to the grace of his holy ſpirite. Let vs learne therefore that wee be ſo eaſie to be led to all vices, but ſpecially to Idolatrie, as is pitifull to ſee. And why? For euerie man keepes a ſchoole of it. Although wee haue no example of ſuperſtition, yet can euerie one of vs forge it in our ſelues. If the little children, which neuer wiſt what the filth of poperie meant, were let alone and not held in awe by Gods worde; when they came to age euerie of them woulde haue his deuotion by himſelfe, with, ſuch a thing and ſuch a thing were good. Our mindes are ſo tickliſhe, as is pitie, and our wittes are verie ſuttle to inuent ſuperſtitions & Idolatries. And what wil become of vs then, whē we ſhall haue ſowers of Darnel among vs, which ſhall ſay, I haue ſeene ſuch a thing, and ſuch a thing was wont to bee doone? The miſcheefe ſhall be nouriſhed continually. Without going any further, ye ſhall ſee that theſe olde panyers of Idolatrie which are among vs, doe alwayes keepe ſtill ſome of their olde filth, and they haue euer ſome wicked roote of their former ſuperſtitions remayning within them. And if they might haue their ſcope, wee ſhoulde ſoone bee caried back againe into the dungeons that wee bee come out of. Not without cauſe therefore doeth our Lord ſay that the faithful muſt keepe good watch, that they bee not miſſetaught by ſuch as haue beene vſed to ſuperſtition. For our nature will bee ouercome by and by, if the miſcheefe be not preuented. The meane [of redreſſe] that was appointed to the Iewes, hath no place as in reſpect of vs, noweadayes. For the ſworde is not put into our hands to put Idolaters to death, I meane of vs which are priuate perſons: but we muſt eſchewe the companie of all ſuch as ſeeke to intangle vs in their diueliſhneſſe. And the remedie thereof is (as I ſaide afore) to acknowledge but one GOD, and to knowe his will, and (for aſmuch as hee ſeparateth vs from all the defilements that men forge to themſelues:) Let vs holde our ſelues to the pure doctrine of his worde. That is the vnfallible rule, let vs follow it.

And now let vs go on with yͤ which Moſes addeth.

deth.He ſaith that when a Citie is beſieged long time, men may cutte downe ſome ſortes of trees to beſiege it withall,if neede be; for men of warre haue their Artillerie. And in ſtead of our Gunnes, they had in thoſe dayes certaine engines to breake the walles. Therefore if they had neede of timber,they ſhould not cut down the fruittrees,but the trees that bare no fruite, and ſerue their turne with them. As for trees that beare fruite, and whereof foode may bee gathered, thoſe were to bee preſerued. Yee ſee then howe heere is a commaundement ſet downe. Howbeit the meaning of the ſentence is ſomewhat darke, and therefore it is expounded diuerſly. And indeede I will ſomewhat ſtay vpon it, howbeit but as in paſſing ouer it. Word for word it is thus: Man is not the tree of the fielde, to come to the ſeege before thy face. Nowe, ſome take it that heere God ment to ſkorne ſuch as deſtroy the trees after that faſhion.[As who ſhould ſay.] What? Are ẏ trees as enemies to thee, to come againſt thee and to reſiſt thee? Then if men heawe downe the trees and waſte the Countrie: it ſeemeth to be a childiſh kinde of reuenge. Yee ſee then how ſome men haue vnderſtood this text, that it was our Lordes meaning to make thoſe men aſhamed which make ſuch waſte, and deſtroy the foode of the inhabiters. They bee not your enemies. Againſt whome make yee your warre? Againſt the trees and thinges that haue no life? Surely yee bee valyaunt men. Some perceiuing that this conſtruction is ſomwhat ſtreyned,ſay:The tree of the field is mans, that is to ſaie, is for man. Whereas GOD hath giuen fruitfulneſſe to a tree, hee hath appointed it for the nouriſhment of men and of the inhabiters of the Countrie. For if the people bee ouercome, they haue whereof to liue when they bee brought in ſubiection, and wherewith to pay tribute to their conquerours. Otherſome vnderſtande theſe wordes,(to come to the ſiege before thy face) thus:to helpe them that beſeege the Citie: for what can they doe if they want foode? When a Citie is beſeeged, they muſt needes depart thence, if there bee not wherewith to ſuſteine their armie, which turne the trees will ſerue. Our Lorde then (as they vnderſtande it) reprocheth it as a great folly to goe and diſappoint themſelues of their owne ſuſtenance. Howebeit foraſmuch as the Hebrewes doe commonly ſupplie the ſimilitude, it may bee taken thus: Man ſhall bee in ſteede of the tree of the fielde to come againſt thee in the ſeege. And this conſtruction is verie fit and naturall, and I will make no long ſcanning of it, becauſe it were but loſt time: but I will holde that ſenſe which may ſerue for all men, and whereof all men may take profite. G O D then hauing forbidden to heawe downe fruitetrees yea euen in time of warre, addeth the reaſon: namely that ſeeing the men ought to be in ſtead of the trees of the fielde, therefore they ought rather to ſet themſelues againſt them and to vtter their rage there, as againſt thoſe that are profeſſed enemies. For why? The men may come to the ſeege, yea and to the ſhocke of the battell againſt thee. To bee ſhort, our Lorde (as I ſaide afore,howbeit that I ſpeake heere of another literall expoſition, though all comes to one end) meant to declare that in time of warre men muſt not wreake their teene vppon the trees but vppon their enemies,becauſe their enemies ſeeke to anoy them, and therefore thoſe are they that are to be reſiſted.

Nowe let vs come to conſider what this Lawe profiteth vs. It is ſaide in time of warre wee muſt not cut downe the fruitetrees. Heere wee haue to note, that although our ſwordes bee drawen, yet it is not lawfull for vs to vſe all manner of crueltie at our owne pleaſure: and yet notwithſtanding G O D ſpeaketh heere of rightfull warres, ſuch as hee himſelfe alloweth, where hee giueth leaue to ſlea men, and yet hee will haue vs to keepe ſome kinde of humanitie, that we lay not the Countrie vtterly waſte. Let vs marke then that warres are not lawefull in ſuch ſorte, as to beare downe all before vs and to make vtter hauocke of all thinges. But wee muſt beare in minde, that although men bridle themſelues as much as is poſſible, yet there will bee too much euill committed. If there ſhoulde bee but one man ſlaine; alas, yet doe wee ſee that an image of G O D were defaced. But when it commeth to the killing of a greate multitude whereby are made ſo many widdowes and fatherleſſe children; what a thing is that? Beſides, though the goods and poſſeſſions of men bee ſpared, yet are many men thruſt out of their houſes, and being ill handled die ſome for colde and ſome for want and penurie: And what a pitifull thing is that? Therefore although men deale as indifferently as is poſſible in time of warre:yet muſt there needes bee manie diſorders, in reſpect whereof men ought to ſtreine themſelues the more to abſtaine from all manner of crueltie and euill dealing. For if our Lorde woulde haue ſuch euen hande kept among enemies, euen when hee had giuen leaue before to kill: what is to bee done among vs which ſhoulde bee friendes, for whom it is not lawfull to lifte vp a finger, no nor the tippe of our tongue to ſpeake amiſſe of them that haue offended vs? For although a man ſpyte vs and vexe vs; yet doeth not our Lorde giue vs leaue to bee at warre with him, but will haue vs to poſſeſſe our ſoules in patience, and to ſtriue to ouercome the euill by doing good. Luk. 21.19. Rom.12.21.

Nowe if it behooue vs to maintaine friendſhippe with thoſe that doe vs wrong and iniurie, and to procure their welfare, ſo as it is not lawfull for vs to greeue them in any manner of wiſe: I pray you is it to bee borne with, when wee practiſe to annoy thoſe which neuer did vs wrong or harme, nor neuer procured vs any loſſe? So then, yee ſee howe this Lawe concerneth not onely men of warre: but alſo that our Lorde will haue it to bee a common leſſon to vs all, to keepe ſo euen a hande to the vttermoſt of our power, as no man may complaine that hee was indomaged by vs. And ſo yee ſee howe wee ought to applie this Lawe to our inſtruction. Againe, if it behooue vs to ſpare the fruite trees, which notwithſtanding are thinges without life: howe much more ought wee to ſpare mens perſons? Truely this is not ſpoken in fauour of the trees themſelues, but in reſpect of men which are fedde and ſuſtained by them: and ſurely trees are not to bee priuiledged any thing at all in compariſon of men. What a thing then is it, when men ſhalbe put all to the ſworde without ſparing? Is it not as good as a defying of God? That is a ſeconde point which we haue to beare in mind. Now let vs proceede.

Whereas it is ſaide heere, that there muſt no waſt bee made: it is to ſhewe, that men ought alwayes to maintaine the ordinance of GOD: ſpecially ſith wee knowe his goodneſſe and fatherly loue towardes men. Behold, God hath giuen the earth to men to dwell and reſt vppon. Nowe when wee fall to making of hauocke, and thruſt out the poore indwellers thereof, ſo as euen in the time of peace when euerie man may returne home againe to his owne houſe, yet they finde all thinges waſted and the land made barren, and whereas heere to fore it had beene well husbanded, it is nowe become as a wildernes, ſo as there is not one tree left to gather an apple of: is it not as good as a defeating of Gods goodneſſe which hee had vttered towards mankinde? Muſt it not needes bee that wee be ſtarke blind in our rage, when we fight ſo againſt Gods grace, yea and againſt ſuch a grace as ought to ſoften our hearts though they were harder than ſtone? Ye ſee then how here is a general rule for vs to marke well, namely that as oft as wee bee tempted to make any waſte or ſpoyle, we ought to bethinke vs thus: Goe to, our Lord hath placed vs all in this worlde, and prouided vs of the thinges which hee knewe to bee neceſſarie for this life: nowe if I will needes ſpoyle the ground of the thinges which God hath giuen it for the ſuſtenance of man, I doe the beſt I can to defeate Gods goodneſſe which he hath vttered to mankinde, that it might no more appeare. And am I worthie to bee ſuſtained on the earth when I doe ſo aboliſh Gods gracious goodneſſe which ſerued as well for my neighbours as for my ſelfe, not ſuffering it to haue his courſe and to reigne any longer? Am I not as a very monſter? This is a thing (ſay I) which ought wel to reſtraine vs. When wee bee caried with any malice, and are become ſo miſcheeuouſly minded as to waſte the trees, Houſes, and ſuch other thinges, let vs bridle our ſelues with this conſideration: yea, but who is it againſt whome wee make the warre? It is not the creatures, but the partie himſelfe who euen there doeth ſhewe forth his goodneſſe, and that not towards any one man alone, but towards all men, in the which number euen we our ſelues alſo are comprehended. Were this well conſidered, warres ſhoulde not be vndertaken ſo vnaduiſedly nowadayes as we ſee they bee, neither ſhoulde countries be waſted euery where without ſparing. But nowadayes this kinde of crueltie is farre greater among them that beare the name of Chriſtians, than it hath bene in times paſt euen among the Infidels. For nowe there is nothing but burning of Countries; and that is worſe than the cutting of mens throates. For what ſhall the poore inhabiters doe, when their Countrie is burnt vp a tenne leagues round about? They muſt needs go die vnder the hedges and buſhes, or lye pining away vpon the plaine grounde: but it were a greater point of mercie to diſpatch thē by death out of hand. And yet notwithſtanding it is a lawfull thing nowadayes, becauſe it is a cuſtome ſo to doe. And whence commeth this cuſtome, but that men haue not regarded Gods word, by reaſon wherof they haue vtterly alienated from him, and in the ende are become ſtarke beaſtes? And ſo it is an horrible thing to ſee, that they which name themſelues Chriſtians, and Catholikes, and the vpholders of Chriſtianitie, are nowadayes ſo farre out of order, yͤ barbarouſnes reigneth moſt fully among them. Inſomuch as they hold not themſelues contented with the waſting of their enemies landes, but they doe alſo flea euen their owne ſubiectes without ſparing. Nowadayes the lawe of the Turkes reigneth among the Chriſtians: which is, to make no conſcience of the waſting of their own countrie, ſo men may keepe the ſoueraigntie of the ſame. For if they doubt that the enemie is like to haue the forehande, they burne vp all before his comming. And what doe they burne? The poore ſubiectes whom the Prince himſelfe hath vnder his protection. It is ſaid, Thou ſhalt bee a couert in the ſtorme accordingly as is ſpoken of the office of a good king in the perſon of Ezechias. The Prophet Eſay ſaieth hee ſhalbe a place of harbrough and refuge for his ſubiectes. Eſa,25.4. When a ſtorme commeth, ſo as all thinges ſeeme likely to goe to wrecke; the king ſhall haue his winges ſtretched out to couer his ſubiectes, and to defende them, inſomuch that he ought euen to hazarde his life for them. After that manner ought a prince to maintaine his ſubiectes. Contrariwiſe yee ſhall ſee a prince ſo blinded, that hee commaundeth all to be burnt and waſted, that there may not ſo much as one graine of corne be lefte. Yea, but thereby the poore people are ſtarued. There is no remedie, nothing muſt bee ſpared, but all thinges muſt be borne down, to the intent I may reigne like a conquerour. Needes muſt God bee forgotten, when men proceede ſo farre. Wee neede not to go ſeeke examples of threeſcore yeares hence, neither neede wee to heare our auncetors ſpeake. For we haue ſeene as much within theſe laſt twentie yeares, and not farre hence. And the miſchiefe not onely continueth but alſo increaſeth ſtill. For why? they bee the fruits of the contempt of Gods worde. So a Prince doe ſhriue himſelfe, and bee aſſoyled and make a Croſſe vpon his backe, it is ynough: Hee ſhall haue Ceremonies ynowe. When hee hath performed a ſort of counterfaite ſeruices, hee is quite and cleane aſſoyled. But if a man ſhoulde come and ſhewe him his dutie by Gods worde: hee cannot abide to heare of it. To be tolde what he oweth firſt vnto God and then vnto men, hee can abide much leſſe. To bee tolde after what manner he ought to take warres in hand, and howe hee ſhould holde himſelfe within his bounds and liſtes, without attempting any further than God giueth him leaue: he can no skil at all; it were a derogation to his maieſtie; it is ynough for him to mocke GOD with a ſort of pelting trifles, as though hee were to pleaſe a young babie. But let vs on our ſide conſider what is Lawfull for vs, and not meddle with thoſe which prouoke Gods wrath and curſe vppon their heades after that faſhion. And ſeeing that God hath ridde vs from ſo great cōfuſions, let vs yeelde him thankes, and not followe them any more, leaſt we prouoke his vēgeance to bee the more horrible againſt vs.

Nowe, howſoeuer the worlde goe, although wee bee priuate perſons yet muſt wee put this leſſon in vre, of not making any waſte, forſomuch as wee knowe that our Lorde hath appointed the earth to bee as our foſtermother. And ſeeing ſhee openeth her bowels after that ſort to ſuſtaine vs; wee muſt vnderſtande that it is all one as if God ſhoulde reach vs his hand and offer vs the teſtimonies of his goodneſſe. If wee bee of that minde; then will this doctrine auaile vs, not onely in time of warre, but alſo in time of peace. And would God that it were well regarded. But nowadayes men are ſet altogether vppon euill doing. Inſomuch that although wee haue our eares beaten dayly with ſuch matters, yet wee minde them not: whereof the examples are too euident. Yea and there are which had leuer that their corne ſhoulde bee marde in their Garners, and bee eaten with vermine, and rotte where it lyeth, rather than to ſell it in time of neede. For they coulde finde in their heartes to hungerſtarue the poore people. And is not that all one with cutting vp the fruitetrees? Behold, the corne is gathered in, and our Lorde hath powred out his goodneſſe and bleſſing to the ende that the poore folke ſhoulde bee ſuſteyned. Nowe, it is hoorded vp in Garners, and it is kept faſt vnder locke and kay, till it riſe to ſo great a price that folke crie out for hunger, and are no longer able to abide it. And what becomes of the Corne in the meane whyle? It foyſteth and rotteth. Indeede our Lord doth nowe and then mocke them that thought themſelues to haue gained much, and ſhewe them that that is not the way to doe it. But yet for all that, they to the vttermoſt of their power doe burie Gods grace, as though they fought againſt the goodneſſe and fatherly loue which hee vttered towards all the people. And in ſo doing they peruert the whole order of nature, as if they went to cut downe and to deſtroy the fruitebearing trees. What is to bee done then? Seeing that our Lorde woulde haue a certaine humanitie to bee obſerued euen among enemies: foraſmuch as it behooueth vs to liue fellowlike together in peace and brotherly loue: let vs looke that wee endeuour to liue in concorde and friendſhippe as much as in vs lyeth. And when God ſhall haue beſtowed his ſpirituall giftes vppon vs, (which are much preciouſer than all the worldly thinges which wee can receiue) let vs indeuour to make our neighbours parteners with vs, and not through our malice diſappoint them of the good which God doeth vnto them. For if wee ought to behaue our ſelues with ſuch diſcretion in the vſe of temporall benefites: what ought wee to doe in the ſpirituall bleſſings, which concerne the ſaluation of our ſoules? Then let vs learne not to ſtubbe vp the fruitetrees. But rather ſeeing that Gods worde is the ſeede of life; let vs indeuour to ſpreade it abroade euerie where, that it may take good roote: And that when it hath taken roote, it may not bring foorth a barren tree, but a tree that beareth good fruite. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to gather of this text, if wee intende to profite our ſelues duly thereby, yea euen in ſuch wiſe, that although wee be not in warres, yet notwithſtanding foraſmuch as GOD hath choſen vs for his people, hee hath ſhewed vs heere ſuch a point of vprightneſſe, as ought to continue with vs all our life long.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them more and more, ſo as we may be ẏ better ſetled in true repentaunce: and that therewithall wee may mourne and miſlike of ourſelues when wee ſee the infirmities that are in vs, and pray our good GOD to vouchſafe to holde vs in awe, that although wee ſee the worlde nowadayes to bee vtterly out of order, and our ſelues horriblie beſet rounde about with al manner of ſtumblingblockes, yet wee may bee helde ſtill vnder his banner, to followe him whitherſoeuer hee liſteth to call vs, that by that meanes hee may bee glorified in vs, and wee alſo rightly glory in him for that wee be his people, and hee hath ſhouled vs out to doe him ſeruice. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, bringing backe all poore ignorant people from the ſuperſtitions and ydolatries wherein they are helde: that ſo hee may leade them to the knowledge of his trueth: And that for this purpoſe it would pleaſe him &c.

On Saturday the xxj. of December. 1555

The Cxx.Sermon which is the firſt vpon the one and twentith Chapter.

WHen a bodie is found ſlaine lying vpon the ground in the Land which the Lord thy GOD giueth thee to poſſeſſe,and it is not knowen who killed him:

2 Then ſhall thine Elders and Iudges come foorth, and meaſure the Townes that lye rounde about the ſlaine man.

3 And when they perceiue which of the Townes is neareſt to the ſlaine man, then ſhall the Elders of that towne take a young Hekfar from the droue, which hath not beene labored nor hath drawen in the yoke:

4 And the Elders of that Towne ſhall driue the young bullocke downe into a harde valley,which hath neither beene plowed nor ſowed,and they ſhal ſtrike off the bullocks neck there in the valley.

5 Alſo the Prieſtes the children of Leuie ſhall come forth, for the Lorde thy God hath choſen them to miniſter vnto him, and to bleſſe in the Lords name:And at their worde ſhall all caſes and euery plague be determined.

6 And all the Elders of that towne ſhall come to the deade man,and waſh their hands ouer the bullocke that is beheaded in the valley:

7 And proteſt and ſay,Our handes haue not ſhed this bloude,neither haue our eyes ſeene it.

8 O Lord, be mercifull to thy people Iſrael whom thou haſt purchaſed, and lay not the guiltleſſe bloud among thy people Iſrael.And the manſlaughter ſhalbe forgiuen them.

9 And ſo ſhalt thou take guiltles bloud from among you:for thou ſhalt do that which is acceptable in the eyes of the Lord.

I Haue ſpoken of this Law alreadie heretofore,and declared briefly what god ment in the ordeining of that Ceremony:namely that wee ſhoulde abhorre the ſhedding of bloud, and murthers,and outrages. He had ſpoken heretofore of the law of armes. And nowe hee addeth that the killing euen of one man is a defiling of the whole countrey,vnleſſe the remedie bee ſought by praying vnto God to forgiue the fault, and by proteſting that none of them is guiltie thereof. Wee ſee then that mens liues are deare vnto God, ſith hee will haue ſo ſolemne a redreſſe to bee made of a murther committed,yea euen when the doer thereof is not knowen,nor the trueth can bee founde out. If a man had heene murdered, and the doer thereof knowen: then woulde not this ceremonie haue ſufficed.For God commandeth the crime to bee puniſhed: and if a murtherer be ſuffered to ſcape, the Iudges and all the people become guiltie of the fact. But when it is vnknowen by whom a man is ſlaine, then GOD thinketh it not ynough for euery man to proteſt for himſelfe ẏ hee is neither partie nor priuie to the matter; but he will alſo that the town where the deede was done,or which was neereſt to the place where the deede was done, ſhoulde bee examined for it. For wee knowe that a partition of the townes & villages was made to euerie tribe. Inſomuch that euerie Citie had the Countrie about it, and the townes and villages in it were called as it were the daughters of that Citie. Yet notwithſtanding, in this caſe our Lorde will haue them to make a newe ſuruey and meaſuring of the diſtance of places againe, and that the Citie which is found to bee neereſt to the dead bodie,ſhalbe at the charges to make a ſolemne ſacrifice, whereat hee will haue the Elders,Iudges,and Prieſtes,to be preſent. And he ſetteth downe the Prieſts by name, as wel for ſacrificing as alſo becauſe it was their Office to make the purgations: whenſoeuer there befell any blotte, ſo as the people were defiled before God; it was the duetie of the Prieſtes to make them cleane againe towards God. And that was the cauſe why that order was required in this caſe.

And therefore Moſes addeth, that God hath appointed them to ſerue him, and to bleſſe in his name, and that it belongeth to them to iudge of Leproſies and all other like thinges, and of all other kindes of vncleanneſſe wherewith the people might be defiled. In attributing this office vnto them, he declareth to what purpoſe their preſence ought to ſerue in this act. Alſo there was prayer to bee made, and the prieſtes were inioyned thereunto. And becauſe the whole order of them was a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: they bleſſed in Gods name, as I haue declared heeretofore, and as I ſhall ſhewe ſomewhat more hereafter as I paſſe ouer it. And therefore our Lorde appointed them to make the ſolemne prayer that is ſet downe heere. Nowe wee ſee whereto this Lawe tended: Namely that our Lorde hath ſhewed howe precious mens liues are vnto him, that wee on our part might bee the more prouoked to take him for our father. For what an vnthankfulneſſe is it, that God ſhoulde haue ſo great and ſo fatherly a care of vs, of vs I ſay which are but Caryons: and yet notwithſtanding that hee ſhoulde not bee honoured of vs as of his children, nor finde any obedience at our handes? So then, foraſmuch as we ſee our Lord vouchſafeth to haue a regarde of our life; let vs be the more moued to honor him, and to yeeld him all reuerence.

Heerewithall it is ſhewed vs alſo, that wee muſt maintaine our neighbours as much as in vs lyeth, and abſtaine from all violence. For if murder bee ſo hatefull to GOD, that although the doer thereof bee vnknowen, yet it behoued a ſolemne clearing thereof to be made: what will become of vs if wee ſpare not our neighbors? Is it not a ſetting of our ſelues vtterly againſt God? Here then is a bridle to reſtraine vs from all violence and outrage, ſo as vnleſſe wee will bee hatefull to our God, wee muſt liue in concorde and brotherly loue with all our neighbours. Nowe I haue tolde you heretofore, that whereas murder is forbidden vs, it is not meant thereby that wee ſhoulde but onely forbeare the drawing of our ſwords to ſlea men, but alſo that foraſmuch as all they which hate their brethren euen in ſecrete, are murderers; we ſhould beware to haue our heartes as cleane as our handes, and abſtaine from all hatred and enmitie. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to remember in the ſeconde place of this Lawe which is ſet downe heere. For it's not ynough for vs to loue our neighbours and not to haue ſtepped out into any iniurie or violence: but wee muſt alſo (to the vttermoſt of our power) bee a let to the anoyance that is done to others. Indeede it is a great thing to be peaceable: but God requireth yet more of his children, namely that they ſhoulde procure peace towardes others. Therefore whenſoeuer any man fals to quareling or offereth wrong to his neighbour, let vs looke that wee ſet our ſelues againſt him as much as wee can. I knowe that euerie man is not armed with the ſworde, neither may euerie of vs take vppon him to redreſſe wrongs: but yet let vs haue an eye to that which GOD permitteth, ſo farre as our duetie will beare, and as occaſion is miniſtred to deale: And therein wee ſhall ſhewe our ſelues not to conſent to any outrage, but rather that wee bee willing to ſuccour the innocent that is oppreſſed and wronged, whom let vs looke that we help to our power and abilitie. That is the third point which we haue to gather vpon this text.

Moreouer let vs marke, that Iudges and Miniſters of iuſtice are warned heere to doe their dueties. For it is not ynough for them to proteſt that they haue not ſupported nor fauored any euill: neither is it ynough for them to bee able to ſay, yͤ they haue yeelded euerie man his right when they were complained vnto: but they muſt alſo inquire diligently of miſorders, and although no man ſpeake to them or mooue them, yet muſt they of their owne ſelues bee vigilant in making ſerch. And if they finde any fault committed: they themſelues muſt followe the ſuite of it. But this is ill obſerued of moſt Iudges. For they thinke themſelues to bee come to the full perfection of vertue, and that they be greatly to bee commended, when they haue not refuſed to giue men the hearing. If a man that is grieued doe come to complaine to them, and they heare him and make countenance to helpe him: they thinke they haue acquitte themſelues verie well. But our Lorde is not contented with that. Although then that the partie which is hurt doe holde his peace, and patiently put vp the wrong: yet notwithſtanding the Iudge or the Magiſtrate that is in office muſt not forbeare to doe his duetie for all that. And therefore it is a fonde allegation to ſay, there is no information, no man complains of it. Yea: but yet neuertheleſſe the euill is committed, and God ſeeth it, and hee hath commaunded that it ſhoulde bee puniſhed; hee will haue all miſdeedes redreſſed, and that no libertie bee giuen to the ſtronger to beare downe the weaker. And ſhall the Iudge in the meane while holde his peace? Let vs marke then, that God will not haue the miniſters of iuſtice to winke at mens miſdeedes: no not euen though there be no informer, protector, aduocat, attourney, or plaintife to moue thē therunto. For they bee bound to puniſh crimes euen of themſelues, though no man proſecute any ſuite in Law. And what ought they then to do, when they be ſued vnto, and when the partie that is miſuſed commeth ſorowing and declaring his griefe? If hee bee not hearde, or if hee bee ſkorned for his complaining, or let alone, or peraduenture ſo vexed that hee is inforced to giue ouer his right, and in the meane while the offender goeth vnpuniſhed: ſhall ſuch trecherie be excuſable before God? Yet notwithſtanding, we ſee oftentimes, that if a man which hath bin wronged do come to demaund Iuſtice; he ſhalbe trayned on. In deede hee ſhall not bee driuen away with a kudgell, it ſhall not bee ſaide vnto him that hee doeth but loſe his labour: but he ſhal bee ſo driuen off with ſhifts and delayes, that the poore ſoule is ſorie that euer hee attempted any ſuite, and is faine to leaue off to his great griefe. That is the common courſe which is kept in executing of iuſtice on the earth. But wee ſee heere that ſuch perſons as haue ſo abuſed their authoritie, muſt come to account for it. For the heauenly Iudge will haue them not onely to heare mens complaints and to releeue them: but alſo to make inquiſitions, and to ſearch out matters to the verie bottome, though it be not knowen that any fault is committed, or that any man is wronged, yea and euen though no man open his mouth to complaine. And when men haue done the beſt they can, yet will he haue them to offer Sacrifice, as though ſome blame lay vppon the countrie it ſelfe, vntil forgiueneſſe of the offence were deſired.

So then, let vs learne on our part, that our Lord watcheth ouer vs, ſo that although we be oppreſſed and haue all the outrages in the world done vnto vs, yet our Lord ceaſeth not to haue a care of vs. True it is (as I haue ſaid afore) that Iudges and Magiſtrates haue heere a good leſſon, and that they ought to conſider that they ſhal not ſcape the hands of the Heauenly Iudge, when they haue bin negligent in mainteining good men that are troden vnder foote. If they paſſe not to defende them, they muſt make a reckening for that looſe dealing of theirs. For it is al one as if they themſelues were confederate with them. And therefore we muſt vnderſtande, that ſeeing God hath ſuch a care of thoſe that are deade, it is much more of conſequence, that our Lorde beholding all things would we ſhould reſort boldly vnto him for refuge, when we pine away in this worlde, ſuffering many troubles & vexations, though we ſpeake neuer a worde, ne finde any defence or helpe at all among men, in how great extremitie ſo euer we be. For although he ſhew not himſelfe by and by neere at hand: yet muſt we not thinke that he hath turned his backe vpon vs: for hee marketh all the wrongs that are done vnto vs, and our teares (as Pſal,56.7. it is ſaide in the Pſalme) ſhall come vp before him. For Dauid ſaith that the tears of the faithfull are put vp as it were into bottels, as men put vp ſweete waters into glaſſes, and oyntmentes into vyols. And ſo our Lorde keepeth the treares of ſuch as make their moane to him, and reſort to him for refuge. He keepeth all thoſe teares of theirs, to be reuenged for them in time conuenient. But we muſt paſſe yet further. For if God ſuccour them that are departed; it is a token that we be not as the brute beaſtes. For (as is Luk.20,38. ſhewed in S. Luke) hee is not the God of the deade, but of the liuing. Therefore let vs conclude, that when wee be gone out of this world, we ſhall haue a better life and be in the hand of God. Loe what a recorde of the immortall life here is vttered in the marke that God giueth vs here, namely in that if a man be found murthered, ſolemne ſacrifice muſt bee made to clenſe the Lande from the defiling whereto it was ſubiect. For thereby hee witneſſeth that after our deceaſe we liue with him, and that wee muſt not thinke our ſelues to bee vtterly done away and come to nothing, when God taketh vs out of this worlde; but rather that it is but a paſſage whereby to goe into the ſeconde life which hee promiſeth vs. Seeing that this was ſpoken in the Law, we ought the more to aſſure our ſelues thereof nowadayes. For we haue the holy ſcripture more at large. Wee haue the heauenly life ſhewed vnto vs much more apparantly in the newe Teſtament, than it was ſhewed to the fathers of olde time before the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore wee ought to bee ſo much the more aſſured of it, and not bee like the vnbelieuers, who quake when they heare death ſpoken of, as though all were fordone with them, and as though they ſhoulde vtterly periſh. But wee muſt vnderſtand, that when God gathereth vs to him by death, wee ceaſe not to liue ſtill to himwardes. Although a mans bodie rot away, and become a Carion like the bodies of brute beaſtes: yet is God a faithfull keeper of our ſoules, ſo as they be preſerued in his hand & by his power, wherein he giueth vs hope of the laſt reſurrection, in the which we ſhalbe wholly reſtored againe. For wheras we be nowe corruptible, and tende to corruption by death: we ſhall then be clothed again with ſuch a newe nature, that ỹ thing which is now corruptible and tranſitorie in vs, ſhall become newe and vncorruptible, when we be renewed after ỹ likeneſſe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember yet further, in that God ſheweth him ſelfe to haue ſuch care of them that are deade.

As touching the things that are ſpoken here concerning the prieſts, we neede not as nowe to ſtande verie long vppon them: but it will ſuffice to ſpeake a word or twaine thereof. Moſes ſaith that they were ordeined to bleſſe in Gods name, that is to ſay, to make publike prayers. True it is, that wee at this day haue the ſame office of making praiers in the name of ỹ whole church, and that the people muſt ſay Amen, (as S Paul ſaith in the xiiii. of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians): but there was a ſpeciall conſideration of this matter in the tribe of Leuie, & in the prieſts of the Lawe: namely, that they bare the figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt who is our aduocate, and our mouth, as it were. Foraſmuch then as it belõgeth to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt to offer vp our requeſts to God our father, bicauſe they can neuer bee acceptable to God but for his ſake, neither are we worthie to preace vnto God, except hee leade vs and make way and meanes for vs: Therefore in the time of the Lawe, the Prieſtes bleſſed the people, that is to ſay, they made the publike prayers for them. Againe there is another thing, namely, that their bleſſing of ỹ people was a witneſſing of Gods fauour and loue towardes them. And that alſo belongeth to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, howbeit that the ſame pertaineth not to himſelf alone, but alſo to al the preachers of the Goſpel. Whẽ we preach Gods mercie, the bleſſing of God is vpon al them that harken to vs. For it is all one as if God himſelfe came to declare his fauour towards vs, and ỹ for aſmuch as wee be reconciled vnto him, hee intendeth to take vs into his keeping. Seeing then that the doctrine of the Goſpell importeth ſuch thinges, wee ſee that all the Shepheardes of the Chriſtian Church, doe bleſſe the people. But this is not becauſe they are figures of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, but becauſe of the charge that is committed vnto them. They doe in deede repreſent his perſon as his officers; but in the time of the Lawe, this was of force that the Prieſt during the continuance of thoſe ſhadowes, did after a ſorte ſupply the roome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt vntill hee was come. That then was meant by bleſſing the people in the name of God, as we ſee our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt Luk.24.50. & Act.1.4. himſelfe hath declared. For hee bleſſed his diſciples by laying his handes vppon them. Therefore let vs reſorte to him as oft as wee thinke vppon our owne curſedneſſe: that is to ſay, foraſmuch as wee knowe our ſelues worthie to bee reiected of God, and to bee as it were accurſed, becauſe there is nothing but vtter wickednes in vs: Let vs flee to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For if God gaue that remedie to his people vnder the Lawe, of being bleſſed by the prieſtes who were but mortall men: ſhall wee miſtruſt that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath not ſufficient power to doe away all our accurſedneſſe, ſo as God ſhall looke fauorable vppon vs, and receiue vs as his children? Then let vs hardily giue eare hereunto, and reſt vppon it with full truſt. And when wee bee about to pray, let vs aſſure our ſelues that wee haue an aduocate, who will make vs to finde fauor. And let vs not alledge as the Papiſtes doe, I am not worthie to pray to God; but let vs bee ſure that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt calleth vs to him. Trueth it is that wee ought to perceiue our owne vnworthineſſe: howbeit not to make vs to raunge away when wee pray vnto God, or to cauſe vs to ſeeke long windlaſſes, as who ſhoulde ſay, Such a Saint ſhall bee mine aduocate, or ſuch a Sheeſaint ſhall bee my patroneſſe: but to direct vs to him which is giuen vs of God his father, namely to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Thus much concerning the bleſſing.

Now the ſeruing of God imported the ſacrifices and all the reſt of the ceremonies. And at this day, they that are appointed miniſters of Gods woorde, haue the adminiſtration of Sacramentes, becauſe it is an appurtenance to Gods worde and doctrine which they bring: but our Lorde Ieſus is hee that hath made the onely and euerlaſting ſacrifice whereupon wee muſt reſt. And herein wee ſee the fooliſhneſſe that is in the Popedome: for the Prieſtes will needes counterfeit his ſacrifice, ſaying thus: O beholde the tribe of Leuie was appointed to ſerue God. Yea, but we muſt conſider what maner of Sacrifice God requireth and alloweth at this day. Will hee haue vs to flea Bullockes, Sheepe, Lambes, and ſuch other thinges? No verily. But Saint Paul ſayth that the ſacrifices which the Shepheardes of the Phil.2 17. Church muſt offer to God, are mens ſoules Rom.15.16 whome they winne by the preaching of his worde. Thoſe doe they dedicate vnto God, and that is the ſeruice which hee lyketh of. This is a part of that ſeruice of God, which is ſpirituall. And therefore let vs marke that wee muſt let Ieſus Chriſt alone with that which the holy ſcripture reſerueth vnto him: Namely the offering vp of himſelfe once for all, to purchaſe Act.13.38. vs euerlaſting forgiueneſſe of all our ſinnes, and the making of vs cleane and pure yet ſtill before God. Now then, there remaineth nothing but this onely, that wee be confirmed in the power that is brought vnto vs by his death and paſſion. And howe may that bee? By the vſe of the ſacramentes. When we receiue the Supper, wee make not a newe ſacrifice, as the Papiſtes were woont to doe in that diueliſh abhomination of their Maſſe: but we proteſt that God is at one with vs, when we be grounded in the death and paſſion of his onely ſonne, and that we be partakers thereof: and our preſent receiuing of the bread and wine that are giuen vs, is all one as if we were fed with his body and bloud as with meate and drinke. Thus ye ſee how we ought to apply the thinges to our inſtruction, which are ſpoken here concerning the ſacrifices that were to bee offered to GOD by the prieſtes of the Lawe.

Now let vs proceede with that which Moſes addeth here. He ſaith that the Prieſtes ſhall reſort thither with the gouerners and Iudges of the Citie, and take a young Heckfar (or Bullocke as they terme it here;) and cut off the necke of it, yea and that in a valley (ſaith he) as in a ſecret place, and namely in a valley that is barreine, and vntilled, as in a deſert place. This circumſtance is ſet downe to moue the ſtanders by to the more terror, when they ſaw the cutting off, of the Heckfars neck, and that they were come as into a ſecrete place. For it is certeine ẏ God paſſed not for the bloud of the Heckfar. Hath God a care of Oxen or 1.Cor.9.9. kine (ſayth Saint Paul,) as though he regarded them? His ſpeaking of them is for mens ſakes. And therefore let vs marke how God poynted out a valley, yea and a barraine valley, to the end that they which were there preſent, ſhould conceiue a certeine terror in themſelues. Wherat? At the ſmiting off of the bullockes head, as who ſhould ſay; Muſt wee come to this deſerte place for ſuch a matter? And what a thing is it thē that a man which is ſhaped after the image of God ſhould be ſlayne, and that ſuch a crime ſhould be committed? Shal not the Sunne, and the Moone, and all the ſtarres of the skye cry out for vengeāce to God? Shal not the largeneſſe of the earth frame an inditemēt as though it were written in paper or parchment? Thus yee ſee what we haue to conſider, in Gods appointing out of the place ſo with ſuch circumſtance.

Nowe afterward followeth the proteſtation. Our handes haue not doone this deede, neither haue our eyes ſeene it. When the Iudges & gouerners ſay, Our handes haue not done this deede; they meane the whole people as well as themſelues. For it is not enough that the rulers themſelues bee cleere of the murder: but they ſpeake in the name or behalfe of the whole bodie of the people whome they repreſent. And hereby it appeareth, that if the Magiſtrates ſuffer any wickedneſſe to lie lurking in any citie or countrie, they themſelues are guiltie thereof, and it is as much before God, as if they had giuen their conſentes to the dooing of it. Therefore let men marke well this ſaying, Our handes haue not done this deede: namely that ſuch as are in authoritie muſt aunſwere for the whole bodie of the people, ſo farre as lyeth in them: that is to ſay, that wicked dooinges haue not bin ſuffered to neſtle by their ſlouth and negligence: but that they haue ſearched them out diligently, and done their dutie in that behalfe: otherwiſe it will be in vaine for them to ſay, I was not the dooer of the deed. No, but thou diddeſt repreſent the whole people, thou waſt put in commiſſion by Gods appointment, and therefore ſith thou haſt ſuffred leawdneſſe to be committed within thy Iurisdiction, it is at thy hand that God wil require the account. And in very deede, wee ſee how it is Gods will, not onely in this place but alſo throughout the whole holy ſcripture, that when any treſpaſſe was committed in any trybe, the Elders ſhould ſtand forth as it were to confeſſe the peoples offences in their perſons. For inaſmuch as they were ſet in authoritie and place of honor, it behooued them to know that their charge was ſo much the more hard and weightie. That is the point which is to bee noted here.

And he addeth Our eyes haue not ſeene it. And hereby we may knowe (as I ſayd afore) that it is not enough for vs to haue our handes cleere: but it is required alſo that we ſhould not be priuie to any euill: For if we cloke it knowing of it, to whom is it to bee imputed? Truely we may well Matt. 27.24 waſhe our hands of it (as Pilate did) before men, as who ſhould ſay, I did it not, I am guiltleſſe of it: but God admitteth no ſuch mockerie. Therfore whenſoeuer we bee examined or depoſed vpon any matter, let vs not imagin that we ſhall ſcape ſkotfree before God becauſe we haue not done the actuall deede: Fot we muſt to the vttermoſt of our power find meanes that the miſchiefe may be redreſſed, ſo as one man may not be trodden vnder foote, and another be bolſtered and borne out, and conſequently common robberie be ſuffred to reigne diſorderly among men; but that right and euen dealing may bee mainteined among men: and let euery man further the ſame on his owne behalfe. And as concerning Iudges and Magiſtrates, let them alſo learne to haue eyes, that they play not the blinckardes and blindefolkes when euill is committed, ne thinke to eſcape when they can ſay, As for me, I haue no ſuch thing. Yes, but ſuch as are in authoritie of Iuſtice, muſt know that God hath ſet them aloft as it were in a watchtower to diſcouer thinges afarre off. If the Magiſtrates themſelues doe ſet a watchman in a high tower, and he excuſe himſelfe ſaying, I ſawe nothing: will they hold him excuſed? No, For hee was ſet there to looke about him, and that was his charge. Euen ſo our Lord ordeineth Magiſtrates to keepe good watch. And if they notwithſtanding doe ſhut their eyes, and make as though they ſawe nothing at all: ſhall it ſerue to acquit them? What an excuſe were that? Were it not too fond and trifling? So then, let vs marke well, that Magiſtrates muſt open their eyes and bee watchfull, that they may ſee what their duetie is. And if they wil be taken for guiltleſſe, they muſt looke to it that they may bee able to vſe this preſent proteſtation in trueth, Our eyes haue not ſeene it, neither haue our handes done this deede.

But yet beſides this, Moſes ſheweth that the citie or towne where a murder is committed, is not altogether cleere of it, and therefore that they muſt bee faine to craue pardon at Gods hand. Surely this ſeemeth to be with the extremeſt. What? Seeing we haue not conſented to the euill, but woulde haue puniſhed it, if it had bin done in our preſence, and wee proteſt that wee our ſelues did not the deede, neither doe wee knowe the dooer of the deed that wee might puniſhe him: ought not God to bee contented with all this? Nay, there is yet a further thing, namely that the committing of ſuch a fault, is as a defiling of the whole countrie, and a warning giuen vs of God to looke narrowlyer to our ſelues. True it is that he will not take vs for murderers: but yet for al that, his ſuffering of ſuch an offence to be committed, is as though he ſhold ſhew vs with his finger, yͤ he is gone frõ vs. For when God bleſſeth a countrie, he preſerueth it from all defilement. And the falling out of any defilement, is as a turning of Gods backe vppon vs, as if hee ſhould ſay, I haue no more care of you, I let you alone, I giue you ouer. The nation therefore that perceiueth God to giue any ſigne of his diſpleaſure, haue good cauſe to humble themſelues. And that is the cauſe why hee commaunded the Iudges and gouernours of the citie where a murder was committed, to thinke earneſtly vppon it, as if they ſhould ſay, Lorde haue pitie vppon thy people Iſrael, and take away this guiltleſſe bloud from among vs, and let not this deed bee imputed vnto vs.

Now if it be ſo, and yͭ there be no remedie to be found but only to flee to Gods mercie, and to craue forgiueneſſe not only for yͤ fault, but alſo becauſe men ought to feele yͭ he is angrie with the whole Citie: What is to be done when the miſdeede is apparant? Ought not men much more to make ſupplication to God, and to flee to his mercie, at leaſtwiſe if they were well aduiſed? Yes; but wee ſee what hardneſſe or rather blockiſhneſſe is nowadayes in moſt men, yea and well neere in all men. For when a miſdeede is committed, who is hee that regardeth it? True it is that if an outragious wickedneſſe be committed, men will perchaunce ſay, hee is a wicked man. But they conſider not that God warneth all folkes generally to ſay euery man in himſelfe, Alas how happeneth it that ſuch an enormitie is committed among vs, that all of vs ſhoulde bee defiled with it before GOD? For that this is come to paſſe and wee neuer wiſt it, is a token that wee haue euill profited in Gods worde. For wee thinke not that his giuing of ſuch examples vnto vs, is for our inſtruction. But although wee ſleepe, yet dooth not GOD ceaſe to doe his office. Wee heare what hee ſayth when there is no Iuſtice nor vpright dealing in a citie. They bee princes of Sodome, they be theeues Eſa.6.20. and murtherers. Hee ſayth this to Iudges. Not for that they had cut mens throates that were traueling: No; but becauſe they had not mainteined the good and guiltleſſe. Therefore he ſaith, Beholde, it is a citie of bloud. The very citie of Ieruſalem it ſelfe, which God had choſen to bee his royall pallace and Temple, is called a citie of bloud and a denne of theeues. And why? Becauſe many outrages and diſorders were there committed, and many poore ſoules were trodden vnder foote without ſuccor, and Iuſtice was become as an open robberie. So then, let vs learne to reſorte to our God when any offence is committed, and let euery of vs thinke with himſelfe, Alas, our Lorde doeth vs to vnderſtande that he is angrie with vs, in that ſuch things are hapned, and that ſuch enormities are committed among vs. And therefore let euery of vs craue pardon of them, and alſo thinke thus with our ſelues: Of whom is it long that I am not lyke one of them, but onely of Gods preſeruing of me? And let vs alſo beware for the time to come. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde, as in the reſpect of the things that are ſpoken here concerning murder.

There was alſo the ſtriking off of the Hekfers heade, to make men the more afraid: as who ſhould ſay, that the beholding of a poore beaſt ſlayne after that ſorte, doth moue men the more. And what is to bee ſayd then of a man, which is ſhaped after the image of God? Wee ſee then, how our Lord meant to teach the Elders and Iudges that were preſent at the ſacrifice, that they might the better learne the horribleneſſe of all murders. For if wee bee afraid of a beaſt: it is good reaſon that wee ſhould bee touched much more to the quicke without all compariſon, for a humaine creature. As touching the waſhing of their handes, it is added to doe the people to vnderſtand, that they were after a ſorte defiled, or rather that they ſhould declare both before the Angels and before all creatures, that they might waſhe themſelues from it. And this ſerued for the time of the ceremonies of the Lawe. But wee muſt vnderſtand that it was not our Lordes meaning to foade his people by ſuch ſignes in counterfeiting and hypocriſie. What gayned Pilate by his waſhing of his handes? Was hee cleared from the death of Ieſus Chriſt? No, that waſhing of his was a token of his defiling. Wherefore waſhed he his handes, but becauſe hee knewe himſelfe guiltie of the death of Ieſus Chriſt? Whereof hee thought to cleere himſelfe by a drop of water: and that was too great a dalying with God. And that is the cauſe why I ſayd that his waſhing ingraued his ſinne the deeper before GOD, and made him the more vnexcuſable. And therefore had the people come diſſemblingly to waſhe their handes; it had bin but a further charging of themſelues, and a making of themſelues the more faultie. But Gods will was that the Elders ſhould vſe ſuch ceremonies, to doe vs the better to vnderſtand; that wee be fleſhly, and conſider not our ſinnes vnleſſe they bee as it were pointed out with the finger. Wee conceiue not Gods wrath, except wee haue ſome ſigne of it before vs. God then meant to declare, that when there is any ſuch offence, wee bee defiled, ſo as there is nothing but filthineſſe in vs, but God miſlyketh of vs, & we cannot preace vnto him without prouoking him to wrath. Marke that for one point.

And therewithall hee meant to ſhewe vs, how we ought to apply our indeuour to cleaneſſe. And this cleaneſſe is not compaſſed with corruptible water; but it muſt bee firſt in our conſciences, and afterwardes in all our members. Wherefore let vs learne to looke to it, that our handes bee not bloudy, as the Eſa.1.15. Prophet Eſay termeth the hands of thoſe which did wrong to their neighbours: and let not our feete runne after bloud, neither let our members bee defiled, nor made inſtrumentes of vnrighteouſneſſe, as Saint Paule ſpeaketh of them in the ſixt to the Romans. When we indeuour after that ſort to keepe our ſelues vndefiled to Godward; then do wee obſerue the waſhing that was vnder the Lawe, to reteine the trueth and ſubſtance thereof. And at this day whereas we haue baptiſme, the water betokeneth the lyke; not that it is ſufficient of it ſelfe, nor that it is of force to waſhe away our ſinnes, for what ſhould then become of our Lord Ieſus Chriſtes bloud? It were too groſſe a blaſphemie for a man to put his truſt in a viſible ſigne: we muſt lift vp our mindes higher. In lyke caſe is it with the Lordes ſupper; Inſomuch that when wee come to the table of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, if wee thinke to finde our ſoulehealth in a bit of bread or in a droppe of wine; wee bee very brutiſh, and there is neither reaſon nor vnderſtanding in vs. But when we bee led further, ſo as by eating of the bread we conceiue that Chriſt is our very ſuſtenance, and that although wee bee ſpiritually dead in our ſelues, yet we ceaſe not to liue in him: then doth the ſacrament turne to our benefite. And to that vſe muſt we apply the doctrine that is ſet downe here.

And for a concluſion let vs marke further, that although the men that are murthered doe no more ſpeake vnto vs, becauſe they be dead: yet the bloud of them cryeth out for vengeance againſt vs. See wee not what proceeded from the bloud of Abell? Hee needed no man of lawe to pleade his caſe: for his very bloud cryed vnto God as is reported thereof. Whereby wee bee done to vnderſtand, that although the parties whom we haue miſuſed doe forgiue vs, yet will God euer be a Iudge to vs, vntill we haue acknowledged our faults, and indeuour to amend thē. Inſomuch that although his wrath appeare not towardes vs, & that our wrong dealing haue lyen long concealed, ſo as it ſeeme to bee ſtarke dead & quite forgotten: yet notwithſtanding, the remembera̅nce thereof is alwayes freſh before God.Let vs conſider this,and let euery of vs in true repentance rebuke himſelfe and amende his miſdoings,indeuoring to liue quietly & without doing any harme. And for the doing thereof,let vs thinke vpon the outcrie whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in the Epiſtle to the Hebrues, ſaying that the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt Heb.12.25. cryeth much better than did the bloud of Abell; Not to aske vengeance of God againſt vs, ſo we receiue him in ſuch wiſe as our ſins bee waſhed & clenſed away. For to that purpoſe was that holy bloud of his ſhed. True it is that the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſhall cry out for vengeance againſt all the faithleſſe and froward ſorte, & againſt ſuch as haue refuſed the doctrine of yͤ Goſpel & troden it vnder foot, & made a skorn of it,& al prophane folk;for al ſuch ſhal be guilty of the bloudſhed of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But when we receiue his bloud by faith, & know yͭ it ought to ſerue vs as a purgatiõ to make vs righteous and innocent before God:let vs aſſure our ſelues yͭ the ſame bloud hath his cry.And in deed we ſee how the Goſpell ſoundeth and ringeth in our eares to yͤ intent we ſhould know the vertue of yͤ bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For it is no dead thing:but it is euer freſh, as the Apoſtle Heb.10.20. ſpeketh of it in another place.Yea & it is ſo freſh yͭ it hath his liuely force continually, to reconcile vs vnto God. Therefore let vs rightly weigh this ineſtimable benefit,& receiue the peace of the Goſpell, whereby God witneſſeth vnto vs, that he admitteth the bloud of his ſonne for our waſhing, that we may appeare before his maieſtie with full hope.

Now let vs caſt our ſelues downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgemẽt of our faults,praying him to make vs perceiue thẽ more and more. Yea and let vs confeſſe,not only the faultes which we know by our ſelues, and which we perceiue,& whereof we ought to be aſhamed before men: but alſo our ignorances & our ſecret ſinnes whereof we be now guiltie.And foraſmuch as we know how there be many vices and infirmities in vs,let vs mourne for them before God, and let it make vs to proceede more and more in true repentance. And in the meane while let vs not continue wilfull; but let vs take courage to turne vnto him; and let vs not looke to haue a bullock or a brute beaſt to anſwere for vs nowadayes, as though the bloud thereof ſhould ſerue vs for a ſacrifice:but let vs reſorte to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, that ſeeing hee hath offered vp the onely and euerlaſting ſacrifice, in his death and paſſion once for all, to ſet vs free from all our debtes,and that hee calleth vs dayly vnto him by his Goſpell: wee ſeeke not any other meane to ſerue God withall,but proceede in all pureneſſe vnder his hand & guiding. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxv. of December. 1555.

The Cxxi. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the one and twentith Chapter.

10 When thou goeſt to battell againſt thine enemies,and the Lord thy God hath giuen them into thy hand, and thou haſt led them into captiuitie:

11 Then if thou ſee a woman among the priſoners that is faire to looke vpon,and thou fall in loue with her,and canſt finde in thy heart to take her to thy wife:

12 Thou ſhalt cary her home to thine houſe, and there ſhee ſhall ſhaue her head and pare her nayles:

13 And thou ſhalt ſtrippe her out of the apparell wherein ſhee was taken priſoner, and keepe her cloſe in thine houſe, and let her bewayle her father and her mother by the ſpace of a moneth. And after this thou ſhalt goe in vnto her, and ſo be maried vnto her,and ſhee ſhalbe thy wife.

14 And if it fall out that ſhee like thee not, thou ſhalt let her goe where ſhe liſteth: but thou maiſt not ſell her for money,nor make marchandiſe of her,becauſe thou haſt humbled her.

HAd the Iewes held thẽſelues within the rule which God gaue them, they ſhould rather haue taken them wiues of their owne tribes, that they might not in any wiſe haue intermingled thẽſelues with the idolaters. But foraſmuch as mens luſts can hardly be bridled, God graunteth heere a toleration, that when a man which hath taken a heathen woman priſoner by the law of armes, and is minded to take her to his wife: ere he ſo doe, hee ſhall cauſe her to mourne for her father and her mother,as though they were dead, to the intent ſhee may forget both her countrie & kinred whereof ſhe came, as though ſhe were made new againe, and graffed into the body of the people of Iſraell.

Therefore let vs marke that in this text GOD meant to reſtreyne the luſtes of ſuch as had no hold of themſelues in the time of war, but would needes take ſtraunge women, that had ſerued idols afore. Now the meane was (as I haue ſayd afore) that the women ſhould bee as it were chaunged, ſo as they might no more remember their former lyfe. And that is the cauſe why hee ſayth that they ſhould ſhaue their heades, and pare their nayles. Some tranſlate it, and make their nayles, (for ſo is it word for word,) that is to ſay, let them growe that they might become greate, to diſfigure them. And they thinke that by that meanes God meant to bring their huſbandes in miſlyking of them. But it is cleane contrarie. For lyke as in French, they ſay commonly to make heare, and to make a beard, [when they meane the powling or rounding of the hayre, and the ſhauing, clipping, or trimming of the beard:] ſo doe the Hebrewes vſe the ſelfeſame phraſe of ſpeach. And Gods appointing of this ceremonie to be vſed, was to take away all vncleanes: as who ſhould ſay, that if it were poſſible for them to ſcrape off their very skins, they ſhould doe it, to the intẽt they might no more be the ſame that they were before, but rather vtterly renounce their own byrthright, & become Iewes to ſerue ẏ god which gaue his law by ẏ hãd of Moſes. To the ſame end alſo tended the ſorrow which they were to make in mourning for their fathers and mothers. Thus we ſee now to what end this Lawe was giuen.

Now remaineth to gather the inſtruction that is conteined therein. For we ſee what libertie mẽ take. When they haue any worldly proſperitie, then their luſtes increaſe and boyle more and more, ſo as they cannot eaſily be quieted. When men haue taken a Citie, or made any conqueſt, they cannot ſtay thẽſelues frõ taking too much ſcope. If the Iewes had taryed quietly at home in their owne houſes, and euery man followed Gods ordinance in taking a wife of his owne kinred; (not the brother the Siſter, for that was forbidden by the Lawe: but I meane of the lyne of Abraham, which was the lynage that God had choſen out of the whole worlde): they had bin preſerued from defiling themſelues with the Infidels. For it was a kind of defilement whẽ a Iewe maried a Heathenwoman, which had bin nuſſeled in ſuperſtition all her life long. They ſhould not then haue ranged abroade. But had they once any warre, and ẏ God gaue them the victorie ouer any people, then their licentiouſnes braſt out beyond his bounds. Wherby we ſee howe it is not alwayes for our profite, that our Lord ſhould giue vs too much aduantage. For if we growe too ſtrong: our headines becommeth vntollerable. If wee think ourſelues able to make our part good: by and by we ſet vp our briſtles & our combes, as the common ſaying is: and it is ſeene by experience. Therfore if God deale not with vs after our owne lyking, let vs aſſure our ſelues that his humbling of vs is for our benefit, to the end we ſhould alwayes continue in ſome ſobrietie and mildeneſſe. Yea and euen when he increaſeth vs, we muſt learne to hũble ourſelues willingly. For whẽſoeuer we aduaunce our ſelues our pride ſhal euer be puniſhed & beaten down. And if we be ſtifnecked, God muſt needes ſtrike vpon vs with maine blowes. Such as ſubmit thẽſelues of their own good will, and paſſe not their boundes, are comforted of God. But as for thoſe which wil needs win him by ſtoutnes; they muſt needs feele his hand the ſorer and heauier vpon their heades.

The thing then which we haue to note in the firſt place, is ẏ men abuſe Gods bleſſinges & gratious giftes. Inſomuch ẏ if he ſend them worldly proſperitie, they take occaſion to glory too much therein, hardening their hearts and following their luſtes ſo licẽtiouſly, as though (to their ſeeming) all thinges were lawful for them. We ſee it too much: ſo that if men haue obteined a victorie, they beare thẽſelues in hand ẏ they may vſe all maner of pillage & rauiſhing, ſo as nothing is ſpared. When we haue any ſuperioritie aboue others; at what point be we? We could finde in our hearts to make thẽ our vnderlinges, & to ſet our feete vpon their throtes. Sith we ſee it is ſo, let vs vnderſtãd ẏ our Lord hath good cauſe to hold vs at a low ſtay, to the end he may ẏ better weald vs, and make vs to beare his yoke quietly. And therefore let ſuch as haue any worldly proſperitie, looke wel to thẽſelues, ẏ they be not puffed vp with too much pride, knowing for a certeintie ẏ our nature is diſpoſed thereunto, and that it ſwayeth too much that way. Wherfore let euery man ſuſpect himſelf in the time of proſperitie, and be weladuiſed to hold himſelfe within the boundes of modeſtie.

And now we haue to treate of mariage: & to ſhew why our Lord did ſo ſtraitly will and commaund ẏ Iewes, ẏ they ſhould not marry with ẏ heathen & infidels. S. Paul not ẘout cauſe lykeneth our matches in marriage to yokes. For like as when a cupple of Oxen are yoked together, if ẏ one goe, ẏ other muſt needes follow; & if the one draw awry, ẏ other cãnot but ſway aſide too: euen ſo fareth it in ẏ familiaritie betweene man & man. True it is ẏ we may be cõuerſant among ẏ heathen, ẘout matching with thẽ: for elſe (as ſaith S. Paul) we ſhould be faine to get vs out of ẏ world, if we would come in cõpanie of none but good men & Gods childrẽ. But there are meanes to trafique man with man, & yet ẏ muſt be done but in maner of wayfaring. He ẏ buieth of a mã, would not inquire of his good behauiour, except he feared ẏ he ſhould be deceiued by him: Only he buieth his ware & goes his way, & yet for all ẏ he is not in any couenant ẘ him with whome he bargained. But if he once enter into familiar cõuerſation, and fall to eating and drinking with him; and there groweth ſuch acquaintance betwixt them, that they liue commonly together: then becommeth it a yoke ſaith S. Paul. Now we knowe that mariage is the holyeſt kind of companie in all the world: inſomuch that a man ſhal leaue both father and mother to keepe companie with his wife. Therefore it is vnpoſſible for a man to contract mariage, without coupling himſelfe with his wife, ſo as eache bee made priuie to others minde, will, and purpoſe in all things. For we ſee what hath happened; how the parties that haue giuen themſelues ouer in that wiſe, haue in the end bin vtterly mard, & God did as it were cut thẽ off from

Numb.25.1 & 31.15. his people,ſo as they became as rottē members, and all through the counſell of Balaam.For whē he ſawe that God opened not his mouth to curſe the Iſraelites, but rather that when as hee had conſpired to vtter curſes, hee was inforced to ſpeake the cleane contrarie : for his laſt ſhift hee gaue counſell, that they ſhoulde let the Iewes enter communication with the heathen women, that they might deceiue the Iewes' hearts,& corrupt them with Idolatrie, whereby they ſhould prouoke Gods vengeance againſt them,& that ſhould turn to their confuſion.Nay 1.Kings.11. if there were no mo but Salomon, his example were enough to make their hayre ſtand vp vpon their heades,which did well conſider whereinto he fell. Surely he was an excellent man : It was Gods wil to ſet him forth as a lookingglaſſe, or as a peereles pearle,& he was indued wͭ ſo excellent wiſedome, that all men wondered at him, yea & he was euen a Prophet of God. Yet for all this,the heathen women deceiued his hart, inſomuch that hee ſuffered idolatrie to haue full ſcope,& to reigne in the countrie which GOD had reſerued & dedicated to himſelfe, ſo that he builded Temples vnto idols. When we ſee that ſuch a man (who was an Angel of heauen) did fall downe to hell,& that God gaue him ouer to a wicked minde; by meanes whereof he became ſo beaſtly that he ouerthrew yͤ ſeruice & religion of God:how ſhal they doe which are far off from profiting ſo much as he?So then we ſee it is not without cauſe that God ſo ſtreitely forbade the Iewes to take wyues of forraine nations, & ſpecially of the countrie of Chanaan. But generally his meaning was, that they ſhould not match themſelues with idolaters. For why?It is a making of an entrie & an opening of a gap to Satan that he may put all to hauock,& bring all things to diſorder & confuſion.God therefore ment to preuent that.True it is yͭ at this day now that yͤ Goſpell hath bin preached ouer all the world, there is neither Gentile nor Iew any more: wee haue no more any ſuch diſtinction as was vnder Gal.3.28. the Lawe. For the ſeparation wall(ſaith S. Paul) is brokē downe,ſo as we muſt now link together Eph.2.14. in brotherly concord,foraſmuch as God will be called vpon of all nations,& that all men ſhould call him father: and therefore we muſt knit our ſelues together.Yea,but there are which ſeparat themſelues through vnbeleefe, & wil not be of yͤ bodie of the Church, but refuſe yͤ God which is declared to vs by Ieſus Chriſt,& will not be partakers of the adoption which hee offereth to all men both great & ſmall.Vnto ſuch we muſt not cleaue,at leaſtwiſe if we intend not to alienate our ſelues from God & from the way of ſaluation. Whoſoeuer thē matcheth himſelf wittingly & wilfully with the vnbeleeuers:dooth as much as in him lyeth to baniſh himſelf from the kingdome of God. And for that cauſe doth S. Paul vſe this exhortation, that wee ſhould not beare the yoke with vnbeleeuers, telling vs that the thinges which were ſpoken in olde time to the Iewes,belong alſo vnto vs, ſo as it behoooueth vs to flee far from all ſuperſtition, & frō all ſuch as intangle vs therein.And why?For we not only beare the materiall veſſels of the Lordes Temple,but alſo are his very Temples wherein hee dwelleth by his holy ſpirit: and therefore wee muſt offer both our bodies and ſoules in ſacrifice to him,that we may be wholy dedicated vnto him. For ſeeing he hath choſen vs to be his childrē,ought we not to be clenſed frō al corruption both of bodie & mind,as hath bin declared? 1.Cor.6.19 20.

Seeing it is ſo then, let vs learne that when a man is to marrie,he muſt (as neere as hee can) chooſe him ſuch a wife as may further him in the ſeruing of God purely.For why?We be fraile enough of our ſelues, without being corrupted of other folkes. And if a man be in a good way, and be neuer ſo wel minded and deſirous to doe well: he ſhal ſoone be marred by euil companie. And the world ſees it. If a man doe but fall to drinking with a leawd fellow or a naughtipacke: he is in daunger to turne backe and to become euery day worſe than other; ſo that yee woulde wonder to ſee him become a very diuel. Now if a little tippling doe this; what will inſue when a man ſhall be faine to keepe companie with his wife as long as they liue? Truely it is a manifeſt tempting of God,when a man throwes himſelfe headlong downe after that faſhiō, and ſtoppeth his eyes at the taking of a wife,hauing no regard of his choyce yͭ he might be helped by her,ſo as they might behaue themſelues holily & according to Gods will with one common conſent. That(I tell you) is a poynt which it behooueth vs to marke wel.And what is the cauſe that nowadayes ſo many mariages come to ill end, but that men haue not an eye to God, but mens mindes are ſet vppon their luſtes and pleaſure, or elſe they ſeeke for wealth? God then is not accounted of,& therefore he is faine to reuenge ſuch contempt, and ſo doth hee as experience ſheweth.So much the more ought wee to marke well how it is ſayd in this text, that if a man will marrie a ſtraunge woman,(that is to ſay an Infidel)which hath not bin brought vp in the feare of God,nor bin inſtructed in his word,) he muſt looke that ſhee be cleane chaunged, before hee euer come at her. For a wife is as a deadly poyſon, vnleſſe ſhe haue firſt forſaken her former conuerſation, and profeſſed to liue thenceforth to Godward, and to ſticke purely to his word, & haue put her old bringing vp quite out of her minde, yea & euen caſt her ſlough as they ſay.

And furthermore, whereas it is ſayd here, that the woman muſt ſhaue her head, pare her nayles, put away her [old] apparell,and mourne as though ſhe had forgone her father and mother: in deed thoſe ceremonies ſerued for the Iewes, and wee be not to vſe thoſe figures nowadayes. But yet muſt wee haue an eye whereunto the ſame tended: namely that the women (as I haue ſayd afore) ſhould be as it were chaunged, yͤ they might bee brought into yͤ body of Gods Church. This is a ground therfore, yͭ when a man intēdeth to take a wife,he muſt looke yͭ ſhe be reformed aforehād & that ſhe know God & his word,ſo as ſhe ioyne herſelf thereto,& be ready to giue ouer al idolatrie.Vntil a woman be at yͭ point, it is not lawful for a Chriſtian man to take her to his wife.

And if he take her before, and graunt him the grace to reclaime her afterwarde; yet muſt hee vnderſtand that he hath done amiſſe. And looke what is ſaide of men, concerneth women likewiſe. For as women haue their inticementes to allure the hearts of men: ſo men may eaſily tẽpt women to turne them from the right way of ſaluation, and to ouerthrowe them as the world ſeeth. And therefore when a woman doeth of her owne will go take a husbande that is a deſpiſer of God, a wicked and looſeliuer, a lawleſſe perſon, a drunkarde or a ſwearer: it is all one as if ſhee forſooke God, and baniſhed her ſelfe out of his Church, and ſhee deſerueth to haue all manner of curſedneſſe to light vppon her head.

And where as this is tolde vs concerning wedlocke; let vs vnderſtande it likewiſe of al other things that may thruſt vs out of our way: and let vs learne to bee conuerſant with ſuch companions, that wee may euer bee edified ſtill to the better. For wee haue neede of ſuch folke as may amende vs, becauſe that euery of vs is frayle of himſelfe. And therefore let vs ſeeke to match our ſelues with ſuch as haue the feare of God, and leade a holy & honeſt life: & let vs ſhunne ſuch as go about to intangle vs in their abhominations. When wee ſee a malicious and frowarde perſon, a deſpyſer of God, or a luſtie Gallant that paſſeth not to bee an offence to all men: let vs eſteeme him as a plague, and let vs vtterly eſchue him. For why? whoſoeuer comes nye him, ſhall ſurely be infected by him out of hande. And that is apparant. So then, let vs beare well in mynde, that here our Lorde intended to ſhewe, that wee muſt haunt ſuch companie as is fit to teache vs to doe well, and that on the contrarie parte, wee muſt ſhunne all occaſions of euill, becauſe of the infirmitie that is in vs, and wee neede not much to turne vs away from weldooing.

Alſo it is to bee noted, that ſeeing God hath ordayned ſo many ceremonies for the women which were to renounce their owne kinred: therein hee meant to doe vs to wit, that wee muſt forget our owne nature, if wee will ſerue him purely and as hee commaundeth vs. Therfore when wee haue had any wicked trayning, and haue beene nuſled in any euill cuſtome; it is not ynough for vs to bee tolde that ſuch a thing is euill. For although wee ſee it is ſo, and haue it throughly prooued vnto vs: yet do we not ceaſſe to bee ſteyned with it ſtill. It is ſo deepely rooted in vs, as it cannot bee plucked vp at the firſt daſh. And this ought to bee throughly knowen vnto vs, that when a man hath beene naughtily brought vp from his childhood, and hath dwelled in a houſe of diſorder till hee come to twentie yeares of age: although hee take paynes all the time of his life after, to forget the corruptions which hee had ſeene, and wherewith hee had beene imbrewed before: yet can hee neuer bring it to paſſe, but that hee ſhall alwayes retayne ſtill ſome ſpot or blemiſh. And hereby wee ſee howe gracious God is to ſuch as are ſo well brought vp, that they haue ſeene none other but good and honeſt examples, whereby they haue learned to ſerue God and to honour him. It is an ineſtimable priuilege, when God graunteth vs to haue ſuch bringing vp: and vnhappie bee they which abuſe it. And this ought to bee ſo much the greater prouocation to fathers and mothers to nurture well their children, and to take paynes in the good bringing of them vp, becauſe there is ſuch corruption in men, that when they haue once beene imbrewed and infected with vices, they can hardly refrayne them with great payne. This then is that which in effect wee haue to remember vppon this text, to the ende that all men ſhoulde be vigilant in bringing vp their children in true religion and vertue.

Again, on the other ſide let children on their parte be well ware that they diſappoint not the grace of God, but rather that they make it auaylable, that by their good bringing vp, they may fare the better all their life after. Alſo fathers and mothers muſt take good heede, that they ſuffer not their children to runne at rouers: for wee ſee howe it is ynough to marre them out of hand, and to bring the poore ſoule to vtter vndooing. Specially when wee our ſelues haue beene euil brought vp, that is to ſay euill taught; let vs doe the beſt wee can to weede out the infections that are in vs. And let vs not thinke it an eaſie thing to do, ſo as wee ſhoulde neede no more but to ſhake our eares at it, as a number doe, who when they haue played the naughtie packes, thinke themſelues to bee the beſt reformed men in the worlde, ſo long as they ruſh not out into all extremities, when yet notwithſtanding they faile not to retaine ſtill ſome parte of their former corruptions, and all the worlde may ſee ſtill the markes of their euill bringing vp in them. For why? They conſider not howe harde it is for a man to refourme himſelfe, which hath beene naughtily brought vp. And aboue all things, let this bee obſerued in religion. For as for thoſe that haue beene brought vp in poperie, I meane which haue beene nuſled in it, that is to ſay, made beaſtes, (for one of the holyeſt poyntes of doctrine that is taught and eſteemed among the Papiſtes, is that men ſhould be without wit and without reaſon, and not diſcerne any thing themſelues, but rather ſuffer themſelues to bee led by the noſes like brute beaſts;) when, I ſay they haue beene nuſled in ſuch ignorance, although they come afterwarde to the pureneſſe of the Goſpell, yet notwithſtanding they keepe ſtill ſome dregges, vnleſſe they take marueylous great payne to ridde away all their former corruption, as euery of vs fyndeth by experience in himſelfe.

True it is that many ſillie ſoules perceiue it not in themſelues. For when it is tolde them that the Maſſe is an abhomination, that diuerſe things in it are of Satans deuyſing, & that they muſt holde themſelues to Gods worde: very well ſay they, all is one to mee, I will forbeare the Maſſe, and ſhrift, and all the thinges that I haue ſeene in times paſt, I giue them ouer. And why? Becauſe they bee no longer in vſe. Therefore they bee nowe layde aſleepe. But if an altar were ſet vp againe, a man coulde not ſo ſoone turne his hande, but they woulde by & by bee gadding to Maſſe, as faſt as they flocke nowe to Sermons. And their comming to ſermons is not to bee edified; but rather the word of God ſerues to condemne them, and to make them vnexcuſable. And as for ſuch, they wote not what it is to fight againſt popiſh ſuperſtitions. But ſuch as are well wakened and touched to the quicke with the feare of God, when they examine themſelues, will thinke thus: Go to, I haue yet ſtill this ſmatch of my wicked bringing vp in my chyldehood remayning in mee. A man which is duely touched with the feare of God, and deſirous to profite in Gods worde, ſhall finde at tenne or twentie yeares ende that there remayneth ſtill ſome roote thereof behynde, and muſt bee fayne to fight againſt it. Euery man ſees this in his owne caſe. For looke howe much one man hath bin deeper plunged than another in thoſe curſed meetinges or aſſemblies, ſo much the more nouriſhment of them doeth hee retayne ſtill euer after. In ſo much that euen thoſe which haue profited beſt in Gods ſchoole, if they haue once beene drowned in theſe Munkeries, or in the helliſh dungeons of Poperie, do feele in themſelues I wote not what dregges thereof remayning in them euer after. And our Lorde holdeth them downe, and by meanes thereof giueth them as it were a Whetſtone to ſharpen them to the incounter, that they may the better knowe their owne vyces, and bee the fitter to teache others. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, wee may well aſſure our ſelues that wee ſhall not by and by haue rooted out the corruptions which wee haue receyued by our euill bringing vp in our chyldhood. And that is it which our Lorde meant by the figure which hee ſetteth downe heere, namely, that the women muſt ſhaue off their hayre, pare their nayles, put away their accuſtomed apparell, and bee quite and cleane chaunged, if they will dwell among the people of God: ſo as they muſt after a ſorte bee made newe againe, and haue vtterly renounced their owne kinred. Wee ſee nowe howe ſuch as haue beene trayned vp in euill, and plunged in ſuperſtition, muſt fight all their life long againſt their vices, that they may reclayme themſelues fully vnto God.

But wee muſt goe yet one ſteppe further, and put the thing in vre which is ſayde in the fiue and fortith Pſalme, agreeing vnto that which is ſayde heere: Hearken my daughter, forget thine owne people, and thy kinred, and thy fathers houſe. There it is ſpoken concerning Salomons wife: but vnder that figure it is ſhewed vnto vs howe Gods Church is marryed ſpiritually to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: namely vpon condition that ſhee forget her father and her kinred, and all her former trade of life, and all the cuſtomes of her countrey. And I tolde you that this text concerneth the thinges that are contayned heere. For why? Shee was a woman of a ſtraunge countrye, and had beene an ydolater all the tyme of her life: and therefore it was ſayde vnto her that ſhee muſt forget all the tyme paſt, and put her bringing vp out of her remembrance, to the end ſhee might dedicate her ſelfe to GOD, and then the king woulde loue her beautie. As if it were ſayde, that king Salomon ought not to take any pleaſure in his wife, nor haue any delight or liking in her, vntill ſhee had proteſted herſelfe to bee deſirous to bee wholly vnited to Gods people, and had ſeparated herſelfe from all the abhominations of Egypt. And I haue tolde you, that herein wee haue a general rule for all men, of what kinred or countrey ſo euer wee bee. For why? It is the ſonne of God that is our true Salomon, who contracteth holye wedlocke with his Church, and will haue vs to bee as a wife vnto him. And to the ſame ende ſerueth the preaching of the Goſpell, as ſayeth Saint Paul in the eleuenth Chapter of the ſeconde Epiſtle to the Corinthians. I muſt marrye you (ſayeth hee) as chaſte virgines vnto Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore let vs marke, that whenſoeuer the Goſpell is preached vnto vs, it is all one as if Chriſt wooed vs to marrye with him, after the ſame manner that men ſue vnto women when they woulde match with them in wedlocke. And ſo our Lorde thinkes it not ynough to take vs as his ſouldiers and ſeruants: but hee will alſo haue vs to bee incorporated into him, and to bee as neere vnto him as the wife is to her husbande. But vppon what condition? So long as wee continue in our own nature, we cannot be ioyned vnto him, neither can he take any pleaſure in vs: and therfore we muſt forget our owne ſtocke, & our kinsfolkes; that is to ſay, we muſt become new creatures. For what haue wee ſo long as we hold of our father Adã, or any thing at all that is of man? what haue we (ſay I) but vtter frowardneſſe? Wherefore let vs marke well, that this figure muſt ſerue vs for an inſtruction at this day: namely, that whereas vnder the lawe, our Lorde willed heathen women to pare their nayles, to ſhaue off the hayre of their heads, & to put away their former apparell & attyre; it is all one as if hee ſhewed vs in a liuely picture, that we cannot bee of the body of his Church, nor of the houſholde of faith, nor admitted into his fauour, except we bee ſtripped out of our accuſtomed apparel, that is to ſay, except wee forſake our olde maners & trade of life, and bee ſo chaunged, as wee may ſhewe openly that our deſire is not to bee wedded any more to our ſelues, but to be gouerned by him, & to forſake all that we haue of our own nature, & al yͭ euer we haue learned by euill cuſtom. Now we ſee how beneficial this leſſō is for vs, & that God ſpake it not for yͤ Iewes only, but yͭ he ment to giue vs alſo a profitable inſtruction if we can skill to put it wel in vre.

Now whereas it is ſayde, that the woman ſhall bewayle her father and her mother: it is not meant that women ſhoulde be ſorie to come to liue after Gods worde: but here our Lorde hath done vs to vnderſtande that the naturall affections cannot bee mortified at the firſt chop, without ſome ſtriuing againſt them, as we ſee too much by experience: inſomuch that euen after a man hath beene trayned vp in Gods worde, although hee bee deſirous to behaue him ſelfe as becommeth him; yet ſhall hee finde great gaynſtryuings and contrarieties in himſelfe, ſo as hee muſt be faine to inforce himſelf. And it is not for one day, but for all our life long, that our luſtes and fleſhly affections ſtriue againſt Gods ſpirite which dwelleth in vs and ſtirreth vs vp and prouoketh vs vnto good. Wherefore let vs marke that whereas our Lorde ſpeaketh heere of ſorrowing, it is all one as if hee had ſayde, that although a woman mourne for her kinred and be greeued with her ſinfull and corrupt affections: yet notwithſtanding, her lamenting muſt be after ſuch a ſort, that in the ende ſhee thruſt them vnder foote and forget them. And hereby wee haue to note, that our ſeruing of God, muſt not bee alonely when thinges fall out after our lyking and after our heartes deſire, ſo as wee bee nothing pinched in the dooing thereof; but alſo euen when wee bee vexed and ſtoong with our wicked luſtes; In ſo much that although it bee harde for vs to frame our ſelues to the obeying of Gods commaundementes, and wee feele it as a bitter medicine: yet muſt wee not therefore bee out of heart. For it is much better for vs to weepe in ſorrowing for our ſinnes and offences, and to forſake them; than to bee merry and to laugh, and in the meane whyle to haue this threat ſounding in our ears, that our laughter ſhalbee turned into weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. Matth.8.12.

And therefore let vs marke well, that heerein our Lorde ment to put vs ſtil in minde, that whatſoeuer infirmities bee in vs, yet muſt they not make our heartes to quayle, but wee muſt ſtill ſo inforce our ſelues to amendement, as wee may alwayes goe on forwarde, howſoeuer wee fare. And if Satan caſt ſtoppes in our wayes, to make vs retyre or turne head; wee muſt thruſt them backe, and ſtrayne our ſelues to ouercome them. Although then that we be driuen to mourne as though wee bewayled our kinsfolkes and friends; yet muſt wee ſtill holde out in renouncing worldly things, that we may giue ouer our ſelues vnto our GOD, and that Chriſt may haue the poſſeſſion of vs quietly, and wee faithfully keepe the promiſe of the ſacred & ſpirituall mariage which he contracteth with vs by the Goſpel.

And it is ſayde, that this muſt bee done by the ſpace of a moneth, during which time the man ſhall keepe her in his houſe without touching her, yea, or without comming at her. Hereby wee ſee, that (as was ſayde at the beginning) God in this place did ſomwhat beare and diſpence with the Iewes, becauſe they were too greatly giuen to their owne lykings: howbeit that was but with a moderation. And thereby wee bee taught (as I haue touched alreadie at the beginning) to eſchewe the occaſions that might deceiue vs by their intycementes. For wee can no ſooner open our eyes, but Satan hath ſome meane or other to daſle them in ſuch ſorte, that hee will drawe them to him by and by. And hee hath his ſnares ſo layde aforehande, that wee ſhalbee caught ere wee bee aware. What will become of vs then, when wee ſeeke occaſions afarre off? Wee had neede to betake our ſelues to God both earely and late, as the holy Ghoſte him ſelfe doeth vs to vnderſtande where hee ſayeth [in our behalfe:] Lorde, turne away Pſal.119.31. mine eyes from all temptations. As much is Pſal.141.3. ſayde of our eares and of all our other ſenſes. For all of them are but as meſſengers of lecherie and leawdneſſe, vnleſſe our Lorde put to his hande, and rule vs by his holy ſpirite. Therefore let vs learne to ſhunne the temptations that might ſerue to intyce vs to further naughtineſſe; and let vs ſo eſchewe them, as GOD may quietly haue the fruition of vs. And whenſoeuer any temptation happeneth vnto vs, let vs ſeeke to cut it off out of hande, and not to feede it: neyther let vs be too haſtie to followe our owne lykings, which is the laſt poynt that wee haue to marke here.

To conclude, whereas it is ſayde, that the woman whome a man intendeth to marrie, muſt bee kept cloſe by him at home in his houſe, a whole moneth before hee come neere her: therein our Lorde hath ſhewed vs a remedie that is more than requiſite and needefull for all ſuch as haue ſo whotte and headie luſtes. Wee ſee that when any luſt is once entered into a mannes heart, it ſetteth him on fire at the firſt brunt, and carryeth him away after ſuch a ſorte, as hee can take no reſt. In reſpect whereof our Lorde giueth men heere a brydle, telling them that he which will take a wife after that manner, ſhall not goe in vnto her, vntil hee haue firſt giuen her a monethes reſpite to mourne and to forſake her owne natiue people.

True it is (as I haue ſaide afore) that this ceremonie continueth not nowe any longer as in reſpect of the vſe thereof, but yet it muſt ſerue vs ſtill for our learning: That is to witte, that for as much as the diuell driueth vs after our luſtes, and that as ſoone as any toye takes vs in the head, by and by wee runne gadding after it, ſo as wee breake all bondes and brydles; wee muſt conſider thus with our ſelues: But yet muſt thou brydle thy ſelfe in this caſe ſpite of thy teeth; and if thou beeſt a woode beaſt, thou muſt bee ſubdued by ſtrong hande to the obeying of thy GOD. After that manner ought euery man to fight againſt him ſelfe, and wee ſhoulde put this leſſon in practiſe daily. For when ſo euer wee bee tempted to euill, if wee indeuour not to reprooue our ſelues, wee bee ouercome immediately, and the diuel hauing once caught holde, will not let vs goe againe, for hee hath ſeiſed vppon the pray that is his owne alreadie.

But if wee through Gods grace, and by the power of his holy Spirite, doe ſtriue to beat backe temptations, and take pleaſure in mynding the things that God commaundeth vs; and whereas Satan ſeeketh to ſurpriſe vs, and indeuoureth to make vs turne our backes to al good doctrine and admonitions, wee on the other ſide conclude with our ſelues, ſaying, Nowe muſt I gather my wittes to mee and bethinke mee of that which I haue learned, and whereunto God calleth mee: If we (I ſaye) take ſuch aduiſement to ſubdue our luſtes: Satan ſhalbee ouercome, and our Lorde wilbee ſo gracious vnto vs as to turne the euill into good, and to inable vs to vſe his benefites in ſuch wiſe, as they ſhall not bee marred by our taking of any inordinate libertie. The thing then which wee haue to remember yet further vppon this text, is that although Moſes ſpeake here of none but women; yet wee muſt applye the doctrine to all other temptations which befall vs, that wee bee not wonne by them at the firſt brunt, but that wee behaue our ſelues ſo ſtayedly, as God may in the ende reigne ouer vs, and wee not attempt any thing which is not permitted vs by his worde.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, that beeing ſory for them wee may bee ſo caſt downe and grieued in our ſelues, as wee may bee readie to renounce all that euer is of the worlde and of our owne nature, and to giue ouer and conſecrate our ſelues more and more to him that hath called vs to this ſtate, that wee bee a holy people to him, according to his adopting of vs by Ieſus Chriſt, the members of whoſe body hee woulde haue vs to bee. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God, heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the xxx. of December. 1555.

The Cxxij. Sermon which is the third vpon the one and twentith Chapter.

15 If a man haue two wiues, the one beloued and the other hated, and they haue brought him foorth children, as well the hated as the beloued, and the firſt childe is the childe of the hated:

16 And the time is come that hee will diuide his goods among his children to inherite: he may not giue the title of elderſhip to the ſonne of the beloued, in derogation of the hated womans ſonne which is the firſt borne.

17 But he ſhall acknowledge the hated womans ſonne for his eldeſt, in giuing him double portion of all things that he hath. For he is the beginning of his ſtrength, to whome the right of the firſtbegotten belongeth.

HEre wee may ſee howe harde it is to keepe men in good order, by reaſon of the naughtineſſe and rebellion that is in them. For the luſtes of our fleſh are like madde beaſtes that cannot bee tamed. And therefore the lawes which Moſes ſetteth downe heere, ſerue as it were to fetter men when they will not bee ruled quietly. If any thing bee to bee counted holy and inuiolable among men, it is marryage. For it hath a teſtimonie that God would haue it ſtabliſhed in his name, euen to liue and dye therein. And yet men ſticke not to breake ſo great a bonde. And ſo wee ſee that the brute beaſtes are eaſier to rule than men bee, for all the reaſon and vnderſtanding that God hath giuen vnto them: for they ſet all their wittes vpon euill.

It is not for vs to finde faulte with the Iewes in this behalfe, as though they were a hardehearted people, and wee were not the like: but wee ought rather to beholde our ſelues in their perſons, and to conſider that wee bee no better than they. The text ſpeaketh heere of a woman that was taken priſoner, howe that when a man had marryed her, hee ought thence foorth to keepe the ſame rule with her which our Lorde hath ſet downe for all others: namely, that hee forſake both father and mother, and cleaue to his wife. God ſayeth that if he be wearie of her, he ſhal let her goe franke and free; and not ſel her as a ſlaue. Surely God meant not to giue a marryed man leaue to put away his wife: for that is againſt the order of nature, and againſt the firſt inſtitu- Gen.2. tion or ordinance of mariage, which ought to continue to the worlds end. But it is all one as if God tolde vs, that men cannot behaue themſelues euenly & vprightly, & that they preſume vpō many things which are not permitted to thē. And therfore like as men put ſhackles vpon euill conditioned horſes; euen ſo to the intent ẏ men alſo ſhould not ouerſhoot thēſelues too far, God ſetteth them a barre to ſtop at: not that he correcteth their vyces altogether, but that hee maketh ſome reſtraint of them. If wee haue an eye to the perfection which God requyreth, whoſo- Matt.19.6. euer hath once marryed a wife, muſt keepe his faith and troth towardes her to the vttermoſt, that is to ſay, euen vnto the death. And although there bee faultes to bee founde in her, yet muſt hee beare with her as with the weaker veſſel. Likewiſe the wife muſt behaue herſelf ſo quietly towardes her husbande, that to the 1.Pet.3.5.6. vttermoſt of her power ſhee muſt frame herſelfe to his diſpoſition. The thing then which marryage requireth, is that the two parties liue togither with one conſent in the obedience of God, and that neyther of them drawe aſide by themſelues, but that if there bee any faultes in Eph.5.21.22 the one or in the other, they beare with them & paſſe them ouer as I ſayde afore. If a man put away his wife whome hee tooke as a priſoner among his enemies, although hee doe not hold her ſtill in bondage, yet is the marriage broken thereby. Yea verily: and yet is not that putting away made lawfull by God, as who ſhoulde ſay hee had ſet men free at their owne choyce. Neither muſt men ſoothe themſelues or thinke themſelues acquit, becauſe they bee not blamed by earthly iuſtice: but Gods intent was onely to ſhew, that although a man be ſo leawd as to breake his faith, yet muſt hee not preſume ſo farre as to play the tyrant too, and to ſel his wife as though ſhee were his bondſlaue ſtill for euer. For he hath diſhonored her.

Wee ſee then (as I haue touched afore) howe mannes wickedneſſe is ſo great, that it cannot bee reformed, and that it is much if hee can bee brought to ſome meaſure. And therefore wee muſt put a difference betweene humane policie and the lawe of God which ſerueth to rule our life, to the intent wee may walke as before him. Humane policie keepeth a certaine meane. It is no ſuch perfectneſſe as can acquit vs before God, though wee haue not tranſgreſſed the lawes thereof. But our Lorde draweth vs yet further in ſhewing vs the way to liue wel. Hee reſteth not vppon the thing that is poſſible in mannes ſight; but ſheweth vs what is due to himſelfe, and wherein wee bee bounde vnto him. Why bee not mennes lawes perfect in all poyntes? Becauſe that in them reſpect is had what is poſſible to bee obtained. Lawes are not made in reſpect that it is good that men ſhould do ſo: but to the ende that men might liue togither one with another. But when our Lorde giueth vs his doctrine, ſhewing vs the way to liue well and holily: hee reſpecteth not our abilitie [to perfourme it.] For can wee loue him with all our heartes, with all our ſtrength, with all our ſoule, and with all our reaſon? Alas, it is much if wee did take paines about it, and enter into the way, and indeuour to ſet foreward. Although wee were ſtill farre from the marke, yet had wee profited very much. But yet doth not this barre God from demaunding his right. You muſt loue mee (ſayeth hee) with all your heart. If a man reply, that it lyeth not in vs to doe it; it is nothing to the purpoſe. Wee muſt tende thereunto whatſoeuer come of it. He will haue vs to bee cleere from all euil affections, & from all wicked luſtes of our fleſh: and is that poſſible? No. And yet are wee bounde vnto it, and the lawe requireth it. And for that cauſe did I ſay (according to my treating of the ſame matter heretofore) that it ſtandeth vs in hande to diſcerne well the ſpirituall law whereby God gouerneth our ſoules, from all that euer is ſet downe in the lawes of this worlde for the ciuile ordering of this preſent life. And hereof wee haue examples in this preſent place. For (as I haue declared before) what meaneth mariage, but that a man ſhoulde holde himſelfe to the companie of his wife euen vnto the death, quietly maintaining her and bearing with her?

But God ſeemeth here to giue a man leaue to put away his wife. It is no giuing of leaue, as I ſayde afore. For the bonde ſtandeth ſtill in force, that hee which putteth away his wife is Mal.2.15. accurſed, becauſe hee hath broken the order which God hath ſet, and ſanctified. But yet as in reſpect of worldly gouernement, ſuch a man was not puniſhed among the Iewes. As for nowadayes, that libertie is not permitted. For it is good reaſon that Chriſtians ſhoulde vſe a more perfect kinde of gouernement than the Iewes had, conſidering that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath ſhewed himſelfe in the worlde, and vttered the will of God his father vnto vs more fully. Therefore wee muſt not take ſuch libertie nowadayes, as the Iewes did in old time.

Nowe let vs come to the ſeconde lawe that is ſet downe here. It is ſayde, If a man haue two wiues. What? Is this agreeable to the order of marryage? Nay, it is cleane contrarie to it. A man cannot breake wedlocke more, than by taking two wyues. It is ſayde that they ſhalbee Gen.3.24. two in one fleſh. It is not ſayde there, that they ſhalbee three or foure. But our Lorde created Mal.2.15. onely one woman, to the intent ſhee ſhould bee the mannes companion. And before he created her, hee ſayth not, it were good for a man 1.Cor.7.2. to haue many helpes. Let vs make him one helper (quoth hee) to bee with him. Now ſeeing that God thinketh one helper to be ynough for a man; ſurely whoſoeuer goeth beyonde that rule, turneth all thinges vpſide downe, & it is al one as if hee would diſanul the ordinance of God. Yea verily. For who is the author of maryage? Hath not God ſpoken the thing that ought to ſtande inuiolable, namely ẏ they ſhalbe two in one fleſh, and that a man ſhall haue but one helper? Now if notwithſtanding this,a man will needes take two wiues,is it not an open defying of God? Yes verily. And therefore our Mal.2.15. & Matt.19,8. Lorde ſayeth by his Prophet, that it were more tolerable for a man to put away his wife by giuing her the leaue that was permitted vnder yͤ lawe,than to haue two wiues at once. And there he ſendeth ſuch vnruly perſons backe againe to the creation. Behold (ſayeth hee,) God created but one man. And the very ſame thing doth our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt meane in ſaying that at the beginning it was not ſo. For God created but one man: namely male and female created he them. Nowe the Prophet Malachie in alleaging this, ſayeth further that God had ſufficient aboundance of ſpirite in himſelfe. And therefore what ſhoulde haue letted him to haue created two wiues for Adam, if he had thought it good? But God thought one to bee ynough. Therefore it is to bee concluded, that he which coueteth to haue two wyues, marreth all, and regardeth not the keeping of wedlocke in ſuch ſorte as God hath ordeyned it. Then is it whordome and not wedlocke for a man to deſire a ſeconde wife after that faſhion. Yet notwithſtanding, this vyce hath beene of olde tyme,& thereby a man may ſee & iudge what certeintie there is in grounding our ſelues vpon cuſtome. Tuſh ſay wee,it hath beene ſo in all ages,it hath euer beene wont to bee ſo. Yea, but that will not ſerue to diſcharge vs before God. For this Polygamie as they terme it, that is to ſay, this hauing of many wyues at once, ſhoulde haue a very goodly couer for it, if it might reſt vppon cuſtome and antiquitie. But what? Gods inſtitution or ordinance went afore cuſtome, and ought to continue vnto the laſt ende. Wee ſee then that it was too diſordered and vnruly dealing, when men tooke ſuch ſcope and libertie to haue many wiues at once. And yet the thing fell out euen in the Patriarkes themſelues. Whereby it appeareth that men doe but deceiue themſelues when they ground themſelues vppon men, though they bee the holyeſt that euer were. Yee ſee that Abraham who is the father of the faithfull, had mo wiues than one. Yea, but hee fayled not to bee condemned for it. In all the reſidue of his life hee was a mirrour of Angelicall perfection: but in this caſe he ouerſhot himſelfe. Therefore let vs holde our ſelues to Gods pure worde, and not pretende that any thing is lawfull for vs, except it be ruled after the ſame. Thus much concerning the hauing of many wyues at once, which is ſpoken of heere. In ſo much that if any man haue two wyues,hee doeth contrary to the order which God hath ſet. By reaſon whereof the men that doe ſo paſſe their boundes are neuerthemore acquit, though they bee not puniſhed for it by the lawes of men: but they muſt alwayes come backe to this poynt, that God hauing an eye what might bee obtayned of mennes infirmities, ordeyned it as a lawe of policie. And this is no impedimẽt at al to the perfection that is conteyned in Gods worde, whereto it behoueth vs to aſpire. And if wee ſwarue neuer ſo litle from it, wee bee guiltie before him by and by. And well may wee alleage this or that; As for example,men require nothing at our hands; yet muſt wee come to account for it before the heauenly Iudge.

It is ſayde heere expreſſely, If a man hate the one and loue the other. Whereby it is ſhewed vnto vs,that the hauing of many wyues at once,proceedeth of a corrupt affection, in that a man beareth not ſuch loue to his wife as he ought to do. For if a man loued his wife chaſtely, as hee is commaunded; his heart will neuer bee withdrawen from her to deſire a newe marriage. Then muſt a man needes bee corrupted and infected in his heart, and conceiue a miſlyking of his wife, ſo as hee is loth to yeeld his duetie vnto her, before hee can long for a ſeconde mariage. It is ſayde; Yee husbands,loue your wiues: Ep.5.28.29 for no man hath euer hated his owne fleſh. The ſame matter is alleaged concerning all men by the Prophet Eſay,becauſe wee haue one reſemblance Eſa.58.7. of nature common to vs all. It is ſayde there, thou ſhalt not deſpiſe thine owne fleſh, and it is meant euen of the furtheſt ſtraungers in the worlde. But betweene man and wife, there is another reſpect: for (to ſpeake properly) they bee both but one man. And ſo doeth the Scripture terme them, ſaying: They ſhalbee two in one fleſh; that is to ſaye, in one perſon. Nowe if any man hate his owne body, muſt it not needes bee that he is worſe than mad? Hereupon Saint Paul concludeth, that if a man loue not his owne wife, hee is as a monſter. True it is that wyues will oftentimes giue their husbandes cauſe to hate them, and that there bee ſome of them ſuch feendes as were able to vexe euen the Angels of heauen, and to put them out of patience. That is true. But yet muſt a man fight againſt ſuch temptations, and ouercome them howſoeuer hee fare,by the power of Gods ſpirite. When he is once matched with a wife, hee muſt not thinke it to bee by haphazarde, but that it was by Gods will. And therefore hee muſt brydle himſelfe, in ſo much that although it bee right harde and grieuous to do, yet muſt hee take paynes to reforme the vyces of his wife that is ſo euill diſpoſed, and yet in the meane while beare with her and vſe her as gently as is poſſible for him. To that poynt muſt a man come. Hereunto Saint Paul addeth the example of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, beſides the inward vnderſtanding which we haue of nature. Marke (ſayeth hee) howe Ieſus Eph.5.25. Chriſt loueth his Church. For hee hath giuen him ſelfe to death, to make vs cleane from all ſpottes, euen vs that are fowle and full of vncleanneſſe. If our Lorde Ieſus haue not ſpared his owne bloud for the waſhing of vs; what ought a mortall man to doe for his wife? But wee knowe that wedlocke is as a liuely picture of the ſacred vnion which our Lorde Ieſus vouchesafeth to haue with vs. Therefore when ſo euer the husbande is diſpleaſed or greeued at his wife, though hee bee neuer ſo angry with her, let him haue an eye to this example. Beholde, the ſonne of God offereth me his owne bloud to waſh me withal, ſhewing mee thereby that I muſt brydle my ſelfe in this behalfe, and performe my duetie throughly towardes my wife, howeſoeuer the worlde goe. So then let vs marke, that a man will neuer couet a ſeconde wife, except hee haue firſt falſified his faith and troth towardes her whome he putteth away. For if he loued her truely, ſoundely, and rightly, hee woulde leuer dy than let his minde runne vpon any ſeconde mariage. Let vs marke well (I ſay) that heere our Lorde ment to bring vs backe to the wels head of the miſchiefe, to the intent that euery of vs ſhould examine his owne vices, and ſpecially the vices that are hid from men vnder this wicked roote that is within vs. He that forſaketh his wife to marrie another, ſhall perhaps bee condemned by the common iudgement of men: but to iudge thereof as is meete, we muſt goe to the welſpring thereof, and then ſhall wee finde that the greateſt euill is euer inwarde. Now then, if the hauing of many wiues at once be a wicked thing, and that God finde fault with it, inſomuch as he had leuer that a man ſhould put his wife away, than ẏ mariage ſhould be broken and the order thereof ouerthrowen: let vs aſſure our ſelues there is yet a greater miſchiefe, namely ſecret hatred, when a man loueth not his wife, but is inflamed with a wicked deſire to haue an other beſide her. And ſo ye ſee that the greateſt wickedneſſe that can be, is this vnfaithfulnes wherethrough mariage is corrupted, and men haue no more care to followe the order of GOD and nature, and to frame themſelues thereafter.

Furthermore, as touching the worde Hate, let vs note that it is taken heere for ouer colde louing. For inaſmuch as the Lawe puniſhed not a man for putting of his wife away, if he had hated her in deede, he would ſurely haue thruſt her out of his houſe and companie. Therefore in keeping her ſtill, he ſhewed plainely that hee hated her not as we meane by hating in our common ſpeech, and yet doeth God account it for hatred and not without cauſe, which is a text well worthy to be noted. For if a man hate not his wife deadly, ſo as hee woulde kill her with beating, or wiſh her in her graue: he will beare the world in hande that although he loue her not, yet he doth not vtterly hate her. But heere ye ſee how God ſpeaketh farre otherwiſe. For he ſayeth and auoweth, that if a mans heart be not whole and ſounde towardes his wife, it is to be taken for hatred. Therefore let vs imbrace this ſaying, That Eph.5.28. a husbande muſt loue his wife as himſelfe, euen as his owne perſon. If hee doe not ſo, yet ſhall this ſentence of God alwayes take place. And this leſſon ought to ſerue, not onely for the mutuall loue betweene man and wife, but alſo generally for the loue towards our neighbours. When a man hath an offence committed againſt him, if he ſeeke no reuendge, if he practiſe no wicked wayes, if he intende not to murder him by ſword or by poyſoning, if he goe about no wicked conſpiracie againſt him: he will ſay, As for mee, If I would him any euill, let it light vpon my ſelfe, I wiſh him nothing but his benefite and welfare. That is true: but yet in the meane while there is a ſecret rancour lurking within. And wee muſt not thinke that God acquitteth vs when we haue ſuch heartburning in vs, bearing in minde the offence that hath beene committed againſt vs, ſo as we be loth to pleaſure the partie, and could rather finde in our heartes that euill mought befall him. On the other ſide, ſome man is ſo far reconciled, as hee can not finde in his heart to commit any wicked dede by trecherie or vnfaithfulneſſe, nor by any maner of violence: and yet he thinkes with himſelfe, ſuch a one is mine enemie, he hath gone about to vndoe me, yet will I forgiue him ſo farre, that I will doe nothing againſt him. But yet if ſome miſchaunce might befall him, he would be glad of it and ſay, O, it is well beſtowed, for what had he purpoſed againſt me? When we keepe ſuch backe ſhops, it is a token that our heart is not rid quite & cleane. The hatred appeareth not openly, but yet it abideth lurking ſtill within. And he ẏ hateth his neighbour in his heart (ſayeth Saint Iohn) that is to ſay in ſecret, is a murtherer before God. So then let vs marke, that loue conſiſteth not onely in wiſhing none euill to our neighbours, but alſo in ſeeking their welfare as much as we can, and in reioycing at the welfare of our enemies. And ſpecially, if a man intende to diſcharge his duety towardes his wife, he muſt not loue her ſlenderly, but he muſt accept her as his wife, that is to ſay, as the partie whom God hath linked to him, and therefore he muſt beare with her and maintaine peace and concorde with her as much as he can poſſibly. That is the thing that Moſes meant in ſaying, If a man hate his wife. For elſe a man might ſay, as for mee if I hadde hated her, I woulde haue beene diuorced from her, and not haue kept her ſtill. For what a thing had it beene for me to haue kept her ſtill in my houſe? Yea, but wherefore haſt thou taken an other wife to her, but becauſe thou diddeſt miſlike of the firſt? All the pretences which thou canſt alleadge are to no purpoſe; vaine are ſuch excuſes. For God who is ẏ Iudge of mens hearts, telleth thee that if thou beare her not a right and pure loue, thou hateſt her.

Now Moſes addeth, When he hateth the one and loueth the other, if he haue children by them both, he may not make the childe of the beloued, his heire by giuing him the prerogatiue of dubble portion aboue the reſt of his children. But the birthright muſt remaine to him to whome it belongeth by nature, though the mother of him was not ſo well liked of her husbande as the other. That is the thing in effect, which Moſes commaundeth in this text. And as touching the birthright of the firſtborne: it was verie auntient euen before the Lawe, yea euen before the going of the people into Egypt, there was a regard had of the birthright. For although Iacob was in Egypt when hee dyed: yet ſpake hee as of a thing growen already into cuſtome and helde for a common rule, that is to witte, that there ſhoulde alwayes bee a kinde of preheminence in elderſhip, ſo as ẏ eldeſt brother ſhould beare chiefe ſway in the houſe ouer his brethrẽ. And we ſee it in very deede in the bleſſing ẏ Iſaac gaue vnto Iacob, taking him neuertheleſſe to haue beene Eſaw. For he maketh him his eldeſt ſonne, with prerogatiue of Lordſhippe and ſoueraigntie ouer all his brethren, that is to ſay, ouer all his kinred. Yee ſee then howe it is an auntient prerogatiue, inſomuch as a man may ſay, it came as it were by inſpiration, & that it was not of mens inuenting, but of Gods owne appointing, though we haue no recorde thereof, ne can proue the thing otherwiſe than by ſingle coniecture. Yet notwithſtanding, this ſerueth not to excuſe the ambition of ſuch as will needes giue al that they haue to their eldeſt ſonne, to the intent to maintaine their houſes in greate eſtate, which we ſee is the marke that men haue ſhot at. Whereof comes it that in many countryes, the elder brother hath all, and the younger brothers as good as nothing, and that men doe giue them a morſell of breade as though their fathers had layde the wallet vppon their neckes to bid them ſhift for themſelues? Whereof comes this, but of a pride, that they will needes haue their houſes to continue in their name, and not be diminiſhed? Yea, but our Lorde telleth vs that we muſt paſſe through this worlde as wayfarers. And wee knowe how the prophet ſkorneth thoſe that will needes plant their names vpon earth after that Pſal.49.12. faſhion. In the nine and fortith Pſalme he declareth that they muſt needes be very dulwitted ſith they ſee that they muſt goe to the graue like ſheepe, and that their life is as fickle as can bee, and yet notwithſtanding will needes (as it were in diſpite of God) haue an euerlaſting monumẽt here belowe, where all thinges are tranſitorie. But yet doeth this madneſſe continue alwayes, as he ſheweth anon after. Wee ſee with our eies how God mocketh ſuch beaſtlineſſe of men, and yet their aftercommers continue ſtill hard hearted and wilfull, following the madneſſe of their fathers. And when there be Lawes that giue al the ſubſtaunce after that faſhion to the eldeſt brother, and leaue the reſt of the children vnprouided: let vs aſſure our ſelues that thoſe Lawes are vnrightfull and wicked. And why? For (as I haue ſayde afore) we muſt goe to the roote; and when we will iudge of thinges aright, wee muſt haue an eye to the originall from whence the ſame proceedeth. For although God put men neuer ſo much in minde of their frailtie, yet is there ſuch an ouerweening in them, that they will needes be abiding ſtill in this worlde, and leaue an euerlaſting remembrãce behind them. Againe we ſee that this kinde of dealing is contrarie to all naturall affection. For ought not a father to loue all his children? Yea, but this is my firſtborne. And what are the reſt? Wilt thou leaue them to the wide worlde? Wilt thou haue no regard of them? He that careth not for thoſe which are of his owne houſholde, is worſe than 1.Tim.5.8. an Infidell (ſayeth Saint Paul) and hath forſaken the faith. Euen the very heathen had this grauen alwayes in their hearts, that howſoeuer they themſelues fared, they had eſpeciall care of their children. Although a mannes children be not worthie to be beloued, yet ought nature to ouerrule in that caſe whatſoeuer come thereof. Nay, although you yourſelues be euill (ſayth our Lord Ieſus Chriſt) yet do ye not faile to procure good to your children. Therefore as for thẽ that haue Matt.7.11. vtterly done away all naturall affection, they ſhewe themſelues to bee woorſe than the heathen, and more corrupted than they. So then, we muſt alwayes holde vs to this rule, that a father is bound to prouide for all his children, and that the eldeſt muſt not be as a gulfe. Againe, the birthright which was allowed of before the Lawe, and alſo put in vre afore the Law, allowed but dubble portion to the eldeſt. And that was reaſonable, becauſe the eldeſt is commonly put to the greateſt charges: and when his brothers are left fatherleſſe, hee muſt be faine to be their guyde, and to be as a head and a father to them all. Moreouer, he is as it were the ſtrength of his father aboue all the reſt. And it is the reaſon that is ſet downe here, which reaſon we ſee that Iacob alſo vſeth, ſaying he is the beginning of my Gen.49.3. ſtrength. God beſtoweth a kinde of dignitie vpon men, when he maketh them fathers: for hee imparteth his owne name vnto them. All kinred proceedeth from him, and to ſpeake properly, there is no father but he, I meane as well of the body as of the ſoule. And yet notwithſtanding, the ſame title is attributed to men, euen becauſe God vouchſafeth to yeelde them that honour. Nowe when God honoreth a man ſo much, as to make him a firſtbegottẽ, and to giue him preheminence aboue his brothers: if he abuſe it, he caſteth away the grace that God beſtoweth vpon him.

Neuertheleſſe, we ſee it is not ſo perpetuall a rule, but that an elder brother may be diſpoſſeſſed of his roome, as we ſee befell to Ruben, who Gen.49.4. was Iacobs eldeſt ſonne. And the Teſtament that Iacob made was not after the common maner of men, as though the matter had beene to haue bin ordered after his owne liking: but God ſpake by his mouth, ſo as there ſcaped him not any one worde, which was not a propheſie. And therefore he ſayth, Thou Ruben my firſtbegottẽ which waſt ẏ flower & beginning of my ſtrength, thou oughteſt to haue bin innobled in my houſe, but nowe thou haſt beene ſorrowe and heauines to me: Thou muſt then vaniſh away and be bereft of the honour that belonged to thee by nature. Thus was Ruben diſpoſſeſſed and after a ſort baniſhed from his birthright. For he hadde committed too too wicked a deede, & too deadly a crime. And although God forgaue him, ſo as he dyed not for it: yet was he noted with endleſſe infamie, both he & all his ofſpring, becauſe of the inceſt which hee had committed. The right then of the elderſhip is not a thing ſo peremptorily aſſured, but that a child may be diſpoſſeſſed of it for his misbehauiour, or for ſome other lawefull cauſe. But that a man ſhoulde bee ſuffered to peruert the order of nature for one wiues ſake whõ hee loueth better than an other, that were no reaſon. Nowe then let vs marke in fewe wordes, that God ment to make a brydle to reſtraine men withall, leaſt they might be won by their wiues allurementes to conuey away the right of their children from one to another:God (I ſay) ment to prouide a remedy for it aforehande.

And firſt of all let vs marke, that the affections which we bring naturally with vs from our mothers wombe, are vtterly corrupted in vs by, I wote not what a kinde of luſtes. And if it be ſo in them, what is it in the reſt? As I ſayde afore, ye ſee howe the loue of a father is common to all men by nature. It is not a vertue peculiar to the faithfull, as it were for that they be willing to obey God, and haue an eye to his commaundements:but although a man were neuer taught it, ne euer wiſt what the ſeruice of GOD ment; yet ſhall he well vnderſtande that it is but ambition and pride, to defraude the reſt of his children of the portion of his goods, for the aduancing of his eldeſt ſonne. True it is that he is the beginning of his ſtrength: but what for that? ſhould a man be ſo bewitched with the liking of a woman, that he ſhould vtterly forget what nature it ſelfe teacheth vs, and which ought to be printed in all men euen from their mothers wombes? Therefore we haue heere a good and profitable leſſon, to put vs in mind that we muſt fight againſt our luſtes, as though they were enemies inflamed againſt vs with all rage, and that we muſt inforce ourſelues in this caſe, for we ſhal neuer bring it to paſſe with eaſe. And the hardneſſe therof muſt not diſcorage vs, but although we ſee it to be a verie difficult and troubleſome thing to be able to ouermaiſter our luſtes; Yet let vs goe forewarde with it ſtill. In deede wee muſt not preſume vpon our owne ſtrength; but we muſt acknowledge our owne weakenes & flee vnto God, who in the ende will giue vs a happie victorie.

Furthermore, to knit vp this matter, let vs mind the thing that I haue touched afore:which is, that although we be not puniſhed before men for our faultes and miſdeedes, yet muſt not that ſerue to lull vs a ſleepe. For why? God keepeth ſtill his iudgement in ſtore: and before him wee ſhall not be quit. Nowadayes if a man can ſay that the Lawe can finde no fault in him, he thinketh himſelfe to be an Angell. Yea, but if a man do cocker himſelfe vnder that pretence, ſhould God alſo ceaſe to doe his office therefore? Then let vs learne to order our liues after ſuch a ſorte, as our eye may not be alonely vpon men. For the ciuil Lawes(as I haue told you already)ſerue but to deale with vs according to our power and abilitie: but the righteouſneſſe which God commaundeth vs in his ſpirituall Lawe is a perfection whereunto we are tyed and bounde. And although we be not able to performe it: yet muſt wee holde on ſtill towardes it, by ſetting our mindes therupon, & by ſtreyning all our powers to the vttermoſt. And when we finde any thing amiſſe: we muſt bee ſorie for it, and condemne ourſelues. For although men require nothing at our handes; yet ſhal we be euer guiltie before God. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember, to the intent we be not ſo blinded as to beare ourſelues in hande, that becauſe wee be ſcaped the handes of men, therefore we be alſo acquit and diſcharged before God. Let that ſerue for one point.

And thereupon let vs learne further, that wee muſt not imagine as a number of fantaſtical perſons do, that all the thinges are allowed of God, which were not puniſhed in the commonweale of the Iewes: For our Lorde executed a dubble office among that people. Hee gaue them an earthly order of gouernement, after the maner of the Lawes which we haue: and alſo he deliuered them a rule whereafter hee will haue vs to behaue ourſelues as his children. For if we intende to haue a ſure recorde of Gods will, wee muſt reſort to the tenne cōmandementes, wherin is comprehended the ſũme of all holines and righteouſneſſe. He that frameth his life according to the tenne commaundementes, may wel ſay that he hath the perfect righteouſneſſe. But foraſmuch as we come farre ſhort of it, and can by no meanes come neere it ſo long as wee bee clothed with our fleſh: let vs acknowledge ourſelues to be wretched ſinners, and reſort for refuge to the mercy of our God, fighting manfully in the meane ſeaſon againſt our owne vices, and indeuouring continually to cutte off all impediments, vntil we feele ourſelues to haue profited: and there muſt be none ende of this battell, vntill our Lorde haue throughly reclaimed vs to him, which will not be before he haue taken vs out of this world. Thus much for the firſt point.

Secondly let vs note, that whereas God diſcouereth the frailtie of ſuch as forget themſelues, as of husbandes that loue not their wiues: the ſame ought to ſerue vs for a brydle, to make vs to bethinke ourſelues the better. For if a man put away his wife, the bonde which God hadde made is broken. And to whō is the wrong done? Not to a mortal creature, but to God the author of mariage, who is offended thereat. And wherof commeth it but of this, that the husbande is not rightly minded towardes his wife, to thinke with himſelfe, God hath giuen her to me to be as a part of mine owne fleſh, and therefore it becōmeth me to maintaine her as mine owne perſon. When men haue not this conſideration with them, they be blinded with beaſtly luſt to put away their wiues. Foraſmuch therfore as we ſee that Gods order is in ſo dooing confounded and ouerthrowen: let vs bee aſhamed to ſuffer ourſelues to be toſſed to & fro after ẏ faſhion by our leaud affections, ſpecially when we fal to the conſidering of ẏ which is ſayd here, namely that if a man haue two wiues. As how? God hath created but one wife for one man: hee hath ſayde it with his owne mouth, that it was ynough for a man to haue one helper. He had ſpirite ſufficient ynough to haue created a hundred women if he had liſted: but hee gaue vs to vnderſtande that a man ought to holde himſelfe contented with one wife, and that it is the order which hee made at the beginning. Nowe then it ought to make vs to quake, when wee ſee men fall to puſhing with their hornes after that faſhion againſt God, breaking the bonde which ought to be holy and inuiolable. Againe, when wee ſee that a man hath ſo vnhallowed wedlocke by his toſſing to and fro: it is a meane to make vs bethinke ourſelues. If a man haue a wife, be ſhee once dead, it is lawefull for him to marrie again: but yet the worlde ſees that the ſecond wife will be gathering for her owne children, yea euen with filching & ſtealing from her husband. And that is a token of Gods curſe, & of the wretchedneſſe that is in vs by reaſon of ſinne. But if a man haue two wiues at once in one houſe, what a braule will there be? He ſhall finde himſelfe to be as it were drawen in peeces, doe the beſt hee can. Wee ſee what befell to our father Iacob. Now then, ſeeing we knowe all theſe thinges, let vs learn to ſubmit ourſelues to God, truſting that his bleſſing ſhalbe vppon vs, if wee liue ſoberly, mildly, and chaſtly, as he commandeth. If a huſbande liue in peace & concorde with his wife, & loue her as God commandeth him to doe: God will ſurely bleſſe him and all his iſſue after him. We may well hope (ſay I) that God will make vs to proſper after that manner, if we liue ſo in awe vnder his brydle. But contrariwiſe let vs looke to be curſed of him and to haue all maner of cōfuſion come vpon vs, if wee will not obey Gods ordinance, as we ſee that men are hardly ſubdued, but that their wicked luſtes and affections do carry them away continually. Neuertheleſſe let vs be afraid, and let vs learne to beholde ourſelues in the examples that are ſhewed vs heere. The way (ſay I) to preſerue mariage vnuiolated, to mainteine loue and concorde betweene man and wife, is to beare in mind that God hath knit them together in one, and that he hath therewithall promiſed to be the gouernour of mariages, and to powre out his bleſſing vpon thē; and if we alſo do put our truſt in him, & haue an eye to him; it is certaine that he wil rule vs, and ſubdue all our wicked affections. Let vs be diligent in doing our duetie, euery man in his calling, & then ſhall we not only liue in peace and concord during this preſent life, but alſo our temporall mariage ſhall leade vs further both men and women, that is to wit to the holy vnion betweene the ſonne of GOD and vs, not onely which he hath ſtabliſhed already by his bloudſhed, but alſo which ſhall then come to perfection, when wee be vnited to him in the kingdome of heauen.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God and father, praying him to rid vs dayly more and more of our fleſh and of all the corruptions thereof, and to make vs ſo to feele our ſinnes, as wee may at leaſtwiſe bee ſory that we haue offended him, and deſire to be ridde of them continually more and more, proceeding ſtill forewarde in the doctrine of repentance, vntill we be fully brought home vnto him, and that he will vouchſafe ſo to beare with vs, as in the meane while we may by his holy ſpirit, be drawen vnto him, euen vntill we be come altogether home vnto him. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not only vnto vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the laſt of December. 1555.

The Cxxiij. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the one and twentith Chapter.

18 If a man haue a ſonne that is ſtubborne & diſobedient, ſo as he will not harken to the voice of his father, nor to the voyce of his mother, and they haue chaſtiſed him, and he will not obey them:

19 Then ſhall his father and mother take him, and bring him to the Elders of their Citie, and vnto the gate of their place,

20 And ſhall ſay to the Elders of their Citie: This ſonne of ours is ſtubborne and diſobedient, and will not harken to our voyce, he is a ryottour and a drunkard.

21 And all the men of that Citie ſhall ſtone him with ſtones vnto death. And ſo ſhalt thou rid away the euill from thee, that all Iſraell may be afrayde when they heare thereof.

HEere firſt of all is ſhewed what their charge & duetie is which haue children: and ſecondely that when children growe paſt amendment by their fathers & mothers, they muſt be rooted out, bycauſe their doing is againſt nature, and it is ſuch an infection as prouoketh Gods wrath vpon the whole Countrey. Nowe as touching the firſt point, it is ſayde that if a man haue a frowarde and ſtubborne ſonne, and that he haue done his indeuour to reforme him. Here God preſuppoſeth that the father and mother doe performe their duetie; for their children are giuen them with condition that they muſt yeelde account of them. If a man haue layde the brydle vppon his childes necke, and let him playe the looſe colte: he is worthy to haue his eyes picke out by him, and all the euill that the childe doeth is to be imputed to his father, becauſe he was negligent in correcting him. Therefore wee ſee heere (as I ſayde afore) that Moſes doeth here warne fathers and mothers to bee diligent in nurturing their children. And if chaſtiſement will not preuaile, their children are to be taken for vtterly vnrecouerable. Wherefore, that wee may benefite ourſelues by this text, let vs marke well, that he to whome GOD giueth children, muſt haue a ſpeciall care to bring them vppe well: for, that is a ſingular treaſure, which ought to be preferred before al the goods in the worlde. Then if a man be ſlothfull, and ſuffer his children to runne at randone: is it not an vnthankefulneſſe that offendeth GOD greeuouſly, ſeeing hee deſpiſeth the benefite and honour which hee had vouchſafed vppon him? Muſt it not needes be that men are ſtarke blinde, when they make more account of ſome other thing in their houſe, than of their owne children? Some haue more care of their kine, Oxen, or Horſes, than of their children. Euery man makes account of his wares, of his Lands, and of his Medowes: and in the meane while they let the chiefe thing alone. Worthy be they to bee ſent to ſchoole to a certaine Heathen man, who beeing in a houſe where all thinges were as finely furniſhed and dreſſed as could be deuiſed, & finding the good mās ſonne to bee a ranke ſlouin and euilnurtured, did ſpit in his face, ſaying: I muſt needes ſpitte vppon this filth that is left heere. As for thoſe which are ſo diligent and watchfull about their marchandiſe, their reuenewes, their poſſeſſions, yea and their Cattell, inſomuch as they take more care for their dogges and horſes than for their children; accordingly as wee ſee howe greate Lordes ſette more ſtore by their haukes and houndes than by their children: Doe not ſuch blinde wretches bewraye their beaſtlineſſe, that men may abhorre them as folke too too farre voide of all witte and reaſon? Yet notwithſtanding our Lorde telleth vs heere, that if men or women haue children, they muſt looke to the bringing vppe of them. True it is, that chiefly it is the fathers duetie: but yet muſt not the mother alſo be barred of her right. If a childe be ſo luſtie as to ſay, my mother is a woman; he muſt goe and finde fault with GOD. For wee ſee heere howe the authoritie is giuen as well to the one as to the other, ſo as God will not haue the father alone to haue the gouerning of the childe, but that the mother alſo ſhoulde haue part of the honour and preheminence, and that yͤ child which will not obey his mother, ſhall be taken for paſt grace, & be condemned to death. And therefore both of them ought to do their endeuour to the vttermoſt of their power. For ſeeing that GOD hath honoured the mother, it is good reaſon that ſhee on her ſide ſhoulde ſtreyne her ſelfe to doe her duetie. And it is not ynough for fathers and mothers not to giue their children leaue to doe euill, or not to traine them thereunto: but they muſt alſo nurture them and inſtruct them in goodneſſe, as nature it ſelfe ſheweth. If a father ſay, As for mee, I vpholde not my ſonne in this euill, I miſlike of it; but I can not doe withall: it is a very ſimple excuſe, and it is not meete to be admitted or to be taken in account. For it may be ſayde vnto him; thou art a very blocke; for ſeeing thou art ſet in that place, and he will haue thee to bee the maiſter of thy childe: thou art but a dolt in that thou makeſt no countenaunce when thou ſeeſt him doe amiſſe. So then, lette vs learne that heere GOD requireth a carefulneſſe in fathers and mothers, that they ſhoulde take paines to teach their children, and haue an eye to their behauiour and diſpoſitions: and that if there be any fault in them, they correct it, and be very diligent in that behalfe.

Nowe if onely negligence be ſo condemned though fathers and mothers allowe not of their childrens faultes: what will become of them when they bolſter them in their euilldooinges, and cloke them as much as they can, and are offended when any other bodie goes about to bring them into the right way from their vnthriftineſſe? And yet we ſee that parentes doe ſo. Truely, negligence is too common a thing: for fathers & mothers haue no further regard of their children, than to receiue ſome ſeruice at their hands. In deede they coulde well finde in their heartes that their children were taught: what to doe? To thinke vpon their houſhould buſineſſe and dealinges, or to occupy ſome trade that they might put them to no coſt when they came to age, but rather that they might reape ſome profite by them. For theſe wayes there is commonly care ynough. But as for the feare of GOD, honeſtie of conuerſation, and all other vertues: they neuer thinke vppon them. For (as the prouerbe ſayes,) there is no likelihoode that thoſe thinges will bring gryſt to the mill, and therefore a father can finde in his hart to winke at yͤ vices of his child, ſo long as he ſees no diſaduantage to inſue of it. But there is malice alſo matched with it: inſomuch that if a man goe about to reforme their children, they will ſteppe vp againſt him, and fauour their children, and maintaine them euen againſt GOD. And our Lorde payeth them the wages which they haue deſerued. Wee ſee howe the verieſt pinchpennies in a whole Citie or countrey, and the verieſt niggardes and vilanes, which would gnawe off their fingers endes for a pennie, or for a dodkinne to white their teeth withall: haue whoremongers to their children, who can not but picke their fathers purſes: for a harlotte will alwayes be crauing. The child therefore becomes a robber of his father, and yet the father is contented to maintaine him, and will be angry that any body ſhould chaſtiſe him for it, ſpewing foorth his poyſon like a diuell as hee is. In deede this is no newe thing, for it falles out ſo in all caſes; and likewiſe alſo in this behalfe. Nowe when ſuch thinges are to be ſeene, ought we not to beholde Gods vengeance alſo? Thou art a pinchpenny, thou art ſo giuen to couetouſneſſe ẏ thou pineſt vpon the ground, thou dareſt not eate one bit of breade but with greefe: and yet in the meane while thou haſt a Sonne that filcheth and ſtealeth from thee to maintaine his whoredome. Becauſe thou art a deſpiſer of God, and a wicked keytiſe, and wilt needes haue thy ſonne to reſemble thee, and thy mainteyning of him after that faſhion, is a furtherance of his ſinne and wickedneſſe: Therfore doeth God recompence thee according to thy deſert. For thou art worthy to haue thy goods deuoured, and to be mocked at of the whole worlde, ſo as all men may beholde thy ſhame, & thou thy ſelfe neuer perceiue it. Herein we ſee Gods manifeſt iudgement. Whatſoeuer it be let vs beare in minde this leſſon, that if fathers and mothers be negligent, they be as blameworthy before God, as if they had giuen their children leaue to doe all maner of wickedneſſe. But if they be offended at other men for correcting them, & for indeuoring to bring thẽ backe into the right way: they ſhew thẽſelues to be become ſtarke diuels, and ẏ God hath giuen them vp to a reprobate ſenſe. Therefore let euery of vs for his owne part take warning, to diſcharge ourſelues of his duetie. And let ſuch as haue children take pains to teach them, howbeit not for the reaping of any earthly profite by them. Truly, that may well be an acceſſarie to it: but it ought not to be the chiefe point. Wherunto then muſt they haue regarde? Foraſmuch as God hath done them the honour to ſet them in the degree of fathers: they muſt do their beſt to yeelde vnto him their children whom he hath put into their handes, & to make true ſacrifices of them vnto him, that there may alwayes remaine ſome good ſeede to honour him withall. For we ſee howe ẏ ſcripture telleth vs oftentimes that Gods name muſt floriſh from generation to generation. And that is to the end ẏ hauing ſerued him all the time of our life, we ſhould indeuour to the vttermoſt of our power, that there might remain a good ofſpring after our deceaſe ſo as Gods glory might not be quenched nor buried, but ẏ his praiſe might indure for euer. That (ſay I) is the marke whereat fathers & mothers ought to aime: inſomuch that euen they ẏ haue no children, ought to haue the ſame minde and deſire, yea and to ſhewe it alſo by their doings as much as they can poſſibly. What ought he then to doe, who is bound to it by ſome ſpeciall reaſõ? When he ſeeth a mirrour of Gods grace in his Pſal.128. houſe, it is the bleſſing which the ſcripture doth ſo highly commende as who would ſay, I haue my yong children about me, & God ſheweth me as it were with his finger, ẏ he loueth me & hath a care of my houſe. He hath created mee heere yong children of my ſeede, after his own image, and they be baptiſed in his name, to the intent I ſhould bee the more mooued to dedicate them to him, & to frame them to the obeying of him. If a man haue ſuch a teaching, and ſuch a marke to ſet his eyes vpon, and yet is neuer the more prouoked to doe his duetie: muſt it not needes be that he is worſe than a block? So then let this reſpect bee well marked, and let men beare it in mind, that it may ſtirre them vp to do the thing that is tolde them heere, namely to bring vp their children faithfully if they haue any. And moreouer when they ſee any euill touch or vice in them; let them labour to reforme it, ſo as the father and mother may proteſt that they haue done their dueties.

Nowe moreouer, heere is expreſſe mention made of ſtubbornneſſe. For as concerning peculiar faultes, a father and a mother ought to indeuour continually to bring their children into the right way. True it is that God ment not to haue other faultes to goe vnpuniſhed. When a childe hath any way offended hauing a father or mother aliue; it is not meant that hee ſhould be exempted from puniſhment, vnder colour that he is vnder correction of his father and mother. But heere God ſpeaketh of an other caſe, which is, that fathers and mothers ſhould bring their children before the Iudge to haue them put to death. Loe, heere is a great extremitie. We knowe well what a heartbreaking it is to a father to ſee his ſonne puniſhed by Lawe, euen though it bee by ſome other bodyes meane. Then is it not poſſible for a father to deliuer his ſonne to death, vntill he haue aſſayed all the remedies that can bee: for otherwiſe it were againſt kinde. Therefore not without cauſe is heere mention made of ſo great pride and ſtubbornneſſe, that the father hauing ſtreyned himſelfe and done what hee can to the vttermoſt to reclayme his childe, perceiueth that it booteth him not to doe any more, and therefore that he muſt bee faine to deliuer him into the Iudges hande to be put to death. And ſo wee ſee that fathers and mothers muſt proceede in chaſtiſeſing their children, vntill they ſee them vtterly paſt hope of amendement. And I adde this, becauſe that parentes are ſo out of patience ſometimes when their children will not be reclaymed at the firſt choppe, that for very ſpyte they let them alone: and ſo their children fall into all exceſſe. But they ought not to deale ſo. Howe then? Vntill they finde by experience that their childe is out of meaſure ſtubborne, and ſheweth himſelfe to bee of ſo frowarde and ildiſpoſed nature, that hee can not be reclaimed: the father and the mother ought to proceede ſtill with that nurturing of him which God commaundeth heere. And parentes ought to bee patient in this caſe: for mildeneſſe is a vertue right requiſite in this behalfe, becauſe that if a father truſt to his owne courage, he ſhall marre his children if he finde any hardeneſſe in the teaching of them, foraſmuch as it is alwayes a painefull thing, and yet GOD will haue men to occupie themſelues in nurturing of their children, notwithſtanding the painefulneſſe thereof. And if they can not frame their children according to their deſire, but that they will needes take the brydle in their teeth: truely it can not but turne to the great griefe of the parentes. What ſay they? Ought not one worde to ſerue to the childe? Ought he not to be aſhamed if there were any droppe of honeſtie in him? After that manner might a father ſpeake. But howſoeuer the worlde go, yet muſt not the creature be left at randon, without regarde of winning him to God. Wee muſt rather vſe patience ſtill, as Saint Paul counſelleth vs in ſpeaking of corrections. In deede hee telleth vs that we muſt vſe ſharpneſſe and rigour to moue ſuch as be ouermuch hardened in their naughtineſſe, but yet hee woulde haue it matched with meekeneſſe and patience. Nowe then, what ought fathers to doe? Should they bee ſo far out of patience, as to giue ouer the correction of their children? No. And therefore let vs learne that in this text fathers for their parte are warned to haue a ſtay of themſelues, when they ſee their children giuen to lightneſſe & vnconſtancie, and to misbehaue themſelues: and that although they cannot winne them at the firſt, nor bring them to ſuch meekeneſſe as to make them take ŷ right way of their owne good will; yet they muſt conſider with them ſelues howe it is Gods will to keepe them occupied in that kynde of paines taking; and to trye their patience after that manner. Thus yee ſee one other poynt more which wee haue to marke in this text, where mention is made of ſuch vnreformable ſtoutneſſe and ſtubborneſſe as fathers and mothers doe finde to bee paſt remedie, in reſpect of themſelues, and therefore are faine to reſort to the Iudge.

Nowe let vs come to the euidence that is to be giuen by the father and the mother. It is ſaid, that they ſhall come to the gate; for that was the place of iuſtice in olde time. So then they ſhall repaire to the ſeate of iuſtice, and there ſay, This ſonne of ours is ſtubborne againſt vs, & froward: wee haue aſſayed to reforme him & cannot preuaile with him: He is a riotour & a drunkarde: and therfore wee put him now into your handes. Gods will is that vppon this euidence, the chyld ſhall bee ſtoned to death. And it is not without cauſe ŷ he giueth ſuch authoritie to fathers and mothers. For it is not likely that men wilbe ſo cruell as to ſpill their own bloud: that were vtterly againſt nature. Therfore it is good reaſon that ŷ father & mother ſhoulde bee beleeued without further ſcanning or ſifting of the matter, ſeeing the caſe concerneth their own children. For it were a ſhaming of the father & mother, to driue them to bring witneſſes againſt their own children, & then dealing by ordinarie maner of inditement ſhould be a derogation to the degree wherein God hath placed them. And ſeeing ſuch prerogatiue is giuen to men, they ought to haue the more regard of their duetie. But Gods will is that the father and the mother ſhould be beleeued. And why? Becauſe hee hath printed & ingrauen ſuch an affection naturally in their hearts towardes their children, as that they had leuer to dye than to do them wrong. Nowe if a man bee ſo wicked and beaſtly, as to practiſe any thing falſly againſt his owne childe, and to ſhewe himſelfe voyde of the louing kindnes which our Lorde hath printed in mankind, and whereof ſome footeſteppes and ſparkes are to be ſeene euen in the brute beaſtes: what a thing is it, that a man ſhould ſo farre ouerſhoote himſelfe? And therefore parentes ſee here what honour God doth them, in making them to be beleeued againſt their children: which thing ought to make them to inforce themſelues the more to loue them, and to bring them vp with al gentlenes, yea, and (euen in their chaſticing of thē) to vſe the rule that Saint Paul giueth vs, which is, that parents ſhoulde not put their children out of heart by their ouergreat rigour. Eph.6.4. For dyuers tymes it falleth out, that a chyld is put out of heart, becauſe he ſees his father vſe no mieldneſſe towardes him, nor any reaſon or loue in his doings. Therefore muſt diſcretion be vſed in this caſe. And to bee ſhort, let vs note, that the more honour GOD doeth vs, the more are wee bounde to doe our dueties. As for example, ſuch as are aduaunced to any degree or ſtate of honour, ought to conſider that GOD hath bounde them exceedingly, and that they ought to ſtrayne themſelues the more to doe their duetie: and this belongeth generally to al ſtates. But it is ſayde here expreſſely, concerning fathers and mothers. And therefore ſuch as haue children, muſt looke that they loue them after ſuch a ſorte, as they may well keepe themſelues from abuſing the power and authoritie which they haue of God: for it is not committed to them to that end.

Alſo it is declared heere further, that the father and the mother may not accuſe their children iudicially, vnleſſe they finde them vnreformable. I haue tolde you alreadie that this place ſpeaketh of puniſhment by death. For if fathers and mothers fall to putting of their children to death, before they haue vouchſafed to take paynes with them to ſee them well inſtructed: ought they not to bee coupled with them, as cauſers of their deſtruction? A father perchaunce will ſay, I haue not conſented to my ſonnes lewdneſſe, I haue let him alone. Yea, but ſhouldeſt thou haue falne aſleepe, when as God appoynted thee to keepe watch? Thou ſhouldeſt haue guyded thy childe, ſo as hee ſhoulde not haue ſtepped one pace, but thou ſhouldeſt haue beene at hande to direct him; Thou wouldeſt haue guyded a bruite beaſt, and haſt thou made no reckening of thine owne ſeede? Thou letteſt the creature alone which is formed after the image of God, whereof notwithſtanding thou waſt appointed to bee the keeper: and thinkeſt thou to ſcape by ſo tryfling an excuſe. Then if fathers and mothers come to this plunge of ſhewing their children to haue beene ſturdie and vnreformable, if they can not firſt proteſt that they haue done their dueties in chaſticing them, they themſelues alſo ſhalbee taken for guiltie, foraſmuch as it is apparant that it was long of themſelues that their children did leaudly, becauſe they did ſuffer them to runne at randon. By reaſon whereof if a man bee puniſhed by lawe, it may well bee inquired howe hee hath beene brought vp, and what teaching hee had in his fathers houſe: and when the miſchief procedeth from that ſpring, the father ought no more to ſcape ſcotfree than the ſonne. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to beare in mynd.

And here is mention made of two vices. Our ſonne is a riotour & a drunkard. Doth this import that other vices ought not to be corrected? No, but vnder theſe two kyndes, God ment to ſhew that fathers & mothers ought to bring vp their children in all vertue and honeſtie: For vnder ryoting and drunkenneſſe, hee meant to comprehende all looſeneſſe of life. If ryotouſneſſe bee puniſhed, what is to be doone to other much heynouſer thinges? What ſhall become of whoredome, theft, and periurie? What ſhall become of ſuch other like things? God then reſtreyneth not this lawe to theſe two vyces, but intendeth to ſhewe generally that all fathers and mothers ought to haue a vigilant eye to the conuerſations of their children; and that if they finde any miſbehauiour or vnthriftines in them, they muſt do their indeuour to reform them, and to bring them back againe from their euill trade. Thus much for one poynt. To bee ſhort, it is all one as if hee had ſayd, that if there bee any priuie faultes in children, their fathers and mothers muſt haue a vigilant eye vppon them, and reclaime them againe, that they growe not deſperate. For what a thing were it if a man ſhoulde marre his chylde, by bearing wͭ him in ſome particular fault? One euil woulde drawe on a hundred mo after it: and ſo the chylde ſhould bee loſt and vndone. Men therefore muſt take good heede, and preuent the danger, that their children growe not worſe and worſe, and that the forgiuing of one fault make them not to fall into another, and ſo they become euery day worſe than other. For if men ſuffer ryot or drunkenneſſe in their children, thoſe vyces are ill ynough of them ſelues alreadie: but yet in the ende a ryotour becomes a ſwyne, and wilbe altogether vnprofitable. And though there were no more in it but the vntemperance in yͤ abuſing of Gods creatures: ſoothly it were too much. What is drunkenneſſe? It is a kynde of beaſtlineſſe, that bereaueth men of the grace which God had beſtowed vpon them in nature. A ryotour being an ydle and vnprofitable lubber, and hauing ſpent all vpon bellyfare, muſt needes fall to ſtealing when he wanteth wherewith to furniſh out his exceſſe. But a drunkarde is yet worſe. The worlde ſees theſe euil inconueniences. Therefore wee had neede to preuent them, and to lay aforehand that ſuch miſchiefes come not to paſſe. Notwithſtanding it is ſhewed vs herewithall, howe men tumble out of one euill into another, vntill they come to deadly ruine. If a chylde bee a glutton or a drunkarde in his youth; well, men will ſay they be euill touches: but yet ſhall they be bornwith, and they wil not be thought to be deadly ſinnes. But wee ſee to what poynt children come by yͤ meanes. If that ryotouſneſſe bee not reformed in them, but that they continue ſtil in their ſtubbornes: at length they muſt bee deliuered into the hande of the Iuſticer, and bee put to death. Seeing it is ſo, let vs beware that wee flatter not our ſelues; but whenſoeuer there is any vyce in vs, let vs aſſure our ſelues that if ſtubbornnes be matched with it; we ſhall grow euery day more wilfull and hardharted than other, in ſo much yͭ a fault which is counted but ſmall before men, and as it were a veniall ſinne, wil become an intollerable cryme. Now it is God which ſaith ſo. Therefore let vs learne to examine our ſelues, and when we perceiue any vyce in vs, let vs doe our indeuour to amende it, for feare leaſt it throwe vs downe headlong altogither, and finally ſinke vs in ſuch ſorte as there remaine no mo puniſhmentes but the laſt, that is to ſay, the mortall and deadly puniſhment. Thus much concerning that poynt.

Nowe let vs treate of the duetie of children towardes their fathers and mothers. In deede it were to bee wiſhed afore all thinges, that children were of themſelues ſo wyſe and weladuyſed, as not to vexe their fathers and mothers in teaching them, and ſpecially in chaſtycing them for their faultes. And ſoothly, were our nature ſo well ruled as it ought to bee; a chylde woulde not tarty till hee were rebuked or compelled: but rather hee woulde thinke, alas, to what ende liue I in the worlde? And on yͤ other ſide hee woulde conſider thus, God hath ſet thee heere, to be ſerued and honoured by thee, & againe to obey my father and mother whome he hath giuen vnto mee to that end. Contrariwiſe if they reape nothing but ſorow by my meanes, it had bene better for mee to haue dyed before I was borne, yͭ the earth might haue ſwalowed me vp. After that maner ought a child to thinke. But foraſmuch as youth lacketh diſcretion; & childrē are not ſo reformable of themſelues as were requiſite: at leaſtwiſe let them ſuffer themſelues to bee gouerned by others. And if their father ſpye any vyce in them, let them acknowledge it when they bee put in mynde of it, and not onely confeſſe the miſdeede, [but alſo reforme it.] For it is but hypocriſie when a chyld holdeth on in his vnthriftineſſe, after hee hath made pretence of repentance, by humbling him ſelfe before his father. If hee change not his conditions, but continue ſtill in his vnthriftineſſe, it is a lying before GOD, and mocking of his father. Therefore if a chylde haue done amiſſe, or ſee himſelfe ſubiect to any vyce, and God is ſo gracious to him that hee hath a father or mother: Let him conſider thus with himſelfe: Go too; God reacheth thee his hande in this behalfe: for what are my father and my mother but the handes of God, and his inſtruments wherewith he intendeth to ſerue his turne, to guyde thee into the way of welfare? For when I ſee my father and my mother goe about to correct my vyces: I muſt needes ſet my ſelfe againſt GOD, and defye him openly; if my ſtomacke bee not abated and pulled downe, to receiue their correction. And ſurely, children ought to vnderſtande that this ſuperioritie ouer vs is the amiableſt in all the worlde: I meane the ſuperioritie which our fathers and mothers haue ouer vs. For although Kinges, princes, & magiſtrates be to be reuerenced : yet is not that kind of ſuperiority ſo amiable. A man wilbe aſhamed to be corrected by his prince, or by his ſuperiour that weeldeth the ſword of Iuſtice: but if a father ſpeake to his ſonne, yea and ſmite him too, it is no ſhame at all for the child to ſtoope to him, though the father doe him wrong, or reuile him ſaying, thou villaine, thou ſtretchehalter, thou graceleſſe knaue, what wilt thou doe? When thou haſt killed me with greife and ſorrow of mind, thou muſt needes cal down Gods vengeance vpon thee. When the father vſeth ſuch roughneſſe towardes his chylde, and the chyld humbleth himſelfe vnto him, and becommeth as it were dumme without replying at all againſt him; it ſhalbee a great honour to him to haue receiued correction at his fathers hande, and to haue beene touched by him after that faſhion. Now then, ſith wee ſee that this ſuperioritie which God hath giuen to fathers & mothers, is a thing which wee ought euen naturally to haue in eſtimation: if a chyld nod his head at all the warninges that are giuen him, ſhewing himſelfe brazen faced and vtterly paſt ſhame, ſo as hee regardeth not what his father and mother ſay vnto him, but wrings his groyn at them for their putting of him in mynde of his faultes: is he not quyte & cleane paſt grace? What can a man ſay more, or hope for at his hande? Now then, let children haue regarde hereof, and let them note alſo that the honouring of their father and mother is the firſt commaundement that is giuen in the ſeconde table, and the onely commaundement of the law that Eph.6.2. hath any promiſe, I meane ſpeciall promiſe, as S. Paul declareth. And hereby wee bee put in mynd, that ſuch as holde ſcorne to honor their fathers and mothers, doe not only deſpiſe God, but alſo ſhewe their vnbeleefe in mocking at all his promiſes, and in refuſing and caſting away of all his bleſſings wilfully; as if they ſhould ſay, I paſſe not for proſpering by Gods grace, I will none of that meane. And for proofe that it is ſo, God hauing ſayde that we muſt honour our father and mother, addeth, To the ende thou Exo.20,12. mayſt liue long in the lande which the Lord thy God giueth thee: as if hee ſhoulde ſay, Looke not that I ſhoulde proſper you or bleſſe you, but vppon this condition, that yee obey your fathers and mothers. Nowe then, as for thoſe that harden themſelues, doe they not ſhewe that all is one to them whether they bee depriued of Gods grace and bleſſing, or no? And that is an intolerable vnthankfulnes.

Moreouer, let vs mark alſo, that wheras God ſpeaketh of the honouring of our fathers & mothers, hee meaneth not of ceremoniouſnes; but that children ſhoulde thinke thus with themſelues, God hath giuen mee a father and a mother to the intent I ſhoulde bee ruled by their hande, and liue vnder their direction. The honour then which a chylde oweth to his father & mother, conſiſteth not in pretending ſome ceremonious and counterfet humilitie: but in behauing himſelfe meekely, in ſuffering them to haue the gouernement of him, and in beeing tractable to bee refourmed when his parentes tell him of his faults. Thoſe bee the things that children ought to regarde, but ſpecially religion. For often times fathers and mothers deſerue well to bee diſobeyed at their childrens hands. And in deede, they can no skill of ſeruing God, otherwiſe than by diſobeying their fathers and mothers. If there bee any man ſo wicked, that hee woulde haue his ſonne giuen to craftineſſe, to leaudneſſe, to vnthankfulneſſe, to periurie, and to trecherie: what a thing were that? And yet we ſee a number of fathers, which haue beene deſpyſers of God all their life long, and all their ſeeking is to bring vp their children in their owne ſchoole. A father will ſay to his ſonne, I renounce thee if thou bee not like me. Such curſed wordes ſhall we heare men ſpeake. In ſo much that hee which hath beene a whoremonger and infected a whole countrye with his filthineſſe all the time of his life, or a blaſphemer, or a drunkarde; will needes haue his ſonne to bee like himſelfe. Nowe in ſuch caſes children muſt diſobey their parents: for otherwiſe they cannot obey God. And therefore S. Paul ſpeaking of the honor and obedience that children ſhould yeeld to their parentes, addeth this exception or afterſpeeche, in the Lorde. For Eph.6,1.
God muſt euer haue the vpper hande. And for the ſame cauſe alſo did I ſay erewhyles, that the honour which is required in this commaundement of the lawe, ought then cheefely to be put in practiſe, when fathers and mothers doe their indeuour to trayne vp their children well, and to correct their vyces. Then muſt the children in any wiſe obey, aſſuring themſelues that if they admit not both the warnings and the chaſticements of their parents, and reforme themſelues thereafter when they heare their vices ſo condemned: they ſhewe themſelues to be diſobedient both to God and to the order of nature. Notwithſtanding to the intent that children excuſe not themſelues, and beare themſelues in hande that it is a light fault to diſobey their parentes; heere God condemneth ſuch diſobedience to death. It is God that giueth this ſentence, and not man. And hee ſayeth that it is an vnpardonable fault, when a childe is ſo hardhearted, that his fathers and mothers correctiō cannot preuaile with him. For why? wee muſt euer come backe to this point, that ſuch a one is as a monſter: and whatſoeuer is againſt nature wee ought to lothe & abhorre it. And no dout but Gods curſe & vengeance would bee kindled againſt vs, if we ſhould ſuffer the thing that is againſt nature. Nowe if a child wil not heare his father and his mother, when God vouchſafeth to giue him gouernours at home to tell him his faults: his deſpyſing of them is a manifeſt deſpyſing of God. For why? God hath printed his marke vppon the father and mother, inſomuch that if there bee any religion, the ſame muſt bee acknowledged in the perſon of the father and of the mother. Euen the very Heathen had a cōmon ſaying concerning the obedience which they yeelded to God and to their parents. As if they ſhould ſay, (as nature had taught them) that fathers & mothers beare the image of God in this world,& ỹ he which hath any religion in him,& acknowledgeth any ſoueraine maieſtie & ſubmitteth himſelf therto: muſt alſo needs obey his father & mother. The verie heathen ſpake after ỹ maner,it was their common ſtyle. Nowe then,if we receiue not this inſtruction, muſt it not needes follow,ỹ wee be too deſtitute of wit? Greatly ought we to be aſhamed,to be taught in the ſchoole of the Heathen,to knowe our dutie. Therefore(as I ſaide afore) let children knowe that it is no light fault nor eaſie to be pardoned, when they bee diſobedient to their fathers and mothers.For why?They had the inſtinct of nature,which they ought to haue followed. And therefore it is an vnpardonable cryme to diſobey a mans father & mother, according whereunto it is ſayde in another place, He that ſmyteth his father or his mother, ſhall dye ỹ death without fauour. Exod.21.15 If one ſtrike another man: well, he ſhalbe puniſhed for it. but if he beate his father or his mother, it is as much as if hee had killed a man: elſe there were no order or reaſon in nature. And why? For let vs alwayes haue an eye to the grounde which God hath ſet downe in nature: namely, that it is all one as if a man woulde confounde heauen and earth together, when hee ſetteth himſelfe ſo againſt his father and mother. And this ſerueth to hold children in awe, if they haue any ſparke of myldneſſe in them, and that they bee not vtterly vnreformable, ſo as Satan poſſeſſeth them wholly. That is the thing which we haue to remember more vpon this text.

Howbeit, foraſmuch as the time wil not ſuffer mee to ſpeake ſo much therof as were to bee ſpoken; wee will nowe come to the concluſion: which is, that if the diſobedience which is committed againſt the fathers of this worlde, bee ſo grieuouſly puniſhed by Gods lawe: what ſhall become of men when they will not heare the voyce of their heauenly father? True it is that heere God ſpeaketh of the corrections which proceede from himſelfe: for when a man nurtureth his chylde, he is Gods miniſter in that behalf, and his voyce is not the voyce of man but of God. But yet when as God declareth after a more manifeſt faſhion, that it is hee which gaue his lawe, ſo as wee haue his holy writte, where wee may heare his heauenly voyce: that is a voice of more authoritie, than the ſpeaking of a father or a mother at home in their houſe. Againe, wee come to the Church, where Gods worde is preached vnto vs, and God hath dedicated that place and the pulpit to deliuer out his worde to be heard, as though he were there in his owne perſon. Seeing then that Gods worde is ſo ſet downe vnto vs in the holy ſcripture, and ſo preached vnto vs: are they not to bee reiected as monſters, and in no wiſe to bee ſuffered, which diſobey the ſame and make no account of it? And if men beare with them, is it not a procuring of Gods wrath? When it hath lurked neuer ſo long among vs, in the ende it muſt needes bewray it ſelfe, and wee muſt feele to our coſt what it is to haue maintayned euill willingly and wittingly. So then, let vs alwayes make this compariſon. Seeing that God wilbee acknowleged in his creatures according to the degree which hee hath giuen to euery of them: and ſeeing alſo that hee will haue thoſe to bee obeyed which are in preheminence, ſo as the reſt muſt receiue their correction and ſubmit themſelues to them: it is much more reaſon, that hee himſelfe ſhoulde bee heard and obeyed, when hee ſpeaketh with his owne holy mouth, which thing hee doeth when wee reade the holy ſcripture, and when we heare his word preached. For inaſmuch as he hath ſet this order in his Church, that they which preache his worde ſhould repreſent the perſon of his ſonne: can wee ſay it is a light fault to haue deſpyſed Gods maieſtie, and to haue made no reckening of the hearing of his worde? Then let vs looke well to it.

Finally, let vs marke how it is ſaid here, Thou ſhalt roote out the euil from thee, and all Iſraell ſhall heare thereof and be afrayd. Here our Lord repeateth that againe which wee haue heard afore, ỹ is, that when outragious crimes are foſtered among vs, it is the next way to infect vs,& we ſee there needeth not much leauen to make ſower a whole lump of dow; beſides that we be tolde it by Gods word, experience alſo doth ſhew it vs. And therefore let Magiſtrates bee vigilant in rooting out wickedneſſe, yea and in puniſhing mennes faultes as they deſerue. If there bee neede of mannes correction, let it bee had, and let this extremitie of putting men to death bee alwayes preuented. But if the cryme be vnpardonable, then muſt ſeueritie and rigour be vſed. For if wickedneſſe bee willingly foſtered, men ſhall ſee in the ende what they ſhal haue wonne by it. Alſo let vs take warning therewithall, to benefite our ſelues by the examples which wee ſee before our eyes; that when any puniſhment is executed by order of lawe, wee may vnderſtande that God teacheth vs at other mennes coſt, and therefore wee ought to haue regarde thereof. Moreouer if Magiſtrates and Iudges bee called here of God, yea, and expreſſely cōmaunded by him to puniſh the diſobedience that is committed againſt earthly fathers and mothers: let vs mark, ỹ whenſoeuer there is any manifeſt contempt of God, any irreligiouſnes, or any withſtanding of his worde, thoſe thinges are much leſſe to be ſuffered: and that if they be borne with; it is rank treaſon to Godward, which he will not leaue vnpuniſhed. And therefore let all Magiſtrates and all ſuch as are ſet in place of gouernement to execute iuſtice, vnderſtande that God commendeth his owne honour to them aboue all thinges, and that they muſt bee vigilant in that caſe chiefely, yea, and that after ſuch a ſort, as al of vs together may ſhew by our doings, that our whole deſire is that God ſhould reigne among vs,& that we would not haue his worde to be deſpiſed and ſcorned, but rather reuerenced as it ought to bee. Wherefore let vs ſhewe this zeale, if wee will haue our Lorde to bleſſe and proſper vs.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes,praying him to vouchſafe ſo to tame vs, that whereas wee bee inclyned to much wretchedneſſe and corruption, at leaſtwiſe wee may not become frowarde and vnreformable : but that when wee bee warned by his worde , wee may euery of vs humble our ſelues, and quietly take the yoke which hee layeth vpon our ſhoulders, and patiently beare the corrections which he layes vppon vs by men, ſpecially by thoſe to whome hee hath giuen the charge to guyde and gouerne vs , ſo as euery of vs acknowledging himſelfe to bee ſubiect to his ſuperiours , may yeeld God his due obedience , and in no wiſe tary till wee bee compelled, and ſpurred , but receiue the warnings that are giuen vs , (from whence ſo euer they come) as the warnings of God, knowing that all trueth is of him, and that by that meanes alſo hee procureth our ſaluation . That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely to vs,but alſo to all nations and people of the earth,&c.

On VVedneſday the firſt of Ianuarie 1556.

The Cxxiiij. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the one and twentith Chapter.

22 If a man haue committed an offence worthie of death , and is put to death for it,and thou haſt hanged him on tree:

23 His dead bodie ſhall not hang all night vppon the tree, but thou ſhalt burie him the ſame day : For the curſe of God is on him that is hanged . And therefore defyle not thou the land which the Lorde thy God giueth thee to inherit.

THE lawe that I haue rehearſed here,containeth two parts. The one is, that when an offender is executed by order of lawe ; men muſt not bee aſhamed of the hanging of his bodie. Why ſo ? For a witneſſe that his death is a thing neither againſt God,nor againſt right:but rather that for the mainteining of ciuil gouernment among mankynd , it is requiſite that miſdeedes ſhould bee puniſhed, as wee haue ſeene alreadie that the euill muſt bee rooted out from among the people . And the ſeconde parte is, that the dead bodie(for all that) ſhall not hang vppon the gibbet aboue one day,becauſe it ſtriketh a horror into men and maketh them diſmayed,to ſee a mannes bodie ſo hanging in the ayre . God therefore willed that men ſhoulde content themſelues with it for one day in reſpect of iuſtice, and that afterwarde the bodye ſhoulde be buryed. In deede it is true that this lawe was peculiar to the Iewes, and that at this day wee bee no more bounde to it than to the ceremonies: it is now ſet at libertie.But yet doth the doctrine thereof continue ſtill. The vſe of the lawe is vtterly aboliſhed : but yet muſt wee haue an eye to the ende wherefore God commanded it,and apply the ſame to our learning.

Firſt of all then let vs marke,that although it bee a dreadfull thing to put a man to death,becauſe hee is created after the image of God:yet notwithſtanding , when it is done vppon iuſt cauſe , and by thoſe to whome God hath committed the ſworde of Iuſtice: it muſt needes bee done, and wee muſt not eſteeme it , as an vnkindly thing. For what a thing were it,if faultes ſhoulde ſcape vnpuniſhed ? It were better for vs to bee wylde beaſts. So then, ſeeing that mankynde cannot bee maintayned , but by rigour of iuſtice , and by the puniſhing of ſuch as haue diſturbed the common order : it muſt not bee taken for crueltie or for a defacing of Gods image,when a man is put to death . All ſuch manner of allegations muſt bee ſet aſide . For God him ſelfe ſpeaketh and telleth vs, that wee ought to bee ſo little aſhamed to put an offender to death ; that his body muſt bee layde out to the ſight of euery man , and thereupon God is to bee praiſed , for hauing ſo great and ſo fatherly care of men , as to roote out the perſon that is a diſturber of the peace , and to cut off thoſe as rotten members which might marre all the reſidue , that the reſt might abyde in ſafetie .

To bee ſhort , wee haue here a maintenance of the iuſtice that is executed by magiſtrates, in puniſhing mennes faultes and miſdeedes euen vnto the death. Iuſtice is not to be abhorred or miſliked, becauſe a man is ſent to the gallowes. Well may wee bee afrayde when wee ſee ſuch examples before vs: but yet muſt wee alſo commende and reuerence iuſtice. For why? Yee ſee here howe God alloweth and vpholdeth the puniſhing of offenders , as a thing acceptable to him; and that he will haue the verie heauen to bee a witneſſe thereof, by hanging vp the body vppon a gibbet , and hee will haue all the elementes to bee there alſo, to ſaye ; No, no, yee muſt not ſpare them: God hath appoynted that this execution ſhould bee done, and commanded the ſame, and therefore you ought to obey him. For if that were not, wee ſhoulde come to vtter confuſion : and God hath ſhewed vs that wee ought not to bee ſo wiſe as to incounter his will. I tell you this is a leſſon verie behoofefull for vs in theſe dayes.

Although this lawe was but for the outwarde man; yet was it Gods will that the inſtruction thereof ſhoulde indure for euer. And in very deede it hath continued among men, euen by nature. For the Heathen, (who had not the lawe of Moſes) fayled not to followe the ſame order: inſomuch that whenſoeuer any man was executed by iuſtice; it was ſet foorth for an example. Whereby wee may perceiue, that God hath grauen this principle in mennes heartes, that the executions which are done by perſons of authoritie, and by ſuch as are in office & haue the charge committed vnto them, are not to be euil ſpoken of, but rather that wee ought to cōmend them for obeying God, and for doing the thing that belonged to their degree. For if a Iudge beeing armed with the ſworde, doe ſpare the partie that hath committed a wicked deed: he is as blameworthie before God, as if hee had Prou.17.15 condemned a guiltleſſe perſon, as Salomon auoweth. And this ſerueth to ouerthrowe the fantaſticall opinions of ſuch as ſay that among Chriſtians no man ought to be put to death, becauſe the like rigour is not as was vnder yͤ lawe. Verily as who ſhoulde ſay that God had changed his mynde and reſigned his office: for wee knowe that hee is Iudge of the worlde for euer: And although hee reſerue the execution of that office till the laſt iudgement, and haue committed that charge to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: yet is it his wil that there ſhould be ſome reſemblance of iuſtice euen in this earthly life. True it is, that it ſhall not come to perfection heere, and that the moſt parte of ſuch as ſhalbee condemned at the latter day, ſhall in this worlde ſcape the handes of the earthly Iudges: but yet for al that, howe ſoeuer the worlde goe, God will not haue inordinate looſeneſſe to reigne, ſo as men might do what they liſt, and al crymes ſcape vnpuniſhed. Therefore his will is that vengeance ſhould be executed by thoſe into whoſe hands hee hath put the ſworde of iuſtice, as ſayeth S. Paul in the thirteenth to the Romanes, where hee telleth vs that Gods arming of them after that ſorte is not for naught, hee will not haue them to bee but as a ſhadowe to ſcarre babes, and to bee vtterly voyde of power: but hee will haue Iudges to knowe that they bee bounde to puniſh miſdeedes. And ſo farre off is it that their ſo doing ſhalbee imputed to them for euill or ſinne; that God hath ſhewed by this ceremonie of the lawe, that all the Elementes of the worlde accept it and allowe of it as witneſſes to God, as who ſhoulde ſay that the body hanging in the ayre is as a ſolemne Record that ſuch execution is not to bee condemned, neyther ought the magiſtrates to bee deſirous to hyde it as though they were murderers of ſuch as they cauſe to bee put to death, but rather to ſet them out for an example, as who woulde ſay, wee haue done a ſacrifice vnto God, it is our office, it is our charge, thus behoueth it vs to doe: for if wee ſhoulde ſpare men in this behalfe, wee ſhoulde ſell that good cheape which is none of ours, that is to ſaye; Gods iuſtice. For it is committed vnto vs vppon condition that wee muſt yeeld account thereof. Thus much concerning the firſt poynt.

Nowe there is alſo a ſeconde poynt, which is that the body muſt not hang in the ayre aboue one day. And that is, becauſe ſuch ſightes doe in trueth make men afrayde. Alſo it was Gods will that one dayes recorde ſhoulde ſuffice among his people, & that they ſhould not keepe the corps there any longer. But I haue told you alreadie that wee be no more bounde thereunto by neceſſitie. In ſome countryes they haue deuiſed certaine brotherhoods, who ſhould goe and take down the bodyes from the Gibbets & burie them. And truely that was a fonde deuotion, for they knewe not wherefore they did ſo. The Iewes alſo were ſo bewitched with their owne dotages, that they thought that the buryall of them commaunded in this place did concerne the welfare of their ſoules. Likewiſe the Heathen imagined that the ſoules of men went wandring and ſtraying heere and there, vntill their bodyes were buryed. But theſe are dotages of the diuels owne deuyſing, to turne away men continually to a multitude of lyes. Gods care is rather of vs which are alyue, as though hee meant to ſet a meane betweene the rigour of Iuſtice and the gentleneſſe which ought to bee among vs. This meane therefore is well woorthie to bee marked; for wee euer ſwarue aſide to ſome extremitie. In ſhunning crueltie, wee become cowardly, and haue no more regarde of Iuſtice, but woulde haue all faultes forgiuen, and that men might haue free leaue to do all manner of miſchiefe without correction. On the other ſide, in mynding to bee ſeuere, we run in daunger of being too ſeuere. God therfore appoynteth a meane: which is, firſt of all, that we ſhould puniſh the offences that deſerue death. And ſecondly to the ende that Iuſtice ſhoulde bee had in honour, and that we ſhoulde not ſurmiſe any reprochefulneſſe in it; hee will haue the offenders bodies hoyſed vp into the aire for men to looke at, as it were in way of warrantie yͤ whē a magiſtrate puniſheth an offence, he offereth vp a ſacrifice acceptable in heauen, & conſequently which ought to be well taken on earth. Yet for all this, hee will not haue vs to be too hardhearted, but alwayes to reteine ſtill ſome pitifulneſſe and compaſſion. And when iuſtice is ſo approoued, he will haue the body to bee buryed, yea, euen remooued from of the earth as an infection. For why? So long as a mannes body hangeth vppon the gallowes, there are two thinges ſeene: the one is, that God hath well prouided for mankinde, in ordeyning the execution of iuſtice, and that malefactours ſhould not bee ſpared. That is one poynt. Another is, that men may ſay thus with themſelues, Lo here is a wicked deede done: for theſe are tokens that the land hath bin defiled. Therefore when a bodie is ſo hanged vp, it is a ſigne of the defyling of the lande by the committing of ſome robberie, murther, or other haynous cryme. When it is ſo, let this alſo bee euer marked. God therefore intendeth to ſhewe that where iuſtice is executed the fault is forgiuen, and the countrey ſtandeth no longer charged therewith, but his wrath is pacified: And as though the miſdeede had bin ſpared, he will haue the body buried. Thus yee ſee howe the executing of iuſtice vpon offenders and wicked doers, and the cutting off of leaudeneſſe, is a warrant that Gods vengeance ſhall not light vpon the Lande. Nowe then wee ſee in effect what God ment by his Lawe. Alſo we ſee howe the inſtruction continueth ſtill vnto vs, though we haue not the vſe of the Lawe it ſelfe, becauſe the Lawe commaunded a thing whereunto wee be no more bounde ſince the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. So to be ſhorte, this doctrine is not vnprofitable: for wee knowe Gods meaning, which concerneth vs as well as the Iewes.

But nowe muſt wee come to the chiefe point that is to be gathered of this text. For whereas our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was hanged on tree, it happened not by happe hazarde. Truely the Iewes deſired that he might be crucified, which in thoſe dayes was the moſt horrible, reprochfull yea and painefull death that could be. For the hanging of Chriſt vpon the tree, was not after the manner that is ſpoken of heere. Such as were ſtoned among the Iewes were alſo hanged vp vppon a gibbet after they were dead: and although they were not ſtrangled, nor beheaded, but ouerwhelmed with ſtones: yet were their bodyes taken and hanged vppe, that all others might take example at them. But our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was crucified, yea euen as though hee had beene a cutthrote, after the ſame manner that men lay murtherers nowadayes vppon the wheele. And (as I ſayde) that was a verie cruell kinde of death. Neither was it doone by the Lawe of Moſes, but by cuſtome of the Romanes who raigned at that time in Iewrie. Yet notwithſtanding, the ſonne of God was hanged on tree. And the Iewes regarded it not, but cryed out to haue him crucified. Alſo when Pylate condemned him thereto, his meaning was not to put him to it, as in reſpect of the reprochfulneſſe thereof before God: but God gouerned it in ſuch ſort by his ſecret prouidence, that Ieſus Chriſt was accurſed when he hung vppon the croſſe, according to that which had beene ſpoken of him afore. And that is Saint Paules Gal.3.13. meaning. For in telling vs that we be ſette free from the curſe of the Lawe, hee ſayeth that our Lorde Ieſus bare it in his body by being hanged vpon tree. Alſo it is the ſame thing that Saint 1.Pet.2.24. Peter ment in ſaying that he bare our ſinnes vpon the tree. And otherwiſe this ſaying of the Eſa.53.5. prophet Eſay had not beene fulfilled, that the chaſtiſement of our peace was layde vpon him, ſo as hee was faine to beare our puniſhment, whereby we might be reconciled vnto GOD. And in the foreſayde text which I alleadged out of ẏ Galathians, S. Paul treateth of two things. He ſayeth that becauſe wee can not attaine to righteouſneſſe, but by fulfilling the Lawe in all pointes, and by being diſcharged before GOD: it behoued our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt to bee ſubiect to the Lawe, to the intent that his obedience might nowe be imputed vnto vs, and God accept thereof as though we brought the like obedience of our owne. When we ſpeake of being iuſtified before God, howe is that to be vnderſtoode? Verily that we ſhould obey the thinges that God commaundeth vs in his Lawe. For the righteouſneſſe that hee ſpeaketh of is, that he which doeth thoſe thinges ſhall liue thereby. Leuit.18.5. Then muſt our life be ruled altogether after the will of GOD, and then ſhall wee be taken for righteous before him. Is there nowe ſo much as one man to be founde, which commeth anie thing neere this obſeruation of the Lawe, and that with ſuch vncorrupt ſoundneſſe? No. The holieſt Saintes that euer haue beene, were farre off from ſuch perfection. Then are we all diſappointed of righteouſneſſe, ſo as we can not in any wiſe ſtande in Gods fauour. But yet are we righteous in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And why? For he beeing the ſouereigne king in whome there was no bondage nor ſubiection, did willingly ſubmitte himſelfe to the Lawe, and beare the yoke thereof for vs: for we knowe that he performed the will of GOD his father in all pointes to the full. And ſo by that meane we be taken for righteous in Ieſus Chriſt. Why ſo? Becauſe hee was obedient. Yea and that obedience of his was not for himſelfe; there was no ſubiection in him, neither was hee bounde to any thing: for he is altogether aboue the Lawe: therefore it followeth that he was obedient for vs. And therefore when wee flee to him for ſuccour, our heauenly father admitteth vs as if wee brought perfect obedience with vs. For looke what is wãting & miſſing in ourſelues, we go to ſeeke it like poore beggers in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and al is applyed vnto vs by the vertue of faith. Marke that for one point.

But Saint Paul addeth, that foraſmuch as we bee all accurſed by the Lawe, our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was faine to beare our curſe. And he bare it (ſayeth he) for he was hanged vpon tree. And whereas the Lawe of God had ſayd, Curſed ſhall he be that hangeth on tree: the ſame was verified in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And S. Paul had an eye both to that which hath bin, and to that which we ſhall ſee hereafter, namely, Curſed ſhall the man bee which performeth not all the things ẏ are written here. Ye ſee how God hath declared his will. Thereupon he promiſeth that whoſoeuer keepeth his Lawe, ſhalbe taken for righteous and obtein the endleſſe life. But yet on the contrarie part he telleth vs, ẏ if a man faile in any one point, he ſhalbe curſed & Iames.2.10. forlorne without remedie. Now let euery of vs looke into himſelfe. Was there euer any man ẏ hath not failed many wayes? It is ſayd ẏ no man Pſal.143.2. ſhalbe founde righteous in his ſight. And againe in an other place, Lorde, if thou looke ſtreitely Pſal.130.4. vpon ſin, who can abide it? Who is able to ſhew himſelfe before thy iudgement ſeate? Needes muſt all men be confounded: and not for ſome one ſin, but for a number of wicked deedes ſhall we be put to ſhame, if god do once enter into account with vs. Then are we all vndone & damned as in reſpect of the Lawe, there is no more remedy, Curſed ſhal he be which doeth not all Leuit,8.5. thoſe thinges. Alas, we be neuer able to doe the hundredth part of them. I ſay ẏ although God guide vs vnto goodnes by his holy ſpirit, yet do we faile through our owne infirmitie, and there is euer great want in vs. Ye ſee then that we be vndone and paſt hope of recouery, vnleſſe the curſe be aboliſhed. And that was done in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who as he hath performed all righteouſneſſe, ſo hath he alſo receiued the curſe to himſelfe which lay vppon our heades, & he hath borne it in his perſon, to the intent that henceforth we ſhould be free from it. As how? For he was not hanged vpon tree without the prouidence of God his father: wee muſt alwayes looke backe to ẏ point. For as for theſe raſcals which goe about to deface Gods prouidence, they ſhew that they neuer knew what religion meaneth; nay they be maſtife dogges, yea and much worſe than dogs, beleeuing no more in God than brute beaſtes, as the worlde knoweth. Notwithſtanding foraſmuch as God hath giuen his ſonne to death, as the ſcripture beareth witneſſe, that he hath ſo loued the worlde that he hath not ſpared his only ſonne, but hath deliuered him to death for vs: Let vs aſſure ourſelues that God ment to ſhewe vs to our faces, that he layde vpon him the curſe due to vs, ſo as the thing which we hadde deſerued was layde vpon the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Therefore when wee beholde Ieſus Chriſt hanging on the tree, wee knowe that hee hath taken our bondage vpon him, euen to the intent that wee ſhould not be any more bounde to the curſe of the lawe, but free, and that the ſayde threate ſhould no more take place to condemn vs, Curſed ſhall hee bee which performeth not all thoſe thinges. For why? When wee flee for refuge to the death & paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, our ſinnes are wiped out, God layeth them not any more to our charge, they be quite & cleane done away. And why ſo? Becauſe the curſe lyeth not any longer vppon the tranſgreſſors, when they truſt and reſt vpon the ſatisfaction that was offered vnto God the father, by him that was ordeined to that office.

Here it might be demanded, whether Chriſts hanging vppon the tree, and his beeing accurſed before GOD, was not a derogation to his maieſtie? Surely ſo farre off was it from diminiſhing or defacing of his glorie; that it is rather the chiefe thing wherefore wee are to magnifie him. For we ought to be euen rauiſhed at the ineſtimable loue of God towardes vs, in that he vouchſafed that his ſonne, who is the heade of the Angelles, before whome all knees ought to bowe, and vnto whom all creatures ought to do homage, ſhould ſo humble himſelfe euen to the loweſt depthes, and beare our curſe. When wee ſee that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath ſo forgotten himſelfe, and had ſo litle regarde of himſelfe; that for very feruent loue which he bare vnto vs, he tooke vpon him the curſe wherewith wee were all ouerwhelmed, receiuing it wholely to himſelfe: is there any heart ſo harde, which ought not to cliue at the ſight thereof? Againe, how ought we to be inflamed to glorifie our Sauiour, who hath abaced himſelfe ſo farre to ſaue vs? Moreouer, let vs marke alſo, that hee ceaſed not for all that, to be bleſſed of God, according to the common title which was giuen among the Iewes. And in very deede hee is ſo named in the hundreth and eighteenth Pſalme [where it is ſayde], Bleſſed bee hee that commeth in the name of the Lorde. It was a propheſie concerning the redeemer of the worlde that had beene promiſed. Nowe ſeeing that God auoweth him to be bleſſed; howe comes it to paſſe that hee is accurſed, and that the curſe ſhould take place in his perſon? Theſe two agree very well. For whereas Chriſt became as it were accurſed; not onely before men but alſo before God: it was becauſe he was our ſuretie, and repreſented vs, ſetting himſelfe in our ſteede. Yet neuertheleſſe he reteined ſtill the thing that was due to himſelfe, to wit; to be the bleſſed of the father, who will haue him to bee knowen ſo to be, and that all the worlde ſhould beare witneſſe of ẏ bleſſednes. For the ſame ſhould haue beene Matt.21.9. ſpoken by the people, euen as wee ſee that the children did ſing the ſame ſong at the entrance of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt into Ieruſalem. Then was it requiſite that this bleſſing which was peculiar to himſelfe, ſhoulde bee knowen to the whole worlde. And ſo our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was not made ſo accurſed, as ẏ the bleſſednes which was giuen vnto him could periſhe, and not continue alwayes vnappaired.

Moreouer we muſt come to that which Saint Paule ſayeth to the Coloſſians. For there hee Col.2.14. ſetteth out the croſſe of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt vnto vs, as a Charyot of Tryumphe, ſaying that our Lorde Ieſus hath defaced and cancelled the handewriting that was againſt vs, and finally, nayled it to his croſſe. The Lawe hadde ſhewed Gods wil: And by meanes thereof it behoued al men to knowe themſelues to bee indaungered vnto God, and to feele thēſelues to be accurſed as I haue ſhewed before. But what remedy was there to comfort poore ſinners? In deede God ordained ſacrifices and waſhinges and ſuch other like thinges: but were they able to doe the deede? When men came to doe ſacrifice, it was tolde them in deede that their ſinne ſhould be wiped away. Yea, but that was not by the power of the brute beaſtes which was offered at the Altar. Could the bloud of an Oxe, a calfe or a Heckfer clenſe away the ſpottes of the ſoule? We knowe that the bloud of ſuch thinges is not onely corruptible, but alſo filthy. Therefore it could not ſatisfie Gods Iuſtice, it came farre ſhort of it. Againe, when a man waſhed himſelfe, it is true that he hadde a promiſe: but was that promiſe tyed to the water? We knowe that water is a tranſitorie element, and can not attayne to the ſoule to clenſe away the filth thereof. To be ſhort, both the Sacrifices and the waſhinges which GOD hadde ordeined in the Lawe, were a kinde of renewing of the bond which all ſinners haue ingrauen in their conſciences. Like as if an offender ſhoulde be taken and made to confeſſe all his miſdeedes, and haue all his former confeſſions rehearſed vnto him, to the intent to put him in minde of them: euen ſo was Gods meaning towardes the Iewes Leuit.1.3.4. in willing them to take water at their going to the Temple, as if they ſhould haue ſayde, wee acknowledge and proteſt before heauen and earth, that we be defiled ſo as there is nothing but vtter infection in vs, and yͤ we haue neede to be waſhed. Againe, came they once at the Altar: there a ſacrifice was offred vp, an innocẽt brute beaſt was put to death, and that was as a lookeingglaſſe to ſette before our eyes, that wee bee worthie of death, and not of bodilie death onely, but alſo of euerlaſting death before GOD, and to be plundged into hell. Ye ſee then howe the ſacrifices and ſuch other like thinges were as matters of recorde and authoritie, to aſſure all folkes the more of their ſinnes, and to conuict them of the ſame, and to make them the more to abhorre their miſdeedes. But was Ieſus Chriſt hanged on tree? Saint Paule ſayth Col.2.14. that in ſo doing he tooke vppon him the bonde that was againſt vs, that is to ſay, all the thinges whereto the Lawe bounde vs, all the fetters, all the condemnations, and all the ſentences that ſerued to put vs to ſhame, and to bewray our leawdeneſſe. Al theſe thinges tooke he vpon him, and cancelled them, as if a man ſhoulde take a handewriting and teare it in peeces, to make it of no force by defacing it after that faſhion, and euen ſo delt our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, with vs. And Paule addeth there immediatly, that Chriſt tryumphed ouer all our enemies, ſo as the deuill was ledde in tryumphe. As howe? Yee ſee that Ieſus Chriſt was put to the vttermoſt reproch that could be in being hanged vpon the croſſe, and (as the prophet Eſaie ſayth) Eſa.53.2. he was ſo disfigured that folke vouchſafed not to acknowledge him for a man, but all men abhorred him. And where is then this tryumphe? Although the ſacrifice which he offered vp imported a curſe in it at the firſt ſight: yet ceaſed it not to yeelde a verie good ſent before GOD as the ſcripture termeth it. And therefore our Lorde Ieſus tryumphed againſt Satan, againſt Sinne, and againſt all our enemies. To be ſhort, let vs marke, that Ieſus Chriſt hath ſo borne our curſe, that he hath aboliſhed it quite and cleane. Becauſe hee was the fountaine of all glorie, it muſt needes be that the condemnation which he tooke vpon him on our behalfe, is quite and cleane diſcharged by his power. In like caſe ſtandes it with his death. He ſuffered death, but was he ouercome of it? No, but hee did rather aboliſh death. And the very ſtaye and truſt of our righteouſneſſe, is the diuine power of his reſurrection, as wherein hee hath ſhewed himſelfe to haue gotten the vpper hand of death, accordingly as Saint Peter ſayeth in Act.2.31. & 3.21. the thirde chapter of the Actes, that it was vnpoſſible for him to be helde downe by the ſorrowes of death, becauſe he had ouercome them, and by that meane hadde purchaſed righteouſneſſe for vs. Nowe wee ſee that whereas Ieſus Chriſt is ſayde to haue beene forlorne and accurſed for our ſakes: it did ſo litle abace his maieſtie, that we ought the rather to magnifie his glorie in that behalfe; aſſuring ourſelues that we ſhall no more be accurſed, becauſe hee hath done away our curſe, and borne it in his owne perſon.

Alſo let vs marke therewithall, that notwithſtanding his being accurſed before God, yet he ceaſed not to be Gods welbeloued ſonne, according to this ſaying vttered by the heauenly father himſelfe, This is my deerebeloued ſonne Matt.3.17. in whome I am wel pleaſed, and in whome I am pacified. And ſerued that but for one inſtant? Nay it was to continue for euer. How is it then that Ieſus Chriſt was accurſed, ſeeing that the father was pacified by him? And that hee was not only well liked himſelfe, but alſo the meane to reconcile the whole worlde. He is our peace and although through our corruption of nature GOD hate vs, yet are we beloued in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; and howe is it then poſſible that he ſhould be accurſed before God? They agree both very well. For (as I haue ſayde afore) Ieſus Chriſt hath borne our curſe, yea and he hath borne it in ſuch wiſe as GOD ceaſeth not to loue him ſtill for all that. And this curſe is ſo aboliſhed, that the reproch of his croſſe is turned into glorie and tryumph, becauſe it is vnpoſſible that the ſonne of GOD ſhould not continue euerlaſtingly the ſame that he was afore. True it is that he was ſomewhat abaced for a while; but yet it behooued him to be alſo crowned with honour and glorie, as it is Hebr.2.9. now come to paſſe. After this manet muſt we put this text in vre.

Nowe therefore, foraſmuch as wee perceiue that GOD hath ſet downe heere a Lawe for the ciuill gouernement of the Iewes: let vs aſſure ourſelues alſo, that hee knewe well in his owne euerlaſting counſell, what ſhould come to paſſe, namely that his ſonne ſhould be hanged on tree: for hee had ſo ordeined it. And why? To giue vs the ſurer grounde of our ſaluation. Act.2.23. & 4.28. For had not our Lord Ieſus Chriſt born our curſe after a viſible faſhion, wee might ſtill hang wauering and in doubt of it. And whereas it is ſayde, that we be reconciled vnto God by his death, and that he hath ſatisfied all our debtes, ſo as the deuill can not hencefoorth any more accuſe vs, but that wee haue our defence for him, that is to witte, that our ſinnes are wyped away: notwithſtanding the reporte of all this vnto vs, yet might we ſtill be in perplexitie, and ſtande ſcanning after this manner: Yea but howe bee wee ſure of that? Lette vs open our eyes and looke vppon the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, yea and let vs looke vpon it in ſuch wiſe, as wee may vnderſtande that euen from the beginning GOD ordeined the tree of the Croſſe to bee a recorde of curſing. Nowe then, whereas it is ſayde, Curſed ſhall he be which performeth not all the things that are contained in the Lawe: therewithall GOD ſendeth vs to his onely ſonne, and would haue vs to knowe that he was hanged on tree to yͤ intent to be accurſed. As how? Was he curſed in his owne perſon? No, but for our ſakes.

Yet notwithſtanding, we may nowe glorie, that the curſe of the Lawe hath no more power ouer vs, but that he hath diſcharged vs thereof. After this manner ought wee to put this text in vre.

Howebeit let vs marke by the way, that it is not by the vertue of the wood, that wee be ſo bleſſed before God by meane of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, as the papiſtes brutiſhly beare men in hand. For when they heare the croſſe ſpoken of, they be tyed to it with a deuiliſh ſuperſtition, yea and with ſo brutiſh a ſuperſtition as is pitie to ſee, that they ſhould leaue Ieſus Chriſt, and fall to worſhipping of a peece of wood. But when the ſcripture ſpeaketh of yͤ curſe which our Lord Ieſus bare in his body to ſet vs free withall: it ſetteth before vs two thinges. Firſt, that when we looke vpon the wood, wee ſhould take it as a token of the curſe, and thereat conceiue a terrour in ourſelues: for the thing of it ſelfe is horrible. Thus much concerning the wood. And therefore as for all the croſſes which the Papiſtes ſet vp, what betoken they elſe but that they bring Gods curſe continually vpon themſelues? It appeareth manifeſtly that they deſpiſe the ſacrifice which was offered once for all by the ſonne of God. Wee be reconciled to him for euer, and they come to bring vp yͤ curſe againe, as though they were deſirous to haue their ſinnes abide vpon their heades for euer, without any defacing or dooing of thẽ away by Gods mercy, through the power of the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore looke howe many croſſes there are in the Popedome, ſo many recordes are there that crye out for Gods vengeance againſt thoſe wretched vnbeleeuers, which content not themſelues with the amends that was made for them when our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt indured the curſe in himſelfe which was due vnto vs. But knowe we once this curſe? If we reſort to Ieſus Chriſt, there we finde that the ſame curſe is quite and cleane wiped out & done away. After what manner? By the wonderfull power of God, euen after the ſame faſhion that we knowe that God made light to ſpring out of darkeneſſe in the creation of the worlde: and is it poſſible that light ſhoulde come out of darkeneſſe? Surely this chaunge is not to be done by man, nay, mannes wit can not comprehende it. But God ment to ſhewe that the meanes which he hath to worke by, doe farre exceede all yͭ euer we can conceiue. And therefore let vs marke wel, that he which at the beginning of the world turned darkeneſſe into light, yea and made light to ſpring out of darkeneſſe: was alſo as able to turne curſednes into bleſſedneſſe, in the perſon of his onely ſonne. And that is the thing which I ment in ſaying afore, that foraſmuch as hee is life and the very fountaine of life, therefore he aboliſhed death, and not without cauſe. In deede Ieſus Chriſt yeelded himſelfe to death; but after what manner? Was it in ſuch ſorte that he ceaſed in the meane while to be the life of the worlde? Nay: euen therein did he ſhewe himſelfe moſt of all to be the life of the worlde. Verily he was at the creation: For he is the ſame liuing woorde whereby wee were created, and whereby all thinges are ſtill preſerued and maintained in their ſtate & being. But when our ſaluation was reſtored vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, then did he ſhewe that he had life in himſelfe, & that he is the welſpring frõ whence it behoueth vs to drawe it. Then like as hee loſt not his life when he ſubmitted himſelfe to death: ſo he ceaſed not to be bleſſed of God his father, when he ſubmitted himſelfe to the curſe.

Nowe, to knit vp the whole, it remaineth to be knowen after what manner our Lorde Ieſus became accurſed to ſette vs free from the curſe. The firſt is, that we ſhould no more be caſt off by God as we deſerue. For when as the ſcripture termeth vs accurſed, the meaning therof is that God vouchſafeth not to regarde vs. And of good right may he hate vs, becauſe there is no agreement betweene him who is the righteouſneſſe it ſelfe, and vs that haue all maner of wickedneſſe reigning in vs. Foraſmuch then as by nature we be enemies vnto God; by reaſon wherof he ſhaketh vs off, and vtterly diſclaymeth vs, ſo as we be not worthy to come neere his maieſty, and if we come, he muſt needes thunder againſt vs: therefore Ieſus Chriſt became accurſed euen by bearing Gods hatred as it were in our behalfe, to the intent that hencefoorth wee ſhould be beloued. Nowe I haue tolde you already, (and it behoueth vs to print it well in our mindes) that Ieſus Chriſt was neuer hated of God his father, for that were vnpoſſible. But he was faine to beare our curſe, becauſe he was our pledge, and wee could not be freed otherwiſe, than by the ſatisfaction of his death made once for all. And that is the very meane whereby we be come in fauour again & are beloued of God. Therefore if we will haue Gods fauour, and find him a father vnto vs, (for that is the title which we muſt vſe, if wee intende to pray to him with true truſt): we muſt euer reſort to the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. All our prayers (ſay I) muſt be offered vp by the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, or elſe they ſhall neuer come at God. The Papiſts take holy water and ſprinkle themſelues, when they go into the Church; but ſuch things are gewgawes and they haue borrowed them of the Iewes, not knowing whereunto thoſe figures ſerued. For they leaue the clenſing yͭ was made by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & ſtãd buzzing about ſuch dotages and ſuperſtitions. But as for vs let vs aſſure ourſelues, yͭ we muſt haue al our prayers beſprinkled with the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, or elſe they will be vncleane before God, & they can neuer be made clean but only by yͤ kind of clenſing. The way then for vs to proceede to the obteinment of Gods fauour, is to reſort to the ſacrifice which Ieſus Chriſt hath offered vnto him. Secondly we muſt vnderſtande yͭ God forgiueth vs all thinges of his owne freegoodneſſe. For why? The ſcripture giueth the name of curſings to all the puniſhmentes which God ſendeth vpon men by reaſon of their ſinnes. Therefore let vs marke, yͭ whereas God might iuſtly powre out his vengeance vpon vs, and yͭ we ſhould lye euerlaſtingly vnder the burden of his wrath: the chaſtiſement which his ſonne hath ſuffered, hath deliuered vs from it. As howe? Becauſe he receiueth vs into fauour, and is at one with vs, in not charging vs with the ſinnes that we haue cōmitted, but forgiueth vs them in the perſon of his ſonne. True it is that God will chaſtice vs for our faultes: howbeit, yͭ is not with rigorous puniſhment, as one that entred into accoūt with vs to be our Iudge: but to warne vs, and that the correctiōs which he ſēdeth vs may become as ſo many medicines to vs. But howſoeuer we fare, we alwaies obtaine free forgiuenes of our ſinnes becauſe Ieſus Chriſt hath borne our curſe vppon his croſſe.

Nowe let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them more and more, as we may bee ſory for them as becōmeth vs, euen with ſuch griefe, that we may bring vnto him the broken heart which is the acceptable ſacrifice vnto him. And to the intent we may be the more prouoked to miſlike our ſinnes and to abhorre them, it may pleaſe him to grant vs the grace to looke wel vpon this horrible vengeance of them which was executed in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, that thereby we may learne to miſlike ſo much of our vices and corruptions, that our whole ſeeking may bee dayly to cut off ſome thing, and to clenſe ourſelues better & better, vntill he haue ridde vs quite and cleane of all, and clothed vs againe with his owne righteouſneſſe. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almighty God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the ij. of Ianuarie, 1556.

The Cxxv. Sermon, which is the firſt vpon the two & twentith Chapter.

THou ſhalt not ſee thy brothers Oxe or his ſheepe goe aſtray, and withdrawe thy ſelfe from them: but thou ſhalt bring them home to thy brother.

2 And if thy brother be not neere thee, or that thou knowe him not, then ſhalt thou take them home to thine owne houſe, and they ſhalbe with thee till thy brother require them, and then ſhalt thou deliuer him them againe.

3 Likewiſe ſhalt thou doe to his Aſſe, and likewiſe to his rayment, and alſo to all other thinges which thy brother ſhall haue loſt and thou found: Thou ſhalt not hide it away from him.

4 Thou ſhalt not ſee thy brothers Aſſe or Oxe ſinke vnder their burthen in the way, and withdrawe thy ſelfe from them: but thou ſhalt helpe him vppe with them againe.

FOr aſmuch as wee reſtraine the commaundement of the law too much, wherby theft is forbidden; therefore yͤ warning yͭ is giuen vs heere is very needeful. It ſeemeth to vs that if we haue not taken away another mans goods or ſubſtance, we be cleere before God, & can not bee accuſed of theft: But God hath a further reſpect, to wit, that euery man ſhoulde worke his brothers welfare. For we be bound therto, & he that maketh none account therof is condemned as a theefe before God, though he can not be blamed before men. If I abſtaine (ſay I) from doing any man harme, and keepe my handes vndefiled from robberie, and extorſiō: yet am I not diſcharged for al this. For if I haue ſeene my brothers good periſhe, and ſuffered it to goe to deſtruction through my negligence: GOD condemneth mee for it.

Therfore let vs mark wel, yͭ yͤ law in forbidding theft hath alſo bound vs al to procure yͤ welfare & profit one of another. And in deede it is a rule to be obſerued of vs in all caſes, yͭ God in forbidding any euill, doth therewith command vs to do the good that is contrarie therto. Thou ſhall not ſteale, ſayth he. And why? For he that doeth his neighbour any hurt or harme, is abhominable before God. Then is it to be concluded, that as I would haue mine owne goods preſerued, ſo muſt I be charie of other mens alſo, & euery mā muſt do the like on his owne behalfe. And therof we haue an example heere: namely that if I ſee my neighbours Oxe or cowe or any other cattell of his ſtraying in the fieldes, I am bounde to driue them home to his houſe, and to ſay vnto him, I haue founde thine Oxe ſtraying, looke better to him. Yea and if I finde a beaſt which I knowe not and ſee it ſtraying abroade, I am bounde to keepe it till the owner thereof come, I muſt not hide it, to make mine owne gaine of it, but I muſt declare it abroade that I haue founde ſtray cattle, that the owner may come to require it, and I muſt bee readie to deliuer it him againe. And Moſes addeth that the like is to be done in all thinges that are loſt, whether it be rayment, money, or any other thing, that ye liſt. Then if I finde any loſt thing, I am bound to keepe it ſafe, and to reſtore it to the owner. And truely euen vprightneſſe doth ſufficiently leade vs thereunto: For if a man haue loſt either money or anie other thing, and can not finde it, hee will make mone for it, and that iuſtly. Nowe the more wee be inclyned to our owne profite, the more let vs looke to bee condemned, when any body hath ſuſteined loſſe by our ſpitefulneſſe or negligence. I my ſelfe will blame others if they reſtore me not mine owne when I haue loſt it. And why ſhoulde not I be condemned in the like caſe? And ſo we ſee now that it is not ynough for vs to knowe the tenne commaundementes which are conteined in the Lawe: vnleſſe wee haue the expoſition of them alſo, ſo as we knowe what God ment and intended by thē. For if I take this ſaying, Thou ſhalt not ſteale, and thinke it ynough for mee to haue abſteined frō taking away of other mens goods: it is an ouer ſlender expoſition. And if I flatter my ſelfe and boſt of my pureneſſe and innocencie, it ſhall nothing boote mee. For GOD ſheweth that he had yet a further meaning; namely ẏ euery man ſhould haue a care of his neighbor, that being knit and vnited together, we muſt labour to maintaine our neighbours right as wel as our owne, and be ſo faithfull one towardes another, and on both ſides be ſo vprightly minded, as we might ſay, as I would not ẏ an other man ſhould ſuffer my goods to periſh, but that he ſhould preſerue them for me: ſo muſt I do the like to al thoſe with whom I am conuerſant, that is to ſay all men, as ſhalbe declared more fully hereafter.

And if we be bound to ſende home our neighbours Oxe or Aſſe that is loſt, let vs ſee whether wee may take away an other mans goods by extortion & leaude dealing. For there are manie which think it no offence before God, to conuey to thēſelues by ſuttle meanes the thinges ẏ belong not to them. And wherefore is that? Bycauſe they ſhall not bee impleaded for it at the Lawe. Yea, but who is he that acquitteth them? Thinke they to dally ſo with God? But as I haue declared before, the Lawe ſayeth, not only that we muſt abſteine from all robbery, but alſo preſerue the goods of our neighbours. For if I lay waite to finger to my ſelfe and to inrich my ſelfe by impoueriſhing them that haue wherewith to ſerue my turne, ſeeking mine owne profit by my neighbours loſſe: I muſt not thinke ẏ God liketh of my ſuttle dealings, craftines, & ſhifting. When we haue waſhed our hands neuer ſo clean before men, what ſhal it boote vs, if the heauenly Iudge condemne vs? Thus yee ſee ẏ the way for vs to put this text in vre, is to conſider Gods intent in condemning theft in his Lawe: which is, ẏ he will haue vs to indeuour to benefite our neighbours to the vttermoſt of our power, ſo as euery man may peaceably inioy his owne, and ech of vs helpe other, eſchewing all hurt & hinderance of our neighbours, and doing to all men as we would be done vnto. That is the effect of the thing which we haue to beare in minde.

We ſee that euen in the beaſtlines of Popery, ſome tracke of his doctrine was reteined ſtill. True it is ẏ thoſe ſhauelinges being as gulfs, and ſpreading out their nets to drawe in the pray to thē from all ſides, willed folke to make offerings of the thinges ẏ they had found, bearing thē in hand ẏ if the owner were not found, thoſe things were excheated to God, meaning to their owne purſe. Yet notwithſtanding, this ſtoode euer as a rule, ẏ vnder peine of theeuery it was not lawfull to conceale any thing that was found, being knowen to be loſt, but that all meanes poſſible ſhould be wrought to finde out the owner. Now ſeeing the blind wretches which were ſo brutiſh knew this: what excuſe will there be for vs? Nay, we ſee what libertie many folke do take noweadayes: inſomuch that euen they which pretend to haue the Goſpel, do play the theeues for euery trifle, ſo as there is nothing but pilling & polling ẇ them. But in very deed the moſt nūber of thē neuer taſted what Gods truth is. But how ſo euer the caſe ſtāde, this ſaying of God ringeth ſhirle heere, & our eares are continually beaten with this leſſon, ẏ we ought to procure the welfare of other men. Yet notwithſtanding, let a man go into ẏ fields, & he ſhal finde nothing but robbing and filching. And what ſhall he finde in townes & cities? much worſe. A man ſhall ſee ſnatching and catching euery where, & al mens indeuour is to fleece one an other. Wo worth vs therefore if we bethinke vs not better of ẏ thing that is tolde vs heere, which is ẏ God commandeth vs to procure the welfare of other men, and to looke to the doing of it in ſuch ſort, as no man may be hindered by our default, and not only ẏ we be cleere from all euill dealing, but alſo from all negligence or ſlothfulneſſe. For God inioyneth vs, ẏ as we thinke vpon our owne profite, ſo we muſt not forget the weldoing of our neighbours. But as we would haue others to looke about for vs, when we had loſt any thing: ſo muſt we be likeminded towardes all ſuch as wee can ſuccour in their neede.

Now if it be ſayde that we muſt bring againe our neighbours Oxe or Aſſe: what is to be done to his owne proper perſon? Or to his children and houſhouldefolke? I ſee a houſholde out of order, and the maiſter thereof deceiued: If I warne him not thereof, I am to blame. So then we muſt proceede ſo farre by degrees, that if wee muſt haue a care of beaſtes, much more muſt wee haue it of humaine creatures. If I ought to bring home a mannes Oxe when I finde him ſtraying, for feare he ſhoulde bee loſt: what ought I to doe to his children that are readie to periſhe, and runne a ſtraye like brute beaſtes? Shal I not thinke vppon them to bring them into the right way? Againe in generall, if I ſee my neighbour goe to decay and deſtruction, I ought to reclaime him, accordingly as S. Iames warneth vs ſaying: If any of you bring backe his neighbour into the right way, when hee was gone aſtray: he hath wonne a ſoule to God. Now if our Lorde extend his loue euē vnto Iam.1.19.

Oxen and Aſſes; what ought we to do to thoſe whome he hath created after his owne image,& which are like our ſelues,& to whome we be linked by a kinde of brotherhood, not onely in reſpect of our bodies, but alſo in reſpect of our ſoules? Shall we ſee them run aſtray & go to deſtruction,& not reach them our hand nor do our indeuor to bring them backe againe to the way of ſaluation?Therefore when we ſee mens ſoules in daunger to bee loſt, let vs learne to reclaime them, & let vs apply our ſelues thereto aſmuch as we can poſſibly.For if we be ſlacke in that behalf,there needeth none other witnes againſt vs than ẏ bruit beaſts. For if we ſuffer their owners to loſe them,we ſhalbe condemned before God. So muſt our inditement be made and framed againſt vs by the brute beaſts, when we ſhal haue held ſkorne after that faſhion, to bring back the wretched creatures that are gone aſtray,to cauſe them to be reduced againe vnto God: For if we be bound to maintain mortal men in their right: I pray you,be we not double,yea a hundredfold more bound to do it vnto God?Behold,God telleth vs that we belong to him,& that we bee his heritage.Now,I ſee a poore man goe aſtray like a beaſt that is loſt,and ſhal I ſuffer God to be bereft of his right,or to haue his poſſeſſions diminiſhed?True it is,that we cannot inrich him:but yet doeth he ſhewe howe deerely he loueth vs, in ẏ he hath purchaſed vs with the bloud of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. I ſee Gods poſſeſſion go to hauocke, and make no account of it, and ſo is it loſt from him through my defaulte: and how ſhall I excuſe my ſelfe? Wherefore let vs marke well, that if wee ought to mayntaine the welfare of mortall men, becauſe God hath ordeyned that there ſhoulde be faithfulneſſe among vs one towardes another: wee ought much more to indeuour and procure that God may abide vnimpeached in his ſtate, and that thoſe which be of his houſe (that is to ſay of his Church) may not miſcarie, but that they may all be preſerued vnto him. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vpon this text.

Nowe Moſes addeth,that men muſt doe it, though it be the more to their owne paine. For although I be vnknowen to the partie that hath a beaſt ſo ſtrayed, and he be not my neighbour: yet muſt not his beaſt be loſt by my negligence, but I muſt bring it backe leaſt it fall into euill handes: and my ſo doing muſt bee of purpoſe to reſtore it to the owner. Here wee ſee (as I haue ſaide afore) that it is not enough for vs to abſteyne from all miſdealing, but wee muſt alſo doe our neighbours ſeruice, as wee woulde they ſhoulde doe for vs. The taking of payne or care for an other mans benefite, muſt not make vs ſhrinke from the doing of our duetie. If wee alleadge, What am I bound to him? What hath he doone for me? It is not for vs to regard the doinges of men,whether they haue done vs any pleaſure or no,and there after to requite them, as who would ſay,I ſhould ſhew a man no friendſhip,vnleſſe he had firſt befriended mee before. No,It muſt ſuffice mee,that God wil be acknowledged in all thoſe things. And therfore we muſt not haue an eye to mens perſons to ſay we know them not: but it muſt ſuffice vs that God ſaith vnto vs, Although the parties bee vnknowen vnto you, yet muſt you doe your indeuour to ſaue their goods and ſubſtance: for it is my will that there ſhoulde be that bonde among men, and that by meane thereof they ſhoulde bee knit together, and euery man willingly become detter to other. Although men can not bring ye before earthly Iudges to compell you thereto, yet ought euerie man of himſelfe to yeelde vnto it and to beare in minde that I will haue you to exerciſe ſuch charitablenes amōg your ſelues. Thus much concerning that point where it is ſaid,that although the partie bee not our neighbour,no nor knowen vnto vs: yet wee muſt not forebeare to keepe his beaſt for him, or any other thing that he hath loſt.

There is alſo an other point, namely ẏ if we light vpon our Neighbors Oxe or his Aſſe falne downe by the way by reaſon of ſome diſeaſe or tyring vnder his burthen: wee muſt helpe to get him vp. And this ſheweth vs yet better, that all they which procure not the benefit of other mē, are eſteemed as theeues.For we commit not any offence,but the ſame is a breaking of the Law of God.It behoueth vs to marke that. Now what is ſaid in Gods law?Thou ſhalt not ſteale. It is but one word.But we muſt haue an eye to the lawemakers meaning.And ſo we muſt conclude,that if we ſee our neighbor ſtand in neede of our ſuccour before our eyes, and faile him: if wee perceiue he is like to ſuſtein loſſe,& we remedy not the matter,hauing the meane to do it we be cōdemned of felonie before God. It is a hard caſe, men may well diſpute of it,yea & imagine ẏ they ſhal get ẏ vpper hand:but al replying muſt be laid downe:for aſmuch as God hath ſpoken it,his ſaying is an vnreuocable ſentence. Therefore let it content vs ẏ the law telleth vs that if we ſaue not our neighbors goods to ẏ vttermoſt of our power God condemneth vs and taketh vs for theeues. Indeed if wee were to bee called before worldlie Iudges,we might alledge,he neuer bound me to do ſo much for him,I am not beholdē vnto him, I haue not promiſed him any thing, what couenant is there betwixt vs?& ſuch other like things But whē we come before God,we muſt ſhut our mouthes,& acknowledge ẏ if we haue bin negligent when we haue ſeene the loſſe or hinderāce of any mans goods,ſo as wee haue not helped to ſaue them,but haue ſhut our eyes at it, and not vouchſafed to put forth our finger to ẏ ſuccouring of them:it is all one with theft or robberie, before God.

And herewithall let vs marke wel, ẏ ſeeing it is ſaid here ẏ we ought to ſuccor the beaſts whē they be falne downe vnder their burthen:howe much more ought we to do ẏ like to men?When an aſſe is falne down,what is ẏ to vs?And yet for the loue of my neighbor, I am bound to lift him vp againe if I can.A poore man ẏ hath toild himſelfe to ẏ vttermoſt,ſtandeth in need of my help, and I forſake him: is this cruelty excuſable before God?Behold,I am condemned for not doing my dutie towards a brute beaſt:& what ſhal then become of me if I forſake mine owne image & the image of God, ſo as a poore man is borne downe & I ſuccor him not, but wring my mouth at it as if I had done no fault at all? So then let vs marke, yͤ in ſpeaking of the brute beaſtes, God ment to induce vs yͤ rather to the diſcharging of our owne dueties one towardes another: Like as 1.Cor.9.10. when S. Paul alledgeth this text, Thou ſhalt not muſle the mouth of the oxe yͤ laboreth for thee, thinke we (ſaith hee) yͤ God hath no further reſpect than of the beaſts? Nay verily, his ſpeaking of it is for the loue of men. As who ſhould ſay, If we ought not to withdraw foode from the beaſt that laboreth vnder our hand & for our profite: ought wee not to giue ſuſtenance to the handicrafts man, or to any other perſon when he doth vs ſeruice? Indeede S. Paul ſpeakes there of the miniſters of Gods worde; but yet generally wee be led to this vprightnes of maintaining ſuch as take paines for vs, according to reaſon. For why? God hath ſpoken ſo of Oxen: And he hath ſpoken it to doe vs the more ſhame, as if he ſhoulde ſay, The Oxe ſhall haue iuſt matter to condemn you. Indeed yͤ Oxe hath not ſpeech as we haue: but yet wee cannot ſo ſcape but yͤ God will condemne vs for cruell and vnkinde foolke, if we pitie not the brute beaſtes. It is ſaide in Salomons Prou.12.10. Prouerbs, yͤ the righteous man hath in regarde, the bloud of his horſes & of his beaſtes yͤ labour for him. Sith it is ſo, then if the poore ſoules that haue beſtowed their labor & trauel, & ſpent their ſweat & bloud for you, be not paid their wages as they ought to be, nor ſuccored and ſuſteyned by you as they ſhould be: if they aske vengeance againſt you at Gods hand, who ſhalbe your ſpokeſman or aduocate to rid you out of his handes? Now then, whereas here is mention made of the releeuing of Oxen & Aſſes when they bee falne downe vnder their burthens: let vs learne thereby, that it is much more reaſon we ſhould releeue our neighbors, when we ſee them vexed and ouermatched. Verily a beaſt cannot ſpeake to moue vs to pitie and compaſſion: and therefore we muſt go to him of our owne good wil, though we be not moued nor requeſted therunto. Hereby we be warned, that although a man crie not out at a murder, ne make any great bewailing: Yet his verie neceſſitie ought to ſuffice to make vs to ſtep to him aforehande, & not to ſuffer him to lie languiſhing to the laſt inſtant, that he bee conſtreined to ſay, Alas helpe me. We muſt not be ſo ſlow. For why? Although a beaſt cannot ſpeake a word, yet doth God commaunde vs to ſuccour it. And therefore much more do we owe like duetie towards our neighbors.

Furthermore, if a man demaunde what thoſe burthens are: S. Paul ſheweth vs them ſaying, Beare yee one an others burthens: as if hee had ſaid, yͤ our infirmities are burthens, & wee haue need to be eaſed of them. Therfore we muſt exerciſe our charitie after that maner. I ſee a neighbor of mine that is weake, I meane this of al mē. For how perfect ſo euer men be, they haue euer ſome faultes in them, and they haue need to be borne with. And I for my part cannot away with it, vnles men haue pitie vpon me: I haue my burthens as well as all other men. In reſpect hereof God ſaith vnto vs, Beare ye one an others bur- Gal.6.2. thens: for this is Chriſts lawe, ſaith S. Paul. And yet hath this law beene for euer. For if the brute beaſts were to be releeued by the law of Moſes: likewiſe were men to be releeued, as I ſaid afore. But S. Paul telleth vs that we haue more neede to doe it nowadayes than euer: For our Lord Ieſus Chriſt telleth vs that yͤ cheefe ſacrifice which he requireth of vs euen for God his father, is to haue a regarde wherein euery of vs may helpe his neighbors, & to indeuour to remedie infirmities where he ſees thē to be. Indeed we ought not to foſter vices. Neither is that S. Pauls meaning when hee exhorteth vs to beare one anothers burthens. His intent is not that we ſhoulde diſſemble, or that we ſhould ſoade men in their naughtines by playing the blinkards when folke haue done amiſſe. For yͭ were rather a leauing of the wretched ſoules ſtill in their ſtraying, vntill they were tumbled downe into the pit of deſtruction. Then is not yͭ S. Paules meaning in commanding vs to beare one an others burthēs: but rather, yͭ when we ſee an other man in ſorrowe, we ſhould comfort him: when we ſee him weakeminded, we ſhould harten him; when we ſee him too much intangled in the cares of this worlde, we ſhould labour to pul him backe, perſwading him, to put his truſt better in God, & not to bee ſo wedded to worldly thinges. When we labour after this faſhion to remedy al vices: then do wee beare one anothers burthens. And to induce vs thereunto, we muſt vnderſtande yͭ there is none of vs all, but hee hath neede to bee borne with. That is the thing which we haue to gather vpon this place, where it is ſaide that we be bounde to helpe vp an Oxe or an Aſſe or any other beaſt yͭ is falne downe abrode, and that we ought to releeue it as much as may be.

But here is no mentiō made of any other thā a brother. It is ſaid, yͭ if thy brothers aſſe or anie other thing of his be loſt: or if yͤ Oxe or horſe of thy brother be falne down by yͤ way, thou muſt help him vp againe. Who be the brothers of whō God ſpeaketh here? The word Brother is to be extended further than a number do extend it, who alwaies excuſing thēſelues, do pluck their heads out of yͤ coller as eaſily as they can, whē they ſee Gods cōmandements to be too hard & difficult yea & vtterly vnpoſſible for them to do; they ſlip yͤ coller by ſuch fond ſhifts as this: I am bounde (ſay they) to do this for my brother, yͭ is to ſay, for ſuch a one as I am acquainted with, or to whō I am linked by any familiaritie, neighborhoode, or friendſhip: thoſe indeed are our brothers. Yea. But what if we haue to do with the furtheſt ſtrāgers in yͤ world? ſhould we account them for our brothers? To what purpoſe were yͭ? Lo how yͤ hypocrites would dally with God, & breake yͤ bond which he hath made betwixt vs, vnder pretence of this word Brother. But the expoſition therof is giuen vs in yͤ three & twentith of Exodus, where it is ſaide, If the Oxe or the Aſſe of thine enemie be falne downe, thou ſhalt helpe him vp agayne: thou ſhalt do good to him yͭ hateth thee, and to him that ſeeketh to hurt or hinder thee.

Yee

Ye ſee then who are our brethren, namely euen our very enemies, ſuch as perſecute vs, & ſuch as could find in their hearts to eat vs vp. And yet for all that, euen with them muſt we maintaine brotherhood. As how? Verily it ſeemeth a right hard caſe at the firſt ſight: for haue not they alreadie broken the bond of brotherhood? What though there were an vnion among al mankind? Yet as touching thoſe which are ſo malicious & froward, and deſpiſe God by doing leawdly, are not they worthy to be ſhaken off, & to be barred from the companie of other men, ſeeing they haue ſundred themſelues from them? Truth it is that if we ſhoulde haue reſpect to their perſons, we might wel ſay, ſhal ſuch a one be my brother, hauing ſet himſelf after that faſhion againſt me? Were he a member of my bodie, would he haue cut off himſelfe from me? Seeing then that hee hath forſaken me, I will haue no acquaintaunce ŵ him in any maner of wiſe. The alliance which I had with him was of god, God made it betwixt vs: but he hath vtterly withdrawen himſelf from it, & therfore may I likewiſe forſake him. So long as we plead againſt the perſon, ſuch excuſes may well take place: but as for before God, they wil not go for paymēt. For his planting of neighborhood among vs was with condition, that although a man make himſelfe vnworthie thereof yet we muſt not faile to do him all the good we can. And ſo the bond of kinred ordeined by god, cannot in any wiſe be defeated. Were a man become the verieſt naughtipacke that could be, yet ought we to intreat him as our neighbour.

Truth it is that there are caſes wherefore we ought to forſake men, & to giue them vtterly ouer. But yet for all that, we muſt not ceaſe in the meane while to procure their worldly welfare, and much more the health of their ſoules, yea 1.Cor.5.11. euen of ſuch as are excommunicated & caſt out of the Church, as ſaith S. Paul. We muſt not ſeek them, for that were ẏ way to infect vs with their defilements, & to make vs their partakers. Nay, we muſt rather miſlike them & abhorre them, as it is expreſly cōmaunded vs. But yet in ẏ meane ſeaſon, we be bound alwaies to ſuccour them in their need, & to forbeare to hurt or hinder thē. That is the thing which our Lorde compelleth vs vnto. And therefore let vs marke well that it was neuer lawfull vnder the law to beare enmity againſt any man: yea & although a man had enimies: yet was it not lawfull for him to ſeeke reuēge. And if I be bound to ſuccor mine enemies Aſſe or horſe: what ought I to do to his own perſon? Shall I be exempted from himſelfe, when I am bound vnto his cattell? It is well knowen no. And herein we ſee the beaſtlines that hath been & yet ſtill is in the Popedome. For the ſuttle doctors ſay, that to do good to ones enemie is not a commaundement of God, but a counſell giuen by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And marke I pray you wherupon they groūd thēſelues. What ſay they? It is too hard a thing for vs to haue ẏ heart to do good to ſuch as hate vs & perſecute vs. And therfore it is to be concluded, ẏ God hath not commanded vs to do it: for that were too great rigor. If Ieſus Chriſt counſel vs, verily then is it a point of perfectiō: but yet are we not bound to it. And thereupon they hold opinion ẏ none are bound to it but only ẏ Monks, whoſe ſtate is angelical, & yet notwithſtanding, of al mē in ẏ world they be fulleſt of reuenge. Neuertheles, it is for none but Monkes to haue ſuch perfection; & as for vs that are lay people, they ſay that for vs to become Chriſtians it is enough to take it as a coūſell, and to tend ẏ way, howbeit without thinking our ſelues guiltie of deadly ſinne, though we doe it not. True it is that they can find in their harts to ſay, that we ought not to hate anie body; but to ſay that we be bound to loue our enemies, and to do good to ſuch as ſeeke to hurt or hinder vs; no no, they cannot digeſt that worde. And why? For they be forepoſſeſſed with this diueliſh opinion, that God cōmandeth not any thing which is not poſſible for men to doe. And thereupon they make as it were a counterpeiſe or euen balance, of freewill & of all Gods cōmandements: inſomuch that they ſtand ſcanning thus: Cannot we doe this or that? God then hath not commāded it, neither ought it to be done: & if a man did it, it were more than needed. As who ſhould ſay that God had forgone his right, becauſe we bee ſo corrupted and vntowarde as not to be able to performe ẏ which he hath ordeyned. And what a dealing were that? If a man owe me monie, & haue waſted all away by his leawd behauiour, is hee therefore cleerely quit and diſcharged, becauſe he hath ſo miſpent both his owne & mine? No ſurelie. Whence commeth it then that wee cannot loue our enemies, and that wee be ſo reuendgefull: but of our owne corruption & of the ſinfulneſſe of our nature? Yet notwithſtanding, we ceaſe not therefore to owe ſtill vnto God the things ẏ he hath inioyned vs. And therefore wee conclude that our Lord hath bewrayed ẏ blindneſſe of the Papiſtes, in making them to ſpewe out ſuch blaſphemies as theſe, namely, ẏ to doe good to our enemies is not a commandement of the law, but a counſell of our Lord Ieſus: For we ſee what was inioined by the law of Moſes. And again on the otherſide, a man may wel ſay there is great oddes betweene the perfection of Chriſtians, and the conuerſation of the fathers: yea verily, & the hardeſt part of all our life, is to loue our enemies & to doe good to ſuch as perſecute vs. But the fathers that liued vnder the law were bound to that as well as we. And therefore wee muſt not imagine that our Lord Ieſus brought any new rule as the Papiſts auouch blaſphemouſly againſt Gods lawe, ſaying that it was but an Apſie & an entrance: and that there is nowe a true holines and perfection, in the things which the Goſpell ſheweth vs. But we ſee ẏ cleane cōtrary, namely ẏ euen vnder the law God did expreſly forbid men to auenge themſelues: & againe on the otherſide cōmanded them to doe good to their enemies, & to indeuor to ouercom euill by doing good, which is the perfection of ẏ goſpel as S. Paul ſheweth in ẏ twelfth to the Romanes. And it is the verie ſame thing that is cōteined in the Sermon which our lord Ieſus made frō the fifth chapter of S. Matthew to ẏ ſeuenth. Alſo ẏ ſame thing is brought to our remēbrance by the thinges which Ieſus Chriſt ſaith, in the ſimilitude of the man that was wounded in his way by theeues, as he went from Iericho to Ieruſalem. There he taunteth the Iewes, who came of the linage of Abraham, and ceaſed not to vaunt themſelues of that holy pedigree. And yet he ſaith to them, I cãnot tel what kinred or brotherhoode there is among you. For if a man bee falne behinde hande. and haue neede of helpe, I ſee not that ye ſuccour him: ye acknowledge none other brotherhoode than that which is of the fleſhe. And if yee ſee any gaine to be had by allying your ſelues with any man: he ſhalbe your brother and your great couſen. But if yee ſee no profite to bee had by him, farewell he, he is no more your kinſeman. Hereby hee inferreth a ſimilitude, how a Prieſt looking vpon a poore mã that was wounded and ſore hurt, and in daunger of death; paſſed by him and tooke no heede of him: and likewiſe a Leuite, and alſo a common Iew. Then came a Samaritane, (yͤ Samaritanes were hatefull to the Iewes, as they who indeede had nothing but apes toyes and meere ſuperſtition in their Church) & yet our Lord ſaith there that the Samaritane had pitie vpon yͤ Iew which was ſo ſore wounded, and ſuccored him. Was not this man the Iewes neighbor? Ye cannot denie but that he was ſo. Hereupõ Ieſus Chriſt concludeth, that when the law ſpeaketh of neighbors, it meaneth not thoſe which are allied vnto vs, or which are of our owne bloud and kinred: neither meaneth it thoſe neighbors onely with whome we be conuerſant and familiar: but generally all men, yea euen the furtheſt ſtrangers vnto vs. Although we may ſay yͤ ſuch a one belonges not to vs, yet are we his neighbors as in reſpect of god. For our Lord could wel haue vſed another word: But hee intended of ſet purpoſe to touch vs to yͤ quick in ſaying, Looke how many men are in the world, ſo many neighbors haue we. And wheras in this text yͤ word is a Brother, indeed it had reſpect to the linage of Abraham. But nowadaies wee 1.Tim.2.4. haue all one father, who is called vpon in al languages and in all countries. He hath not choſen the race of any one man, nor ſhut vp his ſeruice within any one certaine countrie. For the parti- Eph.2.16. tion wal is broken downe, ſo as there is not now any difference of Iew and Gentile, accordingly as is told vs that we bee all one body in our lord Ieſus Chriſt, and yͤ ſeeing God is proclaimed by the Goſpell to be our Sauiour & father, we muſt maintaine a brotherhood among vs. And as touching the word Neighbour, the law hath vſed it of purpoſe to ſhew mẽ yͤ they may well ſhrink away one frõ another, but yet they be all of one knowẽ kinde, according to this ſaying of the Prophet E- Eſa.58.7. ſay, Thou ſhalt not deſpiſe thine owne fleſh. If I can ſay, This man is of a far countrie, there was neuer any acquaintãce betwixt vs, one of vs can not ſpeake a word yͤ the other can vnderſtande: what is all this to the purpoſe? Let me looke vpon him & beholde him throughly, & I ſhal find the ſame nature in him that is in my ſelfe: I ſhall ſee that God hath made him ſo like me, as if we were but one fleſhe. And all mankind is of ſuch ſhape and faſhion, that wee haue good cauſe to loue one another, and to know yͤ we ought to be all one. Although there bee ſome difference as touching this preſent life: yet ought we to conſider that we ſpring al out of one roote, & therefore that we ſhould tend all to one end, euen vnto God who is the father of vs all. And therefore it is not without cauſe that in ſteede of ſaying, thou ſhalt doe ſo to al men, our Lorde ſaith, thou ſhalt do ſo to thy neighbors. And albeit we fall to diſputing of the matter, and would ſlippe our heades out of the coler, ſeeking to ſhift off yͤ matter by alledging that we bee ſtraungers one to an other: yet can we not bring to paſſe that all men ſhould not be our neighbors, becauſe we are al of one ſelfe ſame nature, wherby God hath knit vs & linked vs all together. The thing then which we haue to mark in this part of the texte vpon yͤ word Brother, is yͤ whereas God ſpeaketh after that maner to the Iewes, becauſe hee had adopted the linage of Abraham: it ſheweth vs nowadaies that we muſt al be as brothers, foraſmuch as our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath proclaimed peace through the whole worlde, and God is at one agayne with all nations & all men. Seeing it is ſo, it behoueth vs to maintaine the brotherhood which was procured by Chriſts bloudſhed, & whereunto God calleth vs. And although many ſpiteful perſõs go about to violate it by their vnkindnes in ſhrinking away from the Church, and become our enemies, by giuing vs occaſion to do them harme: yet notwithſtanding let vs ſtriue againſt their naughtines, & labour to procure the ſaluation of their ſoules, and yͤ welfare of their bodies ſo far as we can. And whẽ we ſee yͤ we on our ſide are weak, & cãnot frame our affections to yͤ obeying of God ſo wel as were to be wiſhed: let vs pray our good God to ſtrẽgthen vs by his holy ſpirit, yͤ we may outſtand all aſſaults yͤ are put vnto vs, ſo as we may haue yͤ vpper hand of them, when hee hath once rid vs of our fleſh.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſins, praying him to make vs ſo to feele thẽ more & more, as yͤ being caſt downe in our ſelues, wee may be lifted vp again by his hand, & yͤ being ſo lifted vp & vpheld by him, we may follow his example towards our neighbors, indeuoring to cõtinue in good peace & concord, & bearing with yͤ weaklings, ſo as we may al with one cõmon cõſent keep our way vnto him, & attaine thither by his grace. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, &c.

On Fryday the iij. of Ianuarie. 1556.

The Cxxvj. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the two and twentith Chapter.

5 A woman ſhal not weare the apparel of a man: neither ſhal a man put on the garments of a woman. For whoſoeuer doth ſo, is an abhomination to the Lord thy God.

6 When thou goeſt abroad and findeſt a birds neſt in a tree or on the grounde, and young birdes or egges therein, & the dam ſitting vpon her young or vpon the egges: thou ſhalt not take the dam with her young birdes:

7 But thou ſhalt let the dam goe, & take the young ones to thy ſelfe, that it may goe well with thee, and that thou maiſt prolong thy dayes.

8 When thou buildeſt thee a newe houſe, thou ſhalt make a battlement about the roofe of it, that thou bring not bloud vpon thy houſe by the falling of ſome man downe from it.

THe firſt law which I haue rehearſed here, ſheweth yͭ in all our behauiour, we muſt haue a care to be honeſt, & eſchue al looſenes. Truely it ſhould ſeeme to be no matter of great importance for a man to be apparelled after one faſhiõ or other: but yet for all that, God wil haue things done in order. For if men go diſguiſed, & weare ſuch apparell as ſerueth not for neceſſitie but for follie: that is not conuenient. If women bee diſſolute, what a thing is that? They forget their nature: for women ought to bee modeſt. If there bee no ſhame, but that they will needes be out of order: it is a very beaſtlines. That is the effect of Gods intent in ſaying that men ought not to put on womens apparell, nor women ought not to bee cloathed in mens apparell: For it is good reaſon that there ſhould be a difference betweene men and women. And although there were no lawe written, doeth not euen nature teach it vs? And when S. Paul telleth vs that women muſt come to the Church with their heades couered & not with their haire about their eares: hee ſheweth the ſame thing. 1.Cor.11,5. What ſaith he? haue we need to ſpeake to you of ſuch things? For if a womã were polled, durſt ſhe ſhew her head abroade? A man may well be bold to ſhew his head bare, though he be polled: and ſhall a woman do ſo too? That were a ſhame, euerie bodie would mocke at her, and ſhe ſhoulde be faine to hide her heade. Now ſith ye know this without any ſcripture or worde written: doe ye not ſee howe God hath ſowen as it were a ſeede of modeſtie in you, to the intent that euerie man ſhoulde haue a regarde to that which is comelie for him? So then, let vs mark yͭ here God intended to ſhew vs that euery bodies attyring of themſelues ought to be ſuch, as there may be a difference betweene men and women. And truly we ſee what daungers doe inſue when folke go ſo diſguiſed: many inconueniences doe accompanie them, & God is offended with thẽ. Therefore the ſetting downe of this lawe is not without cauſe. For they that loue to go ſo diſguiſed, do deſpiſe God: as for example, in theſe maſkings & mummings, when men put themſelues into womens apparel, and women put thẽſelues into mẽs as ye know: what comes of it? Although no euil enſued thereof, yet the verie thing it ſelf diſpleſeth god. We heare what is ſaid of it in this place. Whoſoeuer doth it, is an abhominatiõ. Ought not this ſaying to make the haire of our heades ſtand vp, rather than wee would prouoke Gods wrath vpon vs wilfully? But beſides this, we are ſure yͭ the ſuffring hereof is the opening of a gap to all whoredome. At a word, ſuch diſguiſings are but inticements of baudry, as experience prooueth. Therfore let vs not think, that it was more than needed, for God to appoint men a ſeuerall kind of apparelling by themſelues, and the women another kinde of attiring by themſelues agreeable to their ſeuerall ſexes. Whereupon wee haue to remember, that God liketh well, yͭ there ſhould be an honeſtie euen in our apparel. Truely (as I haue ſaid afore) yͭ is not the cheefe point: For if a man ſhould ſet yͤ perfection of our life in this thing: it were al one as if he ſhould ſet the cart before the horſe: but yet is it not to bee omitted. For euen the Heathen themſelues haue ſhewed vs our leſſon, telling vs that if there bee no regard of honeſtie, men do bewray yͭ the reſt of their vertues are not counted for vertues any more. For if they obſerue not ſome order, diſcretion and modeſtie in their behauiours & maner of dealings, they may ſeeme to bee degenerated into brute beaſtes. Then is it as a witnes that we walke as before God, when we regarde a kind of honeſtie in our apparell. Truely men may ſoone ouerſhoot themſelues. Although they attire not themſelues like women, yet if they vſe any gaudiſhnes, and make themſelues to bee as gaſingſtocks: ſuch ſuperfluitie diſpleaſeth God already in another reſpect. Likewiſe though women attyre not themſelues in the raiment of men: Yet if they be too gallant & braue, and couet to haue too great a ſhow, they faile not to offende God, euen in another reſpect, as I ſaid afore. Yet notwithſtanding, we muſt firſt of all ſee that men be ſo apparelled as they become not womanlike, as we ſee diuerſe times yͭ they attire thẽſelues like brides. In ſo doing they ſeeme to be ſorie yͭ God made them not women, & to bee deſirous to renounce their owne ſexe. And that is a ſhamefull thing. Againe, when women go apparelled like men of war, (as there be ſome which had leuer to beare a hackebutte on their ſhoulder than a diſtaffe in their hand:) it is againſt kinde, and we ought to abhorre it. Although wee were not ſpoken to, ne had any law or ordinance of God yet do we euen of ourſelues perceiue it to be ſtrange and whoſoeuer hath any ſparke of pureneſſe in him, wil iudge ſo. Ye ſee thẽ yͤ firſt of al the faſhiõ which men do vſe in apparelling thẽſelues, muſt ſhew yͭ God hath created them to be as men: and that the women alſo muſt obſerue the modeſtie that is agreeable to their ſexe. Thus much concerning the firſt point.

And as touching the ſecond, let vs marke alſo generally, that in our apparelling of our ſelues God wil haue vs to reſpect vſe & honeſty. Thoſe are the two things which we ought to ſet ſtore by. The firſt is vſe. And my meaning by vſe, is ẏ men ſhould be contented with ſuch apparell as will defend them from cold and heate. And by honeſtie I meane that they ſhold not be clad & attired after a diſguiſed faſhion, as though they went to play an enterlude, or were deſirous to make folke to gaſe at them for the ſtrangenes of their apparell, that it might be ſaid, who is this? O, it is ſuch a one. Now then, if wee obſerue the vſe, that is to ſay, if we hold it enough to bee clothed onely: and therwithall do keepe ſuch meaſure as we breake not common order: it is a rule that God alloweth. Alſo whẽ women be not too curious in attyring themſelues, nor deſirous to drawe all mens eyes vnto them to behold them in their decking: that is the honeſt kinde of behauiour, which God commendeth vnto vs. 1.Tim.2.9. And in the ſame reſpect doeth S. Paul ſay that womẽ ought to haue a holy honeſtie, or a comelie holines. In ſpeaking of the attire and apparell of the faithfull women, he vſeth a worde which importeth that they muſt not onely bee honeſt, but alſo therewithal haue a certaine mark of holineſſe, that men may know them to haue profited in Gods word. And ſoothly if we conſidered wel what was the firſt cauſe of apparel, we would not be ſo greatly giuen to ſuperfluous brauerie as we be. For as oft as we put on either ſhirte or Cote, we be put in mind that our Lord commãdeth vs to hide our ſelues, becauſe his image is disfigured in vs: and our clothing of ourſelues ought to make vs thinke vpon the ſinne of our father Adam. For by reaſon of ſin, we become ſubiect both to heat & cold. And againe, God telleth vs that it is a ſigne of our ſhame. For nakedneſſe of it ſelfe is not vnhoneſt, were it not ẏ Gods image is diſfigured in vs by our corruption. Had we this regard with vs, ſurely we would be warer to keepe order and meaſure in our apparel, than we be. Howſoeuer the worlde go, let vs learne ẏ God wil haue vs not only to be pure and cleane from all lecherie, but alſo to preuent all inconueniences. As for example, when he ſaith, Thou ſhalt not commit aduoutrie: that commaundement hath an eye to this preſent text. I haue tolde you alreadie, that all the lawes which are writtẽ here, cõcerne mãners, & are rules of good lyfe, & are to bee referred to the ten commandements: For God hath not added anie thing to thoſe tenne ſentences. Therefore whereas in this text it is ſaid ẏ the man ſhall not weare the apparell of the woman; doeth God ſet downe an eleuenth commaundement? Did God bethinke himſelfe better afterwarde, and adde ſomewhat elſe to that which we had heard of him heretofore? No, it is but onely an expoſition of this ſaying of his, Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie. As how? For in forbidding aduoutrie, God not onely forbiddeth ẏ act it ſelfe, which were puniſhable & worthie of reproch euen before men: but alſo hee forbiddeth in effect al vnchaſt behauiour, ſo as none may appeare, neither in apparell nor in any part of our conuerſation. We muſt keep ſuch a meaſure, as our apparell tend not to vnchaſtitie, leaſt we runne into ſuch looſeneſſe, as we be blamed for ſeeking to make a hotchpotch, & to haue had no regarde of bringing all thinges to confuſiõ by ſuch diſorderly dealing. Which miſcheefe to eſchew, both men and women muſt haue a care to follow euerie of them their owne vocation. If we bee not of that minde, although we commit not any adultry in act, yet are we atteinted already before God, with ſome vice that tendeth towards adultry. Wherefore let vs learn that by this ſentence where our Lord ſaith that men and women ought to differ one from another in the faſhion of their apparell, he meant to expound and confirm this former ſaying of his, Thou ſhalt not commit Aduoutry. Were this as wel borne away as it ought to be, we ſhould haue better rule amõg vs than we haue: & there would be no ſuch impediments in the redreſſing the abuſe of apparell. The coſtlineſſe thereof would ſoone be corrected in ſome countries. And why? For yͤ ſhall ſee nothing now but imbroderie, & ſuch ouerſumptuous things, that by al likelihood men are wilfully bent to ouercharge themſelues with the deckings of women, but theſe thinges would be prouided for. And in the meane while men looke not to other vices which are as much or more to be condemned. For there is neuer any ho, when folke beginne once to ſeeke newe faſhions to diſguiſe themſelues This ſeemeth to be nothing: but as it commeth from an euill roote, ſo tendeth it alſo to an euill ende. For it is certaine that if it were not for ambition and pride, theſe thinges ſhoulde not bee ſeene ſo common as they be. Inſomuch that there are a great ſort, that can finde in their heartes to indure hunger and thirſt and a number of other incommodities in their bodies, onely to beſtowe their monie vppon thinges that canne ſerue them to none other ende than pompe and vanitie. And why doe they ſo? O, they loue wel gay apparell: they haue a delight to bee tooted at and gaſed at a great way off. And wee ſee it more nowadayes than euer it was ſeene. This fond curioſitie hath reigned in al ages among ẏ Frenchmen, and they cannot be reclaymed frõ it as yet at this day, but they deſpiſe God & nature more than euer they did. But we heare what God ſaith by his Prophet Sophonie, Soph.1.8. where hee threateneth ſuch folke as ſeeke newfangled and ſtraunge attires, coueting alwayes new ſhift. No doubt but he condemneth this pompouſnes and the perſons thẽſelues which ſeeke eueriday new faſhions, that they may be gaſed at afar off, and be the more eſtemed, and ẏ men may ſay of thẽ; Such a one hath inuẽted a new faſhiõ: ſuch a one is ſkilfull in finding out new attires. Surely ſuch folke are wel worthie to be condemned to be tailours. Theſe great lords & braue lads which wil needs weare tablets at their necks, ẏ is to ſay ſũptuous Iewels for folke to gaſe at a great way off ought of reaſõ to be al made taylors, ſeeing they haue ſo great pleaſure in finding out ſo diuerſe ſortes of apparell to diſguiſe themſelues with.

And by the way let vs marke, that in ſaying ſo our Lord ſheweth vs that we muſt come backe to the ſaid vſe and honeſtie, and to the rule which he hath giuen vs: and if wee keepe that; let vs aſſure our ſelues that it ſhall bee an acceptable ſeruice to him. Contrariwiſe, if we be led with a fooliſh and inordinate luſt, to chaunge euery minute of an houre and to diſguiſe our ſelues: it is a thing that diſpleaſeth God, though it importe none euill at all. And moreouer, we ſee how it proceedeth of fond vaineglory: and when men are ſo giuen to vanitie, ſurely they deſpiſe their owne Soules and neuer care for them. Alſo they bee infected with ouerweening, ſo as they will needes be commended. Nowe when men deale after that faſhion, can it be ſayd that there is no euill in it? No: for whereto doe all theſe diſguiſinges and ſuperfluities tend, but to all maner of corruption, and whoredome, and ſuch other like things, beſides ſuperfluous expenſes? And therefore let vs marke, that to keepe our ſelues from ſuch daungers, and from defiling our bodies with lecherie, and other infections; we muſt eſchew euill occaſions, and not meddle with any thing that may allure vs to any wicked luſt of lechery, or otherwiſe, but apparell our ſelues ſoberly and neceſſarily. Thus ye ſee in effect, how we ought to put this commaundement in vre.

Now Moſes addeth, That if a man finde a birdes neſt, he may take the young ones, but he muſt let goe the dam, when ſhee broodeth her egges or her young ones: At the firſt ſight this ſeemeth not worthy to bee ſet downe in Gods Law. For were there no greater & neceſſarier things to ſpeake of than young birdes? Why doth not God ſay rather that if a man ſee a mother nurſing of her childe, he ſhall not trouble her, but rather ſuccour her and helpe her, and in any wiſe beware that he touche her not, for that were a hurting of the infant which is a ſilly innocent ſoule. Why doth not God ſpeake after that maner? What needed it to goe ſay that a man ſhould let a Birde alone when ſhee broodeth her young? Hereby hee ment to expreſſe the better, howe greatly hee abhorreth all crueltie. For if hee cannot beare with it when it extendeth but to the little birdes: ſhall a man ſcape vnpuniſhed when hee falleth to hurting the image of God himſelfe, that is to ſay when he offereth wrong to another man? So then let vs marke that in ſpeaking of little birdes, GOD hath much better declared his meaning, than if he had ſpoken ſimply of mē. For it is all one as if hee had ſayd, Accuſtome your ſelues in ſuch wiſe to bee kinde hearted, and to doe no deede of crueltie, as that euen the little birdes may feele it. Not onely practiſe you it among your ſelues; but alſo when yee ſee a little Bird, conſider thus with your ſelues: no, our Lord, to inure vs yͤ better to vprightnes and reaſon; will haue vs to giue ſome proofe and witneſſe of it euen towards the creatures which cannot complaine of vs. A young bird hath no tong to craue reaſon at our hands, or to attempt an action againſt vs. Yet notwithſtāding, albeit yͤ (to our ſeeming) there is no account to be made of them, neither is vprightnes to be vſed but among men: yet for all that God will haue vs willing to frame our affections the better thereby; that whē we come to deale with our neighbors; we may be reſtrained by it to ſay, What? It is not lawfull for vs to be cruel to the Birdes: and howe may wee then bee cruell to ſuch as are of our owne kinde, in whom wee ſee the image of God imprinted? Thus ye ſee what wee haue to remember in the firſt place; where our Lord ſpeaketh ſo of little Birdes.

Nowe let vs come to the pith of this Lawe. It is ſayd, Thou ſhalt let the Damme goe, and onely take the young ones to thy ſelfe. When a Henbird broodeth her young ones, therein we haue an image of a mothers dutie towardes her children. And the ſillie birdes doe ſometimes teache vs our leſſon, when men and women are ſo brutiſh, that GOD is fayne to ſend them to ſchoole to Eſa.1.3. the beaſtes. For when as the Prophet Eſay ſaith, The Oxe knoweth his Maiſters ſtable, and the Aſſe knoweth his Crib: thereby hee ment to put men in minde of their leaudneſſe, and as it were to vpbraide them thus, Yee bee woorſe than the brute beaſtes, therefore go learne of them. For the Oxe in knowing his owne Crib or ſtall, doeth ſhewe you that you ought to knowe the Lorde your GOD. And ſeeing hee vouchſafeth to gather you into his flocke and into his Church, and yet you remaine woorſe than the wilde beaſtes: doe ye not ſhew your ſelues to haue vtterly forgotten the order of nature? Nowe then, ſeeing that the birdes haue ſuch a care of their young ones, ſurely they may teache men and women their leſſon, when they ſhewe themſelues to haue no care of their Children, as wee ſee ſome ryotous folke doe, which care not though they let their wiues and Children ſtarue at home, without regarde thereof, and in the meane while goe and ſpende thriſe as much at the tauerne as would find their whole houſe. Againe there are mothers yͤ haue no care at all of their children, all their ſeeking is to rid their hands of them, they cannot finde in their heartes to take the paines with them: wherein they ſhew themſelues to be vtterly void of louingneſſe and kindneſſe, and to bee woorſe than the brute beaſts, which teache vs our leſſon in this behalfe. For although the beaſts haue no further care of their young, than til they be able to ſhift for themſelues: yet are men taught their dewtie and charge thereby, and what they haue to doe all the time of their life. Why doe not the birds take care for their young ones, furtherforth than till they be able to ſhift for themſelues? Bycauſe a bird is not created in the world to be gouerned by his ſire and his dam all the time of his life; He is not bound to that: for he is a reaſonles creature. But the caſe ſtandeth not ſo with men. For euen when they be come to yeres of liberty, they muſt ſtill be guided and gouerned by counſell, and their fathers and mothers muſt put them in mind of their dewty when they haue done amiſſe. This needeth not in the beaſts: but yet doe the beaſts diſcharge themſelues of their duety ſo long til their yong ones be exempted out of their charge. And ſith it is ſo, what ſhall men doe?

Let vs reſorte to that which is ſayd heere, namely, Thou ſhalt not catch the dam when ſhee ſitteth vpon her young. And why? I ſee the dam brooding her yong ones, and (as we ſee) ſhe had leuer ſuffer herſelfe to bee eaten with vermine, than forſake her yong: ſhe ſittes there as vpon a torture, and ſhee paſſeth not for it. For why? Shee hath ſuch a care of her yong, that ſhee forgetteth her ſelfe for their ſakes: If ye demaund a reaſon of it, there is none that we know, but this; it is a naturall inclination and mouing impreſſed by God in birdes, that when they ſee their little ones, to their ſeeming they be deerer to them than their owne life. And although it bee a painefull thing to them to tary ſitting there in ſuch care: yet goe they to it with a cheerefull courage. Nowe when wee beholde this, is it not all one to vs as if we ſawe a picture wherein God ſhewed vs our dewtie? Let fathers take warning heere, to trauell earneſtly for their children. And as they ought to haue a care for the feeding and mainteyning of them: ſo muſt the mothers alſo doe their diligence in that behalfe, aſſuring themſelues that it is an acceptable ſeruice to God, when they take ſuch paines in reſpect that GOD hath bound them to that Condition, and that it behoueth them to yeeld thereunto, willingly and with a franke and free goodwill. Seeing then that wee ſee an Image of our charge, and God ſheweth as it were with his finger, what dewtie fathers and mothers doe owe to their children: ſhall wee goe ouerthrow it, were not that all one as if a Child ſhould goe burne his booke? When he hath a booke bought for him to goe to ſchoole with, and he teareth it in peeces; ſhal he not be beaten for it? Then if wee burne the booke which our Lorde ſheweth vs, and wittingly defeate the order which hee hath ſet in nature, by playing the butchers in killing with our owne handes the ſilly bird, brought thereto by conſtraint of neceſſitie for the diſcharge of her fatherly and motherly duetie: what will become of vs? True it is that God hath giuen vs the birdes for our foode, as wee knowe hee hath made the whole worlde for vs. Yet notwithſtanding if wee bee ſo cruell that wee will not ſpare the poore birdes, euen when they bee as it were vnder Gods tuition, imploying themſelues in his ſeruice: is it not a refuſing of the grace which he offereth vs, in ſetting before our eyes as in a lookingglaſſe, the duetie which we owe towardes thoſe whom hee hath committed vnto vs? Yes verily. In ſo much that if wee bee not beſides our wittes, and caryed with too cruell a rage, wee will haue pitie and compaſſion vppon the poore birdes, when wee ſee them yeelde their life in that ſort, to diſcharge their duetie. And in deede, it ſhoulde ſeeme that men intended to defye God and nature, when they take the dammes ſo vppon their little ones. For they bee ſo leane, that they bee as it were frothe or ſlime. Nowe our Lorde meant to reſtraine men, and to ſhewe them that their luſtes are altogither out of order. As if he ſhould ſay, What will ye doe? Ye ſee there is no ſubſtance or ſtrength in them. For during the time that I take them into my tuition, they be not good for ſuſtenance. Now then if a man bee ſo cruell towardes the birdes without hauing regard hereto: ſurely he wil be cruel to his neighbours alſo. And he that maketh no ſticking nor cōſcience to kil birdes in their breeding time, will alſo cut his neighbors throat if he thinke he may haue any gaine by it. Thus wee ſee nowe why our Lorde hath tolde vs that hee woulde haue the Broodbirdes to bee in ſafetie though their young ones bee taken from them. Hereby we bee taught ſo to vſe Gods creatures, as the vſe of them may bee orderly, and ſpecially that wee may inure our ſelues to pitie and compaſſion all our life long. For to that ende is this commaundement to bee referred. As I ſayde afore, GOD ſtandeth not vppon the birdes, to put any great perfection therein: but hee ment to teache vs by an argument from the leſſer to the greater after what maner we ought to behaue our ſelues towardes our neighbours. Therefore if we trouble any man whyle he is doing his dutie, and put him to any vexation vnder colour ÿ he is buſie in diſcharging himſelfe towardes God and towards thoſe to whom he is bound: we bee worthie of double blame. If a man diſquiet a nurce or a mother in doing her duetie towardes her child, ſurely it is double crueltie. The inſtruction that wee muſt take hereat, is that euery of vs muſt ſtraine himſelfe to help his neighbours. When we ſee them take paines to doe the things that God hath inioyned them, we muſt indeuor to ſuccour them, & no man is to bee troubled or moleſted in ÿ behalfe. For if it be not lawfull to trouble ÿ birdes, what may we do towards them that are ioyned vnto vs, as our brethren, as hath bin declared heretofore?

Nowe it followeth, that when a man buildeth a houſe, he muſt make battlemēts or railes about the roofe of it. This ſerued for ÿ houſes of Iewrie. For there they builded their houſes with flat roofe, and in all the Eaſt Countries they haue kept the ſame faſhion ſtill to this day. And in that reſpect our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſaid, looke what ye heare now in ſecret, ye ſhal preach hereafter vpon ÿ houſes toppes. Matt.10.27 When wee reade this text, it ſeemeth ſtrange to vs, if we haue an eye to the forme of building that is vſed here in theſe countries. For how ſhall a man get vp to ÿ houſe top, to preach there? But their houſes were made like Towers, that a man might walke vp and downe vppon them. Now if thoſe had no battlemēts or railes, men had beene in daunger to haue falne downe from them. For their children went vp to ÿ tops of their houſes, wherby many might haue beene ſlaine through want of heede; ſometime a man ſeruant, ſometime a chambermaide, and conſequently a child might haue falne downe, and ſo all ſhould haue bin in daunger. Now our Lorde commandeth thē to prouide aforehand for it, by making battlements about their houſes. But wee muſt firſt of all aduiſe our ſelues whereunto all the ſayinges are referred, which are ſet downe heere. Following the keye which I haue giuen already, which is that, there are but ten articles whereby to rule our whole life well: we muſt not goe ſeeke for fiue legges in one ſheepe, as they ſay: but we muſt alwayes hold vs to this point, ẏ God gaue vs a perfect rule of all righteouſneſſe and iuſt dealing, when he compriſed his Law in two Tables and in ten commaundements. Now whereas here is mention made of building mens houſes in ſuch ſort as they bring not bloud vpon them; hereby we ſee how our Lord hath ſhewed vs how deere the liues of al men ought to be vnto vs. Marke that for one point. And ſo haue we the expoſition of this commaundement, Thou ſhalt not kill. But is it ynough for a man, ẏ he abſtaine from murthering, from cutting of throats, from beating, and from vexing his neighbour? Truly it would be abhorred, if it were but ſpoken of in common ſpeeche: but God hath yet a further reſpect in forbidding murder. Why is that? Let vs come to this reaſon: that foraſmuch as mans life is precious vnto him: therefore it followeth that wee muſt preſerue our neighbours liues to the vttermoſt of our power. For although wee offer them no violence, yet ſhall wee not bee diſcharged. But euery of vs muſt looke that hee vſe no anoyaunce, nor giue any cauſe or occaſion of harme or loſſe to inſewe to our neighbour. Yee ſee then howe our Lorde hath tould vs yet better in this text, the thing which hee had ſpoken afore when hee ſayd, Thou ſhalt not kill. And ſo according to my rule, wee muſt come to ẏ foreſetdowne and foreexpreſſed commaundement, Thou ſhalt not kill. Well, God maketh there but a ſingle forbidding: but yet muſt we learn thereby to ſeek al the meanes wee can to maintaine the life of our neighbour. Thou wouldeſt not that any man ſhoulde put thee in daunger of thy lyfe, but rather that hee ſhould preſerue it, and that thou mighteſt not be in perill by another mans ouerſight. Therefore looke that thou yeeld ẏ like minde to thy neighbour.

Moreouer let vs marke that heere God hath vnder one part comprehended the whole. Hee ſpeaketh of the making of battlements or Railes vpon the roofes of mens houſes: but it is all one as if he had ſaid, whenſoeuer men build, let them bee well ware to build after ſuch a ſort, as no incōuenience may inſue therof. Many be ſo groſſe witted, that they make things in their houſes as it were of ſet purpoſe to intrappe them that come in: ſo as a man had neede of good skill where to ſet his foote, and if hee bee not very ware and looke well to himſelfe, hee ſhal bee in daunger to breake his necke. There are ſome which bee ſo ill diſpoſed. And God ſayth that he which doeth ſo, bringeth bloud vpon his houſe, that is to ſay, defileth his houſe with mans bloud. Nowe then, let vs looke wel about vs, and let vs ſo ſeeke our owne commodities, as our building may bee without daunger. And why? For otherwiſe wee ſhal bee worthie of blame. But (as hath beene declared already) we haue to gather vpon this text, that God doth well vouchſafe to lay for the preſeruing of our liues, & to prouide aforehand for all inconueniences, that none of vs may fall in daunger. For as much then as wee ſee that GOD hath ſuch a fatherly care of vs: haue we not cauſe to acknowledge his gracious goodneſſe, and to be vtterly rauiſhed at it? Therefore although our dewtie bee ſhewed vs heere, that is to ſay, although God tell vs that euery of vs ought to prouide for the ſafegarde of his neighbours life: yet haue wee another good leſſon to gather here, namely that GOD deſcendeth hither vnto vs; and ſheweth that hee hath his eye vpon our life, and that he intendeth to bee the defender thereof. Nowe ſith wee ſee this, haue wee not a ſingular recorde of his goodneſſe? Yee ſee howe our bodyes are but Carions: and yet GOD vouchſafeth to mayntaine them, and giueth vs heere a commaundement to prouide long aforehande for the daungers that may inſue to it, that it may bee preſerued from them. Ought not the ſight of all theſe things to touch vs to the quicke, and to make vs to magnifie the goodnes of our God?

And furthermore, when we know this goodneſſe, as in reſpect of this preſent life and this world: let vs mount vp one ſtep higher, and not doubt but hee hath a farre greater care of our ſoules, as hee ſheweth by experience. And therefore let vs reſt boldly vppon him, and not doubt but wee ſhall bee preſerued if wee abyde vnder his protection, and play not the looſe Coultes, but come broode our ſelues vnder his winges (as the Scripture ſayeth) not doubting but hee will keepe vs ſafe and ſounde. And beſides this, let vs marke alſo, that if they which put their neighbours in perill of their bodyes are guiltie before GOD: much more ſhall they bee accountable to him, which caſt any ſtumblingblocke in their neighbours wayes, whereby they be turned from the way of ſaluation. If a man ſhoote at aduenture and wounde one as hee paſſeth by, hee is worthy of blame, yea and of puniſhment too. For why? Men ought to looke one to another. Am I to be excuſed if I ſhoote at aladuenture and kill a poore man that miſtruſted no ſuch thing? Nay, I ought to be aduiſed for him aforehand. Euen ſo is it with all other lyke thinges. Inſomuch that if any neighbour fall into any miſſehappe through my faulte or negligence, it is an offence committed againſt GOD, and the world alſo knoweth ſuch thinges to bee puniſhable. But I make my neighbour to ſtumble, not onely to the breaking of his arme or of his leg, yea or euen of his necke: but alſo to the deſtroying of his ſoule: and what a thing is that? For wee ſee that the ſtumbling blocks which are caſt in mens waies, ſerue to the vtter deſtruction and caſting downe of the ſilly ſoules that were purchaſed by the bloud of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Therefore when men procure troubles & ſtumbling blocks in the Church, doe they not cauſe the thinges to goe to deſtruction, which God had begun to build vp? And is not that one of ẏ higheſt points of treaſon againſt God? Therefore let vs looke to our ſelues, and ſeeing ẏ God hath ſuch a care of our perſōs, let euery of vs follow his example: & if we prouide aforehand ẏ no hurt may befal to mens bodies, let vs haue much greater regard of their ſoules.

And moreouer, let vs marke what is ſayde heere concerning euery mans houſe. For if a man giue euill example to his houſhould: he not onely bringeth bloud vpon his houſe, that is to ſay, he not onely defileth the houſe wherein he dwelleth; but alſo he bringeth much worſe vpon it, that is to ſay, all manner of curſedneſſe, and hee prouoketh Gods wrath. There is a man which is a deſpiſer of all Religion, hee paſſeth not to haue GOD diſhonoured in his houſe, nay hee neuer openeth his mouth, but to the ſpewing out of ſome blaſphemie or diueliſhneſſe: againe on the other ſide his wife is a harlot, or a drunkard, or a feend of hell, vtterly voyde of the feare of GOD, voyde of courteſie, voyde of modeſtie: and beſides all this, there are a great ſorte of other euil examples to bee ſeene there in diuers maners: and is not the dooing of all theſe thinges a wilfull defiling of his owne houſe? And what can come thereof? When a man hath goods, and a great houſholde, if in the meane while hee defile the place that was giuen him and wherein hee dwelleth, ſo as all is full of filth, as for example, his children are ill nurtured, his ſeruauntes are vnruly, and in ſtead of giuing themſelues to the ſeruice of God, there is nothing but looſeneſſe and cauſe of offence: what other can come of it than is ſayde in this text, namely that his houſe is defiled? And therefore let vs marke, that after our Lorde had declared in this text, that all thoſe are counted for murderers before him, which are not careful to preſerue all mens liues: hee addeth likewiſe, that euery man muſt ſo prouide for his owne houſhold, as no offence may bee committed there, and that the poore ſoules bee not deſtroyed: [as for example,] that the young children be not corrupted and marred by wicked bringing vp, nor the ſeruants and houſholdfolk ſee any thing that may marre them: but that the Mayſters and Miſtreſſes do ſo behaue themſelues that GOD bee honoured and ſerued, to the intent their houſes bee not defiled and infected with the common filth of the worlde, but that wee may ſhewe that God raigneth there, ſo as his bleſſinges may be powred out vpon it in all reſpectes, as well of body as of ſoule.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them more and more, as we may returne to him as to the Phiſition that can heale vs of all our diſeaſes: Praying him alſo, ſo to call vs home to himſelfe, that with all ſoberneſſe and modeſtie we may caſt aforehand to keepe our ſelues chaſt and vndefiled for his ſeruice; and that therwithal we may euerichone of vs haue a care and regarde of our neighbours, being ready to releeue one another, &(as much as is poſſible)eſchuing all anoyaunce and harme dooing: and that by this meane wee may with one common accorde ſhewe our ſelues to bee true children towardes him, and bee able to call vppon him with full truſt. And for the bringing heereof to paſſe, it may pleaſe him to rayſe vp true and faithfull Miniſters of his woorde, &c.

On Wedneſday the viij. of Ianuarie. 1556.

The Cxxvij. Sermon, which is the third vpon the two & twentith Chapter.

9 Thou ſhalt not ſowe thy Vineyard with diuers kindes of ſeedes, leaſt thou defile the increaſe of the ſeede which thou haſt ſowen and the fruite of the Vineyarde.

10 Thou ſhalt not plowe with an Oxe and an Aſſe together.

11 Thou ſhalt not cloath thy ſelfe with cloth of diuers ſortes, as of wollen and linnen together.

12 Thou ſhalt make thee fringes vpon the foure quarters of thy veſture wherewith thou契 coureſt thy ſelfe.

There is no doubt but God in forbidding the Iewes to ſowe their Vineyardes with diuerſe ſeedes, to clothe themſelues with wouen garments of diuers ſtuffes, to plowe their grounde with an Oxe and an Aſſe, minded to bridle the multitude of inuentions which men forge vnto themſelues, to alter the plaine ſimplicitie which we ought to hold vs vnto, and which nature it ſelfe hath taught vs. For the minde of man is a wonderfull ſtorehouſe alwayes to deuiſe ſome one thing or other. And (as a man by dayly experience may ſee) it keepeth therein neyther meane nor meaſure. Nowe all this while ſuperfluities in all thinges encreaſe dayly. For men giue themſelues ouer only to delights and pleaſures, to their gorgeous pompes and braueries, and I knowe not what trimneſſe (as they terme it:) ſo as they haue cleane forgotten to liue after common order, and according to that vſe and faſhion wherewith men ought to content themſelues, if they had any ſtayedneſſe or ſobrietie in them. Wee ſee (I ſay) howe men giue the bridle to their luſtes, and take to themſelues ſuch lawleſſe libertie, that there is nothing but a mingle mangle in the whole order of nature. Nowe our Lorde minding to holde his people in ſome modeſtie, hath ſpoken in this place more groſſely, and vnder certaine particular thinges, meant to ſhewe them, howe he liketh of plaine ſimplicitie, to the intent hee might reſtraine ſuch ſtraunge deuiſes as dayly ariſe, and that men although their luſts bee ſo tickliſh, ſhould not be ouercurious, but liue and hold themſelues in ſuch contentation, as to ſay: Well, that which the Lord hath giuen vs ought to ſuffice vs if any reaſon might content vs. And therefore let vs not bee ſet vppon ſuch wandering fanſies as alwayes to deuiſe ſome thing or other without any ende, neither let euerie man bring his peece of deuiſe, and trauayle vainely in martyring themſelues to ſatiſfie their inordinate deſires: but let vs enioye the benefites which GOD hath beſtowed vppon vs, howbeit in ſuch wiſe as that wee remember howe his minde is that wee ſhoulde vſe them ſoberlie. Ye ſee then what the meaning of God is which we haue to beare in minde touching this place.

Nowe a man might treat very largely of euery ſentence, & yet we in the meane while ſhould reape ſmall profite therby: becauſe wee ſhould not vnderſtand the true marke which God heere amed at. We muſt therefore begin at this point, ÿ is to wit, to know why God forbad the Iewes to ſowe in this ſorte diuers ſeedes in one vineyard, to cloath themſelues with garmentes of diuers thinges, and to plowe their ground with an oxe and an aſſe. But let vs nowe returne to euery of theſe lawes. It is ſaid That a man ſhall not mingle ſeedes together: as it is ſpoken heereof likewiſe in the 19. Chapter of Leuiticus. For God there vſeth a preface ſaying, Yee ſhal keepe my ſtatutes. And hee doeth it becauſe wee alwaies alleage examples to cloake our faultes withall, and beare our ſelues in hande, that if others doe any thing, all ought to bee lawfull for vs. But God bereaueth his people of all ſuch excuſes by ſaying, Know yee that I am your gouernour: follow me, and hold your ſelues to my will. And this word is well worth the noting, to the intent we bethinke our ſelues well that if the Lord haue once giuen vs his word to the contrary, we muſt not preſume on the liberty of dooing that which is commonly vſed among others. And why? Sith God is ſo gratious vnto vs as to guide vs, let vs ſtay ourſelues on him.

But now he ſaith, Ye ſhal not ſow diuers ſeeds. And why? for (ſaith he) ſo thou mighteſt ſanctifie that which thou haſt ſowen and the fruit alſo which might come of thy vine. Now this term of ſanctifying or hallowing betokeneth as much as if it were ſaid: thou ſhalt bereaue thy ſelfe of thy vine, and of the fruite which thou ſhouldeſt gather thereof. And GOD ſheweth heereby, howe his will is that there ſhould be true and plaine dealing among the people of Iſraell, and that if a man ſowe corne, hee ſhould make ſuch lawefull marchandiſe thereof without any mingling, as that a man might ſay: ſee heere is Wheate, here is Barely, here are Beanes, heere are Peaſe, when euery graine is ſeueral by it ſelfe. For if the ſeede bee not pure, what ſhall come thereof, but that the people ſhall be deceiued? And beſides that alſo there ſhall not be one ſimple and naturall maner of foode as ought to bee. Moreouer here is mention made of ſowing the Vineyardes, bycauſe that in thoſe countries the vines are very large: for they are bigger than ours, and in faſhion like, but they be very large, and the grapes alſo very great, inſomuch that there they muſt haue more roome or ſpace for them. In effect we ſee now how our Lordes meaning was, that the ground ſhould be ſo ſowen ÿ the vittailes which were ſold among his people, ſhould be ſimple & all in their ſeueral kindes, and herein he compriſeth that which we haue aboue touched, namely that men ſhoulde alter nothing but maintaine the order of nature.

But now if the corne be falſly mingled in the garner, is it not all one, yea and more too, than if the corne had bin mingled in the field? Therefore when that which ought to ſerue for ÿ nouriſhment of men, is ſo chaunged from his owne kinde, there is no true dealing therein. And yet for all that, we ſee how ſuttle men are in this behalfe and howe they will yet alwayes haue ſome new faſhions, ſome for their lucre, & otherſome for ſome other reſpect, or to feede ſome curious humor of theirs. It were much better we helde faſt ÿ order which our Lord hath appointed. For ÿ is the very rule which we ought to follow. And although there were no great euill in dooing otherwiſe, yet we ought alwayes to hold vs herevnto. Seeing God hath deliuered vs this rule, ÿ there ſhould be ſimplicitie or ſinglenes as I may terme it among vs: let vs followe it. But wee ſee farther, ÿ al theſe medlies which are made in things, proceede either frō ſome craftie wilines & deceit: or from a certaine curioſitie & ambition: and ſecondly that they tend vnto a wicked gaine; namely when men haue no regard vnto ÿ loſſe of their neighbour, but euery man is giuen ouermuch to think on himſelf, as who wold ſay: O this will ſerue my turne very well, I ſhall haue the better vtterance of it, & the thing will not be ſo eaſily eſpied; or elſe it will paſſe well ynough with other ware, and it will be neuertheleſſe eſteemed; but I ſhall finde vppon my reckening, that it was ſo much ÿ more to my gaine. Therefore ſith we ſee that theſe medlies proceede frō ſo euill a roote, and tend to ſo wicked an end, are they not to bee doublie condemned? Yes verily. But yet herewithall let vs beare in minde, (as I haue tolde you before) that when GOD woulde not that the ſeedes ſhould be mingled in the fielde, hee forbad aſwell all other mixtures which are made of any wicked purpoſe. If wine bee newe brewed in the Hogſheade, is it not as yll or rather woorſe then if one vſed this mingling in the Vineyarde ? So then let vs haue an eye to the meaning of GOD. Let vs content our ſelues with ſingle ſimplicitie, and at a woorde, let vs maintaine the order of nature.

Now he addeth : Ye ſhall not plowe your ground with an Oxe and an Aſſe. Here may be had a double reſpect, the firſt is touching the beaſtes, who if they bee not alike coupled, haue the more painefull trauaile. The ſecond is touching the earing of the ground, which cannot bee doone ſo orderly by this meanes : nay it cannot bee done at al. And here he purpoſely maketh mention of Aſſes. For they had other maner of Aſſes in that countrie thã we haue here. For they ſerued to beare great burdẽs, as able there unto as Moyles, which are fourefold ſtronger & mightier than the Mules of our countrie. And therfore if one ſhould couple an Oxe and an Aſſe together, there would bee ſuch inequalitie, that the Oxe would bee much more grieued then if hee were matched with his like, and the Aſſe in like manner. And why? For they are not in nature matched well together. Nowe albeit God ordaine not like Lawes for all other beaſtes ; yet (as wee haue ſeene before) his will is that men ſhould vſe them ſo farre foorth with gentleneſſe, that they ſhoulde pitie the beaſtes which they employ to their vſe and ſeruice. For he that will ſhewe himſelfe cruell towardes his horſe or his Oxe, will be the ſame towards his neighbour. And men truely become hard hearted when they deale ſo cruelly with the beaſtes which God hath giuen into their handes to doe them ſeruice. For if they ſhew their crueltie vpon the poore beaſtes which trauaile to their profit, it is a ſure ſigne that they are of a crabbed nature, & that they would haue no more compaſſion vpon reaſonable creatures. Yee ſee then what regard God had in making this Lawe. Againe (as I haue alreadie touched) the ground cannot be ſo well plowed, if the beaſtes be not matches: for when there is not obſerued a iuſt and equal proportion betweene them, the labour can neuer proceede orderly. But wee muſt returne backe alwaies to that which we haue touched; namely that Gods will was ỹ his people ſhould not giue themſelues vnto ſtraunge inuentions, as we may ſee howe men alwayes runne this way and are greatly enclined thereunto. By forbidding all manner of mingling, he ment to traine vs vnto this point, that is to wit, that whereas God hath ordayned all thinges in this worlde to our vſe and profit, that wee ſhoulde looke to our ſelues to keepe ſuch a meaſure therein, that wee ſhoulde not mingle heauen and earth together, nor make an hodgpodge of all thinges when wee employ Gods creatures to our vſe. And in very deede whereas he ſayeth ye ſhall keepe my ſtatutes, it is to teach vs that he will haue vs to repreſſe all ſuch looſe libertie of ours. And although hee bound the Iewes more ſtraitely by this commaundement than vs at theſe dayes; yet this doctrine belongeth alſo vnto vs, as ſhall bee heere anon more largely declared. Let vs come nowe vnto the thirde Lawe which is ſet downe heere. God forbiddeth the Iewes to cloth themſelues with garmentes wouen of Linnen and Wollen. Heere wee may better vnderſtande that which wee haue alreadie touched: namely, that wee ought to keepe an order in thinges, and to content vs with that playne ſimplicitie which God alloweth of, ſo as wee take not ouer lawleſſe leaue to confounde all thinges, but conſider to what ende euerie thing is ordayned. Wee haue flaxe and hemp and ſuch like thinges: wel, wee muſt apply euery of theſe thinges vnto our vſe. Againe we haue wooll to make vs garments and diuers other things. When men vſe ſtayedneſſe in theſe thinges, their clothing of themſelues with them putteth them in minde of Gods prouidence, in that he hath more than a fatherlike care of them. For haue we neede to be apparelled? We haue a ſhert, we haue a coate, wee haue ſhoes. We ſee it: behold, we haue leather to ſhoe vs, we haue cloth to couer vs: and farther for an ouerplus, wee haue a ſhirt. And Lord howe thou haſt wel prouided for all! Hereof are wee put in minde. Nowe if men make a medlie of thinges, ſurely they become beaſtes in ſo doing: and Satan endeuoureth nothing more, than to bleare our eyes, to the intent wee ſhoulde make no account of this orderly differẽce, which God hath ſet in all partes of the world, that wee might beholde therein his infinite wiſedome which ſhyneth in all things, and his ſoueraigne goodneſſe whereby he ſheweth and declareth himſelfe our father. Satans whole deſire therefore, is that all ſhould be confuſed, and that men ſhould riotouſly waſte things here belowe, without any conſideration that God hath forgottẽ nothing which might ſerue for their vſes and neceſſities. Let vs therefore marke diligently, that when God forbad the Iewes to apparell themſelues with wouen garmentes of diuers ſtuffes; it was to the end they ſhould apply all things to their proper vſes, and haue this regard of things to ſay: Why hath God giuen this into our handes? To what purpoſe muſt it ſerue vs? So that men ſhoulde not be led with any exceſſiue curioſitie, but be contented to haue the naturall vſe of things, in ſuch ſort as God offereth them. I haue told you heretofore that the bondage which is nowadayes, is not ſuch as was vnder the Lawe: for wee haue greater libertie than the people which liued vnder it, whom God held as little children, as Saint Paul ſayth. Gal.4.2. Nowe wee know that it is needefull that little children ſhoulde bee ordered with a more ſtraite, and as it were ſlauiſh gouernment. And why? Bicauſe their age will not yet ſuffer ſuch libertie to bee yeelded vnto them as vnto others. Yet neuerthelater, that which men teach little children, is to the intent they ſhoulde obſerue and doe it when they come to mans ſtate. Their increaſing in age deliuereth them in deede from the rodde and ſuch other ſtraiteneſſe; but yet muſt they keepe ſtill that honeſtie and thoſe vertues alſo wherein they were trayned vp when they were but children. Euen ſo although our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt haue deliuered vs from ſo ſtrayte a bonde as were the ceremonies of the lawe: yet the ſubſtance thereof remaineth alwayes vnto vs:(and to be ſhort) we muſt beare in minde that God hath ſpokẽ thoſe thinges vnto vs as well as vnto the Iewes, although it be after an other manner: for wee are now to gather, that al confuſions & medlies diſpleaſe him. And why? Becauſe his wil is that wee ſhoulde vſe thoſe benefites which he beſtoweth on vs, ſoberly, that wee ſhoulde not wander in our delightes, nor mainteine any ſuperfluities among vs. And therefore let vs not buſie our heades with deuiſing of new inuẽtions to ſet all playne dealing aſide, to haue no other reſpect but to lay baytes for monie, as in very deede all theſe fine deuices tend to none other end but to picke mens purſes. Oh ſee here a trimme inuention (ſaith one,) & by & by fooles runne after it: and emptie their purſes by it. If men would content themſelues with plaine ſimplicitie, euery man ſhould ſpend leſſe, and bee contented alſo with leſſe. But when men goe once ſo aſtray, there is no ho with them. For hee that loueth to be talking of this new thing, and yͤ new thing, he muſt needes be corrupted in other thinges. And this is an occaſion of the enhauncing of wares, and to make them more ſleightly than elſe they would be, if euery man walked ſimply and ſoundly in that behalfe. And ſo ye ſee what wee haue at this day to gather vpon this place.

Truely the deſires of men are ſo infinite, and lyke gulfes and bottomleſſe pittes: that it would be a hard matter to gather all that might be ſaid vpon this place: neuertheleſſe it behoueth vs to be put in minde thereof. And againe, when wee ſhall haue heard the thinges in generall which God meant to teach vs here: euery of vs muſt afterward fall to the putting thereof in practiſe, and expreſſe the ſame particularly in our deeds, according to yͤ obiects (that is to ſay occaſions) which are offered vs. We haue already ſayd that our Lorde meant to reſtraine vs vnto a ſober & moderate vſe of his benefites. And therefore I conclude that whẽ men be ouerlauiſh and mingle thinges together to ſatisfie their luſtes, it is a defiling of the benefits of God. It is ſayd: Thou ſanctifieſt, that is to ſay, thou defileſt. The fulneſſe of the ſeede, that is to ſay, the thinges which thou ſhouldeſt gather. For the Hebrewes take ſometime this word Holy for curſed. Yea and yͤ name of an harlot which they vſe is deriued hence, as a curſed thing which we ought not to touch. For an holy thing and that which is dedicated vnto God ought not to be touched. After yͤ ſame maner, that which is defiled and curſed is called Sanctifyed, (that is to ſay ſuch a thing as a man muſt not touch) although it bee in an other reſpect. And ſo it is ſaid that we ſanctifie the fulnes or encreaſe of yͤ benefites which God giueth vs, when we apply thẽ vnto an ill vſe. Let vs therefore note, that we vnhallow the pure and naturall vſe of Gods benefites, when we for our luſts ſake doe make any great mingling of them. Now we are not to ſeeke for this vice onely in yͤ fields, whẽ wheate is mingled with oates or with ſome other graine: but we muſt alſo caſt our eye vpon our tables, where there is vſed ſuch varietie, as would make a man to wonder. Whereby it is to be ſeene how men are giuen ouer vnto this vice, ſo as they labour to diſguiſe all thinges, and they ſeeme to haue conſpired to alter and chaunge whatſoeuer is in nature. I pray you is it not a defiling of thinges, when men doe ſo diſguiſe the order of God? Is it not euen a ſpring of him? And are we worthie to enioy the benefits which he beſtoweth on vs, when we know not how to keepe any meane in them? If a man perceiue a childe to cramme himſelfe without meaſure; to take away that vice he will cut his morſels ſmaller. And if he perceiue that he is ouer lickerous and giuen to his luſts, he will giue him the cleane contrarie to that which he deſireth. And why? Becauſe that otherwiſe hee marreth him cleane. And if he ſhould bee foaded ſtill in his delightes, hee ſhould bee vndone when he is olde. Seeing it is ſo, If when wee come to mans eſtate, wee ſo abuſe the benefites which GOD hath diſtributed vnto vs in ſo good order, and we mingle them together, ſo as no varietie can pleaſe vs; muſt not our Lorde needes ſee to it, and vſe a forcible remedie, when hee perceiueth that by our good will wee can not keepe any ſtaye? If one demaund of mee, and ſay; yea ſir, but are all minglinges, ſinne? No. I will not ſpeake ſo ſtrictly. Yet neuertheleſſe the beginning of them proceeded from a wicked deſire. They which inuented ſo many varieties to feede the fond appetites of men, did queſtionleſſe offend God, and wee ought to deteſt them, notwithſtanding that they haue bin lyked of in their times, and that men haue ſaid: Oh here is an excellent cooke: oh here is a good Steward. Although they haue gayned glory by making ſo many delicates, and by their compounding of ſo many thinges to make their fine and new ſauces, and I know not what other conceites to feede the humors of ſuch as deſire to bee entertained ouerdelicatelie: yet muſt wee deteſt ſuch thinges: and it were to bee wiſhed that ſuch men had had their mothers wombe for their graue. But now what haue wee to doe, but to repreſſe al ſuperfluitie, and all that euer maketh vnto vice? Ought wee not to indeuour this with all our might? Yes verily. But what? Euery of vs is ſo farre from mending of one, that it ſeemeth rather that wee intend to pleade preſcription againſt God. Whatſoeuer is told vs, wee fare not the better by it one whit. And why? Becauſe we haue taken it vp of cuſtome. Yea, but God wil in the end ſhewe, that there is no lawfull poſſeſſion, but ſuch as is ruled by his lawe, and according vnto his will. Nay doubt wee not but GOD will puniſhe ſuch ſuperfluities, by cutting our commons ſhorter. In deede our nature is inclined to this wickedneſſe of retchleſſe confounding of thinges, which God had diſtinguiſhed: but yet muſt wee therefore feele the tokens of his anger, when he ſheweth not himſelfe ſo liberall a father towardes vs as hee was woont to doe. And if wee were wiſe or but well aduiſed, wee would not waite for the declaration hereof. That which is ſaid here woulde ſuffice vs, namely that we ought not to mingle the creatures of God, but alwayes to holde vs vnto a plaine ſimplicitie in our maner of liuing. Ye ſee then what wee are to note touching our meate and drinke, namelie, that men ought ſo to content themſelues with that which they haue, that being nouriſhed of God they may reknowledge it in this ſorte: Behold, our God hath a care to feede vs, and wee may well ſee that he is a father towardes vs, in that hee ſheweth himſelfe to haue ſo great a care of our lyfe. Let men therefore take heede that they be not drunken with their delicacies, and beſotted in their varieties, but ẏ they haue an eye alwayes vnto God. Now the lyke ought alſo to be obſerued in our appàraile. It is ſaid in effect that a man ſhall not clothe himſelfe with diuers ſortes. This ſerueth to teach vs, that we ought to keepe as great ſobrietie as wee can poſſiblie, aſwel in our apparaile as in our meates and drinkes. For if men decke themſelues with diuers ſortes, and vſe in their attire many fond diſguiſings, whereof procedeth it? ſurely nature teacheth them no ſuch thing. For the heathen men had skill to ſay, that if euery man would ſo loue nature herein, there needed not ſuch varieties of meats or diuerſities of apparaile. Men of themſelues doe martyr themſelues. Lo what our luſtes doe leade vs to! For they buſie vs in taking paynes about this and that, and make vs alſo to trouble others: and ſo all ẏ world is diſquieted. And why is that? If we could be content, wee ſhoulde liue much more quietly. But we are ſtill giuen vnto ſuperfluities; and that is the cauſe why wee can haue no end of our trauailes: we are become lyke the damned ſoules. And where is ẏ fault thereof, but in our ſelues? So then let vs note (as I haue touched already) that theſe diuers ſorts of varieties which men long after, ſerue for ſo many warrants to prooue, that we cannot ſtay within the true contentation of nature. I graunt it were but a meere follie to hold vs to the rigor and extreme preciſeneſſe of liuing which ſome fantaſticall and brainſicke men haue vſed: that wee ſhould be contented with nature, ẏ we muſt haue neither glaſſe nor goblet, but our bare hand only to drink out of: theſe be follies in deed. Nay, whē our Lord vſeth liberalitie towards vs, let vs conſider of it. Pſal.104.14 15. It is ſayd in ẏ 104. pſalme, ẏ God hath beſtowed on men, not only bread and water for the neceſſitie of their lyfe, but alſo wine to comfort their harts and to make them merrie. Whē we ſee ẏ God of his exceeding grace giueth vs beyond our very neceſſitie that which we neded not, well: let vs accept of his liberalitie, & know that he giueth vs leaue to vſe it in good conſcience with giuing of thankes. He could wel bring forth corn for our ſuſtenāce although no bloome came before it, and hee could wel enough cauſe fruite of the trees to encreace ẇout either leafe or bloſſome. But wee ſee how our Lord intended to delight all our ſences, and meant to preſent vs with his bleſſinges in all ſortes, and in all the creatures which he offereth vnto vs to reioyce in. So then this barbarous rigor, that men ſhould bee debarred of that which God hath beſtowed vppon them, is not to bee ſpoken of, or admitted. Let vs but onely reſtreine our couetous deſires: & let vs conſider well of that which God graunteth vnto vs, to goe ſo farre forth, and no further whē we once perceiue that the thing is not lawful before God.

Now our Lord commaundeth vs to keepe our ſelues vnto plaine ſimplicitie. It followeth then, that all needeleſſe minglinges and diſguiſings of thinges, are alwayes euill. For they are as ſo many vices which God reproueth. And if this wickedneſſe bee euidently ſeene in meates and drinkes, it is yet more apparantly knowen in apparaile. I pray you to what exceſſe are wee growen herein nowadayes? In deede this wickedneſſe raigned in men long agoe: and it is not for naught that the ſcripture ſpeaketh thereof; but yet it is much more nowadayes than euer it was. Eſa.3.15.&c The Prophet Eſay ſpeaking of the attire of women becauſe they were ſo curious in trimming vp themſelues, and had ſuch a ſorte of pettie trinkets, deciphereth them particularly as if he had had ſome inuentorie of their Chiſtes, euen from ẏ crowne of their head vnto the ſole of their feete; as their ouches and brouches and ſuch lyke knackes: And hee tels them that God can well skill to make a violent reformation, ſeeing they were ſo ſet vppon their brauerie and toke no care of amending that wickedneſſe. But we may ſee nowadayes more of this than euer was heretofore, and no varietie can pleaſe men. They are as it were beginning ſtil a freſh to deuiſe ſome new thing or other, and are neuer at an ende. And what is the cauſe hereof, but that we ſhew in deed, how we haue no care at all of our ſoules, when we are ſo buſied about our bodies; that we let our ſoules to ruſt, when through our fooliſh deſires we ſeeke ſo many beautiful deckings & ſuch ſtrange inuentions to make a ſhew of our ſelues to the worldward? Let vs therefore note that all theſe curioſities doe bewray that men and women deſpiſe God: becauſe they cannot hold themſelues within the order of nature which is the true rule to liue by, and ſo conſequently they defile the vſe of his creatures. So then we muſt not ſtand ſo much on the threedes whereẇ our garments are wouen, as who would ſay, God hath forbidden vs to weare Linciewolcie: but wee muſt vnderſtande that our Lordes meaning is; we ſhould obſerue a ſimple & natural faſhiō in our apparail, & not vſe ſuch gay glorious flimflams to diſguiſe things nor to ſeek after ſuch ſuperfluous deckings. For when we doe ſo, it is al one as if a man would come & diſorder an whole houſe. For example ſake, there is an houſhold well ordered: now if one would come and ouerturne the pottes and platters, and mingle the ſheetes with the handtowels and tablenapkins, and ſo tumble all thinges together, what a thing woulde that bee? The lyke is done when we cannot keepe ſuch meaſure as to apply vnto our vſe that which God hath giuen; yea which hee hath giuen vs (as I haue tolde you) on condition that wee ſhould eſchewe all exceſſe, and not mingle thinges together after our owne fantaſies. Now if this were well noted, we would by effect ſhewe that wee are a people ſchooled out for God, and that we haue his word which withholdeth vs from intermingling our ſelues with the defilementes of this world. But if a man would lay forth all the vices which are committed in this behalfe, one ſermon woulde not ſerue. For we ſee to what a maze this wickedneſſe is growen at this day. And that is a great ſhame. But yet for al that, euery man looketh to his owne profite. When we ſee that mens fond deſires tickle them, then beginne wee to reare vp ſome new deuice in our braine: and this wil be trimme (ſaith one.) I muſt needes haue an other new deuice and yet an other, & yet a third to that. There is no talke of the neceſſitie, nor of the vſe of thinges: but firſt of pleaſing the deſires of men, and ſecondly alwayes of making our gayne. And is mony ſpent vpon thoſe ſuperfluities? Wee muſt finde out more. And in the meane while there is nothing elſe but wickedneſſe, and naughtineſſe, wilyneſſe, and vnfaithfulneſſe among men. And I would to God this were not to be found. But wee ought to thinke better hereon than wee haue done. Ye ſee how we are to practiſe this doctrine, where God hauing ſpoken of food, commeth to ſpeake of apparaile, and ſayth, there ſhall be no ſuch varietie as might ſerue to paint out men and to peruert al the ſimplicitie which is in nature. And in deed if our ſight were not ouerdimme, we ſhould eaſily diſcerne this matter, and ſay: this and this is not conuenient. But what? wicked cuſtome hath ſo put vs out of the right way, that we be as blind herein as Beetles. Why can we not iudge, that there is nothing but confuſion in our lyfe? Becauſe we are ſo drunken with the filthie dregges of our ſuperfluities, that wee haue loſt all ſenſe and are become more than blockiſh. But if wee would take vnto vs ſuch as haue liued in playne ſimplicitie, and bring them aſide a little to beholde how men leade their lyfe, and to ſee how they haue to day one thing, to morrow another, and how they are euery day to beginne againe, and how they are alwayes forging of ſome new deuices, to put that out of vſe which was in faſhion but three dayes agoe, and all to gaine mony afreſh: and to ſee how others ſpend to maintaine their ſhewes and their braueries, if (I ſay) ſome of theſe good meaning men which haue bin brought vp in playneſſe ſhould ſee this: they would ſpit at ſuch follies. But yet for all that we are not to be excuſed. Although our vices blinde vs, yet the Lawe of God ſhall alwayes remaine. It ſhall remaine (I ſay) to our vtter confuſion, if we aduiſe not our ſelues better to reclaime our ſelues, and to reforme vs to that ſtayedneſſe which God hath commaunded vs.

Now it is ſayd moreouer, That the Iewes ſhould make at the neather parts of their garmentes, fringes, or borders that is to ſay, their garmentes ſhoulde haue a large border, and be plaighted in the edges: as mention is made hereof in the fifteenth Chap. of the booke of Nombers. For there it is ſayd that they ſhall haue fine cordes or laces of ſilke to folde together the borders of their garments. And why? The reaſon is there expreſſed. For otherwiſe this place would be obſcure. It is ſayd here: thou ſhalt make thee fringes, or borders vpon the foure neather partes, or quarters of thy garment. If there were no mo wordes than ſo, a man might demaund why, and not be aunſwered. But God in that place ſayth that that faſhion ſhould ſerue them for a monument. Thou ſhalt thinke thereby that thou art a people dedicated vnto God, who hath choſen thee to himſelfe to be thy protectour. In ſo ſmall a thing then God meant to admoniſh his people to ſay: ſee, Wee are not as the Paynims who walke after their owne fancies: for God hath deliuered vnto vs his lawe, to the end to holde vs faſt, to the keeping thereof. And we haue ſeene the lyke to this before in the fourth Chapter. For when God ſayd there, that the Iewes ought to exerciſe themſelues alwayes in thinking vpon his Lawe, he ſayd: you ſhall haue ſome ſentence of my Law written vpon the poſtes of the dores: whē you are at ẏ table you ſhal haue ſomething thereof: yea, you ſhall beare my Law about you, and decke your ſelues therewith. Whereas others haue their bracelets and images of golde, you ſhall haue ſome parcell of my Lawe to put you in minde that your God ſpeaketh vnto you, and will not that you forget his doctrine: yea he will haue you to make fringes and other ornamentes thereof. And ſo whereas others haue their guildinges which ſerue to no other end but to pride and worldlie vanitie; you ſhal haue your garmentes decked with ſome ſentence or other of my Lawe: to the intent you may bee put in minde to ſay: Behold, it is my Gods wil that I ſhoulde delight my ſelfe with his Lawe, that I ſhould take my whole pleaſure therein, and that I ſhould adorne and deck my ſelfe therewithall. As touching my life, I will ſhew that I haue bin brought vp in his ſchoole. For ſeeing he hath ſo vnited himſelfe vnto me, his praiſe and glorie ought to ſhine in me before men that they may knowe I haue not bin circumciſed in vaine, nor receiued the ſigne of his couenant for naught, to be coupled vnto the Church of God. According hereunto it is now ſayd, that the Iewes muſt make them fringes on the foure quarters of their garments, and put laces thereon. Now I tolde you that in ſo ſmall a thing, God meant to deliuer a good and profitable leſſon. For when the Iewes cloſed vp in this ſorte the endes. and borders of their garments, which were otherwiſe made than ours are, they were admoniſhed thereby, that God ruled them as if they had bin tyed by the heele. As who ſhould ſay: When thou walkeſt thou muſt keepe thy ſelfe in the way of thy GOD, and bee ſo hedged in for thy whole lyfe time, ẏ thou paſſe not meaſure. I graunt this might ſerue well for honeſtie to ty their clothes ſo with ſmall cordes, or laces, ẏ they might couer their whole bodies. For being opē & vnſowed on both ſides, it wold haue bin an vnſightlie thing if they ſhoulde not haue bin tyed. This might then ſerue wel for honeſt comlines. But there is in it a higher reaſon than ſo, as is expreſſed in ẏ ſame place of Numbers.

bers:that is to wit, that God meant to betoken thereby, ſome ſuch admonition as this: ſee if a man haue his legges vnbound and at will, hee is gadding by and by & leaping: but thy God will haue thee to haue theſe laſes tyed in this maner to teache thee ſo to meaſure all thy paces, yͤ the law of thy God may euer rule thee, & that thou maiſt obſerue it in all pointes, and neuer turn aſide from it. Ye ſee then in effect what we haue to beare in mind vpon this place. Now this Ceremonie is no longer in vſe, theſe fringes and theſe laces are compriſed vnder thoſe ſhadowes which were done away at the comming of Chriſt. But yet at this day let vs note, that Gods will is that we ſhould exerciſe vs in his Law in all reſpectes. And ſeeing we are out of this bõdage which ſerued for yong children, let vs know we ought to be ſo much the more earneſt in minding the law of God: ſo as we be warned and aduertiſed by theſe fringes and laſes and other like things, that our Lordes will is that his lawe ſhould ſerue vs for a reſtraint, to teach vs that wee haue not yet the libertie to doe what we liſt, but that our handes and feete, ſoules and ſenſes, and all the partes of our bodies and affections of our mindes, bee held reſtrained by his biddings and forbiddings. And ſo much the more heedefully ought we to note this, becauſe we ſee how mẽ haue alwayes dalyed with God and peruerted all ſounde doctrine. For the Iewes bare themſelues in hand, that they had diſcharged their whole dutie, whẽ they made faire large fringes and had written on them goodly ſentences of the ſcripture in great capitall letters. This was all their holynes, as our Lord Ieſus vpbraideth the Scribes, yͤ Phariſees, & Prieſts: who becauſe they would haue a more ſpeciall holyneſſe than the common ſorte; had great large gardes, & vppon them ſentences of yͤ lawe written which might bee ſeene afarre off. After which maner when the Monks haue their Frockes, & their Coules and all the reſt of their baggage vpon them, O they are no leſſe than halfangels. & yet in the meane time, vnder theſe holy veſtimentes, they ſhrowde vile and wicked deſires, yea and ſuch outragious enormities, as ſhew them to be monſters made contrarie to all nature. And ſo was it at yͤ time. And why? For the world thinketh to pay God with hypocriſie. We ought therefore ſo much yͤ more heedefullie to note yͤ meaning & the trueth of the Law; that is to wit, that our Lorde maketh no account of this ſmaller traſh, yͤ men ſhould haue either fringes, or laſes on yͤ skirtes of their garmentes; but his wil is that men ſhould exerciſe themſelues in his doctrine, & apply it to the proper vſe. Seeing then it is ſo, let vs aduiſe our ſelues well, and not abuſe the libertie which is giuen vs in yͤ Goſpell; but let vs be aſhamed, if being come to yͤ age of men, we haue no wit in compariſon of the fathers which liued vnder the Lawe, to frame our ſelues vnto the wil of God. In deede in reſpect of our ſelues wee are but little children; but yet in cõpariſon of the people of olde time, we ſhould be olde ones, & full & ripe in yeeres. Let vs then be aſhamed if yͤ Law of God which ſhould ſerue vs for a bond cannot holde vs backe, but we are carryed headlong into all wickedneſſe. Let vs bethinke vs of keeping our ſelues in ſuch an eſtate, as we may ſhew that God hath not without good cauſe ſhooled vs out vnto his ſeruice, that we will not take ſuch lawles libertie, as the ignorant and vnbeleeuing do, who haue no guide nor direction.

Matt.23.5.

Now let vs kneele downe before the face of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him yͤ being touched with liuely repẽtance, we may runne vnto him who hath the remedie in his hand to help vs: And pray we him that of his gooodneſſe and fatherlie courtoſie he will beare with vs vntil he hath clothed vs with that fulnes of righteouſneſſe and holyneſſe whereunto we tend. And let vs notwithſtanding not ceaſe to bewaile our ſelues before him, vntill he haue fully deliuered vs from all thoſe ſtaines which are in vs. And ſo let vs ſay, Almighty God and heauenly Father, &c.

On Tewſday the xiiii. of Ianuarie. 1556.

The Cxxviij. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the two and twentith Chapter.

13 If a man take a wife, and when he hath lyen with her, hate her,

14 And laye ſlaunderous things vnto her, and bring vp an euil reporte of her, and ſay: I toke this wife, and when I came to her I found her not a maide:

15 Then ſhall the father and the mother of the maide take the ſignes of her virginitie and bring them forth before the elders vnto the gate.

16 And the maids father ſhall ſay vnto the elders: I gaue my daughter vnto this man to wife, and hee hateth her:

17 And lo he layeth ſlaunderous things to her charge: ſaying, I founde not thy daughter a mayde: notwithſtanding beholde the tokens of my daughters virginitie. And they ſhal ſpreade the veſtures before the elders of the Citie.

18 Then the elders of the Citie ſhall take that man and chaſtice him.

19 And ſhall condemne him in an hundred pieces of ſiluer, and giue them vnto the father of the maide: becauſe he hath brought vp an euil report vpon a maide of Iſraell, and ſhe ſhalbe his wife, and he may not put her away as long as he ſhall lyue.

20 But if this thing be true that the young woman be not founde a maide :

21 Then ſhal they bring forth the maide to the doore of her fathers houſe, & the men of the Citie ſhall ſtone her with ſtones, and ſhe ſhall die : becauſe ſhe hath doone leawdly in Iſraell, by playing the whore in her fathers houſe, and ſo thou ſhalt put away the euill from a mong you.

22 If a man be founde lying with a woman married vnto an husband : they ſhall die euen both twaine : namely the man which lay with the wife, and the wife her ſelfe. And ſo thou ſhalt take away the euill out of Iſrael.

23 If a mayde be betrothed vnto a husband, and a man finde her in the Citie and lye with her:

24 Then ſhal yee bring them both vnto the gate of the Citie, and ſtone them with ſtones that they die: the mayde becauſe ſhe cried not out being in the citie, and the man becauſe he hath humbled his neighbours wife, and ſo ſhalt thou take away this euil from among you.

ALl this which we haue here recited ſerueth to declare what ſpeciall care God hath, that chaſtitie ſhould be maintained among his people. And hereof wee may gather this, that if whoredomes haue their full ſkope among vs, it is ſuch an abomination in the ſight of God, that it prouoketh his wrath and vengeance. And that people muſt needes be accurſed, among whom there is a lawles libertie to goe a whorehunting, and where this vile filthineſſe is not clenſed. Ye ſee then in effect whereunto we muſt apply this whole doctrine. But yet for all that, we muſt note the thinges as they are ſet down here, to the intent we may apply euery point vnto his vſe. Firſt of all therefore our Lord ſheweth, that by great reaſon he ought to be chaſtiſed, which bringeth vp a ſlaunderous report vpon any body: for euery mans eſtimation ought to bee maintained. Moreouer, that if a man or woman complayne that he is wrongfully accuſed, when notwithſtāding he is found faultie, his puniſhment ought to be doubled. And from this Lawe we may gather a good leſſon. We know how it is ſayd : yͭ a mans good name is better and more precious than either golde or ſiluer. And if a man bee once paſt ſhame, it is a ſure token that he is wedded to all wickedneſſe. It is natural therefore to euery man, to maintayne his credite. In deede we muſt not be ambitiouſly giuen, as they which couet naught elſe but to bee eſteemed of men. Rom 12,17 Wo woorth vs if we goe that way to worke. But we ought (as Saint Paul ſayth) to procure that which is good, not onely in conſcience before God, but alſo in the ſight of men; to the intent that we be not a ſtumbling blocke of offence, and that men take vs not for a buckler, when they will doe amiſſe, and alledge, and did not ſuch a one doe ſo? For what a thing were it if men ſhould take occaſion by vs, to offend God? Ye ſee then to what end we ought to maintayne our credit as much as lyeth in vs.

And for this cauſe it is ſayd here, that if any after that he hath taken a woman to wife, accuſeth her that ſhe behaued herſelf lewdlie before he tooke her, then the father and the mother ſhall come and maintaine the honeſtie of their daughter: and the man which ſhall bee found to haue wrongfullie charged her whome hee had eſpouſed, ſhall bee puniſhed both in his bodie and in his purſe : and their daughter ſhall ſo remaine with him, that he may neuer bee diuorced from her. Wee ſee now how God would not ſuffer the husband to accuſe the wife wrongfully, and therefore by greater reaſon it may bee concluded, that it is not lawfull for a ſtraunger to ſlaunder one in reſpect of chaſtitie which is foūd innocent. For the husband might alledge that he hath more libertie to doe ſo, becauſe hee is her head and ſuperiour. But in any wiſe God wil not that a woman bee falſely accuſed, and hee commaundeth that the husband ſhould bee puniſhed for ſo doing, yea, and that in his very perſon. For beſides that monie which is here ſet downe, there was a further appointed correction by the Iudges. And let vs note that this was done, not onely to maintaine the womans good name, but alſo to moue women the more to liue chaſte, when God declareth himſelfe the protectour of their honeſtie. When we ſee that God hath this care that they which liue honeſtly and wout reproofe haue their good name alſo maintained, and that the husband ſhal be chaſtiſed if he ſlaunder his wife : when God (I ſay) abaſeth himſelfe to execute this office; ſhould women be ſo beaſtly and wicked as to giue themſelues ouer to vnchaſt villanie? No : for ſurelie this priuiledge cannot be to highly eſteemed, & yet they make a ſkorne of it. Ye ſee then what the end is which God amed at, and what wee haue to beare in minde in this Lawe.

Now withall let vs note, that when Iudges and Magiſtrates are warned of their office, euery one in particular ought to gather an inſtruction hereby. As how? If a falſe reporte be raiſed on one which is innocent; the office of them which beare the ſword, is to maintaine the good name of euery one. That is it which God commaundeth them. As for vs on our ſide, let vs not waite for our puniſhment at the handes of Iudges and Magiſtrates for falſe accuſing of any : But let vs keepe our ſelues from all ſlaundering, ſith it is a thing which ſo highly diſpleaſeth GOD. Let vs therefore take heede how wee open our mouth to ſtayne any mans credit. And why? becauſe that howſoeuer men beare with vs for it, yet it diſpleaſeth God. In deed he hath cōmaunded that it ſhould bee puniſhed. But whether men punniſh it or winke at it; yet God will alwayes ſhewe that he wil not ſuffer the perſon of any man to be wrōgfully greeued. Ye ſee then, how the thing which we haue to beare in minde, is that wee muſt liue vprightly together and take heede that none be falſly charged or ſlaundered, and that if there be any wickedneſſe, we muſt doe our beſt to take it away. But to deale vppon hatred and ill will or to be ſo maliciouſly bent to ſlaundering as to backbite our neighbors, or to be venemous tounged, and to diffame one another: is ſuch an outragious fault as God can in no wiſe ſuffer.

But on the otherſide let vs note, that as Gods will is that ſuch as be innocent ſhould be mainteined in their good reputation: ſo contrariwiſe if any man complaine that he hath wrong done him and yet be found faultie and is conuicted of the cryme of which he ſayd he was cleare; hee deſerueth to be dubblie puniſhed, as wee haue thereof here an example. If a mans daughter make complaint againſt her husband, & her father and mother take her part: well, reaſon is they ſhal be heard to ſpeake. But if the young woman be found faultie, and haue behaued her ſelfe amiſſe; although it were before ſhee was marryed, before ſhee was bounde to her husbande, before ſhee was betrothed: yet for all this it is Gods will that ſhee bee ſtoned. And why? for it is a kinde of theft, if one knowing himſelfe faultie, will for all that be ſo ſhameleſſe, as to chalenge vnto himſelfe the honor which appertaineth not vnto him. If a man haue offended, he muſt caſt his eyes to the ground: If one accuſe vs, we muſt be ſory and deſire God to burie our faults. Now contrarywiſe if we be ſo ſhameleſſe and bolde to wrye our mouth, and to ſay, tuſh wee did no ſuch thing: what a preſumptuouſneſſe is that? And yet notwithſtanding nothing is more common nowadays than that. For they which are the leawdeſt of all other, if a man giue them a nippe for their vices, yea though it be afarre off, wil make greateſt outcryes, and if their credit be not mainteined, O how they thūder? Who are they which nowadayes doe beare the countenance of honeſt men? Euen a ſort of raſcalles which are nothing worth, and in whom is nothing but vtter naughtines. He that is an honeſt man in deede, is almoſt aſhamed to be called an honeſt man, becauſe the title of honeſtie which ſhould haue bin holy, is ſo defiled. For euery man vnhalloweth it, becauſe euery man chalengeth it, & the veryeſt naughtipackes and the leawdeſt perſons (as I ſayd afore) doe clayme it moſt boldly. For not onely euery man with full mouth, vaunteth himſelfe to bee an honeſt, ſound, and truedealing man: but alſo if ye blame him, although he be neuer ſo faultie, he will threaten you with an action of ſlaunder. And if ſuch be an hundred times cōuicted they make none account of it. But our Lorde ſpeaketh otherwiſe thereof: his will is that whoſoeuer chalengeth vnto himſelfe that credite which is not his due, ſhould bee double puniſhed: ſo as if hee deſerued to be whipped, hee ſhould bee put to death, becauſe hee abuſeth Iuſtice in ſuch ſorte, and maketh a ſkorne of it; and would that men ſhould iudge him for an honeſt and good man, when there is apparāt wickednes in him. Ye ſee then heere a point which is well woorth the noting, namely that as Iudges & Magiſtrates are bound to mainteine the good name of them which are faultles: ſo alſo on ẏ contrarie ſide, if they ſee men ſhameles which would be mainteined vnder colour of Iuſtice, and enioy the priuiledge of good men & of ſuch as haue liued honeſtly and without reproofe, they ſhould vſe the greater rigor and ſeueritie towards them. And why? Becauſe if they had ſtolē but fiue ſhillings, they ſhould haue beene puniſhed: but now they haue ſtolen ẏ which is much more worth, that is to wit, the name of vertue. And from whō ſteale they it? Euen from al good men. For they would put themſelues in the aray of ſuch as haue walked in the feare of God and in al honeſt conuerſation before men: they would be eſteemed for good men, whom they defile w.th their filthines and corruptiōs by mingling themſelues in amōgeſt them. So then foraſmuch as they make ſuch a confuſion, they deſerue to bee ẏ more grieuouſly puniſhed. If one play the theefe, and will for al that iuſtifie himſelfe, & bee quitted from the crime which is laid againſt him: if afterward hee bee conuicted thereof, whereas an other which ſhal haue committed but ſingle theft deſerueth to be whipped; the former ought to be led to the gallowes. For it is robberie committed againſt God, when he would be ſo quitted & cleared vnder the colour of Iuſtice, as who would ſay, I wil bee accounted guiltles [whoſoeuer ſayes nay to it.] Such manner of dealing is a defiling of the throne of Iuſtice, and a ſpoiling of mens eſtimation, which haue liued wel (as I haue ſaid afore) and the next way to confound al things, ſo as no man may know any longer how to diſcerne betweene good and euil. And all this would come to paſſe if this wickednes ſhould be admitted & ſuffered to haue his ſway. This is the thing which we haue to beare in minde.

But now when we know that Gods wil is that men ſhould proceed according to Iuſtice, there is compriſed herein a warning for vs all: namely that we ſhould haue an eie vnto our conſcience that it be pure, ſo as if men accuſe vs, God may anſwere for vs, and be as it were our warrāt. The thing (ſay I) which is ſhewed vs in this place, & which we may gather hereupon, is, that if we be accuſed, we may ſay it is wrongfully. And before whom? Before God. For it wil not boote vs at al to bee iuſtified before men. Our wickedneſſe may wel bee hidden, wee may borrowe ſome cloke for it, but yet for all that GOD alloweth not of vs. And what ſteede then ſhall all the reſt ſtande vs in? Nay and if we bee ſo ſhameleſſe, (as we ſee nowadayes many are,) that albeit their wickedneſſe be knowen euen to little children, yet they care not, ſo they be not conuicted by two or three witneſſes: what a thing is that? Therefore if wee haue a care of our good name, let vs firſt of all walke in ſuch vprightneſſe before God, that if we be charged wrongfully with any thing, wee may call God to cleare vs, and haue our recourſe vnto him to ſay, Lord thou knoweſt that I finde my ſelfe guiltleſſe, vouchſafe therefore to ſtretch foorth thy hande, as thou haſt promiſed, to defende mine innocẽcie, as the ſcripture ſaith ẏ God wil make Pſal.37.6. ẏ righteouſneſſe of his ſeruants to ſhine forth as the breake of the day. Nowe therefore when wee bee falſely diffamed, let vs waite vntill GOD redreſſe it, and let vs knowe that in the ende, when wee haue beene humbled for a time, hee will make manifeſt the iniurie that men haue done vs. But let vs alwayes haue our recourſe vnto him: which thing cannot bee, except we be well aſſured of our owne innocency. And moreouer let vs take heede that we liue ſo with men, that if wee bee accuſed they may bee conſtrained to ſay: It is wrongfully: or at the leaſt they may bee aſtoniſhed & ſay, What meaneth this? This man hath liued ſo honeſtly, that he neuer deſerued any euil report. So let our life aunſwere for vs, notwithſtanding that men report euill of vs. Yee ſee in what ſort we are here to proceede.

And becauſe heere is expreſſe mention made of women, let them which will haue the good report of chaſtitie, take heede to walke in ſuch ſort as no ſuſpition may be raiſed on them, nor any occaſion bee giuen of ſpeaking euil of them. But what? We ſee nowadayes many ſlie dames which play the harlottes cloſely; who becauſe the worlde doeth not charge them with it, will needs be counted for honeſt women. And what tokens ſhewe they thereof? Yee ſee then howe the thing which wee haue to gather vppon this which God hath ſet downe here, is, That if a father or a mother complaine, and the daughter be founde voide of all crime, that ſhe ſhall haue her eſtimation maintained: and on the other ſide, that if ſhee bee found guiltie, ſhe ſhalbe the more grieuouſly puniſhed, euen by ſtoning to death, albeit ſhee haue not played the harlot before time, becauſe ſhe hath cõplained wrongfully, and hath commenced her action in forme of Lawe, and vniuſtly claimed vnto her ſelf that honourable title, which ſhee through her owne fault hath loſt. And hereby we may perceiue, that wee muſt not forbeare to puniſh offences, for feare of falſe accuſation. For nowadayes if a man woulde beleeue many men, there ſhoulde be no lawes to puniſh faultes and offences. And they alleage that it is done to ſhunne other inconueniences: yea, but ſhall wee in the meane while giue way to all lawleſſe behauiour, and ſhake off all yoke and all correction from vs? What then woulde come therof in the ende, but beaſtly confuſion in all places? And therefore although ſometime there may bee feare of falſe accuſations and ſlaunders, yet muſt wee not leaue the vſe of chaſtiſements and corrections, ſo far forth as reaſon and indifferencie require, but remedies ought to bee prouided againſt thẽ, as we ſee howe our Lord doth heere, in that hee willeth that the caſe be tried, if an husband raiſe a falſe report vppon his wife. Now then there muſt bee an orderly and lawfull manner of proceeding on both ſides; ſo as the wickednes may not remaine vnpuniſhed, and alſo that ſuch as are innocent bee maintained, and that meane obſerued which our Lord ſheweth vs. Ye ſee in effect what we haue to note vppon this place.

Let vs now returne vnto that generall point which we touched afore: namely, that God in al theſe lawes, declareth what a pleaſãt thing chaſtitie is in his eyes: and contrariwiſe howe hee cannot ſuffer the filthineſſe of whoredome to raigne among his people. For by ẏ puniſhments which are ſet downe here, wee may gather how grieuous and intollerable a wickedneſſe it is. And why? becauſe wee knowe that God exceedeth not meaſure, when hee puniſheth ſinnes, but that he doeth it with diſcretion. Let vs therfore conclude, that if the puniſhment bee rigorous, it is becauſe the ſinne alſo is great and exceſſiue. It is verie true that God doth not alwayes puniſh ſinnes as they deſerue; Inſomuch that hee permitteth a kinde of diuorcement among the Iſraelites, and alſo when a man played the fornicatour, hee was diſcharged ſo hee promiſed marriage vnto the maide and tooke her vnto wife. But albeit our Lorde in reſpect of the hardneſſe of that peoples heart, ordeyned not always ſuch preciſe lawes as to puniſh them according vnto their deſertes: yet wee ſhall not erre at all, if wee make this concluſion, namely, that if God haue puniſhed any fault of theirs, it is to declare vnto vs that the thing diſpleaſed him, and that it is not to be borne withal, and that wee prouoke his anger: and therefore that wee muſt ſtoope vnto him, ſith wee ſee that hee hath appointed certaine puniſhmentes, & that it ſhall coſt vs deare if we become not the better by them.

And this is the cauſe why S. Paul declareth that the puniſhmentes which God hath executed, are as lookingglaſſes & liuely pictures, becauſe we may gather thereby, that God will bee alwayes a iuſt Iudge to execute the like vengeance vpon them which reſtraine not themſelues willingly from the like wickedneſſe, by beholding the warning which hee hath giuen them. 1.Cor.10.6. As how? He alledgeth that God puniſhed thoſe which were rebellious amõg his people, ſo grieuouſly that the earth opened and ſwallowed them vp which did ſet vp themſelues againſt Moſes and Aaron. Againe wee ſee howe their luſtes were puniſhed in that GOD thundered downe from heauen vppon them. Indeede hee ſent them the meate which they deſired: but it had beene much better for them to haue ſtarued for hunger, than to haue payed ſo deare for their ſhotte, as to ſwallowe vp the vengeance of God together with their meate, which they vnlawfully deſired. As for whoredome, there was ſo grieuous a puniſhment for it, and the wrath of God was ſo kindled againſt his people that they were like to haue beene vtterly rooted out. Seeing then that we haue ſuch warninges (ſaith S. Paul) let vs learne to feare and take heede, that we tempt not God wittingly. For this is al one as if wee woulde defie him, if when wee ſee him ſet vs ſuch a barre and to threaten vs by other mens harmes, yet wee ceaſe not to followe the ſame wickedneſſe. This is al one (ſay I) as if we woulde defie him, and proclaime open warre againſt him. So then let vs learne, that when God ordayneth any execution of puniſhment, it is not only to the intent that he which hath offended ſhoulde bee chaſtiſed: but alſo that wee ſhoulde take it for a rule to learne howe to behaue our ſelues as we ought, and not be ſo ſenſeleſſe as to caſt our ſelues headlong into wickedneſſe, ſeeing our leſſon ſo written before our eies. And ſo to bee ſhort, let all the corrections which are contained in the Lawe ſerue vs for ſo manie bridles to reſtraine vs withal; and let them teach vs to walke in the feare of God, or at leaſt let vs take them for preſeruatiue medicines, and let vs not tarie till the miſchiefe light on vs, but prouide for our ſelues before hande and pray God that hee ſo guide vs as we taſte not of his anger. And let vs put that in practiſe alſo which S. Paul Ephe.5.6. ſaieth ſpeaking of adulteries and ſuch like things that no man deceiue vs with vaine words. Take heede ſaieth hee yee bee not deceiued: for the worlde diſpenſeth eaſilie with it ſelfe euen ſo far as to dallie ẘ God, & to ſet his iuſtice at nought: but bee not you deceiued in that behalfe (ſaieth hee) for the wrath of God commeth vppon the children of diſobedience for thoſe things. Nowe if God by puniſhing of ſinnes ſheweth howe hee deteſteth them, in that hee ſetteth downe a law in writing, and appointeth Iudges and Magiſtrates to execute that which he commaundeth, I pray you is it not a moſt certaine warning, and ſuch a one as ought to touch vs more neare the quicke? And if for all this we will be ſtubborne and hardhearted in our wickedneſſe, is it not a ruſhing with our hornes againſt God, as I haue ſaide alreadie? [Yes ſurely]. And therefore let vs note that ſeeing God hath puniſhed aduowtries ſo grieuouſly, it is to ſhewe vnto vs, that it is ſo great a filthineſſe as cannot but nouriſhe his wrath and vengeance. Therefore his will is that aboue all thinges faithfulneſſe ſhould bee kept in marriage.

Now here the ſpeciall caſe is of adulteries. Without doubt all kinde of whoredome diſpleaſeth God. For we muſt euer returne backe to this principle or grounde, that ſith God bleſſed man and woman, when he ioyned them in marriage, he curſeth all whoredome, accordingly as the Apoſtle alſo ſaieth, That marriage is holy & Heb.13.4. honourable: inſomuch that when the bedde is dedicated vnto the name of God; that is to ſay, when the parties are ioyned together in his name, and do liue honorablie, it is as it were an halowed eſtate: but adulterers and fornicatours God will iudge. He ſpeaketh not onely of adulterers, that is to ſay of ſuch as haue broken their owne marriage and the marriage of others, but alſo hee ſpeaketh generally and without exception of all them which giue ouer themſelues vnto any manner of whoredome, in reſpect whereof S. Paul ſaieth alſo that not onely adulterers are 1.Cor.6.9. ſhut out & baniſhed from ẙ kingdome of God, but fornicatours alſo. And againe we ſee that when hee ſpeaketh of ſuch as liue a wicked and looſe life, and therfore ought to be excommunicated and caſt out of the Church; hee ſpeaketh not alonely of adulterers, but of fornicators alſo. And the reaſon why, is moſt worthie noting. For what are our bodies and ſoules, but the temples of the holy Ghoſt? Seeing God vouchſafeth vs this honour to dwell in our ſoules and bodies, is it not great reaſon that they ſhoulde bee kept holy and vndefiled? And if a man ſoyle himſelfe by coupling himſelfe with an harlot, is it not all one as if he woulde teare in pieces the bodie of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt? Let vs therfore note that generally God deteſteth all kindes of whooredome.

But hee ſpeaketh in this place of adulteries, becauſe in them there is the greater villanie. And why? becauſe if a maide promiſe marriage and falſifie the faith ſhe hath plighted, ſhee defileth not onely her owne bodie, and ſo conſequently violateth the temple of God, but ſhe alſo diſhonoreth her husbande with whome ſhee was coupled, ſo that ſhe robbeth another of his good, yea of ſuch good as cannot bee recompenſed with golde or ſiluer. For ſhe ſetteth him forth vnto open ſhame, for whom (if neede ſo required) ſhee ſhould ſpend her life. Is it meete then that it ſhould be ſuffered? Therefore let vs note that whereas our Lordes will is, that the maides which haue promiſed marriage ſhoulde be ſtoned if they commit whoredome: it is becauſe they haue committed villany againſt their husbandes in not keeping their faith to whome they were betrothed. And therefore he wil that ſuch a fornicatour bee likewiſe puniſhed. And why? Becauſe hee robbeth an other man of his good name, and breaketh an holy and ſacred promiſe. Men puniſh falſifiers and forgers: As for example: if a man ſteale a publike Recorde [as an indenture, deede, bonde, or ſuch like] or falſifie it, he ſhalbe grieuouſly puniſhed. & is not marriage a greater thing than a contract of an hundred crownes, or a bargaine of an houſe or of land? This caſe concerneth the fellowſhip of two reaſonable creatures, yea and their fellowſhip for life and death; the caſe concerneth an holy bande which God himſelfe hath ſtabliſhed among vs, yea and that to this intent that al cõfuſion ſhould be taken out of the world, ſo as we ſhould not be like vnto brute beaſtes which couple together ẘout any difference, but that ẙ mã ſhoulde haue his wife & the wife her husbande. And if this be violated and taken away, al order of nature is corrupted. If we play the blinde buſſards and winke at ſuch geare, & ſo let it ſlip: let vs not deceiue our ſelues for all that; for God will requite it with horrible reuenge. And we ſee it is not without cauſe that God hath ſo grieuouſly puniſhed the fornications of ſuch as had promiſed or betrothed themſelues vnto husbands.

And if this bee ſo with them, what ſhall bee ſaide of the wife which is alreadie married? For ſhee is giuen to an husbande to helpe him to gouerne his houſe in the name of god; & if ſhe giue her ſelfe ouer ſo villainouſly vnto whoredome, ſhee not onely robbeth her husbande of his good name, and worketh him a great outrage, but ſhe ſpoileth alſo the name of the whole familie: For ſhee playeth the whore with another man, and the children which ſhe beareth, through that whoredome, doe beare the name of her husband. And againe the goods and ſubſtance of the man are taken from the lawfull children, and be giuen to baſtardes which haue no title thereunto. And is not yͭ a more wicked villanie, than if one had broken vp an houſe, rifled all the coffers, ſpoyled and taken away all things, and committed the greateſt robberies in the worlde? Yes verily, and it ought leſſe to bee borne withall: and that knewe the heathen men well ynough. If we had no more but the Lawe of Moſes, yet ought we to be more aſhamed to ſee whoredome nowadayes ſo eaſily pardoned, and ſo ſmall account to be made of it. But when the heathen men teach vs our leſſon, and vſe better order by a great deale than thoſe which at this day call themſelues Chriſtians, I pray you what a witneſſe will that be againſt vs at the latter day? Blind men haue beene of more clearer ſight than we. Wee Chriſtians ſay continually, that Ieſus Chriſt hath brought a true declaration of the Lawe, to the intent we ſhoulde knowe that that is our perfect holineſſe which is there contained. Indeede hee added nothing thereunto. But yet neuertheleſſe wee ought to bee better learned than the fathers which liued before the Goſpel. But how profite we? There is no account made nowadaies of whoredome. Wedlocke is broken, faith is falſified; & yet men make no reckning of it, it paſſeth ſcotfree. In what ſtate then thinke yee are wee? If men will ſhifte the matter by ſaying, Oh ſir yee muſt beare with our weakeneſſe; thinke wee it ſhalbee taken for payment before God? Is not his worde alwayes vnreuocable? Is it not all one as if he ſhoulde ſay: Haue yee no care of that which I commaunde you? And what are yee? Are you trowe yee wiſer than I? Well, I will make you to knowe that I am your Iudge. And let vs note well that the ſinne and wickedneſſe is doubled, when men cannot finde in their hearts to yeelde vnto that which God hath once ſpoken, but will needes choppe Logike with him. So then let vs knowe that there is a double woe threatened vs when wee ſee God on the one ſide ſpeaketh vnto vs and telleth vs that whoredome is ſuch a peſtilent infection as hee can in no wiſe ſuffer it, and that hee declareth when marriage which hee hath dedicated in his name is corrupted, that it muſt needes bee puniſhed. When wee heare that God proceedeth vnto ſuch ſeueritie, and alſo ſee, that euen onely by nature hee hath inſpired the heathen to knowe that there coulde bee no order among men, except whoredome ſhoulde be ſeuerely puniſhed, what are wee able to ſay? Nowe then firſt of all whereas it is ſaide heere, that a maide which hath betrothed her ſelfe vnto an husbande ſhal bee ſtoned with the fornicator, if ſhee ſuffer herſelfe to bee defiled: wee muſt vnderſtande that ſeeing ſhee was ſo leawde as to falſifie her faith, yea and that in ſo holy and ſacred a thing as is marriage, our Lord eſteemed her as one giuen ouer to all vice and ſinne. For a woman which plaieth the harlot, is alreadie worſe than a thief, becauſe ſhee hath done much worſe in working her husbande ſuch wrong and villanie, than if ſhe had robbed him of his monie. Moreouer wee muſt returne to this point, namely to conſider of the promiſe that is made in marriage of howe great importance it is. For we knowe to what ende marriage was ordained, namelie, to the intent that men ſhoulde liue honeſtlie together, and that there ſhould be no ſuch beaſtlie looſeneſſe of coupling themſelues together like dogges and bitches, or like bulles and kyne, but that they ſhoulde ſhewe that they beare not the likeneſſe of God in vaine. Seeing then that marriage is ordained vnto this ende; if men will walk cleane contrarie, is it not an open defiance of God? Is it not a plucking of him out of his throne, and ſuch a wyping out of his image as men can no more know themſelues: but become as bulles and dogges? Therfore when men fall to ſuch extremitie, muſt not God ſhew forth his anger?

But let vs alwayes returne vnto that point which wee named before; that as this commandement is giuen vnto Iudges and Magiſtrates touching ciuill order, ſo ought euerie of vs to be admoniſhed of his duetie, that wee walke more carefully in our vocatiō. If ſuch as beare yͤ ſcepter of iuſtice in their hands, do ſuffer whoredom to raigne and wedlocke to bee broken, ſo as neither faith nor promiſe be kept any longer: they ſhall yeeld an account hereof vnto God. But yet for all that, let vs looke vnto our ſelues, and let euerie man ſo walke, as yͭ he haue not God for his iudge. For what ſhall we winne by ſcaping yͤ hands of men ſo as our offence is not perceiued, or elſe we bee by ſome wicked ſhifts & practiſes quit from puniſhment, and no man ſayes a word vnto vs. Yet for al that, we muſt come to our reckening before God, who will not loſe one iot of his right. Although men be negligent or play the blinde men, yet will God in the end ſhew that he forgate no peece of our doings, but regiſtred thē euerie one in his book. Let vs therfore take heed we walke in ſuch ſort, as wee eſteeme highly of mariage. And foraſmuch as wee ſee yͭ God beareth rule ouer it and accurſeth al adulterers and fornicatours, let that moue vs to be helde in the greater feare and carefulneſſe. We ſee howe the Paynims for al their ſuperſtitions and ydolatries, had yet I knowe not what a blind motion, whereby they were perſwaded for the better maintaining of marriages that their gods or rather ydolles were the protectours thereof. And why thought they ſo? It was euen of a meere follie. I graunt it: but yet this folly of theirs proceeded from a good grounde. They were corrupted with ſuperſtitions and had imbrewed it with their inuentions and errors. But yet neuertheleſſe, this alwayes remained, & was ſo engrauen in their mindes as it coulde not bee wiped out, that God meant there ſhould be ſuch a marke in marriage and that men ſhould know that hee had a care of it . Seeing it is ſo, let vs take good heede that wee make not God our enimie and aduerſarie partie, which doubtleſſe we ſhall doe, if wee falſifie the faith of marriage . If a man lay waite for an other mans wife, if a woman giue her ſelfe ouer to a whoremonger, bee ſhee married or be ſhe betrothed, if they falſifie the promiſe which they plighted , and breake ẏ faith which they gaue; it is all one as if they waged battle with God, and they ſhall feele that they deale with too hard a match. Let vs therefore walke in ſuch ſtayedneſſe, as our Lord may accept of vs, and that we may finde fauour in his ſight: Let euerie of vs reſiſt his wicked luſts, and not giue our ſelues the bridle to ouer leape our bounds ſo farre as to venter to corrupt ſo holy an order.

Nowe if the puniſhment be ſo grieuous when a maide which is but betrothed committeth fornication : much more reaſon is it that it ſhould bee ſo in a married woman, as I ſaide afore. And why? Becauſe ſhee wrongeth her husband, ſhee ſetteth him out into open ſhame, ſhee ſpoileth alſo the name of his houſe, ſhee robbeth the children which are yet vnborne, ſhee robbeth thoſe which are alreadie begotten in lawfull wedlocke . When a woman is become ſuch a diuell, what other remedie can there bee, than to roote out the whole miſchiefe? And this is the cauſe why it is expreſly ſaide, Thou ſhalt put away the euill from thee. Heereby our Lorde ment to giue vs to vnderſtande, that if men ſuffer a woman vnpuniſhed whē ſhe is growen to ſuch wickedneſſe as not to pitie her owne children, they ſuffer a monſter to liue. For what may one think that woman to be but a monſter, which hath no regarde of her children, and which maketh no account to haue baſtardes mingled with lawfull children? And that is a thing contrarie to al nature. So then (as I haue tolde you) the fault muſt needes be extreme, when the puniſhment is ſo grieuous, that God will haue it ſerue vs for an example, and that they which haue been offenſiue by their life, ſhoulde ſerue for an inſtruction vnto others by their death, that they may learne to keepe themſelues chaſt. Thus yee ſee what we haue to beare in minde.

Nowe touching whooremaſters, they are guiltie of the like . Indeede the woman ſhall not be ſpared, becauſe ſhe hath falſified her faith towardes her husbande, and hath committed an vnpardonable crime . If a man rifle his neighbours coffer, hee ſhalbe puniſhed, & that not as a ſingle thiefe, but as a robber. But the whorehunter commeth to defile ẏ whole houſe, hee commeth to infect it with whoredome, hee commeth to robbe his neighbor of his honour, credite, and good name, and in ſteed of the right ſeede, hee through curſed and villanous falſeneſſe, deliuereth a ſtraunge and baſtarde ſeede. Therefore if a man commit ſuch a robberie, I pray you is it a ſinne to bee puniſhed with eight dayes impriſonment onely; and peraduenture by being put to breade and water, that is to ſay, to be feaſted at the tauerne ? For wee ſee that the puniſhmentes which are vſed nowadayes againſt adulterers and fornicatours are but a meere mockerie both of God, and of Iuſtice, and of Lawes, and of all ciuil order. For when a man is put in priſon for committing adulterie, or for playing of ẏ fornicator, it is al one as if he were put there for men to bring him euerie man his glaſſe of wine and to ſay, Taſte which is the beſt. If he were in his owne houſe, he would be contented with ordinarie: but there hee ſhal bee at greater choyce than if he were in a common tauerne. Euerie man will come to viſite him, yea forſooth, the poore priſoner muſt be pitied. Yee ſee what is ordinarily done in this behalfe. And as for my ſelfe, I haue prayed God that whoredome might rather goe vnpuniſhed , than proceede in that order as we ſee it doth nowadayes. For it is a ſetting of Iuſtice forth to open ſhame, and skorning of God and of all his commandementes. And therefore wee neede not to meruaile if whoredoms be ſo rife, ſeeing they which offende are ſent ſo to the tauerne. But let vs put the caſe that the Lawe were obſerued, and that adulterers and fornicatours were locked vp in cloſe warde, there to faſt with breade and water. What is al that? O, ſaies one, they ſhal faſt three dayes or (as ſome ſay) nine dayes. Yea but if a thiefe be taken and accuſed, he ſhal be indited, he ſhalbe clapt vp by the heeles in the ſtocks, he ſhalbe manacled and tyed with an halter, and in the ende ſent to the gallowes : or when hee ſcapeth beſt for ſome pettie filching, hee ſhall bee whipt. And why? Oh he is a thiefe, he hath robbed a man, hee hath cut a purſe in the open market place. And what hath the whooremunger done? Queſtionleſſe hee hath done worſe in entering into the bedde which God had hallowed in his owne name, than if he had committed all the theeueries in the worlde. Hee hath matched himſelfe in whoredome like a beaſt: and is not this an intollerable offence, and ſuch a one as ought to bee puniſhed to the full? If wee open not our eyes to beholde it, yet the Lawe of Moſes muſt needes condemne vs. But beſides this, the Painims (who haue obſerued a better order than wee, and haue had lawes to puniſh whoremongers and to cauſe wedlocke to be kept vndefiled) euen they ſhal riſe vp againſt vs in the latter day, and ſhall proue that we offended not of ignorance, or for lacke of warning, but of wilfull malice, becauſe wee woulde foſter ſuch wickedneſſe.

True it is indeede that this wicked cuſtome is come from great antiquitie, as the Papiſtes will ſay that wee are not vnder the Lawe but vnder grace, and therefore we muſt not puniſh whoredome. But it is a mocking of God when we take the Law of grace for a Lawleſſe libertie to commit all wickedneſſe. And albeit our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt puniſhed not the woman which was taken in adulterie; wee may not ſay therefore, that he hath giuen vs leaue to commit adultery. For why? Hee refuſed alſo to bee Iudge: and being deſired to part the inheritance betweene two brethren, he woulde not doe it. Muſt wee therefore ſay that ſuch partings are not lawfull?

Iohn.8.11

No. But this was to ſhewe that hee came not to bee an arbiter and a Iudge. Againe let vs note that he ſaith, No man accuſeth thee, therefore I condemne thee not. But withall let vs knowe, that he came not to take away the law of his father or to breake al order, or to make his church a hogges ſtye as it is nowadayes, by graunting men libertie to doe all manner of euill: No, No; Be it farre from vs to impute ſuch a crime vnto our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: for that were a blaſpheming of him aboue meaſure. But let vs know that whereas we haue here this law, it ought to ſerue vs for an inſtruction vnto the end of the worlde, that we may walke in ſuch chaſtitie, that when we haue kept mariages vndefiled among vs, wee may looke for the bleſſing of God which ſhall cauſe vs to proſper.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue done, and that we may be ſo clean ridde of all our wicked deſires, that renouncing all our vices, wee may dedicate both our ſoules and bodies vnto our good God, in ſuch ſort as he may be glorified in all things, and we keepe ſuch faithfulnes and truſtines one towardes another, as wee may thereby ſhewe that we are true brethren, and hee may receiue vs for his children: and that this may encourage vs to call vppon him, & to lift vp our harts vnto him, to approch more neare & neare vnto him & to cleaue vnto his righteouſnes in all purenes of heart. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace not only vnto vs but alſo to all people and Nations &c.

On Wedneſday the xv. of Ianuarie, 1556.

The Cxxix. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the two and twentith Chapter.

25 But if a man find a betrothed mayd in the field and force her, and lye with her: then the man which lay with her ſhall dye alone.

26 But vnto the mayd thou ſhalt doe nothing, becauſe there is in the mayde no ſin of death: for like as when a man riſeth againſt his neighbour and woundeth him to death, ſo is it in this caſe.

27 For hee founde her in the fieldes: and the betrothed mayde cried out and there was no man to reskewe her.

28 If a man finde a mayd which is not betrothed, and take her and lye with her, and they bee found:

29 Then the man that lay with her ſhal giue vnto the maydes father fiftie peeces of ſiluer, and ſhe ſhalbe his wife, becauſe he hath humbled her, and hee may not forſake her as long as he liueth.

30 No man ſhall take his fathers wife, nor vncouer the skyrte of his fathers garment.

ACcording to that which was hādled yeſterday, we ſee how GOD meant that wedlocke ſhould be faithfully obſerued. And it is good reaſon it be ſo, otherwiſe the whole order of nature muſt needes be ouerthrowne: For there is nothing which among men, ought to bee more ſtraitly kept and obſerued than this. Other couenants are faithfully to be kept in deede, but becauſe this exceedeth in holines, it ought to haue the greater reuerence. And therefore it is not without cauſe, that God hath decreed that he which meeteth with a betrothed maide and deflower her, ſhoulde dye without remiſſion. For why? Hee hath broken the couenaunt which ought to bee kept holy among all men: in making whereof Gods will is that his name ſhoulde be called vpon, to the intent that the parties might know that they are ioyned together with an inuiolable bond. Seeing then there is ſuch a rebelliō committed againſt God, it behoueth that the chaſtiſemēt be like & anſwerable therunto. And ſo we are yet better confirmed in this doctrine, that is to wit, that except we wil nouriſh the vengeance of God vpon vs, wee muſt obſerue wedlocke holylie. And we muſt not regarde what the common opinion is herein. For if wee will be wiſer than God, he knoweth wellynough howe to puniſh our diuelliſh pride; and wee ſhall be alwayes rewarded as we deſerue, if we will not vſe the remedie which God hath appointed vs in his Lawe. Indeede we are not bound vnto it preciſely in all points, (as hath beene alreadie noted, and ſhalbe yet farther declared hereafter:) but yet for all that, God warneth vs that if we ſuffer wedlocks to be broken, and graunt ſuch libertie that adulterers remaine vnpuniſhed; we muſt needes (as I haue told you) fall into horrible confuſion & extreme beaſtlineſſe.

Nowe by the way we muſt note further, that he which rauiſheth a maide, is heere likened to a thiefe which meeting with his neighbor ſleaeth him. He compareth him not wͭ one yͭ beateth his neighbor. This cōpariſon therfore doth euidently declare yͭ the act of it ſelf is beyond meaſure outragious & intollerable. For like as yͤ life of man is precious vnto God, ſo is the chaſtitie and the faith which is plighted in marriage. For the wife is linked vnto her husband to liue and to die with him. So then when this faith is once falſified, what honeſtie can there bee any longer amongſt men? Therefore God to ſhewe the grieuouſneſſe of the fault, ſaieth it is a kinde of open theeuerie and murther if a man meete with a maide & deflower her ſpecially by force. This is an vnpardonable offence. Moreouer, God doeth vs to vnderſtande that maides ought to make as great account of their chaſtitie, as of their life. For (as hath beene tolde you) if a maid fight not for her honeſtie, and her virginitie, doubtleſſe ſhee is not worthie to liue in yͤ worlde. For if ſhe crie not, but ſuffer her ſelfe to be defiled, ſhee muſt die without any pardon. Therefore our Lorde in this place againe declareth, that maides ought to behaue themſelues honeſtly: ſo as if they meete with any miſaduenture or finde any naughtipack which would entiſe them to naughtines, they muſt haue les regard of their life than of their good name, and rather ſuffer their throates to be cut, than their bodies to bee defiled, and to liue in ſuch ſhame. Yee ſee then in few words, what we haue to beare in mind vpon this place: becauſe the matter was handled ſo largely yeſterday, it may ſuffice to gather things briefly as neede ſhall require for yͤ words of Moſes. And here we ſee how it is not for vs to ſtand either vppon cuſtome or vpon mens fancies. For nowadayes if men alledge that adulterers are not puniſhed, they beare themſelues in hande yͭ it is a ſufficient buckler for their defence, and if they ſay, who complaineth of it? Ye ſee how god is ſhut out. Many men therfore beare themſelues in hand yͭ it is a reaſonable defence if they may ſay that all men vſe to doe ſo, it is the common cuſtome, it is the opinion of al men. But contrariwiſe we ſee here how God reſerueth alwaies his authority. Albeit that men corrupt thẽſelues through abuſe, although they flatter themſelues in their vices although they be of opinion that al is lawfull for them, yet notwithſtanding this excuſeth them not, neither impeacheth it Gods authoritie any whit at all. Nowe then, let not men lean vnto yͭ which is in cõmon vſe, neither yet let them therupon harden themſelues, but let them haue an eye vnto yͭ which God hath once cõmãded. For that muſt needs always keep his courſe. And indeed, we may ſee what corruptions haue riſen in the worlde, when men haue ſo ſwarued from the word of God after yͤ fancie of this man or that man. From thence haue all ſuperſtitions proceeded. Ye ſee how the Papiſts nowadays being beſotted in their follies, cannot bee brought back into yͤ right way of ſaluatiõ. For they beare thẽſelues in hand, yͭ they are ſufficiently armed with this ſhift of theirs yͭ of long time men haue liued as they doe, & that themſelues are not the inuenters of the religion which they holde. But (as I haue tolde you) this can ſerue them to no purpoſe, no more than it can ſerue for yͤ defence of adultery, to alledge yͭ it is not puniſhed nowadayes nor any account made of it. No: but God who is the heauenly Iudge, will in the end ſhewe that theſe are ſuch enormities as hee can in no wiſe ſuffer. Now yͭ which Moſes addeth proueth yͤ ſame thing which we touched yeſterday; namely, yͭ God did not always puniſh offences in ſuch ſort as by good right he might, I meane of puniſhing according to yͤ law which he gaue for yͤ ordering of the people of Iſrael. For he bare wͭ many things becauſe of the hardnes of that people, as our Lord Ieſus ſheweth them when hee ſpeaketh of diuorcements which were done againſt all reaſon & indifferencie. For hee ſaith here that if a man finde a maide, and yͭ ſhe without forcing yeelde herſelfe, that hee ſhalbe quit by giuing of money for the marriage of yͤ maide, & by taking of her to wife, and by being debarred of yͤ common liberty, that he may neuer forſake her. Now I grant that this was a chaſtiſement vnto yͤ man which had played the fornicator. But was it ſo grieuous as the fault required? Nay verily. What ſhall we ſay then? Did God permit whoredome, or ment he to lay yͤ bridle on their neck, or gaue he to vnderſtand therby, yͭ the ſin ſhould be pardoned? No, none of all this. For we haue ſhewed afore, that when God deliuered his lawe which conſiſteth in ten words, hee declared therin his will, and preſcribed men a certaine rule wherby they ſhould liue. Now that lawe is it which ſhall iudge vs at yͤ latter day, & it not onely ſerueth to condemne offenders vnto temporal puniſhmẽt, but alſo doth vs to vnderſtand that we muſt anſwere thereunto before the iudgement ſeate of God, to periſh for euer. Therfore when we ſhall haue eſcaped yͤ hands of men, yea and yͤ god ſhal haue winked at our faults, yet muſt we in yͤ ende come to our accoũt before him. Ye ſee then yͭ the law of God is to iudge vs. As for this it ſerued but for an earthly policie. And God (as I haue ſaide) reſpected not ſuch perfection as is required in yͤ faithfull; but rather bare with the hardnes of yͤ people, which was ſo ſturdy & ſo hard to be ruled. And albeit he puniſhed not thoſe diuorcements which were made againſt all indifferency, yet is it not to be ſaid therefore, that he permitted thẽ. For we heare how our Lord Ieſus Chriſt pronoũceth therof, That whoſoeuer forſaketh his wife & taketh another (except it be for adulterie, ſo that he can proue ſhe hath played yͤ whore) is an adulterer: and that whoſo taketh her to wife that is forſaken, committeth adultery alſo, and his mariage is not lawful, but deteſted of God. Euen ſo ſtãdeth yͤ caſe in that which we ſee in this place. For although God puniſheth him not ſeuerely which cõmitteth fornication wͭ a maide, it is not becauſe that whoredome is any way at all to bee pardoned. If it be not puniſhed by mẽ, yet god alwais hath his right reſerued. But this is done becauſe yͭ commonly in yͤ eſtate of gouernement, men wil ſooner puniſh thoſe faults wherby their own cõmodities are hindered, than wherby God is offended. Indeed yͤ Iudges & magiſtrats ought not to giue the bridle ſo far, that God ſhould bee mocked, yͭ his name ſhould be diſhonoured, or that al religion ſhould be trampled vnder foote, as wee haue ſeene heretofore that blaſphemies were more grieuouſly puniſhed thã murders. But when there is ſome by offence cõmitted, wherin there is no manifeſt deſpiſing of God to be ſeen; men will not purſue it ſo fierſly, as when a matter toucheth themſelues. So then, as touching yͤ fornicatiõ which Moſes ſpeaketh of in this place, foraſmuch as it concerneth the loſſe & diſcredit which is done vnto a man becauſe his daughter is kept back from prefermẽt in mariage: he that hath inueagled her muſt aſſigne her a dowry: & becauſe it may be that ſhe ſhall not find another match: therefore he muſt take her to wife if her father wil. And if he ſhould caſt her off againe wͭin a while after, ſhe ſhould be new to prouide againe. Therfore he muſt keepe her ſtill, and be ſo debarred of that common right which belonged to others, yͭ he may neuer forſake her. Ye ſee thẽ howe God prouideth for the commoditie of the partie. But yet for all this God is ſtill offended if 1.Cor.6,15 a man defile the temple of the holy ghoſt which is his bodie, and giue ouer the members of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt to ſuch wickednes. For we are all members of his bodie. And farther, when he goeth about to defile a maide which is yͤ temple of God and a member of the bodie of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, I ſay that the doing thereof is an ouer great confuſion. And yet for all that ſhee is not puniſhed; no, not by ciuill order: But yet the law of God remaineth alwayes in his eſtate, yͭ is to ſay, it is the rule which he hath giuẽ vs to liue by, which ſhall not bend at our pleaſure. To bee ſhort, God by giuing his Law, ment to frame vs vnto his obedience: and to ſhew vs our dutie towards him. And therfore yͤ law goeth roundly to work, & ſheweth vnto vs wherunto we are boũd.

Moreouer touching ciuil order, god had an eye vnto yͭ which yͤ weaknes of yͤ world might beare, & conformed himſelf therunto: & therfore there were many things which were not puniſhed by the law of Moſes. Neuertheles we are taught yͭ albeit our faults be not iudged by men, wee muſt not therfore fal aſleepe in our ſins. For we ſhall gaine little, though earthly iudges let vs alone, & we eſcape without puniſhment before them, if in yͤ meane time yͤ wrath of God encreaſe vpon vs: and becauſe he hath patiently waited our amẽdment, it grow more & more againſt vs, & we put Rom.2.4. that in vre which S. Paul ſaith, yͭ is to wit, that we hord vp to our ſelues a treaſure of yͤ greater condemnation. Let vs therefore learne not to haue ſuch reſpect vnto mẽ, that we think ſo our faults be not vpbraided vs by them, or ſo they accuſe vs not, or frame no inditement againſt vs, we be therfore quited. Nay let vs know, that it ſhould be good for vs ſomtimes to be awakened by mẽ. For whẽ we be chaſtiſed; then doth God yͭ which S. Paul ſaith in an other place, to wit, hee puni- Cor.5.5. ſheth vs according to yͤ fleſh in this worlde, that we might not periſh euerlaſtingly. Now therfore let vs lift vp our eyes alwayes vnto yͤ iudgement ſeate before which we muſt come & appeare. Although we haue bin borne withall in this world, and yͭ we beare our ſelues in hand yͭ our ſins ſhal remaine vnpuniſhed, wee muſt be doublie puniſhed at yͤ hand of God, becauſe we haue bin ſtubborn & hardharted euen vnto the vttermoſt, and haue ſo abuſed his patience. Sith he waited ſo lõg for our amendment, & ſought by al gentlenes to win vs vnto himſelf, if we for all yͭ haue bin rebellious, and haue as it were laughed at his louing kindnes which he vſed towards vs; muſt hee not call all this to minde to our greater coſt?

And let vs note farther yͭ it is too vaine an excuſe which many make, ſaying; And whõ haue I wronged? Nowadaies if a mã charge theſe blaſphemers wͭ this wickednes, they will wry their mouth & come with I know not what ſhameleſnes, and ſay: & who complaineth of me? to whom is it yͭ I haue done any iniury? If we were al ſuch as we ought to be, doubtleſſe we would crie an alarme when yͤ name of God is blaſphemed, and we would al be proctors in yͤ caſe, ſeeing yͭ God vouchſafeth vs this honour, to haue vs to maintaine his maieſty & his own cauſe. Yet for al this, we make no account therof. If our ſelues haue any iniury done vnto vs, wee will crie at it. But if God be euill ſpoken of, ſo that his name be put to open ſhame, we let it paſſe, we take no care of it. They which haue ſo ſhamefully offended may ſay: who is he yͭ accuſeth vs? But yet for all that, this is ſuch a ſhift as ſhall auaile them but a little (as we haue ſaid.) For ſhall God forget himſelfe? Shall he ſuffer himſelfe to be ſo diſpiſed & make no account thereof? Hath not he ſworne by his owne name, that he will maintaine his glory vnto the vtmoſt? Now ſeeing it is ſo, what wil come of it if wee replie againſt him and ſay, that none can complain of any iniurie done vnto him, whẽ wee ſhall haue ſo offended the maieſtie of God? Alas, is it not more than if wee had bidden battaile vnto al creatures? Yes verily. Now the caſe is like in fornication. I graunt that a man which playeth the fornicatour may ſay: no man complaineth of me. For both yͤ parties were agreed together. But what? Yee ſee that the temple of God (as I told you) is vnhallowed. And is that trecherie ſo ſmall a thing? If a man had robbed, he ſhould haue beene puniſhed, as he well deſerueth. But here is a farre greater fault than theft. For when the temple of God is defiled, it exceedeth all the extortions and pollings which can be done vnto men touching their goods. Ye ſee howe two temples of God are defiled at once through fornication. Yee ſee alſo how our Lord Ieſus Chriſt is therein ſhamefully abuſed. For he vouchſafeth vs this honor that we bee members of his body, he hath vnited vs vnto himſelfe, and ſhall we for all this goe and abandon our ſelues to ſuch a ſhamefull villany? Is not yͭ a tearing of the bodie of the ſonne of God in peeces aſmuch as lyeth in vs? Let men then delight themſelues as much as they liſt, and let others ſooth them in their filthines and make but a laughing game therof: Surely they ſhall fare neuer the better at Gods hand for al that. So then let vs learne (as I haue told you) to lift vp our eyes vnto yͤ heauenly throne, and to walke in ſuch wiſe, as wee may alwayes haue a warrant within vs that wee haue proceeded in all vprightneſſe with God. And let vs not be ſo fooliſh as to reſt our ſelues vpon that which men command, but let vs holde that rule which cannot deceiue vs, that is, the lawe which God hath deliuered vnto vs, and whereunto he wil haue vs to frame our whole life.

But Alas, this is euill practiſed nowadayes. How many are there who if there were no laws, nor threatnings; would euer come to Church to heare one word of yͤ doctrine of god? And yet we ſee manifeſtly yͭ ſuch men doe it but for faſhions ſake. Well: they will come. But when? On ſuch dayes as are cōmanded. But if there ſhould be no expreſſe commandemēt, they are of opiniō that they are not otherwiſe bound thereto: and ſo it were much better that they came not vnto the Church at all. For they do nought elſe but defile the temple God. And they ſhew that they neuer taſted one whit of doctrine, they come thither ſo like dogs & ſwine. And ſo we ſee yͭ many in this worlde haue a care of nothing but of yͭ which is commanded and forbidden them, for feare they ſhoulde bee pinched by yͤ purſes, or haue ſome other puniſhment, according vnto ciuill order. Otherwiſe they ſhew yͭ they haue no religion, but are very beaſts. But as for vs, ſith we ſee that God is ſo gracious vnto vs, as to declare vnto vs his will that we might followe it, let vs bethinke our ſelues to draw neerer vnto him, and to make his righteouſneſſe ſhine in vs. For this is his true ymage. And therby we declare that we be his children, and it is our warrant that hee hath adopted vs, and yͭ he will execute the office of a father towards vs. But there are very few which conſider this. Yet notwithſtanding, it behooueth vs to be attentiue to that which I haue ſaid: namely, that becauſe God hath called vs vnto himſelfe, and hath vouchſafed to teach vs howe wee ought to liue: we alſo ought to profite in his ſchoole, and to come willingly of our owne minde vnto him, and alſo to accompliſh that which is ſaid in the Psal.40.8.& 110.3. Pſalme, to wit, that to be good ſouldiours of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, we muſt come of our owne accord without forcing, and without threatening, we muſt come with a franke and free heart, as if we would ſay: Lorde, behold I offer my ſelfe vnto thee: therefore if we wil ſuffer the Lord ſo to gouerne vs, that looke what way ſo euer he turneth the bridle we wil go & be wealded by him, & not bee ſtubborne in any wiſe, nor fling againſt him like wild & ſauage beaſtes: that is it (ſay I) which we haue to beare in minde. But as long as we are led with a ſlauiſh feare, doutles God will not accept any thing of yͭ which we do. And I ſay, not onely yͭ our doing of yͤ things which are cōmanded vs, & our abſtaining from yͤ things which are forbidden vs, be but for feare of men & of earthly Iudges; but alſo yͭ if our obſeruing of gods law be but bicauſe we feare to be damned: he vtterly miſlyketh ſuch a ſeruice, & wil make no account therof. And what is yͤ reaſō? Forſooth becauſe he wilbe honored of vs as a father is honored of his children. For I pray you, if a child grind his teeth againſt his father, & it grieue him to obey him: but becauſe he hath no way to eſcape his hands, he wil doe what he commandeth him: and yet if it were poſſible he would get him out of yͤ houſe, and not obey his father: ſhall this ſeruice pleaſe him? Surely no. And wil God haue leſſe graunted vnto him than mortall men require, which are but rottennes? Of a very truth, they which ſerue God ſo by conſtraint could find in their harts to haue him plucked out of heauen if they coulde poſſibly doe it. And therefore let vs bethinke our ſelues to yeeld vnto God ſuch ſacrifice as he lyketh of. Let vs ſacrifice vnto him our ſelues, our Rom.12.1. thoughts, our wils & affections, and all yͭ is in vs: let vs dedicate al vnto him with a ſyncere affection, & with an vpright free hartednes (as we haue ſaid afore.) True it is that we ought to be ſore afraide of Gods puniſhments, becauſe we are like an Aſſe which muſt euer be ſpurred, & laid vpon with a ſtaffe. Therefore let vs humble our ſelues whē we ſee yͤ threats which are made againſt vs in the holy ſcripture. But withall let vs yet paſſe farther, to know yͭ God is our father; and knowing him to bee ſuch a one, let vs come vnto him like true children; as he requireth vs by his Prophet: If I bee your father (ſaith he) where is mine Mal.1.6. honour? He ſaith not onely, If I bee your maſter, wher is yͤ feare which you ow me? But he putteth both down together. If I be your maſter, wher is my feare? And if I be your father, wher is yͤ honor which you owe vnto me? God therfore wilbe honored of vs: but withal he wilbe ſerued of vs, and that of a frank & free goodwill, and of a ſyncere affection, as we haue before declared, when wee treated of yͤ ſhort abridgement of yͤ law in the ſeuenth chapter: what doth thy God O Iſrael require more of thee, but yͭ thou ſhouldeſt ſtick vnto him by louing him? This (ſay I) is in effect all yͤ ſeruice which God requireth of vs. And ſo wee are warned, yͭ we muſt not bee ſo ouergreeued wͭ the threats yͭ are made againſt vs, and with yͤ puniſhments which are contained in the law, but yͭ we ſhold alſo outgo yͤ ſame & be redy to offer vp our ſelues a willing ſacrifice vnto God, & to call vpon him as our father, accordingly as hee hath adopted vs for his children.

In the ende Moſes declareth, yͭ men muſt obſerue ſuch an honeſty of nature in mariage, that the ſonne in law muſt not couple himſelf with his ſtepmother. Indeed here hee ſetteth downe but one kind: But in the twentith of Leuiticus, there are mo degrees ſpoken of. But this ſerueth to put them in mind of yͭ which was ſaid before. For Moſes in this book maketh a rehearſal of the law which hee had already written. And I haue told you yͭ this is not more than needeth; becauſe mens memories are ſo ſhort, and they forget ſo ſoone that which God hath taught them. It was therfore expedient yͭ Moſes for yͤ better warranting of his doctrine, ſhould repete it again in this booke. And therfore he doth touch this but by yͤ way concerning marriages: that men ought to keep ſuch an order, as to hold inceſts for accurſed. For yͤ Paynims themſelues knew, yͭ if mariages were made wͭout all difference, there ſhoulde be inceſts (as they called them) committed, ſo as mariage ſhold be defiled before God, & become worſe than whoredome. They had this conceite imprinted in them by nature: & albeit they had not bin taught yͤ will of God purely, yet had they ſome ſparke of it. God would not that mankinde ſhold become ſo beaſtly, but yͭ they ſhold always haue a kind of light, to make them vnexcuſable, and to encreaſe their condemnation the more, as S. Paul alſo treateth hereof in yͤ ſecond Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Romans. Now to treate of all thoſe degrees which are ſpoken of in Leuiticus, were needeles at this time. It ſhall ſuffice briefly to beare in mind yͤ effect of all, namely yͭ we ought to haue a difference and honeſty obſerued in mariage: that degrees of kinred be not mingled and confounded together: that a father take not his daughter to wife, nor a brother his ſiſter, nor an vncle his neece: that a father in law take not his daughter in lawe, and yͭ a mother in law take not her ſon in law. For if we obſerue not this order, what differ we from yͤ brute beaſtes? But a man wil ſay, why ſir? It is by mariage. Yea, but like as mariage is an holy thing, ſo muſt it be kept with the greater reuerence. So that it is a double condemnation, if I will go vnder the colour of mariage, and defile my ſelfe like a brute beaſt. It is as if a man ſhold rob his neighbor vnder the colour of Iuſtice. He commenceth a falſe action againſt him, & when hee hath caſt him he will alledge: Oh I haue gotten yͤ ſute, I haue nothing but by way of iuſtice. Yea, but thy wickedneſſe is greater than if thou haddeſt cut a mans purſe. That offence of the twaine had beene the leſſer. For thy theeuery indureth ſtil: and (which worſe is) thou haſt falſly abuſed yͤ name of God, & defiled yͤ ſeat of Iuſtice. Seeſt thou not what a treachery thou haſt wrought herein? Then like as yͤ man is a double thiefe which by pleading a wrong cauſe and through ouerthwart meanes hath raked vnto himſelfe an other mans goods: ſo doubtles thoſe which violate the order of nature, as a father which marieth his daughter, an vncle which companieth with his neece, a brother which taketh his ſiſter, do worſe than if they committed whoredome. And why? Becauſe firſt the thing it ſelf is beaſtly, and can neuer be lawful. Secondly yͤ land is as it were defiled and infected where ſuch wickednes raigneth. Briefly mẽ ought to deteſt & abhor it. And yet notwithſtanding, if men will yet venter to confound marriage together, which is ſo holy a thing, which is yͤ liuely image of that ſpirituall vnion which wee haue with our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; which God (as we know) ordained at the beginning & bleſſed; if mẽ will intermingle it with ſuch filthines; if they will make but a ſport of it, to whom offer they this iniury? Offer they it not vnto God who is yͤ author of mariage, & commandeth yͭ it be maintained in all purenes? Ye ſee then what we haue to beare in mind concerning this place.

But now hath God prouided a lawe for it, and not without great cauſe. For in thoſe countries there was more corruption touching inceſtes, thã hath euer bin in al other countries beſides. I ſay, that neither in Greece nor in Italy men euer vſed ſuch lawles and vilanous liberty in this kind of wickednes, as they of Aſia and of all the Eaſt countrie did. For there it was counted nothing for the brother to couple with the ſiſter. It was therfore needfull yͭ God in this caſe ſhould reine his people with a ſhorter bridle. And hereby wee may ſee yͭ cuſtome ſhall not ſerue vs for an excuſe. If a thing diſpleaſe God, although it be vſed among men, it ſerueth not to leſſen the fault. For God wil alwayes remaine iudge. And why? Gods will is that we ſhould do him this honor to hold our ſelues vnto his ſimple wil, although mẽ draw cleane backward. Let vs therfore learn to yeeld our ſelues vnto the Lawe of God touching this point. And if a man reply, that we are not to bee held thral to yͤ order of Moſes, I grant it. But yet ought we at leaſtwiſe to admit yͤ warnings which God giueth vs, and to vſe his counſel. Although we be freed from this bondage of the ciuill Law of Moſes, yet will he haue vs to beare alwayes in mind this ground, to wit, that we bethinke vs for what cauſe God hath forbidden this thing. For it is becauſe the thing is intollerable. We muſt therfore frame our ſelues vnto that thing which we know to bee acceptable vnto God, and withhold vs from that which he forbiddeth.

But yet there is a double condemnation to fall vpon them which wil go cleane contrary againſt it, as S. Paul ſaith ſpeaking of him which had takẽ his mother in Law to wife in Corinth. How now? (ſaith he) Are ye not aſhamed yͭ ſuch fornicatiõ ſhoulde be among you, and that ſo villanous an act ſhold be committed, as yͤ Painims could not abide to heare the like ſpoken of? Indeede ſometimes ſuch like things were to be ſeen among thẽ but yet neuertheleſſe they did abhor ſuch wickednes. Seeing then yͭ the vnbeleeuing wretches haue bin taught, by ſuch a motion as themſelues knewe not, wͭout either ſcripture or preaching, albeit God draue thẽ therunto, to keepe this honeſtie in the degrees of mariage: what ought we to doe? Verily we ſee yͭ the very Paynims are yet more to our cõdemnation. For there was a certaine Emperour of Rome, who becauſe he wold cõmit the ſame inceſt himſelfe, made a law yͭ the vncle might mary with his niece. And this libertie which was ſo graunted by yͤ law was neuer folowed of any but of his own baud. Although he had all countries at cõmandement, yet could he neuer make yͤ law of ſufficient authoritie yͭ any man beſides himſelfe & one baude of his woulde be perſwaded yͭ the vncle might marry with the niece. Now what ſhall we ſay of this, but yͭ our Lorde had a ſecret bridle for men, as if he ſhould ſay: I will yͭ there remaine ſome honeſtie in nature in deſpite of all thoſe which beare rule in yͤ world, & would make ſuch a confuſion that men ſhold be as brute beaſts, yea euẽ as dogs & ſwine? Do what they can yet wil I be aboue thẽ, & cauſe my law to be ſo printed in yͤ heartes of men, yͭ for all their wickednes & blindnes they ſhall yet retaine ſome honeſtie in yͭ which I haue principally cõmanded thẽ. Beholde (I ſay) how God hath borne ſway in ſuch ſort yͭ men (how vnbeleeuing ſoeuer they were) haue yet had ſome remorſe, yͭ they would not altogether go againſt that which was forbidden them in this lawe. In deede men might haue alledged: This thing is lawful for vs. The Law is made, the ſentence is proclaimed, libertie is granted vnto al mẽ to do ſo: & yet we ſee how God ouerruleth al & ſheweth yͭ he himſelfe wil ſo waken mẽ & ſũmon thẽ to appeare before him, yͭ they ſhal not fall into ſuch confuſion. And therefore let vs humble our ſelues vnder him and be ſo far frõ wayting vntil he cal vs vnto our account & draw vs vnto this honeſty by force, that we alwayes preuent his iudgement, to walke in ſuch feare and carefulnes, that wee make it our pleaſure to ſerue and honor him: ſo as there may be ſuch an honeſt conuerſation among vs as not onely the order of nature may bee obſerued, but alſo that we may ſhewe how it is not for nought that hee hath ſhouled vs out from among the vnbeleeuing wretches, and would that we ſhould be an holy people vnto him and dedicated vnto his ſeruice.

But now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them more & more, and to draw vs away from them, & ſo to rid vs of them, as we may encreaſe from day to day, & be reformed vnto his righteouſnes: & that he wil in the meane time beare with vs in our infirmities, & not intreat vs ſeuerely, but pardon vs our faultes, vntill he hath clenſed vs altogether from them. And ſo let vs all ſay: Almightie &c.

On Thurſday the xvj. of Ianuarie, 1556

The Cxxx. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the three and twentith Chapter.

NOne that is hurte by burſting, or that is gelded ſhall enter into the congregation of the Lorde.

2 A Baſtard ſhall not enter into the congregation of the Lorde, neither ſhall the tenth generation of him enter in.

3 The Ammonites & Moabites ſhal not enter into ẏ congregation of the Lord, neither ſhall their tenth generation for euer enter into the cõgregation of the Lord.

IT might ſeeme a ſtrãg caſe ẏ God in this place ſhutteth out of his congregation ſuch as are maymed in their bodies. For men can hardly bee perſwaded ẏ this hindereth any to come neare vnto God. Nay rather when there is any weakenes in them, it maketh them more worthy of pitie and compaſſion. And we are aſſured on the other ſide, ẏ God requireth a ſpiritual purenes, & maketh no great account of this outward appearance; as it is expreſly written in the fifteenth Chapter of ẏ firſt booke of Samuel, that he reſpecteth not thoſe things which appeare to the eye ward, as men do. But wee are to note, that when God in the old time vnder the law required any outward purenes, it was to bring the Iewes more forward to conſider, that they could not preſent themſelues vnto the temple, except they were throughly purified, ſpecialy touching their ſoules. The like is meant in that which we ſee here. For wheras God in this place condemneth ẏ maime which is in the body; it is to betoken, that they which will ſerue him & deſire to approch neare vnto him, ought to be ſoũd both in their bodies and in their ſoules. For whatſoeuer was figured in ẏ law, was referred vnto that ſpiritual and heauenly patron which Moſes ſaw in the mount: as it is written in the 25. Chapter of Leuiticus. And this is wel obſerued both by S. Steuen, and by the Apoſtle to the Hebrewes. So then let vs note ẏ when God barreth thoſe from entring into the ſanctuary, which had any mayme in their bodie: he ment to betoken therby that he woulde haue his ſeruants ſound & pure. Yea and that men ſhould not in ẏ behalfe reſt on that which is ſeen with the eye of man, but rather ſeeke after the true ſoundneſſe, which God reſpecteth, which is in our heartes and in our mindes.

Hebr.8.5.

The like is to bee ſaide of that which Moſes addeth touching baſtards. God meant hereby to ſhewe, firſt what a priuiledge he had graunted vnto the ſtocke of Abraham. And this was done to the intent that his fauour ſhoulde be the better knowen. Beholde howe God choſe out of all the world one certaine people. And why? Wee haue before ſhewed that there was no worthines at all in them, but this proceeded of his own freebeſtowed loue. Nowe becauſe men doe willingly darken the fauour of God or cleane forget it, or happily not knowe it in ſuch ſort as they ſhould; God would that the children of Abrahã, before they entred into the ſanctuary, ſhoulde learne to reaſon thus with themſelues: What is ẏ cauſe ẏ we haue acceſſe & entrãce vnto our god? What is the cauſe why hee ſheweth himſelfe ſo familiar vnto vs, and receiueth vs when wee come vnto him? It is becauſe he hath choſen the ſeed of Abraham, howbeit ſuch as are ẏ true ſeed of Abraham. We ſee thẽ how god ment to make thẽ which were deſcended from ẏ ſtock of Abraham, to perceiue ẏ without any deſert of theirs, he had choſen them to be the inheritãce of ẏ euerlaſting God. I ſay he ſhewed this vnto thẽ, & exerciſed thẽ in the remembrance of ẏ benefite, to ẏ intent it might be ẏ better acknowledged among thẽ. That (ſay I) is ẏ thing which we haue to note firſt of all. Secondly God by this meanes held the Iewes ſhorter ẏ they might keepe themſelues pure & chaſt, and ẏ there might be no fornication among them; nor any ſuch confuſion as men might not know which were right begotten and which were baſtarde children, when no difference might bee had in that behalfe. Therefore GOD by ordayning this Lawe, gaue the Iewes an occaſion to liue more chaſtly, to the ende their ſtocke might bee holie and not prophane, and that he which intended to commit adultery ſhould be moued thus to thinke and to reaſon with himſelf: How now? God choſe me before I was borne becauſe I am of the children of Abraham: and yet not contented herewith, he hath declared that hee will be my ſauiour, euen to a thouſand generations: he accepteth my ofspring, hee hath dedicated it vnto himſelfe; although we be al curſed by nature, yet this grace of adoption exceedeth in my ſtocke. And ſhall I goe now and raiſe vp a defiled ſeede, which ſhall not bee of the people of God, which ſhal not be of the body of his congregation, which ſhall haue no entrance into the ſanctuary? Were not yͤ a renouncing of the benefit of my god? Is it not to ſhut him far off from me, & to giue him no entertainment, or to ſhew him no countenance, when hee calleth mee ſo gently? This (ſay I) ought to holdẽ backe the Iewes, or els they were more than blockiſh. And that had beene too leawd an vnthankfulnes and a forgetting of the benefit which God had grãced vnto them.

Therfore that we may nowe apply theſe two places to our inſtruction, let vs note yͭ although God regard not nowadayes whether there be any blemiſh in a mans body or no, ne reſpecteth our parentage: yet notwithſtanding his will is yͭ this law ſhold ſerue for vs, and yͭ we ſhould apply the truth therof to our vſe: that is to wit, yͭ when we come vnto him, we muſt bring with vs an vpright ſoundnes. And wherein? Surely not in our bodily members, for we know yͭ his ſeruice is ſpiritual. Therfore let vs purifie our ſoules. I grant Ioh.4.23. yͭ our bodies ought to be purified alſo (as S. Paul Cor.6.6. warneth vs): but that is not in ſuch wiſe as there be no maime or fault of ſicknes in them, but it is meant, that we muſt not defile them wͭ vile and wicked thinges, as he ſpeaketh of Idolatry & fornication, & alſo as the ſcripture ſpeaketh of briberies & extortions. He which falleth downe before ydols, as much as in him lieth defileth his body, which ought to be dedicated vnto the ſeruice of God. The like is to be ſaid of fornicators, which giue thẽſelues ouer vnto ſuch wickednes as God deteſteth. They which ſpoile & rob ano- Eſa.1.15. ther man of his goods, haue bloudy hands as the Prophet Eſay vpbraideth them. Thus ye ſe how we ought to indeuor our ſelues to purifie our bodies. But yͤ chiefe point is, yͭ we haue this ſoundnes in our ſoules, that they be not ſcarred wͭ any ſuch maime, as may hinder vs from being quicke and ready to obey our God. We muſt not (ſay I) be womaniſh; but we muſt haue an inuincible corage to make battaile againſt Satan & againſt all temptatiõs, ſhewing our ſelues to be mẽ indeed. Likewiſe we muſt not be weake in faith, but wee muſt proceede always forward, and enforce our ſelues to come vnto yͤ mãs eſtate wherof S. Paul Eph.4.13. ſpeaketh to yͤ Epheſians, that we wauer not with euery word but hold vs faſt to yͭ which is good, & abide cõſtant, & ſtable in yͤ truth which we haue knowen. Wee muſt not be tottering & wauering too & fro; but we muſt reſiſt al temptations ſo as nothing may hinder vs to keepe on that courſe whereunto God hath called vs. Let vs therefore ſtrengthen again yͤ weake knees, & let vs fortifie yͤ trembling hands by the power of yͤ holy Ghoſt.

Thus ye ſée whereof we are expreſly warned in this place to occaſion vs to cling vnto our God, when we be to withſtand any tẽptations which hinder vs from ſeruing him.

And moreouer let vs note, yͭ ſeeing God hath ſanctified vs, (yea & that together with our whole ofspring) we ought to continue in true chaſtitie when we heare his voice at yͤ mouth of our God: I wil be yͤ ſauiour both of you & of your children Gen.17.7. alſo after you. Whẽ God is ſo gratious as to giue vs children, we ought to prouide diligently yͭ the ſtocke be pure & vndefiled. And let the faithfull take good heed that they intermingle not them ſelues with fornications or ſuch other like defilements. And why? Becauſe it is a renouncing of yͤ excellent priuiledge which God giueth them, when he chuſeth them in ſuch ſort vnto himſelf and therewithal chooſeth their children alſo although they be not yet begotten. But the chiefe point is, that we muſt learne to be the true children of Abraham. Rom.11.17. Gal.3.7. Seeing we be graffed into his ſtocke through faith let vs take heede that we be not cut off from this body by our vnbeliefe. For the Prophets who were yͤ true expounders of the law, do wel declare what the thing is which God ameth at in this place, when they ſay: Come you of the ſtocke of Abraham? No ye are the childrẽ of an harlot euerychone of you. Get ye hence ye harlots brats, appeare here in your liknes, come Eſa.57.3. foorth and let men knowe you; yee children of a Ezech.16.3. ſtrumpet (ſaith yͤ Prophet Eſay). And yͤ Prophets Ieremy & Ezechiel ſpeak in like ſort: What haue you like vnto Abraham whoſe name yee beare? Was not your father an Amorite, & your mother a whore? To whõ ſpeake they thus? Speake they to children of harlots & vnto baſtardes concerning yͤ fleſh? No. But vnto lawful borne children. And why then calleth hee them ſtrumpets children, as if they were begotten in ſome brothelhouſe? Becauſe they were corrupted & followed not yͤ faith of Abraham. For yͤ true parentage is Rom.9.7. ſpiritual (as S. Paul ſaith). They which deſcẽded Gal.3.7. from yͤ ſtock of Abraham concerning yͤ fleſh, are not therfore accounted yͤ linage of Abrahã. And what is yͤ reaſõ? Forſooth becauſe they are growen out of kind. So then let vs note that whẽ Moſes forbade yͭ baſtards ſhould enter into yͤ temple, it was not onely for this ſhameful note which is in reſpect of the world, when childrẽ are not begotten in lawful wedlocke: it was rather to ſhew yͭ the Iewes were not worthy to haue any acceſſe vnto God, to call vpon his name, or to company with his congregation, except they held faſt this ſpiritual kinred of Abraham, that is to ſay, except they followed his faith, & except they continued in yͤ pure couenant of god. Now this could not be done except they always bare in mind, that god had choſen them to bee an holy people, to bee a royal prieſthood. Let vs now for our part note yͭ albeit wee were altogether ſtrangers vnto God, although we had no acceſſe into his tẽple, & although (as S. Paul ſaith) we had no couenãt with Eph.2.12.& 19. him becauſe yͤ promiſes were not made vnto vs; yet notwithſtanding we are made houſhold ſeruants with the holy fathers, citiſens of the kingdome of heauen, through faith, foraſmuch as God hath communicated vnto vs this freedome which was giuen only vnto yͤ ſtock of Abraham.

Seeing it is ſo yͭ we which were wild & barren Rom.11.24. trees, haue bin beſids nature graffed into yͤ good Olife, let vs take heed yͭ we vſe well ſo excellent a benefite: and let vs ſticke with a ſtedfaſt faith vnto Abraham our father; and as oft as we come vnto the church, let vs take warning to examine our ſelues and to ſay: Behold God hath appointed this order, that we ſhould come together to Eph.2.18. the intent he may be among vs, & we haue familiar acceſſe vnto him: and that is on condition yͭ we become true children of Abraham. And in what ſort? Let vs conſider of that which is ſaid in Ioh.1.12.& 13. the firſt Chapt. of S. Iohn: for this kinred is there expounded, ſuch as God requireth nowadayes and alloweth of. It commeth (ſaith he) neither of the will of man, nor of the wil of the fleſh, nor of bloude: but the cauſe therof is that we haue beleeued in the onely ſonne of God. Seeing then it is ſo: that when we beleeue in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, & be graffed into his body, we are admitted for the ſonnes of God, although wee on our part are not worthy of that honour. Let vs take heede, that we hold our ſelues there, and that we grow not out of kinde through vnthankfulnes, & ſo cut our ſelues off from that body wherunto we were ioyned through the grace of God and his infinite mercy by yͤ meane of faith. Yee ſee then what we haue to beare in mind vpon this place, when it is ſaide expreſly, that baſtards ſhall not enter into the congregation of God, euen vnto the tenth generation.

But let vs come now to yͭ which is ſpoken of yͤ Moabites & the Ammonites. Theſe people were deſcended from Lot, and ſo ought to bee yͤ kinſmen of yͤ Iewes. Yet neuertheles God baniſheth them out of his Church, and will not yͭ they haue any entrance therinto, vnto the tenth generation, albeit they yeelded themſelues vnder yͤ obedience of yͤ law. He addeth: They met you not by the way when you came out of Egypt with bread & water, that is to ſay, they entertained you not as kinſmē and friends ſhould haue done. Now albeit yͤ Ammonites and yͤ Moabites were ſeuered from the ſtock of Abraham, as Lot was alredy gone vnto Sodome, and ſo had not the promiſe: yet neuertheles they ought to haue called to minde their kindred, and yͭ Abraham had brought Lot into yͤ land of promiſe, & had taken him for his ſon. The remembrance hereof ought ſo to haue endured, that yͤ Moabites & Ammonites (if they had had any good nature) ſhold haue granted paſſage vnto them which were of their owne bloud. And againe we ſee how God ſpared them. For we haue Deut.2.18.19. ſeene heretofore, how the Iſraelits were expreſly commanded to abſtaine from al iniury and violence, whē they paſſed through their land. Take heede yee vſe not any force of armes, take nothing but what you pay for: keep yͤ high and beaten common way as ye paſſe: buy yͤ water which thou drinkeſt, and vſe no extortion. And why? For they be thy brethren. And indeed although god choſe not Lot as he did Abraham, yet ceaſed he not to pity him, & to haue ſom care of ſparing his ſucceſſours & thoſe which iſſued from him, albeit thoſe people were begottē by his inceſtuous Gen.19.36. coupling wͭ his two daughters. The two fathers which were yͤ firſt rootes of this iſſue were Ammon & Moab, yͭ is to ſay, ſuch as were begotten by inceſt & by ſhameful and vnnaturall fornication. Yet neuertheles God beareth wͭ thē. But they are ſo wicked & vnthankfull, yͭ they defie both God and man. God hath compaſſion of them, and therwithall chargeth yͤ Iewes to haue a care of them. Ye ſee what curteſie yͤ Iewes vſed. They praied them to let thē paſſe through their country as friends, proteſting yͭ they woulde not moleſt nor annoy them in any manner of thing. They deſired them to graunt them paſſage for their mony, that they might come vnto yͤ lande Num.21.2 wherunto God called thē. But theſe curſed creatures wold needs hinder yͤ calling of god, & bring to paſſe, that yͤ people ſhoulde not enter into the land of promiſe to take poſſeſſion thereof. And hereupon they hyred Balaam the ſon of Beor yͤ falſe Prophet. Numb.22. And why? Becauſe they diſtruſted their owne power, and thought by the meanes of a falſe Prophet to coniure God, & that by vſing ſuch a kind of bewitching, they might curſe that people of his. Now becauſe they were ſo froward, and vouchſafed not to vſe yͤ benefite which God offered vnto them, it was good reaſon that they ſhould be puniſhed therfore. For albeit the vengeance of God was not by and by executed, yet God regiſtred it in his booke & we ſee here how their puniſhmēt for this wickednes was reſerued.

Now hereupon we haue to note, that if we intend to be accepted of God in the number and companie of the faithfull, wee muſt procure the welfare of the whole Church as much as lieth in vs. For thoſe which make any touble in yͤ church of God, or be any way offenſiue, are heere baniſhed the Church vnder the perſon of yͤ Moabites and Ammonites, as if God declared that they are not worthy to come neare vnto him, or to company with any of them which are dedicated vnto him. And nowadayes how many are to bee ſeene of this ſort? So yͭ we ought not to meruaile if yͤ curſe of god lie vpon ſo many men. And why? Becauſe yͭ for one which is found to aduance the weale of yͤ church, & to edifie yͤ people of God, a man may find a douſen which indeuour nothing els, but to bring vtter confuſion & deſtructiō vpon it. How many turmoiles ſee we nowadays in yͤ world to hinder yͤ courſe of the goſpel, & to bring to paſſe yͭ the Church might fal vnto yͤ ground, or be confuſed & diſordered? Now from whēce proceedeth this, but from yͤ wickednes of men? Thē like as God ſparred yͤ doore againſt yͤ Ammonits and Moabites at yͭ time, becauſe they refuſed to giue way vnto his people whē they ſhould enter into the lande of promiſe: ſo let vs note yͭ all ſuch as lay ſtumblingblocks nowadays to turne thoſe aſide, and to driue them into wickedneſſe which were in a good way, & al ſuch as breede troubles in yͤ Church of God, are euerychone reiected of God. And verily we ſee that there are nowadays many Ammonites and Moabites in the worlde. For who are they which ſeeke to peruert all things, and which giue ſo many offences & make ſuch great confuſions throughout Gods church? They are ſuch as name themſelues yͤ faithfull, ſuch as are of our company & haue one commō baptiſme wͭ vs: ſo that they ought to aide vs: they ought to bring vs forth bread & water;yͤ is to ſay, they ought to lend vs their hand, that we might follow our calling to come vnto that place to the which God calleth vs: thoſe (I ſay) which ought to receiue vs and open the way vnto vs; euen thoſe are they which barre vs of entraunce, thoſe are they which pull the bridle backward,& which make theſe hurliburleyes among vs.

Hereby we are warned, that ſeeing the people of God was ſo vexed by their owne kindred, we ought nowadayes to beare it patiently, if the lyke befall vs. And withall let vs be warned (as I haue told you)to behaue our ſelues in ſuch ſort as none of vs may be cōdemned of hauing ſhut vp the way againſt them which endeuored to come vnto God.But let vs ayde them as farre as we ſhall be able, euen vnto the vtmoſt of our power: If we doe otherwiſe, the vengeance of God is at hand, and ſhall light vppon vs. For God who once condemned the Moabites, will not faile to be our Iudge at this day. Although the ceremonie be not obſerued, yet (as I tolde you)all they which indeuor not to ſet foreward the courſe of the Goſpell, muſt needes be baniſhed his kingdome. And in very deede wee heare the threates which are made by the Prophets againſt all thoſe which are enemies of the Church, and which trouble it:and that was not for the time of the lawe onely:but they foretold vs of the kingdom of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Whoſoeuer they be that ſeeke not to ayde and Eſa.12.11. ſuccour Ieruſalem (ſayth the Prophet Eſay) the Lord will arme himſelfe againſt them, and they ſhall feele his ſtrong hand and be deſtroyed. All they which deuiſe any miſchiefe againſt thee,or relieue thy enemies to ſtrengthē them,ſhal feele the hand of God contrarie & enemie vnto thē. Zach.2.2. As much to yͤ ſame purpoſe is ſaid in Zacharie. And theſe prophecies and threatnings(as I haue touched alreadie)ſerued not for the time of the lawe, but for the ſtate of Chriſtianitie. Let vs therefore comfort our ſelues when wee vnderſtand that God hath ſuch a care of our ſaluatiō, that he proteſteth he will be an aduerſarie vnto all them which ſeeke to hinder vs frō comming vnto his kingdome, and into that inheritance which hee hath promiſed vs,and telleth them that his hand ſhall bee againſt them, and that his curſe ſhall fall vppon their heades. Hereby wee ſee how deare our ſaluation is vnto him, and what care he hath of it. Moreouer let vs be afraid (as I tolde you) to giue occaſions of trouble and offence. Let vs not be of the number of thoſe naughtipackes, which when they ſee yͤ Church floriſh, ſeeke nothing more buſilie thā to diſorder al things therein.The diuel hath drencht them with ſuch a poyſon, that they cannot abide the weale of the Church,therefore they ſeeke al the meanes they poſſiblie can, to breede confuſion and diſorder therin:let vs take heede(I ſay)yͭ we intangle not ourſelues among them,knowing that if we doe,we ſhall neuer eſcape the curſe which is here threatned vnto the Moabites and the Ammonites.

But we haue yet one point more to note.And yͭ is,yͭ although God at yͤ firſt puniſh not thē which moleſt his people: yet hee faileth not to keepe alwayes ſome puniſhment for them in ſtore,notwithſtanding that he delayeth it. And therefore let vs not bee ſo hardie as to beare our ſelues in hand,that if God beare with vs and wink at our faultes for a time, we ſhall ſtill remaine vnpuniſhed.For wee ſee how it fell out in this caſe with this people. No doubt but they bare themſelues in hand, that it was a matter of nothing when they moleſted the people of God. And why? Bycauſe God liſted not to execute his vengeance vpon them out of hand,Now in deede they were ouerthrowen. But what for that? They did but wagge their head thereat,bicauſe they bare thēſelues in hand that the Iewes wold not put them to any farther trouble. But God for all yͭ remained their Iudge. And ſo although yͤ Ammonites & Moabites were ſpared for a time,& God would not that they ſhould be rooted out as thoſe people which he had alreadie before condemned: yet notwithſtanding they made neuer the better match for all that;for ye ſee how like a ſort of vnhallowed people, they are put beſides all entrance into yͤ temple of God, they are reiected with this note of ſhame;yͭ they are declared enemies vnto yͤ people of God.Let vs therfore ſtand in feare ſith we ſee this. And although we be not puniſhed out of hand,yet let vs knowe yͭ we ſhall not eſcape the vengeaunce of God; when wee haue ſought to moleſt his Church, and haue ſet a barre againſt our neighbours that they may not enter in as they ought to doe. And why? Bicauſe although God lingreth,yet will he not forget yͤ wickednes of them which ſhal haue ſought to moleſt his Church, or to bring any maner of trouble vpon it. Ye ſee whereof wee ought to be aduertiſed. And if this were printed well in our heartes, we would haue another maner of care than we haue to edifie the Church of God, and we woulde withall more abhorre and deteſt all offences. But what? We ſee how headlong men runne into this wickedneſſe, euen with a madde & brainſicke diſpoſition.And why? Bycauſe God is not ready at hand to take vēgeance, they bare themſelues in hand yͭ the matter commeth al to one end, whether they worke yͤ Churches weale or woe, & thereupon they welter in their wickednes. But for al yͭ let vs looke vnto our ſelues.

And moreouer although God vtter not his vengeance at the firſt againſt them which ſeeke to trouble and to ouerthrowe the building of our faith: yet let vs aſſure our ſelues, that God(notwithſtanding that he winke at things for a time) yet ſleepeth not in heauen for all that.And therfore let vs patiently wayte vntill hee put to his hand.He ſuffereth the wicked ſometime to wander at will,and to triumph among vs,& we are of opinion that the earth will ſinke vnder them; we are aſtoniſhed & euen beſide our ſelues:we think there is no remedie, we ſuppoſe there is no way to ſuccor vs,we are of opinion yͭ god is laid down to ſleepe.But in yͤ end he putteth to his hād.And although he chaſtiſe ſome of them lightly, yet others ſettle in their lees.As for exāple, a mā ſhal ſee yͭ when God puniſheth ſome wicked perſons which haue been the occaſions and authors of many troubles and offences, yet others ſhall remaine vnpuniſhed, by reaſon whereof they thinke their owne wickedneſſe to be nothing, & ſo they followe it on farther, becauſe God beareth with them. But it is ſayd that the Ammonits and Moabites ſhal beare this curſe throughout ten generations. Therefore ſith we ſee that God will puniſhe them which moleſt vs, and which haue bin occaſions of falling among vs; howſoeuer the caſe go, let vs waite gods leaſure, hauing an eye to ẏ which is ſet downe here, & beholding ẏ which hath happened vnder ẏ Law, vntill he wreke his vengeance on the wicked.

For wee may vnder this figure which is here giuen vnto vs beholde the loue and fatherlike care which God hath for his Church in that it is his pleaſure that thinges ſhould bee well ordred therein, and, that none ſhould hinder his childrẽ whom he hath adopted, from cõming vnto that inheritance which he hath promiſed them. And therefore let vs alwayes conſtantly goe on, and ouerleape thoſe ſtumbling blockes which are layd in our way. When we ſee that the wicked aduaunce themſelues againſt vs, and inuent & deuiſe all that they are able, to deſtroy vs; let vs be armed with ſtrong and inuincible conſtancie to fight againſt ſuch temptations; let vs not ſlack our courage, but let vs aſſure our ſelues that God will looke to theſe thinges in ſuch ſorte, that by his reaching forth of his hand we ſhal ouercome all ẏ difficulties and incomberaunces which men on their part ſet againſt vs. This being done we ſhall knowe that God hath reſerued an horrible iudgement for our enemies; although they perſwade themſelues ẏ all is forgotten, & that there is no remembraunce of their miſdeedes. And when they be in full poſſeſſion of their wickedneſſe, God wil euen then prouide a remedie ſuddainly & beſide ẏ expectation of all men & of the whole world. Ye ſee then in effect what we haue to beare in minde vppon this place.

Now by ẏ way, a man might demaund what the cauſe is why God ordayned that the Iewes ſhould in no wiſe ſeeke the peace nor the proſperitie of the Ammonites and Moabites. For it ſeemeth that he giueth here the Iewes an occaſion to reuenge themſelues, the which notwithſtanding was neuer lawful. Let vs note in a word that God appointed them to execute his iudgement. And ſo his will is that they ſhould puniſh the Ammonites and Moabites, howbeit with a pure and vpright zeale. When God ordayneth Iuſtice, and putteth the ſword into the hand of them whom he hath called vnto that eſtate, hee commaundeth them to put ſuch to death as deſerue it, and willeth them to puniſh offences. And that vndoubtedly is a kinde of reuenge: but yet that reuenging is lawful; yea it is requiſite & neceſſarie. And if he which is armed with the ſworde of Iuſtice puniſh not offences, hee ſhall render an account thereof vnto God. Now it is very true ẏ magiſtrates ought to take pitie and compaſſion of thẽ whom they cauſe to be executed. When they put an euill doer to death, they muſt haue pitie on him becauſe hee is a man & a reaſonable creature. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtãd they muſt execute ẏ vẽgeance of God, howbeit without ſpitefulneſſe, and without bitterneſſe. So was it with the Iewes touching ẏ Moabites and the Ammonites. God ordayned thẽ to execute his iudgement. And for this cauſe hee ſaith vnto them, Ye ſhal not ſeeke neither their proſperitie nor their peace: that is to ſay, let them be as they are. For God will not haue you either to companie with them, or to relieue them. Now ſhal it be lawfull to helpe an euill doer, & to fauour him? That were to ouerthrowe Iuſtice, and the order which God hath appointed, & to bee a confederate with him in ẏ ſame offence. If a man fauour ẏ wicked, if he helpe & ayde thẽ; he becommeth guiltie of the ſame crime, & intangleth himſelfe in their wickedneſſe. And therefore God forbad ẏ Iewes to beare any ſuch affection towardes ẏ Moabites or Ammonites to help thẽ. And now wee ſee how reuenging was not onely graunted vnto ẏ Iewes, but alſo commaunded them: & this reuenging was not ſuch as ſhould proceede frõ a venemous minde or which ſhould be wrought after the luſt of ẏ fleſh, (for whẽ we hate any mã to the death, our affectiõs are alwayes troubled & we are neuer well ordered) but gods meaning was, ẏ the Iewes ſhould worke this reuenge, of a good zeale, as being taught thus to ſay: Beholde wee are appointed by God to execute his vengeance vppon ẏ Moabites. Sith it is ẏ vengeance of God which we ought to execute, we muſt not make it ours, ẏ is, we muſt not be ruled after our own luſtes, we muſt bridle our own wils. Now thẽ let vs after ẏ example of ẏ Iewes (which were executors of ẏ vengeance of God vppon ẏ Ammonites & Moabites) learn to ſubmit ourſelues wholie vnto ẏ obedience of God. For ſurely it is an acceptable ſacrifice to him, whẽ as we ſuffer our ſelues to be guided by his word, and will not attempt any thing beyond ẏ which he biddeth or forbiddeth.

Now hereby we be warned, firſt of all not to giue ẏ bridle to our owne reuengementes: and ẏ when we be wronged or iniured, we muſt not be pricked foreward through our carnal affections, to enterpriſe more than God permitteth vs. For it is written: Vengeance is mine & I will pay it Rom.12.19 home, as we ſhal ſee in the two & thirtith chapter of this booke. Now thẽ, haue we bridled our ſelues in that behalf? haue we not deſired reuẽge againſt thẽ which haue prouoked vs, & wrought vs any deſpyte? Let vs therewithall tary our Lordes leaſure for the redreſſe of it, yea and let vs haue pitie on our enemies and ſeeke by all meanes poſſible to bring them backe into ẏ way of ſaluation. And if we ſee that God alſo taketh reuenge vppon the wicked, let vs acknowledge his louing kindeneſſe towardes vs, and let it be a warrant vnto vs that he hath a great care of vs, & that he watcheth while we ſleepe. Let vs therfore learne to fare the better by all the chaſtiſementes which God layeth vppon the enemies of his Church, knowing ẏ therby he declareth that hee loueth vs with a fatherly affection, and is mindefull of vs and of our ſaluation; albeit wee thinke not ſo. This is a thing which ought to make the godly to reioyce, and to confirme thẽ to truſt ſo much the more ſtedfaſtly in God, and to runne vnto him,when the wicked vexe them, and when men ſeeke to turne them aſide out of the way of their ſaluation.But as for thoſe which are appointed to execute ẏ vengeance of God, let them doe it conſtantlie, & yet without ſpitefulneſſe,& without bitterneſſe. For if wee intermeddle our affections with that which God cōmaundeth, the vengeance is no longer his:but it proceedeth from our fleſh,that is to ſay,from our vnruly paſſions. Let them therefore which haue the charge of Iuſtice, take diligent heede that they proceede therein withall vprightneſſe and indifferencie: without being caryed away in any manner whatſoeuer with any wicked deſire.

And moreouer let vs be ſeuered generally frō the wicked:and not ioyne our ſelues with them; ſpecially when they ſeparate themſelues frō the Church of God; for if we haue any familiaritie with them, is it not a conſpiring againſt God & his people as much as lyeth in vs?Shal we not by that meanes be confederates with them? Yes,& therefore we muſt in this behalfe forget all kinred:we may not ſay,he is my friend,he is my goſſip, I haue vſed his companie this long time. We muſt lay all theſe thinges aſide and ſay;this man hath ſhewed himſelfe to bee Gods open enemie becauſe he is a let that the faithful agree not as they ought, and becauſe hee hath layd a ſtumbling block to ſtop the increace of the Church. When we behold ſuch thinges, let vs not be led with our doltiſh affections: for although ẏ Iewes were the Moabites kinſemen, yet muſt they reiect them.And why?Becauſe the Moabites were eſtraunged from the people of God, yea & were become their enemies.Ye ſee then what we are to beare in minde. But wee put it ill in practiſe. For who is he which nowadayes preferreth not kinred and I know not what elſe before God and his Church?Wē neede nothing to procure our ſelues fauour. If a man bee in office and haue a neighbour,he will be his friend.If he haue a goſſip or a kinſemā,he wil be his friend,much more. But though we be in no authoritie,yet we wil fauour one or other.And why?for euery ſmal wandring friendſhip is enough to win our heart. But in the mean while God is forgotten. We can ſee his Church deſtroyed before our faces, wee can ſee men indeuour nothing but to worke deſtruction and confuſion in all thinges, & yet we will be touched therewith neuer a whit. Are we worthie that God ſhould accept vs for his children? We heare the curſe which is pronounced in the Pſal.137.6. Pſalme againſt al thoſe which make not Ieruſalē the cheefe of their ioye: that is to ſay,which eſteeme not more of the common welfare of the Church,than of al the proſperities of this world. Lyke as the faithful ought to endeuour that the Church of God may proſper,that it may bee aduaunced,that it may encreace:ſo when the ſame commeth to paſſe,they ought to bee farre gladder thereof than of all other benefites, commodities, and whatſoeuer elſe they enioy in this world.

And contrariwiſe when they ſee any affliction in the Church,they ought to be more ſorie for it, than if they ſuffred al maner of afflictions in their owne perſons. If they doe not thus, they are accurſed.But now we can ſee ẏ Church of God troubled by the wicked,and we can go and ioyne our ſelues with them.We are not contented to let them alone,ſuch as they are:but we will needes fauour them, wee will needes ſupport and ayde them. And is not this a confederating of our ſelues with Satan, as I haue ſayd afore? Is it not aſmuch as to make open war both againſt God & againſt his people? Yes verily: And therefore let vs learn to haue ſuch a regard vnto the welfare of the Church of God, as to holde all thoſe for our enemies which lift themſelues vp againſt it: and let vs wage battaile againſt them to the vttermoſt of our power, to reſiſt their wicked practiſes: except wee will be guiltie of confederacie with them to ouerthrow all that which God hath builded.

Moreouer,whereas it is ſaid,That they came not out to meete the people; let vs note diligently that GOD thinkes it not enough for vs not to bee offenſiue vnto his Church, but his will is that wee ſhould alſo employ our ſelues faithfully,alwaies to further the ſaluation of the faithfull, according whereunto it is ſaid: That all they which ſuccor not the Church ſhall bee curſed. After that GOD hath threatened them which made warre againſt the citie of Ieruſalem, hee turneth his threateninges againſt them alſo which holpe it not when it was in neceſſitie. For there muſt bee no neuterſhippe in this behalfe. We muſt be either friendes or enemies. Therefore if we minde to eſcape the vengeance of God, whenſoeuer wee ſee the Church ſtand in neede of our helpe, let euery of vs employ himſelfe faithfully, and let vs endeuour to aduaunce that which is belonging vnto GOD, and to ayde them which ſeeke him, and labor to come vnto vnto him. Let vs endeuour (I ſay) to aſſiſt them and to quicken them vp to goe on alwayes more forewarder. If wee doe not ſo, doubtleſſe wee ſhall be guiltie of hauing bin too retchleſſe and negligent in the Churches behalfe. But (as I ſayd afore) if we help and fauour men when they lay their heades together to deſtroy all, ſurely wee not onely bewray our ſelues to bee open enemies of God and of his Church, but alſo wee ſhewe our ſelues to bee double enemies, and ſo it muſt needes bee that double vengeance ſhall fall vppon our heades, as it is in this place declared vnto vs.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God ẇ acknowlegement of our faults, praying him to vouchſafe to make vs feele them better than we haue done, ſo as wee may bee alwaies quickened vp more & more to reſorte vnto him, & he ſo ſtrengthen vs to reſiſt the temptations which are bent againſt vs in this worlde, as we may withſtand al the enimies which ceaſe not to moleſt vs: and all the vnderlinges of Sathan which rayſe troubles and offences among vs; This good GOD of ours graunt vs grace not to bee diſcouraged with ſuch thinges, but that wee may continually proceede in the way whereunto God hath called vs, vntill he haue put vs in poſſeſſion of that ſaluatiō which he hath promiſed vs in the kingdome of heauen. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely vnto vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

The Cxxxj. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the three and twentith Chapter.

3 The Ammonites &c.

4 Becauſe they met you not with bread and water in the way when ye came out of Egypt: and becauſe they hyred againſt you Balaam the ſonne of Beor of Pethor in Meſopotamia, to curſe you.

5 Howbeit that ẏ Lord thy God would not hearkē vnto Balaā, but the Lord thy God turned his curſe into a bleſſing vnto thee: becauſe ẏ Lord thy god loued thee.

6 Thou ſhalt not ſeeke their friendſhip nor their welfare at any time for euer.

WE ſaw yeſterday howe that although God did not puniſh ẏ ſpitefulneſſe and crueltie of the Ammonites and Moabites at the firſt; yet notwithſtanding hee did beare it ſtill in minde. Lykewiſe when as he winketh at faultes, it is not becauſe he hath forgotten them, but that euery thing ſhall be reckoned for in his due time. Whereupon I tolde you, that they which haue offended muſt not flatter themſelues, if GOD beare with them and lay not his hand vppon them at the firſt: but that they muſt conſider ẏ Rom.2.4. he allureth them vnto repentance when he is ſo patient, yea, and that he ſtayeth to ſee if men wil perceiue their owne wickedneſſe and be ſory for it. We declared with all, why God commaunded the Iſraelites to execute his vengeance, and in what ſorte they ſhould doe it. It remaineth now that we ſee the reaſon which is contained here, which is that the Ammonites & Moabites (though they iſſued out of the ſtock of ẏ Iewes) did notwithſtanding ſhewe themſelues their mortal enimies by ſtopping of them from comming into the land of Canaan. It is true that this poynt hath bin cōſidered of as concerning thoſe which rayſe offences to turne Gods children frō comming vnto the inheritance which is promiſed them, who are by good reaſon condemned in the perſon of the Moabites and Ammonites.

But now we muſt conſider that which Moſes toucheth concerning the curſe. He ſayth, That Namb.22. the Moabites hyred Balaam the ſon of Beor to curſe the people. Marke here the meane which the Moabites vſed to roote out thē whome God had choſed, and to ſparre the doore againſt them, that they might not take poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan which was promiſed them. The Moabites ſawe full well that they could not be the better men if they came to handy ſtrokes, and therefore they hired a falſe Prophet to curſe them. And in what ſorte? forſooth in the name of God. Now in the firſt place we ſee, that they which had no true & pure religion, had yet ſome ſeede thereof: yea and that they had this printed in their hart, that God gouerneth the world, ẏ all thinges are ordered according to his will, ẏ they whom he fauoreth do alwaies proſper, that they to whom he is contrary are vnhappy & vtterly confounded. That is ẏ cauſe why the Moabites hired Balaam in this ſort to curſe the Iſraelites in the name of God. For although all this which they did be diſallowed, & that they falſly pretēded ẏ name of God like trecherous caitifes as they were, ſo as this deede of theirs was in thē a curſed defilement, yet notwithſtanding al this proceeded frō a good grounde, namely: ẏ they yeelded vnto God all power of ruling ẏ worlde, howbeit ẏ they abuſed it afterward. Now when we ſee this, if we think to cōpaſſe ẏ things which we take in hand, ẇout calling on ẏ name of God, ſo as one putteth his truſt in his owne paines taking, an other in his wiſedome, a thirde in his ſtrength: we are worſe than theſe blinde wretches which neuer knew one word of the law: and there needes no other witneſſes to condemne vs before God. This therefore is a point wel worth the noting. Seeing God would ẏ ſuch light ſhold remaine among ẏ vnbeleeuing, as ẏ they ſhoulde knowe ẏ he gouerneth the life of men heere belowe, and ẏ all thinges are in his hande: [much more] ought wee to yeelde ẏ honour vnto him, vnleſſe wee will be worſe than thoſe which were without all true religion.

But let vs alſo take heede that when we haue ſome good ſeede, we corrupt it not. For ẏ matter conſiſteth not altogether in imagining this or ẏ of God: but we muſt haue a ſound & pure knowlege of him. For there is nothing more eaſie thā to ſnarle ourſelues, becauſe wee are ſo enclined vnto vanitie, & the deuill alſo forgeth vs many deceits to intangle our mindes ẇal, ſo as ẏ truth is by and by turned into a lie, except we ſtande heedefully vpon our gard. And therefore let vs learne to call vpon God, to the intent ẏ if he opē himſelfe vnto vs, we may not ſwarue neither to the right hand nor to ẏ left: and ẏ the knowledge which wee haue receiued, be not peruerted nor abuſed. For heere wee ſee what happened vnto thē which hired Balaam. They tooke him as a Prophet: & in very deed Balac the king of Moab ſayth vnto him: I know ẏ they whom thou curſeſt Numb.22.6 ſhalbe curſed, & thoſe whom thou bleſſeſt ſhalbe bleſſed. What is ẏ cauſe why Balac ſpeketh thus? He ſaw ẏ Balaā had receiued from God ẏ gift of prophecying, and of foretelling many things to come. He was therfore of opinion ẏ ſeeing God had made him ſuch an excellent mā, he ſhold be heard. So his intent and purpoſe was, to bring to paſſe that God might bee fauorable vnto him.

And

& this was good(as I tolde you) that he thought thus: Beholde, if God be on our ſide all ſhall goe well with vs, we ſhall remaine ſafe & ſound: but if his hand be againſt vs, we muſt needes periſh. Ye ſee one good thing in Balac and in al the Moabites which were his ſubiects, for they acknowledged that if God were their aduerſarie partie, they could not withſtand him, & thereupon they humbled themſelues before him, and deſired to obtayn fauor at his hand. Who wil not highlie eſteeme of this? yea, but in the meane while they went not the right way to worke. As I tolde you afore, it is not enough for men to haue ſome good meaning in generality, but they muſt come vnto God in ſuch ſorte as he commaundeth, and they muſt not ſeek any bypathes. For this is not the way to come vnto him, nay rather it keepeth vs aloofe from him, & maketh vs but to recoyle. Therefore albeit the Moabites knew that yͤ true happineſſe of men is to be in the fauour of God, and that they ſought to come thereunto: yet notwithſtanding they ceaſe not to offend him grieuouſly. And why ſo? For they take a cleane contrarie way, when they beare themſelues in hand that they ſhall buy the fauour of God for mony. And in what maner delt they? Although yͤ people of Iſraell was choſen of God, and the land of Chanaan was promiſed vnto them; yet the Moabites perſwaded themſelues that they might cōiure God in ſuch wiſe as he woulde not accompliſhe his promiſe, but ſhape and vnſhape himſelfe according vnto their luſtes and pleaſure. Let vs therefore note firſt of all, that to finde the fauour of God, we muſt not hardē our ſelues in our vices, but bee ſory for them: and ſecondly hope for nothing againſt his promiſes. Here bee two ſpeciall pointes. And it is all one as if it were ſayd, that to pleaſe God, we muſt be truely tepētant. For vntil we know our faultes, and be aſhamed of them, doubtleſſe God will alwayes remaine our enemie. And therewithal let vs groūd our ſelues vppon his promiſes. For it were a follie to thinke to obtaine any thing in ſuch ſort as God in the meane while ſhould bee faine to eate his worde, and be chaunged according vnto our fancie. Now the Moabites were of this minde. For they cōtinued ſpiteful ſtil. And how thought they to winne Gods fauour? They went about to buy it of Balaam for mony. Lykewiſe nowadayes among the Papiſts it is to be ſeene how they intangle themſelues in their ſinnes, and had leuer to rotte in their owne filth, than receiue the medicine which God offereth them. But in yͤ meane time they thinke to raunſome themſelues by their Maſſes, and by other ſuch meanes as they haue. But they ſhall gaine aſmuch as the Moabites did. And what meane they by theſe raunſomes which they bring, but that they woulde faine make God partaker of their wickedneſſe? When a man ſhall haue pilled & robbed others, he will bring part of that bootie for an offering. A fornicatour thinkes to cleare himſelfe by giuing of almes. Now this is all one as if they would ſet God in their owne aray, and make him alſo guiltie of the faultes as well as themſelues: & therefore they doe but prouoke his vengeance farther vppon them, as the Moabites did. So thē (as I haue tolde you afore) if wee will haue acceſſe vnto God, let vs learne to feele his anger: and in feeling of it, condemne our ſelues for our ſinnes, and ſo come and offer our ſelues purely vnto his ſeruice, praying him to change vs into new creatures, yͭ we may be acceptable vnto him.

And herewithall let vs come and ſeeke after that ranſome by the which we are recōciled vnto God, & redeemed frō all curſing: which is becauſe our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath ſhed his precious bloud for our ſaluation. And thus ye ſee how we ioyne the promiſes of God with repentance. For it is not enough for ſinners to feele and acknowledge their faultes, & to be aſhamed of thē: But faith muſt be ioyned therewithall. For what doe the Moabites in this place? They tel Balaam that thoſe whome he bleſſeth ſhall bee bleſſed. What proofes haue they of this? Was God pinned on Balaams ſleeue? Was he bound to him? Ye ſee then howe fondly Balac delt. But the deſpiſers of God deſerue well to be ſo blinded. For they perſwade themſelues that God will come downe from heauen, and transforme himſelf for their pleaſure, yea after what maner ſoeuer they ſeeke him. For (as I haue told you) there is a rule and manner of ſeeking God which wil neuer deceiue vs. And aſſoone as men turne there, from that, they doe but wander from him. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth then, if wee deſire in deede to finde fauour at the hand of God, let vs haue our eye fixed on his promiſes. Let vs know how and by what meanes it commeth to paſſe, that he fauoreth vs; and hying our ſelues thither, let vs wholy ſtay our ſelues on that which he telleth vs. To be ſhort, let faith be our guide, & ſhewe vs yͤ way. After that maner God wil accept of vs, whē we come vnto him; by that mean the gate ſhall be opened vnto vs. And ſo in the example of Balac and yͤ Moabites, we haue as it were a lookingglaſſe, wherein to behold al yͤ byſcapes & all the vagaries which yͤ world maketh, when they pretend to ſeeke God and yet keepe aloofe from him. For whatſoeuer they pretend, there is no alteration of minde in them, neither haue they any beliefe in the promiſes of God. On the cōtrary ſide, we haue alſo to gather how God will become fauorable vnto vs. And that is if we imagine not to bind him vnto vs, as though he ought to allow of our vices, and would intermeddle him with our filthineſſe: but ſeeke to bee clenſed from it, and to yeelde our ſelues vnto him, and to cleaue vnto his righteouſneſſe. Secondly when we conceiue nothing in our braine after our owne lyking, to ſay that wee muſt ſerue God, but how? after this manner: we muſt winne his fauour in this ſorte, after the manner of the lawleſſe libertie which reigneth nowadayes among yͤ Papiſts. But if we would aske any thing at the mouth of God: alas, wee are not worthie to come neare him. And againe when wee thinke on his maieſtie, wee muſt needes bee confounded for feare, becauſe there is nothing in vs but all manner of corruption, and wee muſt needes bee his enemies, euen of good right. Yea but wee haue thoſe promiſes which cannot deceiue vs, if ſo bee wee doubt nothing at all. Surely God ſo warranteth that which he hath ſpoken, ẏ if we ſet our mindes throughly vppon his promiſes and vnderprop our ſelues with them, we may goe on with a courage and not doubt but that he will receiue vs.

Now moreouer whereas it is ſayd that the Moabites hired Balaam, and meant that hee ſhould ſerue their turne to curſe the people; we haue hereby to note, that if we beare our ſelues in hand, that God wil helpe vs with his fauour againſt thoſe whom he loueth; the iſhew will be ſuch as we ſee the Moabites had thereof. And yet this is in common vſe, that the wicked think ẏ God ought to be on their ſide, notwithſtāding ẏ they perſecute & deſtroy folk with neuer ſo euil conſcience. Albeit ẏ they vſe neuer ſo much ſpitefulneſſe and crueltie, yet are they of opinion that God will helpe them. As for example nowadayes, when princes make warre vpon couetouſneſſe and ambition: they proclayme many ſolemne proceſſions. But what for that? Surely all that euer they do, is deteſtable before God. For what ſtirreth thē thereto, but that they are blinded with pride, couetouſneſſe and ſuch lyke thinges? ſo that they ſpare no mans bloud, ne make any account of confounding heauen and earth together: & yet notwithſtanding they call vpon the name of God. I alledge onely this one example, howbeit that euery particular perſon is at the ſame point. Euery of vs in ẏ trade which he vſeth, would faine haue God on his ſide. But yet for all that we continue ſtil our deceit & malicious wilineſſe, our cruelties & extortions, our periuries and trecherous dealinges, & wee giue our ſelues vnto all wickedneſſe: and is it poſſible that God ſhould be matched with our filthie infections? Should he renounce himſelf & turne his glory into ſhame? yet are mē ſo blockiſh that they dally thus with God, yea & ẏ with ſuch preſumptuous bouldnes, as it is an horrible thing to behold. Sith we ſee that this ſickneſſe is ouer riſe; let vs learne (as I haue told you) that when we wil cal vpon God to defend vs & to be aduerſary vnto our enimies, we muſt take heede that we haue a good cauſe, & that we be warranted in conſcience ẏ we attempt nothing but according to his will, that they which perſecute vs do it wrongfully, that we be deſirous as farre as lieth in vs to be at peace with our enemies, & that wee haue not prouoked them with any iniurie, nor giuen them any cauſe to moleſt vs. Whē we can proteſt this in conſcience before God; then we may wel call vpon him; & feare we not but he wil be our defēder. But if our cauſe be euil & that they which perſecute vs may truely alledge ẏ we haue prouoked them ſo to do, & haue giuen thē the cauſe therof; let vs not then looke for any fauour at Gods hand. For when we abuſe his name ſo falſly, our payment ſhal not be long after. And how ſhal we be rewarded? Verily not onely our labor ſhal be loſt, but God wil alſo laugh vs to skorne for taking part againſt his children. Therefore if wee wage battaile with good men, and vſe extortiōs, & wrongings, & other wicked practiſes, and increace the ſame with this further, of committing ſuch outrage againſt God as to intermeddle his name with our wickednes; queſtionleſſe hee will wreke his wrath vpon vs for it. Wee ſee what is ſaid in this place. For God pronouncing here ẏ ſentence of condemnation vpon the Moabites, ſaith ẏ they abuſed his name in hiring Balaā to curſe his people. Let vs therfore learn (as I haue tolde you) not to trouble thē which ſerue God, nor to maintaine any quarell againſt them, vnleſſe we will haue God for our aduerſarie. And in ſo dooing let vs not think to gaine any thing by calling vpon him, but rather perſwade our ſelues that in ſo doing we ſhall kindle his vengeance ſo much the more againſt vs.

Let vs come now vnto that which Moſes addeth: God would not heare Balaā, but turned his curſe into a bleſſing: becauſe the Lord thy God loued thee. This hiſtorie is handled more largelie from the 22. Chap. of Num. vnto the 24. But without making here the whole rehearſal thereof; it ſhal ſuffice to haue the effect of that which is touched here as by the way. It is ſaid that God would not heare Balaam, but there was yet more than ſo, as Moſes in that place rehearſeth. For God hindered him, and declared vnto him his will. Whē Balaam deſired leaue to goe at ẏ requeſt of Balac and of the Moabites: he made the meſſengers tarie a night, becauſe he would repaire aſide vnto God. Thereupon it was told him: Thou ſhalt not goe. But yet for al that, he bargained, yea & the deſire of gaine prouoked him to intreat God ſo long vntill he ſaith: Goe thy way; Howbeit ẇ diſpleaſure; inſomuch that God ſhewed him his rebellion & his own aſſe taught him, as who ſaw more clearer than he. He could not perceiue ẏ Angel of the Lord, and yet the brute beaſt perceiued him. Ye ſee then Balaā condemned; inſomuch that God giueth more reaſon & diſcretion to ẏ Aſſe whereon he ſate, than vnto him who was a Prophet: yea contrary to all nature ẏ Aſſe ſpeaketh. When we ſee all this, is it not aſmuch as if God had expreſly ſet himſelfe on the cōtrarie ſide, to ſhew ẏ he garded ẏ people of Iſrael vnder his protectiō? And after this when Balaam is come, what ſaith he? He telleth Balac ẏ king thus. I can doe nothing. Truely I haue enforced my ſelf to doe ſomewhat, but I ſee ẏ God withſtandeth me: and I cannot open my mouth to ſpeake, but he turneth my words clean cōtrary from my purpoſe. Hereupō they make many cōiuratiōs to hinder God, & make him beholden to thē: they reare vp ſeuē altars on one ſide, & ſeuē on another. And wherunto tēdeth al this, but to ẏ which I told you, ẏ the wicked woulde faine bring God to their part? But they goe not ẏ right way to ſeeke him. They fetch their vagaries and go by ẏ wayes. And they doe nothing but turne tayle to him. And if happilie they caſt an eye towardes him, it is but to prouoke his anger and to kindle it ſo much ẏ more. Ye ſee then in what ſort Balaam and Balac go forward. Now in the end whē God had opened Balaams mouth, hee prophecied of the good which ſhould come vnto the people of Iſraell vnto the reigne of Dauid: Saying, That a ſtarre ſhould come out of Iacob, the brightneſſe whereof ſhoulde reche vnto Iſrael, and Moab ſhoulde bee ſubiect vnto them, and humble himſelfe vnder their feete. And vndoutedly in the reigne of Dauid there was a figure of the kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Yee ſee then how Balaam was conſtrayned to ſpeake in this ſort mauger his beard, and againe, when Balac reproued him ſaying, What meaneſt thou? Thou art come hither at my charges, and commeſt thou to deceiue mee? for thou doeſt cleane contrary to that which thou didſt promiſe mee. And what can I do ſaith Balaam? Is God like vnto men, that hee ſhoulde change his purpoſe? If he haue once decreed a thing, it muſt needs be done, it abideth for euer. For hee altereth not, ne changeth according to the luſt of men. Beholde how the falſe prophet ſpeaketh in as excellent a ſtyle and manner of ſpeech as can be, of Gods vnchangeable truth.

Now becauſe the Iſraelites ſhould not think that Gods doing hereof, was either becauſe thy had deſerued ſomething, or becauſe they were better than the Moabites: Moſes ſayeth afterwards: That this was becauſe God loued the Iewes. To the intent therefore that he might be magnified for his freebeſtowed goodnes, and that ẏ Iewes might humble them ſelues knowing that they had obtayned fauour at his hand by reaſon hee had choſen & elected them of his owne good will; he ſaith: Thy God hath now declared how he loued thee. Here we haue to note firſt of all that Balaam was ſuch a falſe prophet, as notwithſtanding had ſome particular gift of prophecying from God: and theſe be no contrary things that a man ſhould haue the gift of prophecying, and yet for all that abuſe the gift of the holy ghoſt, and turne it to a wicked purpoſe. Wee ſee that alſo which S. Paul ſayth in his Epiſtle to the 1.Cor.14. Corinthians; namely, that they which had the gift of tongues, of interpreting, and ſuch like things which were excellent in the Church; had notwithſtanding no regarde of edifyng of the Church: and that many of them were not renewed in ſuch ſort by the ſpirit of God, ẏ they Phil.1.18. ſought to ſerue him. It may wel be therfore that men ſhal haue receiued excellent gifts to bee eſteemed, & that they ſhall beare the markes of the ſpirit of God, & yet not haue the chiefe and principal thing of all, ẏ is to wit, the ſpirit of regeneration, nor be ſo confirmed, that they ſhall giue themſelues ouer wholy vnto the ſeruice of God, & endeuour to make that auailable vnto them which they haue receiued, by applying it vnto a good & lawful vſe, wayting for the ſaluation which God ſetteth before them. This may wel be. And if this fall out in the Church, that is to ſay, to them which are of the houſholde of faith: what ſhal we think of Balaam & the like? & ſo we ſee there is no inconuenience, ẏ Balaam had the gift of prophecie, & yet for all that had many corruptions therewithal, inſomuch that he was an idolater, & vſed ſorceries. But what is the cauſe that God gaue him the knowledge of foretelling things to come? for it might ſeeme ẏ by this meanes he ſetteth forth his name vnto open reproche. It is true in deede that Balaam & ſuch like, when they thus abuſe the gifts of God, do vnhallow ẏ which is holy, & that which they haue receiued of God. Yet notwſtanding there was this reſpect, ẏ God ment to leaue ſome witneſſe of himſelf euen among the Infidels, to the intent they might haue ſo much ẏ leſſe excuſe, & be ſo much the more conuicted, if they would make ignorance their buckler. As for example, the Moabites foraſmuch as they had not ẏ law, therefore they had neuer knowen any thing of God, except their fathers had left thẽ ſome ſmal remnant therof. For Lot was not ignorant of it, but beeing brought vp in his vncle Abrahams houſe, he knew what religion meant. As for the Moabites, they were altogether eſtranged from it. Howbeit there remained ſome ſmall print therof, ẏ they might be conuicted at the latter day: ẏ if they had ſought after God, they might haue attained vnto him, but becauſe they were ſnarled in the multitude of ſuperſtitions which they themſelues had deuiſed, & were growen cleane out of kinde, they can ſeeke after no ſtarting holes: for they ſhal always be condemned for hauing a malicious wickednes in them, and for turning aſide from God, ſo as they deſerued to be blinded in ẏ faſhion by ẏ deceits of Satan. And thus yee ſe what is to be noted in the firſt place touching Balaam.

Now in ẏ Balac beleeued, ẏ if Balaam once curſed ẏ people, al ſhould paſſe on his ſide: wee ſee therby how men can neuer hold the mean, but euen do ſwarue aſide to ſome extremitie or other. It is true in deede ẏ when wee are bleſſed Gen.2.7. of ẏ prophets of God, the ſame is a warrant vnto vs of his bleſſing. But yet we muſt alwayes haue an eye vnto God. For if we teare him in pieces, what ſhal we win therby? But when men think to coniure God, it is al one as if they would diſmember him. For they intend to ſeuer his iuſtice & vprightnes from his truth, & his gratious goodnes, from his mightie power. God ſaieth ẏ when we be bleſſed of his prophets, we ought to aſſure our ſelues that he ratifieth ẏ ſame in heauen. When Abraham bleſſed Iſaac, when Iſaac bleſſed Iacob, when Iacob bleſſed his children, it was no vaine bleſſing, becauſe it had his certaine force & effect. And why? Becauſe God had giuen vnto them this office. And what is ẏ reaſon ẏ we are bleſſed at his hand, when mẽ bleſſe vs with their mouth? His wil is that men ſhould beare this reuerence vnto his word, by ẏ which he declareth him ſelf here below vnto vs, he cõmeth not downe alwayes from heauen in viſible maner, he ſendeth not his angels at our pleſure: but thoſe whome he hath ordeined his meſſengers, are to declare his wil vnto vs. He wilbe ſerued by them as by inſtruments, to the intent he may make his bleſſings which he ſendeth vnto men to profit them. And therefore if we ſay that being bleſſed by the Prophets or by the prieſts, we are aſſured ẏ God ratifieth the ſame in heauen: we ſhal ſpeake truly. Yea verily, if ſo be wee haue an eye vnto God, & be conformable vnto his wil. But if we dally with God, & wil haue him transforme himſelfe at our beck; let vs note ẏ he wil curſe vs, yea, ẏ he will curſe vs double when we vſe him in that order. For when God ordeined that the prieſtes ſhould bleſſe the people, it was to good effect & purpoſe. For it is expreſſely ſaid in the ſixth Chapter of Numbers: Ye ſhall bleſſe my people in my name, & they ſhalbee bleſſed. There is a promiſe made. The prieſtes then when they opened their mouth in ẏ name of God, had this trueth warranted from heauē, ẏ they might promiſe the fauor of God, and the people were certaine ẏ they ſhould proſper whē they once had this warrant which was offered vnto them. But yet for all that it behoued them to haue an eye vnto God. For if ẏ wicked ſhould come to ſeeke for a bleſſing at the prieſts hāds, & the prieſts on the one ſide ſhould defie God & make their gaine of him; & they on the other ſide which come vnto them, haue hyred them to bleſſe: what might be thought of it? It were a diueliſh ſuperſtition, & a peruerting of ẏ order of God. And yet notwithſtanding they do it daily in the popedom. For ye ſee what our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſaid vnto his diſciples. If you forgiue ſins Matt.16.19. vpon earth, they ſhalbe forgiuen in heauen: and Iohn.20.21. whatſoeuer yee vnbinde vpon earth, ſhalbe vnbound in heauen. Ye ſee then how our Lord Ieſus Chriſts will is, ẏ his bleſſing ſhould be vttered vnto vs in his name. But what do the papiſts? Their prelacie forſooth on ẏ one ſide vſurp the office of God, & by their charmes & ſorceries they would ſo bleare ẏ eyes of the whole world, ẏ men ſhould not ſeeke after God. It is ynough (ſay they) to haue a croſſe on ẏ back, or a ſprinkling of holy water, & I know not what. And the world on ẏ other ſide is ſoone entreated to receiue theſe dotages. For men fal aſleep in their vices, & beare themſelues in hande it is ynough for them to haue diſcharged al their ſinnes once a yere into a prieſtes boſome, & then to haue a Maſſe or two ſung, & other like ſolemnities vſed After this maner haue men purchaced bleſſings not at Gods, but at Balaams hand. What is then to be done? Becauſe we ſee men ſwarue thus aſide vnto theſe ſinful extremities; let vs know, ẏ when Gods wil is ẏ his bleſſing be declared vnto vs by ẏ mouth of men, it is to the intent wee ſhould look vp vnto him, & receiue the bleſſing at his hand, yea, & ẏ in ſuch ſort as wee ſeuer it not from his trueth or righteouſnes. On what condition is it ẏ he bleſſeth vs? It is to the intent firſt ẏ we ſhould know, ẏ there is in vs nothing but curſednes, & ſecondly ẏ we ſhould haue recourſe vnto his maieſtie, & hold our ſelues in ẏ right way which hee hath ſhewed vnto vs, and therefore let vs not diſioyne ẏ which is ioyned togither by God leaſt we become guiltie of this crueltie of tearing God as it were in peeces, as the Papiſts do nowadayes, & the Moabites did in time paſt. Now then we ſee wherin Balac offended, & how we are warned by his fault, which is, that he thought Balaam had this priuilege to bleſſe at his pleaſure, & that God had layed the bridle on his neck, & that he had reſigned ouer vnto him his own office. Let vs take heede of ſo vaine & fooliſh thoughts. And let vs vnderſtand ẏ when God ſendeth vs men to declare vnto vs his word, it is not becauſe himſelfe would bee at reſt & ſleepe in heauen, & in the mean time forſake his church here below, & ſuffer men to beſtow at their pleaſure ẏ treaſure which he hath committed vnto them; but it is to the intent ẏ we ſhould be guyded vnto him according vnto our weaknes. If we haue men to ſpeake vnto vs in his name; it is not to the end ẏ we ſhold ſtick vnto them, but to the intent they might be our ayders & helpers. And yet notwithſtanding if we wil come vnto God, we muſt be bleſſed in his name; yea, & receiue ẇ faith & true repentance the good which he offereth vs. And when we be ſo bleſſed, let vs knowe ẏ that which men ſhall haue done, is no vaine or fruitles thing: becauſe God warranteth & ratifieth it in heauen: but yet for al ẏ, he himſelf muſt gouerne vs, he muſt always haue the chiefe preheminence, & we muſt not leane to creatures, but reſort vnto him and ſay: Lord it is of thee that I deſire to be bleſſed. And how? not by forging ſuch imaginations as ſhal ſeeme good vnto vs: but thou Lord haſt appointed ẏ we ſhould come vnto thee, & ſith wee haue thy word, it is ynough to aſſure vs that our labor ſhal not be loſt: but that the thing which thou haſt pronounced & decreed by thy worde & by the doctrine of ẏ Goſpel, ſhalbe fulfilled: & that although it be done on earth, yet notwithſtanding ẏ effect therof ſhalbe ſhewed in heauē. Wherfore whenſoeuer we heare the warrant of our ſaluation preached vnto vs; it is all one as if we had ſeene an angel from heauen, or as if god himſelf had taught vs in his own perſon: and we muſt do God this honor to receiue his word reuerently without making any reply againſt it, at leaſtwiſe if we wilbe holden & accounted for his people. Now herewithal we are alſo warned ẏ God by witholding the mouth of Balaam, declared therby the power of his promiſe which hee had made vnto Abraham. Truely he might haue vſed other meanes: but his intent was to certifie the Iewes more fully of their adoption. Sometimes God giueth the bridle to the wicked to blaſpheme with open & ful mouth, & to peruert al truth, whereupon they take ſo vnruly & lawleſſe leaue, as none cā be greater, & do nothing elſe but pluck forward the vengeance of God vpon their heads. To be ſhort, all the world groweth out of kind by their abuſes. God ſomtimes permitteth this. And why ſo? bicauſe mē are worthie ſomtimes of ſuch ſcourges. Secondly, God meaneth to humble vs. And thirdly, he will trye ẏ ſtedfaſtnes of our faith. But in Balaam he vſed another manner of order, ẏ is to wit, he bridled his tongue ſo as he could not do what he would, & what he purpoſed: for god withſtood him. And why did hee ſo? Becauſe ẏ people were ouer tender & nyce harted: they had neede of helpe, and therefore God meant to giue them this aduantage. So then let vs note, ẏ he ſuffereth deceiuers ſometimes to darken the trueth, yea, & to caſt forth their lyes at ful, & in the meane while notwithſtanding diſappointeth them of their purpoſe: or if his wil be that they preuaile, it is becauſe of mens vnthākfulnes: for (as S. Paul ſaith) they haue wel deſerued that God ſhould forſake 2.Theſſ.2.11 them. But ſomtimes he wil bridle the toūgs of ẏ wicked, ſo as the enimies of the worde of God cannot ſpeake that which full faine they would; & we ſee nowadayes many experiences hereof. In deede a man may ſee on the one ſide theſe hyreling villaines, theſe hypocrites & flatterers [I meane] which write nowadays as their knowledge ſerueth them, & as men greaſe them in yͤ hand like common ſtrumpets of the ſtewes. It is nothing with them to ſpeake euil of God, and to aduaunce themſelues againſt his word. We may ſee many ſuch Balaams nowadayes, which are at the Popes pay, & are of his ſtinking clergie, & be of the number of theſe horned beaſts. But yet we ſee alſo how God bridleth them, & locketh them vp in ſuch cloſe ward, yͤ they ſpeake ſometimes cleane contrarie to that they purpoſed, ſo as they profit vs more by that meanes, than if they had ſet themſelues purpoſely to ſerue god: inſomuch yͤ the throte of Popedom is cut by his own vnderlings, & by all theſe Balaams which endeuour to bring al to vtter deſtruction, & the things which are done by them, doe ſerue vs to as good purpoſe, as if the ſeruaunts of God had ſpoken & written. Therefore when we ſee this, let vs acknowledge the goodnes of God, and be confirmed more & more therin. And moreouer if he ſometimes giue ſuch great libertie vnto yͤ wicked, yͤ they diſguiſe al things, & falſifie the trueth by turning of it into a lie: Let vs pray him to ſtrengthen vs againſt ſuch temptations, and not ſuffer the weaklings to quayle altogither by that meanes. Now it is to be noted alſo yͤ God heard not Balaam, but held him backe, notwithſtanding that he declared his wil vnto him, & in the end did ſuffer him to goe. Hereby wee are taught not to come with hypocriſie as Balaam did when we deſire leaue for any thing at Gods hand. For wee ſee what leaue he had. The like was ſaid vnto king Achab. 1.King.22.15. Yea thou ſhalt haue yͤ victorie. But God mocked him, becauſe he wold needes haue leaue of him, whether he would or no. Wel, God gaue him leaue, but it was to doe him to vnderſtand, yͤ he was prouoked thereby to farther diſpleaſure: ſo hapned it vnto Balaam. But how euer it be, let vs thus conclude: that for aſmuch as Balaã was ſo ſtubbornly bent; therefore his couetuſnes ſo blinded him, as he ſought onely after gaine. For as a ſwyne when he hath once winded his meat, runnes on to ſwaſh himſelf in it, though he ſee men readie to ſtick him, becauſe his luſt carieth him on headlōg though it be to his death: ſo doe the wicked which deſpiſe God. And why? For their deſires blind thē, & cary them away headlong, & yet will they needes haue Gods leaue with them.

But wee ſee what befell of it: namely yͤ God cōmādeth him to bleſſe his people, & to curſe the Moabites. Foraſmuch as wee ſee this, let vs know yͤ ſith God did put the warrant of his truth in the mouth of a falſe prophet, [we muſt aſſure our ſelues that] when he ſheweth vs ſo great fauour as to ſpeak vnto vs by thoſe whom he hath appointed ſheepheards in his church, & by whō he wilbe ſerued; it is an infallible warrant of his gracious goodnes towards vs. And ſeeing that a falſe prophet was conſtrayned to ſay yͤ God is not like vnto mortal men, what ought we to do? Seeing yͤ a falſe prophet ſpeaketh thus, Num.23.19 we ought to be aſhamed to call the trueth of God in queſtion, ſpecially when he declareth it vnto vs: by ſuch as repreſent his perſon. And therfore let euery man anſwere Amen in his heart. Sith wee heare euery day yͤ God allureth vs vnto himſelf, that he reneweth the remembrance of yͤ adoption which he hath made vs, yͤ he layeth before vs the benefite of the death & paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, declaring vnto vs that we are cleanſed by that meanes, & yͤ we are reconciled vnto him: let theſe thinges cauſe vs to aunſwere Amen; & let vs rightly ſeale vp the ſame, to ſhew yͤ when God ſpeaketh we are content with that which he ſaith, nothing douting but that he will fulfil the ſame in his time.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them more & more, yea, & yͤ knowing how there is nothing in vs but al maner of miſerie & wretchednes, & yͤ vntil he accept of vs through his mercie, wee muſt needes be his enemies; it may pleaſe him to grant vs the grace to ſeeke him, not with fainednes & hypocriſie, but in plain truth, ridding vs of all our wicked affections, & of whatſoeuer we haue beſides which may hinder vs from cōming vnto him purely & in ſuch ſimplicitie as he requireth. Let vs therfore go vnto him with repentance & faith, ſubmitting our ſelues wholy vnto his word, & embracing his promiſes which he maketh vs to feele with their power & effect. And that albeit we heare them not but of mortal men which ſpeake vnto vs, yet wee may not fayle to ſticke wholly vnto yͤ doctrine which is of God, & to yͤ order which he hath appointed, knowing yͤ our Lord Ieſus Chriſt wil ſhew howe it was not for nought yͤ he ordeined yͤ his church ſhould be ſo ordered. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace not only vnto vs, but alſo, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxij. of Ianuarie, 1556.

The Cxxxij. Sermon which is the third vpon the three and twentith Chapter.

7 Thou ſhalt not abhorre an Edomite, becauſe he is thy brother. Thou ſhalt not abhorre an Egyptian, becauſe thou waſt a ſtranger in his land.

8 The children which are borne to them in the third generation, ſhal enter into the congregation of the Lord.

9 VVhen thou goeſt out with an hoſt againſt thine enemies, then keepe thy ſelfe from euery wicked thing.

10 If any among you be vncleane by that which cōmeth vnto him by night, he ſhall go out of the hoſt & not come into the hoſt againe.

11 But at euening he ſhall waſh himſelfe with water, and when the Sunne is downe, he ſhal come into the hoſt againe.

WE haue already declared whereunto this which Moſes treateth of here doth tend. Namely to this, that for aſmuch as God had ſeuered the people of Iſrael from al other nations of the world, that priuilege might be obſerued: and that was to the intent ẏ thoſe whom he of his free fauour had ſo choſen, might the better vnderſtand, how deepely they were bound vnto his frebeſtowed goodnes. For as we haue before ſeene, he preferred them not in this maner before all the world, either for any worthines or nobilitie which was in their perſons. Ye ſee then how the children of Abraham were then adopted, when God gathered them vnto himſelf, to be taken for his children. And therefore they are exhorted not to mingle thēſelues with the defilements of ẏ Infidels, but to continue in al holines, becauſe God hath ſo dedicated them vnto himſelfe: knowing ẏ they ought not to match themſelues with ſuch as were remoued from God, for that had bin an infecting of themſelues to peruert the grace of God. Likewiſe nowadays being aſſured ẏ God hath giuen vs his word, it is to the end we ſhould walke, not as blinde men in darkenes but as folke ẏ are enlightened & haue the ſunne of righteouſnes, our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Yee ſee then in effect what Moſes treateth of in this place, to wit, that ẏ people of Iſrael being elected of God, ſhould keepe poſſeſſion of that grace which was granted vnto them.

Now if a man had ſeene ẏ eſtate of ẏ children of Iſrael at ẏ time; he would haue ſcorned ẏ forbidding which is ſet down here. For alas poore men they had wandered alreadie in the wildernes fortie yeres; they had not one foote of land of their own; they were hunted out of al places, & yet for all ẏ, as if they had bin of ſome great nobilitie, & in ſome high dignitie, God ſaith vnto them: make much of the benefit which I haue beſtowed vpon you, receiue not the Moabites, for they are your open enimies; but receiue the Egyptians & Edomits, in ẏ third generatiō. Yea, but what ſhould ẏ Edomites haue gained by cōming to ſuch a wandring & vagabond people? & again, as for ẏ Edomites, they were in peaceable poſſeſſion of their inheritance, no man troubled them, & therfore this might ſeeme ſuperfluous. But let vs note ẏ God valueth more the fauour which hee beſtoweth on men when hee calleth them into his church, than if they had all ẏ riches & honors, & all ẏ delicate pleaſures in the world. Ye ſee then ẏ reaſon why God forbiddeth ẏ Iewes to receiue them whom he had curſed & reiected. For ẏ queſtion is not whether ẏ Moabites & Egyptians ſhould aduantage thēſelues the more as touching earthly commodities, by ioyning with ẏ people of God: that cōmeth not into account: but whether it would not benefite them to come vnto ẏ inheritance of ſaluation if they were mēbers of the church of God, if they were partakers of ẏ adoption which God made in the perſon of Abraham. That was the thing which was to be conſidered. Therfore albeit we be now deſpiſed of the world, yea, & ſcorned alſo as we ſee how this heathniſh kind of men are ful of pride, & make ſuch triumphes to ẏ worldward ẏ they wil ſcarſe vouchſafe to make vs their foot ſtooles to tread vpon: although (ſay I) that wee ſee our ſelues brought into ſuch contempt: yet notwithſtāding let vs know, ẏ ſith God hath beſtowed ſo ineſtimable a benefite vppon vs, as to looke mercifully vpon vs, & to draw vs to him, & ẏ at this day we are of his houſhold: Surely it ſurmounteth al that euer men do cuſtomably eſteeme of in ẏ world. For ẏ which is ſaid by Eſay ẏ Prophet ſhal always hold: namely, that we are more eſteemed before him, than are all ẏ great kingdoms of ẏ world. Eſa.43.3. So then let vs learn to cōtent our ſelues with the fauour which God hath beſtowed vpon vs, in ẏ it hath pleaſed him to gather vs into his houſe as his own children, and let vs beare patiently ẏ want of all other things, & not be ouerpenſiue or grieued, though ẏ world make no account of vs. For it ought wel to content vs ẏ our Lord ſheweth himſelfe our father, & ẏ he hauing adopted vs, calleth vs to our heauenly inheritance, although in this world we be moſt miſerable, & (as it ſhould ſeeme) none in worſe eſtate & condition than we. Let vs come now vnto ẏ which is ſaid of the Edomites. Gods wil is, That in the third generation they ſhould be receiued, yea, euen to be accounted of the Church, if they offer themſelues therunto. And he addeth, That they are brethren, that is to ſay kinſmen, of the children of Iſrael. For we know ẏ Eſau from whome the Edomites came, was the eldeſt ſonne of Iſaac: ſo ẏ by nature he ſhould haue bin preferred before Iacob, if God of his freebeſtowed goodneſſe had not made a change therin. Now ẏ Moabites alſo were kinſmen of the children of Iſrael by reaſon of Lot. But we haue ſeene why God did cut them off, to wit, becauſe they enforced themſelues to ẏ vtmoſt of their power, to hinder the children of Iſrael from cōming to their inheritance. Thoſe then which ſhould haue bin neere by bloud, eſtranged themſelues wholly from the people of God. For they troubled the gratious fauour which God had beſtowed on his people, or at leaſtwiſe it was not long of them, that it was not troubled. For they hyred Balaam, & endeuoured to annihilate the bleſſing of God, & to aboliſh his promiſe. Yee ſee then in them an vpardonable offence. But as touching the Edomites, there was no ſuch reaſon. And ſo, God remembred ſtill, that hauing made the promiſe to his ſeruaunt Abraham, hee extended his fauour to his whole ſtocke. Yea, albeit that Eſau was for a tyme depriued of it; yet notwithſtanding he would not haue him ſo farre remoued from it, as other nations were. In deede if wee conſider both theſe people, as they are, either in his eſtate, wee ſhal ſee that to be true which is ſaide by the Prophet Malachie: Mal.1.2. for God vpbraideth the children of Iſrael with their vnthankfulnes in this behalf ẏ they conſidered not what a priuiledge he had giuen them. What (ſaith he) haue you forgotten ẏ loue which I haue ſhewed you? And wherin? There he bringeth in the children of Iſrael as wicked folke & ſuch as had caſt vnder foote ẏ which they had receiued. I pray you (ſaith he) was not Eſau Iacobs brother? and yet I loued Iacob your father and hated Eſau. My will was he ſhould bee ſhut vp as it were in the deſerts & hilles, & I haue giuen you all this countrey in poſſeſſion. Yee ſee thē how God magnifieth his goodnes towards ẏ ſtock of Iacob, in compariſon of Eſau. But heere Moſes ſaith ẏ if the Edomites wold yeeld themſelues into the church of God, they might bee receiued in the third generation, yea & bee incorporated thereinto altogither. For he which offered himſelfe to be circumciſed, was alwayes receiued; but he was not yet accounted of ẏ bodie of the people, vntil the third generation. Let vs therfore diligently note, that here the children of Eſau be not made equall vnto the ſtock of Iacob. But it is ſaid that if any of them would renounce his own kinred, he ſhould be accounted in the number of this bleſſed ſtocke which God had ſhouled out to ſerue him, and be receiued in among them.

Now we are here to call to minde, that when God made his promiſe, it was vnto the whole ſtock of Abraham; not that al were partakers of the promiſe of ſaluation, but that God had a certaine regard & bare a ſpecial fauour vnto al that houſe, & vnto them which were to iſſue from it, accordingly alſo as we ſee how he ſaith: As concerning Iſmael, I haue heard thee. Gen.17.20. And in very deede, it was not for nought ẏ God cōmaunded ẏ Iſmael ſhould be circumciſed. We know what circumciſion importeth: it is a ſigne of the fauor of God. Now ſeeing it was giuen vnto Iſmael, it is great reaſon ẏ he ſhould approch more neere vnto God than the Paynims which were altogither defiled, & which had no ſigne that God loued them, I ſay no particular ſigne. For in as Matt.5.45. much as he maketh his ſunne to ſhine vpon the good & vppon the wicked, & in that he nouriſheth the whole world; therby he proueth himſelfe a father towards all. But here the caſe is of hauing ſome warrant of adoption. Now Iſmaell had it. But in the end it is ſaide that he ſhall not Gen.21.10. be the inheritour of the houſe. Behold he is cut Gal.4.30. off. And S. Paul alſo alleageth the ſame ſimilitude, to ſhew that there are many which are called in the church of God, which in the ende are driuen out againe & baniſhed, as not worthy to enioy ſo great a benefit. And ſo was it with Eſau: for he was the ſonne Iſaac, yea he and his Gen.25.24. brother Iacob were twinnes: by reaſon whereof it might ſeeme there ſhould haue been two nations of like condition & eſtate altogither. Eſau was the elder, & for that cauſe ſhould haue been preferred before his brother, but he was bereued of his right: God chaunged the order of nature, to the intent we might haue a looking glaſſe (as the holy ſcripture ſheweth it to bee) that it is of meere fauour, when we are elected of God: ẏ we muſt not ſeeke ẏ cauſe therof in our ſelues, as if we had preuented him, or as if we had deſerued any thing, & ẏ he had found vs more worthy thã others. There is none of al this. But if wee bee ſmal & contemptible, yea & as it were thinges borne out of time; God will magnifie his goodnes ſo much the more, by chooſing vs. Yee ſee how Eſau is driuen out of his fathers houſe. And in what maner? Is it that he ſhould be put beſide all ẏ commodities of this world? No. For he was rich & wealthie. Yea, it ſeemed ẏ he was an hundredfold more happie than his brother Iacob. For whiles Iacob remained a ſtranger ſtil in the land, Eſau was wel harbored, & his offſpring was ſettled in peace. Yea, he had then the lordſhip & gouernment in ẏ countrey of Edom, which countrie caried his name. And al this whyles poore Iacob is a fugitiue in a farre countrie: And when hee returneth hee falleth on his knees before Gen.33.4. him, & deſireth mercie, ſo as his life ſeemed to hang by a ſlender thread, & that Eſau ſhould deuour him, like as when a Wolfe holdeth a ſillie ſheepe in his chawes. Euen ſo ſtoode ẏ caſe with him. And in the end when Iacob was com home againe, wee ſee he did nothing but wander here & there, ſo as hee had ſcarce any corner to liue in, yea, & ẏ was at the curteſie of another: he had no water to drink, but it coſt him dearely: he was hardly entreated & many quarels were picked vnto him for al the things ẏ he had; laſtly hee was driuen from his owne home into Egypt by reaſon of famine, & there to dye. But as for the Edomites, they pyned not away after that maner. And ſo we ſee (as I told you) ẏ God meant in this behalf to ſhew the fauour which he beſtoweth on men when he vouchſafeth to chooſe them vnto himſelfe. And herewithal we ſee how his goodnes was extended to al the ſtock of Abraham, although they which were children only after ẏ fleſh, were not accounted nor aduowed to be of the church: yet neuertheles there alwayes remained ſome remnant of grace amōg them. Likewiſe at this day we be farre neerer neighbors vnto the Papiſts, than vnto ẏ Turkes or other Paynims. And the reaſon is, becauſe ẏ albeit they are eſtranged from the grace of god, & haue corrupted al religion, & are ſo intãgled in their abuſes & corruptions as it is horrible to behold; yet notwithſtanding there remayneth among them ſome footſtep of ẏ calling of God. For they haue baptiſme which is a viſible ſigne wherby we ſee ẏ God held thē of his houſe & of his fold. Ye ſee then how ẏ papiſts are as it were the Edomites. For they were firſt called; and ſhoulde haue beene partakers of the ſaluation which was preached vnto vs by the goſpel; they beare yet the mark therof as touching baptiſme. But becauſe they haue peruerted the ſeruice of God, yea & as it were taken faith clean away, by the which they ſhould haue bin called vnto the mercie which hath bin brought vnto vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; it is great reaſon ẏ they ſhold be held for Edomites.But on the other ſide, we ought notwithſtanding to call to mynd the brotherhood which they had with vs:And therfore let vs endeuor as much as is poſſible for vs, to bring them back againe,that we may be knit togither againe.And how knit togither againe ? I meane not,that we ſhould turne aſide from the pure trueth of God,to be at agreement with the Papiſts,but that they ſhould enter,that is to ſay, that they ſhould approch neare vnto God,& ſo we be reconciled al of vs,yeelding obediẽce vnto our heauenly father,ſo as we may haue al one head Ieſus Chriſt who will defende vs vnder his wings.When the Papiſtes come & order themſelues thus,we are to receiue them with all gentlenes,by reaſõ of the brotherhood which God hath ſet betweene them & vs. And we muſt not only do ſo; but alſo muſt ſeeke them as much as is poſſible for vs to do.

As touching the Egyptians, it is ſaide yͤ they alſo ſhalbe receiued into the Church.And why? For thou waſt a ſtranger (ſaith he) *in the land of Egypt.*Now in deede,true it is that the children of Iſrael were oppreſſed with cruel bondage by reſon of the cruel tyrannie which the Egyptians exerciſed ouer them. But yet Gods will is that their benefits ſhould be acknowledged. Albeit they ſo vniuſtly oppreſſed the childrẽ of Iſrael, yet becauſe yͤ children of God had their refuge thither in the time of famine, & were there relieued:God wil not haue that benefit forgotten. And yͤ is the cauſe alſo why God by the Prophet Eſa,52.4. Eſay,comparing the captiuitie of Egypt with yͤ captiuitie of Aſſyria,ſaith : In deede my people went to ſoiorne in Egypt, & neceſſitie conſtrained them therto: & wheras the Egyptians oppreſſed them,in ſo doing they did them wrong: but yet they had ſome colour thereof, in yͤ they might ſay,Theſe men yeelded themſelues vnto vs.But as for the Aſſyrians, they came & vexed them of their own accord,ſayth he. Now then we ſee yͤ although the children of Iſrael might iuſtly complaine of their euil intreatance in Egypt,& of yͤ manifold iniuries which they had indured there; yet neuertheles God cõmandeth them to think yͤ they were bound vnto the Egyptians for ſomething. For ye were harboured in their countrie(ſaith he).Hereby we are warned to be mindeful of yͤ good which we ſhal haue receiued at any bodies hand:in ſo much that if we be afterward harmed or ouermuch oppreſſed by him in any thing;yet we muſt beare it paciently & alwayes beare in minde to ſay: wel,yet for all this,we be ſtil bound vnto ſuch a man. In deede I graunt we ſhall haue occaſion to be grieued againſt ſuch: but yet ſeeing yͤ God hath ayded & releeued vs by their meane, yͤ muſt always preuaile with vs & we muſt remaine their friends as farre as lieth in vs.And that is a good leſſon for vs to beare in mind vpon this place.

But yet further let vs thinke alſo of yͤ which I told you, namely, that when God gaue an entrance vnto yͤ Egyptians,to be receiued into the congregation in the third generation:it was not to the intent yͤ the people of Iſrael ſhould defile themſelues with the abominations of Egypt, or meddle any whit at al with them:but rather that the Egyptians ſhould not remaine in ſo deſperate a caſe as they were in,but be brought to worſhip yͤ liuing God & to dedicate thẽſelues wholly vnto him.For if our Lord had not opened the gate both vnto the people of Egypt & of Edom, they would haue bin ſo much the farther off frõ comming vnto true religion. But if when yͤ gate is opened vnto them,they accept not the benefit as God offereth,they are to be the more griuouſly condemned. And ſo we ſee the intent & meaning of this law.It was not Gods meaning,yͤ his people ſhould gratifie the Egyptians by making a mingled & corrupted religion,that euery man might put to his patch & his peece: but yͤ if the Egyptians would forſake all their owne corruptiõs,they might be graffed as an imp is on a tree,they might (I ſay) be vnited vnto yͤ church of God.And we ſee how in yͤ 45.Pſalme mention is made of the wife of Salomon,& albeit ſhe was a kinges daughter,it is ſaide vnto her: Hearken O daughter, thou muſt forget thy fathers houſe & al thy people, & cleaue wholly vnto thy huſband,& then he wil loue thee. Now we knowe yͤ the holy ghoſt in that place hath giuen vs as it were a generall rule, that all they which before time haue bin ſtrangers to the word of God,& haue not knowen what the doctrine of ſaluation meaneth,muſt vpon their calling firſt of al forget their kinred & their birth, & al their former trade of liuing,& then ſubmit themſelues wholy vnto him,which is made their head, & in whoſe name & perſon God marryeth vs.For we knowe that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt maketh a ſpirituall marriage with vs,to the intent we ſhould be mẽbers of his bodie. Let vs therfore note, yͤ Gods opening of the gate into his Church, both to yͤ Edomits & the Egyptiãs,was not to haue them bring in their infections to peruert his ſeruice,or to make any medly , but rather yͤ yͤ Edomites & Egyptians ſhould come & agree in al points vnto his law, & yeeld their conſent vnto yͤ purenes of doctrine which is therein contained. And therfore nowadayes, ſeeing yͤ God hath ſhewed himſelf ſo gracious vnto vs , as to make vs his church , let vs learne ſo to keepe vs vnder his wings,as we may not be drawen aſide one way nor other: let vs take heede(I ſay)yͤ we ſtray not at mens pleaſures: but let vs hold our ſelues vnto yͤ pure doctrine which we haue receiued. Let vs be readie to receiue them which wil be reclaimed therunto , yea let vs haue our armes ſtretched out, not only to them which are the children of God,but alſo to ſuch as are our kinſfolke afarre off,endeuoring for al yͤ to winne & to gain them,howbeit alwayes with this condition, that they remoue not vs from God,but that they rather be knit againe vnto him with vs.

Now this fauour which God had graunted both to yͤ Edomites & the Egyptians, & this benefit which he had beſtowed on them,was afterward againe taken from them by reaſon of their own wilful malice. And that is yͤ cauſe why it is ſaid in the Pſalm, Lord remember the children Pſal.137.
of Edom. For they ſaid in the day of Ieruſalem, Sacke it,ſacke it,raſe it downe to the grounde.

Ye ſee how the holy Ghoſt pronounceth a newe curſe vpon the Edomites. And yet notwithſtanding they were brethren together with the children of Iacob: yea they came of the ſtocke of Abraham, who (as we know) was the father of the Church. Yea and we haue ſeene likewiſe, ẏ God had ſuch a regarde of the Moabites, ẏ he woulde not haue the Iſraelites to make warre againſt thē, but rather to call to minde the auncient brotherhood or kinred which was betweene thē. Neuerthelater when the Moabites had altogether reiected the grace of God, & were ſo ſore poyſoned as to hire a falſe prophet, & to indeuor with al their might to annihilate the promiſe of God, and ẏ they conſpired againſt ẏ people of God w̄ ſuch deuiliſh rebellion; then was it behouefull ẏ they ſhold be dubly puniſhed for their churliſhnes. As much is to be ſayd of the Edomites. For we ſee how God had a regard vnto this promiſe Gen.17.7. which he had made vnto Abraham (I wilbe thy God euen to a thouſande generations) & which was continued towardes Iſaac. But when ẏ Edomites abuſed this goodnes of his, and not onely made no account of it, but would alſo faine haue the people of God rooted out: ſee ye not how it was a kinde of bidding battaile vnto God, & a defying of him opēly? For they ought to haue called to minde ẏ Eſau was put backe, ẏ he had loſt his birthright, and ẏ this came not to paſſe but by the decree & appointment of God, as was declared Gen.25. vnto Rebecca when ſhe was great with child. The Edomits ſhold haue cōſidered theſe things. But ſeing they were ſo enuenomed againſt God, wheras he notwithſtanding with long pacience forbare them; it was needefull ẏ he ſhould curſe them againe (as we haue before alleadged.)

Aſmuch is to be ſayde of the Egyptians. For there are great threatninges vttered againſt thē, in the holy ſcripture: they are holden for ẏ curſedſt people of all natiōs in the world. And why? becauſe they endeuoured with might and maine vtterly to aboliſh the ſeruice of God, they turned ẏ people frō it aſmuch as lay in thē to do. Therefore they not only loſt ẏ priuilege which was giuen vnto thē: but alſo prouoked the vengeance of God vpō them: ſo ẏ they payed ful deerely for the fauour which he had offered vnto them: And hereby we are warned, ẏ if God take pitie vpon vs, & draw neere any way vnto vs, we on our ſide muſt not behaue ourſelues like deafe folkes, but receiue the fauour which he beſtoweth on vs, & learne in dewe time to fare the better by it. For if we be founde wilde and vntamed, ſo as we will not vouchſafe to come neere him, but rather fling with our heeles againſt him when he would keepe vs vnder his yoke: his fauour muſt needs be turned into a curſe againſt vs. And therefore let vs learne ſo to profit by the fauor of God, that aſſone as it is offered vnto vs, it may bring forth fruite in vs, ẏ he may be glorified thereby, and ẏ we perceiuing how far wee are bound vnto him, may ſtudie to apply our ſelues wholely vnto his ſeruice. Thus yee ſee in effect what we haue to beare in minde touching that which is ſayde of the Egyptians in this place.

Nowe Moſes addeth, That when the people goe out vnto battaile, they muſt keepe themſelues from euery euill thing. And he addeth certaine examples, to ſhewe what is meant thereby. And heere wee muſt marke firſt of al, ẏ Moſes ſpeaketh purpoſely of warres: becauſe ẏ men beare themſelues in hand that then all thinges are lawfull. When we are in peace and euery man keepeth his houſe, it may well ſeeme that then it is a more eaſie thing to keepe good order, & to maintaine ciuill gouernment: for then lawes are of force. But when warre is once begonne, there is much vnrulines which men can not remedy, and there is no longer any meanes to bridle folke: inſomuch that although neuer ſo much extortiō & violence be vſed, a man may well lie downe & cry, but he cā not let it. To be at a word, there is no longer any order among men. For this cauſe Moſes ſheweth, ẏ although men goe out to battaile, yet for all that they muſt take heede of al euill thinges, and not graunt thēſelues a lawles leaue to be caried headlong into any wickedneſſe. Albeit men haue many allurements and many occaſions offered, yet muſt they holde themſelues in ſuch ſubiection, that God may be ſerued & honored. And in very deed if men were in their right wits, they would walke in greater feare & carefulneſſe in the time of warre, than of peace. For when we are at deathes doore, when wee are threatned with perils on all ſides, ought we not to haue an eye ſo much the more vnto God? Ought not this to humble vs, & to make vs to ſtoope? Ought we not to haue our whole recourſe vnto him, and to pray him to be our guide? Yes verily, if wee be not ouer blockiſh. And therefore when we are in warres, we ſhould holde vs to ſo much the ſtraiter rule, and remaine moſt peaceablie vnder the obedience of our God, becauſe of the neceſſitie which preſſeth vs, & of the dangers alſo which threaten vs on all partes. But what? As I tolde you afore, we ſee the cleane contrarie by experience: namely, that men graunt themſelues pardon for all thinges, the drumme no ſooner ſoūdeth, but lawes muſt keepe ſilence, ſo as there may be no longer any rule of order, no longer any meane or meaſure, no longer any leſſoning or warnings to be hearkened vnto. Nowe becauſe men be ſo ill diſpoſed, heere God putteth them in minde of their dutie, and ſayth: although this wicked cuſtome raigne through out the worlde, that they which are ſouldiours are of opinion that all thinges are lawfull for them to doe: yet notwithſtanding doe not you ſo: but rather abſteine from all wicked thinges. When you come into the fielde, & ſtande there againſt your enemies, thinke not that yee ſhall be pardoned any more, than if ye were at home in your own houſes. For the caſe ſtandeth ſo, ẏ ye muſt fight vnder my banner, yea, and yee muſt take mee for your captaine. And therefore I muſt not bee ſo diſhonored, as to be accuſed of hauing leaude ruffians & diſſolute perſons in my bande. For if it be ſo, how can my name be called vppon ouer them, and they named after my name? Now we ſee in effect what is contained heere.

And hereupon we haue to gather, firſt that cōmon abuſes can not ſerue to iuſtifie vs, but that when our account is to bee giuen vp to God it ſhalbe a vaine excuſe to ſay: euery man doth ſo: the thing is as cõmon as may be among men. If we ſay ſo, God wil reply readily ynough vpon vs. For is there any thing more cuſtomably vſed, than this lawles leaue which ſouldiours take and vſe? It is growen in maner euen to a law, ẏ without controlment all may do ſo. But our Lord for all ẏ, will not be barred of his right. Therfore he ſaith, Let men take heede of euerie euill thing. Nowe thẽ albeit we ſee a bottomles ſea as it were & an vniuerſall flud of all vices in the world; ſo as euery man is wilfully bent to do euill, & men haue taken ſuch poſſeſſiõ of ſinning, ẏ a man dares not ſo much as mutter when he beholdeth ſuch outragious things as none can be more out of order: let vs not beare our ſelues in hand for all ẏ, that we ſhalbe excuſed before God, but let vs alwaies haue an eie vnto his word. Mẽ do thus and thus: yea but God faileth not to be of a cõtrary iudgement. And this is the thing which we haue to beare in mind in the firſt place.

Moreouer if wee be forbidden to do euill although we be prouoked thereto by many occaſions, notwithſtanding to ẏ worldwarde it ſeemeth ẏ we may be ſuffered to do it: what ſhalbe thought if we offend when we haue no ſuch temptations nor ſo great? Doutles we are in double fault. For if it be ſaid ẏ in time of war when the doore ſeemeth to be ſet opẽ to all wickednes, yet notwithſtanding euen then we muſt ſtande on our gard: what is to be thought if when we may folow the good rule of cõuerſation, & things be not ſo far out of order, nor the deuill hath ſuch meanes to drawe vs into wickednes: yet notwithſtanding euery of vs ruſheth forth into all vnrulines, ẇout remẽbering our God any whit at all? I pray you doth not ẏ fault deſerue greater puniſhment? So then let vs note, ẏ in all eſtates we muſt alwayes take occaſion to ſerue God. Notwithſtanding ẏ the world do alwayes ſeeke to turne aſide, & to withdraw it ſelfe frõ his ſeruice, inſomuch that if men be in peace, they become ſo dronken with their pleaſure & delites, ẏ they can not be helde frõ wandring & from giuing thẽſelues ouer vnto many corruptions; & if they be in war, they behaue themſelues much wors But we on our part, what ought we to do? when we are in griefe and trouble, let vs know ẏ God by ẏ meanes calleth vs vnto himſelf, & wil haue vs to be ſo much ẏ more carefull to ſerue him, foraſmuch as wee want his ſuccor and ẏ he muſt hide vs vnder his winges. If we haue time of peace, let vs know ẏ he giueth vs leaſure to bethink vs what we haue to doe, & to call vpon him in quietnes & to conſider ẏ better of our duetie a great while aforehande, while we haue faire & calme wether. For if the wether become troubled ẇ ſtormes & clouds, we ſee not a ſtones caſt (as they ſay) from vs; but when ẏ ſun ſhineth faire & cleare, then we can ken a far off. Euen ſo our Lord, when he granteth vs peace & quietnes, would haue vs vſe it in ſuch ſort as euery man ſhold diſpoſe & order his life vnto his obedience, ẏ he may enioy vs, & we be farre from confuſion & diſorder, & not drawe back when he allureth vs vnto him by gentlenes, nor ſhake off his yoke as though we wold not ſuffer him to gouerne vs any longer. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to gather vpon this place.

As touching ẏ exãple which is ſet down here, whereas Moſes would That he which is defiled in his body, ſhould be ſeuered frõ the company of others: Let vs briefly for a concluſion note two things therin. The one is ẏ God by ſuch ceremonies would haue his people to keepe themſelues altogether pure both of body & ſoul. True it is ẏ before god the man which hath offended, ſhall not be abſolued for his waſhing of himſelfe in water. That auaileth nothing. For none of theſe corruptible elements pertaine any thing to ẏ ſaluation of our ſoules. Neuertheles becauſe God ordaineth thẽ, therefore they ſtand vs in ſteede. As ẏ water of baptiſm is not like other cõmon water, & the reaſõ is, becauſe God hath hallowed it vnto a ſpecial vſe, to ẏ intent it ſhold be a warrãt vnto vs, ẏ we are waſhed by ẏ bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Now when we haue this we muſt alſo make our profit of the aide which God hath giuen vnto vs becauſe of our weaknes. The people of olde time had many mo, becauſe they were holden like litle children as S. Paul ſayth, & in compariſon of Gal.3.24. them we are come vnto mens eſtate. Therfore when God ordained ẏ men ſhold waſh thẽſelues with water for any bodily defilement; it was to the intent ẏ euery man ſhould know (as he him ſelfe declareth) ẏ to be dedicated vnto God wee muſt walke in all purenes, & when there is any corruption amõg vs, it muſt be purged. Ye ſee thẽ whereunto this law ſerueth vs, & in what ſort we muſt apply it vnto our inſtructiõ. I grant we haue not now ẏ olde ceremonies of ẏ law, we are not preciſely bound to waſh ourſelues when we are defiled or haue any ſpotte in our bodies; but yet wee muſt hold ſtill ẏ truth & ſubſtance therof: which is, ẏ ſeeing God hath ſanctified vs, we muſt continue in his ſeruice, purging vs from all corruptions both of body & of minde, as S. Paul alſo exhorteth vs in the ſecond of ẏ Corinthians, where 2.Cor.6.17. he ſheweth ẏ euill muſt not be nouriſhed among vs. For when it is ſuffered to encreaſe & to infect the whole flocke, what wil come of it in the end, but ẏ it will growe remediles when the infection Matt.17.8. hath taken hold throughout. And ẏ is the cauſe why excõmunication was ordained in ẏ church: if there were any which behaued themſelues amiſſe, by leading an vnruly & leaud kinde of life, our Lord Ieſus cõmanded to ſeparate them for a time frõ the church, to the intent to make them aſhamed, ẏ they might humble thẽſelues, & therupon returne vnto ẏ flocke, & liue better than they had done afore, and that others alſo might thereby be warned, ſo as wickednes ſhoulde not haue lawles libertie as though all thinges were lawfull & permitted. We ſee then that although nowadaies this figure be no longer in vſe, yet notwithſtãding we may gather a good & profitable inſtruction from ẏ which was cõmanded to the antiẽt people. Firſt of al, we muſt be fuly reſolued to offer ourſelues vnto God in ſuch ſort as our bodies & minds be kept vndefiled, knowing ẏ we haue ẏ like promiſes ẏ the auncient fathers had, yea & far larger: & therfore we ought to endeuor ſo much the more, to attaine vnto that purenes which I told you of. And therewall if we ſee any which corrupt the flock with their infections, let them be remoued according vnto ỹ order which our Lord Ieſus hath cōmanded vs, & let them be ſo remoued, ỹ knowing their wickednes & repenting thēſelues of it, in the end it may ſerue them for a medicine to purge them, ſo as ỹ infection growe no further: but ỹ the Church of God be alwaies maintained in ſuch order as mē may know ỹ God hath not for nought drawen vs out & remoued vs from the reſt of the world which is defiled, but to the end ỹ he might gouerne vs by his holy ſpirit, and we be ſo wholy his, that we may be true ſacrifices vnto him both in life & in death.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to touch vs with right repentance, ỹ being angry with ourſelues for offending him & for being turned away from him, we may endeuor nothing more, than ỹ he may frame vs wholy vnto his will: and ỹ being rid of al corruptions and infirmities of our fleſh, we may be clothed with his righteouſneſſe ſo as his glory may ſhine in our whole life. And becauſe it can not otherwiſe be, but ỹ in this world there ſhalbe alwajes ſome thing wherefore hee may finde fault with vs, let vs pray him to vouchſafe to beare with vs in our imperfections, vntill hee haue brought vs vnto himſelfe into his heauenly kingdome. And ſo let vs ſay almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the xxvij of Ianuary, 1556.

The Cxxxiij. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the three and twentith Chapter.

12 Thou ſhalt haue a place without the camp, wherunto thou ſhalt goe forth.

13 And thou ſhalt haue a paddle among the reſt of thy tooles: and when thou liſteſt to ſitte downe without, thou ſhalt digge therewith: and when thou haſt eaſed thee, thou ſhalt couer that which is come from thee.

14 For the lord thy God walketh in the middeſt of thy camp to deliuer thee, & to giue thee thine enimies before thee. Therfore let thine hoſt be holy that he ſee no filthy thing in thee and turne away from thee.

15 Thou ſhalt not deliuer the ſeruant vnto his maſter: which is eſcaped to thee from his maſter.

16 He ſhall dwell with thee euen among you, in what place ſoeuer he ſhall chuſe in one of thy cities where it liketh him beſt: thou ſhalt not vexe him.

17 There ſhalbe no whoore among the daughters of Iſraell, nor anie whooremonger among the ſonnes of Iſrael.

WE haue already ſeene heeretofore, how God meant to traine vp the people of old time vnder the lawe, in all purenes, euen in the ſmalleſt thinges: intending thereby to accuſtome them to keepe thēſelues holy without any maner of ſtain or defilement. And this is ỹ principall end wherunto wee ought to referre the firſt ſentence of ỹ which we haue now read. A man might think it ſtrange at firſt ſight, ỹ God ſhould ſpeake of ſuch a thing as is mentioned here: namely that when men will eaſe themſelues, they muſt couer their ordure. A man would thinke ỹ this ought not to be put in ỹ law of God. For theſe are ſuch things as are not honeſtly named. But as we haue already touched, it behoued the people to be alwaies led by the things which concerne the body, vnto the keeping of thēſelues in al holines in the ſeruice of God: as for example, wheras in the lawe mention is made of waſhings; it was not for ỹ the clenſing of the ſoule cōſiſted in taking a litle water to waſh ones hands or to wet his body withal but the people was warned thereby, ỹ they muſt purifie thēſelues before God, or otherwiſe they were defiled. If a mā happened but to touch the body of one ỹ was dead, he was become vnclean. And why? Thereby God gaue vs to vnderſtand, that wee can ſcarcely in all our life mooue either hande or foote, but we drawe vpon vs ſome ſtaine or other. For this worlde is full of occaſions vnto euill: and we for our part do no ſooner take any thing in hand but we offend therein: ſo as we ought alwaies to conſider & acknowledge, that if God take vs for ſuch as wee are, hee muſt needes abhorre vs. And why? Becauſe wee are filthy and vncleane. What remaineth then for vs to doe? Let vs ſeeke the remedy of our vncleaneſſe. Can the water enter as farre as the ſoule to purge vs? No. It is but a ſigne, to betoken that men haue neede to be waſhed, and to be made cleane: and they ought to bee guided thereby vnto that which is repreſented vnto them by the water. The like is to be ſayde of all other thinges. Let vs therefore note well, that whereas Moſes ſayth here, that if men auoyde their excrementes, and any ſtinke inſue therof, or if there be any diſorder among them: God is offended at it: not ỹ he ſtayeth on thoſe thinges: for we know that all is one vnto him, ſo our harts be pure and clean, & our bodies anſwerable therunto, ſo as we be not ſtirred vp to defile ourſelues with our wicked luſtes and affections.

But yet for all that becauſe men pardon themſelues ſo lightly for many faultes, and by giuing themſelues the bridle are led from one euil vnto another: this law (ſay I) was giuen to this intent, that men ſhould accuſtome themſelues, euen in the ſmalleſt thinges, to take heede of all vncleanes. If a mā be of vnhoneſt behauiour in his life, doutles he will become ſo hardhearted, yͭ he wil make no account of filthy things, as we ſee how beaſtly ſome are become in that behalfe: when they haue once forgottē God & al honeſty, they caſt off al ſhame, ſo as a man may ſay they haue no longer any diſcretion to knowe what is good & what is euil: and this cōmeth of euill accuſtoming of thēſelues. And therefore our Lord (not without good cauſe) ment to bridle his people in all theſe things which pertaine vnto yͤ body. For it was not lawfull for thē to make water, (I know not how much leſſe to eaſe themſelues) but in ſecret. And why? For if they had bin a filthy & vncleane people, this filthines of theirs might haue bin to their further diſcredit. As much may bee ſaid of vs. If we be not aſhamed hereof, we giue ourſelues by & by the bridle in things alſo cōcerning God. It is needeful therfore yͭ we be reſtrained & gouerned with ſuch honeſtie, as men may ſay we walke in the preſence of our God. And in deed, whē we are to receiue any honorable geſts our houſe ſhalbe ſwept & we will take good heed yͭ no ſluts corner be left, nor any thing elſe which may offend thē. What reuerence then ought we to beare vnto our God, who alwaies beholdeth vs, & we can not ſtir a finger but he eieth whatſoeuer we do in our whole life? Ought we not ſo to walke before him, as to be well ware euery one of vs leaſt we ſhould diſpleaſe him? True it is indeede (as I haue already touched) yͭ God is not offended wͭ theſe corruptible things for he is not ſubiect to our paſſiōs, nor to be moued with thē. But becauſe of our rawnes, & for yͭ we are groſſe and earthly minded, there is great need yͭ by the things which concerne yͤ body, we ſhold be warned to come vnto yͭ which is ſpiritual. So then we haue now yͤ meaning of this law, wherin God forbad his people, to lay their filth abroad to be ſeen.

And he addeth alſo the reaſon thereof: For I am in the middeſt of you (ſayth he) and I will turne away from you if you do otherwiſe. Heereby he declareth yͭ neither the health of the people nor any ſuch like thing was the matter yͭ he reſpected in making this law, neither was it any ciuill policie, as for exāple it may bee well cōmanded & it is a very good order, yͭ men ſhal make clean yͤ ſtreets and ſuch other thinges, for it is for the health of men: & when ſuch things are not obſerued, it is a filthy thing, & if a man ſee heapes of filth & mire in a citie, he wil ſay, there is no good order ſeene vnto: God had no reſpect hereunto whē he forbade ſuch filthineſſe: but hee aimed at an higher thing, to wit, yͭ the children of Iſrael ſhold be put in minde to ſay: wel, God is ſo gratious vnto vs, as to dwell among vs, let vs therefore learne to walke in ſuch purenes of ſoule & body, yͭ principally our ſouls be purified frō al wicked thoughts and affections: and ſecondly yͭ our bodies alſo be kept in ſuch honeſty, yͭ we be not hardned to cōmit any filthy things before men, & grow paſt all ſhame: for yͭ were yͤ next way to make vs forget the duetie which we owe vnto God. We alſo on our ſide muſt take heede of theſe things, not in yͤ manner as the Iewes did, which ſtraitely obſerued this law & other ſuch like touching the ceremony: but we muſt keepe ourſelues vnto yͤ truth and ſubſtance therof, which they ſo much deſpiſed, according to the cōmon cuſtom of yͤ world, which is euer wont to buſie it ſelfe about the formalitie or ſhew of things, & to make no account of the ſubſtance. Let vs therefore learn to know, yͭ whereas the Iewes obſerued this ceremony wͭout any minding at all of yͭ which God required of them, they did but dally & play with God, and their whole obſeruation thereof was but hypocriſie, ſo as they did nothing elſe but prouoke yͤ anger of God. For when men wreſt & peruert his word in ſuch ſort, it is ſuch a trecherie as he can not ſuffer. But it is no wonder to ſee this abuſe among men. For they would faine content God with ſuch outward things, it is ynough for thē ſo they ſet a good face on yͤ matter. And being thēſelues carnall, they meaſure God by their owne ell. But contrariwiſe let vs note yͭ when God cōmādeth vs ſmal things, it is to lead vs to a farther matter; & therefore let vs alwayes aime at this mark, & not ſtay ourſelues on things which are of no gret importāce, according to yͤ rule which our Lord Ieſus hath deliuered vnto vs in this behalf. Ye ought in deede (ſaith hee) to doe theſe ſmall things whē they are cōmanded by yͤ law: but yet ye muſt alwaies come vnto yͤ chiefe & principall point. And we know what God ſayth: namely, yͭ he requireth mercy & not ſacrifice: his will is yͭ there ſhoul be faithfulnes, & iudgement and vprightnes among men. And as for ſacrifices & waſhings & ſuch like thinges, his meaning was yͭ by thē men ſhold be trained to put the aſſurance of their ſaluatiō in yͤ fauor which he hath promiſed vnto thē, yͭ they be ſory for their ſins when they ſee them before their eyes, & yͭ they ſhould ſerue thē for witneſſes to endite themſelues, to yͤ intent yͭ when they offer themſelues to God being in ſuch diſpleaſure with their ſinnes, they might attaine pardon and mercie of him. Thus ye ſee what we haue to beare in minde.

Mat. 23.23.

And now ſeeing the figure is paſſed & done away, we haue no neede to buſie ourſelues in the outward obſeruatiō of this law. What remaineth then? Is this law needeles nowadaies in reſpect of vs? Ought not we to reade it? Yes: for ye ſee that God ment it ſhould be an inſtruction for his church euen vnto yͤ end of yͤ world. It remaineth then, yͭ letting the figure paſſe, we gather yͭ which is taught both to the Iſraelites & to vs: namely yͭ in all things we muſt take heede of ſtayning and defiling our ſelues. Nowe we are not ignoraunt what the things are which defile a man. It is not yͭ which entereth into a man (as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſpeaking of meats ſayth) but it is yͭ which cōmeth out of a mā. Look how many wicked affectiōs we haue, ſo many ſtainings of vs haue we before god. For frō whence cōmeth fornication? Proceedeth it not out of the heart of man? From whence cõmeth ambition? From whence come other wicked deſires, as couetouſneſſe, enuie, pride,and all the reſt? Now when ẏ ſoule of man is ſo full of ſuch foule ſtaines, ẏ it is infected before God:it draweth the body by & by vnto thẽ, and if we put wicked thoughtes in practiſe, beholde, howe our bodies alſo are wrapped in the ſame filthines with our ſoule,& we become altogether defiled. Let vs therefore learne ſo to dedicate ourſelues vnto God,as our infectious filth be not a cauſe to driue him away from vs; And therewithall let vs beare in minde that which S. Paule ſayth: namely that ſeeing God will dwell 1.Cor.6.20. 2.Cor.6.16. within vs we muſt purifie both our minds & bodies. And this is the reaſon which Moſes alleadgeth,when he ſayth That God alwayes dwelt in the middes of the campe of Iſrael,to deliuer thẽ, & to giue vp their enemies into their handes.

And afterwarde he addeth, Take heede that the Lorde thy God depart not from thee,when he ſhall find any vncleaneſſe in thee. At this day this fauour is beſtowed in more ample maner vpon vs, than it was then vpon the auntient people.For we know howe God is ioyned vnto vs in the perſon of his only ſonne. Now ſeeing ẏ the fulnes of the godhead Col.2.9. doth dwell in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt,& that not vnder a ſhadowe as in the arke of the couenant where ẏ lawe was encloſed,but is aſſuredly our God being manifeſted in the fleſh: & ſeeing 1.Tim.3.16. it is ſo ẏ we are members of Ieſus Chriſt, & that he hath vouchſafed vs ſo great a benefite, as by cõming downe from heauen to ioyne himſelfe wͭ vs: let vs note ẏ at this day God is more neere vnto vs than he was vnto ẏ people, yea & he will make vs to haue more feeling of his vertue and power. For we are alwaies in ſuch ſort vnder his protection, ẏ we neede not to feare but that his power is ſtill ſtretched out to maintaine & preſerue vs. When our Lord Ieſus ſayd vnto his diſciples; I am with you euen vnto the ende of the Matt.28.20. worlde,ſurely he ment to ſtrengthen them in all the conflictes which they were to ſuffer in preaching of the Goſpel,and it ſerued likewiſe to declare vnto vs alſo ẏ he will neuer forſake vs as in reſpect of his power. Seeing it is ſo then that we are vnder the gouernment of the ſonne of God, and ẏ although he be aſcended vp into heauẽ,he faileth not to fill all,& ẏ he is alſo our ſhepheard to the intent ẏ none of them whõ his heauenly father hath giuen vnto him ſhould be loſt:& that Eph.4.10. we are bone of his bone & fleſh of his fleſh(as S. Eph.5.30. Paul ſayth) and ẏ there is no greater coniunctiõ betweene ẏ husband & the wife than is betwene the ſon of God & vs.Seeing it is ſo I ſay. let ſuch gratious fauour as this, prouoke vs to withdraw ourſelues frõ al filthines;& let vs keepe this holy vnitie which we ought to haue with our God.

And moreouer let vs alſo diligẽtly note, how precious a thing it is ẏ God dwelleth with vs, to giue vp our enemies into our hands,& to deliuer vs frõ all euill. For hereby we are warned ẏ were it not for his fauour, we are ſet open to ten thouſande deathes. And in very deede let euery of vs cõſider his own infirmities throughly,& we ſhall finde ẏ if our Lord had not a care of vs & fought not mightily for our defence, we ſhould periſh euery minute of an houre.How is it then ẏ we are aſſured of our ſaluation?Surely becauſe our Lord who watcheth ouer vs, is ſtrong ynough,& therfore albeit ẏ all the armies of hell were banded againſt vs, yet ſhall they not preuaile any thing at all,if God be on our ſide: inſomuch ẏ we ſhall not only be preſerued from the hand of our enemies,but alſo haue ẏ victorie ouer them & bring them vnder our feete; becauſe God dwelleth among vs. Ye ſee then on the one ſide, howe men ought to feele what need they haue ẏ God ſhold help them,ſeeing they are thẽſelues ouer weake and haue no helpe to defende thẽſelues: & alſo how for all ẏ,they may boldly boſt. And why? becauſe God hath receiued them vnto himſelfe, & will preſerue them & be their ſafegarde. Behold (I ſay) what ẏ glory of the faithful is,which notwſtanding proceedeth of humblenes.For we can neuer be ſafegarded by our God vntil we haue learned to diſtruſt our ſelues,and feele ourſelues forlorne conſidering ẏ weaknes which is in vs.

But let vs alſo note the threat.Take heede(ſaith he) leſt thy God,whẽ he ſhal ſee any filthy thing in thee, depart from thee. Now the filthy things among vs which may offend God,conſiſt not in our bodily ſluttiſhneſſe. For where doeth God oftener dwel thã in poore cottages,which through great neede and penury ſomtimes there is vermine & ſometimes ſtinch?There are poore Lazars who haue not wherwith to ſerue their neede,& much leſſe wherewith to ſerue their pleaſures:a lamẽtable caſe to beholde. Surely none of all theſe things,which may ſeeme ſluttiſh vnto moſt men do offend God: but ẏ filth which maketh him to depart from vs, is the defiling which commeth from the heart, & afterwards(as I tolde you)defileth our bodies.And therfore let vs not think ẏ God is like vnto mortall men, or ẏ he is led with ſuch paſſions,but let vs know ẏ being a ſpirit; his will is ẏ we alſo ſhould haue a ſpirituall purenes in vs: that is, ẏ we ſhould put away farre from vs the thinges which may infect vs (as I haue ſayd afore)namely fornication,enuy,hatred, treaſon, exceſſiue deſire of hauing riches,ambition, and pride.Al theſe things are filthy & diſpleaſe God, and when our bodies are defiled with them, the wickednes is double. Let vs therefore learne to purge ourſelues frõ all ſuch infections, if we will haue God to be reſident among vs. For as hee is come neere vnto vs,ſo wil he alſo withdraw himſelfe frõ vs,if we be not pure temples. For vpon none other condition than ẏ,will he dwell amõg vs. Therefore this threat may ſet our hayres on end on our head where it is ſayd: Take heede that thy Lord depart not from thee. For ſeeing ẏ our lord hath vouchſafed vs this honor to come neere vnto vs, and ẏ he declareth ẏ he will haue the chief roome in our cõpany;it is good reaſon ẏ euery of vs ſhould take heede ẏ we giue him no repulſe,& ẏ there be ſuch publike order takẽ as our infections cauſe vs not to want ẏ preſence of our God: wherefore let euery of vs particularly looke vnto himſelfe & afterward let vs al vniuerſally do our indeuor ẏ al honeſty may be mainteined,ſo as we may be a people hallowed vnto god.For if euery of vs giue ouer himſelfe to filthy demeanours,ſo as one taketh leaue to be an adulterer, an other diſpenſeth with himſelfe to play the theefe, and to vſe deceites and extortion, reſpecting onlie howe hee may enriche himſelfe by vnlawfull meanes, and a thirde giueth himſelfe to wicked practiſes, to vndermine and to ouerthrowe his neighbour: and a fourth is full of arrogancie and ambition, & ſo blaſphemouſnes reigneth at wil: is it not all one as if euery of vs for his part had conſpired to baniſh God out of our companie, and to driue him away? Seeing then that vices doe ſo reigne, and there is ſo horrible confuſion among vs: Lette vs looke well to ourſelues and let this warning ſerue vs for a bridle to reſtraine the miſchiefe, or otherwiſe we ſhall bee guiltie of driuing GOD away that he might no more dwell among vs to bleſſe vs. Thus ye ſee what we haue to beare in minde concerning this place.

Now Moſes addeth: That if a ſeruant, (that is to ſay a ſlaue as we haue expounded it heretofore) which is of the heathen, doe runne away and deſire refuge among the people of Iſraell, they muſt ſuffer him to dwell there, and not deliuer him into the hande of his maiſter. This lawe may ſeeme euill at the firſt ſight, if we conſider not well what God meant thereby. For ſeruauntes were at that time in the ſame plight and ſtate that a mannes oxe or horſe is now. Men imployed them to maruelous painefull and burthenſome thinges, and their maiſters had power ouer them both of life and death: ſo as among the Paynims a maiſter went not to make his complaint vnto the Iuſtice when he would put his ſeruant in priſon or ſet him on the racke, yea or put him to death. Euerie man might hange and drawe in his owne houſe, and that was a verie harde caſe. And moreouer (as I haue tolde you heretofore) a mans ſeruantes were counted among his moueable goods in like ſorte as an horſe or an oxe. So then if it had not beene lawfull to withholde from a man any part of his goods, but it had bin verie ill dealing to haue done ſo: why was it lawfull to keepe backe his ſeruant? It might ſeeme that a man doeth him wrong and iniurie to defraude him in this wiſe of that which is his right, and men might perſuade themſelues ẏ God diſpenſed here with his people to play the theeues after ſome indirect maner. But the meaning of the Lawe is that it was Gods will ẏ there ſhould be ſome priuiledge for ſuch ſeruauntes as were willing to yeelde themſelues vnto his ſeruice: and that becauſe, as long as they liued vnder the Paynims, they were not their own men nor had ſuch libertie: and therefore when they turned into the better way, God granted them this exemption by way of priuiledge. Moreouer let vs note, that becauſe of the exceſſiue cruelty of the maiſters, the Lawes themſelues were to graunt ſome releaſe vnto ſeruants. For ẏ maiſters moſt cruelly abuſed the authority which was granted vnto thẽ ouer their ſeruants, inſomuch ẏ for euery ſmal trifle (as ẏ breaking of a glaſſe [or ſuch other like]) a maiſter would hamper his ſeruaunt to beate him without pitie or mercy. Theſe examples cauſed men to let thẽ haue ſome refuge. And the heathen themſelues permitted ẏ if the ſeruants could eſcape vnto any tẽple, they were in ſafetie from their maiſters, not ẏ they were altogether freed, but that they were ſolde vnto ſome other who peraduenture woulde handle them more gently. Alſo if they coulde get holde of the image of an Emperour, they hadde as it were a ſuretie for their ſafegarde. Our Lorde likewiſe had the ſame regarde in the lawe which is ſet downe heere, that is to ſay, becauſe the Paynims hauing no feare of God, did torment their ſeruauntes with more than tyrannicall crueltie: he would that thoſe poore wretches ſhould haue ſome place of refuge, that beeing preſſed with anguiſh and affliction, they might haue a meane to be brought vnto true religion. For we knowe that when men are daunted after that manner, then they ſeeke vnto God. It is a good preparatiue to bring vs vnto the obedience of God, when we are afflicted and can no longer tell what to doe. For we ſee that when we are at heartes eaſe and haue our delightes, we are ſo dronken with them, that God is no bodie with vs. That is the very thing whereat this lawe aimeth.

Now let vs note, that when God giueth forth ſpeciall lawes, he gaineſayeth not him ſelfe: but we muſt alwayes referre them vnto the generall doctrine. As howe? If a ſeruant ſhould runne away vpon deceite, or vpon malice, or vppon any other ſuch cauſe, it were a ſinne in him; and that theeuerie were not good nor alowed of GOD. Therefore when this ſpeciall law and priuiledge was giuen foorth, that a ſeruant ſhould be ſuffered in the Lande of Iuda, it repealeth not that which our Lorde had deliuered concerning ſeruants afore. And againe whereas he ſayth: Thou ſhalt not couet thy neighbours ſeruaunt, nor his maide; ẏ commaundement ſtandeth ſtill in full force; ſo that it was not lawefull for the Iewes to holde backe an other mans ſeruãt, for their own profits ſake; neither was it lawfull for ſeruants to deceiue their maiſters. But when a ſeruant eſcaped vnto them, & deſired to dwell among ẏ people of God; this leaue was graunted vnto him: howbeit vpon this condition, ẏ he was oppreſſed, and ẏ he had iuſt & reaſonable cauſe of running from his maiſter, for being too leaudly & cruelly handled. That was to be preſuppoſed afore. For (as I haue tolde you) the law which is conteined in the tenne cõmandements is an infallible rule. When we haue that abridgement, we haue therin the will of God fully warranted vnto vs. And we ought to meaſure euery particular lawe by thoſe ten cõmandements, That is ẏ true touchſtone whereby we muſt examine how euery ſpeciall lawe is to be taken and expounded. For we ſhall neuer vnderſtande thinges to any purpoſe, except we referre them all hither. And why? for perfect righteouſneſſe is contained in thoſe ten commandements which God hath deliuered in the two tables. Seeing it is ſo, we can neuer be deceiued if we examin things after this maner. Go to: here is the law, Pertaineth the thing vnto the ſeruice of God, or to the ſecond table; that is to that table wherin God hath preſcribed how we ought to liue with men? It is of the ſecond table. Well then, let vs ſee nowe whether it pertaine vnto the firſt commaundement of honouring father and mother: or to the ſecond, Thou ſhalt doe no murder: or to the third, Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie: or to the fourth, Thou ſhalt not ſteale: or to yͤ fift, Thou ſhalt not beare falſe witneſſe: or laſtly to yͤ ſixt, Thou ſhalt not couet. When we ſhall haue thus conſidered of the thing, ſo as we may ſay, this belongeth vnto ſuch a commaundement: then ſhall wee haue a keye which will open vs the dore vnto the right vnderſtanding of the thing. If a lawe concerne the ſeruice of God, be it of the firſt cõmaundement, or of the ſecond, or of the third, or of the fourth, we may haue the better aſſurance how this Law ought to be vnderſtoode. And why? For we ſhall conſider of the end whereunto it tendeth. If the law be between both (as we ſay) let it be referred vnto the firſt and the ſecond table, let it be mingled of both, and then we may alſo iudge eaſily of it. But to return to yͤ preſent matter: when yͤ Lord graunted a place of refuge in the lande of Iury vnto poore ſlaues, there is no doubt but he ment neuertheles to leaue his law ſtill in his full force. Let vs therefore conclude, that he meant in this place to remedie the exceſſiue and outragious cruelty which maiſters vſed, & would that poore afflicted wretches (who as touching the worlde could finde no eaſe of their greefes) being deſtitute of all ſuccour, might haue libertie to come into the Countrey of Iurie and there to dwel for euer.

Now we are warned hereby to help to yͤ vttermoſt of our power ſuch as are vniuſtly & wrongfully afflicted. In deede wee muſt not maintaine wicked quarelles; wee muſt not cloake that which is ill. For they which ſhall vſe ſuch mercie, ſhall not bee able to iuſtifie their caſe thereby before God. There are many which could be content that all leawd faultes might be buried, and they will oftentimes willingly foſter wickedneſſe through a fond pitie or deuotion as they call it. But let vs note yͤ Gods will is not to lead vs vnto that kind of dealing: but yͤ when wee ſee any poore ſoules tormented, he would haue vs moued with pitie to releeue them as much as in vs lyeth. We heare what is ſayd vnto Moab. Iſa.16.3. Moab thou waſt the harbour of my people, and thou madeſt hew & cry after thoſe which came to ſhelter themſelues vnder thy ſhadow. Although the people of Iſraell were iuſtly puniſhed for their euill deedes, yet as in reſpect of the world, they had not prouoked the infidels to be ſo cruell vnto them. For the Infidels came and made warre againſt them like tyrantes as they were, they came like wolues to ſpoile and deuour all. And well, the poore Iewes flie into the lande of Moab, and our Lord ſayeth that he had appointed that Countrie, as a place of harbour for them. And why? Was there any Prophet which tolde them ſo? No. For humanitie perſwadeth this of it ſelfe, that if wee ſee any poore people which are driuen out of their owne Countries by warres or by any other violent oppreſſions, it is all one as if God ſent vs a meſſage both to receiue them and to entertayne them as curteouſlie as wee are able to doe. And ſo let vs beare in minde, that where there are any poore wretches with vs whome men haue perſecuted, and tormented, we are too too vnkind if we deliuer them into their enemies pawes, which ſeeke nothing elſe but to vſe all violence and all maner of cruelty againſt them. That is it which wee haue to beare in mind vpon this place.

Now ſeeing it is ſo that we ought to ſhew ſuch gentlenes, and to vſe ſuch compaſſion towardes all that are vniuſtly oppreſſed, and whom men torment beyond meaſure without any cauſe; how ought we to behaue our ſelues toward thoſe poore ſoules which are afflicted for the worde of God? By much more reaſon is it that wee ſhould giue them refuge, and ſuccour them in their afflictions: and if we doe not relieue them, let vs alſo feare that which is ſaid by the Prophet vnto Eſa.15. the Moabites. For he addeth that God will hunt them out of their ſecreteſt lurking corners. And why? Bicauſe they diſcouered the people which fled vnto them, and ſet them foorth for a pray. Therefore if we cauſe the children of God to be perſecuted by tyrantes, and ioyne with tyrantes in ſuch wickednes, bȳ driuing Gods children out from among vs, doubtleſſe the Lorde will not faile to puniſh ſuch crueltie. But when our turne commeth to bee viſited after the ſame manner, (as it muſt needes come) men ſhall hunt vs alſo out of our corners, and we ſhall finde no harbouring place for our ſelues in the whole world, bicauſe wee haue laboured to caſt them away whom God deliuered into our handes. Yee ſee then in fewe wordes what wee haue to beare in minde.

And moreouer as touching the matter which I haue treated of alreadie, wee muſt vnderſtand that our Lorde commandeth vs to ſtraine our ſelues to the vttermoſt, to bring them vnto the knowledge of the trueth, which haue ſtrayed heeretofore in ſuperſtition. The ſeruants which offered themſelues out of ſtraunge Countries were in the ende framed vnto the ſeruice of God. For albeit they were at the firſt rude and rawe, yet was it behoouefull that they ſhould accuſtome themſelues vnto the Lawe, and that in the ende they ſhould frame themſelues wholly vnto it. Seeing then it is ſo, let vs gather vppon this place, that God ment to ſtirre vs vp to ſeeke after the poore wandering ſheepe, to bring them into the way of ſaluatiõ, and to gather them into his flock. And ſo ye ſee what we haue to beare in minde as touching this cuſtome.

Moſes in the third place ſayth: Let there be no whore in Iſraell, nor any filthie & infamous fornicator, And whereas he ſpeaketh heere, of fornicators; it is not meant of common fornication, but of that outrageous filthyneſſe which is contrary to all nature. And verily it is a dreadfull thing to conſider that the people which was dedicated vnto GOD, ſhould bee forbidden ſuch wickedneſſe: and eſpecially that they ſhould at that time ſo exceede in villainous behauiour, that they had not onely ſtewes for ſtrumpets, where women abandoned themſelues vnto filthie luſtes, but alſo that men with men were giuen to ſuch filthyneſſe. Is not this a thing which ought to make euery hayre of our head to ſtande on ende? But heereby wee are warned what men of themſelues are, except GOD holde them backe and gouerne them by his holy ſpirite. Wee muſt not thinke that theſe corruptions neuer came into the worlde before this day. They haue beene in it from all time. For ſince the time that Adam eſtraunged himſelfe from GOD, it was of neceſſitie, that hee ſhoulde beare the puniſhment of his ſinne, and that all his poſteritie ſhould bee abandoned vnto wickedneſſe. For the roote of all vices, yea of all outragious crimes doeth then budde foorth when man is forſaken of GOD, and hath the brydle layd looſe on his necke as it is to bee ſeene heere. For wee ſee that naturall fornications ſuffice not, but more than beaſtly enormities are committed. Common filching theeueries ſuffice not, but there are robberies and piracies: there are inuentions and practiſes more wicked than all the theeueries in the world. Men are growen ſo farre out of kinde, that they are dayly inuenting of ſtrange faſhions, they thinke it not ynough to haue put their enemies to death, except they extend their crueltie yet farther. To bee ſhorte, if wee conſider well of all that is in man vntill GOD gouerne him; we ſhal find within him euen a ſinke and gulfe of hell. And as euery man nouriſheth in himſelfe much wickedneſſe, ſo muſt it needes be that the miſchiefe thereof ſhall increaſe, except GOD prouide a remedie for it. And whereas among the Paynims themſelues there was alwayes kept ſome honeſtie; it came ſo to paſſe through the wonderfull prouidence of GOD, who meant ſtill to reſerue ſome honeſtie among mankinde. In deede the Paynims had neuer this intent of ſeruing GOD, as was reaſon they ſhould, but yet although none of their workes were accounted pure before GOD, he notwithſtanding ſo ruled them, as thinges might not bee vtterly confounded. Sith wee ſee this, let vs learne that when God ſheweth vs any ſignes of his prouidence by retayning men in ſome order and honeſtie; it is to make vs perceyue thereby, that he watcheth ouer mankinde. And on the other ſide let vs knowe alſo, that if hee helde not out his hande to keepe men vnder ſome order; wee ſhould ſee ſuch villainous and deteſtable things, that euen the brute beaſtes ſhould behaue themſelues more honeſtly than men. See (I ſay) what wee are to conſider of; to the ende we may pray God to receiue vs, and not to ſuffer vs to fall into any ſuch enormities as euen our ſelues ſhould bee conſtrayned to abhorre them. And for as much as wee ſee yͤ examples of theſe things haue beene giuen ſo long time ſince; and perceiue by experience that the worlde ceaſeth not to growe worſe and worſe: what woulde come of it if God ſhoulde not redreſſe it? What would bee the ende of it? Queſtionleſſe were it not for Gods wonderfull prouidence in this behalfe, it muſt needes come to paſſe that all honeſtie among men ſhould be cleane wiped out. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to conſider vppon the forewarning which GOD maketh in this place. And moreouer let vs note that this lawe of GOD himſelfe coulde not vtterly diſappoint the raigning of ſuch abhomination euen in the people which named themſelues holy and elected aboue all the reſt of the world. Inſomuch that ſometimes the holy Scripture ſpeaking of Kinges which were not ouer diligent in dooing their dueties, ſaith that there were Stewes, yea euen againſt nature, not onely of harlots which were there at hire, but alſo of other ſhamefull filthyneſſe not to bee named: and that this wickedneſſe raygned. And where? In Iuda. Therefore when wee heare this rehearſed vnto vs, wee ought to tremble and walke in feare and warineſſe, praying GOD to hide vs vnder his winges, and not to ſuffer ſuch corruptions to happen vnto vs. And let vs note that from the one wee ſteppe to the other. For when looſe behauiours is once permitted, men beare themſelues in hande that euery thing is lawefull. When ſuch infamous thinges are ſuffered, and lawleſſe libertie of vſing them is graunted in any countrey; men not onely giue themſelues to lechery lyke dogges, but alſo in the ende doe fall into greater and more outragious filthyneſſe. Therefore ſeeing it is ſo, let vs learne in generall to haue ſuch a care among vs, as all infections of whoredome may be remoued, and wee cleane purged from them. For that is the very thing which GOD aimeth at. Now indeed it is true that this is a ciuill lawe: but yet for all that, it belongeth vnto the third commaundement of the ſecond table: where it is ſayde: Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie. Why are the people of GOD forbidden to haue a ſtewes among them? Becauſe fornication is a deteſtable thing in his ſight: for his will is that wee ſhoulde bee wholly dedicated vnto him both in our ſoules, and in our bodyes. So then whereas God deteſteth whoredome, what ſhall we thinke when open ſtewes are ſuffered, and no puniſhment or chaſtiſement appointed for adulterers? What ſhall wee thinke thereof, but that men in the ende will defie God and perſwade themſelues that whoredome is nothing? Wee ſee then whereunto God meant to lead vs, namely, that we ſhould knowe howe profitable a thing it is for vs to thinke on the wretchedneſſe of ſome men, that is to wit, that they fall into ſo outragious thinges, that they forget all honeſtie of nature; and that there would bee nothing but beaſtlineſſe in them, except they were withheld by yͤ hand of God. Let this put vs in feare, and quicken vs vp to pray God to withdrawe vs from theſe corruptions whereunto we are ouermuch enclined, or rather wholly giuen ouer. And let vs yeeld our ſelues fully vnto him, & not behaue our ſelues as horſes which are broken looſe. Let vs take heede of ſeeking occaſions of wickedneſſe, or of graunting vnto our ſelues leaue of lawleſſe libertie to doe wickedly, either in adulterie or otherwiſe: and let vs keepe our ſelues in ſuch pureneſſe, as euery of vs may be ready to frame himſelfe vnto the righteouſneſſe of God, and to keepe and maintaine our ſelues in all innocencie before him.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs to feele them more and more. And bicauſe it hath pleaſed him to call vs vnto himſelfe, yea and to declare oftentimes that he is our God, and to make vs alſo to perceiue the power of his helpe, not onely touching our bodyes, but alſo touching our ſoules: let vs beſeech him that we may be prouoked hereby to yeelde our ſelues wholly vnto him, & that all of vs examining our ſelues more narowly, and perceiuing our owne defilements, may reſort vnto the holines and purenes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, praying him ſo to purge vs by his holy ſpirit, that our onely ſeeking may be to offer our ſelues vp vnto our God both ſoule and body, and that therewithall wee may learne to liue one with another in all vprightnes and honeſtie, ſo as it may alwayes ſerue vs to mortifie our wicked affections, and not hinder vs frō enioying thoſe benefits which he daily beſtoweth vpon his Church. And that it may pleaſe him to impart theſe things not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xxviij. of Ianuarie. 1556.

The Cxxxiiij. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the three and twentith Chapter.

18 Thou ſhalt neither bring the hire of a whore nor the price of a dogge into the houſe of the Lord thy God for any vow: for both theſe thinges are alike abhominable before the Lorde thy God.

19 Thou ſhalt not giue vpon vſury to thy brother, whether it bee vſury of monie or vſury of vittayles, or vſury of any thing which men giue to vſurie.

20 Thou mayſt giue vpon vſurie to a ſtranger, but thou ſhalt not giue vpon vſurie to thy brother: that the Lorde thy God may bleſſe thee in al that thou ſetteſt thy hand vnto, in the Land whither thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it.

VEe knowe it was not lawfull by the Lawe to make any offering or ſacrifice of vncleane things. Inſomuch that the beaſtes which GOD had declared to bee vncleane, might not bee mingled with the holy offeringes. The reaſon was that GOD meant thereby to holde his people in all pureneſſe. The effect then of all this is; that when wee come before GOD, whatſoeuer wee offer muſt be cleane and pure, and without any ſpotte. And now Moſes addeth that if a man brought the price of a dogge, GOD abhorred that likewiſe, for a dogge of himſelfe and in his owne nature was an vncleane beaſt (as they ſay). Nowe then if one ſhould ſay he woulde not offer a dogge, bicauſe it was not lawfull ſo to doe, but that hee might offer the price which hee had receiued for ſelling of him: Moſes declareth that this in like manner was reiected of God as an abhominable thing. Whoredome of it ſelfe is a wicked thing, and deteſted of God. Now if one thought likewiſe to bring the price of whoredome, to agree with God and to bee cleared of his fault, it was an abuſe. For God will not haue his name which is holy, to bee mingled with any ſuch filthines and vncleanes. So this place containeth in effect a declaration of the lawe which I tolde you of, ẏ we may not offer any thing vnto God which is not pure and holy. Now to the intent men might knowe that God admitteth not any Sophiſtrie or ſuttleties, as men doe when they fetche their byleapes, and beare themſelues in hand that they can ſo countenaunce their wickedneſſe, as it ſhall not bee condemned before God: Moſes telleth them that it is nothing woorthe, and that they muſt come to that vprightneſſe and ſoundneſſe whereby if a thing bee euill of it ſelfe, then all that euer commeth thereof is likewyſe abhominable before God.

Now then wee ſee what doctrine wee haue to gather in this place. The firſt poynt is, that al the offerings which wee make vnto GOD, muſt bee pure and cleane. If this was required in the time of the Lawe: wee ought well to practiſe the ſame at this day, according vnto that which the prophet Malachie ſayth: For after that GOD had reproued the ſacrifices which the Iewes made vnto him, becauſe there was much vncleaneſſe in them: hee ſayth, The time ſhall come when my name ſhall bee called vppon through out the whole worlde, yea, when I ſhall bee called the great GOD, when I ſhall bee worſhipped of all men, and when men ſhall offer vnto me a pure and cleane ſacrifice. Now becauſe the prophet in that place treateth of the eſtate of the Chriſtian Church, and ſheweth that GOD ſhould bee exalted throughout the whole world at the comming of that Redeemer which was promiſed; therefore this appertayneth vnto vs. Not that we muſt now offer ſacrifices of Oxen and Sheepe or of other brute beaſtes: for wee knowe that ſuch ſhadowes are done away: but wee muſt offer that reaſonable ſacrifice (as ſaint Paule termeth it in the twelfth Rom.12.1. to the Romanes:) which God liketh of, that is, that euery man dedicate himſelfe vnto GOD by becomming newe both in heart and minde. Therefore whereas wee ſee that God nowadayes requireth ſpirituall ſacrifices, bidding vs to offer vnto him our ſoules and our bodyes; it is neceſſarie before all thinges that wee ſhould be purified. For it is too great an abuſe, if we thinke in this ſacrifice to bring our owne defilements. As much is to be ſaid of all yͤ offerings which God requireth which are ioyned vnto this ſolemne ſacrifice of our owne perſons. For when wee pray, it is a kinde of ſacrifice which GOD Pſal. 50, 13. nowadayes liketh, as it is ſayde in the fiftith Hebr.13.96 Pſalme. Our almes likewiſe are ſacrifices, as it is ſayde in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. Forget not to helpe the poore ſtraungers, and them which are in neede and neceſſitie: for they are the true ſacrifices which God requireth. But nowe what remaineth for vs to doe? Verily wee muſt be pure if we will haue God to receiue ſuch ſacrifices at our handes. For otherwiſe hee diſalloweth of all: as it is ſaid in the Prophet Aggee: Agge.2.13. That yͤ which we touch ſhall be defiled with our vncleannes. For there yͤ Iewes were condemned ẇ all their pompes & ceremonies. And why? For one was giuẽ to robbery, another to whoredome, another to ſome other wicked dealing, and another was full of crueltie, enuie & rancor, and yet for all that they came to make a faire ſhew in the temple, pretending to be wondrous deuout men. But what? God ſaieth vnto them, when a man is vncleane in his owne perſon, is not al that which euer he toucheth defyled alſo? Yes verily. Nowe then your ſacrifices are full of vncleanneſſe, for your handes are defyled, and yet yee come to handle thoſe thinges which are holy. Therefore you doe nought elſe but prouoke mee vnto farther anger. So then let vs learne (as I haue alreadie declared) that if we will offer our ſelues vnto GOD, wee muſt firſt of all bee pure and cleane, that is to ſay, wee muſt bee ridde of all our wicked thoughtes and affections. For if wee bee intangled in them, GOD liketh not of vs, and howe fairely ſo euer wee proteſt that wee doe all thinges to pleaſe him and to apply vs vnto his ſeruice, doubtleſſe hee will diſallowe all. And againe if wee deſire that our prayers, ſupplications, and almes ſhoulde bee acceptable vnto God; let vs take heede that all proceede from a ſyncere and willing affection. And ſo yee ſee what wee haue to beare in minde in the firſt place.

Now if one demaunde howe it is poſſible for a man to be ſo clenſed, that there ſhould remaine no blemiſh in him: we aunſwere hereunto, That it is moſt certaine wee cannot come vnto ſuch perfection, but yet we muſt tend thereunto: for we are not excuſed, ſo as we ſhould alwaies abide and ſettle in our filthines. Therefore euery one of vs knowing that he is full of vncleaneſſe, muſt enforce himſelfe by the power of Gods ſpirite to clenſe himſelfe, and labour to come vnto a perfect pureneſſe. When wee are ſo affected, and haue this deſire in vs, then God ceaſeth not to accept our ſacrifices although they bee not worthy to be accepted. And why? for our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſupplieth that which is wanting in vs, as it is ſayde in an other place to the Hebrewes: Hebr.13.15 That it is through him that wee offer prayers and thankes giuing and ſacrifices of praiſe vnto God. Yee ſee then in what ſorte the pureneſſe of our ſacrifices ſhal be eſteemed, to wit, if they bee watered with the blood of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, to clenſe them from all their ſtaynes. But in any wiſe he which endeuoureth to ſerue GOD, muſt examine himſelfe, and knowing his owne filthyneſſe and vncleaneſſe, hee muſt enforce himſelfe to bee drawen from it. For if wee double with GOD, hee will diſlike of all thinges that wee take in hande. And although men are of opinion, that wee doe more than our duetie; yet queſtionleſſe in the ſight of God, all ſhalbee holden for abhominable. And herewithall alſo let vs note, that God reprooueth all ſuttle dealing, when wee thinke to paint foorth our caſe in ſuch ſort, as to bleare the eyes of God, and that by ſo dooing wee doe but double our fault, as is declared vnto vs by this text. Therefore, if wee bring vnto God any ſacrifice, and yet our proteſting that wee will not offer vnto him any vncleane ſacrifices, is but a ſetting of ſome faire colour on the matter; our Lorde ſayeth ſtill, The price of the dogge, and the dogge is all one. The hyre of an whoore, and the whooredome is alike vnto mee, as if hee ſayde, that wee muſt take away all the appurtenances of euil. For if we retaine any thing of it, we ſhalbe alwayes condemned. What muſt wee do then? wee muſt walke vprightly. There is nothing which God hateth ſo much as a double heart, as the ſcripture ſayth. Pſal.12.3. Sith it is ſo, let euery man enter into himſelfe, & let vs make good tryall of our ſelues, to the intent wee flatter not, ne harden not our ſelues in our vayne pretences and imaginations. But when wee finde, that there is any ſtayne of wickednes in vs which diſpleaſeth God, let euery of vs bee in diſpleaſure with himſelfe for it, and let vs offer vnto God the ſacrifice of mortifying our ſelues, and ſay: Alas Lorde, I ſee full well that there are many wicked defilementes in mee, ſo that when I approch vnto thy maieſtie, I am vtterly confounded. But Lorde I come and offer vnto thee my heart in ſacrifice, which thou knoweſt to bee heauie becauſe I ſee my ſelf beſpotted with ſuch a vice. When God ſhal once perceiue yͤ with vnfained repentance we deſire to bee ridde of our vices; hee will receiue vs, for this repentance is the ſacrifice which wee owe vnto him, and this anguiſh of heart which wee haue for beeing inclyned vnto any wickedneſſe, and for offending of God, is the true ſworde wherwith the ſacrifices bee offered vnto God, I meane the reaſonable ſacrifices. Rom.12.1.

Nowe if it be not lawfull to bring vnto God any fayned thing: what will come of it if we intermeddle him with our iniquities? As there are many which giue almes. But whereof? Of their

ſpoiles: when they haue pilled and robbed, they perſwade themſelues that God will be appeaſed, if they beſtow ſome part of the booty vpon him. But there is no ſuch beaſtly mocking of God as is this. When one hath played the whoremonger, he will make his account to redeeme himſelf before God with ſome price, and yͭ with a price ful of filthynes. And therfore let vs diligently note yͭ which Moſes ſaith in this place; namely, That al theſe things are abhominable in yͤ ſight of god. It is too much that we haue ſo offended already, though wee added not a ſeconde fault. If one through extortion & wrong dealing ſcratch vnto himſelfe another mans goods: he is already in too too great a fault. But if he thinke to dally in ſuch ſorte with God, as to thinke to raunſome himſelfe by paying I knowe not what part thereof, or by way of almes, or (as men doe in Popery,) by offering to a block, or by cauſing of maſſes to be ſung, or by appointing ſom yearly dirige, or by building of ſome chappell: if I ſay men thinke to content God ſo with mony or monies worth: they double their fault, and do but prouoke God vnto farther anger. For that is ſuch a trechery, as we know not how to do God a greater iniury, than ſo to entermeddle him with our filthines, as if he were a confederate with vs in the ſame wickedneſſe. Ye ſee then in effect how we ought to abſtaine from āl maner of defilements, if we will preſent our ſelues before God with any offering at all on our behalfe.

And nowe Moſes hauing thus ſpoken, addeth, That the Iewes ſhall not byte their brethren by vſurie, neither of ſiluer, nor of corne, nor of Wine, nor of any other things, and yet notwithſtanding whereas among themſelues he will haue them to abſtaine from vſurie, he permitteth them to vſe it towardes the Paynims. Nowe we haue to note in this place, that albeit this bee a ciuill lawe, yet it hath a reſpect in part vnto conſcience, as wee haue aboue touched that we muſt examine all yͤ lawes which are contained in Moſes by the lawe of the ten commandements. For that is the perfection of all, and that is yͤ rule of our life. Therfore when we meete with any law, we muſt conſider vnto what commandement it ought to be referred: and thereupon conclude, that if it be a ciuill lawe, wel: touching the order of policie, it was properly belonging vnto the Iewes, but yͤ ſubſtance and ground thereof, remaineth vnto vs, that is to ſay, yͤ equitie and the vprightnes of it. Now this equitie of it (ſay I) laſteth for euer, & not for a time onely. And wherehence proceedeth all vprightnes, but from the righteouſnes of God as from his fountaine? But that righteouſnes is euerlaſting & changeth not, therefore it followeth that all equitie and vprightnes is inuiolable. And although men abuſe it, yet in very deede they are ſufficiently conuicted, yͭ whatſoeuer God hath ſhewed vnto them is rightfull, & muſt remaine in force for euer. But let vs nowe come & wey the text. Moſes forbiddeth yͤ Iewes to exerciſe vſurie amongeſt thēſelues. And why? Bicauſe they were the people of God. He giueth them leaue to exerciſe vſurie vpon the Paynims, with whom they had not acquaintaunce. But yet neuertheleſſe they were mē, & therfore they had no leaue granted vnto thē, to ſpoile them of their goods. Some to aunſwere this queſtion, alleage this excuſe, that God had giuen them the goods of al the people of the land of Chanaan, as of the Amorrhites, yͤ Phereſites, the Hethites and ſuch like, that God (I ſay) had giuen their goods vnto the Iewes for pillage: ſo that they had leaue to ſpoile them of all, yea and were commaunded to put al of them to death: and for that they did not ſo, they committed a great fault, for which God reproued them, and they were likewiſe puniſhed for it. But in this place there is no mention made neither of Hethites, nor of Amorrhites, nor of Iebuſites, nor of Chananites, nor of any other people of that lande, but in generall of all nations in the world. Egypt is heere compriſed, and Syria, & all the Iles of the ſea, and all they who had entercourſe of merchandiſe with the Iewes. Therfore this aunſwere is not ſo proper to this place. But let vs note that God permitted the Iewes many thinges for policies ſake, which were not therefore good, as we haue already ſeene: and howe did he permit them? Forſooth he appointed no puniſhment for them. And ſo in this place when it is ſayd, Thou maiſt gnaw ſuch as are ſtrangers with vſury: God maketh not the thing lawfull, but he leaueth it vnpuniſhed. And yet for al that, that law abideth alwaies in his full force: Thou ſhalt not ſteale. Vnder this word we are forbidden to exerciſe any wicked practiſe, whereby our neighbours may be grieued, we are forbidden to make our gaine by the loſſe of an other. To ſpeake in feaw wordes: I graunt that before men this ſhall not bee condemned for theft, but yet we muſt be accountable for it before God. For as for ciuill Lawes they haue reſpect vnto earthly Iudges which puniſh not all offences, nor cannot if they woulde. In deede they ought to enforce themſelues thereto: but when they haue done all, yet muſt they let paſſe much wickednes which ſhalbe iudged in that great day. And therefore let vs note, yͭ when God ſuffered the Iewes to exerciſe vſurie, and to handle the Paynims in ſuch ſort as it is ſaide in this place; he ment not therefore to preiudice yͤ commaundement wherein he had forbidden men to ſteale. I grant yͭ this theeuerie which was committed in vſurie was not puniſhed by men, but yet for all yͭ we muſt alwais return vnto this point, yͭ the righteouſnes which is contained in yͤ ten commādements is euerlaſting, and yͭ men cannot change it. Seeing it is ſo, we muſt therfore conclude, that whatſoeuer bringeth with it any harme, was forbidden yͤ Iewes aſwell as vs. And yet nowadaies when they beare thēſelues in hand, yͭ they haue free leaue for the practiſing of this wickedneſſe, ſo yͭ among thēſelues there be no extortion nor other ſuch euil done; they ſhall perceiue yͭ they are ſo farre from being excuſed hereby, that rather they are in double wiſe condemned. For they ſhould be ioyned with vs, bicauſe God hath opened vnto vs the doore into his Church. But they haue loſt their roome, they are ſhut out, and baniſhed from the kingdome of God, and we in the meane while are accounted for the children

Gal.3.7. of Abraham, although touching the fleſh wee come not from that ſtocke. Therefore albeit in olde time the Iewes had that priuiledge, that they might lend vpon vſurie vnto the Paynims: yet is it not therefore to be ſaid that they ſhould nowadayes grieue and moleſt the children of God, eſpecially when themſelues are cutte off from his Church, and are taken for baſtardes, bicauſe of their rebellion and diſobedience.

But the chiefe and principall point is, that we apply this place vnto our profite. It was ſayde vnto the Iewes, Yee ſhall not practiſe vſurie vppon your brethren. And I pray you who are our brethren nowadayes? Wee knowe that our Lorde Eph.2.13. Ieſus came to be our peace, to the intent to reconcile vnto God both ſuch as were nigh, and ſuch as were afarre off. There hath beene a common brotherhood among all, ſince the time that our Lorde Ieſus declared that wee are all adopted, and there is no longer nowe either Iewe or Gal. 3.28 Gentile, as the ſcripture ſpeaketh. Therefore whereas it is ſaid that we are brethren, and that without any difference; let vs conclude, that that equitie which the Iewes were commanded to keepe betweene themſelues, wee ought nowadayes to keepe betweene vs. So then it is not lawfull for vs to bite any creature liuing with vſurie. Let that be marked for one point.

Nowe let vs note, that this worde vſurie commeth of the verbe which is here placed, and ſignifieth, To bite. It is ſaid, Thou ſhalt not gnawe with gnawing: (if we would tranſlate it word for word) or rather, Thou ſhalt not bite with biting. And ſo the worde of Gnawing or of Byting, by a borrowed ſpeach is taken for vſurie. And why? Bicauſe it byteth and waſteth a poore man which is charged with it. Neuertheleſſe this is the whole effect, that we muſt not harme our neighbours by taking any profite of them, ſuch profite I meane, as is gotten by their loſſe. And to the intent that no man reſt preciſely vppon theſe wordes, let vs note that when Ezechiel in the 16. Chapter condemneth vſuries, he placeth not there onely this worde, Neſech, which is here put, and ſignifieth byting: but he vſeth another worde which ſignifieth encreaſe: as if he ſayde, all that which is beſide the principall. Nowe for all this God forbiddeth not all manner of gaine, ſo as a man may not make any profite at al. For were it ſo, we muſt lay aſide all Marchandiſe, and wee might not lawfully buy and ſell one with another. But hee forbiddeth the profite or encreaſe which a man getteth by deliuering out his owne goods without his owne loſſe, and yet notwithſtanding will ſucke another mans ſubſtance: and careth not whether he harme his neighbour or no, ſo that he may enriche himſelfe. This is the encreaſe which is condemned by the Prophet Ezechiel.

Againe wee muſt diligently note the other wordes which Moſes vſeth in this place. For he ſayth not, Profite of money by vſurie, but he ſaith of corne, of wine, and of all thinges. Then is it but a meere mockage: if I ſhal ſay: as for mee, I haue not taken any profite for my money by vſurie, but I haue taken for my corne, or for my wine, and that was giuen vnto mee for a recompence. Wee woulde gladly deale ſo ſubtilly, that when we offend, God ſhould not ſee our wickedneſſe. But wee knowe that when Adam couered himſelfe with figge leaues, it profited him little. And thinke wee that any of theſe rouing titles which wee take to colour our wicked practiſes with all will ſtand vs in better ſtead than Adams figge leaues did him? Shall wee be able to bleare the eyes of God, when men themſelues, yea euen ſuch as are ſtarke ſtaring blinde can grope our wickedneſſe? And therefore men are ouer fondly beſotted, if they ſay that vſurie is not but in money: for wee ſee how God hath extended it to all kindes of profite: ſo that if wee take encreaſe for corne or for wine, wee are alwayes vſurers. Moreouer wee muſt not reſt preciſely on the terme, but conſider what is ſignified thereby. Nowe that which is heere called Byting, is verie manifeſt. And why? For wee ſee what Gods meaning is, and the worde alſo it ſelfe ought to ſerue vs for an expoſition. Seeing God treateth here of that which biteth poore men and gnaweth them, he meant to giue vs a prouiſo, that we ſhoulde not gnawe any man by any vnlawfull meanes, nor rake vnto our ſelues other mennes goods. This is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde. But if a man will preciſely preſſe a worde, and not regard what is ſignified thereby, he plaieth but the ſuttle Sophiſter with God. If a man thinke to excuſe himſelfe by ſaying, he calleth not a bargaine vſurie: it is but a mere mockerie. I ſpeake this bicauſe there are ſome which ſtand onely vpon the terme of vſurie, and would hereby eſcape and cleare their caſe: but God for all that quiteth them not, although they be ſo ſuttle and ſo wilie: nay rather he pronounceth that they are as rauening Wolues, to deuour other mens goods. But yet in the meane while all is one to them, ſo they may haue any colour to diſguiſe their matters withall. And that is the very cauſe why men haue found out ſuch diuers contractes in the world, to the intent they might ſet ſome colour vpon their wicked practiſes. I haue tolde you howe that ſome, ſo they take no money, make account to ſcape ſcotfree. And why? One maketh this fooliſh reaſon, That money doeth not beget money. And therefore Ariſtotle in his Ethicks. that it is not lawfull to receiue any thing for it. Now as for mee I will take no money, but a man ſhall giue me ſo much Corne vppon a ſumme of money which I ſhall lend him. And is not corne that whereby a poore man is ſuſtained? And ſhal I goe rob him of that wherewith he ſhoulde bee nouriſhed and ſuſtained? He hath not any thing to eate by reaſon that I haue vſed ſuch crueltie towardes him: and for all that, ſhall I ſay that I am no vſurer? It had bin better that I had taken the money out of his purſe, than ſo to bereaue him of that which ſhoulde ſuſtaine him. And therefore let vs not deceiue our ſelues by the word, as men will ſay in Fraunce; this is no vſurie, or as they call it here in Geneua; this is no renewing. And why? They bring a skinne of Parchment and ſay: ſee how wee couenaunted together. But if the ſunne giue ſo much light vnto it ẏ men may ſee it, ſhal not the eyes of God ſee as farre? And thinke we to dimme Gods eies with the ſhadowe of a leafe of Paper, or of a ſheepes ſkinne, ſo as hee ſhall not ſee one whyt? Men may well vſe ſuch manner of dealing, as they ſhall haue (as I tolde you) ſome faire coulour to ſay: O I haue made ſuch and ſuch a contract, and hee ſhall not bee taken for an vſurer. And why? Becauſe thinges are diſguiſed. But God will condemne vs with all our formalities. For (as I haue tolde you) wee muſt come to the verie point of the matter. Let vs hearken vnto the lawe of God, for that is the rule which cannot deceiue vs: Whatſoeuer wee doe let vs examine it thereby: let vs conſider to what commaundement it is to be referred: namely to this, Thou ſhalt not ſteale. But nowe what is theft in this commaundement? Forſooth all thoſe meanes whereby wee vſe to rake vnto vs other mens goods, whether it be by deceyte or by violence. Therefore if we wil make our profit by ẏ loſſe of another, if ſome will ſcratch aſmuch as they can get, if they will abuſe their credite, if they will ſet their foote on the throates of poore men; if they will play the tyrantes ouer them: if others will faune and flatter, and yet in the meane while haue their nettes laide, and ſometimes runne to an fro, ſometimes lie lurking, & ſo vſe al the meanes they may to pil their neighbours; if we (I ſay) doe behaue our ſelues thus, we are theeues before God. Let vs therefore conclude, that vſurie is an vnlawfull gaine which we take either for the loane of corne or of monie, or of any thing beſides. As for example, if a man lend corne and not monie; yet fayleth he not to be an vſurer: for we ſee that the reaſon which ſome nowe and then alleadge is childiſh; Monie begetteth not monie. For if I make a loane of corne, and when the corne is worth fortie ſhillinges I ſay vnto a man: Well I wil haue three pounde: why doe I ſo? Becauſe I deliuered vnto him my corne which woulde haue yeelded mee ſo much monie: yea but I haue twentie ſhillinges more than it is worth, am I not an vſurer before God? And yet men beare themſelues in hande that this may bee lawefull. But ſuch gainetaking is theeuerie. And as I told you, all the ſuttleties which men vſe ſhall not ſo bleare the eyes of God, but hee will alwayes condemne all them which vſe this dealing for theeues and vſurers. So then let vs take good heede vnto our ſelues, and whereas it is ſaide, That wee ought not to gnawe our neighbour by vſurie: Let vs knowe that our Lorde meant in effect to commaunde vs by theſe wordes, to vſe equitie and vprightneſſe in all our doinges, and then eſpecially, when wee are to lende vnto our neighbours: for loanes which are willingly made are for the neceſſitie of him which boroweth, he hath neede of monie. Well then, if a man which is thus in neede come vnto mee and I feele his diſeaſe, and knowing howe hee ſtandeth in neede of readie monie, will pinche him and ſeeke ſome wicked gaine by him, it is vſurie, howe euer my colouring of it make it to bee otherwiſe taken before men. And what though men haue ſought diligently, and coulde find no cauſe of blame in me? What if they haue ſifted the matter neerelie, & not found me faultie? Yet notwithſtanding God wil not fayle to condemne mee. And why? For in diſguiſing my couenaunt, I haue ſought to make my profite by the loſſe of an other, and that vnder this colour that the man which deſireth ſuccour at my hande is in neede. Ye ſee then howe there needeth no long ſcanning to find, what the vſurie is which God condemneth.

And herein we may ſee the hypocriſie of mē: for oftentimes they will come to aske counſell of this and that, when their owne conſcience might ſatisfie them well enough. It were needfull oftentimes that the Preachers ſhoulde bee marchauntes and skilfull in all the trades of the worlde, that they might bee able to aunſwere them which aske counſell in this thing in particular. They then which knowe themſelues ſo well what is to bee doone in ſuch affayres, why come they to aske counſell of him who is not trayned vp in thoſe dealinges? For wee can ſay well in generall what the thing is. But there are many which haue great ſtore of ſuttleties & ſhifting policies, which none beſides them that are of the ſame trade doe knowe: and theſe wil goe and beguile men, and then beare themſelues on hande that they are cleared before God, if it may bee ſaide vnto them: I finde no euill in ſo doing. No, but hee which ſaith ſo is not acquainted with the wickedneſſe which is hidden, becauſe that as then hee handled the doctrine but in generall. Let vs therefore mark that in effect the point whereunto wee muſt returne, is, that when we lende we muſt not abuſe the neceſſitie of our neighbor and ſay: wel, here haue I a fitte occaſion, I may nowe profite my ſelfe.

But nowe ſome man will demaunde, whether all manner of profite bee forbidden by lending. And it were a thing worth the diſcuſſing. For put the caſe that a man dealeth plainely, & deliuereth his ware at a price and for a time. If the other breake day with him and delaye him of his monie, doubtles he deſerueth to pay the forfeture or the profite which hee withholdeth from him who made the loane. And when the intereſt or gaine thereof is ſet by Iuſtice, ſurely he needeth not to make anie conſcience to take it. There is a man which hath taken my commoditie whereby I muſt liue: for when I haue ſolde to day I buy againe to morrow: and therefore hee that hindereth mee, by withholding from mee the gaine of my commoditie, from maintaining the trade of my ſhoppe, hee doeth no better than cut my throate. For beholde, I grounded my ſelfe vppon him, hee promiſed to pay mee at ſuch a day, that time is paſſed, and I can get nothing of him, hee cares not though I and my familie ſtarue for hunger. Therefore in ſuch caſe, iuſtice ought to prouide for a man: although that nowadayes it diſchargeth his dutie but ſlenderly herein. For it ſeemeth that iuſtice nowadayes fauoreth the caſe of coſiners, and that when they haue ſnatched what they can, and hee that is bitten commeth to recouer that which is reaſon by way of iuſtice; it ſeemeth that he commeth into the court to haue a newe fine ſet vpon his heade. Verilie it is too too wicked a mockerie, when a man ſhall bee ſo deceiued, and yet can haue no remedie for it. So then if a man bee in this wiſe deceiued, it is a cleare caſe hee may take intereſt and gayne, and not be accuſed therefore either before God or before men. Wee may not therefore ſtand (as I tolde you) on the terme or the word.

And moreouer let vs beare in minde that which hath bin alreadie declared, namely that to be excuſed by lawe, is not all that wee ought to ſeeke: for there is a lawe of fiue in ẏ hundred. And this is a generall lawe becauſe Magiſtrates cannot ſet a certaine rate for euerie caſe: but they appoint that a man may take fiue in the hundred. And why? For trafficke ſake, and becauſe this ſtint might not be paſſed. Nowe, may I ſay therefore that it is lawfull to take alwaies fiue in the hundred? No. For if a man which is in neede come vnto mee: and I take gaine of him, what excuſe ſoeuer I bring, I ſhall bee accounted a theefe and an vſurer before God. For he is in neede: my part is to helpe him, and I do not. Ye ſee then what we haue likewiſe to beare in minde.

Nowe withall alſo let vs note on the contrarie ſide, that when we thinke to auoide the worde of vſurie or intereſt, we muſt beware that we fall not into a greater and more outragious fault in the ſight of God. For it may ſo be, that I will lend my monie without ſuch intereſt as the law permitteth me, I wil take nothing for it: but I will put vnto it a tayle which ſhall marre all. A man cōmeth & deſireth me to lend him an hundred crownes, well hee ſhall pawne vnto mee a peece of lande which is worth two hundred. It falleth out that the bonde is forfaited. I will take no more than lawe awardeth mee for the profite of my monie, or I will take nothing at all. But I will force a ſale thereof, and hee ſhall withall ſurrender me his title. And a man will make himſelfe beleeue, that hee may waſhe his handes as an innocent, when hee hath done all this. What (ſaith he)? I lent my monie, and when it was not paide me againe, I bought ſuch a peece of lande. And if you will inquire futher of the matter, Why: it was ſurrendred vnto me. Yea, but was it done of the parties owne free accorde? When I helde the poore man by the throate, and kept him in my pawes, till I made him ſay that worde, That he woulde ſell it vnto mee: and ſhall not God in the meane while bee Iudge betweene vs? So then (as I haue tolde you) it is not for vs to ſtande altogether on the wordes, but wee muſt rather haue an eye vnto the thing, that is to wit, that before God, wee bee not guiltie of anie extortion, that we haue not more than was lawfull for vs, nor raked vnto our ſelues other mens goods. For oftentimes men wil take euen the moſt honeſt titles that be in the world, ſo as yee would thinke there were nothing but holineſſe in them, and yet will thoſe pinch a man much more than the gayne would which a man might lawfully take. And we ſee howe manie inuentions are framed in this behalfe: and which wee cannot at this time handle to the full. And I woulde to God that the practiſe of them were not ſo wel knowen as it is. But what? All they which knowe howe to make their gaine, are great clarks herein: Yea to dally with God, and to find out for themſelues ſhrouding ſheetes, whereas they will neuer haue an eye vnto the cheefe and principall poynt. Yee ſee then what wee haue to beare in mind, namelie that when it is demaunded whether all vſuries bee lawfull, wee muſt not ſticke ſimplie vnto this word Vſurie, but wee muſt conſider what the intent and meaning of God is.

Matt. 7. 12.

But to knowe this the better, wee muſt reſort vnto that equitie which is ſhewed vnto vs in his lawe. Yea and wee heare what our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt telleth vs, namely, that wee muſt not doe vnto others, but what wee would haue them to doe vnto vs. This ſaieth hee is the whole lawe and the Prophetes. No doubt then, but that this forbidding of vſurie is compriſed alſo in theſe wordes, That we doe not vnto others but what wee woulde haue them to doe vnto vs. Nowe then inſteede of asking counſell howe to excuſe our ſelues before God, let euerie man examine the matter thus: Goe to, if I were in this mans caſe, woulde I haue a man pinche mee thus with vſurie? Nay verilie woulde I not: I woulde ſay a man did me wrong. And if I durſt not ſay it, yet I woulde thinke ſo in my heart. Nowe if a man thus condemne himſelfe in his owne proper fact, is it not enough? What neede we then aske either this or that? And moreouer if we obſerue this equitie and vprightneſſe of not dooing vnto an other, ẏ which wee would not haue a man to doe vnto vs, wee ſhall bee abſolued before God: yea and ſo abſolued, that this lawe ſhall not trouble our wittes about the ſcanning of the forme of the woordes thereof; but wee will ſtande ſteadfaſtly vppon this grounde, that God meaneth that euery man ſhoulde haue his due, and that wee ſhould not robbe, ſpoyle, and deuour other mens goods.

And let vs note further that it is not enough for vs, not to haue raked our neighbours goods vnto vs by guyle: but wee muſt knowe that wee are bounde to helpe and ſuccour him. Therefore ſo little leaue haue wee to ſpoyle our neighbour of his goods, that if wee helpe him not in his neede, we are guiltie of theft before God. If I ſay, Oh I haue deceiued no man, it ſhal bee replyed againſt mee before GOD, that I haue. For if I haue wherewith to helpe a man and I will not diſburſe one pennie, but leaue my Neighbour in extreeme neede when I haue the meane to ſuccour him; doubtles I am taken for a theefe before God.

And againe let vs note, that vſuries ſometime are more to bee condemned in a ſmal profite, than in a great. This I ſay to the intent that men ſhoulde not ſeeke fooliſhe cloakinges of their faultes. For that which I ſay might ſeeme ſtraunge at the firſt bluſhe. What? And ſhall a man thinke better of a ſtrong theefe, than of a ſmall pelting theefe? I woulde haue no contention about the worde: but I ſay there is greater wickednes ſhewed ſometimes in the reaping of ſmal profit, thã in a great gaine. And why? For there may be a rich man which is no neceſſitie, but yet notwithſtanding he ſtandeth in need of readie monie, as there are manie which haue wheron to liue, but they would always encreaſe their ſtocke. Such a man woulde buy a certaine peece of Lande, which woulde ſtande him in good ſteade: not that neceſſitie conſtrayneth him, but for a deſire hee hath to growe ſtill richer and richer. Nowe one lendeth him a Thouſande crownes, the profite of this ſumme will bee much greater, than the profite of foure Florens, which a man lendeth vnto an other. Yea but to whome is this latter monie lent? To a poore man which hath ſmal children, & hath not a morſel of bread to put into their mouthes. Nowe if for the loane of theſe foure Florens, a man will haue one, and the poore man muſt make readie yͤ monie at the end of one moneth or twayne, this vſurie or Returne is is worſe thã yͤ other. For he returneth his mony ouer ſoone. I graunt it is a leauing of the olde ſkinne ſtill behinde: but where ſhall a man finde a newe in the meane time? Yee ſee then howe this ſmal gaine is more dammageable than ſome great gaine. For why? It pincheth the poore man much more than if hee ſhoulde take a verie great gaine of an other which is able to beare it, and is not pinched in deede ſo to the quicke by it.

Nowe for concluſion, let vs knowe that God forbiddeth vs in this place to rake vnto our ſelues other mens goods by anie vnlawefull meanes, by vniuſt dealing or by crueltie. And we muſt not here bring our ſuttleties to excuſe our vſuries and our ſnatching. For our Lord reſteth alwayes on the ſubſtaunce in that hee commandeth that none ſhoulde bee pinched, and that the profites which wee take ſhoulde not be taxes and impoſtes to ſucke the bloude of poore men, and to gnawe their ſubſtaunce euen to the bones of them. And it is expreſſely ſayde; To the intent that the Lorde thy God may bleſſe thee, and that thou maiſt proſper in the Lande whither thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it. Hereby our Lorde meant to withdrawe vs from all vnlawfull meanes of heaping vp of riches. As if hee ſhould ſay yͭ his bleſſing ſhal auaile vs more than all the prouiſion which wee can make; and that al the payne which wee take to inrich ourſelues, ſhall not ſerue vs to ſo great purpoſe, as if wee were bleſſed of him. For hee will make vs to proſper, and hee is riche enough to giue vnto vs wherewithall to mayntaine vs. Let vs therefore learne, that our Lorde meant here to reprooue the vnbeleefe of men, in that they ſo diſtruſt him, and thinke that the earth ſhall fayle them. And thereuppon euerie man concludeth thus: I muſt vſe ſuch a meane, I muſt practiſe ſuch a feate, I muſt looke vnto ſuch a buſineſſe; or otherwiſe I ſhall bee behinde hand in all thinges, I ſhall but pine away, I ſhall not get halfe my liuing, if I proceede not in this manner. Therefore when wee haue ſuch a diſtruſt, that is the verie cauſe why wee vſe ſuch wicked trades. Wee muſt therefore vtterly forſake al ſuch things. If wee will haue GOD to bleſſe vs, let vs attempt nothing, but what is agreeable vnto his will, and what hee permitteth vs. If wee doe ſo; let vs aſſure our ſelues that God will make vs to proſper, and that his bleſſing ſhall ſtande vs in better ſteade than all that euer wee are able to get by vnlawefull meanes. As wee ſee likewiſe howe his curſe is vppon all thoſe which giue themſelues ouer vnto ſpoyling, and vſurie, and other ſuch wicked trades. Wee ſee into what an horrible confuſion they are brought, when they graunt vnto themſelues ſuch lawleſſe libertie, as ſhalbe farther declared hereafter.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to grant vs the grace to be ſo dedicated vnto him by his holy ſpirite, that when wee come to preſent our ſelues vnto his ſeruice, wee may offer vnto him pure ſacrifices & ſuch as he may accept of. And although there be always many ſpottes & ſtaines in them, that he notwithſtanding wil not impute them vnto vs: and that in the meane time hee will ſo correct them, as wee may tend vnto that perfection to the which he calleth vs, and whether we open our mouth to call vppon him, or beſtowe of our goods in way of almes, that we may do it without any ſiniſter affection, & endeuour ſo to diſpoſe that which he hath put into our handes, yͭ we may be found faithful ſtewards when we ſhal come at the later day to giue vp our account vnto him, & generaly that we may ſo liue one with another, as that there may bee an vpright brotherly dealing among vs, that euery one endeuour ſo to liue, & ſo ſeeke after his own profit, as he grieue not his neighbors, but rather yͭ euery man may be holpen & ſuccoured by vs as much as is poſſible: & that thereby wee may learne to ſhewe that we are the children of God, & that he is our father when wee ſhall ſeeke in this ſort to maintaine the brotherhood wherein he hath ioyned vs togither. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely vnto vs, but alſo vnto all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxix. of Ianuarie, 1556.

The Cxxxv. Sermon, which is the ſixth vpon the three & twentith Chapter.

20 Thou maieſt, &c.

21 When thou voweſt a vowe vnto the Lorde thy God, thou ſhalt not ſlacke to performe it: for the Lorde thy God will require it of thee, and ſo there ſhall be ſinne in thee.

22 But if thou abſteyneſt from vowing, it ſhall not bee anie ſinne vnto thee.

23 Thou ſhalt keepe and performe that which is gone out of thy lippes, as thou haſt vowed it willinglie vnto the Lorde thy God, and as thou haſt ſpoken it with thy mouth.

IT was declared briefly yeſterday, that if the promiſe which is here contayned were printed well in our heartes, men would be contēted to get their liuing otherwiſe than by ſuch meanes as God condemneth. For it is nothing elſe but our vnbeleefe which prouoketh vs to vſe deceite and other harme doing. And that is the cauſe alſo why God meaning to bridle vs, maketh mention of this promiſe: Feare not that I will caſt thee off, or that I will forſake thee. And this is it whereunto the Apoſtle likewiſe Ioſ.1.5. Hebr.13.5. leadeth vs in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, where hee intendeth to correct all manner of couetouſneſſe. And therefore let vs beare well in minde, that if wee wil liue with our neighbours in all vprightneſſe and equitie, wee muſt alwayes ſet before our eyes this bleſſing of God, to wit, that becauſe hee claimeth vnto him ſelfe the Charge of ſuſteyning vs in this worlde, euerie of vs ought to haue an eye vnto him, and to depende vppon his prouidence. And therefore when wee trauell for our liuing, let vs vſe ſuch meanes as God hath graunted vnto vs. And if we thinke to inrich our ſelues any way wee care not how, whether it bee by hooke or by crooke; let vs conſider on the contrary ſide, that if God bereaue vs of his bleſſing, we may well do what we can; but what will bee the iſſue thereof? Verily all muſt needes ſlippe away like water, and we muſt goe backewarde. And albeit God ſuffer a man for a time to increaſe his wealth beyonde meaſure; yet ſhall that bee turned in the end into a woe, both for him and for his childrē. And therfore let vs not be intiſed by ſuch bayts. When wee ſee that manie through pilling and polling of others, doe profit themſelues greatly and heape together much wealth; let not that mooue vs to enuie them. And why? Becauſe the bleſſing of God is much more worth than all the riches in the worlde. And that is promiſed to none but vnto them which holde themſelues within their bounds, and abſteyne from all wicked dealings. And in verie deede if we woulde but open our eyes, wee ſhoulde bee ſufficiently warned of that which is here tolde vs. But what? Euerie man is caried away ſo headlong, that wee conſider not of thoſe thinges which might teach vs plainly euerie day. Beholde there is one which thinketh hee hath ſwallowed vp a great part of the worlde, and it woulde abaſh any man to ſee how ſoudenly hee is conſumed & brought to nothing. God in ſo doing doth ſhew vs as it were with his finger, howe hee curſeth mens couetouſneſſe, extortion, and ſuch like thinges, and yet wee haue no regarde of them. Manie complaine and ſay: Oh beholde we had thought to haue aduanced our ſelues, and in ÿ meane time wee bee falne behinde hande, yea, and that is becauſe they conſidered not whether they depended ſtill on the goodneſſe of God, or whether they proceeded not any further than hee gaue them leaue.

Therefore let vs learne to fare the better by all thoſe teachinges which God beſtoweth vpon vs. When wee ſee that he curſeth ſuch as ſnatch ſo to themſelues on all ſides, which play the rauening wolues, which haue nothing in them but craft and wilineſſe to circumuent, and to ſnare the ſimpler ſorte: when wee ſee how God vndermineth them and conſumeth them: again when wee behold on the other ſide that he bleſſeth thoſe which walke ſoundly and vprightlie, and that although they haue no great aboundance, yet he fayleth not to nouriſh them and to haue a care of their familie: when wee ſee this, let vs deſire much rather to bee bleſſed in this ſort of our God, than to haue all the meanes in the worlde which are ſo accurſed of him. And in deede, the grace and fauour of God ſhineth forth much clearer when a man hath not much to liue vppon, than when hee hath great reuenewes and a rich trade of Marchandiſe, and monie in his purſe and prouiſion of his owne, both in his garners and in his ſellars. Why ſo?

For if a man be ſo well furniſhed of all thinges, hee maketh this reckening, that God hath no longer neede to helpe him. But when a man muſt liue from hande to mouth, or when hee hath not much to maintaine himſelfe withall, & that at leaſt he might conſume al that he hath in the compaſſe of one yeare: and that yet for all that hee goeth on without diminiſhing, and yet knoweth not whẽce his wealth proceedeth, but that hee is certainelie perſwaded that God hath pitie of him; when hee thus driueth away the time, and at the ende of the yeare acknowledgeth that it was God onely which ſuſteyned him and his; therein (ſay I) there is a much more manifeſt declaration of the goodneſſe of God, and GOD by effect ſheweth vnto vs howe he bleſſeth his, and howe much his bleſſing auaileth.

Nowe withall let vs beare in minde howe it is ſayde here, That God will bleſſe them which vſe no wicked trades, as vſuries, extortions, bryberies: yea, that he will bleſſe them in all things which they put their handes vnto. God in this place ſheweth, that hee wil not bleſſe idleneſſe, but that hee will haue men to doe their indeuour by ſuch meanes as ſhall bee admitted vnto them. Let vs therefore employ our ſelues to doe whatſoeuer our Lorde hath inabled vs; and then may wee looke for his bleſſing. But if wee will bee vnprofitable blockes, wee may not thinke it ſtraunge if hee forſake vs. Why ſo? For wee ſee the condition which hee addeth when hee promiſeth that hee will make vs to proſper: that is, ẏ euerie of vs ſhould offer him ſelfe vnto him, and that hee requireth vs to doe nothing but what wee can. Nowe I graunt that the meanes are not alwayes in mans hande; but yet wee on our part according to our power muſt ſeeke to employe our ſelues to doe well, and not priuiledge our ſelues from all carefulneſſe.

As touching the concluſiõ of this whole matter, it hath beene declared that when God forbade the Iewes all manner of vſurie among thẽſelues, it was to the end that men at theſe daies ſhoulde abſtaine from it, becauſe hee hath knit together the whole worlde in one ſelfeſame bonde. And ſith wee haue beene reconciled by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, wee muſt lay aſide all vſuries and ſuch other wicked trades, and not doe otherwiſe vnto anie in the world than we would that other men ſhoulde doe vnto vs. For why? Wee are all neighbours, whether we bee of the ſame countrie or farther off: and of what condition ſoeuer wee be, wee fayle not to bee of that neighbourhood which God hath eſtabliſhed betweene vs. And therefore let vs come to that which is ſaide in the fifteenth Pſalme, that to be citiſens of the Church of GOD, our trading muſt not be by vſurie, or ſuch vnlawful dealings whereby wee ſpoile others of their goods, and gnawe them whom we ought rather to releeue. Briefly, let that teach vs, not to doe any thing vnto others, which we woulde not haue doone vnto our ſelues. For that is in verie deede the effect of all, to the intent that men ſhoulde not vſe anie ſutletie with GOD by cloking any wicked contractes which might be to the dammage and loſſe of other men. And let vs further note diligently that whereof our Lord Ieſus warneth vs; ẏ if we haue the true perfectnes which is required in all the children of God, wee muſt lend & that without hoping for any thing, that is to ſay, we muſt not onely abſtaine from all gaine and increaſe, but if there be a poore man which can neuer be able to quite the good turne we do him with the like, there muſt our liberalitie bee ſhewed. For why? If we looke for recompence, ẏ heathen men do aſmuch. But if we wil haue our ſeruice accepted of god, we muſt hope after no recõpẽce in this world. Thus ye ſee how mẽ ought to liue together. Firſt they muſt abſtaine from al maner of harmedoing, whether it be by deceite or by extortion: and then they muſt endeuor to helpe ſuch as are in neede. And ſo euerie man muſt conſider of his owne abilitie, & as he hath the meanes wherby he may do it, ſo he muſt releeue them which be in neceſſitie and require his helpe. Truely ſuch is the wickednes of men that it requireth this matter to bee treated of euery day, and that men ſhould vſe exhortations to ẏ ſame end, yea & that men ſhould repreſſe ẏ crueltie which is in many: but if we were as ready to learn ẏ which our Lord teacheth vs as we ſhold, we needed not many ſermons & huge volumes to inſtruct vs in this doctrine. For (as I haue tolde you) nature it ſelfe ſheweth what euerie mans duetie is, but becauſe we be deafe of hearing, and are moreouer forepoſſeſſed with ſuch vnbeleefe, that we are of opinion we ſhall neuer haue enough, and that the earth wil ſtil fayle vs: it ſtandeth vs in hande to be exhorted and quickened vp continually. But we muſt not waite vntill men ſpeake vnto vs, euerie man muſt ſtirre vp himſelfe in his owne behalfe, hauing alwayes recourſe to that ſhort leſſon which I haue tolde you.

Luk.6.35.

Now Moſes addeth, That when a man hath vowed any thing vnto God, he muſt performe it, or elſe it ſhall bee imputed vnto him for ſinne. But therewithall he ſaith, how that if a man abſtaine from vowing and vow not at all, he committeth no euill; ſo as God will not binde men thereto, but it is enough if they accompliſhe their vowes: and that if they wil vowe nothing, he will not charge them for it. Nowe let vs note that whereas mention is made heere of vowes, it is not meant indifferently of any thing which a man ſhall liſt to promiſe at randon and without diſcretion. For it is ſaide, When thou voweſt a vowe vnto the Lorde thy GOD. We muſt therefore haue an eye vnto the partie with whom wee haue to deale in making a vow, that is, vnto God. So then let vs note that all vowes are to be made with ſuch reuerence, that men muſt iudge wiſely what is good and what is ill. As in very deed if I promiſe any thing vnto a man, I wil haue this conſideratiõ with my ſelf, to thinke whether he wil accept of it or no. Will I promiſe vnto a man by way of mockerie that which ſhall not pleaſe him, and without knowing how he will take it? No, I will beare him ſo much reuerence as to knowe his will whether hee liketh of ſuch a thing or no. Therefore if we ſhoulde enterpriſe to vowe vnto God whatſoeuer wee thinke good, without making a further enquirie what hee liketh of: were it not a diminiſhing of his authoritie? Yes verilie. For wee make lighter account of him than of a mortall creature. So then, that wee may fare the better by this doctrine of Moſes, wee muſt lay this mayne grounde, namely that when hee ſpeaketh of vowes, he meaneth not whatſoeuer mẽ ſhall fancie, but that which is good and lawefull to vowe, and that which God liketh of. And in verie deede vowes are a part of ẏ ſeruice of God. For when wee vowe anie thing vnto him, it is to honour him and to do him homage. We muſt haue an eye vnto the meaning of a vowe. Nowe the meaning thereof is nothing elſe, but to put vs in minde that wee owe all thinges vnto God. And although all of vs ſhould inforce our ſelues to giue him more than is poſſible for vs to doe, yet we cannot yeeld vnto him the hundreth part of that which we owe: neuertheleſſe when wee giue him any thing, we witnes thereby that wee are bound and beholding vnto him: and thereupon vowes are made whereby a man declareth this, that hee doeth offer vnto God all that which hee hath giuen him, as if hee ſhoulde ſay: Lorde I yeelde vppe all vnto thee. And this is a reknowledging of his benefites which I make vnto him, as when a man is to pay a yearely Rent, he acknowledgeth thereby that the Lande which hee holdeth is his Lords. Euen ſo when a man offereth a vowe vnto God, hee doeth it to acknowledge that all that euer hee hath hee holdeth of God, which thing hee alſo proteſteth by a viſible ſigne. But nowe let vs conſider whether God will bee ſerued after the luſt of men, or according vnto his owne wil? Doubtleſſe hee will bee ſerued in ſuch wiſe as hee himſelfe commaundeth. For hee ſayth that it is as the ſinne of witchcraft, when men of themſelues attempt to doe anie thing, and will needes ſhroude themſelues vnder the fayre ti-

1.Sa.15.23. tle of Deuotion. It is no deuotion (ſaith hee) but it is all one as if you were witches and cõiurers, and did put your truſt in your coniuringes and in your charmes, and therefore I like of nothing which you doe, but I condemne it. Therefore ſeeing wee heare that God will not bee ſerued of vs, but in ſuch manner as hee by his worde teacheth vs. And ſith hee ſayth
1.Sa.15.22. in expreſſe tearmes, That obedience is better than ſacrifice: Let vs keep vs within our bounds, that wee vowe not vnto him whatſoeuer commeth into our brayne. For why? That is diſalowed of him. Therefore this worde is well to be weighed, When thou voweſt vnto the Lord thy God.

And ſecondly wee muſt conſider of the end which wee haue named. For it is not enough that a thing bee good, but it muſt alſo bee doone to a good purpoſe and of an vpright and ſyncere meaning: and ſo wee muſt conſider what the vowes are which God alloweth. The vowes which were made in the lawe, were as ſolemne thankſgiuinges. When a man was ſicke, he vowed that if God woulde giue him his health, hee woulde come into the Temple and offer ſacrifice. And why woulde hee doe ſo? Euen to confeſſe that he held his health of God, and that he acknowledged him for his father, becauſe he had deliuered him from his ſickeneſſe. When a man went out to warre hee made one vowe or other, and when he was to make anie daungerous voyage he did the like. We ſee the example of Iacob, howe he ſaith that hee vowed vnto GOD, that if he brought him backe into the countrie where he was borne, into the Lande which hee had promiſed him for an inheritaunce, he would giue him the tenth part of all his goods, hee would make him an offring thereof. What ment Iacob heereby, but to confirme vnto himſelfe, that although he went as a poore fugitiue perſon which was chaſed out of his fathers houſe to go into a ſtrange & vnknowen countrie and had death alwayes before his eyes, hee was notwithſtanding inheritour of the Lande of Chanaan, and that God woulde bring him thither againe? His meaning was therfore to confirme himſelfe in that thihg, becauſe he had alreadie the promiſe therof warranted vnto him by the bleſſing of his father Iſaac. But to bee the more aſſured of it in his heart, he added this thankſgiuing, as if he had alreadie ſeene the thing accompliſhed and euen preſent before his eyes: my God I hope ẏ thou wilt bring me home ſafe and ſound. It ſeemeth in deede that I am nowe put off from all thinges, and that I ſhall liue no longer in this countrie: Yet my God ſeeing thou haſt made me a promiſe, I will hope that thou wilt ſo conduct me, that I ſhall returne againe into this lande; and therefore I nowe acknowledge this benefit, and promiſe to offer vnto thee the tenth of all that euer thou ſhalt giue vnto me. Yee ſee how this example doeth ſufficientlie declare vnto vs the intent and meaning of thoſe vowes which were made in the time of the Lawe: that is to wit, that they ſerued for prayſes and thankſgiuings vnto God, and ſo by this meanes they were (as I tolde you) an acknowledging of his benefites, or a kinde of homage which was done vnto him.

Nowe hereby wee may gather, that thoſe vowes which men make without iudgement, & without aduiſement taken wnat pleaſeth God, and what hee accepteth; are not onely vaine, but alſo corruptinges of his ſeruice euerichone of them. For men doe falſely abuſe the name of God, when they vowe they knowe not howe or wherefore. And that it is ſo, experience teacheth vs by many examples. But wee muſt holde vs vnto that reaſon which hath beene alreadie alleadged, namely that becauſe vowes pertayne vnto the ſeruice of God, if wee make them at randon and without ſuch ſobrietie as to ſay we will obey GOD in them, we make a foule and filthie medlie of that which we ought to keepe pure and cleane. There is then a defiling of Gods ſeruice, and a kinde of robbing of him of his honour committed in ſo dong. And herein wee ſee howe blunt witted the Papiſtes are. For to prooue their vowes,they take a text all to broken, as if a man woulde take a clauſe onely of an Indenture or ſuch like writing, and cancell all the reſt, and were not that a manifeſt falſhoode? The Papiſtes doe no better. When they reade this word Vowe, O it followeth then that wee muſt performe vnto G O D all the vowes which wee haue made. Is that true? Nay wee muſt firſt knowe whether they be lawful or no? They which ſhould haue murdered Saint Paul and had conſpired together by a ſolemne agreement, did not they make a vowe? But who will ſay nowe that they are bounde by their vowe, and that God liketh Act.23.12. of it? They make a ſolemne vowe not to eate nor drinke, vntill they haue put Saint Paul to death. Truely this is all one as if they would make God a companion of their murder. See what a diueliſhe agreement is made, and they confirme it by and by with a ſolemne vow. Yea but if our wittes be ſetled, we will condemne all ſuch vowes. Nowe then wee ſee when vowes are to bee performed. But Moſes ſaid not without cauſe, When thou doeſt vowe a vowe to the Lorde thy God, appointing God in this place for the partie which accepteth that which ſhall bee preſented and offered vnto him: for without that, all ſhall bee of no value and of no effect.

But nowe what do the Papiſts in their vowes? Firſt they take vnto themſelues ſome trifling toy or other, and thereuppon binde themſelues vnto God: and they beare themſelues in hande, that hee is much beholding vnto them, and that they deſerued ſome recompence of ouerplus at his handes. One voweth a pilgrimage to ſuch a Saint, an other maketh a ninedayes vowe, an other voweth to eate no fleſhe on ſuch a day, or to faſt ſuch a feaſtes euen. Nowe let vs conſider whether God liketh of anie of al theſe thinges. Doubtleſſe hee doeth not. For as for going on pilgrimage, it is not onely a kinde of Iewiſhneſſe, but it is alſo a wicked corruption. And although vnder the lawe, it was Gods will to haue one Temple to the which men ſhoulde reſorte to worſhippe him: yet it is nowe aboliſhed. Nowe if the place which GOD had choſen, which was ordeyned by his owne mouth is no longer in force, but wee muſt call vppon God eueriwhere throughout the whole worlde, without going either vnto Mount Sion, or to any other place which men ſhall chooſe: I pray you howe may men of their owne brayne make ſuch holy places? That is to ſay; howe may they according to their owne fancie hallowe Rome, or Saint Iames of Compoſtella, or I knowe not what? And ſecondly for eating of fleſhe on ſuch or ſuch a day, we know it is mere ſuperſtition.

Seeing our Lorde hath ordeyned that men ſhoulde feede on all meates ſoberlie without any queſtioning concerning this meate or that meate; as though one meate were vncleane in compariſon of an other, and that whoſoeuer doeth otherwiſe, ſerueth the diuell: a man may well alledge his deuotion, but out of all doubt the diuell ſettes him a worke, and hee muſt pay him his wages. Aſmuch may bee ſaide of all the other pelting baggage, which the Papiſtes vſe when they faſt. And ſo wee ſee that theſe things are not vowed vnto God, and that although his name bee therein pretended, yet hee will neuertheleſſe diſalowe of all. For why? None of it is ruled by his worde. Againe the Papiſtes vowe that which is not in them to performe, as the Monkes and the Prieſtes vowe perpetuall chaſtitie, as they ſay. Nowe I graunt indeede that all men owe chaſtitie vnto G O D: but this chaſtitie is not an abſteyning from marriage: but the leading of an honeſt life by keeping himſelfe vndefiled in the ſtate wherein he is: but among the Papiſtes there is no other chaſtitie, but the abſtayning from marriage. They vowe this vow vnto God; but is it in them to performe it? Nay it is a diueliſhe arrogancie. But if a man haue the gift of continencie, hee muſt vſe it with all humilitie, committing himſelfe alwayes into the hande of G O D, knowing that whatſoeuer God hath giuen vnto him to day, he muſt be fayne to continue it vnto him to morrow, or elſe al wil ſlip away like water in a minute of an hour. And further we know not how God will diſpoſe of vs in this behalfe. Againe, it is not all one to abſtaine from marriage, and to abſtayne from a thing which God hath not permitted vnto vs. A man may haue excellent vertues, as if hee were an Angell of heauen, and yet marrie for all that. God calleth him thereunto, hee hath libertie to vſe marriage for a remedie, therefore let him vſe it. But howſoeuer the worlde goe, let vs beare in minde that which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſayth: namely, that the gift of continencie is not giuen Matt.19.11. vnto all. And S.Paul as a faithful interpreter of that which his maiſter had ſaide, warneth euerie man to walke accordingly as hee is called. 1.Cor.7.17. Therefore it is a diueliſhe arrogancie in a man, to preſume that hee hath in him ſelfe and as it were in his owne ſleeue the power of abſteyning from marriage. And if hee make a vowe thereof, it is all one as if hee did openlie defie G O D, and ſay, hee paſſeth not for him. Wee ought to offer vnto G O D. But of what? Of the benefites which hee hath beſtowed vppon vs (as I tolde you.) Nowe wee knowe not whether hee will graunt vnto vs the benefite of abſtayning from marriage for all our life time, or no. And howe then can wee promiſe that vnto him, which wee haue not receyued? For wee muſt alwayes make account to ſay: Lorde I offer vnto thee that which thou haſt giuen mee. Euerie man therefore muſt haue an eye vnto himſelfe, and to his owne abilitie. Moreouer when a Fryer voweth pouertie, is it not a notable mockerie? Some of them vowe pouertie: but after what manner? Forſooth they will ſticke to their bagge and wallet, they will haue a common gathering, they will be as bloud hounds to ſmell out the beſt collections, they will conuey other mens goods vnto thēſelues from all ſides. Therefore they mock God euen to his face, when they vowe pouertie, and that is to doe nothing but to waxe greaſie and fat at all other mens coſtes. Others goe and lurke in a ſtie, as theſe monkes doe, who are wel landed and rented, and whereas they be readie to burſt with eating & drinking, yet for all that they vowe pouertie. And doth not this pouertie pleaſe God well thinke yee? Nay, what is to dalie plainely with God if this bee not? Laſtly they vowe obedience. And to whome? To an Abbot or to a Prior. But in the meane while they will be priuiledged from all obedience of God and men, I meane from that which apperteyneth to anie rule of gouernment. Ye ſee how God hath put children in ſubiection vnder fathers and mothers: but they may ſhake off this yoke vnder ſhadowe of being in monkerie. God hath put men in ſubiection vnder Magiſtrates, and vnder ſuch as haue the ſword of iuſtice: and a Monke will exempt himſelfe from all this. It muſt bee lawfull for him to breake all the bonds and liſtes which God hath ſet, vnder colour of forging in his owne ſhoppe a newe obedience whereof God in no reſpect liketh. Wee ſee then howe the papiſtes generally and particularlie mocke God with all vowes which they make, & not only mocke him, but defie him; and by going ſo cleane croſſe againſt him, do pul his vengeance vppon their heades. Therefore it is too groſſe a beaſtlineſſe when a man will come and wreſt theſe places of ſcripture, to prooue that all vowes muſt bee performed without diſcretion. For firſt wee muſt knowe what wee are able to vowe vnto God, whether hee will accept our vowes, and whether they ſhall bee pleaſing vnto him or no? And therewithall (as I told you) the intent and meaning muſt bee looked vnto. For if wee vowe a thing vnto G O D which in it ſelfe is good: yet if the intent bee wicked, the vowe is corrupt and naught. For example: Wee haue alreadie alleadged howe Iacob vowed an offering vnto G O D of the tenth part of his goods: a man may doe the like and yet doe it not as Iacob did: for hee is not ledde with the ſame ſpirite. Hee doeth it to merite or for I knowe not what other imagination which hee hath conceyued, and not of purpoſe to render thankes vnto God after the example of Iacob. The intent therefore and meaning muſt heere bee conſidered, and wee muſt aduiſe our ſelues well, for what purpoſe and howe wee vowe vnto G O D: to wit, that wee haue not anie of theſe fooliſhe imaginations of meriting and of binding God vnto vs by doeing this or that: but it muſt bee doone to mooue vs, to render homage vnto G O D, and to proteſt that wee are bounde vnto him for all the benefites which hee hath beſtowed vppon vs: And that although wee cannot throughlie diſcharge our ſelues for them, yet at the leaſt wee make ſuch open proteſtation of them. Except theſe pointes bee purelie and ſimplie obſerued, doubtleſſe all our vowes ſhall bee reiected of God, although in outward appearaunce they haue no euill at all in them. Thus yee ſee then howe wee muſt vnderſtand this place.

Nowe it is ſaide, When thou voweſt vnto G O D, acquite thy ſelfe and performe that which thou ſhalte haue pronounced with thyne owne mouth and of thyne owne good will. If thou doeſt not vowe at all, or forbeare to doe it, thou ſhalt not ſinne. Here wee ſee firſt of all howe God woulde not binde men; but left them at libertie, to the intent they ſhoulde ſerue him of a more franke and free good will. Saint Paul ſaith that G O D loueth him which giueth with a cheerefull affection, that is to ſay, with a minde voide of conſtraint, and of a pure deuotion as men call it. 2.Cor.9.7. For if wee offer any thing vnto God of neceſſitie: as if wee doe an almes beeing conſtrayned thereto, or full ſore againſt our willes: it is reiected of him, as a man ſhall ſee theſe miſerable pinchpennies do, who when they giue an almes doe gnaſhe their teeth at it, and woulde if it were poſſible withholde themſelues from beſtowing of any, and when they open one hande, woulde hold faſt in the other whatſoeuer eſcapeth them. May ſuch offeringes bee acceptable vnto G O D? Doubtles no. Yee ſee then the reaſon why wee ſay nowe that G O D woulde not tie men in any ſtraite bonde, but rather leaue them free vnto themſelues, to the intent hee might bee ſerued with a ſynceere and freehearted affection. And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſaith here expreſſely. If thou vowe not, it ſhall not be imputed vnto thee for ſinne.

Nowe if it was ſo in the time of the law, by greater reaſon ought we nowadayes to be freed therefrom. For vowes were then common among the people, and it behooued the people alſo to bee exerciſed in ſuch ceremonies according to the weakeneſſe of that time, when our Lorde Ieſus was not yet come into the worlde. And it was requiſite that the faithfull ſhoulde folowe thoſe figures and ſhadowes which were in that time. And albeit God helde them in, as little children by appointing ſuch ceremonies: Yet notwithſtanding in this behalfe hee layde the bridle on their neckes as men ſay, & meant not to perſwade them to vowe, or to occaſion them to binde themſelues; but left the matter to their owne choyce and libertie. Nowadayes then ſeeing that wee are vnder the Goſpell, where there is no longer anie ſuch bondage as was in the time of the lawe; thinke wee that our Lorde taketh any great pleaſure of it when men vowe, ſo as they thinke they be not deuout enough, except they vowe one thing or other and paſſe others therein? But our Lorde contrariwiſe had much rather that men ſhoulde keep themſelues vnto that which he hath ordeined and followe the common rule in which is al our perfection. Moreouer let vs note, that if anie man thinke to adde any thing to the lawe of God by vowing, hee is to bee condemned for it, although it haue no other euill nor vice in it. For wee are forbidden to adde anie thing vnto that which God hath declared vnto vs. Therefore when we make any vowe, it muſt not bee as if wee woulde giue God ſomething beſides that which he hath required; but it muſt be to keepe vs alwayes vnto his ſeruice. When wee tende vnto this ende, we may ſay: wee belong vnto God, and all that hee hath giuen vnto vs is his ſtill, and it is good reaſon that we ſhould make an acknowledging of it: In deede wee haue not any ſpeciall rule to ſay: I will offer this thing or I will offer that: God leaueth it in our owne choyce. But howeſoeuer the worlde goeth we muſt attempt nothing beyonde that which hee hath permitted vnto vs, and what wee knowe that he requireth of vs by his worde. If men (I ſay) bee not helde with ſuch a bridle, queſtionles whatſoeuer wee vowe is vncleane and diueliſhe, and God diſaduoweth al and condemneth it. So then it is a point worthie to bee obſerued, when our Lorde ſheweth that hee will not lay any great bonde or bondage vppon his, but leaueth them their choyce whether they will vowe or no. But yet for all that, his will is that vowes ſhoulde bee performed if they bee lawefull: For hee ſheweth what is required in them. Will wee knowe whether God like of the vowe which wee make? Wee muſt in the firſt place conſider whether it bee agreeable vnto his will or no; and ſecondly whether that which wee vowe bee in our power; and thirdlie whether that our intent and meaning bee vpright and ordered by a good rule. If all theſe things meete together, Gods will is that we ſhould diſcharge our ſelues vnto him.

Nowe if wee conſider well of thinges, wee ſhall finde that wee haue a generall vowe for our whole life, ſeeing wee are called of God to come and offer our ſelues vnto him in ſacrifice. Therefore if a man knowe what the end of his calling is, hee woulde certaynly bee perſwaded that hee ought to vowe himſelfe vnto God. For hee receiueth vs, hee intertaineth vs, he adopteth vs for his children, on this condition that we ſhould ſerue him in innocencie of liuing. Seeing hee taketh vs on ſuch condition, euerie one of vs muſt bee prepared to offer vp himſelfe vnto him. Nowe I graunt indeede that wee cannot doe it except wee be ſanctified by his holy ſpirite, and the faithfull when they preſent themſelues vnto God, doe it not in any confidence of their owne power, they doe it not to attempt any thing of themſelues or vppon imagination to atteyne thereby vnto anie perfectneſſe, but they doe it, grounding them ſelues firſt of all vppon this, that God accepteth of their good will although it bee weake and vnperfect. And why? Becauſe they haue the forgiueneſſe of their ſinnes promiſed vnto them, and this is therein compriſed, that God will not impute vnto them thoſe thinges which are faultie in their workes. Moreouer they haue a promiſe that God will gouerne them by his holy ſpirite. So then hereuppon euery faithfull man muſt vowe himſelfe vnto God. And nowe hauing ſo vowed our ſelues: Let vs take heede we performe that which wee vowe. For there is a threat added which we muſt obſerue and feare. It ſhall bee imputed vnto thee for ſinne (ſaith God.) Truely if wee were all Paynims, that wee had neuer hearde ſo much as one worde of the lawe, or of the Goſpell, yet ſhoulde wee not bee iuſtified therefore, if wee ſerued not our God. For hee hath placed vs in this worlde to the intent hee might bee glorified in vs. But as for them which are called of him, and which knowe that they ought to dedicate themſelues wholy vnto his obedience, and which haue promiſed to do ſo: they ought to vnderſtande that they are doublie bound: and if they breake that bonde, they are in ſo much greater fault, and a great way leſſe to bee excuſed. Therefore if wee will applie this to our inſtruction, wee muſt knowe that the generall vowe which wee haue all made vnto GOD, is grounded vppon our baptiſme. Seeing that he hath adopted vs for his children, let vs honour him as our father, and ſeeing hee hath chooſe vs vnto him ſelfe, let vs bee giuen indeede vnto his ſeruice; let all our life bee ſubiect vnto his obedience, let vs (I ſay) thinke vppon this.

But nowe touching particular vowes; if a man demaunde whether it bee lawfull to make them among Chriſtians, the anſwere is, that we cannot be too well aduiſed in that behalfe. And therefore the leſſe wee vowe; the better it is alwayes for vs. Truely wee may not condemne al vowes: For ſeeing GOD hath left them at libertie, wee muſt alwayes remember this; that therefore it is lawfull. But howſoeuer the world goe; let vs bee contented to walke euerie one in his calling, and let vs not vſe vowes, I meane, ſo as to binde our ſelues ouer much: for wee ſee our owne weakeneſſe, that when wee ſhoulde walke as God hath commaunded vs, albeit the way be ſhewed vs, yet we ſwarue aſide ſo often, that it is pitifull to beholde, and wee are conſtrayned to crie out with Dauid: Who knoweth his faults? Pſal.19.13. For why? Wee neuer haue ſuch wiſedome as were requiſite, but it befalleth vs to wander and to turne aſide one way or other, ſo as wee ſinne many a time without thinking on it. Therefore if it bee an harde thing for vs to keepe our ſelues in our accuſtomed way by reaſon of the weakeneſſe that is in vs; what ſhould we meane to charge our ſelues yet further with an harder thing, as if wee were well able to ſurmount them al? Ye ſee therefore how we ought to abſtaine from al vowes, and to content vs with this plaine ſimplicitie, to ſay: I ſee what my God hath commaunded mee, I muſt holde my ſelfe thereto without ſtepping any further. But yet notwithſtanding, if wee haue purpoſed to acknowledge any benefite towardes God, let vs take heede that we performe it. For if the promiſes which wee make vnto men muſt be kept; what ſhall bee ſaide of that when we call vpon the name of God, & direct our ſelues vnto him, and that he bee made a partie? In few words therefore, let vs beare in minde vppon this place, that wee muſt bee faithfull and truſtie towardes our God, for hee is ſuch a one on his part, and will neuer breake his promiſe: let vs not miſtruſt that wee ſhall bee deceyued in waiting for any thing from him. And therefore ſith hee hath called vs vnto him, and woulde that we ſhoulde bee bounde vnto him, let euerie one of vs take heed that wee keepe our ſelues ſtedfaſt vnto his ſeruice, and let vs not behaue our ſelues, as wilde horſes which are broken looſe. And whereas it is declared vnto vs, that we are redeemed by the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: Let vs knowe that wee are no longer our owne, but his who hath redeemed vs with ſo deere a price. Therefore let vs liue and die vnto him, indeuouring nothing elſe, but to yeelde vnto our G O D the obedience which wee owe vnto him, euen by nature it ſelfe, and that alſo which we haue promiſed vnto him, ſo that wee may purely call vppon his holy name and declare by this meanes that we are his people indeed.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good G O D with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs to feele them more and more, and that feeling them we may be touched with ſuch repentaunce, as to come and ſeeke the remedie of them in him alone, that is, that hee will pardon our faults which are paſt, vntill hee hath wholy reformed vs & clothed vs with his owne righteouſneſſe. And ſo let vs ſay, Almightie G O D and heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xxx. of Ianuarie, 1556.

The Cxxxvj. Sermon which is the ſeuenth vpon the three and twentith Chapter, and the firſt vpon the xxiiii.

24 When thou commeſt into thy neighbours vineyarde, thou maiſt eate grapes at thy pleaſure vntill thou bee ſatisfied, but thou ſhalt put none into thy veſſell.

25 VVhen thou commeſt into thy neighbours corne, thou maiſt plucke the eares with thy hande, but thou ſhalt not put a ſickle into thy Neighbours corne.

The foure and twentith Chapter.

VVHen a man taketh a wife and marrieth her, if it come to paſſe that afterwarde ſhee finde no fauour in his eyes, becauſe he hath found ſome ill fauoured blemiſhe in her: hee ſhall write a bill of diuorcement, and put it in her hand, and ſend her out of his houſe.

2 And when ſhe is departed out of his houſe, and being gone her wayes doeth marie with an other man:

3 If this other alſo hate her and write her a letter of diuorcement, and put it into her hand, or if this latter man which toke her to wife die:

4 Then her firſt husbande which ſent her away, may not take her againe to be his wife after that ſhe is defiled; for that is an abhomination in the ſight of the Lorde: and thou ſhalt not cauſe the lande to ſinne which the Lorde thy God giueth thee to inherite.

ALthoughe Gods will was that euerie man ſhould poſſeſſe hys owne, & ordeined that none ſhold doe wrong vnto anie, yet hee alwaies ſo moderated this extremity of due right, as the poore ſhould bee releeued by the riche. And this gentleneſſe ought alwayes to beare rule among vs, that they which haue aboundaunce, albeit they may vſe it as their owne, yet muſt they not deuour all themſelues, but beſtowe part of it on ſuch as are in neede: and euerie man according to his meaſure and abilitie, muſt put to his helping hande to releeue their penurie. And that which wee haue nowe read tendeth to this purpoſe. For it is ordeyned that euerie man ſhoulde reape his owne Lande, and gather in his owne grapes, and receiue the fruite thereof.

Gods will is not that thinges ſhoulde bee ſet ſoorth to open pray, as if they were made common: but that euerie man ſhoulde poſſeſſe that which hee hath, and enioye it without controlment. And yet hee woulde not that there ſhould be ſuch crueltie as that the poore ſhould not bee any whit at all ſuccoured by the rich. And that is the cauſe why hee ſuffereth them which are hyred to gather in the vintage, to eat of the grapes; and them which are hyred in harueſt worke, to gleane and to gather with their hand the eares of corne, as it were an hand full: and not to carie away their basket full of grapes, or to carie away the corne by whole ſheaues. For that were a kinde of theft. When a workeman which is hyred for the profite of his maiſter, will pilfer away thinges in ſuch maner vnto himſelfe; what vpright dealing doeth hee ſhewe therein? Let vs note then that where as it is ſaid, he that commeth into the vineyard, may eate of the grapes; he that commeth into a feelde of corne, may gather of the eares with his hande; it is not meant ingeneral of all commers in, and paſſers by. For what a thing would it bee, if libertie were graunted to al paſſers by, to eate as many grapes as they woulde? The vintage woulde bee ſoone gathered in: there ſhoulde bee no neede of ſixe weakes labour, euerie man woulde make ſuch a ſpeedie diſpatch, that there woulde bee nothing left to gather in. But it is here expreſſely meant of ſuch as are hyred. And in deede it was not lawfull to enter into an other mans field or vineyeard to ſay: I will goe and eate grapes, I will goe and fill my bellie at an other mans coſt, and when I am wel filled, I will not pay my ſhotte. For if this had beene lawfull, it woulde haue bredde a barbarous confuſion. But our Lorde (as I tolde you) ſpeaketh here of the vintage and harueſt. For herein no man ſuſtained any loſſe. For after that ſuch a lawe was made, hee which had a vineyarde hyred men on condition, that they might eate grapes. And if any likewiſe hired harueſtfolke, hee knewe they might gleane, ſo that they tooke not euerie man his reaphooke to cut him a ſheafe. For this had beene to take tith of the owner of the fielde, and he ſhould haue ſowen for an other. And therefore there was no reaſon in ſuch dealing. But when our Lorde permitteth a reaper to take an handfull of corne, herein there in no extortion; there is no vnrulie dealing vſed.

We ſee then howe in this lawe the poore & the rich are taught their leſſon. For as for the poore, although they ſee that one hath great aboundance of corne, that an other hath great plentie of wine: yet ought they not withſtanding to beare their penurie patiently, and not to runne and ſcratch for other mens goods, as if they were left at ſixe and ſeuen. Yea and that when men giue them ſuch acceſſe, they muſt not repyne at him which is wealthie, to pilfer anie thing ſecretlie from him. As if a man being hired to ſowe a grounde, haue a ſacke of corne diliuered vnto him, and hee ſteale a bagfull of it: verily he committeth a double theft. It had beene better he had cut a purſe or filched away ſome other thing, than ſo to haue deceyued one which put him in truſt. Againe, if the threſhers likewiſe, when a man openeth his barne vnto them, conuey away an other part: If a ſeruaunt which is of ſome houſe, ſteale a thing which hee founde caſt aſide in a corner: theſe filchinges are as bad almoſt as open robberies. For thefts which are committed by ſuch as are houſeholde ſeruauntes, deſerue much greater puniſhment, than thoſe which are committed by ſtraungers. And why? For when a man truſteth one ſo farre as to bring him into his houſe, into his fielde, or into anie other place where his goods are; hee ought to ſhew himſelfe twiſe or thriſe as truſtie and faythfull as hee woulde doe otherwiſe. And if a man do the contrarie, hee offendeth greeuouſly both in the ſight of GOD and of men. So then let vs note, that the poore ought ſo to beholde other mens wealth ſo, that they bee not prouoked with anie couetous deſire to pilfer away, or to ſteale any thing. For why? Seeing God hath beſtowed on them no abundance of welth, they ought to content themſelues with that litle which they haue, and to knowe that it is God which hath poynted out to euerie one his portion in this world, and that he hath not without cauſe ordeyned that euerie man ſhoulde poſſeſſe that which hee hath gotten, or that which is come vnto him by inheritance, or that which hath beene giuen him: in reſpect whereof his will is that there bee a certaine order, ſo as none bee deceyued of their right. Yee ſee then how the poore are taught, That they muſt not bee entiſed to doe that which is euil, although they ſtande in neede of the goods of this worlde. For it ſhall not ſerue them for an excuſe before God, if they alleadge: Why? I ſawe that that man was nothing vnder foote, and as for my ſelfe I was in extreeme neede. No: Our Lorde will not haue men to giue themſelues the bridle ſo farre, but that euerie man ſhould keepe himſelfe within his bonds.

Nowe by the way the richer ſorte are warned to exerciſe gentleneſſe, and not to be ſuch holdefaſtes and ſo miſerable, as to bee greeued if the poore bee releeued by their goods. As for themſelues they liue ſtill in aboundance, they want nothing, yea they haue more than will ſerue their turne: And therefore they ought at leaſtwiſe to vſe ſome ſmall gentleneſſe to the poore; according whereunto it is ſaide in an other place, That when a rich man gathered in his harueſt, hee ſhoulde not gleane afterwarde; but leaue it for the poore people to leaſe and to gather the ſcattered eares; like as if chickens ſhoulde picke vp crummes, after that a man hath eaten his fill. Yee ſee then howe the rich are taught by this lawe, ſo to vſe their aboundaunce, that they defraude not ſuch as are in neede: but ſeeke rather to communicate part of their goods with them: not that they ſhoulde ſet out the mayne heape for him to take which hath neede: but that euerie man ſhould conſider his owne abilitie, and although there there bee no certaine lawe, to ſay: Thou ſhalt giue ſo much in almes, yet notwithſtanding, all men muſt knowe, that they are bounde by the worde of God, to releeue their neighbours, and to extende their liberalitie towardes them, as farre as they are able. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde vppon this place.

Nowe if this doctrine were well obſerued, thinges woulde go better than they doe. But we ſee nowadayes poore folke giuen to ſuch craft and malicious wilineſſe, as woulde loath a man to ſee it: they are become little better than theeues. A man cannot haue fieldes and vineyardes in the countrie abroade, but they are alwayes deceiued of ſome parte of them, and that in ſuch wiſe, as if they were in the Lande of their enemies. And why? Becauſe the poore diſpence with themſelues, and beleeue that they haue ſome vantage aboue the rich to pilfer away and to take by ſtealth, whatſoeuer they can come by. And what ſay they? O it is of the goods of GOD which wee take. Well then ſeeing it is Gods, it ought to bee accounted holy. Therefore thou robbeſt GOD when thou pilfereſt away an other mans goods: thou goeſt to catch that out of Gods hande, which hee had kept in ſtore for an other. Againe wee ſee what crueltie there is in riche men, howe they woulde faine ſwallowe vp the whole world, howe nothing can ſuffice them. And therefore their wealth oftentimes is not bleſſed of GOD, becauſe it is not in his ſafegarde, nor kept vnder his protection. Wee ſee howe GOD telleth vs, that wee muſt vſe ſuch gentleneſſe towardes our neighbours, as that euerie man muſt employ himſelfe to releeue thoſe which are in neede and neceſſitie. If men woulde doe ſo, doubtleſſe GOD woulde holde their goods vnder his protection, and himſelfe would keepe them; but becauſe rich men vſe rather crueltie than bountifulneſſe towardes their neighbours, it occaſioneth poore men to pilfer away all that they can get: becauſe the rich abuſe their goods in ſuch ſorte, as men ſee. Neuertheleſſe this is not here written in vayne. All ought to followe the leſſon and the warning which is here vſed, to wit, that the poore bee ſomewhat releeued, and that they wrong not the riche, that they robbe them not of their goods, and that when they are hyred, they ſo employ themſelues and beſtowe their labour in ſuch wiſe, that it may be to the profite of the maiſter which payeth them their hyre.

Let vs nowe come vnto that which Moſes addeth touching diuorcementes. Hee ſaith, That if a man hath married a wife which afterwardes diſpleaſeth him for ſome blemiſhe which ſhee hath, hee may caſt her off, ſo that he giue her a bill of diuorcement. And hauing ſo caſt her off hee may neuer take her againe, if ſhee marrie her ſelfe againe vnto an other.

Nowe let vs note that this bill which the man gaue in this caſe, was to the credite of the wife, and to the diſcredite of the husbande. For it declared thus much: I haue maried a wife and ſhee diſpleaſeth mee. And why? For ſome blemiſhe which ſhee hath in her bodie, or for ſome qualitie which is in her. The husbande then declared hereby that hee was a faithleſſe and forſworne man. For why? Hee tooke a wife on condition to haue her companie all the time of his life, and nowe hee caſteth her off. See howe through his fault, ſuch an holy bond as marriage is broken. Yea but there was ſome thing amiſſe in her. Oh, but thy ſelfe wouldeſt gladlie bee borne withall. And thy wife was committed vnto thee on that condition, that ſhee ſhoulde bee a part of thine owne perſon: and thou cutteſt thy ſelfe as it were in the midſt. If thine arme bee weake, wilt thou cauſe it to bee cut off at the firſt choppe? If there bee any contagious diſeaſe which might empoyſon the whole bodie, ſurelie thou were better leeſe one member, than thy whole life. But when a finger is ill faſhioned, and a man ſeeth ſomething, which I knowe not howe, is not ſo feate as he coulde wiſhe, muſt hee therefore mangle his bodie? Verilie it were againſt nature. Euen ſo an husbande was not to bee excuſed, when he deliuered in this ſorte ſuch a bill vnto his wife. The thing tended nothing to her diſcredit, but it ſerued rather to ſhewe that ſhee was innocent, and that men ſhoulde knowe that ſhee was not put away either for adulterie, or for anie other lewde deede: but only for yͤ waywardneſſe of the husbande beeing a crooked ſurlie fellowe, and ſuch a one as deſired to haue his luſt ſatisfied. Nowe it is ſaide in the ende, That when the husbande hath thus diuorced his wife, and ſhee bee maried vnto an other, her firſt husband may not take her againe. For this were an abhomination before the Lorde. In this lawe wee haue firſt of all to note, that when GOD thus permitted diuorcementes, it was not to diſpence with the thing, to make it lawfull: but becauſe hee meant not (as touching ciuill order of gouernment) to exerciſe any rigour againſt the Iewes. For yet for all this, the lawe of marriage remayned in his full force, and (as it hath beene aboue handled) ciuill order of gouernment is not to preiudice the tenne commaundementes or to chaunge anie thing in them. For in the two Tables GOD hath compriſed a perfect rule of life, and a certaine and infallible rule whereunto wee muſt order our ſelues. Nowe may the rule of ciuill gouernment chaunge anie thing in theſe tenne commaundementes? No. For yee ſee howe wee ought to liue. But the rule of ciuill gouernment is an ayde hereto, not to ſhewe vs any perfection, but to leade vs thereto, to the intent that men might be bridled from ouerflowing their banks too farre, and that the wicked which by their good will woulde not obey, might bee forced by conſtraint.

Yee ſee then whereto the rule of ciuil gouernment ſerueth. But yet for all that, the lawe abideth in his full force. Agayne, in ciuil order there may wel be ſome expreſſing of theſe ten commaundementes, but that is all, it ſheweth no perfection. And this is a point which we ought alwaies diligently to note. For we ſee that as the world is ſhameleſſe, ſo many thinke to bee iuſtified if they can alleage: What? Men charge me with nothing. O they are pettie Angels as they thinke. And yet howeſoeuer the worlde goe, they fayle not to bee diuels. Nay ſome wicked varlet will ſay: What? I am in office, it may well beare mee out. Yea as though they which had neede to correct their owne vices, were iuſtified by puniſhing of others: and as if this might ſerue them for a ſhrowding ſheete to cloake their wickedneſſe with all, ſo as they might ſay they had offended in nothing. And they which ſpeake thus, vnder colour that men diſſemble their wickednes, or not puniſhe them, nor lead them to the gallowes, nor ſhut them vp in dungeons: they take themſelues to bee innocent men. And what a vile ſhameleſneſſe is that? But what for that? The thing is as common as the high way. Againe if they which come like ſwine to the ſupper of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt alleaged to couer their vices: What? I am receiued to the ſupper of the Lord, yea but there are many which come thither which yet are vnworthy. It is vnpoſſible to purge the Church of God ſo, but there ſhall ſtill Matt.13.29. remaine much chaffe among the good corne. Now if a man be receiued to yͤ ſupper of yͤ Lord, becauſe he could not be condemned before men, or happily becauſe men vſe too great patiēce towards him: may this ſerue to leſſen his wickednes? Nay contrarywiſe he encreaſeth his ſinne before God, bicauſe he abuſeth his name ſo falſly, and defileth the table which was hallowed for the children of God. And ought they which are no better than dogges and ſwine, to come nigh it? So then let vs learne that the order and rule of gouernment both concerning earthly Iuſtice, and alſo of the church, is not to ſhew what yͤ perfectnes is which is required. But we muſt alwaies returne to that tryall which is to be made by the lawe of God.

And this is it which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath alſo declared vnto vs vpon this place, as wel in yͤ fift chapter of S. Matthew, as alſo in yͤ ninteenth. For there he ſaith expreſly: although a man was ſuffered to diuorce his wife, that it was no lawful thing notwithſtanding ſo to doe. But is God contrary to himſelfe? No. And heerein there is no diuerſitie as I haue told you. For in yͤ two tables of the law, God hath compriſed whatſoeuer is required to perfect holines and righteouſnes. Ye ſee then how men ought to gouerne themſelues, and they cannot be deceiued. Moreouer there is a rule of ciuil gouernment which ſerueth ſomewhat to brydle men, but not to leade them vnto perfection: but to prouide that all things be not brought to vtter confuſion among them. For the rule of ciuill order hath no ſuch regarde of perfection, as the lawe requireth. Yea and God in his law not onely forbiddeth vs yͤ outward act of wickednes, but euen the inward luſt and deſire therof, which cannot be puniſhed by magiſtrats nor earthly Iudges. For it is not knowen. God in his law forbiddeth not onely yͤ very act of fornication or to luſt after another mans wife, and to entiſe hir: but he forbiddeth vs alſo to haue any byluſting, although there be no conſent, or thē will framed thereunto. So that if a man haue but a wantō eye, he is already condemned for a fornicator. If there bee in a man any hatred, any rancor, any euill will, it is condemned for murther before God. Ye ſee then how the Lawe of God is ſpirituall, & that it requireth ſuch a true & perfect obedience, that all the ſences, all the affections, all the thoughts of a man muſt bee agreeable vnto the wil of God: and we muſt be ſo reformed, yͭ being rid of al the corruption of our own nature, we may yeeld our ſelues altogether ſubiect vnto yͭ which God commandeth vs and which he liketh of. Ye ſee what yͤ righteouſnes of the law is. But there is no notice of this inward wickednes vnto men, it cannot be iudged by thē men ſhall not accuſe them, men ſhall not indite them for it, there are no witneſſes in this behalfe but yͤ guiltie conſcience of him which ſinneth, which ſhal prick him and reproue him ſufficiently. And this is as much as all the reſt: nay this is all in all, when a man is thus conuicted in himſelfe. We ſee then how ciuill order and rule of gouernement is diuerſe indeede from the law of God, but yet for al that, there is no contrariety. And therfore this is no excuſe for a mā to bring; nay rather it is an abſurd thing for a man to ſay: What? God puniſhed not diuorcements, it followeth then that he gaue his conſent they ſhould ſo be doone. No: the thing fareth otherwiſe. For marriage muſt hold alwaies in his ful force, both as touching the law of nature, and as touching the will of God, who ordained it, and declared that it ought to remaine inuiolable. But yet for all that, diuorcement is permitted: I meane as touching common order, which is but to brydle men heere belowe, and not to reforme them as the children of God ought to be, which are gouerned by his holy ſpirit. Ye ſee then as touching yͤ firſt point, that albeit God puniſhed not thoſe diuorcemēts which were made without any reaſonable and lawfull cauſe, yet notwithſtanding he alwaies condemned this vnfaithfulneſſe, and meant that mariage ſhould remaine alwayes inuiolable.

And ſo we are warned by this example, not to ſleepe in our ſinnes. Although men reprehend vs not, although we come not in place of Iuſtice to yeeld account of our doings: yet let vs not thinke that we haue eſcaped the hand of God. For wee ſhall haue another reckoning, & a more ſtraitter to make before him. When wee ſhall be ſummoned to his ſeate, we ſhal not be tried guilty by the verdit of men; but the bookes of regiſter ſhall be opened, as it is ſaid in Daniel, and yͤ ſecrets of Dan.7.10. our hearts (as S. Paul ſaith) ſhal thē be bewrayed, 1.Cor.4.5. all ſhall be layde foorth before vs. So then let vs learne to haue alwayes an eye vnto this iudgemēt of God: let vs learne to ſift our ſelues according vnto his law, when we wold know whether our life be well ordered or no: and let vs not be abuſed with yͭ which men thinke or iudge of vs.

In deede we muſt obey common order, but this is not all: it is but one part. If a man bee a tranſgreſſour of ciuill lawes, and ſo become puniſhable before earthly Iudges, hee deſerueth double puniſhment at the hand of God. For firſt there is an euill thought, ſecondly there is a wicked act, and for the third there is an offence and euill example giuen. Behold three wicked things in him which is puniſhable by the ciuill Lawes. For firſt hee hath offended God in his heart, becauſe there is the roote of euill, and againe hee hath doone and committed the act it ſelfe for the ſecond, and for the third there is giuen a publike offence. Thoſe therefore which offende againſt the lawes, are greeuous tranſgreſſours agaynſt God. But although we walke in ſuch ſorte, as men can finde nothing wherefore to blame vs, yet we are not quited as guiltleſſe for all that, except euery one of vs entring into himſelfe haue there the witneſſe of his own conſcie̅ce, that he hath walked ſoundly and vprightly, and finde that as hee hath committed no euill, ſo he hath had no will thereto, yea and that hee was in no ſorte prouoked vnto it. And albeit a man haue withſtoode his wicked concupiſcences and luſtes: Yet neuertheleſſe hee muſt alwayes condemne himſelfe before GOD, and confeſſe with humilitie that hee ſhould bee culpable, except God vſed mercie towards him. For it is not alonely ſayde: Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie, nor theft, nor murder, but: Thou ſhalt haue no wicked deſire. Nowe this ſurmounteth all the abilities which are in vs. It followeth then, that wee haue no other remedie, but to humble our ſelues before GOD, and although hee graunt vs grace to fight agaynſt our wicked affections, yet to confeſſe that they proceede from the weakeneſſe of our owne nature, and that it is through his goodneſſe that wee are abſolued, and not through our owne merites. Thus yee ſee what is to bee borne in minde touching this point.

But nowe let vs treate of the matter of diuorcement. As touching ciuill order, a man was permitted to put away his wife, but ſo, as hee gaue her a bill for a witneſſe of her honeſtie, to the intent that the wife through the crueltie or waywardneſſe of her husband, might not bee diffamed: but that men ſhould be giuen to vnderſtand, that ſhee for her parte ordered her ſelfe honeſtly, and that ſhee was not put away for any fault of hers. Yee ſee what is to bee noted in reſpect of ciuill order. Nowe if a man demaunde whether ſuch maner of diuorcementes bee noweadayes permitted? Let vs conſider of that which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſayeth concerning this matter. Matt.19.8. Was it not forbidden you (ſayeth hee,) becauſe of the heardneſſe of your heartes? Nowe then although ſuch a permiſſion were graunted vnto the Iewes, yet notwithſtanding, the lyke is not giuen vs nowadayes. For the hauing of moe wiues than one was permitted them likewiſe, as wee haue ſeene heeretofore, becauſe it was not puniſhed: and ſhould wee therefore looke nowadayes to haue the like libertie in that behalfe? No. For wee ſee that becauſe God hath reueiled his will more fully vnto vs, than vnto the Iewes, it is good reaſon that wee haue a ſtrayter brydle than they had: yea and the libertie which is giuen vnto vs, ought to binde vs ſo much the more in this behalfe, than were the Iewes. For as concerning ceremonies, and other ſuch like thinges, the Iewes were vnder as ſtraite bondage as none might bee greater. They were loaden with ſuch a burden, as made them to bende and to ſigh vnder it. And for this cauſe it is ſayde, that the lawe bringeth nought elſe but feare. Nowe wee Rom, 8.15. are freed from this ſo heauie yoke, I meane in reſpect of the ceremonies; but as for the reſt, wee are a great deale more bounde to walke according vnto the will of our GOD. So that all theſe diuorcementes and this hauing of moe wiues than one, ought nowadays to be abhorred among Chriſtians, although among the Iewes there was libertie graunted for theſe things, and they remained vnpuniſhed. Let this bee noted touching the rule of ciuill order.

But the principall point is for vs to vnderſtand what is lawfull for vs, and from thence euerie one may gather what his office and duetie is towardes his wife. And the wiues alſo are to bee exhorted to diſchardge themſelues the more faithfully towards their husbandes, when they ſhall knowe vpon what condition they are ioyned together. Nowe as touching the husbandes, our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſayeth, that Matt.19.9. if any man forſake his wife, except it bee for fornication, hee is an adulterer, and hee maketh his wife an adultreſſe alſo: he excepteth fornication. Nowe when hee ſayeth that the man is an adulterer, it is becauſe hee hath broken wedlocke. For if hee ſeparate himſelfe from his wife although hee play not the adulterer otherwiſe, yet ſeeing hee hath falſified the fayth which he once plighted, he is conuicted of adultery. The reaſon is, becauſe it is the law of mariage that when a man ioyneth himſelfe vnto a wife, hee taketh her for his companion to liue & to dy withall. If the nature of wedlocke be ſuch that the man and the wife be contracted together to the end to liue & to die together, & that yͤ man ſhould be the head, & the woman yͤ body: the man hath now but the halfe part of his own perſon, and can no more ſeparate himſelfe from his wife, than cut himſelf into two peeces. And yͭ were (as I told you) againſt nature. Now he maketh his wife alſo an adultreſſe: for although the wife haue liberty to take vnto hir a newe partie according vnto ciuil order, yet as touching God, ſhe ought to take no other, but to remaine a widow. For if ſhe go and marry hir ſelfe againe, ſhe is an adultreſſe: and that is yͤ cauſe why S. Paule 1.Cor.7.11. alſo ſaith expreſſe: that if a woman be ſeparated from hir husband, not for adultery (for he meaneth not ſo:) but becauſe the husband cannot brooke his wife, ſhee ſhall remaine a widowe, or reconcile her ſelfe (ſayth hee) vnto her husbande. Yee ſee what the remedy is which Saint Paule giueth. And it is no new remedie which appertayneth to Chriſtians as touching conſcience it hath euer beene. For S. Paul addeth nothing vnto the law of God, nor to that rule which is common vnto all the children of God. But although the Iewes had that cuſtome bicauſe of ye hardnes of their heartes, yet neuertheleſſe if a woman bee put away from hir husband, ſhe ought rather to remaine a wydowe, or to reconcile hirſelfe vnto hir husband, than to marrie againe. For otherwiſe ſhee ſayleth not to bee defyled, as wee ſee by this place. And that were an abhomination before GOD. And if ſhe had patiently wayted to enter into fauour, and to bee coupled agayne to hir firſt husband, ſhee had not beene an adultreſſe. Nowe as touching the man, he committeth double adulterie by diuorſing his wyfe in this order. For, for his owne part, ſeeing hee hath broken wedlocke he is an adulterer: and againe he caſteth off his wife as if hee woulde put her into the ſtewes, hee maketh hir an harlot by giuing of hir leaue to take a newe make: for that is againſt GODS inſtitution, it is againſt the order of marriage which ought to be kept without any gaynſaying.

Nowe heereby wee are taught, that men ought to beare with their Wiues; and although they haue ſome vices and ſome ſtaines in them, notwithſtanding when they ſeeke to correct them, they ought to vſe all gentleneſſe. For why? It is not ynough for a man to keepe his wyfe in his houſe and ſay: Well, I cannot driue thee out, tarie here therefore, and in the meane time hee groyne at hir, he ſpurne hir, he beateth hir, hee vexeth hir, and hee vouchſafeth not to doe the office and duetie of an husband towardes hir. If a man keepe his wyfe by him in ſuch order, it were much better he were diuorced from hir, and that ſhee liued in peace in ſome little corner or other, where ſhe ſhould not ſo languiſh and pine away in ſorrowe all the dayes of hir lyfe. And wee ſee in what ſort our Lorde ſpeaketh hereof by his Prophet Malachie, when he treateth of the matter of hauing moe wiues than one. If thy wife pleaſe thee not, put hir away rather, than ioyne thy ſelfe with many. Not that hee gaue a man leaue to put away his wyfe, but hee ſayeth it were better for a man to put away his wife, than to keepe hir ſo, with griefe and ſorrowe. And he maketh a compariſon betwixt two euilles, of which a man ought to ſhunne the woorſt. Yee ſhall haue ſome man keepe his poore wife, but it ſhall bee for no other ende but to brawle with hir, and to moleſt and vexe hir with all the diſquietinges in the world. Nowe there is no reaſon to the contrarie, but that a poore creature ſhoulde at the leaſt haue peace and quietneſſe. So then (as I haue told you) let this place of the Prophet ſerue to ſhewe vs whereunto wee are bound, that is, that a man put not away his wife by diuorcing of hir. But when wee are commaunded euerie man to keepe his wife (except it bee for adulterie) it is all one as if it were ſayde, that a man muſt bee gentle towardes his wife; and loue hir as his owne fleſh, as Saint Paule warneth vs in another place in the fifth to the Epheſians: and if there bee vices in hir, hee muſt beare with them in ſuch ſort, as there may bee peace and concord maintayned in the houſholde. If men vnderſtoode that they are ſuch debters vnto their wiues, that is to ſay, that marriage requireth a peaceable kinde of life betweene man and wife, ſo as if there bee any thing amiſſe, yet they ought not to bee ouer frowarde therefore, but quiet and patient: wee ſhoulde ſee an other manner of bleſſing in al houſes and families than we doe now ſee. But nowadayes the moſt part of husbandes and wiues are like Dogges and Cattes. For they haue no ſuch regard of their duetie, that if a man bee vexed of his wife, hee will call vppon God and deſire his holy ſpirit to repreſſe his affections, but he falleth rather into worſe and worſe. If a man eſpie any ſpot of wickedneſſe, he defieth his wife by and by thereupon, and caſteth hir off. The Diuell is a ſtickler betweene both, and lyke a wylie Pye in this behalfe, hee knoweth well ynough howe to finde occaſions and meanes to ſeuer that aſunder, which God hath coupled together: but neuertheleſſe wee ſee what a leſſon is giuen vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, to wit, that becauſe the husband is not at libertie to put away his wife for any cauſe, but for fornication; he muſt moderate himſelfe, And that albeit his wife be not altogether perfect, but haue her infirmities, yet he muſt ſeeke to amend them by gentlenes. and howſoeuer hee fare, he muſt take heede that hee ſhew himſelfe gentle, and nouriſh peace and concord with his wife.

Mal.2.16.

And heereuppon let women on their parte bethinke themſelues to acknowledge the fauour which GOD ſheweth them, and to magnifie him for it. Seeing GOD hath vouchſafed them ſuch honour, as to ioyne them to their husbandes who are their heads, let them not perke vp aboue them: but let them enforce themſelues ſo much the more to take paynes in the thinges which are appointed them to ſerue their husbandes in: and let them haue this conſideration to ſay: behold the husband is as it were the head of mankinde, and women are as it were the body. Now ſith God hath ioyned mee vnto an husbande to bee his ayde and companion, I muſt endeuour to pleaſe my husbande in ſuch wiſe, that he haue no cauſe to be grieued by me. He is to beare with me as God hath commaunded him: and ſeeing God hath ſuch a care of me, ought I not to haue the more heedefull eye to gouerne my ſelfe ſo, as I be not a torment and vexation vnto my husband? And if there bee in me any euill qualitie, let mee bee the firſt my ſelfe to correct it, and to fight ſo againſt it, that I bee not forced and conſtrayned otherwiſe to reforme my ſelfe: but let me of my owne goodwil ſeeke to pleaſe my husband, that there may be peace and quietneſſe among vs, and not brawling & fighting as it were betweene diuels. Ye ſee in what ſort euery man ought to haue an eye vnto his dewtie when our GOD ſpeaketh of the pure coniunction which ought to be in marriage, & ſheweth that as touching ching men, it is by no meanes to be broken.

But nowe let vs paſſe farther in this matter, Matt.19.8. purſuing that which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſaith when hee was asked: And why then did Moſes permit that bill of diuorcement? Hee did it ſaith hee becauſe of the hardneſſe of your heartes: but it was not ſo in the beginning. This is rehearſed in the nineteenth Chapter of ſaint Matthew. Nowe note for one point that our Lorde vpbraideth the Iewes with the hardneſſe of their heartes: and that is to the intent wee ſhould learne to condemne our ſelues, if ciuill order bee not ſo perfect among vs as it ought to bee. When wee ſee that the Church of God may be founde faultie in many thinges, when wee are not reformed according to the order and practiſe of the Apoſtles, when we keepe not that pureneſſe which was in the primatiue Church, when wee ſee howe wee offend in theſe pointes, let euery one of vs ſigh for ſorrowe, and examining our ſelues ſay: Alas we ought to haue this thing, wee ought to haue that, but we are farre from hauing of them. Wee ſee what order hath beene heeretofore. Firſt as touching the almes of the Church, there were Deacons in that behalfe. We ſee how liberall euery man ſhewed himſelfe, ſo as there was no neceſſitie: there was but one minde and one affection, ſo as the faithfull were but one. Wee ſee alſo touching the ſupper of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, that it was adminiſtred in ſuch wiſe, that if there were any man of a looſe and diſſolute life he was put from it. And excommunication was of an other force than it is, & men vſed it after an other faſhion than they do nowadaies. And likewiſe as touching Baptiſme, it was miniſtred with ſuch reuerence, that euery man was attentiue vnto it, the congregation was aſſembled together, as if one were to receiue an holy freedomſhip, as in very deede it is. But among vs none of theſe things are ſo, as they ſhould be. After the ſtate of ciuill gouernment, faults are not halfe puniſhed therein. And if there be any puniſhments, they are but playes and paſtimes as a man may ſay. What ought wee to call to minde heereupon, when we ſee that both generally and particularly, things are not ſo well ordered as they ought to bee? Surely euery man ought to conſider and to ſay: alas it is becauſe of the hardneſſe of our hearts, that we can haue no ſuch order as ought to be among the children of God, that things are ſo waſted, and that no remedie can be had in this behalfe. What is the cauſe heereof? To whom muſt the fault heereof be imputed? To all of vs. For wee haue an hard heart. Wheras if we were ſo pliable to be taught, as that we could ſuffer our ſelues to be gouerned according to that which God commaundeth vs, Lawes ſhould bee better obſerued, Magiſtrates ſhould not bee ſo hindered, nor finde it ſuch an hardneſſe to do their duetie: we ſhould ſee eſpecially the Church of God (wherein nowe many ſhamefull things are,) better ordered. And therfore in ſtead of this, that hypocrits cloake themſelues with this ſhrouding ſheete to ſay: What? Men finde no fault with me, and doe any thinke that I am culpable before God? In place of this (ſay I) let vs learne to confeſſe, that our ſelues are the cauſe why thinges are not ſo well ordered as they ſhould bee, it proceedeth from the hardneſſe of our heart, which can bee made pliable by no meanes.

Nowe wee muſt farther note how our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt leadeth vs to the firſt inſtitution of GOD, to ſhew what is the true nature and condition of marriage. It was not ſo (ſayeth hee) in the beginning. Heereby hee declareth that as GOD created man and woman and was himſelfe the authour of marriage, ſo hee deliuered a Lawe wherein nothing muſt be chaunged: and as ſoone as men ſwarue from it, what excuſe ſoeuer they take, what colour ſoeuer they haue as touching men, yet fayle they not to forge a thing contrary vnto the inſtitution of GOD, which ought to ſuffice vs. And therefore if husbandes and wiues will diſcharge themſelues of their dewtie, they muſt looke farther than that which is before their eyes. For things are too confuſedly diſordered in this worlde. Therefore if men hang altogether vppon examples, euery man will drawe his neighbour vnto vtter deſtruction. But let them haue an eye vnto that which GOD hath ordayned. Gen.2.18. Hee ſayde: It is not good for man to bee alone, let vs make him an helpe like vnto himſelfe. Seeing it is ſo, let vs note that all thoſe which are called vnto mariage, that is to ſay, ſuch as are not priuileaged to bee without it, and which feele that God hath not giuen them the gift of continencie to abſtayne from marriage; let all thoſe knowe, that of a truth GOD calleth them and as it were, leadeth them by the hande vnto this eſtate. And if they bee well perſwaded of this, doubtleſſe they will goe with a franke and free goodwill; euery husband will endeuour to diſcharge himſelfe of his dewtie with all diligence, when hee ſhall knowe howe hee is bound, not onely vnto his wife, but alſo vnto GOD. The wife alſo on hir parte will conſider, that ſeeing ſhee ought to bee an ayde vnto her husbande, ſhee muſt not bee as a diuell to hinder and to trouble him. For that were a peruerting of the order of nature. But ſhee will thus bethinke her ſelfe: Beholde, GOD with his owne holy mouth pronounced, when hee ſpake of creating the woman: Let vs make an helpe for man. Hee ſayde not, Let vs make a woman for him; but an helpe. Nowe ſeeing that the woman ought to bee an helpe and ayde vnto her husbande, it is greate reaſon that ſhee imploy her ſelfe to doe her dewtie therein: yea and that of a franke and free goodwill; knowing that it is not vnto her husbande that ſhee is bounde but vnto God who ordayned ſuch a coniunction in the beginning. Thus yee ſee what we haue to obſerue.

And agayne note wee that when it is ſayde, That a man ſhall forſake father and mother Gen.2.24. and cleaue vnto his wife; it is to magnifie ſo much the more that holy bond which was ordayned by GOD. For can a man renounce his father and mother? Doubtleſſe no. Nowe much leſſe may hee renounce his wife. If it bee not lawfull for a childe to renounce his father and mother, an husband ſhall bee leſſe to bee excuſed for ſeparating himſelfe from his wyfe. For why? God hath ſo pronounced that albeit a childe bee ſpecially bound to his father and mother: yet there is a ſtraiter bonde of the husband towardes the wife. Therefore if an husband bethinke himſelfe of this, he ſhall not be ſo eaſily tempted to forſake his wife, as a childe to exempt himſelf from ẏ ſubiection of his father. And the wife likewiſe on her part ſhall know to ſay: behold my husband is my head, he hath authoritie ouer me, & God hath bound me to him, and ſhall I then ſeparate my ſelfe from, either through an headie will, or affection, or through ſome other frowardneſſe? Ye ſee how a wife ſhal be kept in the obedience of her husband when ſhe ſhall thinke thus: ſeeing God hath allotted vnto me ſuch a condition that I muſt be ſubiect to my husband, I muſt not hoyſt vp my head like a wilde hinde and ſhake off the yoke. For I ſhal not diſobey a mortal man, I ſhal not offende him onely; in as much as I breake the faith wherein I promiſed to be ſubiect and obedient vnto him, and do altogether the cleane contrary; but I ſhall offend him which hath put me in ſubiection vnder him, to wit God, who gaue me into ẏ handes of my husband, and wil that I be more ſubiect vnto him than vnto father and mother. Ye ſee how this beginning ought to be as a brydle to holde vs backe, that wee preſume not to chaunge any thing in the inſtitution and order of God. And ſecondly let vs extend this vnto al other things: knowing that the Lawe of God is not as mans lawe is. If there bee an olde lawe, it may be forgotten and buried, men will not thinke on it, and a man ſhall not bee condemned for hauing tranſgreſſed ſuch a lawe. If a man ſay it was three hundred yeeres ſince it was publiſhed, there is no remembraunce of it nowe: if a man offend againſt it, it skils not, the lawe is no longer in force. But the matter is otherwiſe in the lawe of God. For wee can make no preſcription of time againſt him, wee cannot lie and ſape our ſelues in our vices, and ſay: I haue not beene warned, I remember the lawe of God no longer, the worlde tranſgreſſeth beyond all meaſure againſt it: men make but a game of it: wee may not (I ſay) couer our faultes with any of theſe excuſes: for they are vayne and of no value. But wee cannot handle this whole matter at this time: wee will keepe it in ſtore therefore for to morrowe, with that exception of fornication.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better, yea in ſuch ſort, that being caſt downe in our ſelues, wee may lament and bee ſorie that wee haue ſo greatly offended him. And ſeeing it hath pleaſed him to remedie our faultes, and to declare vnto vs that they are forgiuen in the name, and by the meane of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, pray wee him, that he will likewiſe hereafter giue vs the grace by the power of his holy ſpirit, to ouercome all the temptations againſt which wee are dayly to fight, vntill he hath giuen vs victorie in all our conflictes, when hee ſhall haue withdrawen vs to himſelfe, to make vs partakers of his glorie in the kingdome of heauen. That it will pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely vnto vs but alſo vnto all peoples and nations of the earth, &c.

On Fryday the laſt of Ianuarie, 1556.

The Cxxxvij. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the foure and twentith Chapter.

1.2.3.4 When a man taketh a wife, &c.

5 When a man taketh a newe wife, he ſhall not goe to warre, neither ſhall hee be charged with any buſines, but ſhalbe free at home one yeere, and reioyce with his wife which he hath taken.

6 No man ſhall take the neather nor the vpper milſtone for a pledge: for this gage is his liuing.

I Haue declared already at large, how men ought to liue in agreement with their wiues, and how the bonde of mariage is ſuch as cannot bee broken. It remayneth nowe, that we come to the exception which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt maketh; to wit, that for the cauſe of adulterie, it ſhall bee lawfull for a man to put away his wife. The reaſon is, for that the man on his parte breaketh not the faith which he plighted, but the wife hauing played the harlot doth aſmuch as in her is, Matt.19.9.

vndoe the marriage altogether, and ſo defileth it, as there remayneth no longer any holyneſſe in it. For on what other condition is the husband ioyned vnto the wife, but that they ſhould liue chaſtly one with another? But the partie which committeth adulterie, breaketh this condition, and therefore the bond of mariage is then vntyed. So then if a man knowing his wife to be a whore, and hauing likewiſe prooued her ſuch a one, forſake her: he violateth not the inſtitution of God, neither tranſgreſſeth he this law, They Matt. 19. 5. ſhall be two in one fleſh: but he is quitte, and ſet freee, becauſe the wife hath ſwarued aſide from the order of God and of nature. Let vs therefore note well, that when our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt aloweth the diuorcement which is made for the cauſe of adultery, it is not to graunt a man leaue to chaunge any thing in the inſtitution of God. For it muſt euer holde true, That man may in no wiſe ſunder thoſe whom God hath ioyned together. But becauſe the woman hath broken the condition of mariage, the husband is freed from it. The thing then which wee haue to beare in mind is that the exception which we heere haue rehearſed, ſerueth not in any way to leſſen the force of the law of God. That coniunction which God hath ordayned muſt alwaies remaine firme and ſteadfaſt. But ſhe that playeth the harlot, is no longer a wife, ſhe is no longer to be taken & deemed for ſuch a one. Now if a man demaund on the other ſide, whether yͤ woman for her part hath like libertie, we heare what Saint Paul ſaith, 1.Cor.7.4. yͭ like as yͤ husband is not maiſter of his owne body, no more alſo is the wife of hirs. Ye ſee what an equalitie of like right yͤ holy ghoſt ſetteth downe: yͭ like as yͤ woman when ſhe is maried, is not myſtris of her owne body, ſo on the contrary ſide a man after yͭ he hath plighted his faith to his wife is bound in ſuch wiſe, yͭ if he abandon himſelf otherwiſe vnto luſt, his fault is alike with yͤ adulterie which yͤ wife committeth. So then if wee will hold our ſelues vnto yͭ which God hath commãded, we ſee yͭ the rule is moſt euident and cleare, namely, yͭ the man muſt not only content himſelfe wͭ the wife which he hath taken, yͭ is to ſay. he muſt not only keepe hir for a companion, but alſo beare with hir: bicauſe yͤ marriage importeth a true and perfect vnion of two perſons, and that as hartie as any may be. Which vnion is not poſſible to be maintained, except yͤ husband doe beare with his wife & with thoſe frailties which are in hir: & the wife alſo for hir part endeuór to pleaſe hir husband, & to bee obedient vnto him. This we ſee (I ſay) on the one ſide: & againe wee ſee that if the wife be ſo looſe in life, as to giue ouer her ſelfe to fornication, ſhee breaketh wedlock, wherby ſhe doth as it were warre with God, peruerting all honeſty, which ought to be holy & inuiolable. Now if when the woman offendeth ſo on hir part, the husband likewiſe ſtep aſide in his dewty, and ouerſhoote himſelfe ſo farre as to breake the faith which he hath plighted vnto his wife; he is condemned of God. For why? The bond (as I told you) which paſſeth betwixt them, is mutuall and of like force touching them both.

And in this caſe there is no doubt, but that a man may marry a gaine, if he in this ſorte put away his wife becauſe of adulterie: and men ſhew an ouer groſſe abuſe when they weigh not the words of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: That if a man Matt.19.9. forſake his wife, except it be for adulterie, & mary an other, he is an adulterer, & that he cauſeth her whom he hath forſaken to commit adulterie alſo. Now when Chriſt excepteth yͤ cauſe of adulterie, it is to ſet the man in yͤ caſe at free choice & libertie to mary agayne. For what a thing were it to bar a man from a newe match; if he haue obſerued his promiſe faithfully, & liued in the feare of God, and not beene vnfaithfull towardes his wife? If he be conſtrained to put her away, muſt he be puniſhed for the offence of an other? What reaſon were in that? Should he not haue open wrong doone him? Eſpecially conſidering that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in that text addeth, That Matt.19.11. 1.Cor.7.11. all haue not the gift of continencie, and that ſuch as haue not receiued it, haue the remedie of marriage, and that they ought to vſe it. When our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt pronounceth this, thinke we that his meaning was that the poore wretched man, who hath liued blameleſſe with an harlot, ſhould bee left in diſpayre? Nay; if hee ſee filthyneſſe in his houſe, he muſt, whether he will yea or no, caſt foorth ſuch vncleanneſſe, except he will infect himſelfe therewith and be accounted a partie in ſuch wickedneſſe. Now if a man diſcharge his dewtie in this behalfe, thinke we that God barreth him of all right, and that he leaueth him in ſuch trouble and anguiſh, as he may not know where to become, but muſt remaine vnprouided of all remedie? It was therefore an ouer groſſe folly in men not to knowe that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt leaueth a man in free libertie to marrie agayne, when his make hath violated the faith of marriage. As much is to be ſayde in the behalfe of the woman, ſeeing the right in this caſe is equall and mutuall, as I haue ſhewed afore. And ſo yee ſee what we haue at this day to obſerue: namely, that euery man ought to conſider, that the vocation which hee hath of God, is ſuch a yoke as he may not ſeeke to ſhake off. For it is the cheefe and principall ſeruice which wee can render vnto God all our whole lifetime, to haue an eye vnto that which he requireth of vs: and when hee hath ſet vs in ſome eſtate and calling; to doe that which belongeth vnto our dewtie: and that euery one yeelde himſelfe obedient in all humbleneſſe, to ſay: hath God called me vnto this ende? I muſt frame my ſelfe thereunto without any reply or gainſaying. Therefore when we bee of a milde and gentle diſpoſition, ſubmitting our ſelues vnto yͤ will of our God; therein (ſay I) conſiſteth the principall ſeruice which he liketh and deſireth. And without this al our vertues are nought elſe in his ſight but doung and filthyneſſe. Nowe ſeeing it is ſo, let vs conſider, as touching mariage, what the calling of God is, and what maner of Law, or what yoke he layeth on the neck of man: to wit, that he liue quietly with his wife, bearing with thoſe infirmities which are in her, & be a companion to liue and to die with hir: and that the wife lykewiſe ſubmit herſelfe with all humblenes vnto her husband,ſo as they nouriſh and maintaine peace one with the other. Thus ye ſee how God may bee honoured and howe his grace alſo and his bleſſing may dwell and abide in a familie. And if a woman bee ſo wicked as to proſtitute hir ſelfe, the husband according vnto the will of God, may not onely put hir away, but is in perfect and full libertie to leaue hir, and to marrie himſelfe vnto another. As for the woman,there is in deede another reſpect touching hir than for the man. For the wife ſhall not bee ſo diſhonored by the adulterie of hir husband, nor bee put to ſo great ſhame, as the husband ſhall bee by the wyues. But yet if the husbande bee an whooremonger, and waſteth his goods and ſubſtaunce vppon harlottes,ſo as his wife is ſhutte out of doores, or bee kept in with all manner of crueltie like a wretched ſlaue; if this miſchiefe holde on ſtill: then to leaue a wretched woman in ſuch bondage, were againſt all reaſon and right: eſpecially Mal.2.16. conſidering that which was yeſterday alleaged out of the Prophet Malachie, That it were better that a man ſhoulde put away his wife, than to haue more than one. And what ſhall bee ſayde then in this caſe, when a man ſhall keepe an ordinarie ſtewes, and that no man is able to correct this vice of his: is not the wife then ſet at greater libertie? This is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde vpon this place.

Nowe ſith our Lordes will is that marriage ſhoulde bee ſo indiſſoluble and inuiolable,yea, and that through the vertue of this ſentence which our Lorde hath pronounced with his Gen.2.24. owne mouth, That there ſhall bee two in one fleſh: let vs note that it is much greater reaſon that the ſpirituall vnion which wee haue with our Lorde Ieſu Chriſt, ought to bee diligently kept and mayntained: For his will is to contract marriage with vs, and dayly he doeth ſo, or at leaſtwiſe ratifyeth it by the preaching of the Goſpell. And on what condition is it? It is (as Saint Paule ſayeth) to the ende wee ſhoulde bee as chaſt women, not turning our mindes aſide vnto falſe doctrines. For he compareth all errours and all corruptions of the pure ſimplicitie of fayth, to fornications. As if a wife hearken vnto a bawde, beholde ſhee is alreadye wonne, and begynneth foorthwith to breake the fayth of Marriage. Euen ſo is it with vs, if wee abide not in the obedience of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, holding our ſelues wholly vnto his doctrine, wee are like vnto aduowtrous women. And therefore ſith that GOD hath ioyned vs vnto his only ſonne,and that our whole felicitie and glory conſiſteth therein, let vs learne not to decline from it in any manner of wiſe.

Nowe it is ſayde, That the man which ſhall haue ſo put away his Wife, ſhall not, (if ſhe marrie otherwiſe) euer take hir agayne, bycauſe ſhee is alreadie defiled. Heereby GOD meant for to ſhewe that albeit hee did not puniſh ſuch diuorcements as were made without any good ground; yet he leaueth not to condemne them: for there was heerein a remedie, that a man being grieued with his wife, myght in continuaunce of time beyng better aduiſed take hir againe: and if the wife were married againe, becauſe hee had ſet her foorth vnto fornication, and becauſe that (aſmuch as in him lay) hee had broken all order of nature, he might not take her againe. Now in that God ordayned ſuch puniſhement, although hee permitted diuorcementes, I meane as in reſpect of humaine policie: it ſhewed ſufficiently that hee allowed not of them. And ſo the Iewes excuſed themſelues but in vaine, as if they had put away their wiues by the authoritie of the Lawe. For this texte ſufficiently declareth, that this manner of putting of them away was wicked, and that it coulde bring nothing elſe but all manner of euill and miſchiefe; yea and farther, that it was not poſſible for the man to amend the fault which hee had committed, after that the wife had taken a new husband. When the Lawe declareth thus much, is it not a condemning of the Iewes? How can this ſerue them for a ſhrowding ſheete to ſay: The law permitted vs this thing, our Lorde woulde not puniſhe ſuch a ſinne by any earthly iudgement? Yea but for all this, hath hee declared that he alloweth of it? Hath hee ſayd that ſuch a fact is lawfull? Nay but all the contrarie. For the thinges which of themſelues are good haue alway a good end and iſſue,but when there followeth any wretched miſhap in any thing,eſpecially ſuch a one as can be by no meanes recouered,it is a ſigne that the thing diſpleaſeth God So then let vs diligently note that God meant in this place to diſcouer the reaſon of his counſaile, why hee puniſhed not diuorcementes. In effect hee meant to giue the Iewes to vnderſtand that it was for the hardneſſe of their heart (as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt thereof ſpeaketh) Matt.19.8. and that they muſt needes be conuicted to acknowlege that the cauſe why God eſtabliſhed no perfectneſſe of ciuil gouernment among thẽ was,for that they were not capable of it. But they conſidered little of this. Nay they bare thẽſelues in hand rather that all thinges were lawfull for them,ſeeing they were not puniſhed by earthly iudgement, and they thought that by this meanes they were alſo preuiledged from the iudgement of God.

Hereby wee bee warned of that which was more fullie handled yeſterday, to wit, not to runne at rouers,but to make a perfect tryall of thoſe thinges which wee take in hand,by hauing our eye alwayes on the Lawe wherein our Lorde hath compriſed the effect and abridgement of his wil,& that is alſo the true touchſtone whereby we ought to try all our words, yea and all our thoughts. Seeing it is ſo,let vs returne thither,& although wee be not puniſhed by men,yet let vs not ceaſe to miſlyke of our ſelues for our vices, knowing that they muſt elſewhere be accounted for,albeit GOD hath ſpared vs in this lyfe. And yet there are now and then ſome by puniſhmentes layde on vs in that reſpect, inſomuch that although God call vs not ſolemnlie vnto the barre, ne frame an inditement preciſely againſt vs: yet neuertheleſſe he vſeth ſome kinde of chaſtiſement, to admoniſh vs of our faultes, as wee ſee that this hauing of many wiues was not puniſhed, & yet our Lord ceaſed not to ſhewe that it was a deteſtable thing in his ſight, as whereby the order of marriage was broken and violated. Let vs therefore conſider of all the corrections which GOD ſendeth, to the intent we may preuent his anger, and not abuſe his patience although he for a long time beareth with vs.

Briefly, let vs take heede that we attempt not any thing againſt yͤ rule which is giuen vnto vs: let vs alwayes return back vnto this point; It was not ſo in the beginning: For if we aledge cuſtome, it ſhall not ſerue to exempt vs from condemnation: if we ſay: it hath bin in vſe this long time, we haue an infinite number of examples for it: all this ſhal litle auaile vs. For why? This one only word ſhall cut off all ſuch excuſes, where it is ſayde, that, what GOD hath once eſtabliſhed; it muſt be alwayes obſerued, although men bee changeable, although they be rebellious, and ſo through their venterouſneſſe, and their raſhnes, make a confuſion of all thinges, and enterpriſe whatſoeuer their luſt fancieth, and thereupon carrie themſelues headlong into all wickedneſſe, yea and one folow an other; all this ſhall be nothing before God, but a more grieuous condemnation to aggrauate, and to encreaſe the haynouſneſſe of their wickedneſſe. And why ſo? For it ought to ſuffice vs yͤ god hath declared vnto vs his will which cannot varie, and from the which alſo it is not lawfull for vs to ſwarue. Now moreouer let vs note well yͤ which God addeth: Leaſt they ſhoulde make the Lande to ſinne which hee had giuen the Iewes to inherite. Moſes hath heretofore vſed the ſelfe ſame manner of ſpeaking: but ſeeing it is in this place rehearſed, we ought to call to minde yͤ which hath bin already aboue declared: that is to wit, that if a vice raigne, and men ſtill let it ſlip: they make the whole land to ſinne, yͤ it is to prouoke yͤ anger of God & to nouriſh it, & that all are made guiltie thereof. God ſayth not, that he which ſhall ſo take his wife againe ſhall ſinne before God and not abide vnpuniſhed; & that the woman lykewiſe committeth abhomination: but he ſaith, The land ſhal ſin. And how yͤ land? It may chaunce that there ſhall not be paſt a three or foure diuorcementes, and yet yͤ there may be a million of people in yͤ land: and why ſhal yͤ fault be ſo farre & ſo largely extẽded? It ſeemeth yͤ none beſides him which maketh the diuorce, ought to be accuſed. But God knoweth well how hee ought to iudge. And it is not for vs to teach him his leſſon. Let vs therfore holde vs vnto this decree of his which hee hath here pronoũced: & let vs know yͤ the whole land is defiled, when ſinnes raigne therein, without any bridle, and the cauſe is manifeſt. For there Iuſtice cannot be without blame, where is no bridle of reſtraint. Where men haue not this conſideration to ſay: Behold God is offended, this is a deteſtable thing, but are altogether careleſſe of it; there iuſtice is idle. And ſo foraſmuch as yͤ magiſtrates execute not their office faithfully, ye ſee how the ſinne becommeth publique, and ſo the whole people is as it were cõſenting vnto it. And moreouer, when wickedneſſe is ſo permitted, euery man is of opinion yͤ all things are lawful: for of cuſtome men alwayes make a lawe. And a mans eye may bee witneſſe, how on the one ſide men put away all ſhame, & on yͤ other ſide ſtãd in no feare. And doubtleſſe yͤ feare we haue of puniſhment, & the ſhame which we haue of doing euill, are two bridles to reſtraine vs. When theſe two thinges are layd aſide, ſo yͤ men ſet braſen faces on yͤ matter, & take leaue to do what they liſt; there is no remedie but that all miſchiefe muſt proceede thereof when ſinnes haue ſo full ſcope. And that is the cauſe why S. Paul vpbraideth the whole Church of Corinth, with the inceſt which was committed, although one man alone had taken to wife his mother in lawe. Yee boaſt your ſelues (ſaith he,) but what a ſhame is it yͤ you nouriſh ſuch villanie & filthineſſe among you? So thẽ let vs wiſely conſider, yͤ as often as the ſcripture ſpeaketh in this wiſe, it is to admoniſh vs both publikely & particularlie of our dutie: yͤ firſt of al ſuch as haue publike charge, diſſemble not yͤ wickedneſſe which is cõmitted, but ſeeke to correct it; yͤ the Paſtours which haue yͤ charge of teaching, doe open their mouthes wide wͭ all libertie, and that when they ſee yͤ miſchief encreaſeth and is augmented, they cry out at it, condemne it, & reproue, & repreſſe it aſmuch as lyeth in them; that ſo much yͤ more ſeuere puniſhment be vſed in yͤ Church: yͤ the magiſtrates who haue yͤ ſword in their hãd take heed, yͤ they employ thẽſelues to doe for their part what God hath cõmaunded them; & beſides, yͤ euery man priuately & particularly enforce himſelfe by exhortations & admonitions to purge his houſe from al filthines, & to eſchue & auoyde all wicked companie: yͤ we may at the leaſtwiſe ſhew yͤ the wickedneſſe diſpleaſeth vs, & that we will not at any hand bee partakers thereof, folowing yͤ which S. Paul ſaith, That by not cõſenting vnto yͤ workes of darkeneſſe, we muſt reproue thẽ. Behold (I ſay) what yͤ thing is whereof we are admoniſhed, when God declareth yͤ the land is guiltie of ſinne, if an offence remain vnpuniſhed. And if we be not able to remedie the miſchiefe thereof, let vs bewaile our ſelues, knowing that if God wold deale rigorouſly wͭ vs, we were worthy to be plunged forthwith into yͤ deepeſt dungeon of hel. As for example, if blaſphemies & fornications, & other vnruly behauiours, lewd & wicked practiſes, wrongful dealinges, deceites & cruelties raigne in any place, & there be no end of them; let vs know yͤ when God giueth Satã ſuch libertie, as to cõtinue ſuch an outragious diſorder in all things, it is a ſigne yͤ he is angrie wͭ vs, & that we want his kingdome. Knowing this let vs be ſorrie, & walk in yͤ greater heedefulneſſe, praying him to vſe mercie towardes vs, and with fatherly gentleneſſe to correct that wickedneſſe of ours whereby wee deſerued to be raſed and rooted out of the land of the liuing, euen out of hand, if God woulde deale with vs according vnto our offences. Yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde concerning this place.

1.Cor.5.a.

Ephes.5.11.

And now Moſes addeth two Lawes, whereof the one tendeth to the fauoring of ſuch as are new marryed: and the other ſerueth to barre them which lend monie, from being ouer cruel, and from beeing ſo greedy in taking of pawnes and gages, as to deſtroy their neighbors, and to take from them ẏ meanes wherby they might liue. Ye ſee in effect what the two poyntes bee, which are contained here. Now as touching the firſt, there is no doubt, but Moſes had an eye therein vnto the common profit of all. For at the firſt ſight a man might finde it ſtrange what the cauſe ſhould be why he diſpenſed thus with newe marryed folkes, that they ſhoulde keepe themſelues at home, that they ſhoulde not bee compelled to goe vnto warre, that they ſhould haue none of thoſe charges layde vppon them which might turne them from their familie. For to what end and purpoſe was this, but that God in commaunding ſuch an order by his ſeruant Moſes, had an eye vnto that which might folow by the contrarie? For when a man taketh a wife it is good and requiſite that he forme & faſhion her, that is to ſay, that he teach and accuſtome her ſo to liue as they may agree both together al the time of their life. Now if a man take a woman to wife, and at the end of three dayes leaue her while the wife knoweth not yet the maners and conditions of her husband, and while the husbãd likewiſe is vnacquainted with the diſpoſition of his wife it may be a cauſe that they ſhall not agree together all their lyfe long. And again we know what yong houſholders are, vntil they be by longer time inured to know by vſe and experiẽce, how to ſet their houſhold in order. Now if a man bee led away the firſt day, and forſake his wife; the yong woman not knowing what belongeth to the ordering of an houſe, and remaining alone may fall into many inconueniences. And though there were none other than this which we haue alleged; yet were it enough and too much, namely that the husband returning after ſome time ſhall bee as one vtterly vnacquainted with his wife, and the wife in lyke ſorte ſhall be as ſtrange to him, which thing might be an occaſion that they ſhoulde neuer agree one with another. God then had reſpect vnto this: And therefore let vs not imagine that this Lawe was made for pleaſures ſake, to ſay that a man ſhould ſporte himſelfe with his wife which hee hath taken. I graunt that Moſes vſeth this word: but that is becauſe he would therein compriſe al the profite which commeth by this meanes of the husbandes ioyning and vniting of himſelfe vnto his wife, wherby there groweth a conformitie of manners betweene them, ſo as the one is well knowen to the other, and they are brought to this point that they can beare each with other: but yet neuertheleſſe God hath in this place an eye vnto the common profit and welfare of all.

Now it is very true that this law reſpecteth in ſuch ſort the policie and rule of gouernment among the Iſraelites, that we are not bound therunto: but yet for all that (as I haue declared afore) wee muſt gather ſome doctrine from that which God had ordayned for the people of olde time. We muſt euer haue an eye vnto the ende which God ameth at, and from thence gather ẏ ſubſtance of the law which appertaineth vnto vs, and is belonging as common vnto vs together with the Iewes. Now in effect it is heere declared vnto vs, that men ought to auoyde all occaſions which ſerue to eſtranging of thẽ frõ their wiues, & to the diſordring of their houſe. We are already of our ſelues ouer frail & weake, & though no farther occaſion be offered, wee ſee how many ſwarue aſide from their dueties, & are ſo tickliſhe ẏ they cannot holde themſelues quiet & ſtill in their vocation. But now if there bee ſome other temptation & ẏ men wander wilfullie & truſt to their own cõſtancie, & preſume vpon maruelous things in thẽſelues, & in the meane time keepe not thẽſelues vnder ẏ bridle of God: what other thing may fal out in ẏ end, but extreme cõfuſiõ? Let vs therfore learne not to tempt God through ouer great boldneſſe and preſumption: but let euery one take heede he hold himſelfe within his boundes, to ẏ end he may be the more inabled to diſcharge himſelf of his duetie. For euen whẽ we would vſe all the meanes wee can poſſiblie to doe that well which God hath ordayned, yet our fleſhe hath alwayes ſuch whot boylings, that we are oftentimes as headſtrong horſes which are broken looſe. We haue neede therfore to be held backe by diuers & ſundry meanes. And therfore let vs looke vnto our ſelues as our Lord warneth vs. And againe on the other ſide we haue alſo to beare in minde that which Saint Paul declareth in the ſeuenth of the firſt to ẏ Corinthians, to wit, ẏ they which are married are intangled in many cares, the which according vnto rigour might be imputed for ſinne, except God did vſe ſuch gentleneſſe towardes vs, yea, and that ſuch fatherlie gentleneſſe, as to wink at our faults: & this ought to be wel conſidered. For whẽ a man entreth into mariage, if he think vpon ẏ multitude of troubles & incõmodities which it hath, it will breede ſuch a feare in him, ẏ hee will wiſh to withdrawe himſelf farre from it. And beſides ẏ, the diuil hath indeuored as much as is poſſible, to diffame mariage, to the intent men ſhoulde ſo become as brute beaſtes, in defiling thẽſelues with fornication; yea & that vnder colour of auoiding ẏ bondage which in reſpect of martiage ſeemeth to be ouerhard & grieuous: as ẏ diſciples alſo ſayd: Matt.19.10. If it be ſo, it were good for a man not to touch a woman. Yea ſaith our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, if ſo be hee were at his owne choyce. But now, leaſt when we conſider of ẏ incommodities & troubles which are in marriage, we ſhould be wholy diſcouraged: let vs returne vnto ẏ which is declared vnto vs in this place. For it was a good thing ẏ the people of God, being ſet vpon, & aſſaulted, ſhould go forth to warre to employ thẽſelues in ẏ defence of the whole countrie & bodie of their people, and alſo furniſh out ſuch other charges an offices as ſerued to maintaine ẏ Church of God. Now when God giueth vnto thẽ which were new married, ſuch a diſpenſatiõ, as to beare with them in theſe thinges, hee ſheweth in generall, that although they which are maried cannot eſcape free, but that they muſt needes bee giuen ouer to many cares and carkings, and be ſnarled in many & ſundrie incommodities, yet notwithſtanding he beareth with them, and that of eſpecial fauour, and that this he doth in the fauour of marriage. Therefore let the faithful comfort themſelues, ſeeing that GOD hath pytie on them, and that although marriage bringeth with it ſuch a nũber of troubles, wherby men ſeeme as it were to be held bound in this world, yet notwͭſtanding God for all this, doth not caſt them off. And why? Becauſe he hath ordayned mariage, and knowing ẏ troubles it hath, he voutſafeth to vſe a remedie by forbearing and pardoning many faults which are in it.

But herewithall let vs alſo note, that this may not ſerue to rock vs aſleepe, let not married folkes, vnder colour that God dealeth ſo gently and pitifully with them, behaue themſelues ſo looſely as if all thinges were permitted them: but let them haue the wit to ſay: Go to: Had wee neuer ſo ſmall a care which might withhold vs from comming vnto God; yet ſhould wee be to blame. But we ſee many ouer froward, wee ſee in others much impatiencie, and many other thinges: againe we ſee much vanitie committed; inſomuch that ſome man louing his wife too wel, will exceede meaſure therein, & lykewiſe in his children, ſo vnrulie alwayes are our paſſions. If there be in vs but one ſmal vice, wee are already culpable before God: and if there be an infinite number, behold wee are then plunged as it were into a bottomleſſe pit. And ſhall we then vnder ẏ couert & cloke of mariage, ſetle our ſelues in our dregs, & flatter our ſelues in our wicked doings? What reaſõ were in ẏ? Nay rather let men quicken vp themſelues, and know ẏ the goodneſſe of God ſerueth not to lead & allure them vnto wickednes: but contrariwiſe to make them to feele their faultes, & hauing felt them to returne vnto God, and to pray him ẏ he wil more & more cut off ẏ ſuperfluities which are in our affections. Ye ſee thẽ what we haue to beare in minde concerning this place, namely ẏ the faithful haue wherwith to comfort thẽſelues, ſeeing ẏ God beareth with thẽ as long as they liue in this world, and ẏ albeit they cannot bee as angels to walke in all heauenly perfectneſſe: they are not for all ẏ reiected of God. For in the fauour of marriage which he hath ordayned, he vſeth patience and gentleneſſe in bearing wͭ them. But on ẏ contrary ſide alſo, ſeeing the infections wherwͭ they are on all ſides encloſed, they muſt not onely condemne thẽſelues, but ſigh continually, & endeuor to correct thẽſelues, & to approch more nearer & nearer vnto God, & to vnfold themſelues out of ẏ temptations, which are a let & hinderance vnto them. Ye ſee then what ẏ doctrine is which wee haue to gather from this lawe. Now it is certaine ẏ God meant in this place to ſhew as in a looking glaſſe, ẏ marriage, although it be in it ſelfe honorable, bringeth many incommodities with it, Hebr.13.4. inſomuch ẏ a man is made more vnapt to apply himſelfe freely vnto ẏ which he ought, than he would be if he were not maried. Not ẏ this proceedeth frõ ẏ nature of mariage: for if our father Adam had remained in ẏ integritie & perfectnes wherein he was firſt created, doubtleſſe marriage, lyke as God gaue it for an ayde, had bin a perfect & angelical life. But becauſe we are corrupted, & becauſe we haue ſo many vices in vs as is pitie to behold, we turne ẏ which was good, into euill: & that which God had ordayned for our glorie, wee turne oftentimes to our reproch and ſhame. That is ẏ roote then, from whence all ẏ incommodities which are in marriage proceede. And therefore to ẏ intent wee accuſe not God, who is the author thereof, and lay all ẏ fault vpon him; let vs know that whatſoeuer a man may complayne of in marriage, is as it were accidentall, ẏ is to ſay, proceedeth from elſewhere, than from marriage it ſelfe, to wit, from ẏ corruption of ſinne. Neuertheleſſe we may ſee (as I haue already told you) and we may in this place behold as if ẏ thing were paynted forth before our eyes, ẏ if a man enter into marriage he entãgleth him ſelfe in many thinges, which ſhall ſtay him from doing of his duetie. And ẏ is the cauſe why Saint Paul alſo ſayd, That if a man and woman could liue without it (conſidering how ſhort a time wee haue, at ſuch time as our Lorde oppreſſeth his 1.Cor.7.29. Church with ſo many afflictions, that we ſee nothing but miſeries in the world) it were good to runne with all ẏ haſt we might here below, & not bee ſtayed or hindered by any meanes whatſoeuer from finiſhing our courſe. So then when wee enter into marriage, let vs know ẏ we are ſtraight way ſo ſnarled, ẏ wee cannot make ſuch quicke ſpeede as we ſhould, to diſcharge our duetie: and let this cauſe vs to cal on God ſo much the more, and to deſire him to be mercifull vnto vs, and not to impute vnto vs any of all thoſe offences which we dayly commit.

Moreouer let vs enter alſo into this generall confeſſion, that ſeeing we are ſo ſinful as to marre euery thing that is good, we ought to deteſt the ſinne which dwelleth in vs, or rather which rayneth in vs, vntill our Lord haue transformed vs. For if we bee left in our firſt nature, what ſhall we be? Not only we ſhal be cleane cõtrary vnto ẏ wil of God and his righteouſnes; but alſo whatſoeuer is in it ſelfe good, holy, and honorable, and which God had ordayned for our welfare, wee can not but turne and conuert it vnto our harme and hinderaunce. Whereof wee haue a notable example in this place.

But we are yet farther admoniſhed, ẏ although through the corruptiõ of ſinne, we alter ẏ which God had ordayned for our welfare, and turne it to euil, yet we may not for all ẏ forſake and take our leaue of the good ordinances and decrees of God. And not to ſeeke any farther, let vs take marriage for an example in this caſe. We ſee (as I haue already told you) how many troubles and incommodities it hath, and that not alonely in reſpect of the body, ſo that when a man is maryed hee hath many hinderances which turne him now to one thing, and then to an other, ſo as he is faine to carke and care how to nouriſhe his children, and to watch for his profite when he ſhould ſleepe:but alſo mariage bringeth with it more than this. For a man ſhall not be ſo free and at ſuch libertie to employ himſelfe in the ſeruice of God: and yet all this muſt not ſtay him from this calling. For they truely which ſtand in neede of marriage, muſt ſubmit themſelues vnto this order of God, and vſe no excuſe as many doe, and as we ſee lykewiſe what is happened among the Papiſtes, how the diuell hath ſharpened the venemous tongues of thoſe hypocrites the Friars, and Monkes, and ſuch lyke, who haue forbidden marriage vnder colour that there are theſe and theſe faultes in it. But all thoſe things which are confuſed and diſordered, let not but that marriage remaineth alwayes good and profitable for them which vſe it well, although it drawe after it diuerſe inconueniences, howbeeit not of it ſelfe, but by reaſon of the ſins of men, bycauſe we cannot nowe vſe vnto our welfare this order which God hath ordained, in ſuch ſort as is requiſite, except wee reuerence mariage. And we ſee that the cauſe of theſe horrible confuſiōs which are happened in the world is this, that men haue diſpiſed mariage, and that the diuell hath wrought ſo farre as to make mē trample that holy inſtitution vnder foote, inſomuch that when euen the filthieſt varlets of all haue preſumed on their abilitie of abſtayning from it, and of liuing here as chaſt a lyfe as the Angels of heauen: wee ſee ſuche vnrulineſſe in conuerſation as ought to make euery hayre of our head ſtand on end. For if we would beholde nowadayes what the popiſh chaſtitie of the Prieſtes and Monkes, and of all the reſt of this peſtilent vermine is, wee ſhall finde it a bottomleſſe pit and an infernal gulfe of al beaſtlyneſſe. But let vs on our ſide conſider how to walke in the feare of God, and to keepe our ſelues vnder his bridle. For the doing whereof (as I haue tolde you) let vs haue our recourſe vnto our calling and ſay: Whither vnto doth God call me? Thither muſt I follow him without making of any reply. There followeth in yͤ ſecond place the other lawe which forbiddeth a man to take the vpper or the neather milſtone for a gage. When mention is made here of two milſtones and then of the vppermoſt, it is all one as if our Lord ſayd, that a man ſhall not take both the milſtones which ſerue to grinde, no nor one of them. For why? A man were as good take all, as one part. For there muſt be two Milſtones to grinde: I will leaue the lower, but he can doe nothing without a fellow. So then if I bereaue a man of the profit of his tooles, what greater harme may I worke him? For he can no longer gaine his liuing. Now in deede expreſly God ſpeaketh in this place of Milſtones: but vnder one kinde he hath compriſed the whole. As it is a common thing in the Lawe ſo to doe, and we haue alreadie declared that this rule muſt be kept for a kaye to open vnto vs the ſenſe and meaning of many places. And in verie deede the reaſon which Moſes addeth, giueth a good and eaſie declaration of this place. For he ſaith, Thou takeſt his life to pledge: that is to ſay, thou cutteſt a poore mans throate, when thou takeſt frō him thoſe neceſſarie tooles with which he getteth his liuing. Let vs therefore note in this place, that although it be here ſpoken of Milſtones, yet we are generally warned yͭ if whē we lend monie we take a pawne for it, we muſt not bereaue a man of thoſe meanes by the which he getteth his liuing. As ye ſee how the Farrour or lockſmith hath an anuel, a hammer; a pare of pinſers, and other tooles: Now if a man take any of theſe thinges from him becauſe he hath lent him mony; yee ſee how the poore man ſhall dy for hunger, and it had bin better that he had lent him nothing (for yͭ he had had ſome meanes to get his liuing by, & albeit he had pined away, yet he had gotten ſome ſmall morſell of bread to eate though it could haue ſlaked but half his hunger) than ſo to bereaue him of yͤ meanes which he hath to liue by. Now although a man take not away all his inſtrumentes from him; but leaue him his Anduell, & in the meane while keepeth frō him, his hammer and his pinſers, and ſuch lyke thinges, it is all one. And if he excuſe himſelfe and ſay: I haue but a part of them. No, but the other part will ſtand him in ſmall ſtead, except he had the reſt. If a man doe the lyke vnto any handicraftes man and man of occupation, wee know that all their reuenewes conſiſt in getting their liuing by yͤ labor of their handes, they haue neither landes, nor quarter rents comming in. Now ſeeing that God hath put their liuing in their hand; that is to ſay, in their labor, if a man bereaue thē of thoſe neceſſarie meanes by yͤ which they get their liuing, it is al one as if he had cut their throate; I ſay that their liuing, conſiſteth in their labor, not yͭ man by his trauaile can win any thing but through yͤ bleſſing of God: For wee muſt returne backe alwayes vnto this poynt: That God giueth reſt & quietneſſe vnto them whom he loueth. Whiles others take great payne, goe late to bed, and riſe early, eate browne bread, and drinke the water Pſal. 127.2. of tribulation, & yet profit nothing, but in ſtead of thriuing, go backward; yͤ childrē of God proſper in all their dealings. It is then the only freebeſtowed bleſſing of God which nouriſheth mē, as we haue ſeene heretofore how Moſes ſaith: Thou ſhalt not thinke in thine heart, that it is Deut. 6.17. the trauel or labor of thine owne handes, which hath nouriſhed and ſuſtayned thee: but know thou that it is thy god which worketh with thee, & that except he looked vnto thee, thou ſhouldeſt be vnprouided of all thinges. Wee muſt (I ſay) reſolue our ſelues throughly as touching this point. But withal, wee ſee how God hath an eye vnto the trauaile of men, in that when hee ſpeaketh of their liuing, hee hath a reſpect vnto the order which he hath eſtabliſhed: to wit, that when a man employeth himſelf vnto the trauell of his hands, he hath made this promiſe: I wil bleſ yͤ labour of thy hands, if thou do yͭ which belongeth vnto thy dutie. Therfore albeit yͭ we receiue our food and nouriſhment frō the hand of God, yet hath he ordayned yͭ we ſhould trauaile for it. Now is a mans trauail takē frō him? No, for then his life falleth to yͤ ground: & therefore it is an ouerwicked crueltie to conſtraine poore men to deliuer in pawne their tooles wherewith they ſhould ſerue their turne in their craft and occupation. So in effect our Lordes will is, that no man ſhould exerciſe any crueltie vnder color of lending: whereby to ſet his feete vppon poore folkes throates, but yͭ we ſhould rather aide and ſuccour them, knowing yͭ their borrowing is for neede & neceſſitie. Now if one bereaue a man of his lyfe vnder color of lending him a peece of mony, it were better that he ſhould leaue him in that neceſſitie in which he found him, than ſo to take from him thoſe meanes by the which he maintaineth his life. We ſee thē that God would not that lones ſhoulde be lynes to ſnare poore men withall which are in neceſſitie; to which purpoſe men haue at all times vſed them, and nowadayes doe more than euer heretofore. For men haue no other deuiſes thā how to deceiue, to circumuent, to beguile, and to ſuck the bloud of poore men. They draw them dry not onely of their ſubſtance but of their bloud too, when they eſpy them to be in need and penurie. This (ſay I) is the faſhion of men nowadayes. But for all that, let vs conſider what the will of God is in this behalfe, to wit, that we muſt not onely vſe no crueltie towardes our neighbors vnder color of any lending vnto them: but alſo ſeeke to relieue the preſent neede of all thoſe which are in neceſſitie, to the intent that they may alwayes goe foreward and maintaine themſelues in their eſtate.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better, yea in ſuch wiſe as we may return vnto him, ſeeking nothing els but to abide alwayes vnder his obedience, and to cleaue vnto his word without ſwaruing from it in any wiſe: and that wee may ſo walke euery man in his vocation, as wee may teſtify thereby that wee haue God for our maiſter and father, and that we are of his familie, liuing according to the order which he hath commaunded vs: and that wee may liue in ſuch wiſe one with another, as may be to the maintayning of loue and honeſtie among vs, and that ſuch vprightneſſe may raigne in vs, as wee haue not an eye vnto that which men permit vs, but looke euer at this marke, how we may ſerue one anothers turne in vpright brotherhoode, to the end we may bee confirmed alwayes more and more that God is our father, and that we may call vpon him, as ſuch a one. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely vnto vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the j. of Februarie, 1556.

The Cxxxviii. Sermon, which is the third vpon the foure & twentith Chapter.

7 If a man be found which hath ſtolen any of his brethren of the children of Iſrael, and he hath miſuſed him or ſold him: this thiefe ſhall die: and thou ſhalt put euill away from among you.

8 Take heede of the plague of leproſie, that thou marke it diligently, and doe according vnto all that which the Prieſtes the Leuites ſhall teach you, take heed yee doe as I haue commaunded them.

9 Remember what the Lord thy God did vnto Marie by the way, after that ye were come out of Egypt.

THe firſt thing that God declareth in this place is, that if any ſtole away a man of Iſrael and ſolde him, the offence which he committed in this behalfe, was to be puniſhed by death. And heereby hee giueth vs to vnderſtand how dearelie hee loued that people which hee had choſen vnto himſelfe. For we knowe how God appointeth puniſhmentes accordinglie as he eſteemeth of the greatnes of the ſinne which is committed. So then whereas hee puniſheth that man by death which had ſtolen away his brother, thereby we ſee that the life of the children of Iſrael was pretious vnto him. And no maruaile. For if a father haue loſt one of his children, eſpecially if he be ſtolen from him, and he knoweth not what is become of him, wee know he would haue bin better contented to haue loſt his goods, than his childe. Now ſeeing that God had adopted the ſtock of Abraham, he accounted thoſe which deſcended from it, to be of his owne houſhold, and named himſelf their father, and in very deed circumciſion was a mark to ſeparate yͤ people frō other nations. Therefore whoſoeuer ſold any one of the ſtocke of Abraham, he did wrong and iniurie not onely to the perſon it ſelfe, but alſo vnto God. Againe a man being ſolde vnto another people, was in daunger of being conſtrained by force to commit idolatrie. In deed he were better ſuffer death; than doe ſo: but lyke as many are fraile & weake in this caſe, ſo might they alſo bee ſeduced, and turned aſide frō yͤ law, & from yͤ ſeruice of God: & therefore by this means enſued not only yͤ deſtructiō of a mans body, but alſo of his ſoule. We ſee thē now that this law was grounded on great reaſon. And moreouer we know likewiſe, yͭ God had ſo redeemed this people, that they were called a royall prieſthood. And therefore if this honour ſhoulde be aboliſhed, it were all one as if a man ſhold rent in pieces the priuiledge which a prince had giuen: and like as God is greater than mortall men, ſo ſuch an outrage committed againſt his maieſtie, were more heinous and intollerable. But we muſt nowe returne vnto our ſelues. For albeit there bee not nowadayes any certain people which God hath choſen, & ſhouled out from the reſt of the worlde; yet are wee come by ſucceſſion into the roome and place of the Iewes. For God hath receiued vs into his Church, and we are at this day in the ſame degree of honour which the children of Abraham were in. Seeing it is ſo, he which ſtealeth away a man nowadayes, to cut him off from the Church of God, is in as great fault as he who in old time ſold any one of the Iſraelits. And although earthly iuſtice hath eſtabliſhed no lawe againſt it, yet doth it not ceaſe to be a grieuous ſinne ſtil in the ſight of God. Let vs therefore acknowledge the honor which God vouchſafeth vs, when he maketh vs of the number of his houſhold, & taketh & aloweth vs for his childrē. Now foraſmuch as this is an ineſtimable benefit, we muſt endeuour to the vtmoſt of our power to preſerue and keep it: and yͭ not euery one for himſelfe only; but for his neighbors alſo. Therfore when we ſee yͭ God hath aſſembled & gathered together any company of people to himſelfe, let vs ſeeke to keepe them ſo together, as none of thē may go aſtray. And if we be a cauſe and occaſion that yͤ congregation of God bee deminiſhed, and yͭ hee which was ſometime of it, be eſtraunged from it by our meanes; we ſee what puniſhment yͤ lawe hath ordained. As touching yͤ outward policie and ciuil order, it remaineth not, yet neuertheles God hath declared yͭ ſuch lewdnes ſhall not abide vnpuniſhed. For he wil at yͤ leaſt haue as great regard vnto his houſe, as euery of vs woulde haue vnto our own houſes. And therfore let vs learne by all meanes poſſible to keepe thē ſtil which are of Gods flock, and to ſtay men as much as we cā from departing from yͤ ſame. Yea and we knowe how we be commanded not only to nouriſh thē which are already begotten the children of god, but alſo to do our indeuor to win thē which are ſtraungers: what wickednes then were it to turne thē out, which are alredy receiued vnto yͤ church of God? I meane thoſe which in very deede doe ſhew & declare thēſelues to be yͤ children of god. For we know yͭ there is a regard to be had, yͭ al tag & rag be not receiued into yͤ church. For there are many which ſeeke after Chriſt to haue their bodily eaſe, & there are many deceiuers: and if there be no diſcretion in receiuing thē in, it were altogether a mocking of god; as we haue too many examples in this caſe. Therfore we haue need of wiſedom in this behalf. Neuertheles if we thorowe a cruelty, or wickednes, doe diminiſh the church of god, we muſt render an accoūt therof, and yͭ not as for ſom ſmal fault, but for ſo weighty a crime as we ſee God accounteth it, and as the paine which he ordained vnder the law of Moſes, declareth it to be.

Yet notwithſtanding wee finde many who for their owne profites ſake doe in this ſort diſſeuer their neighbors & cut thē off from yͤ Church of God. We ſee what marchādiſe of ſoules is made by them which ſeeke (as it ſeemeth) nothing els but to rent yͤ world: and many are not contented to ſteale their neighbours away, but they ſteale themſelues too. For al they who for their tēporal & tranſitory profite, do turne aſide and wͭdrawe themſelues from yͤ ſeruice of God, commit they not I beſeech you this theft wherof I now ſpeak? There is one which belongeth vnto yͤ body of yͤ church, God hath vouchſafed him yͤ grace to cal him vnto yͤ knowledge of his truth; & what doth he? Becauſe yͭ nowadayes he which is knowen to be a faithful mā is perſecuted in yͤ world, it were better to ſhrowd himſelf in a corner, thā to make a ſhew & countenāce of any thing: he reaſoneth thus wͭ himſelf: what? Shal I take in hand ſo hard a thing? And is there any other likelihood but yͭ in yͤ end I ſhalbe put beſide my liuing & my life? O this were too heauy a burdē for me to beare. Now he beareth himſelf in hand yͭ he is ſo excuſed. And thus mē ſteale thēſelues away, both frō god & from his church. They make marchādiſe & ſale of their own ſoules, as it were for a meſſe of potage, as it is ſaid of Eſau: that is to ſay, for Gen.25.32. earthly foode they ſel themſelues & become the bondſlaues of ſatan. And ſo we ſee yͭ this lawe is nowadays very ill kept; and therefore we ought ſo much yͤ more to note the intent & meaning of God, to the end yͭ euery man after that god hath vouchſafed him yͤ grace to gather him into the number of his people, may keep himſelf among them: and yͤ better to maintaine yͤ libertie which wee haue, let vs conſider (as S. Paul ſaith) howe dearely it hath coſt the ſon of God: let vs not enter againe into the bondage of ſatan and of ſin, Rom.6.17. 1.Cor.7.23. ſeeing we are freed thence by the bloude of the only ſonne of God; but let vs walke according vnto that priuiledge which god hath giuen vnto vs, and hold faſt the poſſeſſion therof as long as we liue. And when euerie of vs ſhall haue had ſuch a regarde of himſelfe, let vs doe the like towardes all our brethren, that they whom God hath ioyned vnto vs depart not out of his houſe: but let vs ſo imploy our paines as euery of vs may keepe his eſtate, that none bee diminiſhed, that none wander nor go aſtray. And farther let vs be afraid to make marchandiſe of thoſe ſoules which haue beene redeemed by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt with ſo deare a price, and let vs not ſeeke after our owne commoditie in that behalfe, as we ſee howe retchleſly many giue themſelues ouer in this point, and ſo they may finde the fatter fare, they care not one whit whether they remaine in the Church of God or no. Euen in this citie without ſeeking any farther, we haue examples hereof, namely yͭ men haue bin ſold for redy mony: inſomuch yͭ for yͤ pleaſure of a drunkard or I know not of whō, one hath bin ſold as an open marchādiſe, to yͤ ſame wickednes: ſuch leaudnes hath bin ſeene heere at Geneua. But let vs not take this example for a two or three: but let vs know yͭ God ment in this place to giue a general rule and inſtruction, that wee ought aſmuch as lieth in vs to ſeeke and procure, yͭ they which are of the body of the Church may remaine therein euen vnto yͤ end. Ye ſee in effect what we haue to beare in mind. And if the liberty of yͤ bodies was held ſo deare of God in yͤ time of yͤ lawe, let vs at this day make far greater account of yͤ freedome which our ſoules haue obtained, by the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Let vs come now vnto yͤ ſecond law which is mētioned in this place. It is ſaid: That men ſhal diligētly iudge of the leproſie, and take heede thereof, obſeruing all the things which were commanded in the lawe: & that the prieſts of the ſtock of Leuie ſhalbe Iudges, & that the people ſhall ſtand to the iudgement which they ſhal giue: which they ſhall giue I ſay, not as they luſt themſelues, but as God had made a declaratiō thereof, as we may ſee in Leuiticus from yͤ thirteenth chapter to yͤ fifteenth, where it is fully treted of. Moſes in this place ſpeaketh of it as by yͤ way, and ſaith that they ſhal keepe al yͤ order. And for more ample confirmatiō he addeth: Remember what G O D did vnto Marie by the way when ye came out of Egypt. For becauſe Marie & Aaron murmured againſt their brother Moſes Numb.12. for his wiues ſake who was an Aethiopian; they bare themſelues in hand that they ought to bee aduanced in as high a degree as hee: inſomuch that Mary became ſo arrogant & preſumptuous, that ſhee would needs be a Prophetiſe in equall degree with Moſes. But God puniſheth her for ſuch preſumption: Aaron is born withal although he had in like ſort deſerued to be chaſtiſed. Mary therfore was ſtriken with the leproſie, and was ſhut vp by yͤ ſpace of ſeuen dayes. And there ſhe had bin like a rotten carrion all her life long but that Moſes prayed for her, & her ſin was pardoned. Neuertheleſſe he addeth there: If her father had ſpit in her face, ſhe ought to haue hiddē her ſelf for hauing offended him: & therefore ſhe muſt depart (ſaith he) from among yͤ people, that men may know the offence which ſhe hath committed, and at yͤ end of ſeuen days let her returne into yͤ campe. Now God declareth by this example, that ſuch as were ſtriken with this diſeaſe, were ſhut vp.

Now let vs firſt of al note, yͭ the leproſie wherof Moſes ſpeaketh in this place, and which yͤ law treateth of, is not yͭ which we cal yͤ leproſy nowa days: but a far diuerſe thing from it. For this leproſie was not only in yͤ bodies of men & womē, but alſo in houſes. And although we find yͭ other coūtries & nations were touched ſomtimes wͭ this 2.King.5.10 diſeaſe, as we ſee how Naaman yͤ Syrian was, yet was it neuertheles as a particular diſeaſe belonging only to yͤ Iewes: and yͭ was a notable vengeance of God vpon them, to declare his anger & wrath by ſending foorth this leproſie as a viſible ſigne & tokē therof. Ye ſee then what we haue to beare in mind in yͤ firſt place. And yͭ verily which among yͤ Papiſts men call yͤ diſeaſe of S. Mayn or yͤ ſcurfe, was a kind of this leproſie. There were in deed many ſorts of this diſeaſe, as a man may ſee by yͤ place which I haue alledged. And I ſpeak no more of them in this place, than is expedient for the vnderſtanding of the text, and not to make therof any great leſſon. But yet neuertheles it is needefull for vs to obſerue yͭ which I haue touched as it ſhalbe anon more fully declared. Now then we ſee what the leproſie was: to wit, a certaine ſkurfe or ſomtimes a ſpot in the body which had no outward appearance of ſkurfe vpon it: but was a certaine hid and inward diſeaſe, as it were a certaine ſcab within the fleſh, wherin appeared ſome whitenes. Seeing that yͤ leproſie was after yͭ ſort, we ſee nowe that God had a regard of the inſtructing of his people, when hee would haue them which were touched with this diſeaſe, ſet apart from the reſt. And why? Euen to yͤ end yͭ men ſhold be in greater feare of yͤ puniſhment, which was knowen to proceede from the hand of God. If this chaſtiſement had ſlipt away without any account made thereof, it could not haue profited ſo much. God therefore to yͤ intent hee might make this chaſtiſement more notorious, ſtraitly commaunded yͭ hee which was ſtriken with the leproſie, ſhould be ſhut vp, and yͭ he ſhold ſerue for a looking glaſſe for others to look in, yͭ they might bee afraide at yͤ ſight of it & ſay, Alas, ſee ye this poore wretch which is ſtriken wͭ the leproſie? And what ſigne is it? It is god yͭ hath wrought it, his hād hath done it; Alas, euery one of vs hath deſerued aſmuch, and therefore let vs not tempt yͤ patience of our God: if hee ſpare vs, let vs for our part ceaſe to prouoke him to anger. Ye ſee then yͤ admonition & warning which was giuen vnto all mē whē they ſaw a man thus ſhut vp. And this order was obſerued euen as farre as vnto yͤ king himſelf, as we haue an example therof in Ozias, who being not content with yͤ kingdome, would be a prieſt & vſurpe yͤ ſpirituall regiment of the Church, and therfore God ſtrake 2.Chro.2. him with yͤ leproſie, & depoſed him from his roial dignity, and he was according vnto yͤ law ſhut vp all yͤ time of his life. There was yet a ſeconde reaſon of this ſhutting vp. For this diſeaſe might be contagious. And therfore Gods wil was that yͤ infection therof ſhould be remoued from yͤ people, to yͤ intent yͭ al ſhould not be infected with it. But yͤ principall cauſe was, to the end yͤ people might be put in mind, yͭ they ought to be remoued from vncleaneſſe, and from all manner of defilements. And yͭ is the cauſe alſo why yͤ iudging of the leproſie was giuen vnto yͤ prieſts, who were of yͤ ſtocke of Leuy. God appointed not the phiſitions nor ſurgeans iudges, but he wold haue the prieſts take a notice of yͤ leproſie. And if any were ſpotted therewͭ, they had autority to reiect them: & if any were healed thereof, he was likewiſe receiued by thē. For albeit yͭ this diſeaſe was hardly & ſeldom cured, yet was it not incurable. Therfore if ſo be yͭ any were healed, the prieſts were Iudges of it, & when they which were healed preſented themſelues, & had done certain ſolemnities which were required in yͭ behalfe, they came and offered their preſent in the temple, acknowledging what a ſingular benefite God had beſtowed on them. For when a man was healed of that diſeaſe, it was very behoouefull yͭ he ſhoulde make a ſolemne acknowledgment of ſo great a benefite, and ſay: Lorde thou haſt raiſed mee as it were from the deade: for I was a wretched and miſerable carrion; thou hadeſt thruſt mee out of all companie, and nowe behold Lord thou haſt made me whole and ſound, thou haſt reſtored mee vnto my former eſtate: therefore I acknowledge Lorde, that I haue receiued a kinde of reſurrection, conſidering what weakenes & frailtie was in me. It was (I ſay) behoouefull that ſuch a ſolemne acknowledgement ſhould be made. But (as I haue tolde you) the prieſtes were Iudges of this diſeaſe. And why? Becauſe it appertained vnto the ceremonies of the lawe.

Now here we haue to gather a good inſtruction, that is, that firſt although this order of excluding thoſe from our companie which are ſtriken with any euil diſeaſe be not obſerued nowadays, yet notwithſtanding wee muſt not ceaſe to haue an eye vnto the hand of God, that we may fare yͤ better by al yͤ chaſtiſements which he layeth vpon men; neither muſt any of vs waite till he feele the blowes himſelf, but he muſt make his profite by yͤ correctiõs which our Lord ſheweth vs afar off. And therfore when we ſee any of our neighbors afflicted, let vs take a view of our ſelues, and of our own faults, and let vs iudge our ſelues before yͭ God iudge vs. And thereupon being ſorie for our ſins, let vs haſten to draw our ſelues out of them, and not ſtay vntill God viſite vs in the like maner. This is the thing which wee haue to note as touching yͤ firſt point. And for aſmuch as we ſee that God ment to waken yͤ Iewes to yͤ intent they ſhould the better know how to benefite themſelues by this chaſtiſement of yͤ leproſie, let vs nowadayes in all diſeaſes, not onely in this or that ſicknes, but in all afflictions which God ſendeth vs, know yͭ it is all one as if he gaue vs a warning not to ſleepe in our ſins, and not to abuſe his patience. Lo what we haue to beare in mind.

Now as touching yͤ ceremony it hath bin very fondly & fooliſhly abuſed in yͤ Popedome, & the abuſe therof raigneth in yͤ ſynagogue yet ſtil to this day. Firſt, for that hearing yͤ name of leproſie, they ſuppoſed it was yͤ ſcurfe, and ſo haue taken the one for the other. And therupon what haue they done? Forſooth their officers muſt iudge of this diſeaſe, whether any be touched wͭ it or no. And by what knowledge? They ſende to the barbers and to the phiſitians, and when they haue iudged therof, then they themſelues afterward giue their verdit. And by what right? Becauſe god ordained yͤ prieſts to be Iudges of yͤ leproſie. That is true. But yͤ prieſts, whom God orned were of yͤ ſtocke of Leuie. Now ſince yͤ comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, this Prieſthoode Hebr.5.5. hath beene transferred vnto him: as the Apoſtle ſaith in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. I know the Papiſts are ſo ſhameles yͭ they ſtick not to mock God openly, in ſaying that it came from Leuie vnto the Pope. But the Apoſtle expreſly declareth, yͭ it belongeth vnto him, who by a ſolemne oth was appointed according vnto the order of Melchiſedech. And becauſe our lord Ieſus Chriſt being now riſen from the deade dieth no more; the prieſthood likewiſe muſt remaine vnto him in his own perſon, & he hath no ſucceſſour. The Papiſts therfore rob Chriſt of his dignity, when they ſnatch in ſuch wiſe vnto themſelues, that which is belonging vnto him. And moreouer let vs note (as I haue already touched) yͭ they play the beaſts ouergroſſly in this point: for god ſpake of the leproſie which was a diſeaſe which he ſent vpon the people of Iſrael, and they transfer it to the ſcurfe, a thing far different from it. But for al this, they haue not left to reare vp an other tyranny: for they ſay yͭ this is a ceremonial lawe: I grant it. Therfore it importeth a figure. Al this is true. We muſt come then now vnto the trueth & ſubſtance which is correſpõdent therunto. They ſay that ſinne is the leproſie. Well let all this bee graunted vnto them. It muſt be purged therfore (ſay they) & the prieſts muſt be Iudges of it. Yea but let them enter into the place of Ieſus Chriſt, and then ſhall they be taken for Iudges: but vntill that Ieſus Chriſt be depoſed from his prieſtly dignity, which God his father gaue him, it appertaineth not vnto any liuing creature in the whole worlde. Wee muſt therefore conclude, that the Papiſts are trecherous traitours in that they beare vs in hande that they are ſucceeded in the roome of Ieſus Chriſt, to iudge the ſpirituall leproſie. And hereupon they haue ordained the law of Chriſt. That is the very ground of their confeſſion or ſhrift. For there is not one worde for it in the holy ſcripture: but they vſe this ſuttle cauilling: Sinne is the leproſie, & the prieſtes muſt bee Iudges of it, but we are prieſts, therefore the iudging is ours. But wee haue alreadie ſhewed that by vſurping the prieſthood, they are theeues and treacherous traitours, and that they lift themſelues vp againſt the ſonne of God. Take that for one note. But let vs proceede farther. A man cannot iudge (ſay they) without hee knowe the cauſe; and the cauſe cannot bee knowen, without there bee a confeſſion of the ſinne; and therefore it followeth that euery one is bound to confeſſe his ſinnes once a yeare. For al are ſtained with this ſpiritual leproſie, becauſe al are ſinners. As touching that which they ſay, that no mã can iudge except he know the cauſe, it is true: but he muſt not iudge by coniectures & vpon vncertainty, as they doe. For I pray you, iudge they vpon knowledge, when they cannot skill to diſcerne whether they which confeſſe themſelues in their eares diſſemble, with them or ſpeak the truth? Behold, a man commeth to confeſſion, and who knoweth what his minde or will is? Who knoweth any of theſe thinges, whether he mocke the prieſt or no; whether he ſpeaketh any thing by conſtraint, whether he keepe any thing cloſe for ſhame that he hath of it? What knowe they of all theſe thinges? And therefore theſe Popiſh Prieſtes cannot iudge vpon knowledge of the cauſe. Againe it is well knowen how great clerks they be: inſomuch that when a thing is told them; they can hardly diſcerne either the thing it ſelfe or the end or qualitie thereof. And though they coulde, yet were not that ynough: Men know what maner of Iudges & howe competent they be. And in very deede they ſay well, that in confeſſion there muſt be ſome degree of knowledge: but a little after they ſay, that it skilleth not greatly whether there be any or no; for autority abideth ſtill, albeit that knowledge bee wanting: they gainſay themſelues manifeſtly, for firſt they ſay that there muſt bee a degree of knowledge, and afterwardes they ſay that it is not ſo neceſſarie, but that they may forbeare it. And a mans eye may bee witneſſe, howe they diſcharge themſelues heerein. It followeth then that they cannot haue knowledge of the cauſe, at leaſtwiſe ſuch lawful knowledge, as may ſuffice them to giue their verdict and iudgement thereuppon. But to ſpeake in a word, theſe abuſes of theirs are ouer vaine and childiſh, when they ſeek after ſuch ſottiſh reaſons as to ſay: We are Iudges: for wee are the ſucceſſours of the prieſts of the law. But this ſucceſſion (as I haue tolde you) appertaineth to none but vnto our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And in verie deed the prieſthood of Leuie was ordayned to continue vntill his appearance in this world. And for that cauſe Gen.14.20. Abraham alſo who was the father of the church, payed tythes to him in the perſon of Melchiſedech. For when he offered the tenthes to Melchiſedech, hee offered them as it were vnto his ſuperiour, But Leuy was yet in the loynes of Abraham (as the Apoſtle ſaieth): whereby we ſee that the prieſthood of Leuie was inferiour vnto the prieſthood of Ieſus Chriſt, or rather, was nothing in compariſon of it, & that the prieſthood of Melchiſedech muſt returne againe in truth.

But now hauing declared this ſo groſſe abuſe which raigneth in the Popedome, let vs returne vnto the right and pure inſtruction which God ment to giue vnto vs in this lawe. Wee haue already briefly declared how hee meant to warne the faithfull, that they ought to purge away all manner of defilements from among them. Wee haue not at this day the outward ceremony: but the ſubſtance and trueth thereof remaineth in his full force. Let vs therefore looke diligently vnto our ſelues, and remoue from vs all vncleanneſſe, to the intent we be not ſtained with it: For whereunto had God reſpect in this Lawe. And to this ende ſerueth excommunication nowadays: for God wil haue ſome diſcipline in his Church. And this is not ordained by mẽ: but yͤ holy Ghoſt hath deliuered a rule for it. If wee haue this order, it is grounded on God, we haue the truth of the ceremoniall Lawe. And wee haue no neede to ſeek farther after the pelting traſh of the Papiſtes, whereby they make themſelues a laughingſtocke to the worlde: but farther beſides this order of excommunication, wee are warned in generall not to intermedle our ſelues with any filthie defilements: for we ſhall ſoone be ſtained by them. We ſee what frailtie is in vs, ſo that although euery of vs keepe good watch & warde, yet can we not liue in the worlde among ſo many defilementes and corruptions; but wee ſhall draw ſome ſpotting from them: and the iniquities which raigne, are as deadly poyſons to infect vs, except we withdraw our ſelues far from ſuch filthines, that wee be not ſtayned by them. And that is the cauſe why it is purpoſely repeated in this place, Take heede, looke narrowly vnto it, obſerue it diligently. It ſeemeth that many words are beſtowed vpon a thing of no great importance. But God tendeth vnto this ende which wee haue ſaide, that men ſhould not thorow their little heede taking, be as it were limed with the defilements of this worlde. And by this outward order, he ment to inure thẽ to a more diligent watching euery one ouer himſelfe. Let vs therefore giue diligent heede heereunto, and when we perceiue that we are in daunger of being depraued and corrupted by any mans company, let vs flie farre from it: for albeit I goe not and welter in wickedneſſe with him; yet ſhall I haue ynough and too much too in my ſelfe. And what a thing were it for me to tempt God? I ſee well that I cannot be but the worſe by this or by that mans company, and yet for all that, I will not ſhun them; but I will goe welter and wallow in the mire with them: and what a notable wickedneſſe were this? Am not I worthie to be infected with their filthines and vncleanneſſe? Yes verily. And therefore let vs in generall knowe, that all wicked examples, and all offences, are to be remoued and raked out of yͤ Church of God, & that yͤ diſcipline which God hath ordained, & which we ſee that the Apoſtles vſed, muſt be pra- 1.Cor.5.5. ctiſed, that is, excommunication muſt raigne & beare rule. And moreouer let euery of vs in his owne behalfe, take heede, wee haunt no wicked company, but (as S. Paul warneth vs) obſerue and 2.Theſſ.3.14 note them which are ſtained with any euil blot, and withdraw our ſelues from them: that it may not onely put them to greater ſhame, but alſo, yͭ the infection breake not out vpon al, & that the miſchiefe being of it ſelfe contagious, go not ſo far, as to infect them who before were pure and cleare, & ſo fall on the whole flocke of God. And this is it which we haue to beare in mind in this place.

And now Moſes for a more ample confirmation (as wee haue already touched) alleageth in this place yͤ example of his ſiſter. And hereby we are done to vnderſtand, that he ſpareth not his own ſtocke & kindred. For it was to his owne infamy & reproch, that his ſiſter had bin thus chaſtiſed of God. But what? Both in this & in al other things, we ſee, that he wold not couer yͤ ſhame & filthines of his own lynage. For why? Hee was a true and faithful ſeruant of god. And therfore he always condemneth wickednes with great liberty, although ſome ſhame redoũded therby, both to himſelf, & alſo to his parentage. Therefore in this place he ſetteth forth his owne ſiſter for an example. And hereby wee are warned, not to bee won to beare with wickednes in fauour either of bloud, or of kindred; as wee are accuſtomablie wont to do. For we had rather haue the wickednes encreaſe, than to grieue any of our kinſmen or friends. And therof it commeth yͭ all right is peruerted, and yͭ the truth is turned into a lie, becauſe yͤ wickednes is borne withall. But wee haue in this place an example to yͤ contrary, that is, yͭ Moſes to ſerue God yͤ more faithfully, hath no reſpect of perſons, he hath no eye to any worldly cõſiderations: inſomuch that euen when his own ſiſter might ſerue for yͤ inſtruction of yͤ people, he ſpareth her not. Let this be noted for one point.

Now by yͤ way we may behold in yͤ example of Aaron & of Marie, how God ment therby yͤ better to confirme yͤ calling of Moſes. For Aaron enuieth him for it. That which before fell out in yͤ caſe of Core, Dathan, and Abiram, and yͤ reſt of Numb.16.

the tribes,when euery man ſought to obtaine yͤ prieſthood, was no ſuch ſtraunge or notorious a thing as is this,when his owne borne brother riſeth againſt him on the one ſide,and his ſiſter on the other, and murmure againſt him: whereby we may ſee that there was no compact made for the aduancing of the dignity of his owne houſe: and therfore it ſerued the better to authoriſe the calling of Moſes. And in very deed God ſhewed that it was he who conducted and defended him. That is to be noted for one point.

Againe,what a mercifull dealing was it,that yͤ children of Aaron were ſuffered to ſucceede ſtill in the prieſthood?For although Moſes was much more great and excellent than Aaron was(as it is declared in the 12.Chapt. of yͤ booke of numbers) : yet his children were of the common order of yͤ Leuites which ſerued yͤ high prieſt, and were kept far from that dignity. And what was yͤ reaſon hereof? If Moſes had promoted his owne children,it would haue bin ſaide by and by, that he had brought this to paſſe through his craftie wilines,& that he had pretended yͤ name of God onely for to aduance yͤ dignitie and honor of his owne houſe:but in yͭ his own children are in this wiſe diſplaced, and yͤ children of Aaron are preferred: wee ſee it is Gods worke,and that it proceedeth from his gouernment, ſo as the mouth of wicked mē muſt needs be ſtopped,and that all muſt confeſſe yͭ the law and whatſoeuer it containeth,is not forged nor counterfaited by men,or ſuttlely deuiſed: but that God is the author thereof. As touching Moſes it is ſaid in that place of Numb.12.6. Numbers:If I ſpeake vnto my ſeruants the Prophets,I will ſpeake vnto them by dreames or by viſions: becauſe that Aaron & Mary ſaid:What? dwelleth not yͤ ſpirit of god in vs aſwel as in Moſes?And muſt he alonely beare rule?And are we no bodie? Well(ſaith God)if you were yͤ greateſt Prophets that euer were,yet keep I one meaſure towards my Prophets. I ſpeake vnto them by dreames & by viſions.But I ſpeake vnto Moſes as vnto my familiar friend; I ſpeake vnto him as a man would ſpeak vnto his fellow & companion. And ſo Moſes was aduaunced to an higher degree,and God ment to magnifie his grace & fauour in yͤ man.Therefore we ſee how he diſgraced both Mary and Aarō,becauſe they murmured in that ſort: but yet for all that,yee ſee that yͤ children of Aaron ſucceeded in the prieſthood, although their father was vnworthy of yͤ honor, and deſerued rather to be degraded, than to en-
Num.16,31. ioy it. What befell to Core , Dathan & Abiram? The earth ſwallowed them vp al aliue.And why? Becauſe of their murmuring. And had not Aarō committed yͤ like fault? And yet notwithſtāding God pardoneth him yͤ ſinne.And when we heare
1.Sam.2.30. that the children of Elie were depoſed from the prieſthood,and yͭ the dignitie therof was beſtowed vpō Samuel,becauſe they behaued thēſelues ſo euilly in their office: yͭ is alſo a like example. And why then doth not God yͤ like vnto yͤ ſtocke of Aaron? Let vs(as I tolde you)acknowledge in this caſe a meruailous mercy of God.Yea,and againe when it ſeemeth good vnto him, he puniſheth faults rigorouſly. If he will pardon them: it is at his choice. Therefore we muſt not binde God to any Law, to haue him to puniſh ſins according vnto our luſting:he will doe it when hee ſhall find it good. And moreouer if it pleaſe him to vſe mercy, ſuch ſins as are committed ſhalbe wiped out;at leaſtwiſe they ſhal not be ſo hardly nor ſo grieuouſly puniſhed.That is to bee noted for one point. But let vs nowe returne to apply yͤ example of yͤ preſent matter which is treated,to yͤ end we may know yͤ intent & meaning of god. Remember(ſaith he)what was done vnto Mary by yͤ way when ye came out of Epypt,as if he had ſaid,my minde is that who ſo is ſtriken with the leproſie,ſhalbe ſeparated and remoued from the people,to the intent hee may ſerue for a looking glaſſe for others,that they which ſee him may be put in mind to ſay: ſee here a plague which God hath ſent, beholde a teſtimony yͭ God is Iudge. Seeing this is his appointment,let vs fare yͤ better by ſuch examples.So we ſee yͭ which I declared more plainly afore,to wit,that God meant yͭ this withdrawing and reiecting of ſuch as were leprous,ſhold ſerue for a common inſtruction & leſſon vnto yͤ reſt of yͤ people,to occaſion them to walke in their dueties in all feare & heedfulnes. And here firſt of al Marie was taught to humble her ſelfe before God.For if ſhe would not knowe her fault & be aſhamed of it, & confes it,ſhe deſerued to be cleane cut off without any remiſſion.And God had begun to work ſo violent a correction, that ſhe ſeemed but a carrion & rottennes , and was changed in a moment in ſuch ſort, that a man would think ſhe could not but fall in pieces through ſuch an infectious filth & rottennes.And therefore it ſtood her in hand to knowe her own caſe.And hereby we are warned,yͭ when any of vs are viſited by yͤ hand of God, it is high time to humble our ſelues,and to know yͭ it is all one,as if God did ſpit in our face.When a father ſpitteth in his childs face,it is a ſigne(as it is ſaide there)yͭ he deteſteth him. Now if ſo be we be afflicted by yͤ hand of God,we haue great occaſion to looke vnto our ſelues, & to be beaten down & to feele our own filthines, & not to feele it onely in hart:but alſo frankly to confes it before men,to yͤ end yͭ God may be glorified. That is one thing which we haue to do according to yͤ exhortation which we haue in this place. And ſecondly let vs be willing to ſerue other for an example.If when we haue offended God , he chaſtiſe vs; let vs be an inſtruction vnto others,and let vs beare it patiently,and not be grieued with it,if ſo be that al may turne vnto the glorie of God and the welfare of our neighbors. Let vs be contented with it, as good reaſon is we ſhold be. For we may not be more priuiledged than the ſiſter of Moſes, & if we be rubbed on the gall (as we ſay) wee may not grue at it, ſeeing that Moſes ſpared not his own ſiſter. For when God taketh on him the office of a Iudge, and giueth men commiſſion to denounce his wrath or other like thinges by his worde , it is good reaſon that they ſhoulde diſcharge their duties in that behalfe. As for them which think thus;We our ſelues ſhalbe hindered thereby,let them know yͭ it ſhal profite them nothing to ſeeke to auoid it in that wiſe:for if they breake the ordinance of God, they ſhalbe confounded. Therfore ſith we ſee ſo notable an example in the perſon of Marie, let vs knowe that God ment to warne vs, that we ought not to take it in euill part to be chaſtiſed at his hand: but rather to know our faults and to be ſorie for them, and thereupon to endeuor that the puniſhment which we haue ſuffered, may ſerue all others for an example.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſty of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs to feele them better than we haue done, & that we may endeuor w̄ all our might, not only to keepe our ſelues in that holy vnion which he hath made with vs, but alſo to win them which are yet eſtraunged, and to confirme thoſe which are already called with vs into his Church: and that therwithal we may not ſuffer the name of our God to be vnhallowed, but endeuour to remoue our ſelues from all filthes and defilementes, that ſeeing it hath pleaſed him to ſanctifie vs for himſelfe, wee may remaine temples of his holy ſpirite, and ſacred veſſels to be applied vnto any vſe whereunto he hath appointed vs, that is, that his righteouſnes may ſhine in vs, ſo as wee may neuer deſire any other thing than to frame our ſelues in all points vnto the obeying of his holy lawe. That it will pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely vnto vs but alſo vnto all people and Nations of &c.

On Wedneſday the v. of Februarie, 1556.

The Cxxxix. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the foure & twentith Chapter.

10 When thou lendeſt any thing vnto thy neighbour, thou ſhalt not enter into his houſe to take his pledge.

11 But thou ſhalt abide without, and the man which borroweth of thee, ſhall bring the pledge out of the doores vnto thee.

12 And if the man be poore, thou ſhalt not ſleepe with his pledge:

12 But ſhalt reſtore him the pledge when the ſunne goeth downe, that he may ſleepe in his raiment and bleſſe thee, and it ſhalbe righteouſneſſe vnto thee before the Lord thy God.

WE muſt call to minde in this place, the ſentence of the Prophet which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt alſo alleageth: Oſe.6.7. Matt.9.13. Mercie is more worth than ſacrifices. For if we think to pay God by offering him this or that which we haue ſpoyled from our neighbours, he will deteſt and abhorre both vs and our offerings alſo. For why? God will not chaunge his nature according vnto our luſt: and there is nothing more properly belonging vnto him than kindneſſe and goodneſſe. For hee indeede is the very fountaine and roote of it. And therefore ſeeing it is ſo, muſt he not either transfigure himſelfe, or deteſt vs, when hee ſhall ſee vs as cruell as wilde beaſtes, ſo as euery of vs endeuoureth nought elſe but to deuour the ſubſtance and goods of his brother? Yes verelie. For he cannot like of cruelty as long as he abideth like vnto himſelfe. Let vs therefore diligently note, that except wee be pitifull, except wee haue compaſſion on them which ſtande in neede of our aide to ſuccour them, except we vſe gentlenes and humanity towards our brethren, we can haue no acceſſe vnto our God, but al the offerings we can preſent him withall, ſhal ſtinke in his ſight, and he will refuſe them. And that is the cauſe why the Prophet expreſly ſaith: That mercie is better than all the ſacrifices in the worlde. True it is indeede that God ſetteth more by his owne honour than hee doeth by the life of men: as reaſon good hee ſhoulde ſo. But here the caſe ſtandeth, to know whether we ſerue God truely or hypocritically. For if I loue God, doubtleſſe I will declare this loue of mine towards them which beare his ymage: and wee muſt haue recourſe vnto that which ſainct Iohn ſaieth: 1.Ioh.4.20. That if when we dwel with men and liue together with them, wee beare them no loue, is it not plaine mockerie to proteſt that wee loue GOD, whome wee ſee not? Therfore all ſuch as vaunt themſelues, that they loue God, and yet are ſo ful of crueltie that they wil ſpoile poore folkes of whatſoeuer they can poſſiblie catch from them, without all pitie or compaſſion; are no better than hypocrites & ſhameleſſe lyers. And ſo we ſee the reaſon of this ſentence, and why God, albeit hee priſeth his honour highly, hath ſaide notwithſtanding, that he will not eſteeme ſo much of all the ſacrifices which men make vnto him: as he will do of the mercie which men ſhewe one vnto an other. For indeede our almeſdeedes are thoſe ſweete ſmelling ſacrifices, which God accepteth: Hebr.13.16. as the Apoſtle ſaith in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. And heereuppon is that lawe of God which wee haue nowe hearde, grounded; where it is ſaide: That if wee lende monie vnto a poore man, wee muſt not goe and ranſacke his houſe to finde out a pledge for our owne liking, but that he muſt bring that which hee hath. And then we may keepe the pledge without doing of him any wrong. And why ſo? For God permitteth vs ſo to doe: If not, hee will haue them to carie backe againe the gage which the poore man brought, as for example: if it be his bed whereon hee ſleepeth, or his couerlet,or his coate,or his gowne, ſo that hee remaineth naked & vnclothed,God wil not haue vs to keepe ſuch a pledge. For when wee haue confeſſed that wee ought in deede to be pitifull, and that wee are farre from beeing of the number of the children of God if we vſe no brotherly loue one towards another:when we haue ſaid all this: yet wee know not what the thing meaneth, when we ſhould come vnto the practiſe of it. For if any ſtande in neede of our helpe,wee haue forgotten this generall doctrine: Wee are alwayes good diuines to ſpeake in the ayre . If a man ſet vs down a doctrine which preſſeth vs not, euery man is readie to yeeld his conſent thereunto,but the practiſe thereof ſheweth that we bee verie loath to accorde vnto it. And although wee confeſſe that God hath wel ſpoken; yet wee will not put that in practiſe which is tolde vs, if it preiudice our gayne and commoditie; and therefore GOD is faine to ſpecifie things vnto vs more particularly . When hee hath once declared that there is nothing more acceptable vnto him, than the pitie which wee haue on our neighbours to ſuccour and relieue them,he muſt point foorth ſome ſpeciall kindes therof with his finger: and when he hath taught vs to bee mercifull,hee muſt ſhew vs how and in what maner,& ſo condemne our crueltie,which we(if it were poſſible) would excuſe. As for example,if this ſo ſpecial a declaration ſhould not be made, the ſentence of the Prophet would be receiued without any gainſaying, That mercie is better than ſacrifices: but none for all that will come to this point, & to this reaſon,that a man muſt not take ſuch a pledge of a poore man, as he ſhall account neceſſarie for his owne vſe. For men will ſay: Is this any crueltie? He commeth to borrow of mee, and I may deny him if I liſted: but if I doe him ſuch a pleaſure as to lend him my money:I wil haue ſome aſſurance for it. And ſo a mã wil not acknowledge it to be crueltie to take any mans coat or couering to gage.It will be alwayes ſayde,Why?I may lawfully doe it. For I lende him my money, and it may bee gaynfull vnto him: I leaue him the whole profite of it,I deſire but to ſaue my ſelfe harmleſſe, and not to looſe the principal.I deceiue him not of a farthing: I take no vſurie for my money,nor any thing at all: and why then ſhould I be condemned? Thus men woulde excuſe themſelues. But what? God will bee the Iudge of our dealings.Yee ſee then the cauſe(as I haue told you) why God preſſeth vs to a ſpeciall poynt:becauſe the generall doctrine is ouer coldly taken of vs, and woulde not leade vs ſo farre as were requiſite . Let vs therefore beare in minde that which is here declared. Firſt it is ſayde: That a man ſhall not goe and ranſacke his neighbours houſe to take a pledge from thence , when hee woulde lende him a peece of money. Nowe the cauſe why this is ſpoken, is not onely (as ſome haue thought)for that it were a putting of poore men to ſhame, to goe and ſee howe naked their whole houſe is: God had no regarde of any ſuch thing: but hee meant rather to brydle the couetous deſires of the riche. For wee knowe howe couetous our eyes are to drawe thinges away, and euery man is verye ſharpe ſighted for his owne profite. If I enter into an houſe, I will haue an eye by and by on all the fayreſt thinges: and when I haue requeſted to haue this and that corner ſhewed mee; if I ſee any thing which liketh mee, I beginne to ſay: This is good houſholde ſtuffe:yea this will ſtande mee in ſteede. I will haue it (ſay I); and the poore man cannot tell what to anſwere: for hee is at my mercie. If hee denie it; O (ſay I) there is no dealing with you: goe your wayes : it is no pitie to helpe you. And thus a poore man ſhall bee helde as it were vppon the racke. Yee ſee then the meaning of this lawe, when our Lorde forbad a man to enter into his neighbours houſe to ranſacke it for a pledge. For why? He which entreth cannot iudge what the poore man, which deſireth to bee ſuccoured might beſt ſpare: but lucre (as I told you) blindeth vs ; and when wee bee once forepoſſeſſed with ſuch deſire , wee iudge no longer what is rightfull, becauſe euery of vs will conclude : O I muſt aske this. And why? Becauſe it will bee good for mee. Wee ſee then now the reaſon of this firſt part.

But if a man bee at his owne free choyce to bring what pledge hee will, ſo as hee bee preſſed: hee may then withdrawe himſelfe aſide & beware that hee bee not trodden vnder foote, nor pinched beyonde meaſure : hee may beethinke himſelfe what is to bee done , hee may aduiſe himſelfe by his owne counſayle, there is no man to control him,or to diſturbe the ſtuffe of his houſe: and then a man may take the pledge to aſſure his money . Nowe becauſe there may bee ſometimes ſuch vrgent neceſſitie, that a man will ſome time ſhift him ſelfe to his ſhirte to haue ſomewhat to eate: our Lorde prouideth farther in this caſe to remedie it, and therefore hee commaundeth the pledge to bee reſtored againe , when a man ſhall perceiue, that a poore man cannot miſſe it. For in ſuch a caſe a man muſt bee touched with greater compaſſion, for two cauſes: the one is,becauſe that when a man putteth himſelfe beſide his bedding and his clothing, it is eaſie to iudge and to gather, that hee is come to greate extremitie, and to the fartheſt degree of pouertie. That is one poynt to bee noted . The other is in conſidering of this poynt,what difference there is, whether a man dye for hunger or for colde. This is but to change his torment: this is not to ſuccour him.

I lende a man money, and hee buyeth bread therewith to eate, and in the meane time, hee is froſen to death through mee, and doe I releeue him then? So then wee ought in ſuch a caſe to bee mooued with compaſſion, or elſe there is no humanitie in vs . So then for this cauſe GOD will haue the pledge reſtored againe, when wee ſee that the thing wee take is neceſſarie for the preſeruing of a mans life: as is his cote,his doublet, his bedde, his couering, or ſuch like things.

I graunt that according vnto the rigour of ciuill iuſtice, this is not obſerued : and God alſo hath not giuen it in this place for a ciuil order : but hee meant to preſcribe a rule for euery man to followe of his owne free will. As many things are permitted vs before men,of which notwithſtanding wee ſhal bee accountable before God, although wee eſcape the handes of earthly Iudges. There is no man will let mee from vſing the vtmoſt rigour I can, towardes him which oweth mee any thing : and yet when I ſee hee is behinde hande with mee, and that there is no guile nor malice in him, if I for all that do cauſe him to bee caſt into priſon, if I rid him of al that he hath, if I leaue and forſake him, doubtles I do him wrong in the ſight of God. Nowe ciuil iuſtice can ſet downe no other order, but that all muſt be done as I will haue it. Yea, but (as it hath beene declared heretofore) when we ſhal haue beene excuſed before men, it is not to be ſayde therefore, that wee ſhall not bee culpable before God. For the lawe requireth a farre other perfection than earthly and common iuſtice doeth.

So then let vs note, that although it was lawfull for the Iewes as touching earthly iuſtice, to take any gage they liſted; yet doeth God condemne it for intollerable crueltie. And if this were in the time of the lawe; how much greater reaſon is there for the practiſing of it nowadayes, when wee haue more occaſion of exerciſing ſuch humanitie and gentlenes one towards another? For we muſt returne vnto this principle & ground, that Gods will is that wee ſhould reſemble him, becauſe hee hath adopted vs for his children, and ſhewed himſelfe to bee our father. God hath in deede alwayes ſhewed himſelfe ſuch a one: but at this day in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, he hath diſplayed
Luke.1.78. and ſhewen foorth the bowels of his mercie, as the ſcripture ſpeaketh: for it cannot ſufficiently expreſſe the infinit bountie and goodnes, which God hath ſhewed vnto vs in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Sith it is ſo that God hath made vs to feele more than euer heretofore his ineſtimable loue, ſo much the more ought we to enforce our ſelues on our ſide, to followe him, & to conforme our ſelues vnto his example. Therefore if wee be ſo cruell as to let them dye for want & neede, which deſire and ſeeke after our helpe: or if wee ſpoyle them of that which they cannot forbeare and liue; there is ſo much the leſſe excuſe for vs, and our ſinne is double and farre more haynous nowadayes. And therefore let vs knowe that God ſpake not onely vnto the Iewes for the time of the lawe, but that this rule muſt abide in full force, vntill the ende of the worlde: and that as this ſentence was alleaged by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: That mercie is better than ſacrifice: to ſhewe that it appertaineth vnto the Chriſtian Church, ſo all the kindes of mercie which are dependant vppon it, are belonging vnto vs: and wee muſt exerciſe mercie, not according vnto our owne fancie, but as God ſheweth vs, according to the declaration thereof which wee haue in this place. For what elſe is this lawe which Moſes hath here ſet downe in writing, but an expoſition of that ſentence which the Prophet hath more generally ſet downe? Yee ſee then in effect what we haue to beare in minde.

And hereby wee are taught likewiſe not to ouer greeue ſuch as for their needes doe come to ſeeke releefe at our handes. Euery man muſt haue an eye vnto his owne abilitie what hee may doe, and not trample his neighbour beeyonde meaſure vnder foote. The very thing wherein wee ought to holde our ſelues ſtreight, is that euery of vs hauing an eye to his owne abilitie, muſt doe his indeuour to the vttermoſt without ſparing of himſelfe. For wee muſt exact of our ſelues that which our Lorde hath commaunded vs, and wee muſt ſtrayne our ſelues in that behalf to the vttermoſt of our power. Wee muſt ſuccour thoſe whome wee ſee in neceſſitie, and not tarrie vntill men conſtrayne vs thereunto. For (as I tolde you) God will peraduenture lay the brydle on our necke as touching ciuill order, howbeit that ſhalbee but to trye our charitie the better. If men reſtraine vs from beeing cruell, and from vſing ſuch outragious libertie as otherwiſe we woulde vſe: it is a ſigne that wee beare no reuerence vnto God, and that the ſeruice which we yeeld vnto him is not of good will, but of compulſion. But if men let vs alone, ſo as wee may doe the woorſt wee can, in tormenting and vexing poore needie wretches, and yet wee are lead through a curteous and gentle affection, not onely not to vexe and harme them beyonde al meaſure, but to deale indifferently with them, and (in fewe wordes) not to deale otherwiſe with them than wee woulde haue others to deale with vs in the like caſe: our ſo dooing and our ſuccouring of them, when no man driues vs thereunto, is a ſigne that there is founde charitie in vs, and yͤ in louing God wee do alſo ſhew and prooue in deede that wee are his children, and that wee liue in good brotherhood, and mutuall agreement with our neighbours.

Nowe to the intent wee ſhoulde be the eaſier led heereunto, Moſes alleageth in this place two reaſons the better to perſuade vs. Firſt he ſayeth: That hee vnto whome wee ſhall reſtore and bring the pledge againe, ſhall bleſſe vs. And ſecondly hee addeth: That is ſhalbee righteouſneſſe vnto vs before the Lorde our God. Nowe theſe two reaſons are not ſuperfluous, conſidering what holdfaſtes we are, and how euery one wil ſafely prouide for himſelfe. We think that the whole earth will fayle vs; and when wee lende, it is with an heauie heart: when the money is once ſcaped out of our handes, wee thinke our ſelues ſo much impayred, and wee fetch deepe ſighes for it. God therefore ſeeing men ſo giuen vnto their owne lucre, and that they haue no freehearted liberalitie, or at leaſt wiſe are not ſo much enclyned vnto it as were requiſite, vſeth firſt a perſwaſion and ſayeth: That the poore ſhall bleſſe vs, that is to ſay, hee ſhall pray for vs.

Nowe I knowe, that the wealthie, and theſe greate deuowrers, and theſe ſeagulfes which ſeeke nought elſe but to ſwallowe vp all, will make none account of this bleſſing. Tuſhe (ſay they) he is but a poore beggarly knaue, and what care I whether he pray for mee or no. See I pray you what theſe deſpiſers of God, & theſe heatheniſh folke ſay. But let vs note wel, that it is not without cauſe that God declareth in this place, that it is a ſingular benefit to haue a poore man pray for vs. For if a poore man crye (as it is ſayde) hee ſhalbee hearde. Exod.22.27 Hee needeth neither man of lawe, nor Proctour to handle his cauſe before God with any great Rhetorike. If a poore man bee vniuſtly borne downe by mee, and I haue wrought him any oppreſſion or violence, or haue ſpoyled him of that which was his, or if I haue greeued and troubled him in any ſorte, although hee vtter not a woorde, but onely ſigheth to himſelfe: yet may not I thinke that I ſhall eſcape the hande of GOD. There ſhall neede neither witneſſes nor writings, nor great inqueſt to caſt mee; for one alonely ſigh of the poore man, ſhall kindle ſuch a fire of Gods vengeance vppon mee, as ſhall neuer bee quenched. For the complayninges which the poore make againſt them which haue moleſted them, are heard of God; they pearce thorough the clowdes, and come into heauen.

Alſo on the contrarie ſide when a poore man hauing receiued releefe of any man, ſhall ſay: Bleſſed bee hee which tooke pitie on mee. This woorde is as if an Angell of heauen had made ſuite for him. Nowe ſeeing God ſayeth it is ſo, let vs not thinke that it is in vayne, or by way of mockerie. And therefore let vs learne to eſteeme more than wee are wont to doe, of the prayers which the poore make that are relieued and ſuccoured by vs. For although we beare our ſelues in hand that they are nothing, yet hath God declared of what force they are, & commendeth them vnto vs in this place for a ſingular thing.

Nowe this ought to teache vs, not to deſpiſe the poore, nor to diſdayne to heare them, or to giue them a good looke: for God ſayeth that hee heareth them, and that they are ſuch as haue readieſt acceſſe vnto him. They are heard both in their complaintes and in their prayers and petitions. For God doeth more for them by an hundredth part than wee which are but wormes of the earth, will vouchſafe to doe. The thing then which wee haue to beare in mynde is, that if a poore man come and deſire helpe of vs, and wee thinke wee ſhall but looſe that which we beſtowe vppon him, becauſe hee is not of abilitie to recompence vs, & that although hee ſhould liue an hundred yeres after his death, yet he ſhould not requite vs the good turne and pleaſure hee receiued of vs. We ought to bethinke our ſelues thus: Well: in deede as touching the worlde he cannot benefite mee, he can neither coole me nor heat me: but before God ſuch a bleſſing as proceedeth from him, ſhalbee heard. If wee conſider this: is not the recompence which wee ſhal haue in the kingdome, better than all that which might be beſtowed vppon vs in this frayle and tranſitory life? Yes verily, if wee haue any faith; if we haue any aſſurance of the heauenly life, and are not altogither beaſtly beſotted with this preſent worlde.

And although a poore man become vnthankfull, yet ſhall not wee therefore faile to be bleſſed of God. For the heate which hee ſhall haue receiued by vs, when wee haue giuen him his coate or his couering, ſhall bleſſe vs. And if hee bee ſo wicked as to forget it, as many are, with whome it is growen as it were vnto a common cuſtome, that when they are releeued they will not vouchſafe to acknowledge the good which is done vnto them: but rather there is nowadayes ſuch pride in ſome of them that they wil thinke a man is the more bounde vnto them for that hee hath done them all the pleaſure in the worlde; inſomuch that ſome will ſay, what hath he done vnto mee, but hee was bounde to doe more? And what is this in reſpect of all that which hee oweth mee? Such is the vnthankfulneſſe which yee ſhall ſee ſome poore folke to vſe. But, as I haue ſayde; although they bee dumbe and ſpeake not a worde: yet the good turne which wee haue done them ſhall ſerue vs for a bleſſing before God. As on the contrarie ſide men are wont to ſaye: When a man ſhall holde his peace and ſuffer him ſelfe to pyne away in his miſerie, and yet men will not vouchſafe to take pitie on him, let him remaine quiet and patient in his aduerſitie as long as he will. (Though I ſay ſuch exãples are wondrous rare: for wee ſhall heare nothing but complaints and murmuringes although there bee no greate cauſe why.) But let vs graunt that ſome man were ſo quyet, that hee will not vtter one word, though hee bee not releeued at his neede: Shall wee for all that bee quit before God, although there bee no crye made againſt vs, to endite vs? No, no: for wee ſee what is ſayde concerning Abel. After hee was murdered, did hee crye for vengeance at Gods handes? Gen.4.10 No, but his bloude cryed. And therefore the neceſſitie which a poore man endureth, cryeth lowde & ſhrill ynough in Gods eares, ſo that hee needeth not to make any complaynt and to ſaye: one hath greeued mee in this or in that ſorte: but if hee dye for colde becauſe wee keepe his coate or his couering from him, there ſhall neede no other thing to condemne vs before God. So then let vs learne, that albeit the poore diſcharge their duetie verie ill, and that beeing ſuccoured they bleſſe vs not; wee may not therefore ceaſſe to doe that which GOD commaundeth vs, knowing that the almes which proceedeth from vs, ſhall ſerue vs well ynough for a bleſſing, although they whome wee haue relieued holde their peace. As on the contrary ſide, wee muſt bee afrayde leaſt the crueltie which wee vſe may accuſe vs before GOD, although no man doe open his mouth to ſpeake.

There is alſo in this place an inſtruction for the poore: that becauſe God hath made them ſubiect to that ſtate that they muſt be fayne to deſire ſuccour and helpe of their neighboures, they muſt bee ſo much the more humble, & lay aſide the arrogancie and preſumption which is in many of them. Some when they aſke an almes, thinke they require nothing but their own: inſomuch that to their ſeeming they haue wrong if they bee made to wayte for it, and that men preuent not their neceſſitie: they woulde that a man ſhoulde put off his cappe and deſire them to receiue an almes: there are ſome which bee full of this preſumption. But God contrarily declareth, that hee wil haue him which receiueth a good turne, to acknowledge it, and to bleſſe him by whome hee is releeued. And in verie deede, if a man bee holpen in his neede, and hee forget it, and ſeeketh not at leaſtwiſe to God to requite it, when himſelfe according to the worlde hath no meanes to do it, hee is a theefe: and pretende hee neuer ſo fairely, that a man gaue him ſuch a thing: yet becauſe hee abuſeth the liberalitie which was vſed towardes him, hee is a theefe. A man helpeth mee, and on what condition? God bindeth mee to pray for the proſperitie of him which hath in ſuch wiſe ſuccoured mee, and to proteſt at leaſt, that I am bounde vnto him: and when I am able to recompence him I muſt do it. But if I cannot, I muſt haue God for my witnes, that I acknowledge my ſelfe bound vnto him for his curteſie: if I doe it not, verily it is theft, as I told you. So then as the rich are taught in this place, and as God ſheweth them that they ought to be contented when they whome they haue holpen do bleſſe them: ſo on the other ſide, the poore are taught to knowe, that if they borrowe, or haue any thing giuen them, it is to the intent they ſhoulde bee moued to pray for their neighbors, for ſo much as they haue ſuccoured and releeued them, that charitie may by that meanes bee maintained. For the true bond thereof is, that they which haue of themſelues no abilitie ſhold knowe that God calleth them vnto himſelfe, & that they ought to doe that which belongeth to them to doe, namely, reſort vnto prayer, becauſe they are able to doe no other thing. Yee ſee then in effect what wee haue to beare in minde. And ſo let vs note that when we can diſcharge our dueties towardes our neighbours no otherwiſe, wee muſt haue recourſe vnto that remedie which is ſet downe here, that is, to prayer.

It followeth afterwarde: that it ſhalbee reputed vnto vs for righteouſneſſe before God, & this is according vnto that which I haue to note alreadie, namely, that mercie is better than ſacrifice. For Moſes meant to declare that if wee vſe not ſuch humanitie towards our neighbors, wee may well beare a countenaunce of ſeruing God, wee may haue great appearance of vertue in the ſight of men, wee may well bee honoured and eſteemed of them: but yet neuertheleſſe God will condemne vs for wicked men, when wee bee ſo cruell. Briefely Moſes hath in this place declared, that there is no righteouſneſſe acceptable before God, except there bee ſuch humanitie in vs, that wee liue ſo with our neighbours as euery of vs enforce himſelfe to ſuccour the poore and needie to the vtmoſt of his power. Yee ſee then the intent and meaning of Moſes when hee ſayeth, That it ſhalbee reputed vnto vs for righteouſnes before God. And this is a worde which ought well to bee weyed. For wee ſee howe men thinke to diſcharge their duties notwithſtanding that they bee ſet altogither on pilling and ſpoyling. And in what order trowe yee? Looke mee among the Papiſts: if a man haue erected a chappell, if hee haue taken order that ſo many Maſſes ſhalbee ſung, or if hee haue done ſome ſuch like thinges; then hath hee his hands cleane; or at leaſtwiſe thinketh them to bee cleane: and yet in the meane while, extortion, deceite, and other lewde and wicked practiſes haue their full ſway with him, and no pitie hath any place in his heart. Nowe, the man which ſhall ſhewe ſuch a faire apparance ſhalbee accounted a iuſt and holy perſon. But yee ſee howe God in the meane while pronounceth the cleane contrarie, that all this is but doung and filthineſſe in his ſight, and that there is no righteouſneſſe where there is no humanitie and gentlenes. When a man hath no compaſſion on his neighbors, when he tormenteth them, when hee troubleth them, when he ſpoyleth them, when hee hath no pitie nor mercie with him, whatſoeuer hee is able to doe beſides, is but abhominable before God: hee reiecteth all beſides, and will none of it, except a man be ſo kindhearted as to take pitie of them which are in neede, and to releeue their neceſſitie. Beholde (I ſay) in what ſort wee ought to fare the better by this place. For (as I haue ſaid) men woulde alwayes thinke to diſcharge their duties towardes God and yet giue no almes.

Wee ſee alſo as touching almes giuing, that there is in many men much hypocriſie and no little raſhnes: in ſo much that men neuer deale vprightly with God in that behalfe. What is the cauſe why our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt forbiddeth men to blowe the trumpet, and to make ſuch greate and open ſhewes when they giue their almes, but becauſe many are ledde with ambition, and when they deale their doale, there muſt bee a greate pompe of it at their gate? Matt. 6.2. Such as haue pilled and polled all their life long, and haue done nothing elſe but eaten and deuowred the poore, thinke to burie their ſinnes and to wipe them cleane out, by beſtowing a piece of money at their deceaſſe. For why? They bleare the eyes of men thereby: and they beare themſelues in hande that they are able to deceiue God too. But they abuſe them ſelues too groſſely. So then it ſtandeth vs in hande the more diligently to note this ſentence, wherein wee are taught, that if without all vanitie of ſhewe, wee haue pittie on them which ſeeke for refuge at our handes, & & helpe them without grieuing them at all: it ſhalbee reckoned vnto vs for righteouſneſſe. And before whome? Before the Lorde our God. We are in this place ſũmoned before yͤ heauenly throne, to yͤ intent yͭ we ſeeke not for our reward before men. For yͭ alſo is an other thing whereunto our our Lord Ieſus leadeth vs when he ſaith that we muſt not blowe with the trumpet when we giue our almes; but that wee muſt rather hide our ſelues,and not let our lefthand knowe what our right hand doeth; nor be deſirous of many witneſſes by whom wee may vaunt our ſelues:And in verie deede if it ſuffice vs not that God liketh of vs,and that hee accepteth the ſeruice which wee doe vnto him in beſtowing of our almes, we ſeeke for our payment here below:and therfore we are then recompenced when men praiſe vs and ſay: O this man is a great giuer of almes: O he diſchargeth his dutie faithfully in this behalfe. If we haue once gotten ſuch a report, & that the ſame do pleaſe vs,verily wee haue our rewarde. Let vs not thinke that God will ſet it any more in his booke of account: for ſo ſhould wee bee twiſe payed; I ſay if wee ſeeke through ambition to bee ſeene of all men. For although when wee giue our almes, wee may ſometimes make it knowen: yet neuertheleſſe wee muſt take heede that wee be not ledde away with a vayne deſire,to bee eſteemed of in this worlde: but whatſoeuer wee giue, let vs conueie it as it were into the boſome of God.And foraſmuch as the good which wee haue done, ſhalbe receiued and eſteemed of him: let vs ſeeke no other thing but that euery one bee edified thereby, & that euere one for his parte enforce himſelfe to relieue the neceſſitie of his neighbours. But howe euer the worlde go, ſeeing it is God vnto whome wee ought to lende the almes which we beſtowe vppon a poore man, and that he receiueth it; this conſideration ought ſo to rauiſh vs, that wee ſhoulde not deſire to leane vnto the worlde, nor to any of the faire praiſes which we may receiue, nor to the reputation which wee may get by it. God ſayeth, that when wee giue vnto a poore man, wee lende vnto him himſelf. Beholde heere a manner of ſpeach which might ſeeme ſtrange at the firſt ſight, to ſay, that wee lende vnto God. But yet neuertheleſſe he vſeth this manner of ſpeache, and that not without cauſe, and ſayeth that hee is well able to pay vs vſurie and gaine for our money, ſo as wee neede not feare that wee ſhall looſe any thing by our long tarriance for it, for hee wil recompence vs to the vtmoſt. Seeing that God hath once declared that hee becommeth detter vnto vs, and that hee putteth all thoſe Items into his bookes of accounts, as though hee had borrowed them at our handes: I pray you are not wee ouerblockiſh if wee for all that ſeeke for prayſe here belowe and hang wholly vppon it? Nowe therefore let vs learne to fare the better by that which is ſayde here:namely, That it ſhalbe accounted for righteouſneſſe vnto vs before God. It is in effect all one as if Moſes had ſayde: Deceiue not your ſelues by thinking to pleaſe God after the common order and faſhion of men, who make many faire ſhewes of diuers things: they will needes offer ſacrifices, they will come vnto the temple, they will ſet a good countenance on all things, yea, they will make men beleeue that they haue all the vertues in the worlde, & that nothing is wanting in them: but you are deceiued if that you thinke to diſcharge your dutie towardes God by ſuch meanes.For there is no righteouſneſſe in you which pleaſeth God, and which hee liketh of, except you bee ſo gentle and kinde hearted as to haue pitie on the poore, and to releeue them in their neede: that is to bee noted for one poynt. Againe, for the other hee ſayeth thus: Go to,you are of opinion that all is loſt which you giue vnto a poore man; and that becauſe hee hath not wherewith to recompence you, or becauſe hee is vnthankfull, as wee ſee many are. But holde your ſelues contented with this, that before God it ſhalbee accounted vnto you for righteouſneſſe: feare you not ſeeing that God accepteth that which you offer vnto him. Ceaſſe to regarde men. This ought to ſuffice you: Yea, put the caſe that one render vnto you euil for the good which ye haue done, yet notwithſtanding your God will not reiect your prayers and requeſtes; but will acknowledge that wherein you haue ſerued him. And becauſe hee maketh a tryall of your charitie by this meanes, and will knowe howe you loue him by your helping of thoſe which hee offereth vnto you in his owne name: if you receiue them which flye vnto you for ſuccour:Let it ſuffice you that God accepteth both of you and of that which you haue beſtowed on him which ſought vnto you. That is in effect the thing which wee haue to beare in minde in this place.

Prou.19.17.

But here a man may demaund a queſtion, & aske what it meaneth that Moſes ſayeth a mans almes ſhalbee accounted vnto him for righteouſnes? for it ſeemeth therefore that our ſelues obtayne righteouſneſſe before God, and that we deſerue rewarde by our good workes. And this were againſt the chiefe and principall article of our ſaluation, where it is ſayde, That wee are iuſtified by faith. And what elſe importeth this worde Faith,but that wee are accepted of God for his owne mercies ſake, without bringing any merite or deſert of our owne? If wee bee iuſtified by fayth, why doeth Moſes ſay that wee are iuſtified by our woorkes, as by our almes deedes? Let vs note that when the ſcripture ſpeaketh in this wiſe, it preſuppoſeth that God hath alreadie receiued vs ſo to mercie,that hee pardoneth vs all our ſinnes: yea, and that albeit there bee ſome imperfection in our workes, hee regardeth it not, but accepteth that which wee offer vnto him, as though it were worthie to bee accepted. But foraſmuch as this matter cannot bee handled at large as nowe: therefore let vs note, that where as it is ſayde that faith was reckoned vnto Abraham for righteouſneſſe: it is to giue vs to vnderſtande, that men when they come before God, are all of them to bee condemned: yea, the moſt perfecteſt of them. For if a man will ſeeke for vertue and holineſſe in the worlde, it may bee founde in the perſon of Abraham: for hee is as excellent a man as euer was: but yet if GOD woulde haue iudged him with rigour, he might haue condemned him with all the reſt. For what is there in Abraham to make God to bee beholding vnto him? So then wee are all confounded in our ſelues. And therefore there is no other remedie left vs, but to beleeue in the free promiſes which hee hath made vnto vs, embracing his mercie and fatherly loue, & hanging thereon the aſſurance of our ſaluation. The cauſe (ſay I) why we are iuſtified by faith, is that in our woorkes there is no righteouſneſſe which may anſwere for vs before God, but wee are all to bee condemned. But nowe God hath ſo receiued vs with this condition that hee forgiueth vs all our ſinnes; and that not onely for a day, but for all the time of our life: not that wee ſhoulde ſinne vnder colour that God wilbee mercifull vnto vs (let vs take heede of that) but becauſe we are frayle and weake, God will alwayes continue his goodneſſe towardes vs. And farther when wee doe any good, there is yet ſome euill euen in that good which wee doe. For wee neuer giue any almes with ſuch perfectnes as were requiſite, but God may alwayes finde ſome fault or other in it. It is with our workes as men vſe to ſay of wine, that there is ſtill ſome faulte or other in it. It is good wine will one ſay, but it hath taken winde, it is too ſharpe, it is muſtie, or there is I know not what in it; it is turned: and ſo the wine is nothing woorth. Euen ſo is it with our workes, there is alwayes ſome ſpotte or other in them: ſo that God ſhall haue iuſt cauſe to reiect them. Seeing it is ſo, wee had neede to be borne withall at his hande, as a chylde is borne withall by his father. And in verie deede hee hath made vs ſuch an expreſſe promiſe by his Prophet Malachie, That hee will ſpare vs euen as a father ſpareth his chylde, who perceiuing his chylde to bee willing to doe that which hee commaundeth him, although hee doe not his worke ſo perfectly as were requiſite hee ſhoulde, wil not deale rigorouſly with him, if ſo bee hee goe about it with a willing and cheerefull mynde. So then yee ſee why it is ſayde that wee are iuſtified by faith.

Mal.3.17.

But whereas it is ſayde on the contrary ſide, that our workes ſhalbee reckoned vnto vs for righteouſneſſe; it is becauſe God accepteth them. And why? Is it becauſe they are worthie to bee accepted, or for that they haue any merite in them? No. But becauſe of the couenaunt and agreement which hee hath made with vs: that ſeeing wee are members of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, hee beareth with vs, hee pardoneth vs our ſinnes, and accepteth that which wee offer vnto him: although it bee woorth nothing, yet is it ynough that hee accepteth of it. According vnto this reaſon, it is ſaide in this place, that the almeſdeedes which wee doe for Gods ſake, ſhalbee accepted at his hande for righteouſneſſe. And this letteth not but that wee bee iuſtified alonelie by faith: for when righteouſneſſe is referred vnto his fountaine, from whence proceedeth it? From the free mercie of God in that hee forgiueth vs our ſinnes. Nowe, ſith it is grounded vppon that, wee muſt not imagine that there is any contradiction in theſe places. And therefore let vs briefely note, that when our Lorde ſayth, that the almes which wee beſtowe ſhalbee reckoned to vs for righteouſneſſe; it is to encourage vs the more, to the intent wee ſhoulde not feare that eyther our payne or our money is loſt, when wee haue relieued the neceſſitie of the poore. And when wee haue this leſſon, we will not come and laye the foundation of our ſaluation vppon our woorkes: but wee will alwayes buylde the aſſurance of our ſaluation on the onely mercie of God, and vppon the death and paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; by whoſe ſacrifice wee are reconciled, and through whoſe obedience all our ſinnes and iniquities are done awaye. This (ſaye I) is the meanes to aſſure vs of our ſaluation. And thus when wee haue ſettled our truſt and confidence in the onely mercie and goodneſſe of God, wee will haue no mynde to ſtande vppon our woorkes: but it will ſuffice vs that beeing accepted by the free mercy of God without any merite or deſeruable worthineſſe of our workes, hee will giue vs will, ſtrength, and power to ſerue him, to ſerue him I ſay, not after our owne fantaſie, but accordingly as hee commaundeth vs.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to take them away, and therewithall ſo to refourme vs by his holy ſpirite, as our whole indeuour may bee to pleaſe him, and to obey his holy will, as hee hath declared it vnto vs in his lawe. And becauſe we cannot come vnto ſuch perfection as were requiſite wee ſhoulde: pray wee him to reache vs out his hande alwayes to ſupplye our wantes, and to ſtrengthen our infirmities, vntil hee hath cleane ridde vs of them. And ſo let vs ſaye, Almightie God & heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the x. of February, 1556.

The CXL.Sermon which is the fifth vpon the foure and twentith Chapter.

14 Thou ſhalt not defraude the hired ſeruaunt which is needie and poore, neither of thy brethren, nor of the ſtraunger which is in thy lande within thy gates.

15 Thou ſhalt giue him his hyre for his day, before the ſunne goeth dowen: for he is poore, and therewith ſuſtaineth he his life. Leaſt he crie againſt thee vnto the Lorde, and it be ſinne vnto thee.

16 The fathers ſhall not be put to death for the children, neither ſhall the children die for the fathers, but euery man ſhalbe put to death for his own ſinne.

17 Thou ſhalt not wreſt the right of the ſtraunger, nor of the fatherleſſe: neither ſhalt thou take the widowes rayment to pledge.

18 But thou ſhalt remember that thou waſt a ſeruaunt in Egypt, and that the Lorde thy God deliuered thee thence. Therefore I commaunde thee to doe this thing.

IF there were not great wickednes and crueltie in men, it were needeles to ſet downe anie ſuch law as is heere contained, to wit, That we withholde not from a poore mā the wages which he hath earned. For we knowe that it is as it were his bloud, according as it is written: In the ſweat of thy face ſhalt thou eate thy breade. Gen.3.19. Therefore when a man beſtoweth himſelfe in our ſeruice, we ought at leaſt wiſe to giue him that wherewithall he is ſuſtained and nouriſhed. And therefore I tolde you that if we had but one droppe of kindnes in vs, we needed not to be taught this doctrine. For nature teacheth vs what is right and indifferent. Let vs therfore conclude when we reade ẏ which is written here, that we are accuſed before God. of beeing as brute beaſtes towardes our neighbours. For God would ſuffer vs to followe on our owne courſe, if he ſawe that euery of vs did diſcharge himſelfe of his duetie. But foraſmuch as men are ſo peruerſe and wicked, that the rich ſeeke nothing but to deceiue the poore, & to deuour their ſuſtenance & the labor of their hands; it was needefull that he ſhould prouide ſome remedie againſt them. And this is the way for vs to fare the better by that which appertaineth to the ordering of our life. Oftentimes when we reade of any admonition in the holy ſcripture, we are of opinion that it is ſuperfluous. For why? Wee haue no conſideration of the cauſe which moued God to cōmand this or that, to wit, that foraſmuch as he ſeeth ẏ vices which are lurking in vs, he meaneth to correct them. Wee muſt therefore examine ourſelues; and that will teach vs, that God exhorteth vs not in vaine to do that which is our duetie. For albeit we know well ynough what men ſay vnto vs, and euery of vs can confeſſe that the things which are ſayd are true: yet is it not ynough for vs to haue the reaſonablenes and rightfulneſſe of ẏ thing proued vnto vs, vnleſſe wee be alſo inforced to followe that which we knowe to be iuſt and acceptable vnto God.

Nowe whereas it is ſayde that a man ſhall not withholde the hyre of a poore man, it is all one as if God in generall did ſhewe, that men ought to deale vprightly, & vſe all kinde of curtiſie with thoſe which are poore, and employ themſelues to doe vs ſeruice. And hee ſpeaketh expreſly of the poore, becauſe there is no pitie in this caſe towardes the rich man: for if we owe him anie thing, he may tarrie for it, he is not ſo haſtie to haue his monney payde him from day to day, a man ſhal not be ſo ſoudainly preſſed to giue him his payment. In deede we ought not to tarry til we be plucked by the eares, to pay that which we owe. That is alwaies to be condemned: and we excuſe ourſelues vainely, if we ſay: this man is aforehande, he hath no great neede: I may therefore withholde that which is his. But I ſpeake of the preciſe houre of payment, when a man is contented that I ſhall deferre the payment of my dette from this day vntil to morow. If I offer to pay him, he will aunſwere me, I ſhal haue it time ynough. And why? He knoweth that I am readie to paye him any day: and as for himſelfe hee hath no ſuch haſt but hee can well ſtaye. But a poore man hauing trauailed the whole day, hath nothing to eate but what he getteth by his labor: what crueltie then were it if I (when I haue had a mans ſweat, and labour) will for all that withholde from him his dayes hyre? And therefore this reaſon is expreſly added: for he ſuſtaineth his ſoule therwith, or he eaſeth his ſoule thereby. For ẏ word which Moſes vſeth may be ſo expounded: that is, that a poore man hath an eye alwayes vnto his labour. Like as the rich man which is well furniſhed with al plentie, and hath his garners and his ſellars full, reſteth himſelfe thereon: ſo a poore man which hath neither reuenewes nor inheritaunce turneth his ſoule, that is to ſay, his heart vnto that which he maketh reckening to get: and ſayth, wel, I haue trauailed, I ſhall haue at leaſtwiſe aſmuch as wil finde mee to day: to morrowe I will returne againe to my labour, and I will get more towards my meate and drinke. The poore folke haue their minds ſet vpon that: not that we muſt haue ſuch an eye to our owne trauaile and labour, as if it were that alone whereby wee are ſuſtained, and not rather the bleſſing of God: for we haue ſeene what God hath ſayde to the contrarie in Deut.8.17. the eight chapter of this booke: namely that we muſt take heede that wee darken not the grace and fauour of God by perſuading ourſelues that we haue done this or that. Men therefore muſt attribute nothing vnto themſelues. Howebeit, Moſes in this place hath meant no other thing, but that the meanes whereby poore folke are ſuſtained in their trauaile, all their goods, rents, and landes is the labour of their handes. Seeing it is ſo that they haue no farther abundance, and that God hath as it were locked them vp in ſuch neceſſitie, is it reaſon that a man ſhoulde depriue them of the fruite of their labour. If one ſpoyle a mans corne fielde, if hee mowe downe the graſſe of his medowe, or if hee make an hauocke of all: the whole worlde will cry out vpon him for a murderer: And yet it is a more hainous crime to haue deceiued a poore man of the labour of his handes. For he hath (as I tolde you) no other landes nor inheritaunce: and beſides that, he ſpareth neither his labor, nor his bloud to get his liuing. This reaſon therefore ought to wey well with vs in this caſe of rendring hire vnto them which haue ſerued vs.

And let vs note by the way, that God meant here to commaund generally all maner of kindneſſe towardes poore folke. For if I conſtraine a poore man to labour for me, and I will pay him but by halfes; doubtles I defraude him of his labour. If I couenaunt with one to ſerue me; well [ſayth he] you ſhall pay me thus much for my dayes worke: but in the ende I cutte his hyre ſo ſhort, that the poore man after he hath done all hee was able, ſhall not haue wherewith to feede himſelfe. For why? I wil ſee: This man here muſt needes labour, he hath not elſe whereon to liue, and hee muſt needes paſſe through my handes, therefore I will haue him for what I liſt. After that maner do the rich behaue themſelues often times in this behalfe, they eſpie ſome occaſions or other, to the intent they may cut off the one halfe of the poore mans wages, when he knoweth not what to ſet himſelfe about. The poore folke offer themſelues to labour, they deſire but to get their liuing if they could tell where. Hereupon ye ſhall haue a rich man ſay: this fellowe is out of money and out of worke, I may hire him now for a morſell of bread. For he muſt yeelde vnto mee ſpyte of his teeth, I will giue him but halfe wages, and he ſhalbe glad and fain of that: therefore when we vſe ſuch rigour, although we haue not withheld their hyre: yet is it a point of crueltie, and we haue defrauded the poore: and this cloke of paying the money the ſame day, wil ſtande vs in no ſteede before God. For it is to be knowen whether the poore man be cõtented or no. When a rich man hath wares to ſell and one comes vnto him for them, he will ſay, you ſhall not haue them for any leſſe: And why: His wares diminiſh not in his ſhoppe. But if there be a poore man which liueth frõ hand to mouth, and hath neither pennie nor halfe pennie in his purſe, he ſhalbe forced to ſel his ware for nought. If one buy them at that price, and knoweth the neceſſitie which the poore man is driuen vnto, he is a manifeſt oppreſſour: and we can skill to ſay in common prouerbe: It is a holding of our foote vpon a poore mans throate: it is a kinde of robberie. We haue skill (I ſay) to ſpeake thus by them which buy ſuch penie worthes of thẽ that are in neede, and are ſo farre pinched, that they can be at no other choyce but to doe what they will haue them. Let vs note well then, that God in this place not onely commaundeth vs to pay them without driuing off from day to day, which haue laboured or taken paines for vs: but alſo would haue vs to haue a dewe regarde of euerie mans neede, and that when we ſet a poore man a worke about our buſineſſe, wee ſhould pay him his dayes hyre: yea and that euery man ſhoulde ſet a price of his owne wares, ſo as if we come to driue a bargaine, the ſeller ſhould not be faine to ſay to vs, make what price you yourſelfe liſt: And againe, that when a poore man hath trauailed for vs, [wee ſhould not deale ſo vnconſcionably] as to make no further account of him than to haue the fruit of his labour: but rather enter into iuſt tryal with ourſelues, whether if we were in his caſe which pineth away & hath no other meanes to ſuſtain himſelfe but this, we ourſelues would be contented to be ſo handled. We would haue men to vſe gentleneſſe towardes vs and relieue and ſuccour vs: let vs therefore do the like or elſe we ſhalbe accuſed before God. For it is ſayde, That it ſhalbe ſinne vnto vs when a poore man ſhall ſo crie out againſt vs. And yet for all this wee heare euerie day the cries and clamours which the poore ceaſe not in lamentable wiſe to make, and thinke we that God is deafe all this while, & that he heareth not their complaintes? I grant that the poore in deede are ſomtimes vnthankfull and ſpitefull, ſo as there is no dealing with them, and they would as it were rake vnto themſelues other mens goods; and when they are requeſted to lend their hande to ſome worke, they would haue a double and treble recompence, & they will haue great wages. Ye ſhall ſee ſome ſo ſtoute and preſumptuous, that they will not beſtowe paines in any thing, except they be greatly intreated: and yet they are ſo laſie, that they will ſcarcely put foorth one hande to doe their worke aright: and for all this there is ſuch a doe to pleaſe them, that they will haue their full paiment, yea and double the price of their dayes worke. This is to be ſeene. But yet for all that, there are many (as I tolde you) which are pinched. And therefore their cries muſt needes aſcende vp into heauen: and let vs not imagine that we ſhalbe founde guiltleſſe before God. For whereas it is ſayd that it ſhalbe ſin vnto vs, it is to ſhew ỷ albeit men ſue vs not ne cōmence any action againſt vs for it in this world; yet notwithſtanding we ſhall not faile to be culpable before God: yea although the poore ſhould not crye at all, as it hath beene declared heeretofore. The thing then in effect which wee haue to beare in minde, is that we ought to haue an eye vnto euery mans neede, and not to oppreſſe him which is in neceſſitie, thinking that we haue an occaſion of making our own profit by an other mans loſſe, when we ſee that he can not be without vs. Let vs beware that we be not ſo cruell. For although he make no complaint againſt vs in this world, yet before God we are culpable: and that ought to quicken vs vp ſo much the more in our duty, conſidering that God reproueth vs of crueltie in ſuch wiſe.

Nowe Moſes addeth a ſeconde lawe: That the fathers ſhould not be put to death for the children, nor the children for the fathers, but that euery man ſhould beare the puniſhment of his owne ſinne. This Lawe was ordained becauſe of a wicked & beaſtly cuſtome which then raigned among the men of the Eaſt countrey, who made it a matter of no conſcience to put the children to death for the fathers offences, and ſo to ſhed the bloud of the innocent. God therefore meant to withhold his people from following ſuch barbarous dealing of the Paynims and Infidels. And it is a point which we muſt diligently note. For wee might muſe why it is ſayde, that the father ſhall not be killed for the childe, nor the child for the father. It ſeemeth that it is needeleſſe to forbid this thing, becauſe we knowe that where ſinne is founde, there the puniſhment ought to be layde without ſeeking any farther. Nowe therefore foraſmuch as we are giuen to vnderſtande, that men haue bin ſo blockiſh as to put him to death who was in no fault, ſo as the father hath ſometimes beene drawen to death with the child; we perceiue thereby that God hath not without cauſe eſtabliſhed this lawe. It is true in deede that this is ſpoken vnto Iudges and vnto ſuch as beare the ſword in their hand: that the children ſhould not be put to death for the ſinne of the fathers, nor the fathers for the ſinne of the children: but yet notwithſtanding God in generall warneth vs alſo, that wee ought not to hate the children for their fathers ſakes. Whenſoeuer we ſee a wicked man, foraſmuch as he is a reaſonable creature, we ought to pitie him, and not to hate him, although we muſt alwaies deteſt the vice, and puniſhe the perſon for his miſdeedes. But if we hate the father for the ſonnes ſake, or the ſonne becauſe of the father, albeit wee haue not the ſworde in our hande, yet neuertheleſſe this wicked affection which we haue, is al one as if we did put the father to death for the childe. And ſo let vs note well, that this lawe appertayneth vnto vs all. And although we be not armed with power and authoritie to puniſh whome we liſt. Yet notwithſtanding God putteth vs in mind not without iuſt cauſe, that he which hath offended muſt beare his owne puniſhment, and not any other guiltleſſe perſon beſides.

Heere a man might demand a queſtion: what is the cauſe then why God threatneth that hee wil puniſh the wickedneſſe of fathers vpon their Ier.32.18. children, and caſt it as it were into their boſome? This is ſayd, becauſe that GOD is at libertie to curſe not one man alone, but his whole race and poſteritie alſo. For what are we, if it pleaſe not him to beholde vs with pitie? If he once turne his mercie from vs, we can not but goe into vtter deſtruction. And therefore let vs learne, that when God leaueth vs ſuch as we are, it is a kind of puniſhment which he layeth vpon vs. Ye ſee then howe he puniſheth the wickedneſſe of the fathers vpon the children, and yet doth wrong vnto none. Let vs mind that. And in very deede we ought to obſerue what difference there is betweene God and men. An earthly Iudge puniſheth the faultes which are knowen vnto him: but before God it is not ſo, for we are al of vs giltie. He which before men is faultleſſe, and can be charged with nothing, let him come before God, and there he ſhall finde himſelfe ſhort. Againe we ſee not the cauſe why God puniſheth young children, euen ſuch as are yet in their mothers wombe: but he knoweth a reaſon why he doth ſo: and we muſt with al humblenes of mind reuerence his iudgementes, when a thing ſeemeth ſtraunge vnto vs, and wee be tempted to reaſon againſt him; wee muſt ſubmit our ſelues, and know that we are too raw & too weake to cōprehende the iudgementes of God, which are ſo high. And therefore let vs not meaſure God by men, to binde him to doe that which earthlie Iudges are commaunded to doe: for hee is not ſubiect vnto the ſame lawe, and the reaſon why we haue declared. And in deede he proteſteth alſo by his prophet Ezechiel, that he wil not puniſh Ezech.18.4. the children for the fathers ſake. For it was nowe growen to a common prouerbe in Iſraell, that they which were troubled with warre, famine, and other calamities, would ſay, What? we are not ſo wicked that GOD ſhould handle vs with ſuch rigour, for wee haue ſerued him, wee haue done the beſt that we could. Therefore we muſt needes ſay that God puniſheth vs now for the faultes which were committed an hundred yeeres agoe, and ſhould nowe haue beene buried. Thus men complained of God. As in deed we ſee how men are too much enclined to iuſtifie thēſelues by condemning of God. Hereupon our Lorde aunſwereth them: no no, this prouerbe ſhall be no longer vſed in Iſrael, That the fathers haue eaten ſower grapes, & the childrens teeth are ſet on edge: for he which ſinneth ſhall beare his owne burden, & the chaſtiſement of his offence. We ſee then that God doeth ſo puniſh the ſinnes of the fathers vppon the children, that notwithſtanding all are culpable, and there is not one which hath a ſufficient excuſe to aske a reaſon why God puniſheth him. And if any alleadge that he corrected Dauides fault by cauſing the childe to die which was begotten by him, it is aunſwered (as I haue already touched) that God will ſometimes puniſh the children for the fault of their fathers, but this is after his own maner which is incomprehenſible vnto vs, that is to ſay, that he doth nothing but iuſtly and vprightly. We ſhall not alwayes ſee the cauſe why hee doeth it, for we haue already declared that our wittes are ouer groſſe and dull to enter into the bottomeleſſe gulfe of Gods iudgementes. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, we muſt vouchſafe him ſo much honor as to confeſſe, that when he puniſheth the iniquitie of the fathers vppon the children, he doeth it on good right. And howe? Will we ſay: It is not for vs to enquire beyonde our meaſure: Let vs content ourſelues with this, that Gods goodneſſe is an vnblameable iuſtice, and in the meane while let vs walke as hee hath commaunded vs. Let vs not ſay: he doth this, and why may not wee doe the like? Yea: but what are we? For GOD knoweth his rule full well; but we for our parte hadde neede to be helde in awe and vnder ſubiection: and if wee woulde be at libertie to doe what ſeemed good to ourſelues, there would be too too great confuſion. Yee ſee then what we haue to beare in minde, when it is ſayde in this place, that the father ſhall not be puniſhed for the childes fault, nor the childe for the fathers: but that he which offendeth ſhall beare the puniſhment of his offence himſelfe. Nowe wee are warned alſo by the way, not to intangle ourſelues in the condemnation of thoſe which haue offended. For many are of opinion that they diſcharge not their dewtie, except they maintaine an other mans wickedneſſe. Oh, [ſay they] he that hath doone this offence is my neighbour, or my couſen, or I knowe not what. If I holde him not vp by the chinne, if I ſeeke not to violate and corrupt iuſtice, I ſhall not be thought to haue dealt with him like a kinſman, like a friende or like a neighbour. But we ſee what is ſayde to the contrarie: namely, that hee which hath offended, ſhall beare his owne ſinne. Therefore when wee ſee any one to offend, let it grieue vs, let vs indeuour to the vtmoſt of our power to bring him into the way againe: but yet for all that, let vs beware that we wrap not our ſelues in his condemnation, ſeeing God hath exempted vs out of it. And that is a thing which wee haue to remember yet further vpon this place.

The thirde lawe which Moſes addeth in this place is, That they ſhall not peruert the Iudgement and right of the ſtraunger, that they ſhall not treade the fatherleſſe vnder foote, that they ſhall not wring a pleadge from the widowe. And why? Remember (ſayeth he) that thou waſt a ſeruaunt in the Lande of Egypt, and that the Lorde thy GOD hath drawen thee out from thence, to the intent that thou ſhouldeſt pitie them which are afflicted, and that thou ſhouldeſt not grieue them. We haue already ſeene heeretofore, that as men are of leſſe credit and countenaunce touching the worlde, ſo are they more ſpecially recommended vnto our care by God. For they which haue meanes to helpe themſelues, ſeeke not willingly eyther to this or to that man for helpe. For why? They can helpe themſelues well ynough. Hee that hath good friendes, and is of credit carrieth his priuiledge, to gette him fauour himſelfe: a riche man likewiſe and he that hath policie and courage in his dealinges. For men are afrayde to deale with them, they dare not offer to treade them vnder foote, becauſe they ſee they are able to worke their owne reuenge. And that is the cauſe why God maketh no mention of ſuch perſons. It is true in deede that generally he alwaies appointeth vs this rule, Not to do vnto others otherwiſe than we would haue doone vnto Matt.7.12. ourſelues; and yͭ we muſt abſtaine from al wrong, deceites, and violence. He ſayth this in deede to all in generall, but he ſayth not: Take heede of iniuring and oppreſſing a riche man and one which is in credit and authoritie. For why? We are withhelde from offring of ſuch a one any wrong, becauſe wee are afrayde of the like. But God ſayeth: Let not any man grieue the poore man, let none afflict the ſtranger, let none trouble the fatherleſſe, let none moleſt the widowes. And why ſpeaketh he thus of them? Becauſe when we ſee that they are not defended by men, we thinke that they are ſet foorth vnto vs, for an open pray. And yͭ is the cauſe why wee be ſo venterous beyond all reaſon & conſcience, to ſnatch from them whatſoeuer we can take holde of. Let vs therefore note well, that God in this place (as he hath done before) declareth, yͭ he is the protectour & defender of all ſuch as are deſtitute of mans ayde, and are not vnder propped in this worlde. And herein there are two points which we ought to note: yͤ one is yͭ if we do good vnto a ſtranger, vnto a poore man which is forſaken of all men, or vnto yͤ fatherles, we ſhall not looſe our labour. For why? God acknowledgeth and accepteth it for a ſeruice done vnto himſelf. If a man being acquainted with ſuch as are rich and well friended, do for them; hee maketh alwaies this account, wel, he is able to requite me for my paines: & againe he hath good friends, & as he ſeeth yͭ a man doth for him, ſo will he ſeeke to ſhewe him the like curteſie. We will alwaies cōſider whether men be able to make vs recompence. But when a poore man cōmeth vnto vs, he ſhall hardly ſpeake with vs or find any fauour at our hands. For why? we thinke yͭ we muſt doe him good for gramercy, becauſe he is not able to recōpence vs. That is yͤ cauſe why God putteth forth himſelfe, & proteſteth yͭ he is bounde vnto vs, and that if we thinke we profit ourſelues nothing at al by helping thē which be in neceſſitie, we are deceiued: for he accepteth of the thing, as if it were done vnto himſelfe. This is to be noted for one point. For the ſecond let vs note, yͭ he threatneth on the contrary ſide, yͭ if we moleſt a poore man, if we vexe & trouble the widowe or the fatherles, if we be cruell towardes the ſtranger, although as touching yͤ world this wickednes of ours be not puniſhed, yet ſhall we render an account of it before him. And why? For we haue ſet light by his protection. Like as princes and other greate ſtates will giue protections vnto them which are hated, and whome they ſee to be in daunger: ſo god giueth his protection vnto the fatherles, to the widowes, to the poore, and to the ſtraungers. And why? Becauſe they haue no meanes to the worldewarde to defend themſelues withall, he ſupplieth this want of theirs, and declareth that hee will not haue men to treade thoſe vnder foote whom hee hath receiued vnto himſelfe, telling vs that hee is their protector. If one for all this, doe enterpriſe any thing againſt them, is it not as much as to doe him wrong, and as it were ſpitefully to deſpiſe him? So then let vs note well, that as often as mention is made vnto vs of the poore, of the ſtraungers, and of the widowes; wee haue to deale with God, & wage battaile againſt him, if we vſe not all equitie and right towardes them, and if we be not ſo gentle and kindharted as to releeue and to ſuccour them. Ye ſee then now what the cauſe is, why it is ſayde in this place, Thou ſhalt not peruert the right of the ſtraunger.

Now to peruert the right is, to skorne a man when he hath a iuſt and good cauſe. And this is at all times to be ſeene. In deede in the courtes of Iuſtice there will ſometimes ſuch regarde be hadde, that a ſtraunger ſhall haue the more ſpeedie diſpatch of his matters: and men will ſay that they muſt proceede more quickely in giuing of ſentence when a ſtranger commeth to demaunde iuſtice, and not ſuffer him to linger in his ſuite as thoſe which are at home at their eaſe and may goe about their buſineſſe: theſe may better bee delayed, but as touching a ſtraunger which commeth from a farre place to require iuſtice, men by nature ought to be moued not to make him linger, but to make a quick diſpatch with him. But this notwithſtanding when the thing is to be practiſed in places of Iuſtice, ye ſhall ſee the cleane contrary. Let a ſtrãger, whoſe caſe is as cleare as the ſunne, come to demaunde his right, and he ſhalbe put off vntil eight dayes, and yet from that time he ſhall bee further delayed. And then in the ende, when he is wel wearied, he ſhalbe new to beginne againe: and if he will followe on his ſuite, it ſhall growe worſe and worſe. This is at al times to be ſeene, and men make but a ſport and game of it. The poore ſtraunger knoweth not to whome to make his mone: if he meete by chaunce with a lawyer he lamenteth and ſayeth: what a thing is this? I thought to haue founde ſome iuſtice, but there is nothing but confuſion: I ſee that all thinges are ruled by fauour. Such cryes (I ſay) and complaints a man ſhall heare euery day: and yet for all that, men care not for them, but paſſe on ſtill: but yet theſe things muſt come to a reckening before God. And why? It is not ſayd, Thou ſhalt not peruert the right of thine owne countreyman or Citizen. For why? It is ſufficient ÿ there is this generall rule for it. Thou ſhalt not peruert any mans right. But let vs knowe that ſtraungers are to be more ſpecially maintained, and ÿ God taketh not on himſelfe ÿ defence of them without iuſt cauſe: inſomuch that whoſoeuer offereth thẽ any outrage or wrong, ſhalbe called to pleade his cauſe before him. When we heare this, let vs looke more narrowely vnto ourſelues, and not think to dally with ſuch a maiſter as God is. But let vs learne to vſe ſuch rightfulnes towards men, ÿ if a ſtranger come before vs, he may haue as much right done for him, as if hee had all the fauour of the whole worlde, or as if he were well knowen vnto vs, and as if we did feare leaſt ſome reproch ſhould come vnto vs by the contrary, & as if he were able to ſeeke further to make vs puniſhed for our euill dealing. Let vs on our part doe that which our Lorde cõmandeth vs: eſpecially ſeeing that beſides the promiſe which he maketh, he alſo threatneth vs. On the one ſide he ſeeketh to winne vs by mildenes and gentlenes, ſaying: Hearken to mee: yee ſhall not looſe your labour when you doe good vnto ſtraungers and ſuch as are vnknowen vnto you. And againe on the other ſide (as I told you) he threatneth vs, to the intent we ſhould not thinke that we are eſcaped although men complaine not of vs. Yet notwithſtanding there be many with whom this warning beareth no ſway at all. The Lawe of God hath alwayes bin: and yet what iuſtice hath beene ſhewed vnto ſtrangers? Men haue doone the worſt they could vnto them, and the faulte is nothing accounted of. And why? For if I bee to doe iuſtice, and I ſee that in dooing the ſtranger right I ſhall offende him whom I knowe: O I will not doe it. And verily I knowe not through what madneſſe it cõmeth to paſſe, that all folke although they knowe that it is ill doone, ceaſe not for all that, to procure the bolſtering and bearing out of their owne countreymen and citizens, and of ſuch as are of the ſame place that they themſelues be of. And why? O will one ſay, our acquaintance muſt not be iniured. That is the common ſpeech. But in the meane while we pull the wrath of God vpon the whole towne and countrey, and yet we thinke not of it. If men be asked in this caſe; what? will ye be at defiance with God? They will ſay: No. We muſt doe Iuſtice, we muſt execute puniſhmentes. Againe if a man ſpeake of the oppreſſion which hath bin vſed towardes a ſtraunger, euerie man will bee a Iudge in the caſe and ſay: there is no reaſon that one which is in credit and eſtimation ſhould be borne withal, and a ſtranger troden vnder foote, but that hee to whome the right of the matter belongeth ſhould haue it. And yet for all this, when the thing commeth to the proofe, there is nothing but fauour and corruption; The poore ſtraungers are left and forſaken, and there is no Iuſtice to be had for them. Yee ſee howe this Lawe of GOD hath beene euill practiſed in all times. But this is no excuſe for vs. Let vs therefore bethinke ourſelues to pitie ſuch as are deſpiſed of the worlde, knowing that if wee vexe and grieue them, we offer God the iniurie. And if we helpe them, God wil accept of ſuch ſeruice. Aſmuch is to be ſayde concerning the widowes and fatherleſſe. The fatherleſſe are ſometimes deuoured. And why? They ſeeme to be left for a pray. The caſe is like as touching widowes. But God oppoſeth himſelfe againſt this wickedneſſe of men, and ſheweth that he hath a care of them. Let vs therefore walke in ſuch ſort in the preſence of God, that we reſpect not the worlde to ſay: O I feare that if I do not wel I ſhal heare of it. But let vs alwayes mind this poynt, that nothing can be hidden from the ſight of God: and although men beare with vs and we ſtand ſtil in their fauour, yet if the curſe of God light vpon our heads, all the friendſhips in the world ſhall ſtand vs in no ſtead. Let vs mind this; and in minding thereof, let vs be moued thereby to abſtaine from all wrong dooing, although wee be perſwaded that in reſpect of men wee may well and lawefully doe it. Nowe God purpoſely alleadgeth: That the people ought to remember howe they were ſometimes ſeruauntes in the Lande of Egypt, and that God brought them from thence euen to the intent that they ſhould walke as he appointed them. Willingly ought wee to haue compaſſion on an other mans miſerie, when we for our part haue beene pinched with the like. For he which neuer knewe what miſerie meant, hath no pitie on them which are diſtreſſed. But when we our ſelues haue taſted of many miſeries and afflictions, it ought to make vs the more pitifull to relieue thoſe which are in the like eſtate, which are preſently afflicted as well as we haue beene. And that is the cauſe why God in this place putteth the Iewes in minde, that they had beene ſeruauntes in the Lande of Egypt. For one which is borne in a rich houſe, which hath beene dainetily brought vp, which hath beene alwaies crouched vnto, which neuer had a crooked word giuen him to grieue him withall, ſuch a one when he ſeeth a poore man thinketh that hee is one of an other kinde than himſelfe is of, and hee vouchſafeth not to looke vppon him as on his neighbour. But if a man haue endured much trouble, when he ſeeth any one to be grieued and troden vnder foote, he bethinketh himſelfe thus: Alas I my ſelfe was ſometimes thus trampled on, and nowe albeit GOD hath exempted me from the like miſerie, yet muſt I not forgette that which I haue taſted of heretofore. And heereupon he calleth to minde all the afflictions which he hath ſuffered. What? I was grieued at the verie heart when ſuch wrong was done me; therefore I muſt nowe ſhewe that I pitie his caſe, who is preſently ſo oppreſſed. This affection is in vs by nature. God therefore leadeth vs vnto this conſideration. And heere we be warned howe greatly euery man is addicted to himſelfe. For if our affections were ſo well ruled as they ſhould be, there woulde bee greater kindeneſſe in vs to take pitie of them which endure afflictions. For there is not that man in the world, which ought not to bee a lookingglaſſe for vs, to behold our owne nature in him, becauſe that God hath ioyned vs al together. So when one endureth griefe and miſerie, we ſhoulde open our bowels (as I may ſay) vpon him, and ſuffer part of his griefe with him. But what? We are far ynough from doing of any ſuch thing. For euery of vs is too well contented to be at his owne eaſe and reſt, ẏ if we ſee others in miſerie, we leaue thē in the ſame caſe; nay we ſhut our eyes, and will not looke vppon them. Now for this cauſe it is needful that God ſhould bring vs home to our ſelues, to teache vs to ſay: Looke on thy ſelfe: what if thou wert in the ſame ſtate? It is a ſigne then that wee are too much wedded to our owne profite, when we haue ſo litle compaſſion on them which are in miſerie; and that we are worſe than the brute beaſtes, when wee are no otherwiſe moued in that behalfe. Yet neuertheleſſe it is not for nought that God leadeth vs in this wiſe vnto the minding of our owne condition, to ſhewe what wickedneſſe and corruption is in our nature. And ſeeing wee knowe it, let vs learne to vſe ſuch prickes as theſe are, to quicken vs vp to the diſcharge of our dueties, that when wee ſee any man moleſted, we may endeuour to helpe him according vnto our abilitie. And why? Becauſe he is a creature made vnto the Image of God, becauſe he is our brother, becauſe the like miſerie may betide vs, or hath alredie happened vnto vs, at which time we alſo deſired to be relieued. Let euery man therefore quicken vppe himſelfe by this meanes, as with a goade which we ſee God vſeth to pricke vs forward: and when we foreſlowe to do our duetie, let euery man accuſe himſelf and ſay, What? It ſeemeth that thou art become a beaſt in that thou takeſt no pitie on him which endureth miſerie: If thou wert in his place thou wouldeſt haue all the worlde runne to relieue thee: and canſt thou any longer number thy ſelfe in the aray of men, when thou takeſt no greater care of a creature which is made vnto the Image and likenes of God? Thus a man ought to quicken himſelfe vp in his dutie. Now if we be exhorted to haue ſuch pitie on thē which are in any kind of miſerie, how much leſſe may it be lawful for vs to come & lift vp ourſelues againſt thē like wilde beaſtes, and to tread them vnder foote, which are deſtitute of all ayde and helpe? God cōmandeth vs to relieue & to ſuccor them, and what wickednes were it then for vs to come to moleſt and trouble thē? So then let vs learne, firſt of all to abſtaine from all iniury and harme doing: and yet let vs not beare ourſelues in hande, ẏ we are ſo diſcharged, when we haue done no harme: but let vs furthermore endeuor to relieue ẏ oppreſſed, by helping them, and by bringing to paſſe ẏ they may find a way to be deliuered out of their miſerie: let euery man employ himſelfe hereunto. And if we thinke ẏ in reſpect of men our labour is but loſt, let vs know ẏ ſuch ſeruice of ours is acceptable vnto God, and that we ſhall not faile of his bleſſing: and let this ſtirre vs vp, accordingly as we are warned in this place.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good GOD with acknowledging of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than hitherunto wee haue doone: and that aboue all, (ſeeing hee hath ioyned vs together as brethren, adopting vs all into the number of his children) we may ſo ſerue and honour him, as we may therewall liue in brotherly loue one with an other, ſuccouring one another in all our neceſſities, and abſtayning from all malice, outrages, and deceites, in ſuch ſorte as our conuerſation in this worlde bee a true teſtimonie vnto vs that our God gouerneth vs by his ſpirite, and hath giuen vnto vs the marke of that inheritaunce whereunto wee labour to come. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely vnto vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xj. of February, 1556.

The CXLI. Sermon which is the ſixth vpon the foure and twentith Chapter.

19 When thou cutteſt downe thine harueſt in thy feelde, and haſt forgotten a ſheafe in the feeld, thou ſhalt not returne backe againe to fetch it: but it ſhalbee for the ſtranger, for the fatherleſſe, and for the widowe, that the Lorde thy God may bleſſe thee in all the workes of thy hands.

20 When thou gathereſt thine Oliues, thou ſhalt not returne againe to ſeeke ouer the braunches, but it ſhalbee for the ſtranger, for the fatherleſſe, and for the widowe.

21 VVhen thou gathereſt thy vineyard, thou ſhalt not gather the grapes which thou happeneſt to leaue behinde thee: but they ſhalbe for the ſtranger, for the fatherleſſe, and for the widowe.

22 Remember that thou waſt a ſeruant in the lande of Egypt, therefore I commaund thee to do this thing.

Deut.23.24

WE haue ſeene heretofore howe God ordayned, that in gathering in of the harueſt, and of the grapes of the vineyarde, they which were hyred, might whyle they were reaping and gathering of the grapes, eate their fill. And this permiſſion hee gaue vnto them, to ſhewe, that the rich muſt not ſo ſwallowe vp all thinges, but that they muſt alwayes beſtowe ſome portion on the poore: euery man according vnto the plentie and aboundance which hee hath. For ſee heere with what condition God leaueth his goods in rich mens handes; namely, to the intent that hauing the abilitie, they ſhoulde alſo take occaſion to relieue their neighbours which are in neceſſitie. And ſo this kindneſſe and gentleneſſe ought to bee amongeſt vs, that hee which hath wherewithall to bee liberal, ſhoulde beſtowe ſome parte of his aboundance vppon his neighbours. And although none bee rated touching his liberalitie, by way of taxe or ſeſſement, yet neuertheleſſe euery man ought to thinke that God hath giuen him plentie of corne and wine vppon condition, that he ſhould beſtowe ſome parte thereof on them which are in neede and neceſſitie. That which we haue nowe recited, tendeth to the ſame effect. For God ordayneth that when a man cutteth down his harueſt, gathereth his grapes; or beateth his Oliue trees, (as wee with vs doe our walnuttes) hee ſhoulde not bee ſo couetous as to rake in the vtmoſt eare of corne, to looke for the laſt grape, or to ſeeke after euery Oliue: but that hee which gathereth in the corne of his feelde, ſhoulde leaue ſomewhat after him for the poore to gleane, as for the fatherleſſe, for the widowes, and for the ſtraungers which haue no landes nor poſſeſſions of their owne. Yee ſee what a reaſonable lawe God ſetteth vs downe in this place, to the intent wee ſhould knowe, that if God hath giuen vs aboundance of goods beyonde our owne vſe, wee ought not to bee ouer niggiſh of them: but that they which ſtande in neede, muſt bee ſome way releeued and ſuccoured by vs. There is alſo a promiſe added to correct that diſtruſt which is in men. For God ſayeth that when men ſhall ſo doe, hee will encreaſe their wealth which haue beene liberall to helpe the poore and needie. And beſides this, hee putteth the Iewes in minde, that it is hee by whome they were brought into that lande which they poſſeſſed, & that they helde it at his hande. As if the chiefe Lorde of the fee ſhoulde ſay vnto them which holde of his tenure: What? The lande you haue is mine, and I haue graunted it vnto you with condition that I ſhall receiue at leaſtwiſe the rentes and ſeruices. God therefore in token of a kinde of homage, reſerueth vnto himſelfe, the gleaning and other thinges for the poore that come after to gather the grapes and the oliues which are left behinde. God ſayeth that theſe are royalties which belong vnto him, and that hee giueth and beſtoweth them on ſuch as haue neede: and therefore, that the riche men ought not to bee grieued therewith, as if they had loſt any thing, or as if their owne goods were taken from them: for God ſaith, al is mine. Ye ſee then in effect what is here conteined. Now let vs note well, that God meaneth not ẏ the poore ſhould be in ſuch wiſe relieued, as that the rich ſhould be ſpoyled of that which they poſſeſſe. For what a confuſion and diſorder would that breede? We muſt therfore note, that God leaueth vnto euery man whatſoeuer he poſſeſſeth, either by way of inheritance, or by buying, or by any other iuſt and lawfull title. And hereby the poore ar warned, not to ranſack or make hauock of whatſoeuer commeth in their way, as many doe, which think they may ſnatch away any thing by good right, ſo they be not puniſhed by law, nor haue any to witneſſe againſt them. What? I haue great neede ſayeth one. Yea, but what neede ſoeuer a man ſtandeth in, yet God will not haue the ciuil order broken, and all right peruerted. If the rich diſcharge not their dueties, but be ſo cruell as to ſuffer the poore to dye in their neede, they ſhall render an account thereof, but that ſhalbe before the heauenly Iudge. But in the meane while the poore ought to take thinges patiently, they muſt abſtaine from all malice, from al rauine, from all pilling and ſpoyling. This then ought to be diligẽtly obſerued in the firſt place. For our Lord ſayth not in this place: he which hath need of corne in harueſt time, let him take a reaphook, and go and cut his neighbors corne to carrie it to the mill: but he ſpeaketh only of leaſing after the harueſt is in. But a man ſhall ſee perilous gleaners nowadayes. For if a man ſet not diligent watch ouer his poſſeſſions, euery body will take his ſhare; men are growen to ſuch vnrulineſſe, that there is no vpright dealing vſed: men haue no regarde to thinke that God hath diſtributed the goods of this worlde according vnto his owne good pleaſure, and that his will is, that hee which is richeſt ſhould poſſeſſe that which hee holdeth, and that no man ſhoulde doe him any wrong for it: no not although hee bee one of the vnſatiable gulfes, which thinke they haue neuer ynough. Yet for all that God will not haue any man to touche their goods or to doe them any wrong. But this is little regarded. And ſo although God directes his talke in this place expreſſely to the riche; yet neuertheleſſe hee giueth the poore a leſſon alſo, and meaneth to brydle them from going into another mans feelde to conuey away ſecretely what they can catch, and from entring into their neighbours vineyarde to gather grapes at their pleaſure. Nay, he will haue them to abſtaine from other mens goods, vntill ſuch tyme as they may gleane after the harueſt, and gather the grapes which remaine after the vintage. For this leaue is granted them, ſo they come not to ſpoyle like theeues, but to take that which God hath reſerued for them. And in verie deede wee ſuffer dogges to eate the crummes and other ſcrappes which fall vnder the tables: and ſhall wee not ſuffer our brethren, which are made to the image and likeneſſe of God? Ought not they to haue part of our aboundance, ſo as they might come and haue at leaſtwiſe ſome little pittance to licke vp? What great matter is it to gather the grapes which are left when the vintage is gathered? What great matter is it to gleane after the harueſt? Verilie it is but a ſmall thing. And therfore it were too too exceſſiue crueltie in men, if they which haue lands & poſſeſſions, after they haue gathered in the fruite of them, will yet bee ſuch niggards as not to permit ẏ poore to haue that which they might gather after them. But becauſe men are ſo diſtruſtfull, that they thinke the whole earth will fayle them, God to make this doctrine more auailable ſayeth: I will make thee to proſper, thou ſhalt bee encreaſed and multiplyed through my bleſſing and fauour, when thou doeſt ſo. There is no doubt but God meant in this place to correct the vnbeleefe which raigneth ouermuch in vs, in that euery of vs thinketh that hee ſhall neuer haue ynough: O ſayeth one, ſuch miſfortune may betyde mee. I muſt prouide for ſuch a harde time. And this is the cauſe why men ſnatche and ſcratche to themſelues on all ſides and cannot bee ſatiſfied, but the more they haue the more is their couetous deſire inflamed, as hee which is ſicke of the dropſie, the more hee drinketh the more hee thyrſteth. And what is the cauſe hereof? Euen our diueliſh vnbeleefe and diſtruſtfulneſſe in that wee conſider not that it is Gods owne office to nouriſh vs. And whereas wee aske of him euery day our dayly bread, there is not one among an hundred which vnderſtandeth what is meant by that worde: for wee deſire to be fedde at Gods handes. The riche vſe this fourme of prayer aſwell as the poore; and confeſſe thereby that they ſo poſſeſſe their goods, as if God gaue them a portion euery daye for their nouriſhment, and that that whatſoeuer they haue in their garner, they doe receiue it at his hande. But none thinketh hereon. And that is the cauſe why men are ſo inſatiable, and burne with ſuch couetouſneſſe, that they are alwayes raking to themſelues, and making vp huge heapes of wealth, and are neuer contented. Will wee then liue contentedly? Let vs haue our recourſe vnto God, knowing that if hee bleſſe vs, wee ſhall haue ſufficient wherewithall to bee ſuſtayned and nouriſhed. To this intent therefore is this promiſe ſet downe here, that God wil bleſſe them which are no ſuch niggardes towardes the poore, but that they ſuffer and permit them to bee ſomeway releeued by gleaning and gathering the ſmall frute which is left behinde. And ſo as often as wee are moued to doe any almes, let vs call this warning to mynde and correct our niggardlineſſe thereby, which proceedeth (as I tolde you [illegible]) this diſtruſt of ours, that wee conſider not that it is God which muſt prouide for vs.

Nowe it is true in deede, that when we giue an almes wee are not conſtrayned to ridde our ſelues cleane of all that wee haue. For Saint Paul ſheweth that God ſpareth vs heerein. I ſay not (ſayeth hee) that the poore muſt take that which the riche haue, but that at leaſtwiſe of your aboundance, you muſt ſuccour ſuch as are in neede, and ſee them ſomewhat releeued by you, as who woulde ſaye: It is not ynough that I haue for mine owne vſe, and that God ſhewe him 2.Cor.8.14 himſelfe ſo liberall towardes mee ſo as I want nothing; but foraſmuch as I ſee my neighbours pyne away through neede, they muſt haue ſome portion of that which is mine, and they muſt at leaſtwiſe feele ſomewhat of the bleſſing of God, when I am at mine eaſe. That is the thing whereunto ſaint Paul leadeth vs. So then let vs profite our ſelues by this place where it is ſayde: Thou ſhalt gather in the fruite of thy vineyarde, thou ſhalt cut downe the harueſt of thy feelde, thou ſhalt beate thy Oliue trees, knowing that it is a ſpeciall priuiledge, which God giueth vnto men, and which we ought to eſteeme well of, when euery man poſſeſſeth his owne without gainſaying, ſo as hee which hath a feelde, gathereth the corne to maintaine himſelfe & his familie, and hee which hath a vineyarde, reapeth the commoditie of the wine. Seeing the Lord granteth this vnto vs, let vs acknowledge his fatherly goodnes towardes vs: and let it ſtirre vs vp to releeue and ſuccour thẽ which are in neede and diſtreſſe: and when wee ſee the poore languiſhing in their miſeries, and oppreſſed with neceſſitie, let vs bee mooued with ſome pitie towardes them; let their caſe touch vs to the quicke: and albeit in reſpect of men wee may ſay: This is mine; yet notwithſtanding, let vs haue an eye vnto GOD, who hath beſtowed it on vs vnder condition that we ſhoulde not keepe all of it in our owne handes, but diſtribute it in ſuch wiſe as wee ſee agreeable on the one ſide to our owne abilitie, and on the other, to the neede and neceſſitie of our neighbours.

But let vs returne to the promiſe. For as I tolde you, a man might ſay: Well, I haue wherewith to finde mee this yeare: but what ſhall I haue for the yeare which followeth? A man muſt not aſſure himſelfe of that which he hath: For the corne which hee hath in his garners may bee conſumed: God can ſoone cauſe it to vaniſh. And it muſt not bee in way of hypocriſie that wee muſt ſaye, Giue vs this day our daily or ordinarie breade. For thereby wee confeſſe, that they which haue neuer ſo much, haue nothing at all, except God make it auaileable to their vſe. So then let euery man haue conſideration to ſay: What may this boote mee? Although I bee ſtored and furniſhed with all thinges; yet God may bereaue mee of all: he hath the heauens in his hande to ſhut them vp, and hee ſayeth that hee will make the heauens Leuit.26.19 as harde as yron, and the earth ſhalbee hardened like braſſe, ſo that wee ſhall not wring out of it one droppe of ſuſtenance for vs. Will wee then that the Lorde who hath hitherto fed vs, and beene our foſter father, euen vnto this preſent time, ſhall continue to doe the like vnto the ende? Let vs take heede that wee diſtruſt not his goodnes, and thereby bee hindered to bee kyndhearted towardes them which haue neede of our helpe. Let vs therefore helpe them, yea, euen without ſtaying vppon any other thing than this preſent promiſe, That the bleſſing of God ſhalbee vppon vs. Let vs be enclyned vnto pitie and compaſſion, to releeue them which ſtande in neede of our helpe, knowing that when God hath giuen vs one good yeare, if wee bee gentle and kindhearted to ſuccour our neighbours, hee will alwayes encreaſe his benefites and bleſſings more and more vpon vs: as Saint Paul alſo ſheweth in the ſecond Epiſtle to the Corinthians, where hee handleth 2.Cor. 8. & 9.Chapt. this matter at large. Let vs therefore haue this alwayes before our eyes, as ỹ verie point whereunto the ſcripture leadeth vs: namely ỹ we muſt be fully aſſured, and thorowlie reſolued, that our Lord wil neuer forget vs. Whẽ we are once thorowly perſwaded of this, doubtles we wil eſteeme more of the onlie bleſſing of God, than of all ỹ euer we might haue gathered & heaped vp together. Though we haue al ỹ prouiſion in ỹ world: it would not ſuffice vs ſo well as this onlie contentment will doe, to ſay: I haue my God which hath promiſed not to forget me, but to continue his bountifulnes alwayes vnto me: I haue euer found him liberall towards me euen vntill this day, and hee wil doe yet more for me, if I cõmit my ſelfe wholie vnto him and to his prouidẽce. Ye ſee then what we are to learne as touching this promiſe.

Let vs come now vnto that which God addeth, that is: That the Iewes were ſeruants in Egypt, and that he brought them out from thence: (as we ſaw yeſterday.) But he repeateth the ſame thing againe, & that not without good cauſe. For as it was yeſterday touched, if men be welthie, there is much crouching vnto them becauſe of their riches, they ſeparate themſelues as it were from mankinde, and they beare themſelues in hand that they are a degree aboue them, & the poore may not touche any thing of theirs. To bee ſhort, if God would haue beleueed them, he ſhould haue made a ſeueral world for them: for to their ſeeming, the poore are not woorthie to haue any dwelling with them. And that is becauſe they are not touched with other mens afflictions, to ſaie: Alas behold he is my fleſh, how wreched ſoeuer he be, as the prophet Eſaie Eſa. 58.7. Col. 3.12. 1.Iohn. 3.17 ſaith, who leadeth vs to ỹ minding of this point, when hee woulde haue vs enclyned to pitie and compaſſion, ſo as our bowels ſhoulde yearne at the afflictions of our brethren, as the ſcripture ſpeaketh. But there is not one which thinketh hereon. God therefore perceiuing that riches doe blinde men in ſuch wiſe, and that their eyes are readie to burſt, (for that is the ſimilitude which Dauid vſeth in the 73. Pſalme) ſayeth: Remember that thou waſt a ſeruaunt in the lande of Egypt. And ſo whereas the Iewes are exhorted in this wiſe, it is to the intent they ſhoulde not bee puffed vp with pride through their aboundance, or that beeing fatte and well fed, they ſhould not become like reſtie Iades as it is ſaide in the ſong: but that they ſhoulde alwayes bethinke themſelues thus: Wee were ſometimes in bondage, and that in ſuch cruell bondage, as none could bee greater, wee were in thraldome like poore ſlaues, but God hath deliuered vs. The remembrance of this one thing ought to abate all the pryde of the Iewes, and moreouer to leade them to pitifull compaſſion to helpe thoſe which were poore and needie among them.

As for example, if there were ſtraungers which had neither vineyardes nor other poſſeſſions: if there were widowes and fatherleſſe among them, they ought to think: Alas, when our fathers were cruelly afflicted in the lande of Egypt, they woulde faine haue beene ſomewhat releeued: is it not reaſon then that wee nowe ſhoulde doe the like? This (ſay I) is the meaning of God, when hee ſpeaketh of the bondage of Egypt. Moreouer, hee warneth the Iewes (as wee haue declared afore) that they poſſeſſe not the lande of Chanaan for their inheritaunce by any other title, than becauſe it was giuen them by GOD. It is therefore all one as if the chiefe Lorde ſhoulde require his royalties, his homage, & his other right, which are due vnto him. For God ſeemeth thus to ſay: I haue giuen you the land of Chanaan: but I haue reſerued the gleaning & ſuch like things for my ſelfe. And therefore deceiue mee not of that which is mine. Beholde, I appoynt the poore in my behalfe to goe and gather vp theſe things.

Nowe as for vs, it is true in deede that wee dwell not in the land of Chanaan, as did the Iewes, wee haue no ſuch order of gouernement as they had, neither are we of the ſtocke of Abraham, there are no ſuch portions of land allotted vs as are written of in Ioſua; and yet neuertheleſſe this ought alwayes to bee in force amongeſt vs; that hee which is of wealth, is bounde according to his meaſure and aboundance, to releeue them which are in need. Saint 2.Cor.8.14. Paul ſpeaketh not vnto the Iewes, he ſpeaketh not for the time of the figures vnder the lawe, but hee ſetteth foorth this doctrine & this rule vnto all the faithfull in generall, and will haue men obſerue it vntill the ende of the worlde. Therefore let vs note that whenſoeuer through our niggardlineſſe wee withdrawe our ſelues from helping our neighbours as wee ought, we are reprooued by this worde: What? whatſoeuer thou haſt, thou haſt it from the hande of God. And vnder what condition? For ſee I pray you, how men diſcharge them ſelues with ſlightneſſe; What? ſayeth one, Is not this mine? Yes, but yet oughteſt thou to bee kindehearted towardes ſuch as are in neede. For art thou riche? It is not becauſe of thy faire eyes [as they ſay.] In deede God hath giuen more to thee than to many others; but for all that, hath hee reſerued nothing for himſelfe? Hath he giuen all ouer vnto thee to make hauock of it? Although euery man enioy his owne feelde, and his owne vineyarde, although euery man eate of his owne corne and drinke of his owne wine, muſt charitie therefore ceaſe and bee layde aſide? Col.3.14. Muſt it bee diminiſhed? Is it not in degree aboue all the ciuil orders and lawes in the worlde? Is it not the bonde of perfection? So then they which are by nature ſuch miſerable pinchpennies and ſuch niggardes, they which whyne ſo when they ſhoulde giue an almes, and are as willing to doe it as a Beare to goe to the ſtake: let them fight againſt that vice of theirs, in ſuch wiſe as our Lorde ſheweth vs in this place, and let them ſay: Howe nowe? That which thou haſt is none of thine, ſauing that thy God hath giuen it thee. Conſider nowe what couenant hee hath made with thee. It is not that thou ſhouldeſt bee a gulfe to deuour and ſwallowe vp all, but to the intent that thy brethren ſhoulde bee ſomewhat relieued by thee, and hee vouchſafeth thee the honour to bee the diſpoſer of his goods. If God gaue me no more than I needed, yea, if I had not a crum of breade more than woulde feede mee: yet were that verie much: and coulde I euer diſcharge my ſelfe of my duetie to magnifie him ſufficiently for that his bountifulneſſe & goodneſſe towardes mee? No verily. But when as hee giueth a man more than hee needeth, hee appointeth him after a ſorte to repreſent his owne perſon, as if hee ſhoulde ſaye, Whereas it is my propertie to doe good: for all good thinges proceede from mee: It is I which make the earth to yeelde fruite: It is I which do giue it ſtrength to bring foorth her fruites: I doe as it were giue him mine owne office, and aſſigne him to bee as it were my lieuetenaunt: and howe greate an honour is that? All the riche therefore which haue wherewith to doe good, are doutleſſe as it were the officers of God to exerciſe that which is properly belonging vnto him, to wit, to helpe their neighbours to liue. Therefore ſith God vouchſafeth vs ſuch honour; are not we too ſhamefully malicious and more beaſtly than the beaſts themſelues, if wee bee not mooued with pitie and compaſſion towardes the poore? So then let vs remember this worde when it is ſayde, that God gaue the land of Chanaan vnto his people on condition, that the rich ſhoulde pittie the poore: and at this daye let vs applye this doctrine vnto our ſelues, according vnto that forealleaged warning which Saint Paul giueth vs.

Nowe wee are likewiſe warned in generall, to acknowledge the miſeries wherein wee were when God reached out his hande vnto vs, to the intent wee may bee ſo much the more feruent to ſerue and honour him, and to yeeld our ſelues wholly vnto his obedience. And that extendeth verie farre: for in generall when God meaneth to preſſe vs more neerely to diſcharge our dueties towardes him, and that euery one ſhoulde dedicate him ſelfe wholy vnto his ſeruice; hee putteth vs in minde that hee hath drawen vs from out of the deepeſt dungeon of death, and that wee were ſometimes the bondſlaues of Satan, that wee were helde faſt bounde vnder eternall damnation, & (to be ſhort) that we were as good as plunged in hell. Loe what inheritaunce wee haue by our birth, vntill GOD caſt his eye vppon vs, and of his mercie drawe vs out of the horrible confuſion wherein wee are and which wee bring with vs.

But nowe let vs looke vnto our firſt birth of all: Our Lorde created vs after his own image and likeneſſe. It is true: but that was wholly defaced and wiped out in vs by the ſinne of Adam: wee are accurſed, wee are by nature ſhut out from all hope of life: but behold our God hath redeemed vs by the bloud of his ſonne, & hath opened vnto vs the gate of heauen. Howe much therefore are wee bounde vnto him, if we conſider our firſt eſtate, and what wee were before hee aduaunced vs vnto this dignitie? And this is not yet all, wee were alſo wretched vnbeleeuers. For albeit that Ieſus Chriſt was the redeemer of the whole worlde, yet had wee as much as lay in vs, renounced that benefite, nay wee had falſified our baptiſme, whereby God from our infancie had marked vs, to ſay that wee ſhould bee of his houſe and of his Church. And howe haue wee liued all the time that wee were Idolaters? Wee haue annihilated Gods grace, whereby he had called vs to him, at leaſtwiſe as much as laye in vs: but the goodneſſe of God alwayes ſurmounted, and his truth was ſo firme and ſure, that it hath ouercome all the wickedneſſe of men: in ſo much that though they haue beene vnfaithfull, yet notwithſtanding GOD continueth ſtill to ſhewe himſelfe faithfull, ſo that the baptiſme which wee had defaced, remayneth ſtill in his full force: but it is not long of vs; for as I ſayde afore: wee were plunged in all vncleanneſſe and filthines: and were ſo defiled both in bodie and ſoule with all manner of defilementes, that wee coulde not bee but eſtraunged wholly from God. But yet hath hee plucked vs backe againe; and as nowe we bee become citizens of the kingdome of heauen, and are reconciled vnto him, and are adopted for his children, and yet wee are vnthankfull vnto him, yea, and we growe prowd againſt him; inſomuch that diuerſe preſume wonderouſly of themſelues, and yet knowe not that they are beholding vnto God for all the good which they haue. Yee ſee then how wee be moued to humble our ſelues, and that in acknowledging the benefites and giftes which we haue receiued of God, wee ought to endeuour to vſe them ſo, as all may bee referred vnto his honour, that hee may bee ſerued of vs, and euery of vs apply himſelfe, firſt vnto his obedience, and then to haue cõpaſſion of our neighbours.

Ephe.2.19.

When wee beholde the wretched vnbeleeuers in the Popedome, which are ſtill carryed away ſo headlõg in ignorance and in the damnable ſuperſtitions of Papiſtrie: alas wee ought to thinke that wee were like vnto them, vntill God deliuered vs from thence: and that wee are forgetfull heereof through contempt, as wee ſee that many diſdayne the Papiſtes and mocke them, and haue no pitie of them. And why? Becauſe they conſider not what they themſelues haue beene; ne magnifie the grace of God to ſaye: If God had not reached vs his hande, what had become of vs? Wee had remayned in our deſtruction, wherewith we had beene ouerwhelmed. Let vs therefore thinke hereupon when wee beholde them which are yet as it were reiected and forſaken of God: let vs knowe that our caſe and theirs was alike: and let it mooue vs to humilitie, that all pryde may bee caſt downe, and wee endeuour to winne them, as much as lyeth in vs, which are yet wandering from the way of ſaluation: let vs acknowledge that wee had once neede of ſuch helpe and ſuccour, and that God was not niggardly towardes vs, to the intent that wee for our parte ſhoulde not bee negligent to employ our ſelues likewiſe for our neyghbour, & by that meanes ſhewe that wee are his children, ſeeing it hath pleaſed him to ſhewe himſelfe a father towardes vs. Nowe I graunt that there are many which are wonderfully greeued when a man putteth them in minde what they haue beene in time paſt.

If a man bee become riche and is aduaunced to honour, hee woulde haue no man to remember him what hee was afore: but hee is carryed away with ſuch an headleſſe ouerweening, that hee ſurely thinketh that hee is fallen from the clowdes, and woulde gladly ſo blinde the eyes of the whole worlde, that men ſhoulde conſider nothing but his preſent excellencie. But our Lorde, not without cauſe, bringeth vs backe agayne. And why? For (as I tolde you) men are ſubiect to this forgetting of them ſelues when God hath once exalted them, and thereupon they diſdayne their neighbours, and pride ingendreth crueltie: (as it is ſaid in the ſixteenth Chapter of Ezechiell,) where Sodome is ſet downe for an example thereof. God ſayth that the pride which was founde in Sodome, prouoked his wrath and vengeance againſt that citie. For when they had once aboundaunce of all things, and were growen fatte, when they had meate and drinke at will: then began they (ſaith hee) to bee puffed vp in pryde, and afterwarde withdrewe their handes from the poore, and thought that it was ynough, ſo that they themſelues were furniſhed. Let vs therefore know, that our Lorde perceiuing the vice whereunto wee are ouermuch enclyned and giuen, meant to prouide ſuch remedie for it, as hee knewe to bee fit and conuenient for our ſaluation. So then if wee bethinke our ſelues well, wee ſhall alwayes finde iuſt reaſon to moue vs vnto kindneſſe towardes our neighbours. There is yet another thing which ought to induce vs heereunto, namely, if wee conſider thus with our ſelues: euen that I am a man, and that I am endued with ſome ſpeciall qualitie aboue others, it is of God; I am beholden to him for it, it is he that hath giuen mee that prerogatiue. But how ſoeuer I fare, I cannot cut my ſelfe off from mankinde: I am deſcended from the ſtocke of Adam which is wholly accurſed: and as for that knowledge which I haue of Gods trueth, it is a ſpeciall gifte which hee hath giuen mee: I haue it not by nature: and farther I am ſubiect to all the miſeries and wretchedneſſes in the worlde: if I bee to day in honour, to morrowe God may put mee to infamie and ſhame: if I be in health, God may caſt mee into ſickneſſe. Wee ſee how

Act.12.23. Kings and Princes themſelues haue beene eaten vp ſometimes with vermine and with rottenneſſe, and haue beene ſo ſtinking, that they haue loathed euen themſelues; whereby a man might perceiue the hande of God viſibly vppon them . Therefore when wee ſee ſuch examples, it ought to humble vs. And ſhall not this humilitie breede a brotherly kindheartedneſſe in vs to helpe our neighbours , or at leaſt wiſe to bewayle and to pitie the miſerie wherein they are, ſeeking as much as lyeth in vs to relieue and ſuccour them ? So then let vs alwayes thinke on this : Thou waſt a ſeruaunt in the lande of Egypt , and therefore I commaunde thee to doe thus.

Nowe when our Lorde ſayeth , I commaund thee to doe ſo, he taketh that as granted, which I haue alreadie touched, to wit, that becauſe hee is the Redeemer of this people, therefore they are bounde vnto him. You owe all thinges vnto mee (ſayeth hee): and ſeeing it is ſo, I will haue you pay ſuch a tribute in way of reknowledging of thoſe goods and lands, which you holde of mee: and I require nothing but that which is mine. Nowe when wee haue wel conſidered hereuppon, let vs take the expoſition hereof as Saint Paul deliuereth it vnto vs in the fourteenth Chapter of his Epiſtle to the Romanes: and wee ſhall ſee howe profitable this doctrine is for vs. For, for this cauſe (ſayth he) Ieſus Chriſt dyed and roſe againe, to the intent that wee ſhould be his, both while wee liue and when wee dye. Beholde here a bond which wee cannot eſcape, and woe be vnto him which ſeeketh to exempt himſelfe from it: to wit, to dedicate both our life and death vnto his ſeruice, who hath ſo loued vs and helde vs ſo deare, that hee hath not ſpared his owne life , to winne vs vnto himſelfe and vnto God his father. Seeing then that hee hath ſo redeemed vs, that we are his inheritance, and that hee declareth that we are wholie his, & that wee belong properly vnto him, it is good reaſon that whenſoeuer hee commaundeth vs any thing, wee ſhould lay our hande on our mouth, and receiue without any gainſaying whatſoeuer he putteth vnto vs. For ſeeing hee is our Redeemer and that wee hold of him whatſoeuer wee haue, are wee not ouer blockiſh, if wee ſubmit not our ſelues vnto him and reſt altogither on his will ? And that is the cauſe alſo why GOD vſeth this preface in his Exod.20.2. lawe: I am the euerliuing thy God which haue brought thee out of the lande of Egypt. Before that God ſetteth downe any commaundement to rule the life of his people by, hee ſaith: Know yee that I haue alreadie purchaſed you to ſerue mee. I graunt wee haue not beene brought out of the lande of Egypt; but yet the redemption which hath beene wrought for vs is much more precious: for wee are deliuered from the bottomleſſe pit of hell. For as much therefore as wee of our owne nature are ſo ſlowe to ſerue God, or rather ſo reſtie, that wee drawe cleane backewarde from his will: becauſe wee receiue not the yoke quietly, but are as young vntamed and vnhandled heiffers, or rather as ſtiffenecked buls. For we ſee how ſome are ſo headſtrong and brainſicke, that a man can by no meanes rule them; and others are ſpitefull and froward, full of rebellion, and vnreclaymable. Sith we ſee it is ſo harde a matter to bring vs in ſubiection vnder GOD; let vs quicken vp our ſelues in this ſort and ſaye: Howe nowe ? Knoweſt thou not who it is that ſpeaketh ? Is it not hee who hath redeemed vs? And ſeeing that wee are his, muſt hee haue ſo much a doe to winne vs vnto himſelfe ? Shal wee ſo reſiſt him ? Muſt hee bee fayne to fight with vs when hee woulde frame vs to his wil? Doe not we ſhewe our ſelues monſters in ſo dooing? And are we not to be holden for deteſtable perſons ? Verily if wee looke well to our ſelues, wee ſhall finde that this is not the onely cauſe whereby wee are bound vnto God: hee might vpbrayde vs with his creating of vs. And if wee bee his creatures, is it not good reaſon that hee ſhoulde quietly haue the mayſtrie of vs ? And what creatures are wee? He ſhalbee ſerued of the Oxen and Aſſes, hee ſhalbee ſerued of the earth which is without all ſenſe and feeling, and of corne and of wine and of all other ſenſeleſſe thinges: for wee ſee howe God imployeth them as it ſeemeth good vnto him. But hee hath created vs after his owne image and likeneſſe. Was he bounde to make vs reaſonable creatures, and to giue vs ſuch excellencie and dignitie ? Nay verily. Let vs knowe then that it ought to mooue vs to yeelde our ſelues wholly vnto his obedience, for aſmuch as wee ſee that hee hath preferred vs before aſſes, horſes, dogges, and other beaſtes, and before ſtones and other dead and ſenſeleſſe creatures. But there is yet more (as I haue ſayde) to wit, the redemption which God hath wrought for vs; which deſerueth that wee ſhoulde ſuffer our ſelues to bee gouerned by him: and that whenſoeuer he ſpeaketh, it is to be preſuppoſed that he hath all authoritie ouer vs, and that hee borroweth it not any where elſe, but hath it dewe vnto him, as vnto our ſoueraigne King.

But let vs farther note , that God meaneth not to wreſt from vs any ſeruile or forcible ſubiection, but woulde haue vs of our owne good will quietly to yeelde vnto that which he ſaieth. Why vſeth hee theſe wordes : Thou waſt a ſeruant, but I haue nowe ſet thee at libertie ? There is no dout but that hee meant to winne vs vnto him ſelfe by this myldneſſe. As if hee had ſaid: Go to, I might in deede conſtrayn you to ſerue mee: but I will haue you to ſerue me with a free heart: I will haue you like a chylde which taketh pleaſure in obeying and pleaſing of his father: I will not holde you as ſlaues and bondemen, but I woulde haue you offer your ſelues vp vnto mee as it were in ſacrifice. Nowe wee knowe that the ſacrifices which wee offer vnto God muſt bee offered with a free good wil & al ẏ euer he requireth of vs, he caleth ſacrifices. And therfore let vs note, ẏ by his receiuing of vs vnto himſelfe, after hee hath redeemed vs, he giueth vs to vnderſtand ẏ he meaneth not to hale vs to him by force, nor to hamper vs with cordes and chaines, nor to wreſt I knowe not what from vs, neither cōmeth he like a ſherife or bayliffe to leuy any thing of vs; but exhorteth vs mieldely: and ſheweth vs that ſith he hath redeemed vs, it is good reaſon that we ſhould be his and alſo all that euer hee hath put into our handes: And that ſeeing wee holde all of him, and by thoſe thinges hee teſtifieth his fatherlie goodneſſe towardes vs: therefore wee ought to bee ſo much the more moued and enclined too doe whatſoeuer it ſhall pleaſe him to commaund vs. And that is the cauſe alſo why the holy ſcripture vſeth ſuch amiable ſpeeches as theſe: I exhorte 2.Cor.5.20. you: I pray you. When Saint Paule ſpake, hee might haue vſed the authoritie of God: For when we bring the lawe, when we reprehende vices, when we exhort vnto that which is commaunded vs; ſurely it is God that ſpeaketh: and wee take it from him whatſoeuer wee vtter with our mouthes. But yet God in the perſon of ſaint Paul prayeth vs: and therefore wee ought to be aſhamed, if wee yeelde not thereunto, ne be meekened therewith, what hardeneſſe ſoeuer be in vs. So then let euery of vs learne to quicken vp himſelfe, when we ſee ſuch looſeneſſe in our ſelues, and that we are ſo ſlowe that wee rather recoyle backewarde than ſet ourſelues forwarde to any good thing. Conſider O wretched creature after what ſort thy God directeth his ſpeech vnto thee: hee commeth familiarly vnto thee: hee ſayeth not, Beholde I am your king: I haue all rule and ſuperioritie ouer you, and therefore I muſt handle you roughly: hee ſpeaketh not after that manner: but he ſayeth: I am come nigh vnto you. And for what cauſe elſe but to be your ſauiour? And this hee doeth not for his owne profite, but for our ſaluation: therefore ſith wee ſee that our Lorde vſeth ſuch gentleneſſe and mildeneſſe towardes vs, wee ought to fare the better by it euery one of vs, & to take occaſion thereby to quicken vp ourſelues the better in our duties.

And let vs note alſo howe God ſayth: I commaunde thee to doe ſo. And why? To the intent we ſhould liſten vnto his mouth, & depende wholely thereupon: and not euery man order himſelfe after his owne fancie and ſay: O I doe this in the honour of God, and is it not ynough? Euery man muſt not bring his owne opinion before God, to ſay: We muſt do this or that becauſe we thinke it to be good: but God will haue men ſimply to hearken and to follow without any exception, whatſoeuer hee calleth them vnto. And whē he leadeth vs in this wiſe vnto his own will, it is all one as if he had cut off all thoſe excuſes to ſay: And when I doe thus, will it not do well if I vſe ſuch a meane? GOD (I ſay) will not haue vs to take ſuch aduauntage of him, that euery one ſhould order himſelfe according to his owne pleaſure: but hee will haue his worde hearkened vnto, and obeyed without any gaineſaying. So then will wee haue a certaine rule? Wil we not wander in our life as wild and ſauage beaſtes? Let vs heare God ſpeake; and hauing heard him, let vs hold ourſelues vnto that which he ſayth: and let vs not preſume to bring in our replyes and ſay: yea and this would do well, and that were not amiſſe. But let vs bethinke ourſelues thus: Doth God commaund vs to doe ſo? It is not ynough to put yͤ whole world to ſilence, and to bridle not onely our tongues, but alſo our heartes, ſo as we preſume not to go againſt him, but yeelde him the honour which he requireth, and ſay: Lorde we are heere: And then if we wil ſpeake; it muſt be but to ſay, Amen Lorde. And therefore when he commaundeth vs any thing, let vs knowe that we muſt yeelde our conſentes vnto it, and that not by force or conſtraint, but willingly; and we muſt obey it, not by halfes, but fully and wholely, and not vſurpe any ſuch libertie, as to doe whatſoeuer wee thinke good, but ſuffer him to gouerne vs and to beare rule ouer our thoughtes and workes, that we may altogether be his.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, praying him to make vs to feele them more and more. And becauſe he hath beſtowed all thinges vpon vs, and ſheweth himſelfe ſo liberall a father towardes vs, let vs for our parte endeuour to ſhewe ourſelues his children, enforcing ourſelues to doe well, and to relieue and ſuccour them which are in neede. And foraſmuch as we feele ourſelues ſo far indebted vnto our GOD, let vs be ſtirred vp the more to acknowledge this ineſtimable benefite that hee hath done for vs when it pleaſed him to draw vs out of the gulfe of hell, and hath called vs to the hope of euerlaſting life, in the which he maineteineth and preſerueth vs dayly by his worde: and pray we him to confirme vs therein better and better, vntill he hath brought vs into the full poſſeſſion and enioying of that euerlaſting inheritaunce which he hath promiſed vnto vs, and which hee hath purchaſed for vs by the bloude of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely vnto vs, but alſo vnto all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xij of Februarie., 1556.

The CXLII.Sermon which is the firſt vpon the fiue and twentith Chapter.

WHen there is any ſtrife betweene men, they ſhall come vnto Iudgemẽt: and they ſhall haue Iuſtice done them, by declaring him iuſt which is iuſt, and by pronouncing him wicked which is wicked.

2 And if the wicked be founde worthy of beating, the Iudge ſhall cauſe him to be layde down and to be beaten before his face, according to his treſpaſſe, vnto a certaine number of ſtripes.

3 Fortie ſtripes ſhall he cauſe him to haue, and not aboue: leaſt if hee ſhoulde be beaten aboue this number of ſtripes, thy brother ſhould appeare deſpiſed in thy ſight.

4 Thou ſhalt not muſſell the oxe his mouth which treadeth out the corne.

OVr Lorde in this place ſheweth thẽ which haue the charge of Iuſtice, what they ought to do when anie man hath wronged his neyghbour. For wee 1.Tim.2,2. knowe that ciuill order is ordayned on earth, to the ende that euery man might liue quietly, ſo as the weaker bee not borne to the grounde by the ſtronger, but that right and equitie might beare rule. If this were not, men were better to be beaſtes to raunge in the wilde forreſtes: for the beaſtes yet can maintaine and keepe themſelues one with another. But wee knowe that men are of ſo peruerſe and crooked a nature, that euery one woulde ſcratch out his neighbours eyes, if there were no bridle to hold them in. Seeing then it is ſo that God hath ordained magiſtrates to repreſſe the leaude behauiours of men, and not to ſuffer any iniurious and wrongfull dealinges to eſcape vnpuniſhed: it is not without cauſe that our Lorde commandeth heere, that if a man be vniuſtly moleſted, and complaine of it, he ſhall haue Iuſtice done him. And although it be here expreſſely ſpoken of ſuch iniuries as men complaine of; yet meaneth he not, that if any wickednes be committed and not complained of, the magiſtrates ſhould winke at it, and diſſemble it. For when a man is offended and ſeeketh thereupon for iuſtice, he ſhall haue peraduenture ſome reaſonable amendes. But in the meane time ye ſhall ſee God offended, ye ſhall ſee a crime committed not againſt one man onely, but againſt all; and yet no plainetiſe founde in this caſe; for wee knowe that ſuch zeale is not to be founde in the worlde; nay we are falne nowe into thoſe times of which the prophet Elias ſpake: That there is 1.Kin,19.10 not one which ſtandeth vppe to mainetaine the quarell of God: and except we ſee that either we ourſelues are like to ſuſtaine loſſe, or may make the matter gainefull vnto vs; we withdraw ourſelues, our mouthes are ſhutte vp. And therfore the magiſtrates may not thinke themſelues excuſed, although they haue no alarmes rung in their eares, nor complaintes made vnto them: for they ought to bee watchfull to puniſh ſuch faults as are committed: they ought to enquire after them although they be not firſt made priuie vnto them. Neuertheleſſe GOD will haue them to heare the cries of thoſe which are oppreſſed, and to reach out their hands vnto them. And in very deede it is ſayde that God will be on their ſide which are wrongfully intreated, & will defende them. The holy ſcripture pronounceth oftentimes that their cries are heard vppe Pſal.12.6. into heauen. Nowe God hauing firſt declared that; appointeth ſuch here belowe as ſhall execute Iuſtice in his name. Seeing hee heareth them which complaine vnto him, from the heauens; if earthly Iudges play the deafe men, ſhal they eſcape for it? Doubtleſſe nay. The regiſter bookes ſhall one day be opened, & God will ſhewe that there were theſe and theſe outrages and violences committed, & no redreſſe of thẽ. Let vs therefore note well, that God meant in this place to declare, that he wil cal thoſe which beare the ſworde of Iuſtice to their account and reckening, if they wittingly permit any man to be iniured and troden vnder foote. And in verie deede nature hath taught vs that. The Paynims nims which had not the lawe of Moſes knewe full well that euery man ought to haue right, and that he which was oppreſſed, if he had deſired it, ought to haue Iuſtice doone him, or elſe that too great diſorder and crueltie ſhoulde bee ſhewed. And yet for all that we ſee howe careleſſe men are in this behalfe, and howe that if a man be but a little fauoured, his fault ſhalbe winked at, and hee which is beaten or otherwiſe ill entreated, ſhall be ſent away with ſome floute or other, and he which offered him the wrong ſhal eſcape. This is common to bee ſeene. And therefore our Lorde had neede to declare what intereſt himſelfe hath in this matter, to put magiſtrates in mind that if they diſcharge not their dueties faythfully, they haue a ſoueraine Iudge, and that if there be no place of Iuſtice to appeale vnto in this worlde, hee will in the ende holde his Aſſiſes, and heare thoſe cauſes handled, which haue beene caſt aſide and buried. As we ſee that the Iudges are oftentimes deafe in a poore mans ſute, ſo as if he come to demaunde Iuſtice, in deede there is not any that will bee ſo bolde as to ſay: Gette thee hence for thou ſhalt haue no Iuſtice heere: there is none that will ſpeake ſo impudently. But ſome will ſay: well, put vppe your bill: and at eight dayes ende, yee ſhall haue one giue him a flirt with his finger to doe him to wit thereby, that hee doeth but grauell himſelfe in vaine. For there ſhall be ſo many ſhiftes, and ſo many delayes vſed, that hee ſhall be at his wittes ende, and not knowe what to doe: nay you ſhall haue one or other come and whiſper in his eare and ſay: Alas poore fellowe why doeſt thou trouble thy ſelfe? Thou ſeeſt heere is no helpe for thee: Nay thou ſhalt bee made beleeue that thou beganſt the quarell and that thou wert the authour of the riot, and ſo thou ſhalt be puniſhed thy ſelfe. And therefore thou wert beſt to put vp the blowes which thou haſt without farther purſuing of thy cauſe. The Iudges all this while will not ſay a worde, they will ſhewe ſome good countenaunce like Idolles, but yet notwithſtanding they giue their conſent vnto ſuch wrongfull dealing, and they are partakers of ſuch trecherie, that hee which is moleſted and afflicted, after he hath ſpent his monney and taken great paines, goeth away and is mocked. Beholde in what eſtate we are. And this wickednes is ordinarily practiſed. And therefore we ſee that this lawe wherein our lord declareth that he will haue him which complaineth, heard, and his caſe tried, is not ſuperfluous.

And he addeth afterwardes: That he which is iuſt, muſt be declared ſuch a one, and he which hath offended muſt be condemned. We ſee that God is not contented to haue the ceremonie only vſed, and that men ſhould receiue the inditement, or bill or ſupplication which is put vp; but he will haue the Iudge to proceede to definitiue ſentence. For this long differring of ſentẽce, ſerueth to no other ende, but to hinder all right and to wearie the partie whoſe cauſe is iuſt, & thereby to make him giue ouer his ſute. That is the very ende of it. In deede this is ill dealing: but yet is it commonly vſed. So then for this cauſe God hauing firſt commaunded that mens complaints ſhould be hearde, addeth that they muſt proceede vnto ſentence. As if he had ſayd; that the Iudges muſt deale ſimply and vprightly, and not thinke that they haue diſcharged their duetie, when they haue made men beleeue that they haue done ſomewhat: but they muſt make a riddance of ſuch cauſes as come before them, they muſt condemn him which hath done wrong, & maintaine the iuſt man, they muſt declare themſelues to be the protectours of good cauſes. Thus we ſee in effect what Gods meaning is in this place. And heereby we may gather howe farre we are from following the rule which is giuen vs. For a man may ſee oftentimes the clean contrarie. But yet for all that, this doctrine ought to be receiued, and although corruptions be ouercommon in the worlde, yet ſeeing God hath vouchſafed to teach them with his owne mouth which ſitte in the ſeate of Iuſtice, lette them thinke ſo much the better on their duetie, lette them take the bitte in their mouthes as we ſay, and ſuffer themſelues to be ruled by GOD, and let them knowe that if they abuſe their eſtate and calling, it is not for nought that GOD hath ſpoken. And therefore let them be the better inſtructed to their ſaluation. But if they make no account hereof, they ſhall perceiue that GOD dallyeth not in pronouncing his vengeaunce againſt them: but that he will ſpeedily execute it, if they be ſo negligent in dooing that which hee commaundeth. And in verie deede men are too too blockiſhe, (I meane thoſe which were placed in the ſeate of Iuſtiue) in that the honour which GOD vouchſafeth them, mooueth them not to doe their dueties. Is it a ſmall thing to mayntaine right, and to condemne that which is euill? Nay verily: For it belongeth vnto God. It is GOD that is the fountaine of all Iuſtice, and of all trueth: it is hee which is the maintayner of it. Therefore when we ſee that God hath exalted mortall creatures ſo much and aduaunced them to ſo high degree, as to maintaine his owne cauſe to ſay: This is right, and this is wrong; when God (I ſay) hath giuen men ſuch authoritie, is there not in them an ouer wicked or rather an ouer beaſtlie vnthankefulneſſe, if they bee not moued heereby with ſome zeale to diſchardge theyr duetie?

But heere a man might demaunde, whether he which is wrongfully hurt may complayne or no. For we are commaunded to be patient: and we knowe the exhortation of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: If one ſtrike thee on the cheeke, receiue two blowes rather than ſeeke to reuendge thy ſelfe of him which did thee wrong. Nowe then, if wee muſt bee patient in iniuries as we are commaunded: howe is it lawefull to make our complaint before a Iudge? This matter ſhall be handled more at large anon. Neuertheleſſe let vs note heere, firſt that when God ordaineth a forme of ciuill order, hee treateth not alwayes what is lawfull for euerie partie: but he ſheweth what is the office of Magiſtrates.

that is to be noted for one point. Secondly let vs note, that God meant to arme the magiſtrats to defende euery mans right and to ſee that no man bee wronged either in his bodie or in his goods: and his ſo doing is to this intent, that we ſhould vſe this benefite of his: but yet no otherwiſe than according to his will. Now then albeit the magiſtrates ought to conſider that they haue authoritie to puniſh euill doers, ſo as euerie man may liue in peace and not be oppreſſed by any other which is ſtronger than himſelf: yet notwithſtanding, this letteth not but that we may ſuffer thoſe iniuries which are doone vnto vs, euen as God commaundeth vs, and not be ledde with any deſire of reuenge. A man will inferre thereupon, that then it is not lawefull to complaine. Nay, that followeth not. For when our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt forbiddeth all his to reuenge themſelues, it is no let but that they may procure the puniſhment of outrages aſmuch as lyeth in them, ſo it be doone without all malice and heart burning. In deede I graunt that this is a rare caſe and verie harde to be founde. For aſſoone as a man is iniured, he is kindled ſtraitway, and thereupon he conceiueth rancour, hee fretteth and fumeth, and when he commeth before the Iudge, he ſpeweth foorth his poyſon in ſuch ſort, that any man may eaſily perceiue his heart and minde is enuenomed. Ye ſee then where the whole miſchiefe lyeth, to wit in this, that we are ſet vpon reuenge, wee maintaine our owne priuate quarell, ſo that in effect we deſire nothing elſe but ẏ he which hath done vs harme, may haue his payment, and we by that meanes be reuendged. But if a man deſire to liue at peace, and when any wrong is doone vnto him, he is ready to procure ẏ welfare of his enemie, then, ſo his heart bee ſtil cleere, let him not forbeare to complaine vnto ſome magiſtrate that the offender may be puniſhed. And why? To the end that the euill may be repreſſed and practiſed no more; for it is a kind of graunting of libertie to doe euill, when euill doings be winked at and ſcāpe vnpuniſhed. But yet for all this, let vs beware that wee ſhroude not our ſelues vainely vnder this pretence of ſaying that wee may haue recourſe vnto the lawe, ſo we conceiue no wicked deſire nor enmitie: let vs not (ſay I) make this our buckler, as though we were eſcaped from the hande of God. If there be any hypocriſie in vs, let euery man haue an eye vnto himſelfe, and if we breede any rancour in vs, ſo as we deſire his harme & loſſe which hath wronged vs; let vs condemne ourſelues before God. Although Iuſtice be ordained to maintaine vs, yet we deceiue ourſelues if we bring thither any vnruly paſſion of our owne, and followe not Matt.5.44. this rule of rendring good for euill, and of praying for them which curſe vs, and of doing good vnto them which perſecute vs. If wee followe not this rule, we ſhalbe alwayes condemned before GOD. We may well proteſt, I ſeeke not to reuenge my ſelfe with mine owne handes, I attempt nothing but that which I may doe: but yet for all that, we abuſe Iuſtice, when we proceede not with ſuch vprightneſſe and ſimplicitie as GOD commaundeth vs. Let vs therefore note wel, that although it be ſayde in this place, that the Iudges ſhall heare the plainetiſes and iudge their cauſe: yet is it not lawefull for any man to accuſe his neighbour, if he doe it thorough enmitie and euill will. And this letteth not but that we ought alwayes to be patient for thoſe iniuries which men doe vnto vs. For what doeth patience import? Not that wee ſhoulde not onely not bee ſet vppon reuenge; but alſo that wee ſhould ſeeke to doe them good which perſecute vs, and that we ſhould pray for them which curſe vs. This is the thing which we are commaunded, and therefore let vs followe it; and then it ſhall be lawefull for vs to flee for refuge vnto them, which are armed with authoritie to maintaine the good and to puniſh the wicked, and to repreſſe all wrongful and outragious dealings: we may then I ſay haue our recourſe vnto them.

Nowe it followeth: That the wicked man ſhalbe condemned according to his deſert. There is here no mention of ſuch offences as were to be puniſhed by death. For if there were murder committed, or adulterie, or ſuch like thinges; they were puniſhed by death. We haue ſeene howe God commaunded that all ſuch kindes of wickedneſſe ſhould be vtterly rooted out: but here he ſpeaketh but of ſuch iniuries as deſerue ſome other chaſtiſement. And that is the cauſe why it is ſayde, That the malefactour ſhall be puniſhed according to his deſert, yet ſo that he ſhall not haue aboue fortie ſtripes. For they vſed a whippe made of an oxe hide, to chaſtiſe them which dealt wrongfully and outragiouſly with their neighbour, alwayes prouided that the offence deſerued not death. It is ſayde: That they ſhall not paſſe the number of fortie ſtripes. And why? To the intent that the man ſhoulde not be mangled or diſfigured in his body, but remaine whole and ſounde. Ye ſee then in effect what is heere declared, to wit, firſt that the ſentence muſt not be giuen in vaine: and ſecondly that ſome moderation muſt be vſed, ſo as the rigour be not exceſſiue. Firſt I ſay the ſentence muſt not be in vaine, but it muſt be put in execution. For ſometimes yee ſhall ſee Iudges make a countenaunce of thundring at a man: howebeit, that ſhalbe but for ſome policie. When they are minded to let an offender eſcape they will condemne him to doubble and trebble puniſhment. What? [ſay they] This wicked fellowe is not worthy to liue. A man would maruaile to heare them: but when the thing ſhould be put in execution, it falleth out to a mockerie. But our Lorde ſheweth that they may not dally ſo with him: and that ſeeing the magiſtrates beare not the ſworde in vaine nor are armed with authoritie in way of dallyaunce; they muſt vſe their power, and when they haue pronounced ſentence, they muſt afterwardes doe Iuſtice in executing of it. And that is the very cauſe why they are called the ſoules of the Lawe. For a lawe without magiſtrates, is as a bodie which hath neither ſenſe nor mouing. And when the bodie is idle and ſtirreth not, it is a ſigne that the ſoule is altogether blockiſh. And therefore when there are good lawes,and ſome outwarde forme of Iuſtice, and yet for all that there is no execution thereof; Inſomuch that it ſhalbe ſayde: Thus it muſt be, and yet the Statutes ſhalbe diſobeyed; yea and ſentence ſhalbe giuen, and yet ſlippe away vnexecuted:Surely it is a token of too groſſe blockiſhneſſe in thoſe which ſhold giue ſtrength to ỹ law,ỹ it might not be vnprofitable.That thẽ is ỹ thing which God declareth in the firſt place For ſpeaking of the executing of ſentence, hee ſayeth: Lette the iuſt be declared for ſuch a one, and lette him which hath doone wrong bee condemned; lette him bee puniſhed according to his deſerts. Nowe heereby he giueth vs to vnderſtand that we muſt not lette any ſuch faultes ſcape as ought to be puniſhed; neither behoueth it vs alonely to ſhewe our zeale in puniſhing of greate enormities: but alſo to conſider that ſmaller faultes drawe on the greater when they are let alone as buried. God therefore pronounceth expreſſely that the malefactour ſhall be puniſhed. And when? Not onely when hee hath offended ſo grieuouſly that his fault is vnpardonable: but if the fault be litle, he will haue the puniſhment and correction aunſwerable thereunto: hee will not haue men to ſay: O it is a ſmall fault: lette it paſſe. Well, the matter is not great, he may eſcape the better cheape. No: howe ſmall ſoeuer his offence be, hee will haue him ſmart for it,and be an example vnto others. Let vs therefore weigh this worde well, yea, let vs weigh it ſo much the better becauſe wee ſee that the practiſe noweadayes runneth cleane contrarie: for men ſeeke nothing elſe but to leſſen their faultes. In deede a man ſhall not bee altogither excuſed when he hath offended: but yet neuertheleſſe hee which doeth the wrong ſhall finde alwayes ſome aduocate to pleade for him, yea euen without bearing the name of it. He ought to be as a Iudge in the caſe;and yet he will ſo mitigate the faulte as it ſhall not be puniſhable, faire gloſes ſhall ſtill be founde to colour the matter withall: O ſir will one ſay: There is ſuch a circumſtaunce, there is this and that to be conſidered in the caſe: & ſo the tenth part of mens faults ſhal not bee puniſhed. For why? They bee not found ſo grieuous and hainous as they be in deede.No,but yet for al ỹ,if the fault bee ſmall, God will haue the chaſtiſement anſwearable thereunto; and if it be greate, he wil haue the puniſhment the more ſeuere and greeuous. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde.

Nowe whereas GOD ſpeaketh thus vnto earthly Iudges, let vs knowe that for his parte he might well puniſh vs by his iuſtice, and that not for petie faultes,but for notorious tranſgreſſions. Who is ſo iuſt and innocent among vs, that he findeth not himſelfe faultie before God, yea and that in many offences? Moreouer how many faults do we commit through vnaduiſedneſſe,when we thinke not on them? And therefore if God vſed not great mercie towardes vs, he ſhould lift vp his hand againſt vs,and drowne vs in the pitte of deſtruction euerie minute of an houre. So then whereas wee liue ſtill and are preſerued; lette vs acknowledge that it is thorough the infinite goodneſſe of our God. For if as touching earthly Iuſtice hee commandeth the leaſt faultes to be puniſhed, he might himſelfe by greater reaſon lay his hande vpon vs, euen to roote vs out of the earth, eſpecially conſidering the infinite number of faultes whereof we be guiltie before him. And if it be alleadged; Well then, ſeeing God is ſo mercifull, ought not men alſo to be mercifull, and ſo to followe him? It is eaſily aunſwered: That GOD hath this libertie to forgiue, whome hee will: beſides this, he hath alſo his latter iudgement which he reſerueth vnto himſelfe. We ſee in deede, that he beareth with the contemners of his maieſty, and with thoſe which are moſt harde hearted, and vnamendeable, he winketh at them, he maketh no reckening to puniſh them: but the time which he giueth them ſhall coſt thẽ very deere. They may well vſe that diueliſhe prouerbe of theirs: That the time is woorth a mans monie: but it had beene better for them that they had beene reformed at firſt, than ſo to haue nouriſhed the vengeaunce of God againſt themſelues. For after that they haue defied him to ỹ vtmoſt, they ſhall in the ende feele that they abuſed his goodneſſe ouermuch, which waited their leaſure ſo long and allured them vnto repentaunce. God then reſerueth vnto himſelfe a iudgement which appeareth not yet vnto men. But as for mortall men which are Iudges, they muſt doe their duetie, they haue their rule and their leſſon deliuered vnto them,let them ſticke to that, and diſcharge themſelues. So then lette vs learne to vnderſtande, that our Lorde ſheweth himſelfe very gentle and pitifull towardes vs, in that we liue ſtill in this worlde and are nouriſhed ſtill at his handes, and in that he beareth ſo mercifully with vs. For why? Our faults towardes him are innumerable, and wee ſhoulde be killed with ſtripes if he vſed not this ineſtimable goodneſſe which I haue ſpoken of.

Moreouer ſecondly in this place here is mention made of moderating the chaſtiſementes which are vſed. For the Iudges ought alwayes to conſider that they ſitte in Iuſtice in the behalfe of GOD, and therefore into that ſeate which is holy and dedicated to the dooing of right, they may not bring their owne paſſions, to feede their owne choler, and to deale croſſely and ouerthwartly as they themſelues liſt. God therefore in ſaying, that there ſhalbe a certaine number of ſtripes, declareth expreſſely that there muſt be a reaſonable meaſure vſed in puniſhing. Verily when a man is not to be cleane rooted out, but to liue ſtill in the worlde, God will not haue him maimed that he ſhould become vnprofitable as touching his body. For what a thing were it if a man ſhould be ſo rigorouſly handled as to be made a cripple ſo as hee can no more helpe himſelfe? It were better hee had beene put to death at the firſt, than to be left to pine away in this worlde, and to be as a blocke. Nowe therefore when a man is to bee left aliue ſtill, GOD will haue the Iudges to haue a regarde that he be not beaten or ſcourged in ſuch wiſe as he be disfigured or made vnable to helpe himſelfe. That is the very thing which God will haue men to looke vnto. And for the ſame cauſe he ſetteth downe heere the number of ſtripes, to wit, fortie ſtripes, and that at the moſt. Nowe the Iewes being ful of Ceremonies tooke away one ſtripe: and it is the manner of men to adde alwayes ſomewhat to the lawe of God, as though all perfection were not contained in it. Truely GOD hadde ſayde vnto them, Ye ſhall not adde, nor diminiſh any thing from that which I haue ſpoken: but mennes affections are euer boyling, and men will alwayes bee wiſer than it is lawefull for them to bee. And that is the very cauſe of the inuenting ſo many rules & obſeruations; of the which ſort there are a number of thinges in the Popedome. And why? it is good to doe ſo (ſay they): a man can not do too much. In deede a man can not do too much in conforming himſelfe to the will of God. For howe great ſoeuer our care bee in that behalfe, yet our weakeneſſe will not ſuffer vs to be linked thereunto in ſuch ſorte as were requiſite. But to adde any thing vnto that which GOD commaundeth, is alwayes an ouerweening and preſumption worthie to bee condemned. Yet neuertheleſſe it was the manner of the Iewes to giue thirtie and nine ſtripes. And why? They thought thus with themſelues: Oh it is to bee doubted leaſt when a man hadde giuen fourtie ſtripes hee coulde not withholde himſelfe from giuing one more, and ſo by that meanes he ſhold goe beyonde the Law. Ye ſay well: but our lord had no reſpect of ſuch ſmall tryfles. He ordained onely that there ſhould be a moderation in all the chaſtiſementes, which were made: I meane alwayes when the offence deſerued not death, as we haue declared afore. But as touching this obſeruation, it hath beene a long time among the Iewes it is yet in vſe among them at this day. Saint Paule ſheweth it where hee reporteth that he was fiue times whipped. For albeit that at that time the Iewes had no iuriſdiction nor rule in their owne handes, yet ſome kinde of chaſtiſement was left vnto thē in their Synagogues: ſo that when any offended among them, if the crime touched not the publike eſtate, they had authoritie to correct him after 2.Cor.11,24 the manner of their countrey. And Saint Paule ſayth that he was beaten in this wiſe fiue times. And I receiued (ſayth he) fortie ſtripes ſaue one. When he ſayth ſaue one, he giueth vs to vnderſtande, that the Iewes neuer tormented him but with extreeme rigour: I meane as farre as their power ſtretched. For if they coulde haue killed him and eaten him vppe, they would haue done it: they ſought nothing elſe but to teare Saint Paule in peeces as farre as their rage and furie draue them. But becauſe it was not lawefull for them to paſſe any farther, they ſcourged him vnto thirtie and nine ſtripes, according as it was ſayde, that the puniſhment muſt be made according to the deſert. But a man coulde finde no ſuch deſert in Saint Paule: for it was for the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt that he ſuffered ſuch puniſhment. But we ſee the crueltie of the Iewes who coulde not be ſatisfied without they had vſed the vtmoſt extremitie that they coulde againſt Saint Paule. Beholde how hypocrites would obſerue the lawe of God in vſing of ſome formalitie: but in the meane time they miſſe alwayes in the ſubſtaunce. So much the more therefore ought we to be warned to haue an eye vnto Gods meaning: and when wee ſee what it pleaſeth him to commaunde vs, lette vs holde ourſelues vnto it, let euerie man ſtay himſelfe thereupon, let vs not turne aſide from it neither vnto the right hande nor vnto the left, and in ſo doing we can not erre. And that is the thing in effect which we haue to beare in minde vpon this place. Nowe if ſuch chaſtiſementes muſt be vſed for the ſmaller iniurie, where a man can not complaine of any great matter; as that his arme is cut off, or ſuch a wounde is giuen him as will ſticke by him all the time of his life, but only that one hath hurte him either in his good name or in his bodie: if God (I ſay) will haue ſuch a fault ſo puniſhed, and that the malefactour ſhall not eſcape: what ſhall be done to thoſe faultes which are more haynous? Shall the Iudges bee helde excuſed if they lette them ſcape? Doubtleſſe nay. And therefore let vs conclude, that ſeeing God will haue the rigour of Iuſtice vſed, (howebeit with ſuch moderation as it behooueth,) euen where the violence that hath beene doone is not of any greate importaunce. Surely it is a much more likelihoode in reaſon, that if there be any greater treſpaſſe committed, (as if a man be maimed in his mēbers) the offender ſhall not in that behalfe bee ſpared, (as we haue ſeene in an other place) that an eye ſhall be giuen for an eye, an arme for an arme, a foote for a foote. Inſomuch that if a man haue offended in ſuch a caſe, it is not for men to ſhewe mercie; but the malefactour muſt paſſe vnder the edge of the ſworde, and be made an example for all others, to the intent that euery man by that meanes may be occaſioned to holde himſelfe ſhort from preſuming to offer any ſuch like outrage vnto his neighbors. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde.

And farther, if it bee expreſſely ſayde: that no one man ſhall be ſuffered to haue wrong, but that hee which doeth it ſhall bee chaſtiſed and puniſhed according to his deſert, lette vs note that if anie man paſſe his boundes ſo farre, as to ſette himſelfe againſt a whole ſtate, as it were in defiaunce both of God and the worlde, hee muſt bee the more grieuouſly puniſhed: and that if the Iudges and Magiſtrates ſuffer ſuch wickedneſſe vnpuniſhed, there is no excuſe for them. And why? For if there be a poore man, a man of no account, ſuch a one as men might bobbe out his eyes, and hee complaine, God will haue him hearde, yea and hee wil haue right done vnto him. Howe much more then, if there be as it were a waterfludde, that ouerfloweth all, wherein euery man hath intereſt, and the whole ſtate of a people ſtandeth in hazarde by diſſention? If that bee not repreſſed, wee muſt not looke that ſome one man alone will cry out vnto GOD, but the ayre muſt needes ring loude with outcryes: in ſo much that all the confuſions and diſorders which wee ſhall haue ſuffered will bee as outcryes and complayninges vnto GOD againſt them which haue not vſed the authoritie and power which was committed vnto them. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde vppon this place.

Nowe it is ſayde by and by after: That the Oxe which treadeth out the Corne ſhal not be muſſeled, and that wee muſt not binde his chappes together, ſo as he ſhoulde not open them to feede. No doubt but that in this place GOD meant to perſwade men vnto gentlenes and humanitie: Deut.24.15. as before he forbad vs to keepe backe the wages of the hyreling, which hath beſtowed himſelfe in our ſeruice. And why? Bicauſe he ſuſtaineth his life by his labour. It were therefore an ouergreat crueltie to defraude him of his labour when hee hath doone his worke. And ſo in this place it is expreſly ſpoken of the oxe which laboreth: as if our Lord had ſaide, that vprightnes and equitie ought to be miniſtred euen vnto the brute beaſtes. The Oxe cannot complaine though he bee defrauded of his foode when he hath doone his worke: but God taketh pitie of him, bicauſe he is his creature; and hee will not haue vs to abuſe the beaſtes beyonde meaſure, but to nouriſh them and to haue care of them. And that is the cauſe why Salomon ſaieth in the Prou.12.10. 12. Chapter of his prouerbes; That the iuſt man hath a care of his beaſt. If a man ſpare neyther his horſe, nor his Oxe, nor his Aſſe, therein hee bewrayeth the wickedneſſe of his nature. And if he ſay: tuſh I care not, for it is but a brute beaſt: [I anſwer again]: Yea but it is a creature of God. Pſal.104.27 It is ſaid that the goodneſſe and mercie of God extendeth to all the beaſtes of the earth. It is not ſaid onely of men whom God hath made after his owne Image and likeneſſe: but the beaſtes alſo are compriſed therein as well as they. If God vouchſafe to conſider of beaſtes, if he vouchſafe to haue a care of them; what ought wee to doe which are but poore wormes of the earth, which are nothing but rottennes? Wee thinke it were much againſt our honour to take care of beaſts: but whē God gaue them vs in ſubiection for our vſe, it was vnder no other condition, but ẏ employing them to our labour, wee ſhould alſo vſe kindnes and gentlenes towardes them. And Salomon ſaith, not onely that the iuſt man hath a care of his beaſt, but he ſaith alſo that the bowels of the wicked man are cruell: as if he had ſaid, a frowarde and churliſh man hath no pitie nor compaſſion in him, no not euen towardes his like; he tormenteth his brethren; hee trampleth on one vnder his feete, he oppreſſeth another, he would ſuck the marrow out of a poore mans bones if he might poſſibly do it, he wold eat his fleſh, he wold drink his bloud: to be ſhort, there is nothing but crueltie in him which is of a malicious nature. But if there be any equitie and vprightnes in vs, we wil ſhewe it not onely towards our next neighbours & ſuch as are of yͤ ſame brotherhood with vs, but euen vnto yͤ brute beaſtes alſo: bicauſe God hath formed & created them, and bicauſe he vouchſafeth to preſerue them through his prouidence, and prouideth them of foode, and (at a word) careth for them: and laſtly bicauſe that when he did put them in ſubiection vnto vs, he did it with condition ẏ wee ſhould handle them gently: that as we deale rightfully with men, ſo we ſhould vſe the like duetie euen towardes the brute beaſtes, which haue no reaſon, nor vnderſtanding, nor cannot complaine of the iniuries which are done vnto them.

But yet neuertheleſſe God hath not in this place reſpected ſimply the brute beaſtes: as S. Paule alſo ſheweth in the ninth Chapter of 1.Cor.9.1 the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians. Hath God care of Oxen, (ſaith he?) S. Paul meaneth not by theſe wordes, ẏ God careth not for the beaſtes which he hath created, as wee haue already declared: for then ſhould hee gainſay all the holy ſcripture: and experience alſo ſheweth vs that God muſt needes haue a care to prouide for the beaſts. For the earth yeeldeth not fruit of it ſelfe; but as it hath vertue giuen vnto it from aboue. When we ſee herbs and ſuch like things to grow, we are giuen to vnderſtand thereby, that God is the purueiour for the whole world, euen for the beaſtes of the earth, and for the birdes, and for al things. He prouideth them of foode to nouriſh them withal. By this (I ſay) we ſee, that God hath a care of oxen: but S. Paul meaneth ẏ his principal care is not for them. He treateth purpoſely of the miniſters maintenance, and ſayth, that they ought to be fedde and ſuſteined, and not ſkanted of their liuing: and he ſheweth that ſeeing they are appointed of God to deliuer forth foode for mens ſoules, it were an ouergreat wickedneſſe & crueltie to abridge them of ſuch wages as is due vnto them. And heerewithall to make them the more aſhamed which would play the niggardes in this behalfe, he ſaith vnto them: What? God hath not onely ordained that the man which laboreth ſhould be fedde and maintained, but hee ſpeaketh of oxen alſo. Is it bicauſe he hath a care of them? That is to ſay, is it bicauſe that oxen are in the higheſt and moſt ſoueraigne degree? No. For we know that the oxen were created for mēs ſakes. Let vs caſt our eye on all things whether they be aboue or beneath, in heauen or in earth; and we ſhall ſee that all is for our vſe and profit. When God created the ſunne, it was not to lighten himſelfe, but to giue light vnto vs. As much is to be ſaid of the Moone and of the ſtarres: they are ordayned to ſerue vs, as it hath bin elſewhere already declared. Agayne, although the earth bring foorth herbes for the brute beaſtes, yet neuertheleſſe all is referred vnto men, and God woulde haue vs to acknowledge therein his fatherly goodneſſe, and the great loue which he vſeth towardes vs. Seeing then it is ſo that GOD hath neither created nor ſuſtayned the brute beaſtes, but onely in reſpect of referring all vnto the vſe of menne: Let vs knowe that when hee ſayeth wee muſt not defraude the beaſtes which haue trauayled for vs, but nouriſhe and ſuſtayne them: it is to the intent that wee ſhoulde learne to exerciſe all manner of kindneſſe, and that when men haue ſpent both their ſweate and bloud in our ſeruice, it ſtandeth much more with reaſon that wee ſhoulde not deale niggardly with them by withholding from them their due wages, but rather that wee ſhoulde ſuſtaine them, not onely by paying them their dayly wages and by giuing them ſuſtenaunce and foode, but alſo by giuing them wherewith to maintayne them: for there are ſome which coulde bee contented at three dayes ende to haue a poore man killed, when he hath ſerued them; for all is one with them, ſo they may reape any profite by him. But contrariwiſe God ſheweth vs that we ought to deale ſo friendly with thoſe which labour for vs, that wee grieue them not beyond meaſure, but that they may continue and bee occaſioned to giue GOD thankes in their trauayle. For there is no doubt but God ment in this place, to correct the crueltie which is in the riche who employ poore folke in their ſeruice, and yet recompence them not for their paynes.

On the other ſide hee ſheweth alſo that hee which is ydle and vnprofitable deſerueth not to be nouriſhed or regarded. For we ſee that God hath commaunded euen the beaſtes to labour that they may be nouriſhed. Seeing it is ſo, what ſhalbe ſaide of men who ought to conſider for what ende they are created. A beaſt indeede hath his naturall inclination: but hee hath no diſcretion to ſay: There is a God which hath created mee. There is no ſuch thing in a beaſt. And yet God putteth beaſtes in ſubiection vnto men, to the intent that they ſhould not be vnprofitable. Therefore if a man who hath reaſon and ought to thinke thus: Gods will is that I ſhould labour; and it is a general law for all of vs, that we muſt eate our bread in the ſweate of our browes; if that man for all this, will be vnprofitable, and not vouchſafe to put his fingers to any worke; he is not worthy (as ſaint Paule ſaith) to be nouriſhed and ſuſtained. So then on the one ſide let vs note that God meant to perſwade euery man to vſe equitie and rightfulnes towards men, and not to tread them vnder our feete which ſerue vs, nor to defraude them of that which appertaineth vnto them: for that were crueltie. And on the other ſide let vs note, that thoſe which haue not wherewith to finde themſelues, muſt take heede that they labour diligently euery one in his vocation, ſo as they bee not condemned by the example of the oxen. For if they doe not, the brute beaſtes muſt riſe vp in Iudgement to condemne ſuch as bee ydle and employ themſelues to nothing, ſeeing God hath called them to ſerue their neighbours.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue doone, in ſuch ſorte that returning vnto him, we may craue pardon and mercie at his hands: to the intent that being gouerned by his holy ſpirite, hee may guide vs in all things according to his holy will, vntill that hauing drawen vs vnto himſelfe, and ridde vs of our infirmities and vices, hee cloth vs fully with his righteouſneſſe. And ſo let vs all ſay: Almightie God and heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xiij. of Februarie, 1556.

The CXLiij. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the fiue and twentith Chapter.

5 If there be two brethren dwelling together, and the one of them die without children: the wife of the dead ſhall not marrie abroade to a ſtraunger, but her brother in law ſhall come in to her, and take her to wife, and marrie himſelfe with her.

6 And the firſt borne which ſhee ſhall beare, ſhall ſucceede in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not put out of Iſraell.

7 And if the man will not take his ſiſter in law, then his ſiſter in lawe ſhall goe vp to the gate vnto the elders, and ſay, my husbandes brother refuſeth to rayſe vp vnto his brother a name in Iſraell, and hee will not marrie with mee.

8 Then the Elders of the Citie ſhall call him, and ſpeake vnto him if hee ſtand in it and ſay: I will not take her:

9 Then ſhall his ſiſter in lawe come vnto him, before the elders, and looſe his ſhoe from his foote, and ſpit in his face, and aunſwere and ſay: So ſhall it be done vnto the man that will not build vp his brothers houſe.

10 And his name ſhall bee called in Iſraell: The houſe of him, whoſe ſhoe is pluckt off.

11 When men ſtriue together one againſt an other, if the wife of the one come neere to ridde her husband out of the hands of him that ſmiteth him, and put forth her hande and take him by the priuities,

12 Then ſhalt thou cutte off her hande: and thine eye ſhall not pittie her

VEe haue heere a lawe which might ſeeme altogether ſuperfluous among vs: for as it is at this day out of vſe, ſo the reaſon alſo of it remayneth no longer. And therfore we muſt take it patiently, if all the thinges which are declared heere doe not wholly belong vnto vs, or elſe if they bee not ſo fully vnderſtoode of vs, as were meete: and yet for all that wee will aſſay to gather ſome profitable doctrine out of it. For indeede, God hath left nothing in his lawe, but wee may fare the better by it, if hee giue vs the wiſedome to knowe howe to vſe it. Firſt wee ſee howe Gods will was that the houſes ſhould bee maintayned in Iſraell. And this was not for any ſuch reſpect as men haue commonly in the world; for noble men would be ſpoken of after their death, and therfore they would build vp a kinde of immortality heere on earth. God meant not to foode this follie among men. And verily if we were ſo wiſe as we ſhould be, we woulde conſider, that lyke as our lyfe paſſeth, and glydeth, and vaniſheth away out of hand; ſo GOD would not haue our heartes ſettled here belowe, to deſire to bee renoumed vpon earth: but that as our inheritance is in heauen, ſo wee ſhould conſider that it ought to ſuffice vs that wee haue our names written in the booke of lyfe. This is it wherein our reioyſing ought to Luk.10.20. bee, as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt telleth his diſciples. So then wee haue to note, that GOD meant not to rocke men aſleepe in this fooliſhe ambition, whereunto they are ouermuch giuen; to wit, to bee of fame and renowne heere: hee had another reſpect than ſo. And that was, that bycauſe the parting of the land of Chanaan was made according to his will, hee would haue this order maintained and no chaunge made to the contrary, ſo as the inheritances ſhoulde returne alwayes to the ſame they were at the firſt, as we Leuit.25.10. know they did in the yeere of Iubile. In reſpect whereof when a man deceaſed without children, to the intent there ſhould be ſome ſtocke of him, and that the kindred ſhould alwayes continue, and that the inheritaunces ſhould not goe out of ẏ name; it is ſaid, that one of the kinſmen ſhould take the wydowe to wife: although in truth, before ẏ people were come into the land of Chanaan, wee ſee that this law or cuſtome was vſed through out the eaſt country, to wit, that a woman whẽ ſhe took an husband out of any houſe, bound her ſelfe, (in caſe that ſhe had no childe, but her husband departed without iſſue) to take an other husband of the ſame houſe: which thing we ſee to be true in the example of Thamar whẽ ſhe maried Iudaes ſonne: and we muſt not imagine Gen.38. that this ſerued but for one houſe only, but that it was rather a generall lawe growen vpon cuſtome (as we ſay): It was therefore a ſtraite bond or rather bondage for the women. For if a woman married in any familie, it was vnder this condition: Is my husband dead? I muſt take an other of the ſame houſe, yea if he offer himſelfe I muſt take him, and he muſt haue children of me, and that to rayſe vp a ſtocke vnto him, who is already dead. For the firſt childe that ſhe brought foorth, bore not his name that begat it, but his who was already dead.

Nowe when the Paynims brought vp this cuſtome, no doubt but they were ledde thereunto through this worldly vanity wherof I ſpake. And hereby wee ſee, that there bee many thinges lyke, which notwithſtanding are not of one ſelfſame qualitie. And why? Becauſe their end is diuerſe. There are which would haue a ſeede and ſtocke rayſed vnto one which is dead: and why woulde they ſo? To the intent that their name ſhould not periſh, or be cleane put out. So yee ſee that pride driueth them vnto that thing. But I haue already told you that we muſt haſten to finiſh the courſe of this life, knowing that God calleth vs vnto an euerduring eſtate, and therfore we ought to forget this world: and that if we be held backe by this vaine glory, of being heere in honour and eſtimation, it is a ſhutting of the gate of heauen againſt vs. Let vs therefore take heede howe wee wedde our ſelues vnto this fooliſh deſire, that men ſhould ſpeake of vs after our death: and let vs knowe, that God will haue vs to bee of no account in this world, that wee may bee reſtored vnto our heauenly inheritaunce. But let vs note in the meane time that God hath a contrary reſpect: for when he gaue the land of Chanaan to his people to inherite, hee ordayned that if a man which had taken a wife and doone his parte to leaue iſſue behinde him, departed without iſſue, an other of his kinſmen ſhoulde ſupply that defaulte, that hee myght haue as it were an adoptiue childe after his death. And why did God this? To the intent that the order which hee had eſtabliſhed by the hande of Ioſua, ſhoulde not periſhe, and that the partitions of the Lande ſhoulde continue as they were firſt made. We ſee then what the intent and meaning of this law is: the effect whereof was not to nuzzle men in that fooliſhe deſire which wee haue condemned. And moreouer God meant to ſhew the priuiledge which hee had giuen to the ſtocke of Abraham, euen for his ſake who was the cheefe of it. For whẽ God choſe Abraham he ſanctified all thoſe which were to come of his race, he had choſen them for his Church: he would therfore haue the Iewes ſtirred vp to magnifie him for vouchſafing of them ſuch honour as to chooſe them aboue all the worlde; hee woulde haue them to knowe howe much woorth this adoption of his was. Indeede it is true that they abuſed this goodneſſe of his, as well as others. For they were puffed vp with exceeding pryde, as who woulde ſay: We are the holie ſtocke, wee are the royall prieſthoode: but yet for all that, they minded not this point, that whatſoeuer they had, they enioyed it through the meere goodneſſe and fauour of GOD: and therefore that they ought not to bee proude of it; but rather to acknowledge themſelues ſo much the more bound vnto him. Yee ſee how the Iewes peruerted the grace and fauour of God which hee beſtowed on them: and yet hee exerciſed them in as ſundry ſortes, as hee might, to cauſe them to acknowledge the priuiledge which he gaue them in chooſing them for his Church, and as it were for his owne children. As if nowadayes we would onely make a buckler of baptiſme, and of the Lords ſupper, and of the other giftes and benefites of God, and yet continue an heathniſh kinde of people, diſſolute in life, and giuen ouer to all wickedneſſe: it were a point of notable treachery in vs. For GOD meaneth not that thoſe gifts which he beſtoweth on vs ſhoulde bee but as vaine pictures: his will is, that they ſhould bee profitable vnto vs. Therfore when we ſpeake of baptiſme, when we ſpeake of the holy ſupper, when wee ſpeake of the order of the church, it ſtandeth vs in hand to haue an eye vnto the vſe of thoſe thinges, for which God hath ordained them among vs. Yet notwithſtanding it behoueth vs to acknowledge it to be a ſingular yea and an ineſtimable benefite which God beſtoweth vpon vs, in ẏ we haue libertie to aſſemble our ſelues together in his name, to cal vpon him, to make confeſſion of our faith, to be taught at his mouth, and to be more and more confirmed in the trueth of the lawe and of the Goſpell: we ought (I ſay) to eſteeme this treaſure, and to exerciſe our ſelues therein. Nowe then for as much as God had choſen the ſtocke of Abraham, hee would haue the Iewes to acknowledge it for an excellent dignitie, that they were bleſſed in ſuch wiſe aboue the reſt of all the world. But let vs note that (as I haue told you) this was in fauour of their cheefe head. For Gen 15.5. it was not ſayde, In thy ſeedes ſhall the bleſſing Gal.3.16. be; but, In thy ſeede. Now this ſeede betokeneth not all thoſe which were deſcended from the ſtocke of Abraham: for Iſmael was cut off from it, although hee was Abrahams ſonne according to the fleſhe: and ſo was Eſau alſo. Therefore when a ſtocke is named, wee muſt vnderſtand a body, and a body preſuppoſeth an head. So then let vs note, that this dignitie which was in the perſon of Abraham had his roote and foundation in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore whereas it was GODS will that the families and kindreds ſhould be mayntayned; it was not to the intent the Iewes ſhoulde place their whole nobilitie in this worlde, to buſie themſelues there: but hee meant rather to turne their mindes vnto him who was promyſed to bee their redeemer, and to make them knowe that bycauſe hee ſhould come of their race and their lynage, they ought by great reaſon to be partakers of that benefite which hee brought vnto them. And ſo this Lawe ſerued to direct the Iewes vnto our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and they were put in minde heereby, that GOD had a care to keepe them in this bonde of one body, becauſe of the head which hee had ordayned. Thus wee ſee that albeeit the order which was vſed in olde tyme vnder the Lawe, be no longer nowadayes in vſe; yet notwithſtanding we may gather ſome profite by it, becauſe wee are giuen to vnderſtand thereby, that before our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was manifeſted in the fleſh, God ordayned that lawe in fauour of him. Let vs therefore acknowledge, that we in theſe dayes ought to be ſtirred vp by this place to maintayne our ſelues by rayſing vp ſpirituall ſeede in Iſraell, not in the viſible Iſraell, or that which is according to nature: for we knowe that the Church of God hath his reache throughout all the world: we knowe that nowadayes the children muſt not be borne of fleſh Iohn.1.13. and bloud, as it is ſayde in the firſt chapter of S. Iohn: but of the will of God and of his onely grace. Therefore let vs take paynes and enforce our ſelues to the vtmoſt of our power, to raiſe vp this ſpirituall ſeede vnto God, that the Church may be preſerued and encreaſed more & more. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to beare in minde.

Nowe by the way wee ſee what vprightneſſe ought to be vſed in bondes. For becauſe the women for their parte were bounde in ſuch wiſe, it was requiſite that there ſhould be a mutual bond alſo on the mens ſides. There is no reaſon that ẏ one partie ſhould be bound, and the other left in in full liberty. Ye ſee then how we be warned in this place, that if two parties doe contract or couenant togither, the one muſt not be greeued, & the other borne withall: for that were vniuſt and againſt al reaſon.

And we ought to apply this vnto al contracts, couenants and bargains which we be to deale in. Therfore if in bargaining with a man I ſtand altogither vpon mine own aduantage and be ouer ſtraitely laced: in ſo doing I am wicked. And if I ſay: let him loke to his own profit if he will: well, but yet ſhould a man haue ſo much honeſtie in him, as not to pinch the party too much; though he be able to compaſſe him. We think all is lawful ſo a man yeeld to that which we would haue him. Oh (ſay we) ſeeing it was his owne will to bind himſelfe ſo, what wrong do I to him? Yea, but his agreeing to al thy demaundes was by cōpulſion. And againe the poore man was ſo ouerpreſſed, that he perceiued not the domage which he ran into. Indeed he agreed to al that was demanded of him; howbeit, ẏ was bicauſe he was in neede, & wiſt not how to ſcape otherwiſe. Let vs look to it therfore ẏ we beare ſuch an euē hand, as one mā be not troden vnder foot by another.

And when there paſſeth any bond betweene man and man; let it bee indifferent for both parties, ſo as either of them may feele himſelfe releeued. Thus ye ſee one point more which we haue to beare in minde vpon this place.

Nowe heere a man might demaunde howe it comes to paſſe that GOD woulde haue the brother whichſoeuer liued to take the wife of him that was dead, ſeeing that ſuch marriage was not lawfull, as wee ſee in the eyghteenth Leuit.18.6. chapter of Leuiticus; Seeing it was inceſt for one to take his brothers wyfe after his death, howe happeneth it that GOD not onely permitteth, but alſo inioyneth it? The Iewes confeſſe that this is not ſpoken of brethren in the firſt degree, that is, of borne brothers as wee call them, but rather of ſuch as were further off of kin; and the verie woorde it ſelfe alſo doeth properly extend no further than to ſuch as might contract marriage together. In deede in the example which wee haue afore alledged, the brethren which were of the firſt degree tooke Thamar to wyfe, and GOD rooted them out for their filthineſſe; but the Lawe was not yet made. And in the Eaſt Countrey they had no great regard of honeſtie, but behaued themſelues lyke beaſtes in marrying, in ſo much that they made no conſcience to couple the brother and ſiſter together like dogges and bitches. There was (I ſay) ſuch wickedneſſe vſed in that Countrie, yea euen among the kinges and Princes. In deede they be the perſons which take vnto themſelues greateſt leaue and libertie in this behalfe: but the common ſort (as I tolde you) did the like too. And according to this common cuſtome Iuda (after the death of his eldeſt ſonne) gaue his ſecond ſonne alſo vnto Thamar. And herein wee ſee the rather, what it is to bee caryed away by cuſtome. When wee haue no other conſideration than to doe according to the cuſtome which hath beene maintained afore times among men, we fal into horrible confuſion: & when one followes anothers faſhion after yͤ ſorte, there is no rule. But whatſoeuer men do, let vs learne to behaue our ſelues according vnto the wil of God, and not turne either to this ſide or that ſide, but abide ſtable and conſtant in that which God liketh of. That is yͤ thing which we muſt beare in mind, when we ſee that things haue bin ſo farre out of ſquare through out the world, and that the fathers of old time haue bin blemiſhed with them: for when wee dwell in a lawleſſe Country where euery man hath the bridle laid on his neck and may do what him liketh, we be then as in a tempeſt or in a whirle winde, a man cannot ſtay himſelfe but that the winde will driue him to and fro. The like force hath euill cuſtome; and therfore we ought the more as it were to impriſon our ſelues vnder the obedience of God.

Let vs nowe returne vnto this preſent law. It is ſayde that the next brother ſhall take the wife of his brother deceaſed, without Children. When wee heare the woorde Brother, according as the Hebrewes alſo take it, wee may not reſtraine it vnto this firſt degree of borne brother: but of couſẽs both in yͤ firſt and ſecond degree, as wee cal thẽ which are brothers & ſiſters children. For yͤ Iewes do vſe this word Brother generally, and not as wee doe: and therefore one lawe muſt bee conferred with an other. For when it is ſayde: Let the brother take the wife of him which is deade: It is to bee vnderſtoode ſo farre forth, as it is lawefull and permitted, and ſo farre foorth as GOD hath eſtablyſhed the degrees of marriage: ſo as inceſt bee neuer committed. Nowe wee haue the meaning of the law.

And it is ſayde expreſly: If the brethren dwell together. For that a woman when ſhee taketh an husbande in an houſe, ſhould binde her ſelfe in bondage generally vnto all the kindred, were againſt reaſon: and bondes as wel as al other lyke things, ought to bee bounded within ſome meaſure. Where thinges are ſet downe without limitation, there followeth confuſion by and by. If a man ſhould by his laſt will appoint ſo many heyres as could not be numbred; and therewithall would haue his will to endure vnto the ende of the worlde; what a confuſed thing were that? As much is to bee ſayde of other like thinges. And therefore if a woman ſhould be bounde to marrie in a houſe till the whole kindred had refuſed her: in what a ſtraunge caſe were ſhee? But heere it is ſpoken of thoſe kinſmen which are nigh at hande, euen of ſuch as dwell together, that they may bee knowen. For if a woman ſhoulde bee bounde ſhee wotteth not vnto whome, and conſtrayned to take one which ſhe neuer ſawe: ſhee ſhould be kept vnder too cruel bondage, and there were no reaſon in it. And therfore our Lord meant to limit this law within certaine bonds.

It followeth, That the woman ſhall make hir requeſt to bee prouided for. Not that ſhee was to beginne to ſeeke hir an husband; for it pertayned vnto the next of the kinne to come and demaunde hir for his wife. But in this place the caſe concerneth the ſetting of the woman at libertie. For if none of the kinne would haue hir, ſhee was to take hir leaue after this manner, by offering hir ſelfe to accept the condition which God had ordayned hir. For when a man is bounde vnto any condition, and is deſirous to bee ridde of it, and to ſet himſelfe free; he muſt offer himſelfe to doe his duetie ſo as men may vnderſtand that it was not long of him, that the former bond ſtoode not ſtill in force. The thing then which God hath ordayned in this place is, That the woman ſhall come vnto the Elders of the Citie, that for as much as none of the kin would take hir, they myght ſee ſhee was ready to doe hir duetie, and that thereuppon ſhee myght prouide for hir ſelfe, where GOD would appoynt her. And therefore ſhee was to come before the Iudges and to cauſe the next of the kinne, (that is to ſay, him which might lawfully take hir to wife,) to bee called: and the Iudges were to doe what they coulde to perſwade him.

For our Lorde meant not to compell men to take thoſe women, although hee might iuſtly ynough haue done it : But he had this conſideration; That forced and conſtrayned marriages, neuer come to good end. In deede God might haue preciſely ſet downe and commanded, that the next kinſman ſhould haue beene bound to marrie the wife of him that was deceaſed without heires : God might haue ſo commaunded. Why doth he then permit that a man might to his ſhame refuſe hir ? Verily bycauſe that if the husband and the wife doe not agree and loue togither, it is an vnhallowing of marriage, or rather (to ſpeake properly) no marriage at all. For the good will is the chiefe bond : in ſo much that it behoroueth the husband to acknowledge his wyfe to bee as his owne body, and the one Gen.2.23. halfe of himſelfe. Shee is bone of my bone (ſayeth Adam) being inſpired of God. Wherein hee giueth a common rule vnto all men : for it was not ſpoken in reſpect of Eue onely, but of that which muſt bee kept and obſerued for a rule vnto the ende of the worlde. Seeing then that this mutuall agreement is required in marriage : let vs note that our Lorde meant not preciſely to conſtrayne kinſmen to marrie thoſe women which were wydowes and without children : but hee was contented to releaſe them ſomewhat in this behalfe. And hereof wee are to gather this inſtruction; that when a man is to take a wife and to marrie hir, hee muſt take hir of his owne minde and good wil, knowing that where there is no true and ſounde loue : there can bee nothing but confuſion, and wee may not looke that GOD will proſper ſuch marriages. For the iſſue of them can not bee but ill, when both parties ſeeke not firſt to loue together in the name of GOD; that they may liue together in quietneſſe of conſcience. And let fathers alſo haue this regard. For what a thing were it for mortall men to take more vppon them, than God himſelfe woulde doe? And yet he is the chiefe and ſoueraigne father of all : neuertheleſſe hee will not force any to take ſuch a one to wyfe as hee liketh not of. In deede GOD is grieued and angrie with him which will not take hir, and ſetteth on him a marke of reproche and ſhame. But yet for all this, he which hath infinite power, hee which hath all ſoueraigntie ouer vs in all things without exception, euen hee (I ſay) doeth vſe a meaſure, hee ſtoopeth vnto vs, and hee beareth with vs, that wee may ſee hee woulde preſſe and ouercharge no man. And what then ſhall we thinke of a man who is leſſe than nothing, if hee will needes marrie his ſonne or his daughter at his owne luſt and pleaſure? It is verily contrarie to the whole order of nature : nay it is a blaſphemie againſt God for a mortall creature, and a worme of the earth, to preſume ſo farre as to take more vppon him, than GOD himſelfe hath taken vppon him. So then ſuch as haue children, let them take diligent heede when they intende to marrie them, that they obſerue this reaſonableneſſe and rightfulneſſe, ſo as they doe not compell them to marrie.

Nowe moreouer it is ſayd in this place : That the Iudges may perſwade the man, and if they ſee him to ſtande ſtiffe in his opinion, then the woman ſhall plucke off his ſhoe from his foote, and ſpitte in his face, as by waye of reproche : and ſhee ſhall ſay, GOD doe ſo vnto all them which will not raiſe vp a ſtocke in Iſrael. Nowe heere wee haue farther to note, that God would haue the Iudges ſpeake vnto the man to perſwade him as farre as they were able. And if the man woulde not conſent vnto them, they ſhould content themſelues with this kinde of puniſhment. Whereby wee ſee that the Magiſtrates and other Iuſticers ought to abſtaine from vſing any force and violence in that thing which they cannot ſimply commaund. As for example : if there bee a thing which is good, and yet there is no lawe for it : and I being of power and authoritie would conſtraine a man to doe what I thinke good; were there any reaſon in it? For the law conſtrayneth him not to doe it, and I ought not to paſſe thoſe boundes. Let vs therefore note wel, that ſuch as are armed with the ſword, muſt contayne themſelues within their boundſ: and not challenge to themſelues any Laweleſſe libertie to ſay : What? I commaunde nothing but that which is good, and therefore yee muſt doe it. No : For there is no conſtrainyng, where there is no Lawe. When there is a Lawe a man muſt holde himſelfe to the rule thereof : but yet in the ende the poynt that muſt bee come vnto, is to preſume to bring men into no further ſubiection than the Lawe byndeth them vnto. Ye ſee then what wee are farther to beare in minde vpon this place.

Now as touching the ſhame that was done in plucking off of their ſhoes, & in ſpitting in their faces, it ſerued to prouoke men to diſcharge their dueties the better. Yet neuertheleſſe if a man had rather ſuſtaine this reproche, than to take wife againſt his wyll, hee was diſcharged thereof. And heerein wee ſee (as I haue alreadie tolde you) that GOD ſheweth the authoritie of a Father in beyng grieued when the families was not maintayned in Iſrael : and yet was hee contented to beare with ſuch as could not finde in their heartes to ſtoope to that yoke, bicauſe it was ſo hard. Therefore if any had rather to ſuffer ſuch ſhame, than to take a wife after that maner, he came to declare it publikely.

But wee muſt nowe returne vnto that which I ſayd in the beginning, namely that there is not now any carnall kinred priuiledged as the race and linage of Abraham was. For God adopteth vs nowadayes vnder condition, that we bee ingraffed by faith into his Church : and ſo made the children of Abraham. For ſo much therfore as the kinred which we haue at this day is ſpirituall, the order of raiſing vp iſſue to ſucceede [in the inheritaunce of] houſes, landes, or medowes, is no longer in force. And why? For it behoued that the ſtocke of Abraham ſhould bee maintained vntil ẏ comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And ẏ was the cauſe why ẏ land of Canaã was giuen in poſſeſſion vnto the people. Nowadayes ẏ whole earth is ẏ dwelling place of the children of God: & although they be diſperſed throughout the whole worlde, yet are they knit in one body by agreeing in one conſent of faith to call vppon G O D: and although they do it in diuerſe tongues, yet it skilleth not ſeeing that one ſelfe ſame ſpirit gouerneth them, and that they haue all one hope of the euerlaſting ſaluation which is promiſed vnto them. Thoſe are the things wherein they are all knit and conioyned together. Seeing it is ſo, let vs note that G O D will haue euerie of vs nowadayes for his owne part to do his indeuor, to multiplie the church. And the ſeed of Abraham is no longer begotten according to the fleſhe through carnall mariage, but it is begotten of the incorruptible ſeede 1.Pet.1.23 of Gods worde, as Saint Peter ſaith. And when God vouchſafeth vs his grace to winne anie man, and to bring him into his flocke, then are we as ſpirituall Fathers. And that alſo is the verie cauſe why the Miniſters of the worde bee called Fathers: and likewiſe the Church hath generally ẏ name and title of Mother; becauſe ſhe cõceiueth the children of God. Nowe albeit that all haue not that office of Preaching the worde of God, yet a priuate perſon being a member of the Church, may begette ſpirituall children vnto God, if hee haue occaſion and abilitie to winne a poore ſoule & to inlighten him with the faith of the Goſpell. Let vs then beſtowe our paynes to this ende, knowing that if the carnall mariage was ſo pretious vnder the lawe in the ſight of God: Surely the meane whereby we be made members of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, is a thing now farre deerer and of greater eſtimation with him. And therefore let euerie man employe himſelfe that way to the vttermoſt of his poore. For here is no forcing of vs to marie againſt our willes, but of the winning of wiues vnto our lord Ieſus Chriſt, that by the multiplying of the Church, wee may alwayes bee the more firmely linked vnto him. Seeing then that our condition is more gentle and ſweet than that which was vnder the lawe, we ought to be ſtirred vp ſo much the more to the diſcharging of that duetie, and we ſhall haue ſo much the leſſe excuſe if we be careleſſe and negligent therein. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to beare in minde in effect as touching this Lawe. And nowe wee ſee that although it bee no longer in vſe, yet may we gather ſome profite from it to bee edified thereby: For of all the thinges which the holy Ghoſt hath vouchſafed to leaue vnto vs, there is none vnprofitable, if wee haue the wiſedome (as I told you) & the diſcretion to applie it wel vnto our vſe. It followeth, That if two men be at ſtrife, and one of their wiues come to deliuer her husbande, and take his aduerſarie by the priuities, her hand ſhall bee cut off. This lawe betokeneth in effect that honeſtie is to bee kept continually: And that if a woman forgoe ſhamefaſtneſſe, it is a wicked and intollerable thing, and therefore ought to bee puniſhed to the intent honeſt ſobrietie and ſtayednes in conuerſation may be maintayned among the people of God, and no lawleſſe libertie of ſhamefull beaſtlineſſe ſuffered. That is the thing in effect whereat God amed in this law. And ſo let vs note that vnder one example, he meant to giue vs a generall inſtruction as touching all thinges which wee ought to take heede of. Now as concerning the ſpeciall caſe which is ſet downe here, we ſee howe the woman might haue ſomewhat for her excuſe, when ſhe commeth to helpe her husbande; ſhe might alleadge, that ſhe tooke not great heede, and that ſhe was aſtoniſhed or amaſed. but God holdeth her not excuſed for all that. Nowe then if euen in trouble, in daunger, and amaſedneſſe, God will haue honeſtie regarded, what ſhall wee ſay to it, if when no neceſſitie preſſeth vs, when nothing conſtraineth vs, when we are in no ſuch furie as that we alledge: I was afrighted, I knewe not what I did: Yet euen then if wee bee giuen ouer to leawdeneſſe and commit heatheniſh and diſſolute deeds, ought that to be tollerable among the people of God? No verilie. And therefore let vs not ſtande ſo much vpon the preſent example, as regarde the whole intent and meaning of our God: to wit, that he will haue vs honeſt in all our behauiours and in all our conuerſation, and not diſſolute and ſhameleſſe. For if it come once to that point, we by and by open the gappe vnto al wickednes, and one wickedneſſe will drawe on an other. Therefore like as fornication is forbidden vs, euen ſo conſequently all that which may leade vs thereto is likewiſe forbidden vs. As for example, what elſe is filthie and leawde talke, than a kinde of baudrie? And therefore Saint Paul ſaith that they are able to infect good manners. 1.Cor.15.33 Nowe when one ſpeweth out as filthie ſpeaches as any may bee, yet will hee ſay that hee meant no harme, and that hee doth it innocently: For when folke ſing their vile and bawdie ſonges, their common ſaying is: I meant no harme. Such folke would make God a lyer. Nowe if they bee not in any wiſe to bee borne with when they commit euill through ouerſight: what is to bee ſaide to them, when they doe it of ſet purpoſe? Albeit they ſay: I meant it not: yet (as yee ſee) their ſpuing out of ſuch leawde ſpeaches breedeth corruption of manners and yet they ceaſe not to doe euill ſtil. What confuſion then muſt they breede when wee knowe that they do it of a ſet and wilfull malice? Therefore if there were a good and godlie reformation among vs, ſuch lewd ſpeaches ſhould not haue their ſwinge. And ſeeing that they ſerue but to infect all, ſo as nothing may remaine ſounde and holy in our conuerſation, are they to bee excuſed which corrupt good manners after that faſhion? Yee ſee what the thing is, whereunto God had an eye in this Lawe. And at this day this ciuill order might bee well obſerued. And whenſoeuer ſuch a caſe befell; although there bee no written law for it in anie certain place, yet ought we alwayes to conſider that wee can not elſewhere haue better counſell than at the mouth of God. Indeede we are not bounde vnto the order of the Iewes through any preciſe neceſſitie: Neuertheleſſe wee muſt in the ende reſolue our ſelues on this point, that God ordeyned nothing for his people, but that which is iuſt, and that wee are bound at this day (in caſe that ſuch a thing ſhoulde happen) not to ſuffer it or to leaue it vnpuniſhed: and that to doe otherwiſe were not good, or to bee liked of. But the principall thing is that wee muſt receiue ſome generall inſtruction by it. And verily it were a foule and ſhamefull thing to ſee any woman ſo bolde as this example importeth. And to ſay the trueth, GOD meant not to puniſh that which was committed through ſome ouerſight, or amaſedneſſe: but hee conſidered that if a woman ſhoulde haue ſo ſmall regarde of ſhame & honeſt reuerence as to come running vppon a man after that ſorte, and touch that part of him from which ſhe ought to flee backe; if ſhe ſhould bee ſuffered in ſuch ſhameleſſe dealing, it were a kinde of diſpencing with all leawdneſſe and looſeneſſe of behauiour, ſo as no honeſtie ſhoulde bee kept any more. What is then to be doone? Wee muſt note here briefly two points. The firſt is, that God requireth ſuch modeſtie in women as that they muſt alwayes conſider what their ſexe will allowe them to doe, and that they become not like launceknightes, as wee ſee ſome are, which will handle an Harquebuſe as boldely as anie man, and march with enſigne diſplayed as couragiouſly. It is ſo monſtruous a ſight to beholde ſuch wicked women, that a man ought, not onelie to ſpitte at them, but alſo to take vp durt and caſt at ſuch impudent creatures, when they are ſo bolde to peruert the order of nature. Thus yee ſee what God requireth of womē in the firſt place, namelie ſuch a modoſtie as may holde them within the bonds of honeſtie. For if a woman haue all the vertues in the worlde, yet if ſhee be ſuch a Virago that ſhee wil counterfaite the man, all the reſt is but doung and filthineſſe. For we haue ſeene heretofore howe God did ſtraitlie forbid women to diſguiſe themſelues: And that tended to this purpoſe. Let women therefore learne here their leſſon, to bee modeſt, and to haue alwayes that vertue which is proper vnto them, to wit, ſhamefaſtneſſe, that they attempt no ſuch thinges as may ſhewe them to be paſt ſhame. In the ſecond place wee haue a cōmon rule for vs all (as I tolde you) yͤ is, that wee muſt not onely abſtaine from all fornication, but alſo bee honeſt in our whole conuerſation, and behaue our ſelues according as God commandeth: ſo as neither in our deedes nor in our wordes there be any ſuch thing as is contrarie vnto the honeſty of nature, and that which God commādeth, or which may leade vs to euill. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde vpon this place. And therefore although this order was made for the people of olde time, yet the inſtruction and ſubſtance of the lawe abideth for euer, and wee may gather from it a profitable leſſon for our ſelues. Let vs then applie this to our benefit which is contained here, as we may ſhew that foraſmuch as God hath adopted vs, and made vs holy as he himſelf is holy, & foraſmuch as Ieſus Chriſt alſo hath gathered vs into his body to the intent wee ſhould liue in al holines; let yͤ ſame be declared indeed both in al our talke & in al our conuerſation, ſo as there is not any part or member of our body, which is not anſwerable vnto that honeſtie.

Deut,22.8.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, that acknowledging the wretchednes which is in vs and in our nature, wee may labour to drawe our ſelues out of it, by fighting againſt all our carnal affections, & by ridding our ſelues wholie of that which wee holde of our father Adam, vntill this good God hath cloathed vs with his owne righteouſnes, and that we bee made newe creatures in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, to come vnto that glorie which hee hath purchaſed for vs. And pray we him that while we be incloſed with our infirmities, it may pleaſe him to beare with vs, vntil he hath cleane deliuered vs from them, and to giue vs grace in the meane time, to doe our indeuour that his Church may bee multiplied, ſo as we may enioye that bleſſing to ſee his name glorified throughout the worlde, and that when we haue company our minds may euer be the more ſtirred vp thereby to follow that holy vocation wherunto he hath called vs. For the doing whereof it may pleaſe him to raiſe vp true and faithfull miniſters of his worde, &c.

On Fryday the xiiij. of February, 1556.

The CXLIIII. Sermon which is the third vpon the fiue and twentith Chapter.

13 Thou ſhalt not haue two manner of weightes in thy bagge, a great and a little.

14 Thou ſhalt not haue two manner of Ephas in thy houſe a great & a litle.

15 But thou ſhalt haue a iuſt and a right weight, thou ſhalt haue a perfect & a iuſt Epha, that thy dayes may be prolonged in the lande which the Lord thy God giueth thee.

16 For all they which doe ſuch thinges, and all they which deale vnrighteouſly are an abhomination before the Lorde thy God.

17 Remember what Amalec did vnto thee by the way after your comming out of Egypt.

18 Howe hee came againſt thee in the way, and in the hindmoſt of thy traine ſtrake all the weake which followed thee when thou waſt fainte and wearie: and he feared not God.

19 Therefore when the Lord thy God ſhal haue giuen thee reſt from al thine enemies which are round about thee in the lande which the Lord thy God giueth thee to poſſeſſe, then ſhalt thou put out the remembraunce of Amalec from vnder heauen: forget it not.

THere are two thinges eſpeciallie wherein wee offende our neighbours, to wit, deceyte and open violence. For ſome are giuen to deceite and malicious wilineſſe, to deceiue and beguile men: others vſe open wronging and iniuries. In priuie deceite the moſt miſcheeuous meane of beguiling that any man can vſe, is the falſifying of weightes and meaſures. For the vſe of them is the onely way for men to buy and ſell by, without ſtrife or variaunce. If we hadde not monie wherewith to buye thinges; what a diſorder ſhould wee haue? And wares alſo are commonly ſolde by weight and meaſure. Nowe then if there bee deceyte eyther in monie or in weightes or in meaſures, the bonde of that intercommoning which men haue together among themſelues is broken: ſo as they become like dogges and Cattes, and there is no meanes for them to deale one with an other. And therefore no maruell though our Lorde doe greatly miſlike the falſifying of weightes and meaſures, and tell vs that it is the worſt and deteſtableſt robberie that can bee. If a theefe purpoſe with him ſelfe to take a bootie, hee will ſet on a man, and from one hee will goe to an other. But wee are ſure there is no theefe can paſſe his boundes ſo farre, as to ſpoyle and robbe the whole worlde. But he which vſeth falſe weightes and falſe meaſures, hath no regarde at all, when hee robbeth; but doeth wrong vnto all in generall: and that is the next way to peruert all ciuill order, ſo as no humanitie or common honeſtie may remayne any longer among men. What ſhall Lawes doe? Or to what purpoſe ſhall Iuſtice ſerue, whẽ there is no more anie playne nor vpright dealing in thoſe thinges which ſhoulde helpe men to mayntaine their eſtate? Wee haue therefore a verie neceſſarie law in this place, where mention is made of weightes and meaſures. It is ſayde: Thou ſhalt not haue diuerſe ſtones in thy bag. And that is becauſe in olde time they were woont to make their weightes of ſtone. And this importeth aſmuch as if it were ſayde: Thou ſhalt haue a iuſt weight and a iuſt meaſure. Moreouer let vs beare in minde alwayes that which hath beene ſayde before, namely that GOD oftentimes vnder one ſpeciall kinde, giueth a generall doctrine. And ſo it is all one as if we were commaunded generallie in all buying and ſelling, to vſe reaſonable and vpright dealing without anie falſehoode. For when a man ſelleth one kinde of ware for an other, it is all one as if hee falſifyed his weightes or his meaſures. A ſimple man commeth to a ſhoppe and asketh for cloath: hee knoweth it not, but truſteth the Marchant, and the Marchant ſayeth vnto him, here is cloath of ſuch a place: and hee knoweth well that hee lyeth: now this is all one, as if he had giuen him halfe a yarde or three quarters of a yarde, for a whole yarde. So then wee ſee how GOD ordeyneth in generall that our trayding ſhoulde bee after ſuch a ſorte as that hee which buyeth doe bring lawfull monie; and that hee which ſelleth doe deliuer his wares at a reaſonable price and vſe no falſehoode, neither in weight nor in meaſure; at leaſtwiſe if it bee ſuch wares as are woont to bee meaſured by the yarde or ell, or weyed in ſcales or balaunces, but that on either part there bee true and iuſt dealing vſed.

And ſith wee ſee ſo manie lawes tending all to this end, that no man ſhoulde be deceyued, but that euerie man ſhoulde haue his right; let vs alwayes remember this ſaying, That GOD will haue mercie, iudgement and iuſtice. And therefore let vs haue compaſſion on them which are in neceſſitie, to releeue and ſuccour them. And ſecondlie let vs not onelie yeeld to euerie man his right, but alſo when wee ſee anie man wrong his neighbour, let vs not ſuffer it, nor bee conſenting vnto it in anie caſe. Loe wherein wee exerciſe our ſelues if wee will order our life according to the will of GOD. For excepte wee doe ſo, what fayre countenaunce ſoeuer wee ſette vppon thinges, yet all ſhall bee but deteſtable hypocriſie in the ſighte of GOD, vntill wee haue learned to liue charitablie with our Neighbours

Matt.7.12. bours, and to obſerue this vprightneſſe which nature hath taught vs, of not doeing otherwyſe vnto others than wee woulde haue doone vnto our ſelues. Heere withall alſo wee be made to knowe our owne naughtineſſe. For it were enough to haue warned vs in one word, if wee were diſpoſed to doe well, and had not ſuch a rebelliouſneſſe within vs, that wee euer drawe backewarde from that which is good. Then if men were inclined of themſelues to do right and to exerciſe humanitie: it were enough to make but a ſigne vnto them, and to ſay: Yee ſee what your duetie is: But nowe God is faine to make often repetitions, he is fayne to ſtrengthen the lawes which hee hath giuen, hee is fayne to expounde them, he is fayne to heape commaundement vppon commaundement. And what is the cauſe hereof, but that wee are ouerharde to bee ruled, and that our deſites are as fell and furious beaſtes: ſo that one bonde is not ſtrong enough to binde vs, but wee muſt be hampered with many cordes, nay wee muſt haue chaynes and fetters layde on vs? So then let vs know that our willes and minds are farre from beeing diſpoſed to obey God. And therefore let euerie man quicken vp and inforce himſelfe the more, conſidering how it is not without cauſe that God maketh ſo often rehearſall of that which ſerueth to bring vs to brotherlie faithfulneſſe and friendſhippe; for aſmuch as we drawe cleane backewarde from that which hee commaundeth as I haue tolde you before. Moreouer let vs beare in minde, that the more a thing maketh to the common benefite of al, the better is it alwayes to bee obſerued. Nowe I haue tolde you howe there woulde bee extreeme confuſion, if there were no weightes nor meaſures: and therefore if weightes and meaſures ſhould bee falſified, there woulde ſcarce remayne any ciuill order in the worlde. Therefore ſeeing the thing is ſo requiſite and neceſſarie, that without it wee coulde not liue together, but ſhoulde bee as wilde and ſauage beaſtes; let vs knowe that whoſo breaketh any part of this order, offendeth GOD moſt greeuouſly: and as the faulte is puniſhable by earthly Iuſtice: ſo let vs aſſure our ſelues, that ſuch offenders when they ſhall come to render an account before the heauenly Iudge, ſhal not eſcape the hande of God: For it was not long of them that all vprightneſſe was not cleane aboliſhed. Wherefore let vs ſtande in feare of that which is tolde vs here, and let euerie man deale vprightlie with his Neighbours; Let thoſe which vſe any trade of Marchandiſe haue a iuſt balaunce and a iuſt meaſure, and lawfull wares, and let them take heede that they vſe no deceyte. Let both the buyers and the ſellers vſe ſuch truſtie dealing, as it may appeare that they haue a Lawe which beareth rule in their hearts: and although wee had neither threates nor puniſhmentes; yet let it ſuffice vs that God hath declared his will vnto vs. Let that bee of force and power with vs, to guide and gouerne vs.

And moreouer whereas it is ſayde. That all thoſe which doe ſuch thinges, are an abhomination vnto GOD: it is ſpoken to the intent that men ſhoulde not deceyue themſelues by ſubtiltie or Sophiſtrie: as wee are alwayes ſeeking for ſome ſtarting holes: Such as are deſirous to winde in their neighbours with craftineſſe, haue alwayes ſome colour to paint their caſe withall. But although men holde vs excuſed, it is nothing ſeeing wee muſt come before the heauenly Iudge. For Moſes ſaith, That ſuch a thing is an abhomination before GOD. Therefore let not men beguyle themſelues anie more with any of the trifling excuſes wherewith manie men doe ſhroulde themſelues, but rather let them thinke thus: Beholde it is our GOD that ſpeaketh, it will not boote vs to diſguiſe our matters. For hee will not ſuffer himſelfe to bee mocked: and it is before him that wee muſt anſwere. And therefore let vs walke in ſuch wiſe as our owne conſcience may beare vs good witneſſe, and as wee may proteſt not onelie with our mouth but alſo within with our heart, ẏ we haue liued vprightlie with our neighbours, that there is no ſecrete wickedneſſe within vs, and that wee haue not made our owne gayne by an other mans loſſe. Lo (I ſay) what we haue to beare in mind vpon this place.

And whereas Moſes addeth: Whoſoeuer doth vnrighteouſly: it is to confirme that which I ſaid in the beginning: that is, that albeit GOD expreſſeth here but two kindes, to wit, Weight and Meaſure: yet notwithſtanding, it ſerueth to put vs in minde generally, howe men ought to liue with their neighbours without hurting of them. For if GOD leaue no kinde of wickedneſſe vnpuniſhed, whether wee plucke other mens goods vnto vs by force or vſe deceite to beguile the ſimple; if GOD call all ſuch thinges to account: what will become of vs when wee ſhall haue committed more outragious crymes, ſo as wee ſhall haue peruerted all common order, by playing the robbers & theeues in raking to ourſelues whatſoeuer we coulde come by, as thoſe doe which vſe falſe weightes and falſe meaſures? For certaine it is, that vnder pretence of buying and ſelling, ſuch foolkes doe play the rancke theeues, and are worſe than thoſe which robbe in the woods. And therefore let vs knowe that whereas God pronounceth himſelfe a Iudge to puniſhe all manner of wickedneſſe, hee ſheweth that by greater reaſon, vengeaunce ſhall fall on them which make no conſcience or remorſe, to rake other mens goods vnto themſelues without diſcretion, or rather which haue giuen their luſtes ſo large ſcope, that they ruſhe foorth into all euill, and all men both greate and ſmall are faine to paſſe their pawes. Thus yee ſee in effect what the thing is which Moſes meant to declare vnto vs in this place. Nowe if at that time it was behoouefull and neceſſarie, that GOD ſhoulde repreſſe ſuch deceytes as were committed in weightes and meaſures, howe much more needefull is it that hee ſhoulde doe the like nowe? For certainlie there is nowe no ſuch vpright dealing in the worlde as was at that time: but corruptions are ſtill increaſed:

and therefore ſo much the more ought wee to exerciſe our ſelues in this lawe. And let vs not thinke that wee may excuſe our ſelues by the great number of deceiuers and pollers which are nowadayes: but let vs knowe that the lawe of GOD is euerlaſting: and that if wee wil bee taken for the children of GOD, wee muſt keepe that vprightneſſe whereof Moſes here ſpeaketh, notwithſtanding all the wickednes that is cōmitted in the world. And that is the cauſe alſo why he thinkes it not enough to ſay: Thoſe which doe ſuch thinges are an abhomination in the ſight of the Creator: but he addeth alſo: Before thy God. And therefore we muſt alwayes returne vnto this point, ẏ becauſe GOD hath adopted vs for his children wee muſt not bee carried away with euill cuſtomes. Though this man misbehaue himſelfe and that man bee offenſiue through his euill life; yet muſt wee ſtill abide conſtant in obeying our GOD, ſeeing that he hath choſen vs, and keepeth vs for his owne. Thus ye ſee what we haue further to beare in minde concerning this place.

Nowe this lawe needeth not any long expoſition. For there is no man which of himſelfe knoweth not what confuſion there woulde bee in the worlde, if the meane of buying and ſelling were taken away. Yet neuertheleſſe yee ſee howe GOD doeth further open his mouth to teach vs. Haue wee then his lawe in three wordes? It ought to ſuffice vs: but yet the practiſe of it is verie rare. Yea verily: and therefore wee ought not to buſye our ſelues ſo much in ſaying ouer the words, which are ſet downe here, as to minde them throughlie, and to bethinke of them earely and late, and to ſay, Goe to, GOD hath commaunded that we ſhoulde haue iuſt weightes and equall meaſures, that wee might deale vprightly one with an other. When wee ſhall haue refreſhed our minds with the remembrāce hereof, it wil ſerue to perſwade vs to order our life in ſuch wiſe as it beehoueth vs to do.

Moreouer let vs note that vnder falſe weights and deceitefull meaſures, all acceptinges of perſons are condemned by GOD. For if it be not lawfull to falſifie a weight or balaunce, if it bee not lawfull to falſifie a meaſure or yarde; what ſhal we ſay of falſifying of iuſtice? If in a garner, if in a ſellar, if in a ſhop, God wil haue men to vſe vpright dealing among thēſelues: what is to be thought when it commeth to the iudging of a caſe in Lawe? If a man ſhoulde ſwarue aſide to the fauouring of any perſon, what a dealing were that? As I haue alreadie touched, we muſt returne vnto this generall commaundement of walking in vprightneſſe with men, ſo as wee neuer ſwarue aſide but holde on right foorth as God hath commaunded vs. And if in Marchandiſe which are tranſitorie thinges God will haue vs to obſerue ſuch vpright dealing: what ought wee to doe in the caſe where God is to be ſerued? Neuertheleſſe wee ſee howe men ſhape and vnſhape themſelues, and make lawes after their owne fancies, nowe one way and now an other. But let vs note that GOD boweth not anie way at our pleaſure, but when hee once giueth a lawe, which is vnchaungeable, euerie man muſt frame himſelfe thereafter. And let vs not beare our ſelues in hande that wee ſhall bee our owne Iudges: for wee are not competent enough, but let vs alwayes abyde in that which God hath commaunded.

Nowe let vs come vnto that which Moſes addeth concerning Amalec. A man might at firſt bluſhe, thinke it an harde caſe, that it ſhoulde bee lawfull for the Iewes to reuenge themſelues vppon the Amalekites, and that when they were at reſt from their enemies, they ſhoulde then roote them cleane out. Remember Amalec alſo, becauſe hee woulde haue cutte thee off by the way, and made an aſſault on thy hindermoſt people, and ſought to make hauocke of thee. Forgette it not, but purſue it with fire and ſworde. This is a verie ſeuere and ſharpe condemnation. But wee haue to note that the Amalekites had prouoked the vengeaunce of God againſt themſelues and were intangled in the condemnation which was alreadie giuen vpon the people of the lande of Chanaan, as vppon the Amorites, the Phereſites and ſuch like. Wee haue before ſhewed that wee may not account this ſentence of GOD anie way cruell, when he ordayned that all theſe people ſhould bee rooted out of the worlde. For hee had ſpared them nowe by the ſpace of foure hundred yeares and more: And although they had then deſerued to haue beene vtterlie ouerwhelmed with deſtruction; yet was it ſaid that Gen. 15. 16. their wickedneſſe was not then come vnto full meaſure. But amended they in all that tyme wherein GOD wayted for their repentaunce with ſo great patience? No, but of badde they became worſe. And therefore it behooued that cleane riddaunce ſhoulde bee made of them, ſeeing they were ſuch a ſtubborn and vnamendable people. The like reaſon was of Amalec alſo. And hereby wee ſee what it is to bee intangled among the wicked, when they are altogether forſaken of GOD. It is all one as if a man woulde caſt himſelfe into the middeſt of an hoate burning fire, where hee muſt needes bee conſumed with the wood. Let vs marke well then that vnder the example of the Amalekites, GOD hath warned vs in this place to take heede, that when wee ſee men giuen ouer vnto all wickedneſſe and hardened in their ſinnes, wee come not neere them, nor haue any thing to doe with them. And why? For it is the next way to binde vp our ſelues in the ſame bundell with them, and then muſt wee needes periſhe together. Wherefore let vs keepe our ſelues aloofe from foolke when wee ſee them ſo peruerſe, and that they bee deſpiſers of GOD, & are become as brutiſhe as beaſts in their wickedneſſe. Let vs I ſay, flee farre from them, vnleſſe wee will haue their condemnation to take holde of vs alſo, and bee carried awaye in the ſame tempeſt with them. And that is the cauſe alſo wherefore Eſay the Eſa.48.20. & 52.11. Prophete cryeth with a lowde voyce, Flie farre from them. Hee is not contented to to ſay: withdrawe your ſelues from them, but flie, flie. And yet hee repeateth the ſame again and ſaith: ſeparate your ſelues farre from them. And why? Wee ſee howe he meant it of ſuch as Moſes ſpeaketh of in this place. Let that therefore be noted for one point.

Nowe herewithall we muſt conſider farther, that the Amalekites reſiſted G O D to the vttermoſt of their power, and woulde haue hindered the Iewes from comming into that inheritance which he had already appointed out for them. Indeede they thought they had waged battell with men: but in verie deede G O D was their aduerſary partie. For the Iewes came not thither through their owne power, but God had called them to poſſeſſe the Land of Chanaan for their inheritaunce. Therefore when the Amalekites banded themſelues in multitudes againſt them, it was as if they had bidden battell vnto God. And therefore wee may not maruell that their condemnation was ſo greeuous, ſeeing they flang foorth into ſo great rage [euen againſt God himſelfe.] I graunt they knewe not certeynly that the Iewes had any ſuch promiſe made them: and yet for all that, they were not altogether ignoraunt of it: It ſufficed for their condemnation, that they ought to haue knowẽ by certaine ſignes that it was a power exceeding mans power, and thereupon ſhoulde haue beene feared from ruſhing ſo venterouſly and at randõ againſt thoſe which were gouerned by the hande of God. And therefore wee are warned, when wee take any thing in hande, to beware that wee haue not God our enemie and aduerſarie partie. Nowe hee hath declared, that foraſmuch as the Church is in his protection, if wee attempt anie thing againſt the faithfull, whether it bee generallie or particularlie, it is all one as if we came to warre againſt God. And what ſhall wee get by that? It is not for Deut.32.10 nought that he hath ſaide, That hee keepeth vs as the apple of his eye. And therefore let vs learne to abſtaine from all doing of wrong, and conſider well that if we prouoke the liuing God to anger, it muſt needes bee to our great confuſion in the end.

Now as this doctrine ought to ſerue vs for a bridle, to make vs to abſtaine from all outragious and wrongfull dealinges: So wee ſee on the other ſide what a comfort it is vnto the faithfull when they know that God hath ſuch a care ouer them, ẏ he will take their part and be their defendour, and that if any man harme them he declareth that the iniurie is doone vnto himſelfe. Therefore ſith wee ſee that God ſetteth himſelfe expreſſely on our part, ought wee not to take courage vnto vs, and to reſt our ſelues wholy vppon his promiſes? Yet notwithſtanding there are but fewe which can taſt of this doctrine. For what is the cauſe that wee bee ſo kindled with deſire of reuenge as ſoone as any man moleſteth or troubleth vs? It is becauſe we knowe not that God watcheth ouer vs, and hath his hande ſtretched out to maintaine vs, and that hee will not ſuffer anie outrage to bee doone vnto vs, but he will redreſſe it and ſend vs helpe and ſuccour in time conuenient? Were we throughlie perſwaded hereof, wee would be as meeke and quiet as lambes, wee woulde bee patient in our wronges, wee woulde tarie till he redreſſed them. But what? Becauſe we haue no truſt in him, euerie of vs ſhifteth for himſelfe by right or by wrong, wee regarde not what is lawfull for vs to doe; nay wee thinke we ſhould deceiue our ſelues if wee ſhoulde ſtaye vppon the promiſes of God. And therefore let vs learne to conſider more deepelie of this doctrin, where it is ſaide: Thou ſhalt not forget what Amalecke did vnto thee by the way. For God ſheweth that although we paſſe it ouer and make no matter of it when wee haue beene vniuſtly vexed, but forget that anie ſuch thing was doone vnto vs: yet will hee remember it. Wee are tender enough in our own iniuries; but yet God ſheweth, that hee taketh them more to hearte than wee doe, and that hee will puniſhe them which haue vexed vs and dealte ouerrigorouſly with vs, ſo as hee will call to remembraunce all the euill which they haue done vnto vs. Ye ſee then what wee haue to beare in minde as touching this place: to wit that wee muſt take heede of doing any violence to our neighbours; for God will take their cauſe in hande and we muſt needs haue him for our aduerſarie party. That is the firſt point to bee noted. Secondly let vs walke in all ſimplicitie and gentleneſſe, knowing that if wee will bee as ſheepe, wee ſhall haue a good ſhepheard which wil keepe vs from the wolues, inſomuch that although wee ſeeme to be euen in their chappes and readie to be deuoured; yet God will prouide a remedie for all, if wee can put our truſt in him and feede our ſoules with Luke.21.19. patience, as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt declareth.

But now we muſt alſo call to remembrance that which wee haue treated of before, to wit, Deut.23.4. that God is then ſpeciallie mooued vnto anger, when his people are troubled and hindered frõ taking poſſeſſion of their inheritaunce. And if hee haue declared ſuch ſigne of anger againſt the Amalekites, becauſe they would haue withhelde the Iewes from entring into the Land of Chanaan: what will hee doe, if wee nowe-adayes doe turne away the faithfull from entering, (not into the Lande of Chanaan, but) into the kingdome of heauen? For nowadayes God calleth vs not to poſſeſſe the Lande of Chanaan: but to the immortall and incorruptible life. And therefore we muſt keepe on our way and labour to come thither. Nowe then, if anie come to trouble vs: they which ſhall haue caſt ſuch ſtumblingblockes in our waye, that is to ſay which ſhall haue helde vs backe from ſeruing our G O D; ſhall bee driuen to feele a double curſe in compariſon of the curſe that lighted vppon Amalecke. Nowe let vs conſider howe many there are nowadayes which ſeeke to turne the children of G O D out of their right waye, ſome by crueltie and perſecutions, others by leawde and wicked examples:

amples : to bee ſhort, wee cannot ſet one foote forwarde in this waye, but wee are troubled, and Sathan deuiſeth ſtill I knowe not what to hinder vs; and euer hee findeth miniſters fitte for the purpoſe. What is the cauſe that all Churches are not ſo well ordered, as that God may bee ſerued with one common accorde, or that wee haue not ſuch loue and agreement among vs as may ſhewe in verye deede that wee call vppon GOD as our Father? It is bycauſe wee are mingled among Amalekites. Wherefore let vs take heede that they hinder vs not: and let vs alſo on our partes beware that wee trouble not the children of GOD, but rather let euerye of vs take his companion by the hande as the Prophet Eſay ſpeaketh, and ſaye, Esa.2.3. Come, let vs goe and mount vp into the hill of the Lorde, that hee may ſhewe vs his wayes, and guide vs in his righteouſneſſe. Nowe then if wee will not bee coupled with them whom GOD hath heere ordayned to deſtruction, let euerie of vs take payne to guide his neighbour and to further him in the good way, and let none of vs ſtaye or hinder them which are already on their way to goe whither God hath called them.

Nowe it is ſayde: When GOD hath giuen thee reſt from all thyne enemyes in the lande whither thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it, then remember the Amalekites. By theſe woordes wee are giuen to vnderſtande, firſt of all, that the people to the ende they myght bee the more encouraged to execute that which Moſes had in GODS name commaunded them; are certifyed in this place, that in the ende they ſhoulde haue the victorie ouer all their enemyes. For it had beene a matter of laughter, if Moſes had ſayde, Remember Amalec, and when thou haſt made a diſpatch of all the reſt, roote him out alſo. For the Iewes myght haue anſwered: What are wee to roote him out? Why? We are yet Wanderers; wee liue as it were at the courteſie of another man; wee knowe not what will betide vs. In deede God promiſed vnto vs, the land of Chanaan, but hath hee not led vs vp and downe in the wilderneſſe, as if we were worthy to bee altogether depriued and defeated of the poſſeſſiō of that land which he promiſed vs? Why? Wee are yet to enter into it. And what are we thē able to do vnto Amalec, ſeing we haue ſo many and ſo ſtrong enemies? For this cauſe Moſes ſetteth downe this promiſe, When the Lord thy God hath giuen thee reſt from all thine enemyes, (ſaith he.) Nowe heereby wee are warned, that when God commandeth vs any thing which ſeemeth harde, yea or altogether vnpoſſible, we ought to haue an eye vnto his power: for otherwyſe our courage cannot but fayle vs. And they which of themſelues preſume to execute whatſoeuer GOD teacheth by his woorde, doe breake their neckes in the ende through their fooliſhe preſumption. Seeing then it is ſo, let vs humbly and earneſtly deſire of GOD, ſo to ſtrengthen vs as wee may bee able to obey him. For the dooing whereof let vs haue an eye vnto his promyſes. For when GOD ſaith vnto vs, Doe thus: he addeth, care not though men withſtande you: if you cannot accompliſh that which I commaunde you, I haue power ſufficient in mee to ſupply your weakeneſſe: I will vpholde you: and when it ſhall ſeeme that you are fallen downe, I haue meanes wherewith to helpe you vp agayne: and if the thing be more than you can doe, I will bring it to paſſe for you. Let vs therefore arme our ſelues with theſe promyſes, and thereuppon take courage to marche forewarde in our waye; and what threates ſoeuer wee heare, or what ſtumbling blockes ſo euer are layde in our way; let vs yet keepe on our courſe ſtill. And why? Bycauſe GOD will take care of all, and wee cannot bee deceyued by wayting for his helpe. In deede if wee haue not the woorde from his mouth, wee may not truſt vppon our owne opinion and ſay: I hope GOD will helpe mee. Wee may not bee ſo preſumptuous, but wee muſt aſſure our ſelues vppon the warrant which hee giueth vs; as wee ſee in this place: Thy GOD wyll giue thee reſt from all thine enemyes. And therefore Moſes ſayde not ſimply, When thou haſt conquered the Countrey, when thou haſt the victorie ouer all thine enemyes; but hee referreth all vnto GOD. Whereby hee declareth (as I haue already touched) that men may not grounde themſelues vppon their owne power and abilitie: but wee muſt haue our recourſe alwayes vnto GOD, and acknowledge that it is in him onely to make vs inuincible againſt all our enemyes. And if it was needefull that GOD ſhoulde woorke in ſuch wyſe to make the children of Iſrael to ouerthrowe the Chananites, Phereſites, Iebuſites and the lyke: it is much more needefull that hee ſhoulde woorke nowadayes with a greater power in vs, bycauſe wee are to encounter with more mightie enemyes. For (as Saint Paule ſayeth) our combat is not againſt fleſhe Epheſ.6.12. and blooud, that is to ſay, mortall creatures onely, but alſo againſt the Princes of the ayre. In ſo much that if wee compare the power which wee our ſelues haue to reſiſte, with the aduauntage which Sathan hath ouer vs; alas, hee is the prince of the worlde, and beſides that, hee is aboue our heades, ſo as hee myght ouerwhelme vs out of hande. And therefore GOD muſt put to his helping hande and fight for vs, or elſe wee ſhoulde bee a hundred thouſande times vanquiſhed. So then, whenſoeuer wee are to aduenture vppon any thing, let vs learne to haue an eye alwayes vnto the power of GOD, aſſuring our ſelues that the ſame is mightie ynough to ſtrengthen vs. And thereuppon taking courage; let vs boldly defye all the forces of our enemyes bee they neuer ſo dreadfull: and let vs knowe that they are nothing in compariſon of the helpe and ſuccour which God hath promiſed vnto vs, and which he is readie to ſhewe in verie deede. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde vpon this place.

Nowe it is expreſſely ſayde : That the Iewes ſhall bee reuenged vppon Amalec when they haue the lande in poſſeſsion, which was promiſed vnto them: And it ſerueth to ſhewe that wee ought to bee as quiet as may bee in executing GODS vengeaunce. For when men reuenge themſelues of their enemyes, wee ſee they are altogether troubled with thoſe bickeringes which they haue with them, and they are ſet all on fire by their paſſions. And that is the cauſe why reuenginges are forbidden vs, when they proceede not from GOD, but that men thruſt themſelues ſo into them without any meaſure or diſcretion. Will wee then iuſtifie any reuenge of ours? Wee muſt bee at peace within our ſelues: that is to ſaye, wee muſt not haue an eye to our owne loſſe or gayne; wee muſt not bee mooued with any exceſſiue paſſion; to bee ſhorte, wee muſt haue a ſtayed and ſetled minde; and aboue all, the zeale of God muſt abide in vs and gouerne vs. Neuerthelater, we may not vnder this colour that GOD ſayde vnto his people, Remember the Amalekites, for I will haue them rooted out of the worlde; wee may not (I ſay) take occaſion thereupon to reuenge our ſelues after our owne luſt and liking. And why? For God layde not the bridle on his peoples necke, to ſay, Doe what you thinke good, you ſhall haue leaue to doe what you liſte: but hee woulde haue the reuenge to proceede from himſelfe: whereuppon wee haue to note two thinges. The one is that wee muſt bee appoynted of God, or otherwyſe it ſhall not be lawfull for vs to lift vp ſo much as a finger to puniſh any offences. The other is that although wee haue this calling, and that God putteth the ſworde in our handes, yet neuertheleſſe wee muſt not bring with vs our owne affections which alwayes driue vs on forewarde and ouermaſter vs: but wee muſt behaue our ſelues ſo ſimply and plainely in this vocation of ours, that the ſpirit of GOD may gouerne both our heartes and our handes. As touching the firſt poynt, I tolde you that hee which hath no expreſſe commaundement of God to that purpoſe, may not puniſh offences. If I ſee a man offend, although I ought to ſet my ſelfe againſt him to the vtmoſt of my power, and to withſtand his wickedneſſe: yet bycauſe I am a priuate perſon, I may not attempt to puniſh the offender any way. For GOD hath charged mee with no ſuch thing: and men may not on their owne heades, take vppon them any ſuch charge. For although at ỹ firſt ſight a man would take it for a great vertue if I ſhoulde fall vpon a wicked man and apprehend him: inſomuch that if he beate or abuſe a poore man, & I come and maintaine the good cauſe, it would be taken for a good deede: yet in verye deede I paſſe my boundes, and take more vppon mee than God hath commaunded mee; and this deede of mine may not be accounted for a vertue. Yee ſee then what ſtayedneſſe the faithfull ought to keepe in their liuing, to wit, that they attempt not any thing but what God hath giuen them in charge to doe. That is to be noted for one poynt. Nowe for the ſecond, wee muſt note that vnder colour that God hath armed them with authoritie to puniſh vices, men muſt not fall into heates through their carnall affections and paſſions, to reuenge their owne quarels, but muſt doe that which they knowe GOD liketh of, and yet to no other ende or meaning than hee hath appoynted.

And herewithall let vs note, that they which are ordained and appointed of God to execute Iuſtice, ought to keepe themſelues in the high beaten way, wherein God willeth them to goe without taking vnto themſelues any new leſſon. For it is not for earthly Iudges to make lawes at their pleaſure, and to ſay euery day: I will doe thus, and I will doe otherwiſe: but they muſt haue a carefull eye to their office and duetie. Beholde it is GOD which ſpeaketh, wee muſt execute that which hee commaundeth; and therefore let men holde themſelues thereunto, and not preſume to alter his commaundement in any wiſe: for otherwiſe a man may pretende goodly excuſes, but God liketh better of the obedience which men yeelde vnto him, than of al that euer they can alleage in reaſon, although it haue neuer ſo great likelyhood. Moreouer (as I haue alreadie touched) when wee heare concerning Amalec, that GOD woulde haue him cleane rooted out: a man might reply and ſay: What if a man ſhould handle this people gently and ſpare them? Were it not a reaſonable thing? Should a man deale ſo extremelie with them? Surely when the people of Iſrael left it vndone, their ſhewing of mercie was a kynde of deſpyſing GOD; and it is certayne that their 1.Sam.15.
ſo dooyng turned to their owne confuſion, according whereunto wee ſee howe it was ſayde, You haue not executed the vengeaunce of your GOD, and therefore thoſe whome you haue Numb.33.5
ſuffered to lyue muſt bee as thornes in your ſides to pricke and to punch you; or rather to put out your eyes: you ſhall ſurelye finde it ſo bycauſe yee haue not doone as GOD commanded you. This ſerueth then to ſhewe vs that euerye man muſt followe that which is appointed him, and when hee once knoweth what his office and calling requireth, hee muſt ſimply obey God.

And moreouer let vs alwaies haue recourſe to this point, that ſeeing God ſheweth himſelfe a friend to our friends and an enemie to our enemies; we muſt put our whole truſt & confidence in him; & hiding our ſelues vnder his wings, wee Exod.23.22 muſt not doubt but that he will ſhew in the ende what care hee hath had of our welfare. For hee ſayth, I am moued with ielouſie, I am inflamed Exod.13.7.
with choler, bicauſe of ỹ iniuries which my people hath ſuffered. In deede God is not ſubiect to any paſſions, he is not moued after the maner of men: neuertheleſſe, to ſhewe howe dearelye hee accounteth of our welfare, and bycauſe wee conceiue it not excepte hee doe (as yee woulde ſay) transfigure himſelfe and vtter himſelfe vnto vs in ſuch wyſe as wee maye con-conceyue ſome paſſions in him: that is the verie cauſe why hee ſayeth that hee is mooued with choler, and inflamed with a iealouſie to defende his people. Let vs therefore ſettle our truſt thereuppon: and although he doe not by and by lift vp his hand and thunder vppon our enemyes, let vs not thinke therefore that hee hath forgotten vs, but let vs bee patient and ſorowfull, and let vs deſire him to accompliſh his promiſes. And if wee ſo doe, hee will rayſe vp ſuch men as we thought to haue beene againſt vs; and they ſhall ſpend themſelues in our defence, and wee ſhall bee armed in ſuch wiſe agaynſt all our enemyes, that wee ſhall beare away the victorie; and as it is heere declared that hee was the defender of his people in olde time; ſo he will nowadayes doe much more for vs, bicauſe he is come nearer vnto vs in the perſon of his onely ſonne.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good GOD, with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them more and more, and to receyue vs vnto mercie although wee bee altogether vnworthie of it, and that in the meane tyme hee will ſo gouerne vs by his holy ſpirite, that wee may apply both our handes and our eyes, and our feete to his ſeruice, and not attempt any thing without his worde, but that whatſoeuer wee doe, wee may doe it with ſuch a zeale, as hee may bee glorifyed and our lyfe may bee in all poyntes referred vnto his will, without turning of our ſelues aſide eyther to the right hand or to the left, and that wee may learne to reſt our ſelues wholly vpon him, and not bee tempted to iniurie any man, but that whatſoeuer wickedneſſe wee ſee in the worlde, wee may alwayes walke vprightly and ſoundly, to the intent that when wee bee vniuſtly and wrongfully tormented, he may ſhewe himſelfe our defender. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace not onely to vs but alſo to al people & Nations of the earth, bringing backe all poore ignoraunt people from the ſuperſtitions and idolatries wherein they are helde: that ſo hee may leade them to the knowledge of his trueth: And that for this purpoſe it woulde pleaſe him to raiſe vp true Miniſters of his word,&c.

The CXLV. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the ſixe and twentith Chapter.

WHen thou commeſt into the lande which the Lorde thy GOD giueth thee for an inheritaunce, and poſſeſſeſt it and dwelleſt therein,

2 Then ſhalt thou take of the firſt of all the fruite of the earth, which the Lorde thy GOD giueth thee, and put theſe fruites which thou bringeſt out of thy land, in a basket, and goe vnto the place which the Lorde thy God ſhall chooſe, to place his name there.

3 And thou ſhalt come vnto the Prieſt which ſhall bee in thoſe dayes, and ſhalt ſay vnto him; I acknowledge this day vnto the Lorde thy God, that I am come into the land which the Lord ſware vnto our fathers for to giue vs.

4 Then the Prieſt ſhall take the Basket out of thy hand, and ſhall ſet it downe before the Aultar of the Lord thy God.

5 And thou ſhalt ſpeake and ſay before the Lorde thy GOD: My father was a Syrian, a poore man, and hee went downe into Egypt, and ſoiourned there with a ſmall companie, and grewe there vnto a Nation great, mighty, and full of people.

6 And the Egyptians vexed vs, and troubled vs, and loaded vs with harde bondage.

VEe haue in this place the Lawe of ẏ firſt fruits which was made for this ende, ẏ the Iewes ſhold thereby acknowledge vnto G O D, that they helde the lande of Chanaan of his mere and onely gifte : as when a Lorde graunteth any Lande in Fee, hee reſerueth ſome Rent and ſome kind of ſeruice to himſelfe to teſtifye that the Lande is helde of him. So likewiſe G O D meant to haue a certayne memoriall among the Iewes, whereby they ſhoulde bee put in minde to ſerue him, for ſo much as hee nouriſhed them, and that whatſoeuer they had in poſſeſſion, they helde it of his freebeſtowed goodneſſe. In deede G O D did it not after the manner of mortall men : for thoſe which are Lordes of any land, bee they neuer ſo riche, haue neede of Rentes and reuenewes: for the mayntenaunce of their eſtate. But G O D who ſtandeth in neede of nothing, ordayned this Lawe, onely for the profite and welfare of his people. For the firſt fruites were not brought vnto the Temple as though G O D were to receiue ſome commoditie of them to himſelfe : but the bringing of them was to this intent, that the people ſhoulde bee the better ſtirred vp by that meanes, to diſcharge themſelues of their duetie towardes G O D. For the firſt fruites went not for full payment, but they ſerued onelye for a ſolemne proteſtation, thereby to ſhewe that the people was much more bound vnto G O D.

And let vs note that G O D by appoynting this Lawe, meant to giue vs to vnderſtande what great vnthankefulneſſe there is in men, when there muſt bee ſuch meanes deuiſed to quicken them vp to acknowledge and confeſſe his goodneſſe. For if there were but one droppe of reaſon and vnderſtanding in vs, needed we any exhortation to magnifie and extoll our G O D, for enioying ſo great benefites as hee hath beſtowed vpon vs? Hee ſheweth himſelfe ſo liberall towardes vs that his bleſſinges doe euen (as yee woulde ſaye) ſtoppe our eyes. And is there not great reaſon then that this bountifulneſſe of his ſhoulde waken vs, to declare that wee haue not beene forgetfull of thoſe benefites, which hee hath beſtowed vppon vs? Yes verily. But what? Wee muſt bee ſpurred forewarde in this behalfe like Aſſes : whereby wee ſee what vnthankefulneſſe and vnfaythfulneſſe is in vs : for that is the cauſe why G O D ordayned this ceremonie among the Iewes, that they ſhoulde offer euerye yeere the firſtlinges of their fruites. Before they ſhoulde preſume to eate breade of newe Corne, or taſte anye other thing, they were enioyned to offer their firſt fruites vnto the Prieſt. And through this oblation all the fruites of the earth were as it were hallowed, I meane in ſuch wiſe, that then they myght lawfully vſe them.

In deede whatſoeuer the earth bringeth foorth, is of his owne nature pure and cleane; neuertheleſſe wee our ſelues are ſo defyled, that wee corrupt whatſoeuer wee touche, vntyll G O D ſende his bleſſing vppon his creatures; that by that meanes they maye bee ſanctifyed agayne to our vſe. And that is the cauſe why Saynt Paule ſayeth, that thorough fayth and prayer, the meates which wee receyue are hallowed : not that there is any vncleaneneſſe eyther in the breade, or in any other meates themſelues, but bycauſe wee are not woorthie to bee partakers of them, vntill G O D gyue vs leaue to vſe them as to his Children. And this wee obtayne through fayth, and by calling vppon the name of G O D, bycauſe it pleaſeth him to ſhewe himſelfe our foſter-father. Yee ſee then howe the firſt fruites ſerued to make all the fruites of the yeere pure and cleane, that men myght lawefullye vſe them, and bee made partakers of them, receyuing them as it were from the hande of G O D. And whoſoeuer they bee which without makyng this confeſſion, and without yeelding this homage vnto G O D, doe glutte themſelues with meates, although they may ſaye it is of their owne goods and lyuing, yet notwithſtanding they playe the theeues with G O D: and they are not woorthie to keepe any longer thoſe thinges which hee beſtoweth on them: as hee which deceyueth his Lorde of his lande, and wyl yet receyue profite by it, is woorthie to bee thruſt out of all the lyuing which hee holdeth of him. So then wee ſee for what purpoſe this Lawe was ordayned.

1.Tim.4.5.

But before wee proceede any further, it ſhall bee good firſt to conſider of that which is contayned in this texte, and then wee will gather vp altogether, and applye it vnto our inſtruction. It is ſayde, Thou ſhalt take euerye yeere of the newe fruites which thou receyueſt out of thy grounde, and bring them in a basket vnto the place which the Lorde thy G O D ſhall appoynt to place his name there. In that it is ſpoken of euerie yeere, thereby we doe the better vnderſtande the thing which wee haue alreadye touched, to wit, that it is not ynoughe for menne to bee taught their duetie once for all; but G O D muſt pull them often by the eares, and put them often in minde of that which hee hath once tolde them. For that which wee ſhoulde beare awaye, wee forgette by and by : but if wee haue once learned any tryflyng toye, or I knowe not what thing elſe, which ſerueth for no other ende but to marre vs; that ſhall bee throughlye imprinted and ingrauen in our memorie. But when we haue knowen the wil of God and haue heard his promiſes, and he haue commaunded vs any thing ẏ ſlippeth ſoone out of our remembraunce; except euery man for his part doe diligently minde the thing which he hath learned. Ye ſee then what the cauſe is why God thinkes it not ynough for men to make this acknowledgment once in their life tyme, or at the yeere of Leuit.25.10 Iubile onely, bicauſe that then ẏ poſſeſſions were renued, and there was good opportunitie to vſe this acknowledging in ſuch a chaunge. GOD could haue contented himſelfe with it, were it not that men (as I tolde you) haue ſo ſhort memorie, when the caſe concerneth their duetie towardes God.

And this may profit vs, not onely to teach vs to condemne that vice, which is ouer great and too too wicked in vs: but alſo to leade vs to the quickning vp of our ſelues. For in as much as we perceiue what ſlothfulnes is in vs, and that there is nothing more eaſie than to go ſo aſtray, as we ſhall neuer thinke on God; euery of vs ought to be ſo much the more watchfull to ſay: What ſhal become of mee, if I withdraw not my ſelfe out of this way and call to minde the will of God which hee hath already declared vnto mee? Surely I ſhall by and by become a very beaſt. Wee muſt therefore take occaſion to quicken vp our ſelues ſeeing God for his part ſtirreth vs vp & waketh vs in ſuch ſorte, which thing hee doeth becauſe hee cannot otherwiſe compaſſe vs. Let this be noted for one poynt.

Nowe to the intent that the people ſhoulde heere haue nothing to pleade, nor ſeeke any ſtartingholes to ſhift themſelues from dooing their duetie: it is expreſſely ſayde, When thou commeſt into the lande which the Lorde thy GOD giueth thee to inherite, and poſſeſſe it, and doeſt dwell therein. For it is all one as if GOD did heere auouche his tytle; as when a fyne is ſet, and any chiefage required, it is to bee layde foorth and declared, that hee which is to receiue the fine is the chiefe Lord, and owner thereof, & that his graunting of it at the firſt was with ſuch condition. Such is the caſe heere. For God ſheweth that the Iewes enioyed that lande, eyther by right of conqueſt as gotten by their owne force & power, or by inheritaunce, or by purchaſe, or by gift of man: to bee ſhort he declareth that they can make no title vnto it by any inferiour meane, but that they muſt looke vp vnto GOD aboue, and ſay: Our Lorde hath vouchſafed to plant vs in this land which was none of ours: wee cannot ſay that it belonged vnto vs, our fathers had no right vnto it: whence then doe wee receyue this benefite but of the free gift of our GOD? It behooueth vs therefore at leaſtwyſe to acknowledge this benefite, and to confeſſe howe greatly wee are bounde and indebted vnto God.

Men ought in deede of their owne mere motion to conſider the goodneſſe of GOD when it is vttered vnto them by effect: but yet wee haue neede to bee put in minde of it, and GOD muſt bee fayne to goe to lawe for his owne right and to defende it. And the reaſon is, bycauſe wee are too too wicked, and ſeeke by all meanes as much as wee can poſſibly, to darken the grace and fauour of GOD, except hee himſelfe bee a witneſſe thereof, and ſhew that hee wil not haue it miſbeſtowed. Therefore albeit this bee ſpoken vnto the Iewes, yet notwithſtanding let vs note, that GOD meant to vpbrayde all mankinde with the wickedneſſe which wee feele to bee in vs, that is, that hee himſelfe is fayne to ſpeake and ſhewe howe much wee are beholding vnto him. For except hee did ſo, there is not one of vs which would not priuiledge himſelfe from the obedience and ſubiection which he oweth vnto him.

Nowe it is expreſſely ſayde, That they ſhall come vnto the place which GOD will chooſe to put his name there. This was expreſſely commaunded to the intent that the Iewes ſhoulde bee reyned the ſhorter, as in deede men muſt bee ſo vſed, or elſe there is no dealing with them. Wee ſee howe euery man draweth backe with myght and maine, as if hee woulde exempt himſelfe from the ſeruice which he oweth vnto GOD. True it is in deede, that when wee doe any thing beyng forced and conſtrayned thereunto, GOD will none of it but reiecteth and refuſeth ſuch ſeruice: neuertheleſſe hee ceaſſeth not to giue vs the ſpurre, when hee ſeeth vs on our ſide to bee laſie, and that is to bring vs vnto willing obedience to make vs to goe to it with a free courage. But wee muſt needes bee driuen forewarde at the firſt, or elſe wee will neuer bee brought to yeelde our ſelues vnto him. But wee muſt alſo note that which hath beene declared afore, to wit, that GOD by ordayning a certayne place wherein hee woulde bee worſhipped and haue ſacryfyce doone vnto him, had an eye vnto the weakeneſſe and raweneſſe of men. True it is that GOD paſſeth not for theſe outwarde thinges, neither doeth any holyneſſe conſiſt therein: but ceremonies are ordayned for our ſakes. If wee were Angels, wee ſhall neede no ſuch helpes, but bycauſe wee bee intangled with our fleſh and bee ſo lumpiſh and earthly as wee are, God is fayne to ſtoope vnto vs, that hee may lift vs vp vnto himſelfe. God therefore vnder the Lawe choſe a certaine place wherein he woulde bee worſhipped. And why? Bycauſe the people comming thither, and hauing the Sanctuarie there, had a witneſſe of the peſence of GOD, which was in the arke. Againe the Aultar for ſacrifices was there, and all the reſt, as it was ſeene in ẏ heauenly patron whereof mention is made Exod.25.40 in Exodus. In ẏ place therefore there was as it were a lookingglaſſe whereby a man might direct his eye higher. For like as when a man hath a weake & dimme ſight, he muſt vſe ſpectacles to helpe his ſight: euen ſo bicauſe men are ouergroſſe, and cannot ſee farre, it was requiſite that GOD ſhoulde giue the Iewes a kynde of ſpectacles, whereby they might bee the better inabled to ſeeke him, yea euen in ſuch manner as behoued them. And that is the cauſe why no mention is made heere but onely of the name of God. For there was daunger leaſt the people would ſtande too much on the corruptible elements. For this cauſe God ſaith not, I will dwell in this temple, as the Iewes ſometimes imagined that hee did: and therefore it was requiſite that they ſhoulde bee vpbraided with that imagination by the Prophet, ſaying: Eſa.66.1. Act.7.48. What houſe will ye builde mee? And in another place it is ſaide, that the euerliuing God dwelleth not in any temple made with mans hand. But he ſaith, I will put my name there: that is to ſay, I wil giue you a certaine ſigne and marke, that I am neere vnto you, if you worſhip me after a ſpirituall manner, and intangle not your ſelues in your ſuperſtitions, ne transforme mee at your owne pleaſure, as men will needes be alwayes forging of ydoles: but knowe you that I come neare vnto you, to the intent that you might come the more familiarly vnto mee: and for the leading of you thereunto, you ſhall haue my worde preached and ſacrifices offered among you. And hee ſaieth further, before the Lorde thy God, or In the preſence of the Lorde thy God. For why? The ceremonies muſt profite vs, or otherwiſe they ſhall bee no better vnto vs than childrens toyes. If in baptiſme wee had nothing but the water, ne knewe what the vſe and vertue thereof is; it were but a contemptible thing. But foraſmuch as we knowe that the water is a certaine warrant that wee are waſhed with the bloude of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and that it liuely repreſenteth vnto vs the ſpirite of God, by the which wee are regenerated and borne a newe: wee ſee that baptiſme is a certaine warrant vnto vs, that wee are clothed with the righteouſneſſe of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and that by this meanes wee are reconciled vnto GOD as beeing cleanſed and waſhed with his bloude, ſo as wee bee made newe creatures by his holy ſpirite. All this wee ſee there. In the ſupper of the Lorde, when wee 1.Cor.11.24 heare Ieſus Chriſt ſay vnto vs, This is my bodie which is deliuered for you, wee knowe that it is not for nought that a morſell of breade is giuen vnto vs: wee knowe it is not for the nouriſhment of our bodies, but to leade vs to the foode of our ſoules. Yee ſee (I ſay) in what ſort wee may feele the preſence of God, not (as I haue alreadie ſaide) that hee is encloſed in theſe corruptible elementes, and that wee muſt ſeeke him there: but that theſe viſible ſignes muſt leade vs vp on high. Wee coulde not mount ſo hye of our ſelues, were it not that God reacheth vs forth his hande. Hee reacheth vs his hande by thoſe meanes which hee hath ordained, as himſelfe knoweth moſt fitte and conuenient for our weakeneſſe and rawneſſe. Let vs therefore beare in minde that whereas God in this place commaundeth the Iewes to offer their firſt fruites in the Sanctuarie, hee did it to this ende, that men ſhoulde exerciſe themſelues in ſuch ceremonies as are conuenient for them, and that they ſhoulde knowe that they ſerue to drawe them vnto God, and that they ſtande in neede of them, euen becauſe their nature is earthly. Moreouer, by this ſaying that God will put his name there, men are warned to worſhippe God ſpiritually, and that the hauing of ceremonies ſerueth not to tye relygion and holineſſe to them: but to make them goe further, and to mount vp higher, namely to doe them to vnderſtande that therefore GOD ought to bee worſhipped in ſpirite and in trueth, as it is ſaide in the fowerth of Iohn.4.23. Iohn.

Alſo there is this ſaying; That God will chooſe the place: And that ſerueth to bereaue the people of all libertie of inuenting any thing at their owne luſt and pleaſure. For wee knowe howe venterouſly men preſume on ſuch libertie, in ſomuch that when God is to bee ſerued, euery man forgeth ſome priuate deuotion to himſelfe, ſaying it is better for mee to doe thus; and then muſt I doe that: And why? For to my ſeeming it is good; I weene ſo. Euerie man groundeth himſelfe vppon his owne fancie. And by this meanes the worſhipping of God is vtterly corrupted. And euen that alſo hath beene the verie cauſe of the bringing in of ſuch confuſion throughout all Chriſtendome, as we may yet perceiue to bee among the Papiſtes. What is it which they terme the ſeruice of God? Euen that which hath beene forged by men. For they cannot ſhewe one ſyllable in the holy Scripture to warrant that which they doe. And therefore God liketh not of it, but reiecteth and refuſeth it by good right. For hee will haue men to holde themſelues altogether vnto his will without ſwaruing aſide one way or other. Yea, hee will haue them to waite for the worde from his mouth, and hee telleth vs that hee vtterly miſlyketh all that euer men doe bring of their owne, and that it is not only vaine Eſa.1.12. but ſtinking and abhominable in his ſight. Neuertheleſſe it is an ordinarie matter in Poperie, to forge ſuch pelting trifles and gewgawes without number. Yea, and it is a common prouerbe among them, That whatſoeuer is doone of a good intent, is well done: yea but God ſaieth the cleane contrarie. So then let vs note that as the people is in this place warned that they haue no libertie graunted vnto them to chooſe what place euerie man liſted, as who ſhoulde ſaye, wee will ſerue God in this place, and hee will accept well of it: but that they muſt come vnto the place which hee himſelfe had appointed, and not attempt any thing vpon their owne heades, but onely followe the ſaide rule of reſorting to the place which God had marked foorth. Whereby we ſee that when the caſe concerneth the ſeruing of him, we may not attempt any thing of our ſelues, but holde vs vnto that which hee hath ordained. Nowe in deede it is true that at this day there is no ſuch peculiar place appointed wherin God wilbe worſhipped, or wherein he will haue ſacrifices made as was the temple of Ieruſalem: yet notwithſtāding, vnder one particular we haue here a generall inſtruction, that it is not lawfull for vs to doe what we thinke good to worſhip God withall, but that we muſt haue an eye vnto that which he requireth and lyketh of, and neuer paſſe beyond thoſe boundes.

Let vs come now vnto this ſaying, That the man ſhall offer himſelfe vnto the Prieſt and ſay: Beholde, I proteſt here that my father was a Syrian, a very beggar, and came into this land lyke a poore hungerſtaruen ſoule, and was afterward driuen into Egypt, from whence at length God brought him backe againe, and gaue vnto vs this Land, wherein wee dwell now through his fauour. Now by this manner of proteſtation, the Iewes were done to vnderſtand that they ought to come vnto GOD without compulſion, as if it were ſayd, I looke not to be thruſt foreward, I looke not to bee called vp by proceſſe, as one that minded not to doe his duetie but by force: but I proteſt, that is to ſay, I offer my ſelfe here of mine owne good will, I come aforehand. In deede God had appointed this law, &(as I haue already tolde you) it was to reproue the people of their vnthankfulneſſe: but yet for all that, his intent was that the people ſhoulde come their owne good will: and that is the thing which I haue already touched. It might ſeeme at the firſt bluſh, that GOD conſtraineth vs; but yet hee meaneth not to ſtand vpon this poynt: it is but to inure vs to an vnfayned and freehearted obedience. At the firſt wee be lyke the young Heiffers which cannot ſkill to beare the yoke. For when a man ſetteth a young Heiffer firſt to the plowe, he turneth away his head, he ſtrugleth, ſtriueth, and chafeth, and in ſtead of going forewards, he draweth backward, vntil he be tamed. In lyke caſe is it with a horſe: there is much a doe with him at the firſt before hee can be broken. God vſeth vs in the ſame manner; howbeit but to make vs tractable, that whē we be once brought to ſubiection, then we may come with a free & franke wil to yeeld ourſelues obediēt vnto him. Let vs not therfore abide ſtil in this ſlauiſh feare: but let vs know ỹ God is our father, and that we ought to take pleaſure in framing our ſelues according to his will. Let euery man therefore enforce and ſet foreward himſelf herein, that we may truely ſay, Behold I proteſt that I am bound vnto my God.

Now it is ſayd afterwardes: My father was a Syrian. No doubt but this is meant of Iacob: not that he was borne in Syria; for he was borne in the land of Chanaan; and his father was a ſtraunger there, and had not one foot of ground to dwell on, he had onely a burying place which he bought for his monie: and they were faine to remoue often out of one place into an other, as men draue them out. They were lyke byrdes Gen. 37.41. vpon a bough. Beſides this, Iacob was baniſhed out of his fathers houſe, and forced to get him away, becauſe his brother Eſau threatned to kill him. By reaſon whereof he abode a long time in the land of Syria: he dwelled there fourteene yeere to get him thoſe wiues which hee had, namely, Lea and Rachel, and after that he ſerued his father in Law Laban for ſheepe, becauſe he would not depart home altogether naked. Ye ſee then how Iacob was firſt a poore wanderer; and had ſoone forgotten the land of Chanaan when he was gone out of it. In deede God alwayes kept him in ſure truſt of ỹ promiſe which was made vnto him, concerning that land: and that was the cauſe why hee made that vowe of Gen. 28.20. his, when he went out of the land which was giuen vnto him: yet neuertheleſſe he was olde before he went out of Syria. Behold, being a man broken with age, and ſtriken farre in yeares, he entreth againe into the land of Chanaan, & that as a Syrian: for he is altogether new, he commeth thither as one that had neuer bin there before: and although he had then ſome wealth, yet were al his miſeries there brought new again to his minde: My father, a Syrian, was in the very way of deſtructiō. For how was he afflicted when hee was conſtrained to leaue his fathers houſe? He hath the knife held as it were to his throate, for behold, Eſau his brother ſeeketh to Gen. 30, 31. put him to death: Eſau is poſſeſſed as it were wͭ a diueliſh ſpirite to perſecute his brother Iacob. And when Iacob meant to returne into the land of Chanaan; behold, that cruel beaſt, namely Laban deuoureth him, not onely fleecing the wool from his back, but alſo oppreſſing him after a tyrannous manner. In the end he muſt yet appeaſe his brother Eſau: in which miſerie of his he is as it were halfe dead, and maketh no other account, but to be vtterly caſt away; he thinketh neuer to ſaue his familie: Gen. 32. Neuertheleſſe he diuideth it into foure bandes, that if the one might not be ſaued, the other might eſcape. Beholde to what ſhift hee is put, and how hee deuiſeth with himſelfe; well, if there bee no remedie but that thou muſt dye, well, yet ſome one of thy children maye eſcape: and although I cannot ſaue all; yet God will keepe ſome one aliue to performe his promiſe in him. Such was the comming home of Iacob. So then it is not ſayd without cauſe in this place that hee was at the poynt to be deſtroyed: yet did God ſuccor him as it is ſayd here. Neuerthelater, Iacob is yet farther conſtrained to fly into Egypt by reaſon of famine, wherewith he is ſo pinched, ỹ he goeth to ſeeke foode in a ſtrange countrie, and for a time forſaketh the inheritance which was promiſed him. Afterward hee remaineth there in cruel bondage, and his ofſpring is after a ſorte drowned in Egypt. They were not onely put to great taxes and tallages, but alſo oppreſſed as bondſlaues: yea and in the end commaundement was giuen that all their male children ſhould be deſtroyed, ſo as that people might neuer be ſpoken of any more. Thus ye ſee in what horrible bondage they were, and a man would thinke that the children of Abraham dwelt in Egypt as in a graue, ſo as all was now paſt hope of recouery. But it is ſayd, wee cryed vnto the God of our Fathers and he heard vs, and hath giuen vs this land in poſſeſſion. And therefore I proteſt this day that I held it of him. Here we ſee firſt of all, how men are led to acknowledge the ſtate and condition wherein they were, when God firſt tooke pitie on them. For aſſoone as we are once at our eaſe, we beare our ſelues in hand that it is a fit occaſion for vs to runne aſtray: and thereupon followeth pride, & this pride is accõpanied with yͤ contempt of God. There is therfore no other way to humble vs,& to make vs to feele the goodnes of God,than to know yͤ before he reached vs his hand and helped vs, we were the moſt wretched & miſerable of all creatures. And this is a very neceſſary poynt to be noted. For ye ſhall ſee men ſo blinde, or at leaſtwiſe ſo bleare eyed, that they will thinke we are of I wote not what abilitie, vntill our Lord bring vs vnto this poynt of knowing and acknowledging our ſelues to be the children of Adam, and conſequently accurſed, and that from our mothers wombe. Wee bring nothing with vs but ſinne and deſtruction. If this were not declared vnto vs in the holy ſcripture; how wonderfully would men ſtand in their owne conceites? For euen yet for all this they cannot ſtay themſelues from boaſting,(ſuch beaſtes are they) neither vnderſtand they how it is a certeine kinde of drunkenneſſe that turneth them ſo away to vaunt thẽſelues after that faſhion,and to beare themſelues ſo in haud, that they haue this and that[which they haue not.] Thus yee ſee how men preſume maruailouſly of themſelues vntill their prating bee daunted: but when God once thundreth vpon all mankinde, and ſheweth that we are all heires of death, that we are the bondſlaues of Satan, that there is nothing in vs but curſedneſſe, that all our wiſedome is ſtarke fooliſhneſſe,yͤ we cannot bring any thing vnto him which he ſhall not miſlyke and condemne. Whẽ we ſee that the holy ſcripture painteth vs forth after that maner,ſo as there remaineth nothing to vs but vtter ſhame:then wee beginne to hang downe yͤ heads. But vnleſſe God vſed this maner of dealing with vs, it were vnpoſſible to win vs, but we would alwayes lift vp our hornes. Let vs therefore beare this leſſon well in minde, as it is taught vs here, which is, to bethinke vs of our firſt originall, whence we are come, whence wee are ſprong, what we were when God firſt tooke pitie of vs, and what we ſhoulde yet haue bin if hee had not preuented vs with his goodneſſe. After that we haue once knowen this in generall, let euery man particularlie alſo haue an eye vnto himſelf. He which thinketh that he hath ſomwhat to glorie in as touching the world (as there are many which will ſay, I am borne of ſuch a kinred,there is ſuch a thing in me, and another will glory in his wiſedome, and another in his vertue,and another in his riches,an other in his byrth)let him I ſay looke vpon himſelf and ſay, yea:but for all this, how many ſhamefull markes hath God imprinted in me, as well as in all others? And firſt of all, that how highly ſoeuer a man be exalted, yet aſſoone as God withdraweth his ſtrength,behold he is no better thã a wretched carrion: and again, what is the ſoule but a bottomleſſe gulfe of al wretchednes? And if any man haue a good vnderſtãding: it is without doubt the eſpecial gift of God. And moreouer they which are the moſt excellent of al others and beſt accounted of in the world, haue yet many ſpots and ſtaines in them, ſo as they haue wherefore daily to lament. For although a man haue ſomething in him which is worthie to be accounted of, yet ſhall hee finde ſo many wantes and defaultes in himſelfe,as ſhall make him to caſt downe his head. So thẽ let vs learne, not onely to haue an eye to that wretchedneſſe which is in vs,inaſmuch as we are the ſonnes of Adam; but alſo let euery man throughlie examine the faults,vices and infirmities which are in him, and therby learne to ſtoope, and enforce ourſelues to yeeld vnto God the glorie which belongeth vnto him, reſeruing nothing at all vnto our ſelues as in deed we haue nothing good of our owne. To be ſhort,let euerie man exerciſe himſelf in the vewing of his owne miſeries and let vs not doe as ſome fooles doe, who take a glaſſe to behold their own beautie in: but let vs take it rather to ſee what blemiſhes wee haue. And that is the very thing whereat God alſo amed,when he meant to haue the Iewes euẽ of purpoſe put in minde, that their father was a poore begger, & that he was as a creature halfe dead. For he was ſo deſpiſed a perſon in the eye of the world, that they had no cauſe to bee prowde of him, or to preſume to attribute any thing vnto themſelues in that behalfe.

Againe not only he ſpeaketh of their father Iacob: but they alſo ſay: Our kindred went downe into Egypt, and there were we trampled vnder feete aboue meaſure: which thing ſerued well to beate downe the pride of the Iewes,to the intent they ſhould no more attribute any worthineſſe to themſelues, ſeeing they were ſo euill intreated in Egypt: Alſo it ſerued well to make them forget whatſoeuer moued them to pride, when they were there as bondſlaues,and were ſo heauy burdened,as it would pitie a man to beholde: yea, and yͤ in the end they were condemned to haue their remembraunce raſed from out of the earth. When they were ſo far oppreſſed,it was an occaſion to make thẽ to forget all their hautines and ambition, and to confeſſe that they helde their lyfe of God. Now in the end it is ſayd, We called vpon the GOD of our fathers, and hee hearde vs, and hath placed vs in this lande which wee doe nowe poſſeſſe. True it is in deed that God tarried not vntill he was called vpon,for he had already made a promiſe vnto Abraham, that at the end of foure hundred yeres, hee would take pitie of his ſeede when it had bin ſo oppreſſed: ſo that God would haue the Iewes to know that they had no other deliuerance,than that which had beene promiſed ſo long before. For had not that bin: they might haue borne themſelues in hand that their deliuerance from that bondage had happened by mere chaunce. But when they were oppreſſed to the vttermoſt, thẽ it made them to bethinke thẽſelues thus: What? Our fathers haue promiſed vs that God in the end will drawe vs out of this vnknowen countrie, and ſtraunge bondage wherein wee are. This was then a preparatiue to make the Iewes to feele that fauour and grace which was promiſed vnto them: For nowe the fit time was come to bring it to paſſe.

Now whereas here is ſpeaking of the GOD of the the fathers; it is to bee referred to the promiſes, leaſt men might thinke themſelues excuſed whẽ they call vpon ſuch a G O D as hath bin taught them, as the Papiſts nowadayes do ground thẽſelues vpõ their fathers: O (ſay they) I haue bin ſo brought vp, I haue bin ſo taught from a child, mine anceſtors haue liued after this ſort. They beare themſelues in hand that this is a ſufficient warrant, & ſuch a one as may not be gainſayd, to make good whatſoeuer they doe: but in deede it is ſtarke follie, becauſe it is not for men to forge Gods vnto themſelues at their owne pleaſure: for what elſe are they than very Idols? But when as here is ſpeaking of the God of the fathers, it is becauſe of yͤ promiſe that was made vnto Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob. So then if we will call vpon the liuing God, let vs returne vnto this point and ſay: It is true in deed that there liued many men in the world before Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob: but they neither ought nor deſerue to be accounted for fathers. For why? They withdrewe themſelues from God, of Epheſ.3.15. whome commeth all fatherhoode, and all kinred as ſayth ſaint Paul. We muſt therefore followe the Patriarkes and bee their children; and ſecondly let the Apoſtles bee our fathers, and let vs followe them; and if wee frame our ſelues after their example, let vs not doubt but that wee ſhall keepe the ſtraite way vnto God, and that hee alſo will take vs vnto himſelfe. Ye ſee then in what ſenſe it is here ſayd, that the Iewes called vppon the God of their fathers. And here wee are warned in fewe wordes, to gather together all the proofes and argumentes that can bee to aſſure vs the better, that all the good thinges which wee haue, doe come vnto vs from G O D. For why? Wee are not ſo ſharpe ſighted as it were needfull; it is ſoone dazeled (as I haue tolde you afore.) Yea, rather we bee as blinde men: wee muſt bee quickened vp to conſider Gods benefites towardes vs, or elſe wee ſhall neuer attaine thereunto. And therefore let vs take as much paynes as wee can to conſider it and ſay, Go to, God ſheweth mee here, how it is he that worketh, and he giueth me a token thereof. I muſt therefore apply it vnto mine inſtruction: & not ſay, this happened vnto mee by chaunce: I haue had good fortune: but I know that my God hath holpen me, that it is through his goodneſſe that I proſper, that it was his hand which hath ſuccoured mee in ſuch an extremitie. Foraſmuch then as wee are ſo rawe and weake of our ſelues, that wee conſider not the benefites of G O D, except wee haue many helpes to guide vs thereunto: let vs take all the proofes that wee can get, to aſſure our ſelues the more throughly of them. And to this ende is it that the Iewes ſay, We haue called vppon the God of our fathers: whereby firſt they put themſelues in minde of the promiſe, and ſecondly they ſee that God redeemed them by vertue of the ſame promiſe, whereby hee freely bound himſelfe vnto Abraham, Iſaack, and Iacob. And hereupon they might thus conclude: We are not come out of Egypt by the hand of man: that is to ſay, wee cannot attribute it either vnto our ſelues or to any creature liuing: but God muſt bee acknowledged for the onely author of our redemption and ſaluation. Now in effect wee ſee here, that whereas God deliuered vnto the Iewes ſuch a ſette forme of acknowledging his benefites, it was to conuict them, that in poſſeſſing of the land of Chanaan, they could not ſay: We haue conquered it by yͤ power of our owne arme, we haue gottẽ it by our owne labour, we haue bought it with our mony, or wee haue ſome other title vnto it in reſpect of men: No, it was nothing ſo: but we hold it of our God; we poſſeſſe it vnder his hand, the proprietie thereof is alwayes his. Yee ſee then whereunto this confeſſion whereof mention is made here did ſerue. In deede all cannot bee handled at this time. Let vs therefore learne this one ſhort leſſon, that in this example God hath put vs in minde to acknowledge how much wee bee bound and beholden vnto him for all the benefits which he hath beſtowed vppon vs. Wherefore conſidering our owne ſloweneſſe in this behalfe, let euery of vs quicken vp and pricke foreward himſelfe to confeſſe and acknowledge in deede, that wee holde all of the hand of God: and let vs ſhewe in deede, that we come to make ſuch acknowledgement, not as forced thereunto, but of our owne voluntarie and free good will; and that we be not vnthankfull for the good which hee doth vs in this worlde: but doe attribute all vnto his freebeſtowed goodneſſe, wayting for the poſſeſſion of that heauenly life whereunto he calleth vs.

Now let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to touch vs with ſuch a feeling of them, as our whole ſeeking may bee to rid our ſelues of all our corruption from day to day, vntill wee bee renewed with his righteouſneſſe: and that wee may grow and increaſe more and more therein, in ſuch ſorte as wee may come in the ende into his heauenly glory, and bee wholy faſhioned lyke to the glorious immortalitie, which hee hath already ſhewed vs in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And ſo let vs all ſay: Almighty God heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the xxiiij. of Februarie. 1556.

The CXLVI. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the ſixe & twentith Chapter.

5. 6 And thou ſhalt ſpeake and ſay.&c.

7 Then wee cried vnto the Lord God of our Fathers, and the Lord heard our voyce, and looked vpon our affliction, our labour and our oppreſſion.

8 And the Lord brought vs out of Egypt with a mightie hand, and a ſtretched out arme, with great terror, and with ſignes and wonders.

9 And he hath brought vs into this place, and giuen vs this land, euen a land that floweth with milke and honie:

10 And nowe loe I haue brought the firſt fruites of the land, which thou O Lord haſt giuen me, and thou ſhalt ſet it before the Lord thy God, and thou ſhalt bow thy ſelfe before the Lord thy God.

11 And thou ſhalt reioyce in all the good things, which the Lord thy God hath giuen vnto thee, and to thy houſhould, both thou and the Leuite, and the ſtraunger that is among you.

12 When thou haſt made an end of tithing all the tithes of thyne encreaſe in the third yere which is the yere of tything, and haſt giuen it to the Leuite, to the ſtraunger, to the fatherleſſe, and to the widowe, that they may eate in thy gates and be ſufficed.

WE haue declared afore, whereunto the confeſſion which the Iewes made in offring of their firſt fruites, did tend: namely that on yͤ one ſide they ſhould therby acknowledge the wretchedneſſe and miſerie from which God had deliuered and ſet them free: and againe on the other ſide, that they ſhould ſo much the more prayſe and magnifie the grace and fauour which God had beſtowed on thē, for we ſee how men forget themſelues in proſperitie: pride blindeth them, or at leaſtwiſe maketh them drunken, ſo as they thinke no longer eyther on themſelues, what they were, or on God. And therfore it is more than needefull for vs to haue an eye vnto our owne eſtate, to thinke how miſerable it were if God had not taken pitie of vs. For wee haue skill enough to proteſt and ſay, that God hath ſhewed vs fauor: neuertheleſſe, our doing thereof is but frō the teeth outward vntil it be proued to our faces, that if GOD had not vſed mercie towardes vs, we ſhould haue bin in a curſed caſe, we ſhould haue bin vndone, there had bin no way to ſaue vs. If we be not touched with a liuely feeling of theſe thinges, all the proteſtations which we make of the benefites of God, will be nothing but fainedneſſe and hypocriſie. For we ſee commonly that men will readily ſay: It is God that hath done this for me, it is his worke; but yet for all that this goeth no farther than our mouth. Now as touching the wordes themſelues, I will note you ſomething by the way. Where as we reade, My father a man of Syria was loſt or vndone, others reade, The Syrian woulde haue deſtroyed my father, referring it vnto Laban. But (as I tolde you before) Iacob is called a Syrian, becauſe he was baniſhed a long time out of the land of Chanaan, and was ſo ſetled there, as if it ſhould haue bin his graue, I meane in the countrie of Syria. But yet the word ſignifyeth rather to be deſtroyed, and vndone, than to intend or to minde to deſtroy an other. It is moſt agreeing then with the ſenſe of the wordes, that the Iewes ſhoulde in this place proteſt that their father Iacob was driuen out of his owne houſe, and accounted as a Syrian, and that when he came vnto the Lande which God had giuen him, it was as if hee had newlie come thither, and as if he had neuer entred into it before. This betokeneth therefore a more full expreſſing of that which I tolde you of before; to wit, that men haue neede to be warned, that whatſoeuer they haue, they receiue it from the freebeſtowed goodneſſe of God, and that he ſaued them, yea euen when they were in a moſt miſerable caſe.

Now as touching the ſecond point, we ſee, how Moſes hath here declared their comming out of Egypt, in ſuch maner, as the Iewes muſt needes bee awakened to conſider how mightilie God had wrought for them. For hee ſayth not ſimply that God deliuered them out of the land of Egypt, but hauing made a long rehearſall how the Egyptians had ſet their feete on the throate of this poore people, how they had afflicted and moleſted them, how they had exerciſed grieuous and cruel tyrannie vppon them, it is ſayd: Wee called on the GOD of our fathers, and hee hearde our voyce, hee ſawe our affliction and miſerie and hee deliuered vs out of it. And how? By ſtrong hand and ſtretched out arme. Neither yet is this all, with terriblenes, with ſignes, with wonders. Loe in what ſort our God ſuccoured vs. We ſee then how Moſes is not content to ſay in one ſimple worde, that GOD was the Redeemer of that people; but hee hath largely ſhewed, that the Iewes cannot attribute their deliueraunce, neither to fortune, nor to their owne policie, nor to any other meanes in the whole worlde: but they were forced to knowe the wonderfull power of God, who ſo ſtretched forth his arme, as if hee had come after a viſible maner to redeeme his people. Now then if wee will yeelde vnto GOD the honour which hee deſerueth, let vs learne to conſider of his power, not as it were at a glance or ſleightly: but as diligent markers of the things which he ſheweth vs, to the intent wee may bee the more throughly certified, that when it pleaſed him to ſhewe mercie on vs, hee meant not to leaue vs in doubt whether it were hee which wrought our deliueraunce or no: but that hee hath ſo playnely certifyed vs thereof, that the thing cannot bee but knowen and apparant vnto vs. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to beare in minde concerning this place.

And let vs note by the way, that albeit God heard the cryes of his people, yet he ſhewed it not by his dooinges at the firſt. Wee ſee how the people came to extreme miſeries, ere they were ſuccoured. And that is the cauſe why it is expreſly ſayd in Exodus, I haue ſeene, I haue ſeene the affliction of my people. Exod.3.7. God ſayth not ſimply that he hath ſeene their affliction, but hee repeateth it agayne, as if hee ſhould ſay, Becauſe I made no countenaunce of helping you aſſoone as you cryed, you thought that I was deafe at your requeſtes, or that I thought no longer vpon your miſeries: but I tell you, that they were alwayes before mine eyes, and yet I haue delayed, and deferred to helpe you vntill now: howbeit, that was not becauſe I had no care of you whom I had adopted for my children. So then let vs note well, that when we are of opinion that wee profit nothing by praying vnto God, wee muſt continue and not bee greeued as if our prayers were vaine and vnprofitable. For God conſidereth of vs although we perceiue it not, and in the ende he helpeth vs. But we are warned here to be patient, & not to be greeued at the matter, though God ſatisfie not our deſires at the firſt. Loe what we haue to gather cōcerning theſe words, where the Iewes expreſly confeſſe, That GOD hearde their voyce, although hee graunted not their requeſtes at the firſt.

Nowe remaineth that wee ſpeake of the ſignes and wonders. But becauſe this hath bin handled alreadie, it were needeleſſe to ſtand longer vpon it: it ſufficeth to be put in minde ỹ the deliuerance which GOD brought at that time was ſuch, as a man might perfectly perceiue that it was his hand which wrought it, and that it came not through any creature. GOD coulde well ynough haue ſubdewed Pharaoh and his ſubiects without ſhewing any miracle. But he would haue him ſtubborne. And why? It is ſaid, I haue raiſed him vp for this end, that my name might bee the better known in the world. Pharao therefore reſiſted GOD to the vttermoſt of his power; but this was to the greater ſetting forth of the redemption, which he wrought. So then it is not without cauſe that mention is here made of terriblenes, of ſignes and of wonders, and how GOD aſtoniſhed men, to the intent that feeling his power, they might ſubmit themſelues wholly vnto him.

But the concluſion ought to ſuffice vs where it is ſayd, I come therefore to offer the firſt fruites of the increaſe of my lande to the LORDE my GOD. The Iewes in this place declare, that when they yeelded thankes vnto GOD, it was not by way of any outwarde ceremonie, but for that they felte it in their heart that they were bound vnto him, and that they owed all vnto him. Exod.7.3. Doe we then deſire to haue God to accept of the praiſes which wee yeelde vnto him? We muſt firſt confeſſe the benefits which wee haue receiued of him, and acknowledge them with our mouth, wee muſt doe it from our heart, not for faſhion ſake as the hypocrites doe which ſpeake readily of his prayſes, but not with the heart nor with any affection. On the contrary ſide wee ſee how God eſpecially requireth that we ſhould be throughly perſwaded that it is hee which hath begunne to doe vs good, and that hee alſo will continue and goe on in ſo dooing vnto the ende. And that euery of vs ſhoulde acknowledge the ſame, not onely ſecretly, but alſo openly before men, ſo as wee may edify our neighbours thereby, and that God may bee glorifyed of all men with one common accord. I graunt wee haue not nowadayes the ceremonie any longer as it was vnder the Lawe: but yet wee muſt come vnto that poynt which I tolde you of before; to wit, that the ſubſtaunce and trueth of the ceremonie remaineth vnto vs at this day: ſo as if wee beſtowe any almes, or apply the benefites of GOD to ſuch vſes as hee commaundeth, wee offer vnto him of our firſt fruites. And ſo let vs note well that they which giue any thing of their goods which they poſſeſſe, muſt not bee pinching and nigardly as if they gaue any thing of their owne. For wee muſt alwayes beare in minde to ſay, I offer vnto my GOD. And whereof? Euen of that which I haue receiued at his hand. In deede I am the owner of it; but yet GOD hath hath reſerued ſome chiefeage for himſelfe,ſo as I may not ryotouſlie waſt that which he hath giuen me, but I muſt learne to vſe it ſoberly, and to releeue my neighbours which are in neceſſitie. When we haue this conſideration with vs: then ſhall we offer ſacrifices of ſweete ſent, and ſuch as ſhalbe acceptable vnto God (as ſaint Rom.12.1. Paul termeth them):for without this conſideration we may wel rid our ſelues of al our goods, and yet doe nothing ẏ ſhalbe aught worth. For why?We want the principall thing, which is to feele how much we are bound vnto GOD, and that our offering vnto him ſome part of that which he hath giuen vs, be to ſhew that it is he of whom we hold all that we haue. Now hereby we ſee,ẏ they which haue no pitie on the poore, but hold faſt and locke vp things without any kindneſſe;are not only cruell towards men, but alſo vnthankfull towards God. For why? Were we throughly perſwaded vpon knowledge ẏ God ſheweth himſelf a liberal father towards vs,certainly we would not ſtick to ſpend ẏ goods which he hath cōmitted vnto vs, according to his wil, but euery of vs would diſcharge his dutie in that behalfe: and whereas we do the contrarie,it is a ſigne that wee would deceiue God and not mortal creatures.

And it is by and by added: Thou ſhalt leaue thine offring before the Lorde thy God, and afterward thou ſhalt worſhippe before the Lord thy God. Theſe two things do ſhew that we muſt not be the colder in doing our dutie, though there be no man to beare witnes thereof. And ẏ is a poynt which we ought to marke wel. For we are alwayes led with vaineglorie;and we cannot practiſe this doctrine of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt where he ſaith, Matt.6.3. When thou giueſt thine almes, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doth. We would alwayes haue ſome or other to ſee vs and to praiſe vs. And although we cauſe not a trumpet to be ſounded: yet are we deſirous that men ſhoulde knowe what we doe. And what is the cauſe thereof,but that we haue not our eye ſo faſtened on God as were requiſite? Therfore this fooliſh vainglorie muſt needs beare rule in vs,by meanes whereof we ſeeke nothing but to pleaſe the world. And therefore wee may not looke that God ſhould acknowledge that which we do for his ſeruice: for wee are turned aſide from him. Let vs therefore learne to practiſe the doctrine which is ſet downe here,which is to leaue our offrings in the preſence of our God:and to hold our ſelues contented that God auoweth himſelfe to receiue that which we giue ẏ poore, and that which we beſtowe according vnto his will, euen as though he were come downe, and receiued our gifts from our hands into his owne hand. And ſeeing it is ſo, let vs not feare ẏ any thing is loſt, though ẏ worlde perceiue not what we do, and that we ſeeme to haue done nothing at all. Let it ſuffice vs as is ſhewed vs heere by this ſaying, that our Lorde GOD is come before, and accepteth of that which we haue doone, to obey him. Let this bee noted for one poynt.

Now the other poynt is, that the Iewes were commaunded To worſhippe before the Lorde God. Whereby we may ſee, that men muſt not make themſelues beleeue, that they haue deſerued any thing when they haue accompliſhed that which God appointeth them to doe, as we are alwayes readie to ſwell with pride, to vaunt of our owne power, as if GOD were much beholding vnto vs. Let vs lay aſide all ſuch diueliſh imaginations; and when we haue endeuored and taken paynes to doe that which God commaundeth vs; let vs worſhip before him in token that wee are much more bounde vnto him: as it is ſayd in the ſeuenteenth Chapter of Saint Luke, When you haue done all things, Luke.17.10. yet you muſt confeſſe that you are vnprofitable ſeruauntes. And why? For let vs come to account: If God would require his due of vs, is there any of vs which coulde performe the hundreth parte thereof? Wee deceiue him of that which wee haue, if we giue him but a peece of it whereas hee demaundeth the whole. Nay, though wee gaue him the whole, yet were wee not diſcharged; for wee cannot doe it with ſuch minde as were requiſite: and therefore wee runne alwayes into arrearages with GOD, and hee can owe vs nothing. Wherefore let vs learne to worſhip before him, that is to ſay, to ſhrink downe our heades; and although wee haue laboured to the vtmoſt to offer him our ſacrifices, and to preſent vnto him our owne perſons, and to giue vnto him of our ſubſtaunce, and to doe all that we can poſſibly doe: when wee haue endeuoured to dedicate all vnto him; yet let vs ſay, Alas Lorde: In deede we would gladly doe our duetie, but wee can neuer doe it perfectly; wee are farre wide from it; may it pleaſe thee therefore to accept at our hands that which is vnperfect, and to beare with vs in our weakeneſſe; and although there be many ſtaynes and blottes in the ſeruice which wee yeeld vnto thee, yet let thē not hinder thee from receauing and accepting of it at our hands. Behold with what modeſtie men ought to preſent themſelues vnto God when they make their offeringes vnto him.

Now let vs note by the way, that the preſence of God is here put for the ſanctuarie, or for the aultar both of ſacrifices and of incenſe, and for the Arke of the couenant: not that God was therein encloſed, but becauſe hee meant to drawe his people vnto him by that meanes. The ſhadowes of the Lawe then ſerued to guide the Iewes vnto God, becauſe wee are not able to mount vp into heauē except God reach vs forth his hand. To that vſe doe ceremonies ſerue vs. In deede we haue not nowadayes any longer the Arke of the couenant, nor any thing of all the reſt: but we may throughly aſſure our ſelues of ẏ preſence of God, becauſe he hath openly ſhewed himſelfe vnto vs in ẏ perſon of his only ſon, and becauſe we haue now this warrant giuē vnto vs, that wheresoeuer two or three be gathered together in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, hee Matt.18.20. ſitteth in the middeſt of them. Wherefore let vs not doubt of the preſence of our GOD, when wee come to make confeſſion of our faith vnto him: and eſpecially ſeeing that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt dwelleth in vs, wee haue well wherewith to content vs, foraſmuch vs God ſheweth himſelfe there, not in figure, but in full force. Againe wee haue the two helpes which are moſt conuenient for vs, as Baptiſme, and the ſupper of the Lorde: where G O D declareth that hee commeth neare vnto vs, and that we are cloathed with our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that wee are waſhed with his bloud, that wee are renewed with his holy ſpirite, that we liue in him and of his very ſubſtaunce, that wee are graffed into his body. Seeing wee haue ſuch ſure warrantes, wee neede not doubt any longer of the preſence of G O D. Yet notwithſtanding wee muſt alwayes mount vp higher: wee muſt not abuſe thoſe helpes which God hath giuen vs, as wee ſee men doe in Poperie: the wretched people there, are become as brute as beaſtes, and are of opinion that G O D is to be ſought no farther, than in the viſible and outward thinges. But contrarywiſe wee know that wee muſt ſeeke G O D after a ſpirituall maner. And therefore let the Sacramentes guide vs higher, and rayſe vp our faith aboue the world. And then let vs not doubt but that our G O D is neare enough vnto vs, ſo as wee may be bold to put our ſelues and all that euer we bring vnto him, into his handes. This is it in effect which wee haue to beare in minde.

Now as touching that which followeth, of reioycing in the preſence of the Lorde; it ſerueth to ſhewe vs that all the reioycings of men are accurſed, except they haue an eye vnto God, to yeeld him thankes for them. This hath bin touched afore: but yet is it not without cauſe that Moſes repeateth it here againe. Wee ſee how men are wont to make themſelues merrie, that is without any thinking vppon G O D. If we haue well dyned, when wee bee once full, wee waxe frolike. But what? Wee thinke not that it is G O D that hath fedde vs. If a man be encreaſed in wealth by his ſparing; he reioyceth, but God is ſtill ſet aſide. Nay which more is, wee thinke that wee cannot bee merrie, except wee turne tayle vnto God, and get vs away from him. It is not therefore without cauſe, that it is ſo often tolde vs in the lawe, that we muſt reioyce in the preſence of our G O D: that is, that as often as wee haue any occaſion of mirth, our mindes muſt be called backe vnto God, and we muſt giue him thankes for all: and this being done, we muſt ſo vſe his benefites as they carrie vs not away, and as wee be not blinded by the things of this world, as the wretched vnbeleeuing ſorte are. Loe what wee are to beare in minde as touching this worlde. And it ſerueth to vpbraid the vnthankfulneſſe of them which glut and cramme themſelues with the benefites that God ſendeth thē, without giuing him any thankes for them, which vice wee ſee is ouer rife. In this place then, God blameth the vnthankfulnes of men, and ſayth, What do you? For you gather the fruites of the earth: and who hath giuen them vnto you, but I? And yet for all that, when euery of you hath locked vp his corne in his garner, you bring it and other fruits alſo to your tables, and in the meane time I am no body with you: you thinke you may ſhut me out of your doores. Nay, but reioyce yee in my preſence: or elſe, all that euer you doe ſhall be imputed vnto you for theft. For why? We knowe that God feedeth vs with condition, that his goodneſſe ſhould bee acknowledged among vs. Therefore when we burie the remembraunce thereof, wee ſteale from him all that we haue, and wee are not worthie to eate one morſel of bread. So much the more heedefullie therfore ought we to marke theſe wordes, where it is ſayd, Reioyce in the preſence of thy God.

Now by and by it is added, with the Leuites, with the widowes, the fatherleſſe, and the ſtraungers. Wherein wee are farther warned, that they which giue thankes vnto GOD, and haue their handes ſhut vp from releeuing the neede of their neighbours, are but counterfeites and hypocrites: as wee ſee many of this ſorte, which bee ready to ſay, O, prayſed bee God, and vſe many other benedicites, when they haue ſcraped together on this and that ſide, and haue made vp an heape of riches. Oh ſay they, God hath bleſſed mee, hee hath proſpered mee: but as for giuing of almes, and kinde dealing, they can no skil of them, they be ſtraunge newes to them. Such folke doe but mocke G O D, and anger him as often as they prayſe him with their mouth. And why? For to reioyce in the preſence of our God, and to haue the company which hee hath appointed for vs, are thinges vnſeparable. Firſt of all hee commendeth vnto vs here ſuch as were occupyed in his ſeruice, and had the charge to teach the people. Hee ſayth therefore: Thou ſhalt reioyce with the Leuites. And ſecondly vnder the name of ſtraungers, of widowes, and of fatherleſſe, hee commendeth vnto our care, all ſuch as are in neceſſitie, and haue need to be helped. Therefore when they reioice with vs and take their courſe; then will G O D bleſſe our ioye; and it ſhall bee acceptable vnto him. But without that, all that euer wee doe ſhall bee diſlyked of him, it ſhall be filthie and vncleane in his ſight. And here is expreſſe mention of the houſholde, to the intent that euery man ſhoulde bee exhorted to deale gently with thoſe that are of his houſhold. For yee ſhall ſee ſome which coulde finde in their heartes to eate and drinke till they burſt, and it greeueth them that others ſhoulde haue one morſell, ſo faine would they that all were thruſt into their owne paunches. So they themſelues fare well, they care not though their meinie faſt and ſtarue for hunger. Yee ſhall ſee ſuch greedineſſe, or rather crueltie in ſome, that they coulde finde in their heartes to ſucke the very bloud of thoſe that ſerue them, and in the meane time take no care to ſuſteyne them. For this cauſe our Lorde ſayth that wee cannot reioyce in his preſence, that is to ſay, in ſuch wiſe as hee may lyke of our myrth, except wee reioyce with all our houſhold, and that wee ſhewe our ſelues ſo kindhearted and pitifull, as wee may all with one cõmon accord ſing prayſes vnto God. Ye ſee then how our mirth and melodie may agree very well together. Alſo we are exhorted to inſtruct them which are cõmitted to our charge to bleſſe the name of God: that whether we eate, or whether we drinke, God may be prayſed both of great and ſmall. This is the meaning of the doctrine which is conteyned here.

Now it followeth That when the people haue payd their Tythes, in the third yeere, which is the yeere of tything, euery man ſhall bring his tythes vnto the Leuites, for the poore, for the widowes, for the fatherleſſe, & for the ſtrangers. For the vnderſtanding of this place, we muſt note, that beſides the ordinarie Tythes which ſerued to ſuſtayne the tribe of Leui, and the Prieſtes, which ſerued in the temple; there was the tything of Tythes as they called it: & this was made from three yere to three yere, excepting euer the ſeuenth yere whẽ their landes were not tilled: for it was expedient that the reſt or Sabboth ſhould be kept in that behalf alſo. They fallowed not their ground from yere to yere or euerie eche other yere as wee doe in this countrie: for the fruitefulneſſe of that land might well away to yeeld fruite ſixe yeres together. So then, twiſe in ſixe yeres they receiued ẏ ſecond ſort of Tythes. And theſe are they whereof Moſes maketh mention in this place, which ſerued to ſuſteine the poore of the countrie: to the intent that not onely the Leuites might receiue the offringes, but that the fruite of them might reach farther, and that none in all Iſrael might want or neede. As touching the Tythes which were payd vnto the tribe of Leui, I haue tolde you alreadie, that there was a double reaſon thereof. Firſt foraſmuch as God reſerued the Leuites for his own ſeruice; there was great reaſon why they ſhould be ſuſteyned. Deut.14.22. They which ſerue at the aultar ought to liue of ẏ aultar. 1.Cor.19.13 That is ẏ cauſe alſo why they had a certain portion in all the offeringes, ſaue in the whole burnt offeringes. But in the ordinarie ſacrifices they receiue their part of them. Beſides this, wee ought to note alſo, that becauſe they were the children of Abraham, they ought to haue a part in ẏ land which was promiſed vnto him, for they were heires aſwell as the other tribes of Iuda, Beniamin, Iſſachar, Dan, and all the reſt. Leui (I ſay) was an heire of Abraham and of Iacob aſwel as the other. And why is he bereaued of his inheritaunce, but becauſe God recompenceth him after an other maner? Ye ſee then how they which Numb.35.3. come from Leui, haue no parte of the land, they haue onely their medowes in the ſuburbes of their cities to ſuſtaine their cattaile, but yet doth he aſſigne them the Tythes of the whole countrie to finde them withall, and he will not haue them ſo bereft of their heritage: but that men ſhould haue a regarde to maintaine them. And why? Becauſe he occupyeth them in his ſeruice: they muſt teach the people, they muſt offer the ſacrifices, they muſt doe that which was appointed in the temple: For this cauſe God will haue men to haue a care to ſuſtaine them. And herewithall, when they made the ſecond tything, thereby they were done to vnderſtand, ẏ ſomewhat was to be taken as it were from their portion, to giue vnto the poore: whereby they were put in minde that they ought not to glut themſelues with the offeringes no nor yet to enrich themſelues with them. And why? For they were the goods of the poore. Yee ſee then whereunto God had an eye, when he appointed the ſecond tything which was made euery third yere. It behoued the prieſtes and Leuites to acknowledge and ſay: Well, Truely we haue enough, yea, and more than enough to ſuſteine vs. And to what end hath God giuen vs this plentie? Is it that we ſhoulde make monie of it, and hoorde it vppe in our cofers? Is it that the people ſhould be diminiſhed, and we increaſed? No: but he poynteth to vs with his finger, & telleth vs that they bee the goods of the poore, and that the poore muſt haue a portion out of it to ſuſteine them withall, and that ſuch as are in neede and neceſſitie muſt be relieued by that meanes. Thus ye ſee in effect what is contayned in this place.

Now it is not without cauſe that God putteth his people againe in minde of that which he had already cõmaunded them: the ſimple law might haue bin ſufficient for them; but our Lorde putteth them in minde, that they muſt diſcharge themſelues, aſwell of the ſecond Tythe, as of the ordinarie tenth. And the reaſon why he doth ſo is becauſe the world is alwayes ſet on ſcraping, without caring how or in what manner: men conſider not what is lawfull, ſo they may make their gaine. And wee ſee alſo the vpbraidinges which the Prophet Malachie maketh for the Mal.3.8. ſame thing. You haue defrauded me (ſayth the Lorde) and the people come ſhameleſlie & ſay: Wherein? They woulde needes pleade againſt God, and deny the matter ſtoutlie and ſtiffely: For it is a very rare thing to haue men to confeſſe their debt at the firſt. They come here blearing out the tongue, and aske, whereof doeth God complayne? And wherein haue we defrauded him? In your Tythes (ſayth the Lord.) For whereas I haue reſerued the right of tythes and offeringes to my ſelfe; you defraude me of my right. When you pay me your tythes, it is but by halfes; when you bring me your offeringes, they are very leane and thinne, ſo as a man may ſee how your whole ſeeking is to catch from me, and to withhold that which is due vnto me. Now this vnthankfulnes of men is the cauſe why God ratifyed his lawe in this place. Yet notwithſtanding we ſee the ſhameleſneſſe and wickedneſſe of the people in that which we haue rehearſed. Hereby wee are taught, that when God hath taught vs our duetie, it is not enough for vs to haue heard what we ought to doe; but we had alſo neede to be waked, we had neede to be ſtricken as it were with blowes of a Beetle, to haue ẏ imprinted in our mindes which we haue not wel borne away: we haue neede (ſay I) to haue one leſſon often ſung vnto vs, becauſe our memorie is ſo ſhort when the caſe concerneth our duetie towards god. But whatſoeuer God do, & by how many exhortations ſoeuer he ſtirreth vs vp; yet we haue forgotten al in ẏ turning of an hand: we thinke no longer vppon it, and continue ſtill

In our woonted trade. God cryeth out to vs, and putteth vs continually in mind of our dutie: but our luſtes and affections doe ſo trouble vs, that wee cannot lend him an eare to receiue that which hee ſayth. So much the more then ought wee to take heede vnto our ſelues, knowing, that if the Iewes were dull vpon the ſpurre, and diſcharged not their dutie in the thinges that were commaunded them, the ſame vice alſo reigneth in vs: and therefore for this cauſe wee had neede to bee quickened vp. And let vs not think that the exhortations which men giue vs euery day, be ſuperfluous. When wee haue heard a thing an hundred times, yet are wee as ſcholers ſtill. God therefore muſt be faine to beginne againe with vs, and ſometimes doe as he Eſa.28.10. ſayth by his Prophet Eſay, and ſay A, A: B, B: for ſo doth hee ſpeake, and telleth vs that we are lyke a childe that is hardwitted & dul to learne. For a man muſt tel him A, A: and when hee ſeemeth to haue learned it, it is by and by forgotten. Then comes he to B, B: and yet for all that he is ſtill newe to beginne. Euen ſo is it ẘ vs: & that is the thing whereof God complayneth and ſaith: What? I haue plyed this people as a man would ply litle children; and yet for all my teaching of them, they be ſtill in their principles, they remaine ſtill in their A, B, C: And what a ſhame is that? That is the thing which we haue to note, to the end that euery one of vs doe pray to be ſo guided by the ſpirit of God, as wee may be the more apt to be taught, and more quicke and ready to beare in minde that which he hath ſayd, and to receiue his worde in ſuch humbleneſſe as we ought. And moreouer if we yet feele ſuch weakeneſſe in vs, that God muſt be faine to ſpeake againe, and returne the ſecond and third time, whẽ he hath taught vs once already: let vs thereby conſider and confeſſe his goodneſſe towardes vs, for bearing with vs: and let vs take heede, that when he hath ſpoken once or twiſe, we ſhew at leaſtwiſe, that hee hath not loſt all his paines, nor beſtowed it vnprofitablie.

Furthermore for a concluſion, let vs note that if in time of the Lawe the things that were conſecrated to the vſe of the temple, and to the Miniſters, was imployed to the behalfe of the poore, when the others had more than needed; ſurely the ſame lawe remaineth ſtill in force euẽ at this day. Truely the rule which S. Paul ſetteth downe ought to be obſerued, namely ẏ if in old time the Prieſtes were ſuſtained becauſe GOD had called them vnto that ſtate: they which nowadayes preach the Goſpell and offer as precious offeringes vnto God as thoſe of the Lawe, ought to be fed and ſuſteined. Yet notwithſtanding it is not meant hereby that they ſhould deuour all, as wee ſee is done in the Popedome. When offerings are made there, it is but to haue them waſted in pompes and heatheniſh vanities, or rather in other villanies: as the Byſhops, and Abbates, and other, euery one in their degree, ſpend their reuenues not only in gaming & hunting, and other vain paſtimes: but alſo in whoredomes, & in al other ſhameful things: ſo as there is no ſuch corruption to infect the whole world, as the wealth which is in the Church, as they term it, that is to ſay in the Synagogue and ſinke of the clergie. Now when we ſee theſe Churchrobbers fall into ſuch exceſſe that all goes to confuſion: let vs for our part know that we muſt alwayes come back to that which God telleth vs here; to wit, that if we will haue our offeringes acceptable vnto God, when we haue fedde and ſuſtained them vnto whome he hath bound vs, we muſt come vnto the poore, to the widowes, to the fatherleſſe, to the ſtraungers, and to ſuch as are in need. Thus ye ſee how our almes ought to be beſtowed. On the cõtrary ſide, we ſee that the dealing of thinges in the Popedome was but to fill the bellies of the Monks & Fryers, and of ẏ other ſhauelings of their Clergie. But God diſliketh of all ſuch thinges. And why? It is not for ẏ cauſe that he requireth offeringes of vs. We ſee whereunto he calleth vs. But now we may perceiue alſo our leawdneſſe. The wretched Papiſts ſpared for no coſt, euery one was ready to open his purſe to caſt ſomewhat into ẏ iawes of thoſe greedie wolues: euerie man brought them ſomewhat, & all this was no coſt: they founded obites or yearemindes, they built chappels, they ſet vp gay and coſtly puppets, they cauſed manie Maſſes to bee ſung: there was continuall going to them: and theſe cormorants ceaſſed not in the meane time to deuour all, and yet the people ceaſed not to vſe ſuch deuotions ſtil. And to what purpoſe? Surely ẏ Papiſtes make their offerings to the diuel, for it is certaine that God reiecteth them. But we on our ſide knowe ẏ when wee giue our almes, when we diſtribute our goods accordingly as the Lord commaundeth, he lyketh and accepteth of them all. Sith we know this, ſhould wee not at leaſtwiſe doe aſmuch as the Papiſtes, who worke at aladuentures? In deede they thinke not to ſerue the diuel, but yet they haue no aſſurance to the contrarie. But as for vs, God auoweth that he wil receiue at our hands whatſoeuer we offer vnto him as he hath commaunded. Should we then bee ſlacke in this behalfe? Nay rather, let vs be the more heedfull to ſtirre vp our ſelues to doe our duetie the better, when we ſee that which is tolde vs in this place. Let vs be diligent in diſcharging our duties, that God bee not occaſioned to blame vs for defrauding him of that which appertained vnto him, but let vs faithfully yeeld vnto him that which hee demaundeth of vs, or at leaſtwiſe let euery man ſtreine himſelfe thereunto, that we may truelie make that proteſtation, which to morrow God willing we ſhall ſee.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs to feele thẽ better than we haue done: and in the meane time to teach vs ſo to offer our ſelues vnto him, ẏ being reformed in our mindes and affections, we may endeuor altogether to pleaſe him in all poynts, and ẏ therewithal we may alſo apply that which he hath put into our hands to ſuch vſe, as al may be detted vnto him, and that we may offer vnto him the firſtlinges of all our fruites, that is, ẏ our life may be aunſwerable to that which hee hath ordayned, ſo as we abuſe not his benefits to defile them, but turne them to his glory, and to the common benefite and commoditie of the whole Church. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely vnto vs, but alſo to people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxv. of Februarie, 1556.

The Cxlvij. Sermon, which is the third vpon the ſixe and twentith Chapter.

13 Then thou ſhalt ſay before the Lord thy GOD, I haue brought the hallowed thinges out of mine houſe, and alſo giuen it to the Leuite, to the ſtraunger, to the fatherleſſe, and to the widowe, according vnto all thy commaundements which thou haſt commaunded me. I haue tranſgreſſed none of thy commaundementes, neither haue I forgotten them.

14 I haue not eaten thereof in my mourning, nor held backe aught of it in vncleaneſſe, nor giuen aught thereof for the dead, but I haue obeyed the voyce of the Lorde my GOD, I haue done according vnto all that which thou haſt commaunded me.

15 Looke downe from thy holy dwelling place of heauen, and bleſſe thy people Iſrael, and the land which thou haſt giuen vs, as thou ſwareſt vnto our fathers, the land which floweth with Milke and Hony.

THere is not one amõg vs which deſireth not to be eſteemed of in the face of the world, euery man boaſteth himſelfe of the diſcharging of his duetie: and we are alſo enclyned by nature to ſet out our ſelues before men: for ambition driueth vs thereunto. But in the meane time there are very fewe which enter into their owne conſcience, to know howe they haue behaued themſelues before God, and which haue ſuch a regarde in ordering of their life, as to ſay: I walke in the ſight of the heauenly Iudge, it is he vnto whome I muſt bee accountable: I muſt therefore reſt my ſelfe vppon him, and not ioy in the eſtimation of men, for that is but a vanitie: there are very few (I ſay) which enter into this conſideratiõ. Now God ſeeing that vice to raigne in vs, ſeeketh to remedie it: as we may ſee in this place where it is ſayd that we muſt returne vnto him, to haue a good teſtimonie of our life. Thou ſhalt ſay (ſaith he.) And how? hee ſetteth vp here no ſcaffold for vs to make proteſtation before men, what we haue done: No: but he appointeth him ſelfe to be the Iudge, and will haue vs to ſpeake as in his preſence. Thou ſhalt ſay before the Lorde thy God: ſayth hee. And ſo wee are warned, that to order our life well, we muſt not haue our eyes faſtened on this world, nor take great care what men thinke of vs: but we muſt take eſpeciall paynes to approue our whole life, with all our workes and all our thoughtes vnto him, before whom we muſt appeare at the latter day. I grãt we muſt diligently auoyde all offences, and put the doctrine of S. Paule in practiſe, to doe well not onely in the ſight of God, but alſo before mẽ, 2.Cor.8.21. to the intent we may edifie others, and winne others by our example to doe that which they ought. But yet neuertheleſſe wee muſt labor aboue all, to haue God to lyke of vs, and albeit the world ſpeake ill of vs and ſlaunder vs, and turne al yͭ into euil which is good: yet muſt not yͭ turne vs aſide from our duetie, but we muſt hold our ſelues vnto God. To be ſhorte, to fare the better by this doctrine, let vs learne both euening and morning to ſummon our ſelues before God; let euery of vs enter into himſelfe, as if he were out of the ſight of mortall men, and ſay: Alas my god, I muſt liue as I were in thy preſence, and I cannot eſcape thy handes nor thine eyes: giue me grace therefore ſo to order my lyfe as I may referre it wholy vnto thee, and frame it vnto thy will. Behold what we haue to doe. And when we haue paſſed the day, let vs thinke: Alas my God, how haue I behaued my ſelfe towardes thee? When we haue ſuch a care, we ſhall not make any pompous ſhewes before men, as thoſe which would haue men flatter or reioyce in thẽ, and haue their prayſes preached; when in the meane time they fall aſleepe before God; neither can they conſider their owne blockiſhnes, but although they finde themſelues guiltie, yet they thinke all is wel ſo men lyke of their doings here belowe. This is the thing which we haue to cõſider, in yͭ God hauing ſpokẽ of the offering of the firſt fruits, addeth that wee may not thinke that wee haue gayned much when men accuſe vs not, nor vpbraide vs for defrauding GOD of that which is belonging vnto him. Therefore although men charge vs with nothing: yet wee may not ſleepe thereupon: but euery man muſt examine himſelfe, and conſider whether hee hath done that which was commaunded, and that not to the intent to bee commended of mortall creatures, but of the heauenly Iudge.

Now it is expreſly ſayd: I haue done all thinges which thou haſt commaunded me, and according vnto thy ſtatutes, and I haue not forgotten them. Wee ſee here, what is the rule of good lyfe: Namely to doe according as God hath commaunded vs; which ſuffereth vs not to dwell in doubt, as the ignorant wretches doe, who know not at what ende to beginne, becauſe they are not inſtructed in the word of God. Ye ſee how in Poperie, when a man would liue as he ought to do, he liſteneth to yͤ which one ſaith, & to yͤ which an other ſaith, he is turned and returned with euery wind, and euery mā bringeth in his peece, ſo as they are always to learne how to begin. To the intent therfore that wee be not wauering nor douting: let vs holde our ſelues vnto that, which is ſo often warned vs in the holy ſcripture, and whereof we haue a confirmation in this place: that is, that wee may be at defiance with all the worlde, if wee keepe on in the way which God hath ſhewed vs. Now I graunt that men may finde things enough in vs wherefore to blame vs: as wee ſee what outcryes the Papiſtes make, and how they ſtorme and ſay that we deſpiſe the traditions of our holy mother the Church, and the decrees of holy councels, that wee ouerthrow all order, that our lyfe is looſe and licentious, and that our whole deſire is to leade a brutiſh and beaſtly life. Theſe be the thinges which they vpbraide vs withall. And why? Becauſe wee forſake their tyrannie, becauſe we will none of their pelting baggage which they haue deuiſed; becauſe wee will not be hampered with their cordes, (for all their lawes and ſtatutes which they haue forged, are as cordes to ſtrangle poore weake ſoules with all) and becauſe wee caſt aſide all thoſe thinges. Now hereupon they indite vs. But let vs appeare before God, and then we may defy them: yea, we ſhall haue ſufficient for our defence, if we can make this proteſtation truely; God is my witneſſe that I haue behaued my ſelfe according to his worde. Surely this is an ineſtimable comfort that all they haue, which ſwarue not from the pure and ſimple plaineneſſe of the worde of God; but followe this playne path; reſpecting nothing but howe to obey him which hath all ſouereignetie, and authoritie ouer vs: When we haue done ſo; let vs be contented that God lyketh of our dooinges, though men condemne vs for them. For their judgements are no weightier than leaues, they are ſoone gone, and we ſee here whereunto God calleth vs. But let vs note withall, that whereas it is ſayd here; I haue done according to al thy ſtatutes and thy cōmandementes which thou haſt ordayned, and haue not forgotten the ſame: wee are thereby put in minde to inure our ſelues throughly to the knowing of our duetie: for what is it which maketh vs to tranſgreſſe ſo many wayes againſt the commaundementes of our God, but our negligence in not thinking on our duetie? By meanes whereof, we are eaſilie taken tardy. For the diuell is crafty, and alwayes prying and watching how he may entrap vs: & we for all that are careleſſe to think vpon that which God hath commaunded vs. In deede we would not of purpoſe defie God, nor rebel againſt him: but howſoeuer the worlde goeth, we haue little care, we apply not our whole ſtudie to conſider of our dutie, and to ſay; Go to, what is it that God requireth of mee? And becauſe we haue not an eye hereunto, wee ſtumble and fal, and go aſtray. We are therfore exhorted in this place, to looke more narrowly vnto our ſelues, & to bee more watchfull, that we forget not our duetie. For we haue a very ſhort memorie, if God did not often refreſh it. Let vs learne to conſider whether we haue followed the good will of God or no in this behalfe: let vs continue therein, and keepe all one courſe ſtill, and holde on in that trade all our whole lyfe. If this were well imprinted in our heartes, wee would be more diligēt to heare and to reade the worde of God than we are. We had neede to be put in minde of that which God hath cōmaunded vs, or elſe we wil ſoone forget it, euen in the turning of an hand: and yet we vouchſafe not, either to heare, or to reade any thing which ſhould be for our inſtructiō. God therfore is iuſtly prouoked to puniſh our negligence, & we muſt needs fal into many ouergroſſe faultes. And why? Becauſe we ſeeke not after that remedie which he hath put into our handes.

But here a man may demaund a queſtion, how God wold haue men to proteſt before him, yͤ they haue walked according vnto al his ſtatutes & that they haue forgotten nothing of thē. Is it poſſible for vs (how much ſoeuer we inforce our ſelues,) to obey God in ſuch wiſe, as there ſhal be nothing but perfectneſſe in our lyfe? That were cōtrarie to all yͤ holy ſcripture. For it is ſayd that none ſhall be found righteous in yͤ ſight of God. Pſal.143.2. If God would vſe rigour, we ſhould all periſh before his face. And yͤ place is ſpoken euen of thē yͤ are yͤ righteouſeſt. Verily, when S. Paul went about to proue yͤ we cānot be iuſtified but by faith onely, and through yͤ mercie of God & the fauor of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: he alledgeth onely yͤ which is writtē in yͤ law: Curſed are they which performe not all thoſe things. Deut.27.26. Gal.3.10. For he taketh this for a ground, yͤ it is not poſſible for any man liuing, to performe yͤ law, becauſe it ſurmounteth all their power. It ſeemeth here then, that God ment to traine vp his people in hypocriſie, when he taught thē this leſſon to ſay, I haue obſerued all thy ſtatutes, I haue let paſſe none of them. Now to aunſwere this hard queſtion; let vs note yͤ the holy ſcripture in ſpeaking of yͤ faithfull, ſaith in deede yͤ they haue walked according to yͤ ſtatutes & ordinances of God, as whē S. Luke ſpeaketh of Zacharie, & Elizabeth his wife, he ſaith yͤ they walked vprightlie & perfectlie according to yͤ commaundementes & ordinances of God. Luke.1.6. And this manner of ſpeach is often to bee found in holy ſcripture. And yet this proueth not, yͤ Zacharie was altogether perfect, yͤ he had an holyneſſe of Angels, yͤ he had no vice in him, & that his wife alſo was ſuch another: No; but the ſcripture in ſo ſpeaking preſuppoſeth yͤ God of his goodneſſe beareth with yͤ faithful, & that hee imputeth not their faultes vnto them; when they ouerſhoote not thēſelues too far, nor become rebels and deſpiſers of God: but intend alonely to walke according to his wil, & ſubmit thēſelues vnto him, and enforce themſelues and take paynes yͤ way.

Foraſmuch then as the faithfull haue ſuch affection and zeale to giue thẽſelues ouer vnto God; although they trippe, although they ſtumble, although there be much amiſſe in thẽ; and that God in rigour might cõdemne their whole life, and that there is nothing in them which is not ſtayned with ſome blot or other: yet doth GOD accept their doings, as if they were ſound & perfect. And why? For when we are iuſtified through the grace of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, then doth God receaue vs vnto mercie, not onely to accept of vs as of his children, but alſo to take in good worth whatſoeuer proceedeth from vs, although it be worth nothing, ne deſerueth any ſuch lyking. Seeing then that God ſheweth himſelfe ſo gratious and fauorable vnto vs; let vs endeuour to doe well. Although wee performe not that which is required of vs, and bee but in the midway: yet ſhall it be allowed vs in our account as if we had performed the lawe. Now accordinghereunto, the faithfull proteſt, that they haue walked according to Gods will, that they haue kept his ſtatutes, that they haue forgotten nothing of them. And why? They meane that they haue had an vpright affection, that they haue not bin double minded, that they meant not to ſerue G O D by halfes as many do, but that in all reſpects they haue bin willing to bee ſubiect to the Lawe. Yet for all this, they are not ſo blinde, but they acknowledge their imperfections, and bewaile them, and knowe themſelues to be miſerable in that reſpect: but it ſufficeth thẽ that God hath vouchſafed them ſuch grace, as to walke vprightlie, and not to halt on both ſides as hypocrites doe. Wee ſee that they which were the iuſteſt in all the world, haue confeſſed their wretchedneſſe, and bin aſhamed of their whole lyfe. Job.29.15. Iob in deede ſayth, that he was an eye vnto the blinde, a foote to the lame, a defendour of the fatherleſſe, a father of the poore, the refuge of the widowe, that he deceiued no man, that he abuſed not his credit, and that his hand was not ſhut vnto thẽ which were in neede. And yet after he hath ſaid all this, hee ſayth, Alas; when I come before my Iudge, I muſt haue my mouth ſhut vp. Wee ſee how the ſeruantes of G O D haue not bin ſo preſumptuous, as to ſet forth their owne lyfe as Act.13.21. perfect. Dauid had ſuch a witnes of God, as wee may wonder at: I haue found Dauid (ſayth God) according to mine owne heart. Beholde how God ſpeaketh and auoweth that Dauid was the holyeſt of all creatures, and yet for all this wee heare what he ſayth; Alas Lord enter not into Pſal.143.2. iudgement with thy ſeruant, for neither I nor any man liuing ſhall be founde righteous in thy Pſal.130.3. ſight. Lord if thou deale lyke a Iudge, who ſhall ſtand before thee? Beholde we are all of vs confounded. If theſe men haue thus ſpoken, what ſhall be ſayd of vs which are farre wide from ſuch perfectnes as was found in their lyfe? And therfore we ſee how al the faithful yͤ euer were, haue alwayes acknowledged their faultes, haue euer bin humble, haue euer bin beaten downe. Rom.7.24. Saint Paul alſo who was ſo excellent in al vertue, ſaith, Alas wretch that I am, who ſhal deliuer me from this bodie of death? And afterward in the end, although he was a priſoner, although hee waited for nothing but death, and prepared him ſelf to receiue it, and beheld euen then yͤ crown of righteouſneſſe which was prepared for him: yet he ſaith, I am not yet come to my marke; Phil.3.12. but I muſt enforce my ſelfe yet farther. S. Paule herein confeſſeth his infirmities. So then let vs note that the Saintes neuer vaunted themſelues before God to haue performed all that he commaunded them, and to haue diſcharged themſelues of their dutie. But when they had taken holde of the free fauour which was promiſed vnto them, namely that G O D pardoned their ſinnes, and that he would not call them to any preciſe account, that he forgate and buryed all the ſpottes and ſtaynes which were in their workes; when they tooke holde (I ſay) of this promiſe, and hung wholy vppon it: then could they proteſt and ſay, Lord we haue done all that thou haſt commaunded vs to doe, yea becauſe they were grounded vppon the meere fauour of God, who will not examine their workes with rigour. After that manner ought this place to be vnderſtoode. It is not that any man may ſay that he hath fully diſcharged his dutie, and that he hath obſerued yͤ whole lawe: for we are al accurſed becauſe it is vnpoſſible for vs to obſerue it: but that God meant to ſtir vp men to enforce themſelues to do well. And moreouer becauſe we haue alwayes our recourſe to the freebeſtowed goodnes of God, he hath giuẽ vs this leaue and libertie to ſay, Lord, I haue done that which thou commaundeſt; that is to ſay, I haue ſought to do it. For when we tend to the ſeruing of God, it is all one as if we had ſerued him: whẽ we haue the affection, it is all one as if we had yͤ effect: whẽ we are in yͤ way, it is all one as if we had ended our courſe: when we deſire, it is all one as if we had put the thing in practiſe. And what is the cauſe hereof? Euẽ yͤ infinit goodnes of our God, who ſifteth vs not ſeuerely, but ſpareth vs & beareth with vs as with his children. We ſee now in effect what is ſayd. And hereby we are warned to doe our indeuour to walke according vnto the commaundementes of G O D, that wee may vnfainedly ſay: Lorde, I haue doone all that thou commaundeſt me. And yet in the meane time let vs alſo acknowledge our vices, and craue pardon for them. But howſoeuer the worlde goeth, let vs not double with G O D but let vs endeuour willinglie and vnfainedlie to obey him. This is the thing which wee are taught in this place of Moſes.

Now becauſe the fruits of the earth are treated of here, it is ſaide, I haue not eaten of the firſt fruites in the anguiſhe of my heart. This ſaying may be expounded two manner of wayes: either that men haue not eaten with griefe that which they ought to offer vnto God: or that how great ſoeuer their neede were; yet it conſtrained them not to ſwarue from doing well, but that they alwayes diſcharged their offeringes. As touching the firſt, it is certaine that albeit men bee at defiance with G O D ſo as they harden themſelues to offend: yet notwithſtanding they haue alwayes ſome remorſe within them.

In deede when men are come to the fulneſſe of all wickedneſſe,they haue no longer any remorſe of conſcience(as S.Paul ſaith,) Ephe.4.19. they make no conſcience of doing any thing as we ſee theſe robbers which are altogether brutiſh, and not onely ſuch as beſet the high wayes, but thoſe alſo which are giuen to pilling and polling; they are ſo ſetled in crueltie,that they make no conſcience of dooing any thing.The adulterers likewiſe,after the diuel hath once blinded them,are no longer aſhamed of their owne filthineſſe. As much is to be ſaide of all others, which are ſet to followe their carnall affections and deſires. Theſe ſeeme to haue no feeling nor remorſe of conſcience at leaſtwiſe as in reſpect of themſelues. But yet in the meane time God preſſeth them in ſuch wiſe, that ſpite of their teeth they are conſtrained to haue within thē many blinde ſightes,they are awaked when they would reſt, and they haue ſecret ſtinges which torment and vexe them,as the Prophet Eſay ſaieth, Eſa.48.22. That the wicked man hath no peace,& that his thoughts are as the waues of the ſea which meete together,and beate themſelues one againſt another. In this caſe are all ſuch as offend God. So then it is not without cauſe that it ſhoulde bee ſaid: I haue not eaten of it with anguiſh of my heart:as if it were ſaid:Lord I haue not eaten my bread in ſuch ſort, that I haue bin touched with any remorſe of hauing giuen any thing vnto thee faynedly,or of hauing kept backe ẏ offerings which thou haſt commāded me to make. Now hereby wee are warned, ſo to content our ſelues with ẏ which God giueth vs,as ẏ no prick of conſcience might grieue vs for keeping backe other mens goods. Yea but in ẏ meane while wee muſt note alſo,that we muſt be diligent in cōſidering what we haue done:for they that flatter thēſelues may wel proteſt ẏ they haue no anguiſh in their hart; but in ẏ end it muſt needs be ſtirred vp by God, and they muſt feele his anger in deſpite of their teeth,& knowe howe guiltie they are in his ſight. Let vs therfore on our part take good heed, and conſider whether we haue wronged any man : & let vs eate our bread in ſuch ſort as we may truly declare before God, that we haue neither remorſe nor prick of conſcience. But the true and natural meaning is that which we haue ſet down in the ſecond place,that is,that God would haue euery man to proteſt, that he hath not ceaſſed to doe his duetie for anie neceſſitie or extremitie wherein he was. For we thinke we are diſpenſed withal when we cannot diſcharge our duetie ẘout great paine & much adoe. For example,he that hath nothing to pay, thinketh he is quit of his debt. And it is commonly ſaid in ẏ prouerb, That neede hath no law. And ſo bicauſe mē are wont to make neceſſitie a ſhield & buckler for al the euils which they commit,therefore it is ſayd, I haue not withheld mine offeringes in the anguiſh of my heart. As if wee confeſſed, that although we haue bin ſo diſtreſſed, that we knewe not on which ſide to turne vs , that wee had no bread to eate,yet we haue not bin tempted therby to doe euill,but wee haue walked according to the will of God. Although wee haue beene in extreme neede; yet haue wee not ceaſſed alwayes to deale vprightly and indifferently, what neede ſo euer wee were in. This is it in effect which is meant by this place. And mention is purpoſely made of the anguiſh of the heart,to the intent we ſhould know, ẏ although there bee much weakeneſſe in vs, yet is it not a ſufficient excuſe to doe euill. There are many which when they haue vſed any deceyte , pilfering or extorſion; will alleage and ſaye: Oh conſider I am weake, I haue no ſuch conſtancie as others haue , the tentation ouercame mee. But GOD in this place alleageth ,that his children may bee tempted (for the anguiſh of the heart is a ſigne that wee bee made neyther of ſteele nor ſtone,) that wee haue ſtinges in vs, to pricke vs and to holde vs in bondage;but yet ẏ wee muſt fight againſt them whatſoeuer commeth of it. Therefore let vs learne that although pouertie be hard and grieuous;yet notwithſtanding we ought to reſiſt all the temptations which wee feele in our heart, and therewithall to walke vprightly. This is a fitte leſſon for poore folke , to the intent they beare not themſelues in hand, that in their need it is lawfull for them to catch what they can get, and to ſeeke their aduauntage as many doe;ſaying : Yee ſee there is none that pitieth mee, I muſt looke vnto my ſelfe : thereuppon they make no conſcience eyther to ſell counterfeite wares or otherwiſe to diſcharge themſelues verie yll of their duetie. And it is purpoſely ſayde (as wee ſee) that although wee bee diſtreſſed; yet wee muſt eate but of the bread which God giueth vs, and not whatſoeuer wee can catch by vnlawfull meanes.

There is afterwards mention made of Filth and vncleaneneſſe, and of the deade : And that is bycauſe of the ceremonyes of the Lawe. For wee knowe howe GOD meant to keepe the people of olde tyme occupyed in theſe figures, to the intent wee myght knowe that men are ſubiect vnto many defylementes, and that they become vncleane at euerie turning of a hande. And heere is mention made of the dead,bycauſe if one touched a dead man or entered into an houſe where hee was; he was defyled. Heereby the Iewes were warned, that in this preſent life wee are beſet with ſo many defylementes, that wee cannot ſteppe a foote forewarde, nor turne a finger, but God ſhall eſpie ſomething woorthye of blame in vs : and for that cauſe were the waſhinges appoynted. And the Iewes had a looking glaſſe and a liuely picture thereof, when they ſawe a deade bodye. For beholde, it is a carrion: and whence proceedeth this lothſomneſſe which we ſee to bee in a man, when hee is deade? For the body of man is the houſe and temple of the holy Ghoſt, and the dwelling place of the liuely Image of GOD. Yet notwithſtanding, the body of man beyng dead is more ſtinking than the carrion of a dog or of an Aſſe. Nowe then, the ſight heereof ſerueth well to humble vs in beholding the fruites of ſinne. For God ſheweth as it were with his finger,that the ſpirituall filthineſſe which dwelleth in vs, vttereth it ſelfe euen in the body.

And this was yͤ meaning of the figures which the auncient fathers had vnder yͤ law. Now it is true in deede yͭ the figures themſelues are no longer in vſe; but yet yͤ ſubſtance of them ſhall alwayes remayne, to do vs to vnderſtand yͭ foraſmuch as we be ſubiect to many defilementes bicauſe the world is ſo corrupted as is pitie to beholde, wee ought to keepe good watch, & that as oftē as we perceiue any ſtaine in vs, or that we haue not folowed Gods commandements roundly, or yͭ we haue bin allured by any wicked affection, or that wee haue not walked in the way of God with ſo feruent zeale as we ſhould haue done, or yͭ wee haue bin held back & hindered with ſome worldly care: wee muſt bewaile it before God, and flee for refuge to yͤ bloud of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: for there is no talke to be had of other waſhings. The holy water of the Papiſtes is but a charme, whereby they haue renounced yͤ benefite of the death & paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Vnto his death therefore muſt wee haue our recourſe. And moreouer, although we feele not our faults, (as in very deede many eſcape vs, & wee knowe not yͤ hundredth part of them) yet muſt wee not ceaſſe to walke in carefulnes & humblenes, and to craue pardon of God; After that maner muſt we deale that we may be anſwerable vnto the figures which were vnder the lawe.

Now as touching this place, it is expreſly ſaid, I haue held backe nothing of it in vncleanes, neyther haue I applyed any of it to the ſeruice of the deade: to ſhew vnto vs yͭ we ought not to mingle yͤ ſeruice of God with the corruptions of yͤ diuell. As how? We ſhal ſee many, who hauing wel to ſpend, doe conſume it ill: ſome of them in whoredome, and ſome in I knowe not what ryot and exceſſe. And when they haue to their ſeeming giuen ſome litle piece of it vnto God: they diſpenſe with themſelues to fall to yͤ working of all wickedneſſe. As for example; when the Papiſts cauſe ſome Maſſes to be ſung, or whē they haue had ſome other priuate deuotions: they thinke yͭ God ought to be contented with that he hath had his morſell. Therefore when a man hath ſpent much money vpon an whoore, one Maſſe (as he thinketh) will ſet him free in reſpect of God. When a wicked varlet hath ſpoyled & robbed this man and that man, hee will come as it were in ſcorne to make ſome ſmall offering vnto God; & he thinketh all is well. And euen here among vs a man ſhall ſee ſuch as flatter themſelues after the ſame maner. For they beare themſelues in hand, yͭ they haue made amendes for their robberies, when they haue giuen a ſmal part of their booty vnto God. Pſal. 50.16. But the ſcripture telleth vs expreſly, yͭ God abhorreth ſuch ſacrifices as are mingled with our filthes, & that we doe but vnhallow his name by them, & that we work him moſt horrible treacherie. So then let vs note, yͭ Moſes meant to declare vnto vs, yͭ if we will offer ſuch offeringes as God may accept, we muſt not mingle them with our owne defilements. In deede (as I haue alreadie tolde you) we cannot bee ſo pure and cleane, as that no fault may be found with vs: but yet wee may come and ſerue our God purely, and not be fraughted with ſuch hypocriſie as to doe his commaundements by halfes, but ſerue him with an vpright and pure affection. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to beare in mind concerning this place: where it is ſaid, I haue taken none of it in filth and vncleanneſſe.

Now in the end Moſes rehearſeth that againe which he had alreadie touched, of obſeruing the commaundements of God: But he expreſſeth it more fully than he had done before. Frō whence proceedeth this obedience, & from what roote? Verily from hearkening vnto God whē he ſpeaketh, and when he ſheweth vs the way which we muſt keepe. I haue hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lord my God, and haue followed that which hee commanded me. By theſe words all ſuch as follow their owne likings are condemned. Wee ſee how peruerſly the moſt part of men doe walke. Euerie man wil ſay & confeſſe that we muſt ſerue God: but after what maner, and faſhion? There is not that man which ſnarleth not himſelfe in his own fanſies. Well (ſaieth he) I muſt ſerue God. And how? I will doe the beſt I can. But no man regardeth what God commandeth, no man conſidereth what is pleaſing vnto him: we goe & offer vnto him at randon whatſoeuer our own braine conceiueth. But all ſuch intentions of our owne are heere in one woord condemned, where it is ſaid that firſt we muſt hearken vnto the voyce of God: If wee will haue him to receiue our offerings and ſacrifices, all our offering vnto him muſt be according vnto his word, which we cannot doe except we be taught in his ſchoole. Will wee then walke as we ought? Let vs take paines to bee taught in the woorde of God. And this is the thing wherein we ſhall differ from the Papiſts, to wit, if we profit in the Goſpell. For thoſe poore beaſtes goe aſtray, and knowe not in what caſe they are: for they neuer knew, yͭ the ground of all ſacrifices is obedience. And therfore they do whatſoeuer commeth in their heads; and no wonder: for they neuer had the wil of God declared vnto thē, they are depriued of yͤ doctrine of ſaluation. But as for vs, ſeeing God hath vouchſafed to declare his will vnto vs, let vs hearkē vnto yͭ which he commandeth, let his voyce ring in our eares, & while he ſpeaketh, let vs not be deaf. Moreouer let vs not think our ſelues diſcharged by knowing what we ought to doe, but let vs alſo put it forthwith in practiſe. What are we yͤ better for the hearing of our duetie at a Sermon, or for the reading therof in the holy ſcripture; vnleſſe we proceede to put the ſame in practiſe, knowing that Gods ſpeaking vnto vs is to make tryall of our obedience?

Now hereupon it is ſayd, Looke downe therefore O Lord from thine holy dwelling place, euen from heauen, vpon thy people Iſrael, and bleſſe them in the land which thou haſt promiſed and ſworne to giue them, in the perſon of our fathers. Heereby God meant not to ſay that the people ſhould ground themſelues vpon their owne merites: but he ment to ſtirre vp the faithfull to walke ſimply in his feare if they woulde haue him for his part to continue his benefites and his bleſſings towardes them. This would bee darke if it ſhould not bee layde foorth more plainely. In deede all that euer

God promiſeth vnto vs, proceedeth from his owne freebeſtowed goodneſſe: But yet for all that he will not haue vs to neglect our dutie, and to abuſe his promiſes, as if we might binde him vnto vs, and wee in the meane time bee his enimies: he will not haue vs to ſpit in his face and to pinne him in the meane time to our ſleeue & ſay: Thou muſt ſhewe thy ſelfe a father vnto vs, although we be not thy children: thou muſt bee at peace with vs, although we make war againſt thee. No, we may not dally ſo with God. But will we enioy his fauour vnto the ende? Will we haue him to continue beneficiall vnto vs? Let vs take heede then that we ſerue and honour him, let vs take heed ỷ we walke according vnto that, wherunto hee hath called vs: for wee muſt alwayes beare this ſaying of his in minde, Turne ye vnto me, and I will turne vnto you. God ſaith that he turneth himſelfe from vs, when he letteth vs alone, and taketh his bleſſings from vs, and hath no pitie on vs, ne heareth vs though we call vpon him, but giueth vs vp for a pray, both vnto the diuell and vnto all our enemies. For when we turne our backes vnto him, it is good reaſon that he ſhould alſo forget vs. Neuertheleſſe hee willeth vs to turne vnto him, and hee will turne vnto vs, that is to ſay, if we walke in his feare, hee will neuer forget vs, but we ſhall feele his hande ready to aide and helpe vs in all our needes and neceſſities. This is the common doctrine of the holy ſcripture. And according hereunto it is ſaide in this place, Lorde, ſeeing wee haue walked in thy commaundementes, looke thou alſo mercifully vppon thy people, and bleſſe thine inheritance, and the lande which thou haſt promiſed vnto our fathers. True it is that the Iewes knewe verie well, and wee haue ſeene the ſame oftentimes heretofore; that this lande was not giuen vnto them in reſpect of the obedience which they had yelded vnto God: and that neither they, nor their fathers had any maner of way deſerued it. But God was moued by his own only good pleaſure, to giue it vnto them. The Iewes ought to haue beene throughly perſwaded thereof. Euen ſo let vs looke well to our ſelues, and ſay: Lorde, true it is that whatſoeuer we haue, we holde it of thy meere goodneſſe: for thou haſt alſo bound vs vnto thee, and haſt put this bridle vppon vs, that we be thy children, inſomuch that thou haſt preuented vs with thy mercy, and ſhewed thy ſelfe a father towards vs in adopting vs: And we Lord likewiſe haue followed the calling whereunto thou calledſt vs; we haue indeuoured to ſhewe that thy bountiful liberalitie towards vs is not vtterly misbeſtowed. Now therefore continue thou thy good doing towardes vs. To bee ſhort, this caſe admitteth not any bragging or boaſting (as I haue alreadie tolde you) but rather it ſerueth to ſtirre vp men to walke in the feare of God and to certifie them that although they haue not behaued themſelues in all pointes as they ought; yet God will continue his goodneſſe towardes them vnto the ende. And ſurely wee haue neede of ſuch an aſſurance. Wee ſee howe diſtruſtfull we be; inſomuch that although God haue powred out his benefites vpon vs longtime together, & we haue felt his help oftentimes: yet are we always in doubt, and we cannot tel whether God will continue his fauour vnto vs or no. For this cauſe he will haue vs most certainly aſſured, that when we walke in his obedience and depende wholly vpon him, he wil not forſake vs, but will continue in doing vs good ſtill; and not leaue vs in the midde way, but performe that which he hath promiſed, and as he hath ſaide, ſo will he doe. We ſee nowe in effect whereunto Moſes had an eye, and what doctrine we haue to gather out of this place. Will wee then abide in poſſeſſion of Gods benefites, yea euen as touching this preſent life? Let vs ſticke faſt vnto our God, and neuer ſeuer our ſelues from him; let vs doe our indeuor to ſerue and honour him. If we ſo do, ſurely we ſhall neuer haue any minde to turne away after our owne vanities: but when we ſee that he is come ſo neare vnto vs to doe vs good, wee alſo ſhalbe readie to giue our ſelues wholly ouer vnto him, that hee may make vs to feele the performance of his promiſes, and to knowe that he will continue to doe vs good, and reach vs his hand to take vs to himſelfe, not for a day or two onely, but for euer both in life and in death.

Zach.1.3.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them more and more, and therewithall ſeeing it pleaſeth him to vſe ſuch fatherly goodnes towardes vs as to vouchſafe to accept the things which we offer vnto him, notwithſtanding that there bee much amiſſe in them: Let vs pray him ỷ this his ſo doing may encorage vs the better to yeeld our ſelues wholie vnto his ſeruice, and to imploy our ſelues therin, ſo as we may truely proteſt, that we haue not doubled with him, but that we haue endeuoured to frame our life vnto his holy commaundements: that hauing obtained ſuch grace of him through our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt by the benefite of his death and paſſion, we may bee ſo clothed with his perfect righteouſneſſe, that wee may appeare before God his father at the latter day, as if there were nothing in vs but all perfection. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxvj of Februarie, 1556.

The CXLVIII. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the ſixe and twentith Chapter.

16 This day the Lorde thy GOD commaundeth thee to doe theſe ordinaunces and lawes, and to keepe them and doe them with all thy heart and with all thy ſoule.

17 Thou haſt ſet vp this day the Lorde to bee thy GOD, and to walke in his wayes, and keepe his ordinaunces and his commaundementes, and his lawes, and to obey his voyce.

18 And the Lorde hath ſet thee vp this day, in that thou art vnto him a ſpeciall people, as hee hath tolde thee, to the end that thou ſhouldeſt keepe al his commaundements.

19 That hee may make thee very hie in praiſe, and in name, and in glorie aboue all the nations which he hath made, and that thou maieſt be an holie people vnto the Lorde thy God as he hath ſaide.

Moſes in this place continueth the matter which was handled yeſterday, to wit, in ſhewing vnto the Iewes for what ende GOD had choſen them to bee his people and his flock. It was not that they ſhould liue as the Gentiles, which were in ignoraunce; but that ſeeing they had the lyght of lyfe and ſaluation, they ſhould follow it. For there is no reaſon, that ſeeing GOD hath adopted vs for his children, wee ſhoulde bee as brute beaſtes, euery man wandering after the fantaſies and luſtes of his owne heart: wee muſt order our ſelues vnder the direction of him which taketh and admitteth vs for his owne. It is therefore ſayde in this place, This day the Lorde thy GOD commaundeth thee to keepe all his ſtatutes, and his commaundementes: to doe them, and to obſerue them, yea, and that with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoule. This worde To day, betokeneth, that when wee are taught in the worde of GOD, wee are much more ſtraiter bounde, than if hee had onely created vs and placed vs in this worlde, and in the meane time left vs to walke after our owne liking. It is true in deede, that the vnbeleeuing ſort ſhall not bee excuſed, although GOD neuer vouchſafed to make them partakers of his woorde. Although they bee as poore blinde wretches in darkeneſſe, yet ſhall they not fayle to bee condemned in their ignoraunce. He that hath ſinned without the Lawe, ſhall periſh (ſayeth Saint Paul.) And in deede [without the Lawe] there is not that man which hath not ſome witneſſe ingraued in his owne heart, that there is but one GOD whome wee ought to ſerue, and whome wee ought to honour. They which knowe this by nature, deſerue ſufficiently to bee condemned: but when GOD commeth neere vnto vs, and vouchſafeth to vſe the office of a teacher to declare vnto vs his will, there is the leſſe excuſe for vs. Then muſt double condemnation needes fall vpon all them which receiue not the yoke of GOD, when it pleaſeth him to guide them, and to ſhewe them that hee will not leaue them to goe at randon, as the wretched and vnbeleeuing Gentiles. Ye ſee thē what Moſes meant by this woorde, To day the Lorde thy GOD commaundeth thee. And that is the cauſe why this word alſo is put in the 95. Pſalm. To day if ye heare the voyce of the Lorde. And the Apoſtle hath well weyed the ſame, in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes: ſaying, that this worde To day, betokeneth that when wee once haue the woorde of God preached vnto vs, wee muſt vſe that occaſion, and that if it eſcape vs, wee muſt needes bee iudged by them, which neuer knewe what good and euill meant to make any ſure difference betweene them. And to this purpoſe alſo Saint Paule alleageth the place of Eſay, Beholde, nowe are the acceptable dayes, loe nowe is the time of ſaluation, ſeeke the Lord whyle hee is neere at hande, call vppon him while hee ſheweth himſelfe. So then let vs learne, not to let ſlippe the opportunitie of time while the Lorde calleth vs, and allureth vs vnto himſelfe, let vs not play the deafe men, let vs not bee ſlowe to come vnto him, but let vs be in an vnfayned readineſſe, and ſay; Lorde, behold we are heere, what is it that thou commaundeſt vs? We are preſt and ready euery of vs for himſelfe to obey thee. Thus yee ſee what we haue to beare in minde out of this place.

2.Cor.6.2.

And moreouer in this place Moſes ſetteth downe theſe woordes, The commaundementes and ſtatutes, in the ſame ſenſe which we haue heeretofore already touched: namely, to ſhewe that GOD teacheth vs not by halfes when wee haue his woorde, but that wee haue a perfect inſtruction, ſo as the knowledge of no good thing ſhall be wanting vnto vs, if wee be not ſtubborne vnto God, and of ſette purpoſe ſtoppe our eares: as there are many which are ready ynough to make a countenaunce of not knowing what it meaneth: although GOD haue taught them. If we therefore on our part bee tractable to bee taught, there is no doubt but that our lyfe ſhall bee in all poyntes well ruled, when we haue the word of God.

And if this was ſaid of the time of the Lawe, which was much more darker than the Goſpell is, doubtleſſe wee haue nowe more plentie of doctrine and inſtruction. Let vs learne therefore to profite in the ſchoole of our GOD, while it pleaſeth him to vſe the office of a ſchoolemaſter towards vs, and let vs not doubt that any thing ſhall bee wanting vnto vs, when we come to him to bee taught. And that is the cauſe why Saint
Col.2.3. Paule alſo ſayeth, that in the Goſpel there is ſuch a fulneſſe of wiſedome, as a man can not wiſh any more. So then let vs not bee vnthankefull; but when our GOD ſpeakes vnto vs, let vs inquire after his will, and order our lyfe according vnto that which hee telleth vs. But with all wee muſt bee diligent. For ſeeing GOD forgetteth not any thing, ne leaueth any thing behinde which myght ſerue for the well ordering of our lyfe, ſhoulde wee on our part bee negligent? Or if wee heard but one woorde of that which hee will tell vs, ſhoulde wee ouerpaſſe it without thinking vppon it? No: but for as much as wee ſee that GOD hath ſuch a care of ordering our lyfe, let vs alſo on our ſide take paynes to profite in his woorde; let vs apply our whole ſtudies thereunto, knowing that it is not loſte time which is ſo ſpent; let vs occupie our ſelues in obſeruing his ſtatutes, his commaundements, and ordinaunces: and let vs ſet our mindes well vppon them. In deede GOD hath in ten wordes compriſed whatſoeuer hee requireth of vs, but theſe tenne woordes haue in them great ſubſtaunce. Our knowing of the ten commaundementes muſt not bee to prattle of them lyke a Pye in a Cage as they ſay: but wee muſt conſider well of the meaning of them, and marke whereunto they tend. When our Lorde hath ſpoken the woorde, wee muſt firſt conſider wherunto it tendeth: and ſecondly, what things depend thereon: and wee ſhall finde that wee haue neede to thinke vppon it, and to occupie and to employ our ſelues in it, al the time of our lyfe.

Nowe heerewithall Moſes ſheweth after what ſorte wee muſt keepe the commaundementes of GOD, to wit, With all our heartes and with all our ſoule. It is not ynough then to employ our handes and our feete to doe well, but our heart muſt marche foremoſt. For if wee ſerue GOD through conſtraint, all is nothing worth. After which manner, Hypocrites fearing to bee puniſhed make ſome fayre ſhewe of godlyneſſe, and in the ſight of men, yee would thinke there were cauſe why they ſhoulde bee prayſed; but their heart is full of wickedneſſe and rebellion, ſo as they defye GOD, and woulde haue him aboliſhed if it were poſſible. The firſt thing therefore which wee haue to doe in framing our lyfe to the obedience of GOD, is to ſerue him with a pure and free good will, ſo as wee bee not forced to doe that which he commaundeth vs, ne grynd our teeth at him, as who ſhoulde ſay wee woulde ſcape his hand, in dooing the cleane contrarie, if it were poſſible. But wee muſt offer our heart in ſacrifice, that God may bee ſo ſerued of vs, as wee may ſhewe that his Lawe is not ſuch as the ciuill orders and lawes of men are. For they ordayne what ſeemeth good vnto them, to the intent that men ſhould bee bridled but from the outwarde actions: but it is not ynough to pleaſe GOD withall, not to haue doone euill, vnleſſe our heart alſo bee anſwerable in all pureneſſe. And yet farther Moſes ſpeaketh not ſimply of the affections, but hee will haue the heart alſo to bee pure and vpright. Thou ſhalt ſerue mee therefore with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoule: that is to ſay, ſoundlye or vnfainedly, ſo as wee double not with GOD as wee ſee ſome doe; which make a fayre ſhewe for a time, but it ſoone vaniſheth: and againe, they haue a backe ſhoppe ſo as they ſerue not GOD but agaynſt their will. Wee muſt therefore laye open our heart before GOD, wee muſt offer our thoughtes and deſires vnto him, wee muſt endeuour to ſubmitte our ſelues wholly vnto him. Thus muſt hee bee ſerued and honored of vs, howbeit not after our manner, but according to his owne lawe.

But heere a man myght demaunde, howe it may bee poſſible for men to giue themſelues to ſerue GOD with all their heart. For as long as wee remayne incloſed in this fleſhe of ours, there will bee alwayes many infirmities and vices in vs which will holde vs backe and hinder vs. And verily wee heare how Saint Paule ſayeth, I can not doe the good which I Rom.7.15.
woulde. But if the heart were wholly giuen vnto GOD, the perfourmaunce of thinges woulde followe out of hande. It followeth then, that when wee bee ſo letted and hindered, wee obey GOD but in part. But as I haue alreadie declared, this letteth not, but that wee may ſerue GOD in ſingleneſſe of heart: for hee imputeth not vnto vs thoſe infirmities which hinder vs, when there is no faynedneſſe in vs, but that our chiefe deſire and ſeeking is that hee ſhoulde quietlye poſſeſſe vs and gouerne vs by his holy ſpirite, and that our lyfe may bee conformable in all poyntes to his woorde. Therefore when we haue this deſire in vs, although wee be helde backe and hindered with the infirmities of our fleſhe, yet GOD imputeth not that euill vnto vs. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in mynde out of this place. But a man may yet farther demaunde, whether GOD chargeth a man with any thing which is aboue his power and abilitie? For it ſeemeth an inconuenient thing that GOD ſhould require thinges vnpoſſible to bee doone. But this demaunde is eaſily aunſwered: for when God publiſhed and ſet foorth his lawe, hee reſpected not what we coulde doe, or what our power or abilitie is, but what we owe vnto him.

Therefore when he ſaieth : You ſhall ſerue mee by keeping my Statutes with all your heart and with all your ſoule : hee ſpeaketh not according to our abilitie : hee knoweth full well, that wee are not able to compaſſe it, wee are farre wyde from it : but yet for all that, wee ceaſſe not to bee bounde vnto him, and there is good right why hee ſhoulde require his due, although wee are not able to perfourme it. For whence commeth the faulte ? Of the corruptneſſe of our nature. Seeing it is ſo then, let vs conclude that GOD muſt not bee barred of his right. And therefore although men can not whollye diſcharge themſelues, yet GOD ceaſſeth not to ſay, You owe mee this, and therefore doe it. Now whereas the Lawe was in ſuch ſort giuen vnto vs, wee are ſo farre vnable to perfourme it, that wee knowe not howe to haue one good thought onely to beginne, 2.Cor.3.5. much leſſe haue wee any ryght affection to ſtirre one finger to doe it. That is no newes : but wee muſt mourne, knowing that wee are altogether rebelles vnto GOD, and that there is nothing in our nature, which is not repugnaunt to his righteouſneſſe. Haue wee done ſo ? Haue wee condemned our ſelues? Then let vs pray him to ayde vs with his holy ſpirite. And moreouer when hee ſhall haue ayded vs, let vs knowe that if there be any thing wanting in our duetie, yet ſhall it not come into account, but GOD will accept of the ſeruice which we yeelde vnto him, ſo it proceede from a free and ſyncere mynde, as I ſayde afore. Wee ſee then that the thing which wee haue to gather vppon this place, is, that GOD will bee ſerued, not by piece meale nor by force or conſtraint, but of a pure and freehearted deuotion and with all our heart. Moreouer let vs note, that wee cannot diſcharge our ſelues of all that which wee owe him, and as in reſpect of our owne nature, wee can not any way beginne. But whereas hee hath publiſhed his Lawe by the mouth of menne, and hath cauſed it to bee ſet downe in wryting ; hee muſt alſo write it in our heartes, as he promiſeth to doe ; Ier.31.33. Ezec.11.19. Hebr.8.10. Deut.30.6. both by Ezechiel and alſo Ieremie. And it is a common doctrine (as wee ſhall ſee heereafter) that hee promyſed the Iewes to circumciſe their heartes. After that manner doeth GOD ſpeake vnto his elect, that is, that through his holy ſpirite, hee imprinteth his commaundementes in their heartes. Moreouer wee muſt knowe that although GOD haue touched our heartes by his holy ſpirite, yet wee are alwayes rebelles againſt him, and wee neuer come to the perfect and ſubſtantiall ſeruing of him which is ſette downe heere. Wee muſt therefore alwayes bewayle our ſelues, crauing forgiueneſſe of the faultes which remayne in vs. But yet notwithſtanding wee muſt inforce our ſelues to come vnto GOD, yea euen with willing ſeruice, that our heartes may bee ſo diſpoſed, as wee may take a pleaſure to bee obedient vnto him, for vntill wee bee come to that poynt, GOD will accept of no ſeruice which wee doe to him. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to beare in minde concerning theſe words of Moſes.

Nowe hee addeth ; The Lorde thy GOD hath made made thee to promiſe this daye, that thou ſhalt bee a people vnto him : and thou haſt cauſed the Lorde thy GOD to ſay, that hee ſhall bee thy GOD. This place heere is taken in two ſortes. For the verbe which Moſes vſeth, ſignifyeth ſometyme to exalt or to ſette vppe on high : howbeeit not in his originall ſignification, but after a certayne manner : and ſometime whereas yee woulde ſaye, according to the roote of the woorde, A man is exalted ; it may alſo bee conſtrued, hee hath made himſelfe to ſaye : bycauſe it is to bee gathered, that bragging and boaſting doe make a man to ſet out and to aduaunce himſelfe highly. Therefore commonly this place is taken as if it were ſayde, the Lorde thy GOD hath choſen thee this day to bee his people, and thou alſo haſt exalted or ſette him vp to bee thy GOD. I graunt that this ſenſe maye well bee borne with. But when all is more nearelie conſidered, the naturall meanyng of Moſes is as wee haue turned it, to wit, this daye thou haſt cauſed the Lorde thy GOD to ſay, that hee will by thy GOD ; and hee hath made thee ſaye, that thou wilt bee his people. For in this place Moſes meant to ſhewe the fauour which GOD had vttered towardes the Iewes, in making his couenaunt with them. And to prooue this to bee ſo, wee ſee that the ſame thing is declared many tymes in the holye Scripture, both to the Iewes, and alſo vnto vs : that is, that GOD vſeth ineſtimable goodnes towards vs whẽ it pleaſeth him to cal vs into his church, and to receiue vs as it were into his own houſe, for then he couenãteth with vs as if two perſons ſhould meete to paſſe bondes on eyther part. As for example ; Some gift is to be made. Now hee that is the granter ſpeaketh firſt, and he that accepteth is there alſo. Then are conditions annexed ; and the partie that maketh the gift ſaith : This I except, This I reſerue, or I will haue him to whom I giue it, to bee bounde vnto mee after ſuch a maner. The graunter (as they terme him) accepteth of the gift, & bindeth himſelfe on his part, and both of them make promiſes, I (ſaith yͤ one) doe renounce all my right, & giue all ouer into this mans hand. And I for my part (ſaith the other) doe accept it with condition to performe yͭ which he requireth of me. So then like as Conueiances doe paſſe betweene men : euen ſo dealeth God wͭ vs in that it pleaſeth him to admit vs for his people, & to take vs for his owne. Now let vs ſee what honor this is, whẽ he ſtoopeth ſo vnto vs wretched creatures. We are poore wormes of the earth : as touching our bodies we are vile carions & rottennes : & as for our ſoules there is yet farre greater wretchednes in them : and yet notwithſtanding God entreth into couenants wͭ ſuch as we are : & what equal match is there betweene vs? Would an earthly king or ſome great Prince vouchſafe to come vnto a ſwineheard or ſome other man of baſe degree, & ſay, we wil couenant one wͭ another, we wil haue a Notary betwixt vs. A Prince (which yet is but a mortall creature) would think himſelf too much diſgraced, if he ſhould enter into couenãt with ſuch an abiect as in reſpect of ỹ world: and yet our God vouchſafeth to ſtoope as lowe vnto vs. And therefore we ought to magnifie ſo great a priuilege. When we heare the worde of God preached vnto vs, it is all one as if God came down hither vnto vs and ſaide; Come on. As for mee, I am readie to couenant with you, onely be you likewiſe diſpoſed on your ſide. When wee haue ſuch a neare acceſſe vnto God, and he acquainteth himſelfe ſo with vs, and woulde haue vs ſo ioyned vnto him: are wee not voyde of al ſenſe and reaſon, if this doe not moue vs, yea and inflame our heartes to giue our ſelues wholly ouer vnto God, who vſeth ſuch & ſo incredible gentleneſſe towardes vs? So then it is not without cauſe that Moſes ſayeth in this place: This daye the Lorde thy God hath made thee to giue thy worde, that is to ſaye, hee hath made thee to couenant with him, that thou wilt bee his people, and thou haſt made him to couenant with thee, that hee will bee thy God. Thou haſt this libertie, or rather this priuiledge to ſpeake with thy God. Goe to then, let vs couenant togither, let vs haue our mouthes open to demaunde and to aske, ſeeing our Lorde ſtoopeth ſo lowe vnto vs. It is verie true that hee can owe vs nothing, but yet neuertheleſſe, of his meere liberalitie hee will haue vs to aske him, that wee may bee his; hee will haue vs to require him that hee may bee our God, and we his inheritance; hee our King, and we his people: wee his children, and hee our father. Seeing then that wee may come ſo farre; ought not the great pitifulneſſe which our Lorde ſheweth vnto vs, to make vs aſhamed? What a ſhame were it if wee ſhoulde remaine ſo blockiſh as to bee nothing at all mooued, after that God hath ſo allured vs, and after that hee hath ſo preuented vs afore hande with his infinite goodneſſe?

Nowe then to the intent wee may profite our ſelues the better by this place, let vs note once againe this worde, To day. For Moſes alwayes putteth the Iewes in minde, that when the law was publiſhed, God was preſent with them, and called them to enter into couenant with him as I will declare anon. But nowe as touching vs, wee haue the Goſpel, wee ſee the time ſeaſonable, we ſee the dayes of ſaluation, wee ſee the acceptable time of God; let vs therefore make haſt, let vs enter in whyle the doore is open, while the way is readie let vs goe forward in it, let vs not foreſlowe it; for if God perceiue that Ioſu.24.20. wee deſpiſe his grace, doutleſſe hee can well ynough skill howe to withdrawe it, as hee alſo threateneth to doe. Let vs not therefore delay the time vntill to morrowe, to followe whither God calleth vs; but whyle he ſpeaketh let vs be attentiue to heare him. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to beare in mynde vppon this woorde, To daye.

Moreouer it is true, that in ſubſtance God maketh no other couenant with vs nowadayes, than hee made in olde time with the Iewes: but yet hee ſpeaketh much more familiarly vnto vs; hee ſheweth him ſelfe to bee our God, and our father, and hath made vs a farre greater aſſurance thereof in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, than the Iewes coulde haue vnder the ſhadowes and figures of the lawe. In deede the auncient fathers were ſaued by no other meanes, than by that which wee haue, to wit, that they were the people of God; for this betokeneth as much, as that God held them for his childrẽ: & they had their ſaluation grounded in Chriſt Ieſus, as wee haue: but that was after an obſcure manner, ſo as they behelde the thing afarre off which was preſented vnto them. As for vs, ſeeing God is come ſo neere vnto vs in the perſon of our lord Ieſus Chriſt, that wee be vnited vnto him, and haue the trueth and ſubſtance of the ancient figures: wee bee ſo much the more ſurer ỹ God maketh vs to ſaye that wee are his people, and that we make him to ſay that he is our God. And how doth he make vs to ſay it? Truly altogether of his owne good will, without beeing tyed or bound vnto vs. For God hauing adopted vs for his children, certifieth vs that the inheritance of heauen is made readie for vs, and behold hee giueth his own ſonne vnto vs for a pledge of his loue, & whatſoeuer our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath is all ours, with all the fulneſſe of riches which wee reade was giuen vnto him. And why? Euen vnto the ende that wee ſhoulde bee enriched by them. The obedience which hee yeelded vnto his father is our righteouſnes. To be ſhort, hee hath nothing whereof he maketh not vs partakers. Seeing that he is ours, and that hee is giuen vnto vs, how ſhall not all the reſt which hee hath be giuen vnto vs alſo with him, as S. Paul ſaith in the eighth to the Romanes? Rom.8.32. Seeing thẽ that we haue this, and that wee may make our God ſay that he is our ſauiour, and that nothing can be wanting to vs after hee hath receiued vs into his fauour and loue: let it lift vs vp vnto heauẽ, ſo as euery of vs may forget & renounce him ſelfe. Let vs bid the world farewell, and let vs be rauiſhed to giue our ſelues ouer altogither vnto him, who ſheweth himſelf ſo liberall & fauourable vnto vs. And let vs note, that ſeeing we make God to ſpeake ſo, that is to ſay, to graunt vs libertie to come vnto him, & to require him to accompliſh his promiſes; we muſt at leaſtwiſe be mutually bound vnto him, & he take promiſe of vs, that we wil be his people, that is to ſay, that becauſe hee hath redeemed vs by the bloud of his onely ſonne, we will liue no longer after our own luſts & fleſhly deſires, but be ruled by him; & that as he is our father ſo we wil be his children, ſo as none of vs wil yeld to do wickedly, but hold faſt the ſeale of our adoption which is the holy ſpirite to be gouerned by him. There muſt (ſay I) at leaſtwiſe be this mutual bonde betwixt vs, that ſeeing God bindeth himſelfe ſo vnto vs, we alſo muſt come and ſubmit ourſelues wholly vnto him.

Now herewithal we ought to wey wel this word which Moſes addeth. He ſaith twiſe As the Lorde hath ſaid vnto thee, whereby he ſheweth, ỹ when we come vnto God, we muſt not come vnto him with ſtoutnes & pride,as though he were beholden vnto vs;but we muſt know that we come becauſe he calleth vs. What mortall man will preſume to preſent himſelfe before God & ſay, bind thy ſelfe vnto me, & let vs couenant here togither, yͭ thou wilt be my God,& that I ſhalbe of yͤ number of thy people?Were not men ſtark mad if they ſhoulde preſume to ſpeake ſo vnto God? Now then let vs note,yͭ it is for him to open our mouthes,& to giue vs ſuch warrant.And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſayeth (& that not once only,but with a dubble repetition)that it is God which hath ſpoken. Therefore if men ſhould of their own mind come vnto God & ſay,bind thy ſelfe vnto vs;it were a diueliſh raſhnes:but let vs wait vntil our Lord cal vs. And when it pleaſeth him to offer ſpeech vnto vs, then let vs knowe yͭ it is no preſumption worthy to bee condemned to ſay,wel Lord,ſeeing we know thy wil,we will vſe the liberty which thou offereſt vnto vs.That is the maner of proceeding which wee muſt obſerue when we come vnto God. But herein wee ſee how the wretched world hath bin blinded wͭ horrible abuſes.When we ſpeake of the certeintie of our ſaluation, the Papiſtes ſay it is a preſumptuouſnes:& that we muſt always ſtande in ſuſpence & dout of it. Their beleefe is , that no man ought to aſſure himſelf of his ſaluation,but that he ſhould only weene & ſuppoſe it.Neither is it yͤ ignoranteſt ſort which ſpeake thus;but it is the reſolute determination of all their diueliſh ſchooles. But in the meane while what do they? Euery of thẽ bindeth God at his own pleaſure: and looke what they haue forged & deuiſed, yͭ wil they haue God to admit for good, although he neuer ſpake word of it. Theſe are two extremities which are too exceſſiue.For on yͤ one ſide the Papiſts ſtand always in dout ſaying,I cannot tel in what caſe I am with God: in deed I thinke I ſtand in his fauor,but I know not how yͤ matter goeth. And what is the cauſe[why they vſe ſuch maner of ſpeaches?] Forſooth they are afrayde of preſumptuouſnes. Is it preſumptuouſnes to hang wholly vpon the goodnes of God;& to doe him the honor to beleeue his worde; and to anſwere Amen, as ſoone as he ſpeaketh;and to account al theſe things vtterly vnfallible? Is that preſumptuouſnes? Nay, it is rather true obedience; & obedience importeth humblenes. In deede there is in this behalf a kind of boldneſſe; and S.Paul alſo ioyneth thoſe two togither in 3. Chap. to the Epheſians, ſaying, By faith which we haue in Chriſt Ieſus, wee haue truſt giuen vs with boldnes & hardines to come vnto God.

Epheſ.3.12.

Faith therfore engẽdreth boldnes:but this boldnes proceedeth not of pryde;but rather thereby we learn our humblenes in that we receiue quietly that which God telleth vs, & accept it,as a thing wherof we ought not to dout. That is the firſt extremitie , which raigneth too too ſhamefully among the Papiſts.But what do they in the meane time? They haue their deuotions euery man after his own fancie. I wil do this , & I will do that.I muſt win heauen; I muſt make ſatisfaction for my ſinnes in ſuch wiſe & ſuch . God is iuſt,& think we that ſeeing he is iuſt, he wil deny vs our hyre when wee ſhall haue ſerued him? And although we ſerue him not in full perfectnes,yet he wil like of that which wee ſhal doe, or elſe he ſhould be cruel & vniuſt, if he ſhould not accept of our ſeruice:and if there be any default in it,we wil make an amends for it: for we haue meanes to ſatisfie him.Nay we wil do more than he hath cõmanded vs; wee wil take vppon vs to keepe his law,but yet wil wee haue ſome farther deuotion in ſtore , & it cannot bee but yͭ all this muſt be taken into our accounts;for whatſoeuer is done vpon a good intent cannot be bad: neither ought God alſo to reiect it.See how the Papiſts plead with God , not onely as with their match,but alſo as with ſome little play fellow:& if he like not of al yͭ they do, & account it good, he ſhalbe condemned although he declare that he diſliketh of it al & ſay,I wil not put it into my account; Deceiue not your ſelues,it is vtter abomination vnto me. No ſir(ſay they) you will like of it welynough for al that; you cannot but accept of it, ſeeing we think it to be good. After that maner do the Papiſts talke. In deede they wil not vſe thoſe very woordes;but yet is it the very effect of their doctrine,without adding one ſyllable thereunto. And ſurely it is a diueliſh preſumption, when men take ſo highly vpon them as to make God beleeue that whatſoeuer they haue deuiſed,is good,& that he muſt needes receiue it: & againe,when they wil binde him vnto them,as who would ſay , God will receiue me, I haue purchaſed yͤ kingdom of heauen, I muſt be receiued thereinto for my deſert , & if God will not admit me for his pities ſake,yet muſt he do it for his iuſtice ſake : for it is not his ſimple mercie that I ſtande vnto,I will not bee ſaued by his mere grace,but I will haue him to take mine account , and as he ſhall find me worthy , ſo let him deale by me . See how the deuil bewraieth himſelfe, and lifteth vp his horns againſt God. But wee for our part are taught heere an other leſſon . For Moſes ſaith it is the Lord which hath ſayd it . And he doth expreſly repete this kinde of ſpeach to do vs to vnderſtand,that it is not for vs to ſue God or to make any couenãt with him: but he muſt firſt call vs and we muſt ſtand aloofe without preacing to come at him , vntill he of his owne good will do ſeeke vs . Notwithſtanding yͭ we be thus ſhaken off,our God telleth vs that he will haue acquaintance with vs , and yͭ although we haue bin his mortal enimies, yet hereafter we ſhalbe of his houſhold . And that wheras we haue bin bondſlaues to ſatan & holden captiue vnder the bondage of death; he will make vs his children & heires. Doth our Lorde once ſay ſo ? O then there remaineth nothing for vs to doe but to come vnto him ; for then haue wee leaue & libertie to ſet our ſelues forward.But here there is nothing of our owne: all is becauſe we are called from aboue,yea,euen of his meere grace,ſo as wee bring nothing . It is not ſaid,becauſe thou haſt done this or that, or becauſe God hath founde in thee ſome cauſe why he ſhould ſhew thee ſuch fauour. No, but according as he hath ſpoken , according as the Lorde hath ſaid it. The purpoſe of God therefore fore muſt haue all the preheminence in this caſe. And when he hath decreede yͤ thing in him ſelfe, & openeth his holy mouth to declare his will vnto vs; then let vs accept of it, let vs take there our ſure grounding, & let vs depend wholy thereupon; let vs not bring with vs our owne flickering fancies; but let vs onely walke as the Lorde hath directed vs by his hande, and as hee himſelfe hath declared vnto vs. And when wee haue ſuch humbleneſſe as to haue skill to confeſſe, yͭ vntil God drawe neare vnto vs, we are far off from the hope of ſaluation: then ought boldnes to follow, & to keepe his courſe & way; & we muſt come vnto that which is here declared by Moſes: This day thou haſt made the Lorde thy God to ſpeake. Therfore when wee haue this warrant of the fatherly loue which god beareth vnto vs; thē may we make him to ſpeak. For do we any thing elſe in al our prayers, than charge God with his promiſes? In deede wee come not to pray as the heatheniſh ſort of mē do, & as al thoſe do which are vnpatient, when they come vnto God: for if he grant them not their requeſt at yͤ firſt chop they defy him. But wee come not to pray after yͤ maner: for we proteſt on the contrary, that his wil ought to be done. But yet notwithſtanding we cannot pray vnto God, but we muſt ſay, Lord thou oweſt vs nothing, but that which thou haſt promiſed vs. Neuerthelatter wheras thou dideſt not owe vs any thing, thou haſt bound thy ſelfe vnto vs of thine owne good will, wherein thou ſheweſt thy ſelfe moſt liberal: and therefore our comming as now is vppon truſt of thy promiſes to pray thee to perform them. Seeing then that in all our prayers we alleage vnto God the couenant & contract which he hath made with vs, by that meanes we make him [as it were] to ſpeake, & to ſay that hee is our God. And vnder this ſpeach (as I haue already told you) all the good things which wee can hope for, or wiſh for, are contained. For ſeeing yͭ God giueth himſelfe ſo vnto vs, what can we farther deſire? Is not he the fountaine of al wiſedome, righteouſnes, vertue, life, ioy, & glorie? Is there any good thing to bee deſired, which we may not find in our God? Al yͤ euer he hath is ours: he communicateth himſelf ſo vnto vs, yͭ he will haue vs partakers of al thoſe good things which are in himſelf; not yͭ we haue yͤ ful poſſeſſion of them at the firſt, but that wee poſſeſſe thē by hope, vntil yͤ day that the fruit of them ſhalbe layd open vnto vs. Now therfore let vs marke wel, yͭ when we are once taught in yͤ word of the goſpel, thē we may make our God to ſpeake, then wee may come familiarly vnto him, & require him to ſhew himſelf ſuch an one as he hath always promiſed to be: and let vs aſſure our ſelues that we ſhal not be diſappointed, when he hath once giuen vs the warrant of his loue, which is more than if we had al the deedes of record in the world. And in this caſe we need not to ſeeke for notaries or ſignets or mennes ſeales, we haue yͤ bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, which is yͤ ſeale of this couenant that God hath made with vs, declaring yͭ he is our God. Alſo we haue the holy ghoſt, by whome the promiſe is better warranted vnto vs, yea, euen in our harts. And ſo we ſee now, that it is not for nought, that Moſes hath ſo magnified this greate goodnes which God vſeth towardes vs, & this priuiledge which he giueth vs in drawing vs vnto himſelfe, & in chooſing vs to be of his houſe, and of his church. But we muſt alwayes haue an eye vnto yͤ end for which our Lord graunteth vs this libertie, to wit, that he alſo may be at a point with vs & haue vs for his people. For if we be not anſwerable on our part with our obedience: is there any reaſon that he ſhould keep his promiſe, when we haue broken the league? In deede he muſt be faine alwayes to fight againſt our ſtubbornnes & to ouercome it: for we are euery day vnfaithful vnto him, and hee continueth faithfull vnto vs; but howſoeuer the worlde goeth, yet when wee reiect his couenant, and let light by it thorough our wicked life, wee may not looke that hee ſhoulde bee any longer bounde vnto vs. For why? For hee is become our God vppon this condition, yͭ we alſo ſhoulde be his people. And how ſhall wee be his people? It is not by ſaying ſimply with our mouth, Wee are the people of God: for the verieſt hypocrites will boaſt as much as that; yea, and they bee ſo farre paſt ſhame, that they will needs occupy the chiefeſt places and hyeſt roomes in the church: but wee muſt ſhewe by our deedes, that we are the people of God, in that we obey him, hearkening to the voyce of that ſhepeheard which he hath giuen vnto vs, When wee liue quietly vnder the guyding of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; then do wee make certaine proofe that wee keepe the couenant of our God, without falſifying of the faith which wee promiſed vnto him. And in this ſenſe hath Moſes ſpoken it. So then foraſmuch as the Goſpel is preached vnto vs, let vs knowe that our Lorde draweth ſo nigh vnto vs, as hee deſireth nothing but that wee ſhoulde bee as it were gathered vnder his winges. And here withall let vs conſider the contentes or ſubſtance of this doctrine which wee haue touched, namely, that our Lorde hauing ſought vs out, giueth him ſelfe vnto vs, yea, and that in ſuch wiſe, as that hee is after a ſorte bounde as it were by ſolemne couenant; by reaſon whereof wee may freely come vnto him, and require him to perfourme his promiſes. And after that rule ought al our prayers to bee directed. But therewithal let vs alſo vnderſtande, on what condition it is that hee is ſo bounde vnto vs. For when we be once bounde after that faſhion; if wee make little reckoning of ſo ineſtimable a benefite, or if wee reiect it and diſdayne it; thinke wee that ſuch contempt of ours ſhall remayne vnpuniſhed? Woe bee vnto them therefore which haue the knowledge of the Goſpell, and vnto whome GOD hath ſo communicated him ſelfe, if they bee not aunſwerable thereunto in true obedience, and humbleneſſe, and ſubmit not themſelues vnto him, and that in ſuch ſorte, as they may ſhewe by their deedes euen in their whole lyfe, that they holde him for their God, and bee alſo of his flocke, that is to ſay, yͭ they bee willing to giue them ſelues fully and wholly vnto him.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſty of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them more and more, and that in ſuch wiſe, as that beeing beaten down in our ſelues, we may receiue that remedie which he offereth vnto vs: that is, to be renewed by his holy ſpirit. And moreouer to imprint in our hearts the certeintie of his promiſes which are contained in his worde, ſo as wee may not dout but that if we hang vpon him, hee wil ſhew himſelfe our ſauiour euen vnto ẏ ende, and that as hee hath once redeemed vs by the death and paſſion of his only ſon, ſo if we haue our truſt ſettled on him, he wil neuer forſake vs, but haue a care of the gouerning of vs, in ſuch ſort that hee will not ſuffer the thinges to periſh which he hath committed to the keeping of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, but preſerue them all ſafe vntil the latter day. And ſo let vs ſay. Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xxvii. of Februarie, 1556.

The CXLIX. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the ſeuen and twentith Chapter.

18 19 And the Lord hath ſet thee:

The xxvii. Chapter.

THen Moſes with the Elders of Iſrael charged the people ſaying, Keepe all the commaundementes, which I commaund you this day.

2 And when ye be paſſed ouer Iordan into the land which the Lord thy God giueth thee, thou ſhalt ſet thee vp great ſtones, and plaiſter thē with plaiſter.

3 And ſhalt write vpon them all the wordes of this lawe when thou art come ouer, that thou maiſt go into the land which the Lord thy God giueth thee: a land that floweth with milke and hony, as the Lord God of thy fathers hath promiſed thee.

4 Therefore when ye are paſſed ouer Iordan, ye ſhal ſet vp theſe ſtones which I command you this day in mount Ebal, & thou ſhalt plaiſter them with plaiſter.

5 And there ſhalt thou buyld an altar vnto the Lorde thy God, euen an altar of ſtones: vpon which ſtones thou ſhalt lift vp no yron toole.

6 Thou ſhalt make the altar of the Lord thy God, of whole ſtones, and offer burnt offrings thereon vnto the Lord thy God.

7 And thou ſhalt offer peace offrings, & eat there, & reioyce before the Lorde thy God.

8 And thou ſhalt write vpō the ſtones al the words of this law wel & plainly.

9 And Moſes & the Prieſts ẏ Leuites ſpake vnto all Iſrael ſaying, take heede & heare O Iſrael; this day thou art become the people of the Lord thy God.

10 Thou ſhalt hearken therefore vnto the voyce of the Lord thy God, and do his commandements & his ordinances which I command thee this day.

IN yeſterdayes Lecture Moſes hauing exhorted ẏ people to ſerue God, declared ẏ the couenant which hee hadde made with them was to their great profite. For the more that God beſtoweth on vs, the more particularly are we, (if wee bee not voyde of all ſenſe and reaſon) bound to giue our ſelues ouer wholly vnto him. But yet for all that, though wee ſee that God is ſo liberall towardes vs, are wee mooued to offer our ſelues in obedience vnto him? [Noe verily]. For this cauſe Moſes ſayde vnto the Iewes: that they were choſen to bee in praiſe, in name, and in glorie, as people ſhouled out from the reſt of the world vnto God. Wheras ſome expound this, that they were in praiſe & glorie, to the end ẏ God might be globe glorified: it is a harde & forced expoſition. The thing they ſay is in deed true in it ſelf, as it is ſaid often times in yͤ holy ſcripture, that God had choſen this people for his own name, as the end wherunto he hath created al things. And yͤ church was builded ſpecially to the intent that the name of God ſhould be exalted, as it is ſayd Eſa.43.7. in the Prophet Eſay: & as S. Paul alſo leadeth vs

Ephes.1.6. vnto the ſame conſideratiō in the firſt Chapter to the Epheſians, where he treateth of yͤ thing more at large. Therfore it is true in it ſelf yͤ God adopted the Iewes to the intent yͤ they might know his exceeding fauour & goodnes, & that yͤ glorie which was due vnto him therefore might be yelded vnto him. But in this place Moſes had an eye vnto yͤ which we haue alreadie touched, to wit, that yͤ people might be the more moued & enflamed to diſcharge their ducties, becauſe God hath called them for none other reaſō, but to vtter foorth the infinite treaſures of his mercies. And therfore he ſaith: Thy God hath placed thee this day in honor & in renoune, & in glorie, according to this which hath bin ſaid afore in the fourth Chapter, What nation is ſo noble and of Deut.4.33. ſuch dignitie, which hath his God ſo neere vnto him, as thy God hath made himſelf familiar vnto thee, to gouerne thee? This then was a dignitie which God had vouchſafed vppon yͤ Iewes aboue the reſt of all the world. And it ought to haue bin a cauſe to ſtirre them vp ſo much the more to bee obedient vnto the will & worde of God. And in deede if all be wel conſidered, wee ſhal finde that God can hope for nothing at our hands, nor receiue any thing of vs, but that wee hold al things of him. I pray you, when we haue taken neuer ſo great paines to exalt the name of God; ſhall it bee any whit increaſed thereby? What is it that we do vnto him? Surely, wee of our owne nature cannot but blaſpheme his name, and wee are the cauſe why it is blaſphemed: and if hee will drawe any good out of vs, hee himſelfe muſt firſt put it in vs. But when God hath once graunted vs the grace to glorifie him, doe wee bring any thing vnto him; or doth hee receiue any profite of vs? Doutles no. Yet in the meane time he powreth out his benefites, ſo as wee holde all of him, as I haue alreadie tolde you. So then not without cauſe doeth Moſes declare vnto the Iewes, that they were called to glorie, to renoune, and to praiſe, to the ende hee might vpbrayd them with their vnthankefulneſſe, if they enforced not themſelues wͭ all their power to ſerue God; who ſhewed him ſelfe ſo liberall towardes them. And this toucheth vs alſo nowe adayes. For ſeeing it pleaſeth God to imprint his image in vs; is it not a preheminence which hee giueth vnto vs aboue all the creatures in the worlde, to be called vnto the company of the Angels, and to bee members of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt? Foraſmuch then as hee ſo preuenteth vs with his goodnes; what remaineth but that wee ſhoulde giue our ſelues wholly vnto him, and ſhewe, that ſeeing hee hath filled vs with his glorie, wee will not cauſe his name to bee ſet light by, nor the doctrine of ſaluation which hee hath giuen vs, to be reproched, that the vnfaithfull ſhould make a ſcorne of it? Let vs therefore giue all diligēce hereunto: as we ſee we be warned in this place. And that is the verie thing alſo whereat Moſes aimeth when he addeth: That when the people hauing paſſed Iordan ſhall come into the lande which was promiſed vnto them, and haue it in full poſſeſſion, they ſhall then ſet vp great ſtones, and write vpon them an abridgement of the lawe. And ſecondly that they ſhal erect alſo an altar, to giue thanks vnto god, and to teſtifie that hee had fulfilled the promiſe which hee had made in former time vnto their fathers. This (I ſay) is the intent & meaning of Moſes, namely that yͤ people ſhould not only for one time giue thanks vnto God, but that they ſhould do it afreſh when they come into yͤ lande which was promiſed vnto them: and that they ſhould ratifie that which they had before confeſſed, yͭ is, that they owed al homage vnto God for that land, becauſe it was giuen vnto them of his free beſtowed goodnes, & not gottē by their own power, not befalne vnto them by any kind of chaunce, or by the gift or helpe of men.

But we haue to note the maner & faſhion of yͤ ſpeach which Moſes vſeth; he ſaith, That he & the Elders of Iſrael commanded the people ſaying, Doe that which I command thee. I grant that this might be referred vnto Moſes, becauſe he was yͤ chiefe ſeruant of God in publiſhing of the law; but it is certaine yͭ both he & the Elders ſpeak in yͤ name & as it were in the perſon of God. And yet it would ſeeme at the firſt bluſh that this ſentence were not wel framed. Moſes and the Elders ſay vnto the people, Do that which I command thee: but they are many, & yet here is mention made but of one alone. Yea, but (as I haue alredy told you) it was requiſite that yͤ Iewes ſhould be taught yͭ theſe things proceeded not from men but from God, who ſpake by their mouth. Wee ſee then yͭ Moſes and the Elders come not heere in their owne perſons as attributing any thing to their owne worthineſſe, neither ſtep they foorth vppon their owne heads, ne to charge the people with any lawes: but were the inſtrumentes of God to deale foorth faithfully whatſoeuer was committed vnto them. Nowe if Moſes which was the excellenteſt of all Phophets (as we ſhall ſee hereafter) did neuertheleſſe reſtrayne him- Deut.34.10. ſelfe with ſuch modeſtie, that he vſurped not the authoritie to ſpeake any thing in his owne name: what ſhall we ſay of them which gouern the Church nowadayes? Wil they ſay that they exceede Moſes? Let vs note then that Paſtors are not appointed to ſet foorth whatſoeuer doctrine ſhall ſeeme good vnto themſelues, nor to bring mennes ſoules in ſubiection and bondage to them; nor to make lawes and articles of faith at their owne pleaſure: but onely to bring to paſſe that God may beare rule, and that his worde may bee harkened vnto. Let that bee noted for one poynt. Wee ſee then that all the traditions of men which are nowe adayes in the Popedome in ſteede of the pure worde of God, are but vaine things: and that they muſt bee all beaten downe, and that the true gouernement which God liketh of, muſt be eſtabliſhed againe in his Church: that is, that men hearken vnto him, that they ſubmit themſelues vnto him, that both great and ſmall receiue that which is deliuered in his name, & that men paſſe no farther. Let this be wel noted. But withal wee muſt alſo note, that when they which are appointed miniſters of the word of God, do their office faithfully; then they may ſpeake with maſterly authoritie, as they ſay. And in deede we heare how Moſes with the reſt of the Elders ſayeth, I commaunde thee this day, keepe my ſtatutes. It is not for a mortal creature to aduance himſelf ſo hy: no, but becauſe Moſes bringeth nothing of his own, but is a faithful miniſter of God, & doth nothing but expound the law euen as it is giuen & committed vnto him, therefore hee ſticketh not to ſpeake as from an high, as one hauing all power & authoritie. Therefore when we bring nothng but the pure doctrine of God without falſifying of it, or without adding any thing thereunto of our owne: then may wee bring into captiuitie all the loftineſſe of men as S.Paul ſayth, 2.Cor.10.4. ſo as no man may exempt himſelfe from the doctrine which is put forth vnto him, but that euen they which are the greateſt muſt ſubmit themſelues vnto it. The ſeruants of god then muſt ſo behaue themſelues as they may not be of a fearful mind 1.Tim.1.7. to yeeld to the world whē it rebelleth, & wil not be willingly ſubdued: but that they muſt holde their own with inuincible conſtancie, challenging to their maſter the honor of ſoueraintie, & the ouerruling of al the world. This is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde concerning this place.

But let vs come now vnto yͭ which is ſaid. The Iewes are commanded, To gather great ſtones, & to whitelime them ouer, & ſo to engraue the law of god vpon them, that the letters might be eaſily read, & ſecondly they are commanded To buyld an altar on the hil of Hebal, & there to ſacrifice vnto God. As touching yͤ altar we haue already ſaid, yͭ it was a ſpecial witnes of yͤ peoples doing homage vnto god for yͤ land which they knewe they helde of him. For in deed yͤ law was there ingraued, to yͤ intēt yͭ the remembrance thereof ſhould be renewed, & that yͤ doctrine therof ſhold be laid open and made cōmon vnto al men; & yͭ at their firſt entrance into yͤ land they might haue a marke to put them in mind, to ſay: This is a land dedicated vnto God. And like as princes ſet vp their armes & their enſignes in yͤ endes & borders of their ſeignories & kingdoms: euen ſo yͤ armes of God were ſet vp in yͤ place, that men might ſee not a puppet or ſome ſuch other thing: but yͤ law of God written, to the intent yͭ men might ſay, Behold it is the liuing God that hath dedicated this people vnto himſelf, & choſen them for his ſeruice, yͭ he might be honored & called vpō of thē. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to beare in mind. But before we paſſe any farther, let vs conſider why it is ſaide yͭ they ſhall not make or buyld yͤ altar of carued or pulliſhed ſtones, and yͭ they muſt not lift vp an hammer or any other toole vpon it, but yͭ the ſtones muſt be taken as they come to hand, without any fitting of them, by reaſon wherof it ſhold be but as a rude heap. This place hath without cauſe much troubled many men, neither could they in the ende finde out yͤ meaning of it without ſome allegory, ſaying, yͭ when God commanded to haue the altar made of rough & vnhewen ſtones, it was to ſhew yͭ he taketh no pleaſure in any inuentions of mē, & that he will haue no curious workmanſhip in his altar, to the intent we ſhould be warned, yͭ to ſerue him aright wee muſt make no mingling wͭ our own deuiſes, as in deede we ſee it is not lawful for mē to forge at their own pleaſure any ſeruice of God, for he liketh of obedience aboue al things: & ſo this ſenſe of theirs is in it ſelf true, but it is nothing to the meaning of the place. Moſes hath an eye vnto another thing, to wit, that there ſhold be but one altar to ſacrifice vnto God. And in verie deede wee ſee that when yͤ two trybes & the halfe were returned home after yͤ conqueſt of the land of Chanaan, & had erected an altar, Ioſua.22. they were in danger to haue bin vtterly deſtroyed & rooted out for it. For when newes therof came to the reſt of yͤ Tribes, they ſayd: What meaneth this making of a double altar vnto God? And therupon they went al forth to battel to deſtroy yͤ Tribes which dwelt beyōd Iordan, & to put them to horrible ſlaughter: and that was becauſe God had cōmanded, that they ſhould make but one only altar. And the reaſon hereof was to maintaine the vnitie of faith & agreement among yͤ Iewes. We know yͭ although yͤ law containe the perfect doctrine of ſaluation: yet notwithſtanding it faileth not to be darke, as we haue alreadie ſeene. Therefore it behoued yͤ Iewes to be as it were inured to yͤ doctrine, that they might not wander. For wee ſee how fickle mē are, ſo as they be eaſily turned aſide to make diuerſe ſects, & euery man hath his deuotion a part by himſelf. God therefore minding to preuent that miſchiefe, wherunto he ſaw men ouermuch giuen by nature, would there ſhoulde bee but one ſingle altar. But now if they ſhould haue made an altar of hewen & ſquared ſtones, it would haue laſted for euer. And what would mē haue ſaid hereupon? This is the altar whereon they ſacrificed vnto God. And thereuppon they would haue thought it to haue beene a ſeruing of God to haue ſacrificed there ſtill: and they which ſucceeded a long time after, woulde haue thought that the ſacrifices which had been offered there, would haue been of the more worthines, and that had beene an ouerthrowing of the order which God had eſtabliſhed among that people: it had bin the next way to bring in a general confuſion. We ſee what befel of the hil of Samaria, as the woman which ſpake to our Lord Iohn 4.20. Ieſus Chriſt declareth. What? (ſaith ſhe) did not our fathers ſacrifice on this mountaine? Becauſe Abraham, Iſaac, & Iacob had dwelt there, yͤ Samaritans bare themſelues in hand yͭ their tēple was more excellent & more holy than yͤ temple of Ieruſalem. Yea: but it was built againſt yͤ wil of God, it was an heatheniſh place, it was more ful of filthines & vncleanes than any brothelhouſe. Not but yͭ the people had thought they did wel, but we muſt alwais conſider whether god liketh of that which we do: if he do not, wo be vnto vs.

So then because men will needes without reaſon followe the examples which they heare, it was requiſite that there ſhould be no altars made of pulliſhed ſtones, for they would haue remained in their eſtate, & there would haue bin ſacrifices offered. Nowe ye ſee what abhominations proceeded therof in Iſrael, Ieroboam intending to 1.Kin.12.28 maintain his eſtate, erected an altar in Bethel, & wold haue God worſhipped there, & ſacrifices to be offred there vnto him. He ſayth vnto thẽ, wel, behold, we ſacrifice vnto God, which brought vs out of the land of Egypt. He proteſteth yͭ he will ſerue no Idols, & yet notwithſtanding he ſerueth thẽ. Yea verily: for it was Gods will to haue his temple built in Ieruſalẽ where it was, & we haue ſeen heretofore yͭ he reſerueth the authority vnto himſelf to ſay: Thou ſhalt call vpon me in that place which I haue choſẽ to haue my name called vpon there. For it is not for men to ſay, let vs
Deut.16.2. worſhip God in this place; but they muſt keepe thẽſelues vnto yͭ which he hath cõmãded in that behalfe. Ieroboã therfore in making a ſecond tẽple brought the ſeruice of god wholy out of kind. He corrupted & falſified yͤ true religion. In deed he made a faire proteſtatiõ (as I haue told you) yͭ he wold change nothing in the ſeruice of God: but we ſee what the meaning of God is; namely yͭ when they were come into yͤ lande of promiſe, they ſhould ſacrifice vnto him on the hill of Hebal, & there ſet vp an altar wͭ ſuch ſtones as came next vnto their hands, wͭout vſing any workmãſhip, to the intent it might be aboliſhed & that no mention ſhould remaine of it, to drawe yͭ into an euerlaſting rule which was done but for one time onely.

Now albeit that this Ceremonie ſerue not vs nowadaies: yet may we gather a very profitable doctrine of this place. And firſt of all let vs note that we muſt not ground ourſelues vpon yͭ which God hath cõmanded for a certaine time, as if it ought to be obſerued for euer. For vnder the law it was Gods wil yͭ men ſhold ſacrifice bruit beaſts vnto him; but nowadaies there is no ſuch thing. He required yͭ there ſhould be perfumes made, and lights ſet vp, & fire alwayes burning vpõ the altar. Theſe thinges are now done away, & if any man renew thẽ, they are but dung as we ſee how they are yet vſed in popery. When the Papiſtes côm & perfume their idols noſes, they beare thẽſelues in hand, yͭ it is an acceptable ſacrifice vnto God. And when they haue cõſumed much waxe on their torches & tapers & candles, O here is a wonderous great deuotion thinke they. And yet it is but a meere mocking of God. For it was his will to be ſo ſerued vnder the law: But if we ſhold now go & inlighten the ſun, yͭ is to ſay, if now after the cõming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt into the world, we ſhould yet ſtil vſe thoſe lights as in the night & in the darke; it were a peruerting of the whole order of nature. The antient fathers walked vnder darke ſhadowes & therfore they ſtood in neede of thoſe aydes. And when they had a light, it was to ſhewe them, yͭ they came not to worſhip God at all aduentures, or at randon. but that they were guided & directed by the word of God, & by his holy ſpirit. And ſo they were held brideled, to the intent they ſhould not preſume vpon any thing on their own fancies. But as now we haue no need of al theſe things: for why? The vaile of yͤ temple is rent in ſunder; & god ſheweth Matt.27.51 vs his face in yͤ goſpel, euen in yͤ perſõ of his ſon, ſo as we may now walk as at noone day. So then let vs conſider what is euerlaſting & what is but for a time; yͭ we make no fond & fooliſh confuſiõ ne do as the papiſts do. For yͭ is the fountain frõ whence ſo many ſuperſtitions haue riſen. When the Papiſtes baptiſe, they take ſpettle. And why? Forſooth becauſe Ieſus Chriſt did ſo. Yea but wold he haue it drawen into conſequence & that men ſhould make a rule of it, and yͭ his miracle ſhould be mocked at in baptiſme? Wil they make a young infant to ſpeake, by their ſpitting vpon his lips? Againe, they haue the annealing of the ſicke, and yͭ is a ſacrament with them. And why? Forſooth the Apoſtles vſed oyle when they healed yͤ ſicke. Yea, but yͭ gift ſerued but for yͤ begining of the goſpell, & now after yͭ we know yͭ miracles are ſeaſed, will we vſe the ſignes ſtill? Is not yͭ a mocking of God? By like then, the truth & ſubſtance of things muſt depart & the ſigne muſt remaine; yͭ were a goodly matter. Again, they haue retained other like things, as is lent. This is the faſt yͭ is to be kept, ſay the Papiſtes. The reaſon forſooth is, becauſe Ieſus Chriſt faſted. Yea, but did he which is yͤ fountaine of all perfection, and the mirror of all holines faſt euery yere? No: he faſted but once in his life. The Papiſts ſay yͭ wee muſt faſt euery yeere, and yͭ there is great deuotion & holines therin. Yea, but therin they would exceed Ieſus Chriſt. But in deed it is a diuiliſh ſuperſtition, to faſt 40. dais after yͭ maner, vpõ opiniõ yͭ by this means we may make ourſelues like Matt.4.2. to Chriſt. For we know yͭ our Lord Ieſus ment to 1.King 19.8
ſhew thereby, yͭ he was then exẽpted frõ al condition of man, as the ſame was done in Elias by miracle, & likewiſe in Moſes, when hee publiſhed the law. And did yͤ Iewes follow Moſes and Elias therein? Or did any of ſo many holy prophets euer faſt yͭ faſt? No: for they knewe wel it was not cõmanded thẽ of God, and yͭ he made no cõmon rule of it, nor would haue yͭ thing drawen into example which he had once ordained for yͤ authoriſing of his law. So then we ſee yͭ it is very profitable to conſider what God hath for one onely time cõmanded, to the intent we peruert not al, nor deſire without any difference to do whatſoeuer is contained in yͤ holy ſcripture, wͭout knowing firſt whether it concerne vs & be ſpoken vnto vs or no. This is one point to be noted.

A ſecond point to be obſerued is yͭ we ought, as much as we may poſſibly to maintaine vnitie & agreemẽt among vs; as ſhal by & by be declared. It was Gods will there ſhould be no mo temples but one. And why? To yͤ intent it ſhold be as a bond to hold the people together in yͤ purenes and ſoundneſſe of faith. We haue one only God which is called vpon among vs, wee muſt come into one certaine place to ſacrifice vnto him, all of vs muſt there gather ourſelues together. It is true in deede yͭ we are not nowadaies tyed vnto any ſuch bondage; but howſoeuer it be, yet yͤ ſubſtance is remaining ſtill vnto vs. Let vs therfore take heede vnto all thoſe ayds which we haue to holde vs in this communion of faith, and in this vnitie which God requireth, let vs keepe them well, and let no man turne aſide from them. And as touching the outwarde order, we kno we that our Lorde Ieſus chriſt would haue men to aſſemble them ſelues together. I graunt wee are not bound to be al in one place, & mē alſo preach in diuers churches of one toune. And why? Bicauſe al the worlde can not heare one ſermon: but yet for all that, becauſe of our ſlowneſſe wee are ſo bounde that we muſt gather our ſelues together in the name of God. He that wil keepe him ſelfe in his howſe, deſpiſing the cōmon order, and will ſay, I can reade at home & edifie my ſelfe ſufficiētly there: ÿ man aſmuch as in him lieth breaketh in ſunder ÿ vnitie of faith & teareth in pieces the body of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. We know ÿ baptiſme was ordained to ÿ intent it ſhould be as a cōmon ſeale ÿ we are the church of God, & are gouerned with his ſpirit. Now if euery man wil haue his baptiſme a part, what a wicked diſorder were it? The holy ſupper of ÿ Lord alſo is diſtributed as a cōmon food to ÿ intent we ſhould all cōmunicat of it. We are warned by it that we are one body. And as one loafe is made of many graines of corne, which are ſo mingled together ÿ they make but one ſubſtāce; euen ſo ought we to be knit together, if we will be accoūted for the children of God. Therefore if euery man ſhould haue his priuate ſupper, were it not a ẘdrawing of ourſelues frō the agreement & brotherhoode which Ieſus Chriſt would haue vs to keepe? In Popery euery mā muſt haue his altar & his chappell. Yea & they were of opinion, that God was much bound vnto thē for ſo doing. There ſhould haue bin one cōmō table (for I wil not ſay ÿ they haue turned ÿ cōmunion table into an altar to ſacrifice vpō, which thing in it ſelf is a diueliſh abhominatiō) but in ÿ meane time although they retain the word, yet wil they not haue a cōmon table for all the church. For euery man thruſteth in himſelf to ſay, O I wil haue a chappel, & there I will haue my deuotion by my ſelfe. When men be come to ÿ point, it is an horrible waſting of the Church of God; & the building of ſo manie ſeueral altars hath bin ÿ cauſe of the bringing in of ſo many ſectes & diuiſions. Although ÿ papiſts had placed no Idols in their churches, & althogh they had not ſuch a nūber of ſuperſtitiōs & Idolatries as wee ſee they haue; yet in doing of this one thing they haue broken ÿ vnity which chriſt hath ſolemnly ſet betweene his mēbers, & in the whole Church. What muſt we do then? Let vs indeuor to keepe ourſelues in brotherly agreement and vnder the ſignes & tokens which God hath giuen vs, and let vs continue therein, and make al thoſe meanes which he hath giuen vs, to ſerue vnto that ende. That is the doctrine which we haue to gather vpon this place.

But let vs returne now vnto ÿ which we ſayde in the beginning; that is, ÿ God hath here required of his people a ſolemne acknowledgement, how much they were bound vnto him. We are therſore exhorted to acknowledge ÿ benefits of God, yea & to occupy ourſelues therein, ſo as we neuer forget thē. The people in deed had already giuen thanks vnto God after they were come out of Egypt, in the wildernes, where they ſacrificed continually vnto him, but yet after they are paſſed ouer Iordā, they muſt begin to giue thāks again. And why? Becauſe mē would alwaies diſcharge their dutie towards God by halues: and they haue ſoone forgotten it, & thinke no longer what they owe vnto God. And ÿ is the cauſe why they muſt be occupied continually in ÿ ſelfſame thing. So then let vs note well, ÿ euen all ÿ time of our life we muſt apply our whole indeuour to magnifie & ſet foorth the name of God. For although we be not lodged in this land of Canaā; yet ÿ fauor of God ought to be aſmuch, or more eſteemed of vs, than ÿ earthly inheritāce which was giuen to ÿ children of Iſrael. For god hauing plucked vs out of the dungeons of death, & out of ÿ bondage of Satan, declareth ÿ we are bleſſed of him, and ÿ we are a roial prieſthood. 1.Pet.2.9. And who is he ÿ can diſcharge himſelfe in magnifying ſo great & ſo ineſtimable a goodnes of God? So thē becauſe we are ſlow & ſlacke to giue ÿ glory vnto God which is belonging vnto him; and becauſe ÿ when we haue once done it, we thinke it ynough & we are loth to do it again; let vs beare in mind this leſſō which is taught vs here, that is, ÿ according as God increaſeth his giftes in vs, & as hee confirmeth & ratifieth them, ſo ought we on our part to be ſo much ÿ more moued & ſtirred vp to yeelde him praiſe, declaring thereby, how much we are bound vnto him, and proteſting ÿ we are wholly his, and ÿ we will dedicate our whole life vnto him. This (ſay I) is ÿ thing which we haue to beare in minde as touching this place, where mention is made of ſacrificing vnto God.

Now after that Moſes hath named The whole burnt offring, he addeth, Thou ſhalt offer alſo the peace offeringes vnto the Lord thy God. Nowe before he ſhewed ÿ the peace offerings ſerued for thanks giuing, ſo as if God had deliuered his people, if he had giuen thē any victorie againſt their enemies, if he had deliuered thē frō famine or any other calamitie; then they ſacrificed, in witnes ÿ this benefit deſerued, not to be forgotten. We ſee then ÿ Moſes aimeth altogether at ÿ which wee haue alredy declared: namely, ÿ the people ſhold make an acknowledgement of this benefit vnto God after ÿ they were come into the land of Canaan. And whereas Moſes ſayth ÿ it was a Land flowing with milke & hony (as we haue already ſeene afore) it is to ÿ intent ÿ the people ſhoulde be the more ſtirred vp to giue glory vnto God, when they ſee ÿ the land was ſo fertill, and that God had ſhewed himſelfe ſo liberall towardes thē. We know ÿ at this day it is not ſo fruitfull a land, neither was it ſo fertill before their cōming thither, and ÿ is a wonderful thing. And yet notwithſtanding ÿ wicked haue taken occaſion hereupon, to blaſpheme, as ÿ wicked heritike which was puniſhed here, mocked both Moſes and the prophets ſaying, ÿ when they praiſed the land of Chanaan, they did but fable. Yea but he ſheweth himſelfe (as all deſpiſers of God & ſuch enraged folke whom Satan poſſeſſeth vſe to do) to skorne Gods benefits which men may ſee ẘ their eyes.

Neither conſidered he, ỹ (as it was ſhewed vnto him, notẘſtanding ỹ he continued in his wilfull ſtubbornnes) God did expreſly threaten to ſowe Pſal.107.34. ſalt vpon ỹ land, that is to ſay, to make it baren: & at this day alſo men ſee it deſolate & waſt. So as it is a dreadfull thing to beholde, what ỹ ſtate of ỹ countrey is at this day, in cõpariſon of ỹ it is knowen to haue bin heretofore. For our Lorde hath ſheweth by effect, ỹ which is ſaid in the 107 Pſal.107.37 Pſalme: namely, ỹ when it pleaſeth him to bleſſe a land with fruitfulnes, it ſhalbe fat & ful of al maner of fruits; and contrarywiſe ỹ when he liſteth to make it barren, it ſhalbe cleane withered. We ſee this to be true in the lande of Chanaan. So then let vs note ỹ Moſes meant to ſhewe heere more particularly the fauour which God ſhewed to his people, in nouriſhing thẽ in ỹ land for the which he made it as a man wold ſay to flow with milke & hony, ſhewing therby ỹ that was done euen by miracle. Now for our part it is true ỹ we ſhall not be fat fed as in reſpect of our bodies: but yet in feeling the ſpirituall benefites which God beſtoweth largely vpõ vs, we ought to be moued & ſtirred vp to this conſideration, that when we haue proteſted as ſolemnely as is poſſible, ỹ wee are his, and ỹ we owe all vnto him; yet we are not diſcharged of the hundredth part of our dutie.

And as touching ỹ which is added cõcerning the great ſtones, wheron God cõmanded his law to be written; according vnto ỹ which wee haue already touched; let vs note, ỹ God ment to hold his people vnder his obedience by al ỹ means he might. For men by reaſon of their infirmitie, had neede to be held in awe: and to be called backe vnto God, to the intẽt they ſwarue not aſide frõ him. I haue already brought a cõpariſon from ỹ armes of Princes; in ſteed whereof God woulde haue his law to be writtẽ. And why? For his lawes are his true armes: & his worde the liuely image wherin we ought to behold him. And ỹ is ỹ cauſe why he ſayth, ye ſhal come & preſent yourſelues before my face, when they preſented thẽſelues before the arke, wherein ỹ law was encloſed. For God would not haue any other ſhape wherby to be repreſented vnto men, than only the cõtinuall inſtruction of his worde, according vnto that Deut.4.12. which we haue already ſeene in the fourth chap. where it is ſaid, remẽber ỹ you ſawe not ỹ ſhape of man, or of any creature whatſoeuer, but you heard the voice of your God. Take heed therfore how ye coũterfeit any thing in this behalf. Now foraſmuch as we haue ỹ vnderſtanding hereof, let vs note ỹ when our Lord vouchſafeth to haue his word preached in any place, and lodgeth vs quietly as it were with his owne hand; it is to the intent we ſhould do him double homage. As many as liue in ỹ worlde & are fed and ſuſtained by God, ought therefore to confeſſe ỹ he is worthie to haue all ſoueraintie ouer them. But ſeeing we haue ſuch a ſpeciall priuilege of God, as to be ſeparated frõ the reſt of the worlde, & to haue his word preached vnto vs, & to haue libertie to call vpon his name purely: ought wee not to enforce ourſelues to do him double homage for it? Surely this ought now adaies to be throughly cõſidered of. For how great fauour doth God ſhewe vs, in that we may vſe his ſacraments with all liberty, and haue our eares euery day filled with the doctrine of ſaluation; ſo as he ceaſeth not to call vs vnto himſelfe? Wee ſee on the other ſide many wretched people which are held in bondage vnder the tyranny of ỹ Pope, & dare not once open their mouth or make ỹ leaſt countenãce of worſhipping God purely, they haue neither churches to reſort vnto, nor any means to be taught: the world ſees this. So then we ought in deede to haue the armes of God, wherby ỹ lawe ſhould be preſented. But we ſee the cleane contrary; for as ſone as any man cõmeth neere vnto vs he ſhold perceiue a wonderful chãge in vs by our ẘdrawing of ourſelues frõ the defilements of the vnbeleuing; but whereas men ſhould ſee ỹ God raigneth & beareth rule among vs, & hath his ſeat & throne with vs; they may ſee vs as looſe in liuing as the very ignoraunteſt in all the worlde, nay a man may ſee ỹ God is defied of ſome of thẽ, vnto whom the goſpell is preached, & that there are worſe diuels & more wicked among thẽ, than in the deepeſt dungeon of poperie. And this deſerueth double woe. For it is not only to the Iewes that Moyſes hath ſpoken, but it is to ſhew vnto all in generall, ỹ as God vouchſafeth vs the fauor to be his, euen ſo we ought to remoue al corruptions frõ among vs, ỹ men may know ỹ we are in deede his people. Yet notwithſtanding, this importeth not ỹ they which liue in popery are to be excuſed. Although they be neuerſomuch threatned, & can not make a free confeſſion of their faith ẘout danger of death: yet they are alwaies guiltie of offending God, in ỹ they haue not honored him. Now if there be no excuſe for them, how great ſhall our condemnation be? For there is nothing to hinder vs from ſeruing of God, ſaue only our owne wickednes & negligence. So then let vs be diligent to diſcharge our duetie, not as touching the outward ceremony of great ſtones which is cõmanded here: but as in reſpect of the thing which God had a ſpecial eye vnto; namely that euery of vs ſhould not only yeeld ourſelues vnto his obedience, & dedicate ourſelues to follow his will; but alſo ỹ with one cõmon accorde, we ſhould ſhewe ỹ he is our ſoueraigne king and that we are vnder his gouernmẽt; and ỹ becauſe he hath plãced vs in ſuch a place where his name is openly called vpon, & where there are Churches for vs to come together to make our cõmõ prayers, & to confeſſe our faith in; we alſo do indeuor to walk in ſuch ſort, as men may in deede know, ỹ thoſe places are not defiled, but reſerued vnto ỹ glory of him who hath choſẽ thẽ to ỹ vſe.

Now for the end & concluſion let vs note that our Lord will not haue his armes blaſed in ſuch ſort as men like of, but ỹ hee will haue his owne Image to be knowen in them: and ỹ is the cauſe why he ſpeketh purpoſly of ỹ law. The words ſaith he, of the lawe. The Papiſtes haue chappels, they haue croſſes, they haue gay paintings, & they bere thẽſelues in hand ỹ God is repreſented by them: but he liketh none of all thoſe thinges. What is to be done then? We muſt returne vnto ỹ word, which is the meane whereby God openeth himſelfe vnto vs, & thereby will he be knowen. Let men therfore content thẽſelues ſimply therwith. Now as touching that which he ſaieth, Let theſe wordes bee well engraued: hereby we are taught, yͭ God gaue not his law for a few people, but ment yͭ it ſhold be a cõmon doctrin vnto al, both great & ſmal, euen to yͤ moſt Idiots: and yͭ all ſhould be inſtructed by it. And if it were ſo in yͤ time of the law, by greater reaſõ ought it nowadaies to be in force among vs. For of the goſpell it is ſaid yͭ it Mar.16, 15. ſhould be preached vnto al creatures. God therfore will not haue his doctrin locked vp, and that none but the clergy ſhould thruſt their noſe into it: but he will haue vs all to be his ſcholers, & the law ſo written, yͭ euery mã may read it. And why? To the intent yͭ all men ſhould receiue inſtructiõ by it. Let none therfore exempt himſelfe frõ the reading of it, as we ſee many do, which ſay, O I am no clerke, I neuer went to ſchoole: it pertaineth not to my occupation. I grant in deed yͭ it is not euery mans occupation to be a teacher. But who may exempt himſelfe frõ being a ſcholer in yͤ word of God? It is all one for a man to renoũce chriſtianity, & to ſay, ô as for me, I know neither A nor B; what can I tel what yͤ law of God or any holy ſcripture meaneth? Neuertheleſſe, yͤ will of God which is declared to vs in his word, is written in letters big ynough, & albeit yͭ noweadaies there be not any heape of ſtones ſet vp for yͤ law of God to be written & engraued thereupon; yet notwͭſtanding our Lord ment to ſhew vnder this figure, yͭ whẽ he hath deliuered his word, it is to yͤ intent yͭ we ſhould be taught, & ordered by it, & yͭ the doctrine thereof ſhould be cõmon vnto al. And truly we haue no leſſe neede to nouriſh our ſoules with yͤ word of God, thã to ſuſtaine our bodies with bread & other daily food. Seeing then it is ſo, let euery of vs labor yͤ way, & let vs be attentiſe to harken vnto our God whẽ he ſpeaketh vnto vs by yͤ mouth of the miniſter; & whẽ we haue his holy ſcripture, let euery man endeuour to be taught by it: they then which haue no skill to reade thẽſelues, let them heare it read, yͭ we may ſhew, yͭ ſeeing our Lorde ſpeaketh vnto vs, we on our ſide are ready to receiue yͭ which he ſhal ſay, & deſire nothing elſe, but to profit vnder him; & yͭ in ſuch ſort, yͭ his word be not only engraued in ſtone & chalke but alſo imprinted in our hartes, ſo as in our whole life we ſeeke to followe it, and giue our ſelues wholely vnto it.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of yͤ great nũber of faules & offences which we ceaſe not to cõmit daily againſt his maieſtie, praying him to make vs feele thẽ better thã we haue done: yͭ we may endeuor to amend thẽ more & more, vntill we be cleane rid of them, and yͭ foraſmuch as we obtaine pardon for thẽ by the meane of our lord Ieſus Chriſt, we may alſo increaſe & be cõfirmed in al righteouſnes & holines, yͭ ſo we may in deed confirme our calling: and yͭ foraſmuch as he hath choſen vs for his people, yͭ it may pleaſe him alſo to withdraw vs frõ al the defilements of yͤ world, ſo as we may be vnto him an holy people in the name of our lord Ieſus Chriſt. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace not only to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Fryday the xxviij. of Februarie, 1556.

The CL. Sermon, which is the ſeconde vpon the ſeuen and twentith Chapter.

11 In that day Moſes commaunded the people, ſaying:

12 Theſe ſhall ſtande vpon mount Garizim to bleſſe the people when ye paſſe ouer Iordan: Simeon, and Leuy, & Iudath, & Iſſachar, & Ioſeph, & Beniamin.

13 And theſe ſhall ſtand vpon mount Eball to curſe Ruben, Gad, and Aſher, and Zebulan, Dan, and Naphtaly.

14 And the Leuits ſhall ſpeak & ſay vnto all yͤ men of Iſrael with a loud voice:

15 Curſed be the man that ſhall make any carued or molten Image, which is an abominatiõ vnto the Lord, the worke of the hands of the crafteſman, & putteth it in a ſecret place: and al the people ſhal aunſwere and ſay: ſo be it.

WE ſaw yeſtarday how God mẽt that the fauour which he ſhewed vnto yͤ people of Iſrael ſhold be reknowledged firſt by ſolẽn ſacrifice, & ſecondly by a monument ſet vp, to the ende yͭ it might be knowen, yͭ this land was not purchaſed by mãs hand or by any power of man, but that it was giuen of God vnto yͤ people for an inheritance. But now we haue an other cõmandement whereby God ment to binde yͤ people vnto him after an other maner. In deede he had done it already; but becauſe men are ſo harde to be tooted, and yͭ they can not be bound with too many bandes & cordes to hold thẽ vnder obedience; it is not without cauſe yͭ God would ad further that which is ſet downe here, to keepe thẽ the better vnder obedience. Wee haue alreadie treated that when God gaue his lawe, it was a mutuall couenaunt: and like as he bounde himſelfe vnto the children of Iſrael to be their God, ſo alſo the people of Iſraell bound thẽſelues to be his people. But here is yet another confirmatiõ added, to ratifie that firſt bonde the better; which is, that God ordained yͭ when they were paſſed ouer Iordan, yͤ people ſhould part thẽſelues in twaine, and that ſixe tribes ſhould keepe thẽſelues vpon the mount of Garizim, and the other ſixe tribes ſhoulde ſtande vppon the hill of Heball right againſt them, ſo as the Arke of the couenant and the prieſts ſhould ſtand in the middeſt, and that they which were on the part of Garizim ſhould bleſſe & thoſe which were on the ſide of Hebal ſhould curſe. Now this curſing & bleſſing is referred vnto ẏ which we ſhall ſee hereafter, which ſhalbe anon touched in this chapter. For God to incourage his people the better, did not only declare vnto thẽ his wil, & ſay, You ſhal walke thus: but alſo added by & by, you ſhall not ſerue me in vaine, your paines ſhall not be loſt: for I wil cauſe you to proſper, it is for your owne welfare that I would haue you to be ſubiect vnto me, I ſeeke after no profit or auantage therby, but it is for your owne benefit & cõmodity, ẏ you ſhold cleaue vnto me, in keeping of my cõmãdements. Lo what bleſſings God gaue, to ẏ intent the people ſhould ſerue him wͭ a willing mind & not through force or conſtraint. Again, becauſe men are ſo ſtifnecked, ẏ they ſtoop not but with much ado, and becauſe on ẏ other ſide their luſts cary thẽ ſo headlong away, that they quickly forget what it is to ſerue God, & play the wild horſes which are broken loſe; here are threatnings added: Take heed how you offend mee, for vengeance is ready for them ẏ deſpiſe my lawe. Thus ſee you what the curſings are which we ſhall ſee more fully in the 28. chap. but Moſes toucheth thẽ here as it were by way of example. Now it were ynough if God had but pronounced & ſaid, Whoſoeuer ſerueth me in keeping my law, he ſhalbe bleſſed, & I will make his whole life proſperous vnto him. Seeing God hath once promiſed to recõpẽce thẽ which ſerue him, it ought wel to ſuffice vs. What neede men to ſpeake in their owne behalfe? Likewiſe ſeeing God pronounceth ſentence of cõdemnation vpon them ẏ tranſgreſſe his law, foraſmuch as ẏ Iudge himſelfe hath ſpoken; no man ought to reply. What neede is there then ẏ we ſhould ratifie ẏ which God hath ſaid, as if his word were not of ſufficient ſtrength & authoritie in it ſelfe? True it is ẏ god deſerueth wel to be harkned vnto, & ẏ thing which he ſaith is as an vnchãgeable decree: but yet he wil haue men by outward witneſſing to allow ẏ which he willeth vs to followe, he will haue vs to acknowledge the fauor which is offered vnto vs, & to declare ẏ we are aſſured by faith, ẏ he will not deceiue vs in promiſing vs proſperitie when we indeuour to liue according to his word. God therefore will haue vs ſo agree with him, ẏ we alſo confeſſe in hũblenes & feare, ẏ there is great reaſon why hee ſhould puniſh all thoſe ẏ deſpiſe & ouerthrow his righteouſnes, & cõmandements. And when he threatneth them, we may not thinke ẏ it is in vain, but ẏ in the end they ſhall feele the execution of ẏ ſentence. God therfore in this reſpect wil haue vs to ſay Amen, both to the promiſes which he maketh vnto thẽ ẏ keepe his lawe, & vnto the threatnings which he denounceth againſt all thẽ ẏ are rebels & deſpiſers of him. So thẽn we haue now made a good enterance vnto the vnderſtanding of this place. As touching the bleſſinges and curſings, we ſhall more fully treate of them in ẏ chapter folowing: and we ſhall do better to keep thẽ to be handled there, becauſe the place is more fit for thẽ. It ſuffiſeth to knowe in a worde, ẏ when God offereth his fauour vnto thoſe ẏ obey him, it is to the end they ſhoulde ſerue him, not through conſtraint, but of a free good will: knowing ẏ it is for their owne cõmoditie, & welfare, and againe ẏ on the other ſide ſuch as are of their owne nature giuen ouer to their luſtfull deſires, & take to thẽſelues a lawles libertie of liuing il, muſt be withheld by feare ſith they ſee ẏ they ſhall not eſcape ẏ hand of God, but ẏ in the end they muſt come to their account. Thus ye ſee what we haue to beare in minde in a worde vntill wee come to handle the matter more at large.

Moreouer let vs note well ẏ which wee haue ſaid, namely ẏ God thinks it not ynough to haue ſpoken himſelfe; but he will haue vs alſo to agree as it were in one melodie with him. And ẏ is to ſhew the faith which we haue in his word, which conſiſteth in theſe two points: namely, ẏ we imbrace his promiſes & hang wholy vpon thẽ: and ſecondly ẏ we tremble, as oftẽ as he giueth vs any ſine of his wrath, ſo as we be not blockiſh, nor drouſie, nor ſo hardened that he muſt be faine to ſtrike vpon vs with maine blowes, before we can feele his anger: but ẏ we preuẽt it by indeuoring to obey him, & eſchew his vengeance as much as we can. Now then bleſſings in this place are conditional, to wit, bleſſed is hee which obſerueth ẏ law of God, which maintaineth his ſeruice purely, which is not giuen to ſuperſtitions nor Idolatries, which abuſeth not his holy name, which obſerueth the day of reſt, & al the other ceremonies, which honoreth his father & mother. This bleſſing (I ſay) is matched with condition, ſo ẏ if we ſerue God, he will ſhew himſelfe liberall vnto vs, & we ſhall not looſe our time: but yet doe all theſe bleſſinges depend hereupon, ẏ God of his free goodnes had choſen this people: ſo ẏ they might not reſt on this point, to ſay, Bleſſed is he which ſerueth God. And who is ẏ? For none diſchargeth himſelfe of this duty (as we haue already declared) & ſhall ſee further in ẏ ende of this chap. Seeing then ẏ we are all ſinners, yea euen the faithfull, inſomuch ẏ when they indeuour to walk vprightly they make many falſe ſteps; what ſhall become of vs then? It is certaine we ſhould be all depriued of the hope of ſaluation, if we had nothing elſe to leane vnto thã our owne righteouſnes. But (as I tolde you) ẏ promiſes which import a condition depende hereupon, ẏ God hath receiued vs for his people, & will haue vs to take him for our father. Now this thing is grounded on nothing elſe but vpon his mercie. So then we muſt be throughly perſwaded, ẏ God will take pitie on vs, though wee bee wretched ſinners, & deſerue not to be pitied: he will receiue vs for righteous & accept of vs, although we deſerue to be reiected of him. And althogh we can hope for nothing but vtter cõfuſion, yet notwͭſtanding we ſhalbe aſſured of the inheritance of ſaluation becauſe we are his children. We muſt be throughly perſuaded as touching this point. And ſecondly it remaineth ẏ ſeeing God hath chooſen vs our, & ſet vs apart for his ſeruice, we may not take libertie to all maner of wickednes, but indeuor to obey him. For this cauſe we muſt be quickened vp and pricked forward by his promiſes to ſerue him. Thus yee ſee howe the conditional promiſes ſhall not be in vaine in reſpect of vs:

namely, when they are referred vnto the freebeſtowed goodneſſe of God, whereby he receiueth vs although wee be not worthy to be receiued: and ſecondly he imputeth not our vices vnto vs: but although there be many ſtaines and corruptions in vs, yet he hydeth them and will not call them to account. And ſo we ſee now in what ſort God incouraged the people of Iſraell to bee of good comfort. For if hee had begun thus with them and ſaid: Serue me & you ſhal be well recompenſed for your labour, if God ſhould ſpeak this ſimple worde vnto vs, alas what ſhould wee do? For when we would thinke to ſerue him, we ſhould be very farre frõ the perfectnes which he cõmandeth vs: they which ſhould run beſt would be but in yͤ midway, when they ought to be come to their waies end. We ſhould therfore al be diſcoraged rather than haue any good hart. But we muſt ioyne both theſe things together, to wit, yͭ he will not deceiue vs in any thing, & ſecondly yͭ he bindeth vs to ſerue him, & declareth yͭ he wil beare with vs in our infirmities, & not deale ſeuerely with vs to pay vs as we haue deſerued, but vſe a fatherly goodnes. Now hereupon we may be of good cõfort to ſerue him, whẽ we may ſay, Surely it is true Lord, yͭ I diſcharge not my ſelf of yͤ hundredth part of my dutie towardes thee, but howſoeuer yͤ world goeth, yet thou wilt not faile to accept me becauſe thou reſpecteſt not what I doe, but takeſt a pleaſure in me as in thine owne childe. Ye ſee then how God pardoneth vs, and regardeth not our faults & imperfections which are in the ſeruice yͭ we yeelde vnto him. So wee ſerue him not hypocritically, but of an vnfained good will, he liketh of all yͭ we do, and rewardeth vs for it. Sith we heare this, let vs beſtowe our paines, let vs receiue the bridle into our mouths (as they ſay) and let vs go on; & although we be hindred by yͤ vices of our fleſh, yet let vs inforce ourſelues to go on further. And why? For we ſhal not looſe our labour. Thus ye ſee what the meaning of God is; whereby we perceiue his ineſtimable goodnes, in yͭ of his owne good wil he offereth his promiſes ſo vnto vs, whereas he is nothing bound vnto vs, as we haue ſeene heeretofore: but his will is to win vs vnto himſelfe by all the meanes that he may. Now he repeateth this point againe, and yͭ is done becauſe of our ſloth and negligence. For yͭ cauſe he addeth this aide, and all for our profit, for what is he aduantaged therby? Shall he gaine any thing by our ſeruice? Let vs defie him to the vtmoſt, what ſhall yͭ hurt him? but he wil poſſeſſe vs for our owne welfare.

And herewithall hee ſheweth vs alſo, what minde is requiſite for the obſeruing of his law in ſuch ſort as is required, to wit, if we come willingly and yeelde our ſelues vnto him, and place our whole felicitie & ioye in the ſeruing of him, and put this ſentence in vre, yͭ where our treaſure is, there will our heart be alſo. Ye ſee what we haue to note as touching yͤ firſt point of the bleſſings. What is it thẽ in effect, yͭ we haue to do? Althogh nowadaies we haue not the Ceremony whereof mention is made in this place, yet muſt the ſubſtance thereof be in force among vs, which is yͭ in ſeeking to ſerue God, we muſt haue an eye alwayes vnto his promiſes. Behold, our God calleth & allureth vs vnto him. And how? He might cõmande vs in one word, and ſay: You owe al vnto me, ſee therefore yͭ ye diſcharge yourſelues: but he beareth with vs, & vttereth a fatherly goodnes towards vs, in ſaying: My children, I will not haue your ſeruice vnrecõpenſed. In deede I owe you nothing, but yet neuertheleſſe I will be ſo bountiful aboue yͭ I need, yͭ if you ſerue me, your life ſhalbe happy, you ſhal proſper in all thinges. And beſides that, there is a ſouerain bleſſing for vs as touching the life euerlaſting. For all yͭ wee can deſire or looke for in this worlde, is nothing in compariſon of that ſaluation which wee hope for through faith; and all the bleſſinges which God promiſeth vs, & offereth vnto vs as touching the life to come. Therefore all this ought to make vs the readier & better diſpoſed to ſubmit ourſelues vnto God. For what? Seeing our lord ſeeketh nothing but our welfare in our obeying of him, & offereth vs a reward for our ſo doing; are we not too too wretched if wee enforce not ourſelues to ſerue our god? Ye ſee thẽ how we ought with our good conſent to ratifie all the promiſes which are contained in the holy ſcripture; that whereas others thinke it were but loſt time to do well, wee may alwayes haue this imprinted in our heart, that there is nothing better than to cleaue vnto God. The heatheniſh ſorte doe thinke themſelues very happie in following of their owne luſtes. When lecherous and couetous perſons haue ſcraped together on all ſides, they thinke all is well gained, and they triumphe in their dooinges. If the fornicatours who are brutiſh in their fleſhly luſtes, can enioy their pleaſures, they welter in them, they are drunken with them, they are wholly bewitched by them. If a vaine glorious man be in any dignitie, and be aduaunced to any authoritie among men; he thinketh there is no other ioye nor happineſſe, but to be in high eſtate. At the ſame point are all the deſpiſers of God. And in the meane time the poore faithfull ones are mocked: they are poore perſons, they are ſet at naught, they hang their winges, they doe nothing but droppe and pine away in this worlde. Theſe wretched ſoules (ſay ſome) are not well aduiſed to take ſo much paines they knowe not why; for what profite haue they for all their trauaile? It ſeemeth therefore that they which ſeeke to ſerue God are greatly beguiled, and that the wicked beare the whole ſway. But we muſt on the contrarie ſide be throughly reſolued heerein as it is ſayde in the prophet Eſay, Say ye; Yet there is fruit for the iuſt men, for they ſhall eat the fruits of their labours. The prophet Eſay would haue vs to fight againſt this temptation. Inſomuch yͭ although the worlde laugh the Godly to ſkorne, & the wicked triumph ouer them: yet for al that the faithfull ſhould not be aſtonied; but cõclude with thẽſelues, and ſay: No no: the righteous mã ſhall not looſe his labor; he ſhall not be deceiued of his expectatiõ when he depẽdeth wholy vpõ the promiſes of God. The thing then which we haue to gather vpon this place is, that as often as we reade the promiſes in the ſcripture where it

Eſa.3.10.

Pſal. 112. 1. Pſal. 119. 1. Matt. 19, 29 it is ſaid: Bleſſed is the man which feareth ỹ lord, they which ſhall walke in the obedience of his word ſhal be bleſſed: bleſſed is he which walketh vprightlie, and ſoundlie with his neighboures: but ſpecially they which renounce the worlde becauſe they haue a better inheritance in heauẽ: as often (I ſay) as wee reade theſe thinges, wee muſt be confirmed in our faith, and aunſwere with a good courage Amen, Lorde, it is ſo: wee replie not againſt that which thou haſt ſaide, we imbrace thy promiſes in this place, and truſt aſſuredly vnto them. Thus ye ſee howe euerie man ought to enforce himſelfe to ſerue G O D, euen becauſe hee beareth ſo gently with vs, & commaundeth vs not ſo preciſely as hee might, hauing all authoritie ouer vs, but applyeth him ſelfe to our rawneſſe to winne vs, and to enioye vs. And aboue all let vs bee mindefull of this generall promiſe, when God calleth vs vnto himſelfe as his children, when hee ſpareth vs and beareth with vs, and entreth not into any extremitie of rigour with vs, but although there be many faultes in our workes, yet they hinder not him to accept of them, ſo as if wee offende we alwayes find pardon at his hande, and when we ſwarue aſide, he bringeth vs into ỹ way, and none of al theſe thinges is imputed vnto vs. Ye ſee then what we haue to beare in minde as touching the firſt point.

Nowe as touching the ſeconde, let vs alſo note that the threatenings of God are verie neceſſarie for vs. For wee ſee howe great pride & rebellioufnes is in al vs: inſomuch that although we bee not rebellious of ſet purpoſe to ſet our God at nought, and to caſt off his yoke: yet wee are ſo bleare eyed, that we thinke not on him, ỹ intiſementes of the worlde ſeduce vs in ſuch wiſe, that we paſſe not for the receiuing of any warning that God giueth vs. If hee call vs by gentleneſſe hee can get nothing at our handes: and therefore hee is fayne to vſe threatninges. Hereby we ſee how he letteth paſſe nothing that is meete to hold vs in awe vnder his obedience. On the one ſide hee vſeth mylde and louing maner of ſpeach vnto vs, (as I haue told you) & ſaith, Come ye vnto me my childrẽ: Indeed I owe you nothing, but yet I wil bind my ſelf vnto you: I promiſe you that if you ſerue me, it ſhall be for your profite. Thus our Lorde ſpeaketh vnto vs, as a father that flattereth his childe to win him to be ruled by him & to employ himſelfe in his ſeruice with a freeharted affectiõ. Howbeit, God perceiuing that that is not enough to mooue vs, vſeth threatninges, and ſayeth: Take heede, if yee thinke to caſt away my worde, and yet to remaine vnpuniſhed, yee deceiue your ſelues, I muſt cal you to accoũt for it, I wil not ſuffer my children ſo to mock mee: I muſt be their Iudge: & looke not for any pardon, when you haue abuſed my patience: I muſt double your puniſhment, and my vengeaunce muſt fall more horribly vpon you. Therefore when God declareth that our ſinnes are vnpardonable, and yet wee continue in them, and make none account of ſubmitting our ſelues vnto him, ſpecially when hee applyeth himſelfe euerie way vnto vs, to the intent wee ſhoulde remayne in his obedience, and not periſh: Sith we ſee he hath ſuch a care of our ſaluation; muſt it not needes bee that wee are too too ſtubborne, or rather verie beaſtes if wee be not mooued to fare the better, by the fatherly care which hee ſheweth towardes vs? Yes: And therefore being ſtirred vp by the goodneſſe and gentleneſſe of God, whereof I ſpeake euen nowe, let vs alſo quicken vp our ſelues with his threateninges. When we ſee that our fleſhe is ouer wanton, and that it draweth vs vnto euill, let vs ſay, Alas: And ſhall wee ſhake off his yoke like wilde beaſtes? What hath God pronounced? Let vs tremble therefore when wee heare the threateninges of our God. For if the anger of an earthly king bee the meſſenger of death (as Salomon Prou. 16, 14. ſaith,) what ought wee to thinke of the anger of God, when it is denounced againſt vs? So then, let vs learne to tame our ſelues with feare. When the tentations of Satan might preuayle agaynſt vs, and that our ſinnes might bee as baytes to deceiue vs: let it come into our minde to ſay, What? Shal I vnder the pretence of ſome pleaſure which will ſoone vaniſhe, goe and prouoke the anger of my G O D, and ſo periſhe for euer? After that manner (I ſay) ought wee to call Gods threateninges to our remembraunce; and then to aunſwere thereunto Amen, and ſay, yea Lorde, it is euen ſo, it is no childrens game. When thou pronounceſt condemnation vppon the wicked; thou arte readie to execute it: and when thou haſt once pronounced the worde with thy mouth, it is all one as if wee ſawe the fire alreadie kindled to conſume vs. After that manner (I ſay) ought we to receyue all the threateninges which G O D denounceth againſt vs. For that is ỹ beſt meanes to teach vs to obſerue the Lawe, I meane ſo farre as our weakeneſſe will ſuffer. For (as I haue tolde you) it is not poſſible for vs to come to perfectneſſe indeede, as long as wee are incloſed in this fleſhe of ours: but yet neuertheleſſe wee may wel dedicate our ſelues vnto God, and bee helde in his feare, if on the one ſide his promiſes bee in force with vs, & againe if on ỹ other ſide we giue eare vnto his threatnings.

But nowe let vs come vnto the order which is obſerued is this place. Moſes with the Prieſtes of the Trybe of Leuie, commaunded the people ſaying, Sixe Trybes ſhall ſtande on the Hyll of Heball, and ſixe ſhall ſtande on the Hill of Garizim. And afterwarde hee ſaith, Keepe my Statutes and Commaundementes which I commaunde you this daye, for yee are made a people vnto your G O D. This hath beene alreadie expounded: but it is good to beare that alwayes in minde which hath beene ſaide concerning it; to wit, that G O D ſpeaketh by the mouth of his Prieſtes as if hee were there viſibly in his own perſon. And that is to the intent his wordes ſhoulde bee receiued with the greater reuerence. For when wee ſee but mortall men as wee bee: wee are of opinion that what ſoeuer proceedeth from them, may verie well bee reiected; and if there bee no account made of it, of it, wee thinke the matter is not great. And thus wee ſee howe the worde of God is oftentimes little eſteemed. For when wee ſee none ſpeake but creatures like vnto our ſelues, wee thinke that ẏ which they pronounce is nothing but a ſound of wordes. But God will haue the maieſtie of his word to be knowen: & although men bring it, and be the meſſengers thereof, yet will hee not haue the worthines thereof to bee diminiſhed, ſo as men ſhould not giue audience vnto it: but he will haue euerie man to ſtoope to it and to receiue the yoke which hee putteth vpon them. God therefore ſpeaketh in this place of Moſes and by the Prieſtes: but yet in ſuch a language and kinde of ſpeach, that he will haue people to lift vp their mindes more higher, and to knowe, that although they bee taught by the meane and miniſterie of man, yet they ought to confeſſe that God is the authour of that worde which men preach vnto them, and that they ought to receyue it as from God himſelfe & ſo be ſilent to heare it, and make no replie or gaynſaying againſt it: for ſuch contempt is not done to a mortal creature, but God himſelf is diſpiſed by it. And therefore let vs note well all the places whereby God authoriſeth his worde, to the intent we may learne to holde our ſelues vnto it and to bee ordered thereby: ſo as euery of vs do bowe downe his heade, as often as men ſpeake vnto vs in the name of God. And moreouer we ſee alſo the order which God hath appointed in his Church: he will haue all the worlde to aunſwere Amen: for wee ought al to be partakers of ẏ doctrine. It muſt not bee kept in ſtore onely for great men, but the ſmalleſt alſo muſt be inſtructed by it, to the edifying and profiting of them ſelues. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtande; there were alwayes Prieſtes to ſpeake, who were ordeyned to teach the people according as it is Mal.2.7. ſaide in the Prophet Malachie; the law ſhall bee in the Prieſts mouth, and he ſhall be the meſſenger of the liuing God, and they ſhall ſeeke for knowledge at his lips. We ſee then that God in all times appointed ſome in the office of teaching the people, and of bearing abroade his worde. And ſo nowe adayes wee ſtand in neede of ſuch an order, and wee knowe what Saynt Rom.12.6. Paul ſaith as touching this point, both in the 1.Cor.12.28 12. Chapter to the Romanes, and in the 12. of Epheſ.4.11. the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, and in the fourth to the Epheſians. And it is prooued vnto vs alſo throughout al the holy ſcripture, that God will haue certayne lawes eſtabliſhed, and certaine men appointed to beare abroade his worde, and to bee teachers in his Church, to inſtruct the people in his name. Hereby wee gather, that when God hath appoynted ſuch order; all thoſe which can not ſuffer thẽſelues to bee taught by this common order with the whole bodie of the Church, may well proteſt, that they bee Chriſtians: but they come to the Church as holy as horſes, bearing themſelues in hande, that it is enough for them to haue graunted in a woorde, that the Goſpell is the worde of God. But contrariwiſe we ſee here, that if we wil be of the bodie of the Church, and haue God to take vs for his children, we muſt heare the worde of God as it is miniſtred vnto vs, by the miniſterie of men. But becauſe this point hath beene handled largelie heretofore, I do nowe but as it were glaunce at it by the way.

Alſo there is this point: To day thou art made the people of God, if thou keepe his commaundementes. Therefore like as our Lorde receyueth vs into his houſe, ſo muſt wee alſo wholy giue our ſelues vnto him, knowing that to this ende hee hath ſhooled vs out from the reſt of the worlde, and will haue vs to bee his owne, and as it were his peculiar inheritance. It is time indeede that all men are bounde to ſerue him: but yet notwithſtanding, when hee calleth vs vnto him, & ſheweth himſelfe our father, doth he not binde vs vnto him, with a double bonde? Yes verily. Are we not then without all ſenſe and reaſon, & altogether bewitched, if we be not mooued to yeelde our ſelues ouer to his will, ſo as hee may guide vs and beare rule ouer all our whole life? Then let vs wey well theſe woordes: To day thou art made the people of the Lorde thy God, and therefore keepe his commaundementes. Howe are wee made thẽ people of God, but by beeing his Church, and by hauing the vſe of his ſacramentes, and that is all one as if hee appeared among vs? For wee may not looke that GOD ſhould come downe from heauen in his owne perſon, or ſende his Angels vnto vs. But the true marke whereby he will bee knowen to bee among vs, is the preaching of his worde purely vnto vs: for no doubt but then he beareth rule in the middeſt of vs. So then let this thing profite vs, that we knowe that our Lorde receyueth vs vnto himſelfe & will haue vs to be of his owne houſeholde. Seeing it is ſo, let vs take paines to obey him in all our life, and to keepe his commaundementes: let vs not wander like brute beaſtes as the wretched vnbeleeuers doe, becauſe they neuer knewe what it was to bee of the houſe of God.

But nowe let vs come vnto the rehearſall which Moſes maketh of the curſes: he ſaith firſt of all, Curſed bee hee which maketh anie Idoll or anie molten Image, or anie carued Image: all this is abhomination vnto God: and curſed is hee which putteth it in anie ſecrete place. And all the people ſhall ſay Amen. Let vs note that Moſes doth not ſpecifie in this place al the curſes, euery one by himſelfe, but he ſetteth downe certain examples, to ſhewe that all they which ſwarue aſide from the law of God, ſeeke nothing elſe but to runne wilfully into vtter ruine and deſtruction. The effect therefore of all this is, that if we will proſper, we muſt drawe neere vnto God, ſeeing that hee is the fountaine of all happineſſe, and proſperitie. Whereas on the other ſide all they which depart from him doe goe and caſt themſelues into vtter deſtruction: but al they which caſt off the yoke of God, that is to ſay, which yeeld not themſelues to followe his law and his word, all they departe from him, and doe as much as in them lyeth, to baniſhe themſelues from his preſence. And ſo it is all one as if they did caſt them themſelues into the bottome of hel, and ſought nothing elſe in this preſent life, but to prouoke the vengeance of God againſt them,& ſo to ſeek their owne woe.Behold what we haue to beare in minde. Now God beginneth with his owne ſeruice: and not without cauſe: for (as we haue Deut.5.22. & 10.3. declared afore,)the lawe is diuided into two tables: to ſhewe vs that men ought firſt of all ſo to behaue themſelues as God may be honoured:& this is the firſt and principall dutie which wee ought to performe,becauſe we are his creatures, & becauſe he hath faſhioned vs vnto his glorie: let vs tend vnto that end,and let our life bee referred thereunto, ſeeing the firſt table ſheweth vs ſo briefly howe wee ought to behaue our ſelues towardes our God.That is the cauſe why God ſaith now in theſe curſes; Curſed be he which maketh any Idol. But I haue tolde you that Moſes rehearſeth only certaine ſorts;and that is to cōprehend the whole in one part, as we haue ſeene examples thereof. In effect therefore when it is ſaid: Curſed be he which maketh any Idol, it is al one as if Moſes had ingenerall pronounced a curſe vpō them,which falſifie and corrupt the ſeruice and worſhip of God, as if he he ſhoulde ſay: You knowe howe and after what manner our God will bee worſhipped of vs; whoſoeuer inuenteth anie maner of Idolatrie, whoſoeuer deuiſeth any maner of ſuperſtition, he maketh Idols.And that is not to ſerue yͤ liuing God, but rather to follow their owne fancies and imaginations:and therefore they are all accurſed.Ye ſee then howe wee ought to expound this place. And Moſes meant to ſet downe vnto vs in this place ſuch a particular,as wherein we might moſt euidently ſee an intollerable corrupting of yͤ worſhip of God. For when God is ſo miſhapen in any painting, or in any puppet,or in any other peece of wood or ſtone,that men wil there repreſent his Image & ſay, It is a reſemblance of him: it is too groſſe and outragious dealing. Indeede men think not ſo;as we ſee in poperie, how they ſay, Lo yonder is God, and a remembrance of him. And are they not ſo brutiſhe that they thinke there is no diuine maieſtie in heauen, vnles it be repreſented there in the ſhape of an Idol?But they which haue any taſt what GOD is, and haue hearde any ſyllable of his worde, where it is ſaid yͭ God Iohn.4.24. is an immortall and infinite ſpirit,the fountaine of life: do know that hee hath too great iniurie done vnto him, to be repreſēted by a dead thing and by a corruptible creature, and to haue his name giuen vnto a puppet as if hee were but a creature, & leſſe than we. They therefore which haue but a ſmall taſt of this doctrine,do abhorre the ſetting vp of an idol,and the imagination of ſeruing God by going thereto,& that any ſhould pray to a dead thing;or looke for health from yͤ, which can doe nothing, neither good nor bad. Therefore if this were well marked,wee ſhoulde finde that Moſes meant in this place to make Idolatrie more deteſtable,according to that rule which we haue heretofore expounded. Yet notwithſtanding we haue two things to note in this place: the one is,that God can not ſuffer his infinite maieſtie to bee repreſented vnder ſtone, woode, painting or in any other creature in the worlde. What muſt we doe then when the caſe concerneth the worſhippe of GOD? Wee muſt lifte vppe our mindes aboue the worlde, and knowe that wee may not ſticke faſt here belowe, nor make anie Idol or puppet vnto him: for he can not abide it. That is one point to bee noted. Secondly we haue alſo to note, that God will not be ſerued nor worſhipped after our own maner,but he will haue vs to walke according to his word,without putting any thing thereunto, or taking any thing from it, ſo as all the inuentiōs which men haue forged,are al one as if they had ſet vp as many Idols. Indeede they make themſelues beleeue that God wil like wel of that which they do: but it is but a bare geſſe of them, while they haue not a eye vnto yͭ which hee liketh. Therfore they ſerue their own fācies,& not the liuing God,who hath giuen them ſuch a rule as he wil haue obſerued. And therefore at a word all the worſhippings of God (as they terme thē) wherein men are ſo deuout after their owne fancies,and whereof they haue no warrant of the worde of God, to ſay, This he hath commaunded me: are nothing but Idols of their owne forging. Let this be well noted.

Now let vs conſider howe God ſaith, Curſed is he which forgeth Idols. It is true that the Papiſtes when they take paynes to trudge from altar to altar, to mumble their prayers before their Images, to ſet them out with waxe candles, and to doe their other dotages: if a man tell them that God diſliketh of all their dooings, it ſpiteth thē to bee tolde ſo, and they fall to rayling againſt God himſelfe.But yet for all that, whereas they thinke they win a ſcore of heauens, euerie ſteppe which they ſet foorth, is a caſting of themſelues into the gulfe of hell. And why? Make they neuer ſo faire replies; yet yͤ Iudge giueth this ſentence vpon them; Curſed are all they which make Idols. Let them goe ſeeke their wages at the diuils hande: our Lord hath already pronounced yͤ ſentence which is here contayned, to wit, curſed are al Idolaters. If any ſay it is no ſuch great harme for a man to do a thing of good intent, and to ſay I thinke it is good, I beleeue it is well done: Yet not withſtanding God deteſteth euerie whit of it,becauſe it is a forging of a newe God,when men turne themſelues from the pure ſimplicitie of the worſhip of God, to deuiſe this or that. Although they thinke to doe well, yet notwithſtanding they are accurſed. And why? For God diſliketh and condemneth that which they doe. And it is not for a mortall creature to promiſe this or that vnto himſelfe, but God muſt promiſe, and we muſt anſwere Amen. And likewiſe when he threateneth, we muſt bee confounded,and euery mouth muſt be ſtopped before him: he muſt haue audience, and wee receiue his threates and confirme them, as I haue told you. And here is purpoſely mention made of a ſecrete place to ſhewe that although a man be not conuicted before the worlde, yet hee ceaſeth not to be guiltie before God, and that the heauenly Iudge will finde him out well enough. Therefore let vs not beguile our ſelues, and thinke we ſhal eſcape and remaine vnpuniſhed,when men reproue vs not,ne conuict vs of the euil that we haue done. For we may wel ſeek ſtartingholes, but yet will God finde vs out,ſeeing he ſaith: Curſed is hee which maketh an Idoll, and putteth it in a ſecrete place. And againe hee ſaieth, It is an abhomination vnto the Lord, to ſhew,that mẽ muſt not beguile thẽſelues,by ſtanding vpõ their own opinion, or vpon ÿ iudgement of the world: It is ynough that God ſaith,ſuch a thing diſpleaſeth me. Although the world like of vs,yet gaine we nothing therby.So then let vs take heed that we frame ourſelues ſo vnto the will of God, as ÿ this world carie vs not away, and that wee ſerue not our owne nor other mens luſtes, but ſubmit ourſelues always vnto our heauenly Iudge.Thus ye ſee what we haue to beare in mind.For when God is to be ſerued,we muſt not looke whether there be any witneſſes of our doings here below; for although we may deceiue the whole worlde, yet God ſeeth vs,& wee cannot eſcape his ſight. What lurking places then ſoeuer we haue,let vs knowe that our condemnation is ready at hand. And thereupon let vs order our life ſo as GOD be ſerued and honoured, not only with our feet, our hands,and our eyes,but alſo with the ſeruice of our hearts, that is to ſay, with all our affections,and with al our thoughtes giuen ouer vnto him.And (to conclude) wee are taught that the Iohn.4.24. ſeruice of God is not without cauſe called ſpirituall: whereby we may vnderſtand,that it is not ynough for vs to do him reuerence before men, by kneeling downe, and by vſing of ſuch other Ceremonies,or by abſteining from ſeruing of Idols in the ſight of men;but alſo in ſecret when euery man is withdrawen into his ſecret places: euen then muſt we auowe him for our God, and all our affections muſt be held vnder his obedience, and wee muſt haue the pureneſſe which Saint Paul ſpeaketh of,namely the obedience of faith,by the which euery of vs may dedicate and Rom.1.5. conſecrate himſelfe wholly vnto God.

Now let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him that wee may bee touched more and more with true repentaunce, to be diſpleaſed with ourſelues, that in applying our whole ſtudie in the minding both his promiſes and his threatenings, we may not bee ſo froward as to caſt off his yoke,but rather bee helde backe alwayes by ſuch meanes as are fitte and conuenient for vs:and that we may yeelde vnto him a willing ſeruice,to the intent that as hee of his free goodneſſe hath called vs vnto him,ſo he alſo wil guide and gouerne vs by his holy ſpirit, that we may giue ourſelues ouer vnto him, and ſerue him in humblenes and feare, embracing his promiſes,and trembling at his threatenings: and that in the meane time he wil make vs feele that if we be ſo giuen to his ſeruice,he will make vs to proſper,and wee ſhalbee moſt happy, and that eſpecially,becauſe he hath ſet before vs the inheritance of the kingdome of heauen, which he hath purchaſed vnto vs in the perſon of his onely ſonne. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to al people and Nations of the earth,&c.

On Wedneſday the iiii. of March, 1556.

The CLI. Sermon which is the third vpon the ſeuen and twentith Chapter.

16 Curſed be the man which curſeth his father and his Mother: And al the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

17 Curſed be he which remoueth his neighbors boundes: And all the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

18 Curſed be he which maketh the blind goe out of the way: And all the people ſhal ſay, Amen.

19 Curſed be he which wreſteth the right of the ſtranger, the fatherleſſe, and the widowe: And all the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

21 Curſed be hee which lyeth with anie beaſt, And all the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

22 Curſed bee he which lieth with his ſiſter, the daughter of his father or mother: And all the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

23 Curſed be he which lieth with his mother in lawe: And all the people ſhal ſay, Amen.

WE haue ſeene already whereat God aimed in appointing ſuch ſolemnitie, that the people ſhoulde meete together on Mount Eball which is ouer againſt Garizim; to pronounce the curſes that are ſet downe here. For when God hath once vttered his wil vnto vs, it is good reaſon that euerie of vs ſhoulde conſent thereunto, and confeſſe that to ſticke vnto his worde is the rule of all righteouſnes. For the cheefe honour which God requireth of vs as though Iohn.5.33. it were a ſetting of our ſeales vnto it, is to declare that there is no gaynesaying or replying to that which he ſpeaketh, but that it is altogether ſure and ought to be ſticked vnto. Furthermore wee ought to marke alſo, that the condition of mens agreeing vnto Gods worde is ſuch, that if they doe the contrarie in their liues, they condemne themſelues with their own mouthes. For it is not enough for vs to profeſſe, that whatſoeuer God ſaith is rightfull and reaſonable: but wee muſt alſo ſhewe by our deedes, that his doctrine hath full force and authoritie among vs. So then, hee that yeeldeth ſuch confeſſion with his mouth, is his owne iudge without any other proceſſe, if hee follow not that which is taught him, and which hee knoweth to bee rightfull. Nowe we haue ſeene howe God ſpake of Idolatries and conſequently of al ſuperſtitiōs. And thereupon I haue told you, that it is enough for vs to haue here ſome examples touched, to ſhewe vs that God requireth the full obedience of his lawe at our handes, as ſhall bee declared for a concluſion in the ende. Yee ſee then that God ratified his whole ſeruice. Nowe hee commeth to the ſecond table, and beginneth with the honour and ſubiection that is due to the father and mother. Curſed ſhall that man be (ſaith he) which curſeth his father or his mother. Now this curſe importeth verie much. For it comprehendeth all that is repugnant to the honour, obedience, and helpe, which children owe to their fathers and mothers. Therfore whoſoeuer yeeldeth not honour to his father and mother, is here curſed of God. We haue well ſeene Deut.21.18. heretofore the puniſhment that was appointed for them: Inſomuch that if any man had diſobedient children; being brought before the Iudges, they were (vppon his ſingle witneſſe) to be ſtoned to death, and ſo ſuch infection was to bee taken away. For it is an vnkindly and accurſed thing, that the children ſhould ſet themſelues againſt thoſe which brought them into the world, and haue brought them vp; and haue taken ſo much paine and care for them. For wee knowe that a father occupieth as it were the roome of GOD towardes his owne children and offſpring. It followeth then that hee that ſo lifteth vppe himſelfe againſt his father or his mother, doth manifeſtly diſpiſe God; euen as if he were a contemner of all religion. Now heere by ẏ way, God telleth vs that although Iudges and Magiſtrates do not their dutie, or if he ẏ hath done the wrong to his father and mother bee borne with; yet is he not therfore eſcaped. For many crimes lie buried in this world, which notwithſtanding God reſerueth; and early or late they muſt come to account.

Let vs marke well then, that heere is no more ſpeaking of the execution of Iuſtice which is to bee done by meane of law; for that hath beene ſpoken of afore: but God declareth ẏ although they which haue offended through diſobedience, be not puniſhed here in this world; or that their faultes be not knowen, or that no ſuch examination bee made of them as they deſerue: yet they gayned nothing thereby; becauſe there is a heauenly Iudge, which forgetteth not any thing, but keepeth all thinges regiſtred before him, and he in the ende will ſurelie doe his office. Therefore let vs thinke well vpon this doctrine; and although men finde no fault with vs; nor any man vexe or trouble vs: let vs not thereuppon fall aſleepe, but rather euerie man ſummon himſelfe, according to that which is tolde vs here, & conſider that we muſt come before the iudgement ſeat of God. And therefore let vs learne to walke in ſuch wiſe, as hee may accepte of vs when wee come there, and as wee may not ſtande in feare of the curſe which is vttered here. Not that anie of vs canne performe the Lawe (as I haue declared more fullie heretofore:) but that it behooueth vs to tende thereunto, and to put our indeuour to it. For although wee bee not altogether cleane before GOD, but contrariwiſe guiltie of manie of the faultes that are conteyned here: yet doeth not hee lay them to our charge, ſobeit that wee miſlike of them, and giue not our ſelues ouer to them, ne let the bridle ſlacke. Wherefore let vs learne to reſtrayne our ſelues, and to bee ſory, ſeeing wee be not ſo perfect as were requiſite. But yet therewithal (as I haue declared alreadie,) let vs ſtreine our ſelues to pleaſe our Lord God and to obey him: and let vs haue ſuch a recorde in our owne conſciences, as wee may freely and with open mouth ſay; Curſed bee hee which hath not followed the doctrine of ſaluation in ſuch ſorte as it is ſhewed vnto vs. To make anie long diſcourſe of the honour which euerie man oweth to his father and mother, it is not needefull as nowe, becauſe the lawe hath beene expounded alreadie heretofore. It ſufficeth as nowe [to know] that in this text GOD declareth that all diſobedience, as well againſt fathers and mothers as againſt all ſuperiours whome he hath ſet in authoritie in this worlde, is intollerable in his ſight. For hee will not haue vs to liue here diſorderlie like beaſtes: but hee will haue order and gouernment obſerued among vs. And that canne not bee doone, except we ſtande in awe of ſuch as beare anie office for the common gouernment of men. Whoſoeuer then breaketh Gods order, let him looke to bee acurſed, accordingly alſo as Saint Paul

Rom. 13. 4. telleth vs, that in ſo dooing wee reſiſt not creatures or men; but we make warre againſt God himſelfe, when wee goe about to ouerthrowe the ſuperioritie which hee hath ordeyned and commended vnto vs. Marke that for one point.

Now it is added afterward, Curſed ſhall hee bee which plucketh vp his neighbours buttelles, [Meeres, or Landmarkes.] Wee muſt alwayes beare in minde that which I haue tolde you alreadie; namelie that here vnder one kinde, G O D comprehendeth all. And I expounded therewithal, that if the bounds of mens Landes bee not kept certayne, no man ſhall bee Maiſter of his owne poſſeſſions, but all ſhall goe to ſpoyle and hauocke. And ſurely the hauing of iuſt weightes and meaſures, the maintayning of lawfull monie, and the keeping of bounds and buttelles vnchaunged; are thinges that haue beene euer priuiledged. For howe might men buy and ſel, or vſe anie trade among them; if the coyne bee not lawfull? Againe, if weightes and meaſures be falſified; in what taking are we? To what purpoſe ſhall Iuſtice ſerue any more? To what end ſhall all the lawes in the worlde ſerue? As much is to bee ſaide for boundes, buttelles, meeres, & landmarkes. So then, vnder this ſaying God meant to ſhewe, that it behooueth vs to obſerue equitie and vprightnes in dealing one with another. True it is that lawes are made for the puniſhing of ſuch offences; inſomuch that if any man doe ſhift or remooue his neighbours buttell, he ſhall not be diſcharged by ſetting it in the right place againe, and by making amendes for the harme that he hath done; but he ſhall be openly puniſhed alſo as for a hainous crime. As much is to bee done for the falſifying of weightes, and for the hauing of wrong meaſures. As touching the counterfeiting of Coyne, if a man haue vſed it, it is not enough that hee pay backe that which hee hath wrongfully taken; but hee muſt alſo die for it; and good reaſon. For otherwiſe (as I ſayde) all lawes were to be aboliſhed. And it were better for vs to be wilde beaſtes, than to liue without thoſe meanes which God hath ordeyned and nature alſo hath taught vs. But put the caſe that ſome man do defraude his neighbour, bee it by falſe meaſure or by ſome other wicked practiſe, and that he ſeeke to aduantage himſelf by an other mans loſſe, & the magiſtrate knoweth nothing thereof, by meanes whereof it ſcapeth vnpuniſhed: yet is it ſhewed vs here, that in the ende it muſt needes come to account before the heauenly Iudge. If a poore man bee put from his right, or oppreſſed by authoritie, violence, or otherwiſe, and dare not ſay a word to it; ne findeth anie aduocate to tender his caſe in this worlde: yet is God his warrant, and thoſe which thinke themſelues greatly benefited by inriching themſelues by hooke or by crooke, ſhall at length finde that it were much better for them to haue had but one bitte of breade to eate, than to haue had neuerſomuch to glut themſelues withall, and in the meane time to abide the curſe that is ſet downe here. For God hath no neede of mans helpe. Put the caſe that all men dealte amiſſe here, and that all thinges were confuſed and out of order: yet ſhal not this ſaying fal to the grounde, That the man ſhall bee accurſed which plucketh vp his neighbors buttell, but that God muſt needes doe his office. True it is that hee will haue them to vſe the ſworde, into whoſe hande hee hath put it, and hee hath ordeyned that they ſhoulde do ſo; and if they bee ſlacke and ſlowe in doing it, hee will ſhew them that he appointed them not in vaine to puniſhe crimes and offences. But yet cannot mortall men preiudice him. When an earthly Iudge diſchargeth not his duetie; it followeth not that Gods power is weakened therby, or that he is bereft of fit meanes to execute his office, or yͤ he is idle. For he is not like worldly Princes, which truſt to their officers, & are wel cõtented to play yͤ blind perſons, when things goe amiſſe. As for me [ſay they,] I vnderſtand yͭ al things go wel, & foraſmuch as I haue mine officers, my wil is that they ſhould behaue themſelues faithfully as I haue commaunded them. A Prince thinkes it enough for him to haue ſaide the worde: but God ouerlooketh them, and controlleth them. And although offenders & tranſgreſſers ſcape the handes of men: yet ſhall they bee puniſhed at his hands in the end. So then, let not our care bee, leaſt wee ſhoulde bee ſpyed, or leaſt men ſhoulde take vs tardie in working any deceyte; but let vs bee mindefull of this ſaying, Curſed ſhall hee bee which pulleth vp his Neighbours Landemarke. Men perchaunce ſee it not a whit; but yet God beholdeth it; and wee can no more eſchewe his eyes, than his hande. Wherefore let vs beware of all fraude and falſe dealing; aſſuring our ſelues that our Lorde watcheth ouer vs, yea and that in ſuch wiſe as hee will not ſuffer the poore to bee wounde in, nor the ſimple to bee outraged or eaten vp, and that thoſe thinges ſhall abide vnpuniſhed; but that he will ſhewe in the ende howe it is not without cauſe that hee claimeth to himſelfe the title to be the Iudge of the world.

Now it is ſaid further, Curſed ſhall hee bee, which cauſeth the blind to ſtray out of his way or to ſtũble in his way. Here is yet a crueltie euẽ againſt nature. For yͤ more neceſſitie a man is in, yͤ more ought other men to pitie him & to ſuccour him. There is a poore blind man, mẽ ſee him readie to take a fall, & they withhold him not from it. They yͭ take pleaſure herein, muſt needs be altogether of a leawd and corrupt diſpoſition, ſo as there is not one droppe of common kindneſſe in them. To bee ſhort, they muſt needes bee louers of al crueltie and miſcheefe. For euen the Heathen did greatlie abhorre that thing; in ſo much that in ſome places, ſuch a deede was as greeuouſly puniſhed, as murder, Thefte, or ſuch other like thinges. Howebeit, commonly men made not a lawe for it. And the reaſon that was yeelded for it, was, yͭ it ſeemed yͭ euerie man ought to be ſufficiently learned in yͤ behalfe of himſelf; ſo as it had beene a ſuperfluous thing to haue ſaide, If a man ſee a blinde man, let him ſette him in his way. Neuertheleſſe (as I haue declared afore) wee haue to note that God extendeth his matter and doctrine yet further. And in effect his meaning is to ſay, Curſed ſhall he bee which ſuffereth his neighbour to goe aſtray, for want of good Counſell. For as a blinde man ruſheth againſt things, ſtumbleth, and goeth aſtray if he be not led, and guided in his way: ſo alſo when wee want Counſell and good aduice, ſurely we be in the ſame plight that blinde men are, vnleſſe we be ſuccoured. Yea and although a man haue eyes, yet if he be in a ſtrange and vnknowen Country, and go quite and cleane from his way, and runne wandering heere and there, and men let him alone: it is all one as if they had made a blind man to goe out of his way, and ſo did the heathen men themſelues conſter it. It is not for vs to ſeeke excuſes and to ſay, Why ſo? God ſpeaketh but of blind men onely. Yea, but euen they which had neither the lawe nor the Goſpell, could well skill to ſay ſo, and haue ſhewed vs our leſſon; namely that whoſoeuer ſheweth not the way to a traueler when he ſees him out of his way, is a very monſter, and a deteſtable creature: and ſo is he alſo which is nigardly of ẏ light of his candle. I ſee a poore man whoſe candle is out, and he commeth to me to light it againe. The dooing therof coſteth me nothing, and yet I ſay vnto him, ye ſhall haue none of me: and are ſuch folk worthy to liue vpon the earth? So then let vs marke well Gods meaning: where hee curſeth all ſuch as ſet the blinde out of the way, or cauſe them to ſtumble. And let vs gather that together which I haue touched heeretofore; which is, that heere God doeth vs to vnderſtand, that if any of our neighbours haue neede of our helpe, I muſt helpe him if I be of abilitie and haue opportunitie to doe it, ſpecially if it be no coſt or charge to me. Nay, though it ſhould be ſome coſt vnto vs, yet are we bound to help ſuch as are in neede and diſtreſſe: and what ought we then to do, when we ſhall but open our mouth to do it? In that caſe we be not to disburſe any thing, we bee not in daunger to looſe either time or mony, as they ſay; the thing is to be done of free coſt. And ſhall we be ſo cruell, as to let a poore man ſuſtaine harme through our naughtyneſſe? What a dealing were that? Do not ſuch folke deſerue to be confounded? But (as I ſaid afore) this place treateth not of puniſhment to be executed by the earthly Iudges. God telleth vs that although ſuch dealing bee borne with, and that it bee but laughed at: yet it ſhall come to account before him. Nowe ſith it is ſo, let euery man looke to himſelf. And firſt let vs beware, that when our neighbours are in any extremity; we alſo be pitiful moued with compaſſion to ſuccour them. Therefore looke as any man ſhall haue neede of our helpe; let vs be preſt and ready to reach out our hand and to lende it him. And ſpecially if our Lorde graunt vs the grace to bee able to ſerue our neighbours turnes, without ſtreyning of our ſelues for the matter, or without coſt: let vs vnderſtand that hee doeth vs great honour. For whoſoeuer releeueth him that is in neede, is the miniſter of GOD. Thus GOD imployeth vs in his ſeruice, and therewithall promiſeth vs that our labour ſhall not be loſt; and ought not wee then to bee the more prouoked thereunto? Marke this therefore for a ſpecial point, ẏ ſuch as are ſuccourleſſe, are here commended vnto vs by God. And moreouer let vs knowe, that if we be bound to guide the blinde, leaſt they ſhould ſtumble or ſtray out of the way: we ought to be much more foreward and readie to aduiſe a man, when we ſee he hath neede of counſell, and is like to fall into ſome daunger for want of our aduiſe. But yet much more ought the way of ſaluation to bee priuiledged: in ſo much that if wee ſee a man ouerſhoote himſelfe, and is going into deſtruction; wee muſt not diſdayne to warne him, ſaying; Wretched creature, whither goeſt thou? What wilt thou doe? Wilt thou needes thus wilfully periſh? And ſpecially when he doeth it of ignoraunce: If wee then ſpare our tongues in that behalfe, ſo as they be not vſed as inſtruments of ſaluation to ẏ poore ignorant ſoule, who would faine be taught: ſurely ſuch rechleſneſſe ſhal not abide vnpuniſhed, nor be forgotten before God. Although neither Lawe nor Iuſtice proceede againſt it; yet ſhall this curſe bee ratified vppon it. To bee ſhort, let vs marke, that our Lorde meant by this threat, to induce vs to pitie and compaſſion, in ſuccouring al ſuch as haue neede of vs: And ſpecially in imploying our ſelues when wee ſee poore ignoraunt perſons deſtitute of counſell, and that wee our ſelues are of abilitie to bring them backe agayne into the ryght way. Thus much concerning that point.

Nowe followeth immediatly concerning crueltie: Curſed bee hee that wreſteth the right of the ſtraunger, the widowe, and the fatherleſſe. True it is that to the vttermoſt of our power wee muſt mayntayne euery mans right. Neuertheleſſe, our Lorde in this place as afore, ſpeaketh of Wydowes, fatherleſſe, and ſtraungers, bycauſe they lie open to a great number of iniuries and outrages, and no man ſettes himſelfe in their defence; nay, feawe haue any care at all of them, bycauſe they be not able to make any recompence. Looke mee vppon a Straunger, ſee howe hee ſhall be fleeced, howe he ſhall bee vexed, howe hee ſhall be wronged, yea and that openly; and yet it ſhall be winked at. And why? For euery man will bee freendly to his owne neighbour; and as for that man, hee is not of the ſame country, he is not of the ſame Citie, he belongeth not vnto vs. Thus yee ſee howe the poore man ſhall be left deſtitute. In lyke caſe are Wydowes and Fatherleſſe Children. For as for the fatherleſſe childe, men looke not that hee ſhould acknowledge what is doone for him to day or to morowe. Sometimes he lies in his Cradle, and knowes not who dooes him good and who dooes him euill, bycauſe he hath no diſcretion: hee cannot requite the pleaſure that is done vnto him: and therfore euery man letteth him alone. In the ſame caſe do wydowes ſtand, ſpecially when they be poore, & are of no great countenaunce to the worldward: for then euery man ſhrinks from them; and ſo they bee left vp as it were to the ſpoile. Now bicauſe theſe things come commonly to paſſe, God doth purpoſely poſely take ſuch folke into his protection, ſaying that if any man doe wreſt or hinder the right of the ſtraunger, the widow and the fatherleſſe, he wilbe reuenged thereof: inſomuch that although it be not accounted of before the world, but rather the dooers of ſuch outrages be well liked of; yet will he call them before him, and ſhew that he had a care of thoſe whome he had taken into his ſafekeeping. And ſo vnder one kinde, God meant to ſhewe breefely, that if we tread vppon ſuch as haue no credite, nor meane to defende themſelues, nor any ſtud to leane vnto, as in reſpect of the world, hee reſerueth to himſelfe the puniſhing thereof. That is the thing which wee haue to gather vpon this text.

Now, to wreſt or hinder the Right, is nothing elſe but vniuſtly & without cauſe to oppreſſe yͤ feeble and weake, and ſuch as haue no body to ſupport and maintain them. Truly that maner of ſpeech is ſet downe in the holy ſcripture, which is al one with this which we be wont to ſay, to daſh a good caſe, but yet in generall it is as much to ſay, as, to diſappoynt a man of his right. Nowe therefore, when I pill a man, when I rake to my ſelfe the things that belong to him, when I ſtrip him out of his ſubſtance, when I thruſt him out of al that euer he hath, when I ouermaſter him, and I take more vppon mee than becommeth mee: then doe I hinder his right. And ſo we ſee (as I ſaide afore) that in this text God ſheweth that he will bee the Iudge of al the outrages which are done to ſuch as haue no meanes to reuenge themſelues, and are forſaken & forgotten on yͤ behalfe of men. But were we wel aduiſed, ſurely we wold be more afraid to haue God our aduerſarie partie, than all the whole worlde together. And in deede therein we ſhew, yͭ we giue ſmall credit to Gods word: in ſo much that if a man be of great kinred & haue many friends, if a man be rich or highly fauoured of the world: we dare not meddle with him; & although he haue moleſted vs, yet wil we ſweetely ſwallow it vp, & in any wiſe beware that we prouoke him not. Thus wil men beare wͭ all ſuch as haue wherwith to maintaine themſelues to yͤ worldward; when in the meane while they that are deſtitute ſhalbe pilled & eaten vp. Yet notwithſtanding God is their defender, and ſaith, that in oppreſſing ſuch folke, we make warre againſt him, and therefore that he alſo muſt be faine to lift vp his arme in the maintenance of thoſe whom hee hath taken into his protection. But men care not for that: and doe we not thereby bewray our vnbeleefe? For had we a true and liuely feeling that God ieſteth not heere, in telling vs that his curſe ſhall light vpon thoſe which ſhal ſo haue misintreated the feeble ſort and ſuch as haue no mainteyners: it is certaine that we would quake whenſoeuer we were tempted to do euil to any poore creature yͭ hath no ſtay, credite or authoritie in the world. I ſee this man hath no kinſfolke nor friendes; I ſee no man regardeth him; I ſee he is vndefended: now if I aduaunce my ſelfe againſt him, or if I trouble him; God ſetteth himſelfe againſt me, he ſetteth his mark vpon the poore man, and he telleth me that if I meddle with ſuch a perſon, he will take the caſe to himſelfe, and I ſhall haue impeached his owne maieſtie. If we did thinke on this, certaine it is, that wee ſhoulde bee much more reſtrained and held backe by his feare than we are by all the fauours and diſpleaſures of this world whatſoeuer. Neuertheleſſe, we ſee the cleane contrarie, we bee very dulheads in this behalfe. And therefore let vs bethinke our ſelues to bee more watchfull than we haue beene. And ſith wee dare not attempt any thing againſt thoſe which are armed with al defence, & haue wherewith to vpholde themſelues in this world: let vs much leſſe doe any outrage or iniurie to thoſe whome God doeth as it were broode vnder his winges, and of whome he declareth himſelfe to bee the protector: and let vs alſo conſider well, that though the world ſay not a woord to vs, but rather allow of vs for it, Gods vengeance muſt light vppon vs double, ſpecially when through ſuch cōtempt we ſhal haue taken greater libertie to doe euill. For it is certayne that the cruelty which is committed againſt poore folke which haue no ſtay to leane vnto, is a manifeſt contempt of GOD, and an vtter ſkorning of him, as who would ſay hee were vnable to execute the vengeance which he hath threatned. Now when GOD is ſo lightly eſteemed, thinke wee that hee will beare it? Yee ſee heere firſt how this kinde of outrage is euen againſt nature. For if wee were not forepoſſeſſed with our wicked affections; ſurely euery of vs woulde confeſſe, that it is much woorſe to haue hurt or deuoured a poore weake creature; than to haue doone harme to a rich man which is well alyed and hath reſcue and power to reuendge himſelfe. All men will graunt that. Therefore is it one of the greateſt and moſt outrageous faultes that can bee among men. Agayne it is a ſkorning of GOD; which is a diueliſhe wickedneſſe when wee bee not mooued at this ſaying of GOD, I haue theſe folke in my hande, I will mayntayne them, and whoſoeuer aduaunceth himſelfe agaynſt them, muſt needes haue mee to bee his aduerſarie partie. If wee make no account of this, as though GOD had neuer ſpoken it: is it not a token that we be too hearde harted? And therefore (as I haue ſayde already) let vs learne to beethinke our ſelues better; and to haue a better regarde of him: and when wee bee conuerſant among ſuch folke as are deſpiſed to the worldwarde, without alyaunce, without freendes, without ſuccours: let vs beware that wee deale after ſuch a ſorte with them, as it may alwaies runne in our mindes that they bee Gods children, and that the heauenly Iudge will not forget the wrongs that are doone vnto them, ſpecially ſeeing hee hath tolde vs heere, that thoſe which haue bin ſo cruell to the feeble, ſhall not eſcape his curſe.

Nowe Moſes addeth further, Curſed bee hee which lyeth with his fathers wife, Curſed bee hee which lyeth with a beaſt, with his owne Siſter, or with his Mother in law. This place treateth of all the infamous ſortes of lecherie, yea euen of the loathſomeſt ſortes of them; whether it bee inceſt or buggerie or ſuch other infections. And it is not without cauſe that God chuſeth out thoſe kinds; for it is to the ende that wee ſhoulde bee touched with the more feare and terrour when we goe about any kinde of Lechery. God could haue ſayde ſimply in one worde, Curſed ſhall he bee which committeth any lecherie: and in very deede, that is the marke whereat this text ameth. Neuertheleſſe hee contenteth not himſelfe ſo, but (as I ſayde) hee chooſeth the examples which are moſt outrageous. And why? To the intent wee ſhould bee touched the more to the quicke. For we ſee how ſlowe we be in hearkening to the things which God telleth vs. We haue his woord; but what for that? It paſſeth away. We will not ſticke to ſay, that it behoueth vs to keepe our ſelues from breaking his Lawe. But if vices be ſpoken of but in a word or twaine, ſhall they be eſteemed as they ought to be, that is to ſay, as crymes before God which deſerue endleſſe death? Wee ſee howe euery man diſpenſeth with himſelfe, ſo as the priuie theefe maketh no conſcience of filching, till of a petie theefe, he becommeth a robber; and then (to his ſeeming) all is nothing that he hath done afore, except hee become a murtherer and a cutter of mens throates. Thus doe men proceede in degrees of Theeuerie: and as much doe they alſo in Lecherie. For they make account of it but as of a thing of nothing, vntill they fall into yͤ greateſt extremities. Foraſmuch then as we bee dulled, ſo as we bee not touched with any ſuch feare as were requiſite, when God condemneth ſinne and would plucke vs backe from it: therfore it is needefull that he ſhould ſet before vs the examples that are moſt deteſtable, euen ſuch as (ſpite of our teeth) muſt needes make yͤ haire to ſtand on end on our heads whẽ we heare them named; to the intent that no man ſhould beguile himſelf with fond flatterie, but euery man be well ware yͭ he holde himſelfe vnder the obedience of God. Heere then we ſee two things: The one is, that GOD hath condemned all vnchaſtitie, and al maner of Lecherie: and ſecondly we ſee how hee hath purpoſely choſen the thinges that are moſt ougly, as Inceſtes, and vncleanneſſe againſt kinde, as the medling euen with brute beaſtes. And why is that? To the ende that men ſhould haue occaſion to bethinke themſelues the better, and not to doe as they bee commonly wont, which is to hearken and to lay down their eare to it and to ſay, All this is verie true; and yet to make no account of it, but to fare as folke amaſed, as though a man had knocked them on the head with a beetle. Thus much concerning the firſt point.

And wee ſee howe God ſtandeth much vppon Inceſtes, when he ſayeth, Curſed ſhall hee bee which lyeth with his mother in law, the wife of his Father, or with the daughter of his father, or of his mother, or with his owne daughter in law, and ſuch other degrees. And why? Herein wee ſee how men haue in all ages ouerſhot themſelues in this behalfe. For God could well skill to apply remedies according to mens diſeaſes. Therefore it is not for nought that he ſtandeth ſo much vpon thoſe things. And why? For in as much as he ſaw that men had neede to bee held ſhort; and that ſuch kindes of wickedneſſe would haue raigned, if he had not ſet himſelfe ſtoutly againſt thẽ, & caſt barres in their wayes, as if he ſhould haue ſayd, ſtay there, and play not the looſe colts; if he had not ſo prouided afore hand, that men might not ruſh foorth into ſuch vices: ſurely al had gone to confuſion. And if this wickedneſſe were in thoſe daies; certeſſe we be not exempted from it nowadaies. And therfore let vs vnderſtand, that the more earneſtneſſe our Lorde hath vſed heere in this behalfe; the more doth he warne vs to occupy our ſelues in the minding of thoſe things, ſo as we bethinke vs of them day and night, earely and late, to the end we may walke in ſuch chaſtitie and ſobrietie, as our life may not breake forth into ſuch beaſtly ſinnes; but as we may be giuen to God to ſerue him purely. That (ſay I) is the thing which wee haue to gather vpon this place. And let vs not flatter our ſelues: for God knoweth well what is meete for vs; or elſe hee would not haue ſpoken heere of thinges that are ſo ſhameful, that we may be aſhamed euen to name them. And what then? Had not God a regard thereunto? Yes that had hee: but he knew that the heart of man is a dreadful dungeon, and that we muſt be reſtrayned as it were by force, or elſe he ſhould neuer be able to compaſſe vs. Nowe then, let this prouoke vs the more to looke neerly to our ſelues, that we ouerſhoot not our ſelues one way nor other, but that wee bee vigilaunt to dedicate our ſelues to the ſeruice of God with al pureneſſe, as I ſaide afore.

And moreouer let vs vnderſtand, that lecherie in it ſelf is ſo loathſome a thing before God, that although men make no great account of yͤ puniſhing thereof; yet ſhall wee not therefore make the better market, at leaſtwiſe when wee come before the heauenly throne. For it is no ſmall thing, yͭ god baniſheth all whooremongers and lechours out of his kingdome, as is ſayde thereof both in the firſt Epiſtle of Saint Paule to the Corinthians, (as we haue ſeene not long ſince,) and alſo in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. 1.Cor.6.9.& Heb.13.4. That is the thing in effect, which wee haue to beare in minde: namely that God will not haue men to exceede in their fleſhly luſtes, by companying together like brute beaſtes; but that euerie man ſhould liue chaſtly in marriage, and haue ſuch regard of honeſtie in that behalfe, as nature be not forgotten by the companying of the ſonne in lawe with his ſtepmother, or of the father with his owne daughter, or wͭ his daughter in lawe, or by the marrying of the brother with his owne ſiſter, but that thoſe degrees bee obſerued. For without ſuch order, what woulde come of it? Wherein ſhoulde wee differ from Bulles and Aſſes? Thus yee ſee what wee haue to gather vppon the firſt poynt, in that our Lorde hath heere condemned all maner of vnchaſt dealings, and wil not haue men to behaue thẽſelues as lawleſſe in thoſe caſes, but to dedicate themſelues vnto him, & conſider that their bodyes

1. Cor.6.15. 19. bodies are the Temples of the holy Ghoſt, and members of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; and therefore that they muſt repreſſe their wicked affections. Marke that for one point.

Secondly (as I haue noted already) God hath ſet downe ſuch examples heere before our eyes, as ought to make vs afraide, in that he ſpeaketh of ſuch as againſt nature doe ſo company with their owne mothers, their ſtepmothers, or their Siſters. Hee ſpeaketh of them expreſly, to the intent that from the one we ſhould come to the other, as we ſee hee doeth in all his Lawe. And this hath beene declared more at length heeretofore. When hee will condemne hatred, hee ſpeaketh of murder. And why? If a man tell vs that no man ought to hate his brother; wee eaſily graunt it to be ſinne; but yet wee make no conſcience to doe it. But when God ſayeth, 1.Iohn.3.15 that hee which hateth his brother is a murtherer: then are wee the more abaſhed and reſtrained. Likewiſe in this text, for as much as ẏ ſkorners doe but ieſt at whoredome; they doe alſo beare themſelues in hand, that God ought not to call them to account for it. And this vice is not of this daies or of yeſterdayes breeding: we ſee it hath beene in all ages, as Moſes reporteth heere. And therefore God nameth the deteſtableſt kindes of lecherie, to the intent that thereupon wee ſhould conclude thus, that if wee liue not chaſtly, wee ſhall fall from one euill to another, vntill we bee fallen into ſuch a bottomleſſe gulfe, as ſhall bee horrible to thinke on. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vpon this text. But wee ought to make our benefite of this warning, conſidering the blockiſhneſſe that is in vs. Wee thinke our ſelues to bee very ſharpe witted and apt to conceiue: and yet wee vnderſtande not any thing in the doctrine of God; wee bee ſo dulheadded, that hee is fayne to chawe thinges aforehande to vs, or elſe wee woulde not bee mooued with them. To bee ſhorte, wee haue leſſe witte and reaſon than young babes haue. Let men commend themſelues as much as they liſt, and let them glory vppon opinion that they bee very able: yet are they ſo dulheaded, that wee ſhould play the very bruit beaſtes, if our Lorde did not chawe thinges rudely vnto vs. And what is the cauſe thereof? Forſooth that wee bee forepoſſeſſed with our fleſhly affections, and none is ſo deafe as hee that will not heare, as they ſay. Sith wee ſee this, let vs bethinke our ſelues the better, and when men chawe thinges groſſely vnto vs, let vs not thinke they doe vs wrong, as ſome doe, who bee ſo nice, that if a man vſe a rough ſtyle to them, Oh, ſay they, I vnderſtoode all this by a woord or twaine, by like I am a little babe. To bee ſhorte, they be weary if a man bring them not matter of great ſharpeneſſe: for they fondly preſume in their owne imagination, that euen at the firſt daſhe they knowe all that is neceſſarie. But beholde, God ſpeaketh heere in another ſtyle and language. Why doth he ſo? He ſeeth there is need. So thē let vs ſuffer our ſelues to be taught according to our capacity; & ſeeing we be ſlowe; if our Lorde waken vs, let vs receiue it meekely, and learne to doe our ſelues good by it. And ſo yee ſee what wee haue to gather vpon all theſe textes.

Now whereas heere is mention made of ſtriking [or ſmyting] ones neyghbour ſecretly: it is ſpoken againſt all hatred and rancour, and ſerueth for a concluſion. A man myght demaunde heere howe it comes to paſſe, that GOD doeth here curſe thoſe whoſe offence is in thinges whereof no mention is made in his Lawe: for I haue tolde you heeretofore, that it is ynough for a man to haue obſerued the thinges that are contayned in the ten commaundementes; and alſo that the full perfection of our lyfe is ſet down there. But no mention is made there concerning the blind. And how happeneth it then that God doeth heere denounce vengeaunce againſt the thing that is not forbidden in his Lawe? Verily heerein wee ſee (as it hath beene expounded alreadie) that our Lorde in his Lawe requireth all thinges that concerne charitie; as, that wee ſhould ſuccour one another, and that there ſhould bee ſuch a common league among vs, as that euery man ſhould ſpend himſelfe in helping his neighbour. Whatſoeuer is contrary to this, is forbidden and condemned by the law of God. And therefore it is ſayde heere now; Curſed ſhall he be which ſmiteth his neighbour ſecretly. Vnder this ſaying, our Lord hath comprehended all the miſuſages that wee can offer to our neighbour: inſomuch that if we giue him but a phillip, it is as a kinde of murthering before him. And we ſee howe that the man which doeth but grinde his teeth at his brother, is condemned to hel fire: & Matt.5.22. what ſhal then become of him which ſhal haue lifted vp his fiſt? Surely, euen to ſtirre a mans tongue againſt his neighbour; is a ſin worthy of greeuous puniſhement. If wee doe but grunt in way of ſkorne or diſdayne; it is forbidden. Howe much more then ſhall wee bee blamed, if wee goe aboute to outrage them any maner of way? Let vs marke therefore, that here vnder one particular, God doeth generally comprehende all outrage, violence, and miſdemeanors which wee can vſe towardes our neighbours. And hee ſayeth expreſſely; in ſecrete, or priuilie, to the intent wee ſhoulde bee ſtill put in minde of that which I haue toulde you heeretofore; namely that in this behalfe, the caſe ſtandeth not vppon the yeelding of account vnto men. Put the caſe that wee haue offended in breaking all the commaundementes, and yet notwithſtanding that no man chalendgeth vs for it, but rather that authoritie it ſelfe allowe of our dooinges, and that when wee bee accuſed for it, wee bee acquit of it, or that no man dare complayne of the miſorders which wee haue committed: let vs put the caſe it bee ſo: yet doeth GOD ſpeake otherwiſe, ſaying; that if wee haue doone our neighbour any harme priuilie, his bloud ſhall crye out againſt vs for vengeance, euen when wee thinke our ſelues eſcaped.

And

Gen.4.10. And we ſee what is ſayde of Abell: although no man gaue information againſt Cain, nor any proceſſe went out againſt him; yet did the bloud of him that was murdered, ſpeake. God ſaith not, I haue hard ſay; but, the bloud of thy brother crieth vnto me, againſt thee. Heere then wee ſee that God threateneth vs not with any puniſhement to bee ſuffered at mans hande: but rather telleth vs that wee muſt walke before him and in his preſence. And although wee feare not any earthly Iuſtice; yet wee ought not to forbeare to brydle our ſelues ſhort, for as much as hee doeth his office, and the vengeaunce which hee hath ſpoken of heere, muſt needes bee executed vppon all ſuch as haue eſcaped by fauour, or cloaked their crymes, yea or offended ſo cunningly as no man coulde come to the knoweledge of it. Seeing it is ſo, let vs looke that wee enter into our owne conſciences, and that wee haue Gods Lawe written there, ſo as wee haue not an eye to men, as who woulde ſay, I haue not beene blamed or reprooued: but rather conſider that our GOD watcheth ouer vs, and vnderſtande the office of his word to bee ſuch as is written in the epiſtle to the Hebr.4.12. Hebrewes: that is to wit, that when it is preached vnto vs; then all thinges muſt come to tryall, and it muſt enter in, euen to the ſecreteſt thoughtes of our hearte. Nowe if Gods woord haue ſuch power: let vs aſſure our ſelues that much more it hath the office which is attributed vnto it. Wherefore let vs bee reſtrayned by this meanes, and when wee haue ſerued God with our heartes, let our life bee ſo aunſwerable therunto, that when we ſhall come before our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, we may ſhew that wee were truly minded to ſerue him, and not to pleaſe mortall men.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to giue vs true repentaunce of them; and moreouer to beare with vs vntill hee haue ridde vs quite and cleane of all our ſinnes, and of all our ſpots; and to make vs ſo to profite by the things which wee heare, as we may learne more and more to renounce ourſelues, and to repreſſe our wicked luſtes, vntill he haue clothed vs agayne with the puritie of that righteouſneſſe whereunto he calleth vs. And ſo let vs all ſay; Almighty GOD heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the ix. of March, 1556.

The CLII. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the ſeuen and twentith Chapter.

24 Curſed bee hee which ſmiteth his neighbour priuily: And all the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

25 Curſed be he which taketh gifts to ſmite the ſoule of guiltles bloud: And al the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

26 Curſed bee hee which confirmeth not all the words of this law by dooing them: And all the people ſhall ſay, Amen.

WE vnderſtande by this text, that the thing which hath beene ſayde afore is very true; namely that God meant to teache the people of olde tyme, that it was not ynough for them to diſcharge thēſelues before men, or to ſcape blame and puniſhment here: but ẏ they muſt looke vp higher, and conſider that there is a Iudgement ſeate in heauen, before the which wee muſt one day aunſwere and make our account. That is the place whereon we muſt thinke, if we will diſcharge our ſelues of our duetie. For wee may wel beguile men in making a faire countenance; and againe we may ſo order our liues, as no man may finde any fault in vs, as touching our outward deedes: and yet in the meane while, if our heartes bee full of wicked luſtes, if it greeue vs to be helde in awe, if we grate our teeth againſt GOD: what obedience is that? Therefore let vs note, that whereas in this text it is ſayde: Curſed ſhall he be which ſmiteth his neighbour priuily: God condemneth not only the faults that come to knowledge before men; but alſo the crymes that lye hidden. And therefore if a man haue liued in ſuch wiſe, as he cannot be rebuked of the worlde, but rather is prayſed and commended: he muſt not thereupon fall aſleepe, but he muſt examine his heart, and conſider well whether there be any lurking hole or backe nooke there within. For if the thoughtes bee euill; although men perceiue them not; yet will God alwayes doe the office of a Iudge. 1.Ioh.3.20. And if our own hearts reproue vs (as ſaith ſaint Iohn:) God ſeeth much more clearely.

So then this text ſerueth wel to humble vs. And in deede, we ought to remember this other ſentence of Sainct Iohn where it is ſayde, that 1.Iohn.3.15 whoſoeuer hateth his neighbour priuilie, although hee cloake his hatred ſo as it be not perceiued, or rather make a ſhew of loue: that man fayleth not to be condemned before God. And ſo ye ſee in effect what we haue to beare in mind. Let vs not buſie our heades about mens reports. Although a man bee well reported of heere in this world, yet let him not flatter himſelfe therefore; but let him ſummon himſelfe before God, and conſider whether he bee faultie in his heart. Let not men bring hither their owne opinions and fancies; for all ſuch things ſhall bee refuſed, they will ſerue to no purpoſe. And therfore let vs walke with vnfayned heart before God. For we know hee regardeth not the outward apparance, according as it is ſade in the firſt booke of Samuel; but he requireth the heart & truth, as is 1.Sam.16.7. Ier.5.3. ſayde in the fifth chapter of Ieremy. And looke what is ſaid heere concerning murders and fightinges, the ſame muſt wee extende to all other crimes. For if God cal thē to accoūt which haue done any outrage to their neighbours; although the ſame be vnknowen to the world: thinke wee that robberies, and treaſons, and fraudes, and raylings, and ſlaunderings, and ſuch lyke things ſhall paſſe away vnſpoken of? And therefore let vs learne that we cannot by any meanes eſchew the hand of God, nor ſcape his vengeance, if we foſter vices in our hearts, which be not apparant vnto men. And that we may the more benefite our ſelues by this doctrine, let euery of vs examine himſelfe aright in his heart, when he commeth to heare the worde of God. For it behoooueth vs to be reproued inwardly, as Saint Paul ſpeaketh thereof in the foureteenth Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians. Euery man 1.Cor.14.25 (I ſay) muſt ſearch his own thoughts and affections to the very bottom. Alſo it is the peculiar office of Gods word to bee a ſharpe ſworde, and Hebr.4.12. to deuide aſunder our thoughts from all our affections and lykinges; and to enter euen into the marow of the bones, and to leaue nothing vndiſcouered. Seeing it is ſo; let vs preuent GODS iudgement, and not tary till he curſe vs, and ban vs for the guiltles bloud which crieth out againſt vs: but let euery of vs condemne himſelfe as ſoone as hee hath offended, and let him be ſory in his heart, and beſeeche GOD of his infinite goodneſſe and mercie, to deliuer vs from the curſe which is denounced againſt all ſuch as haue ſo misbehaued themſelues in ſecret, and not beene conuicted thereof before men.

It followeth; Curſed ſhall hee bee which ſhall haue taken gifts to doe any wrong to his neighbour, and ſpecially to ſmite the ſoule of the innocent bloud. For ſo doth Moſes ſpeake word for worde. Neuertheleſſe, the word Soule meaneth life. And bicauſe the bloud is the proper ſeate of life: therefore is it ſayde the Soule of the Innocent blood. Surely although a man be faultie, yet were it not lawfull to buy & ſel his life. But I haue told you already, that God hath ſet before vs the crimes that are moſt deteſtable, to the intent to waken vs the better, bicauſe wee bee not ſufficiently mooued when he ſpeaketh of common faults. For thoſe thinges ſlippe away, and wee beare our ſelues in hand, that it is no heard matter to get forgiueneſſe of them. Now for as much as there is ſo great ſlackneſſe in men: therefore in this place God hath choſen the offences which euen of nature we ought to abhorre. For if the life of an innocent perſon bee bought and ſolde: it is an horrible matter; euerie man will ſay, that ſuch wicked conſpiracie is not to bee ſuffered. Thus doe wee nowe ſee the meaning of God. But although this thing bee ſufficiently condemned with full mouth: yet doe not men ceaſſe to put it too much in vre. And for proofe hereof, looke vpon the practiſes that are wrought continually to oppreſſe the poore and ſimple ſort. True it is that they ſhall not alwayes bee in daunger to haue their throtes cut: but yet for hurting of them, what in their perſons, and what in their goods, men are ſtill gilty of murder before God. And as for the ſeeking of bywaies to diſappoint the right of the innocent, and the practiſing of deuices againſt ſuch as ſeeke to liue in peace and concord, it is too common a thing: and therfore this law is no more than needeth. True it is (as I haue ſayde afore) that at the firſt puſhe we can wellynough ſay, that there is no reaſon why we ſhould continue in ſo great and ſo exceſſiue frowardneſſe; euery man will ſay by and by, it is againſt nature: but yet the common vſe and cuſtome is cleane contrarie. And therefore let vs marke well the doctrine that is ſet downe heere; namely that God cannot abyde ſo great a crime vnpuniſhed, as the diſappointing of the right, whereby the partie that hath not offended ſhold bee oppreſſed againſt all right and reaſon. And truely God ſpeaketh here, as well of Iudges that haue beene corrupted to oppreſſe a poore man; as of thoſe that haue ſolde themſelues or haue ſet themſelues to hyre to murder, beate, or ſtrike men; as theſe ſquaring Ruffians doe, which ſeeke to bee ſet a worke in beating men or in quarelling with them: all theſe kindes of offenders hath God vtterly condemned in this text. And vnder one particular he comprehendeth generally all, as I haue ſayde afore. And ſo the thing in effect which wee haue to gather, is, that Couetouſneſſe muſt not leade vs to hurt any man at all. Wee ſee nowe that this doctrine extendeth it ſelfe verie farre. For what is the cauſe of the committing of ſo many couſinages, oppreſſions, outrages, and iniuries; but onely the ſeeking of ſelfe profite? I woulde faine pleaſure a man that is in authoritie, bycauſe that to my ſeeming hee is able to requite mee againe: and hereupon I for his ſake doe fall to oppreſſing one, and to tormenting another. And afterwarde that is not ynough; vnleſſe I vſe other manner of dealings, ſo as the matter groweth to bee endleſſe & out of all meaſure. So much the more therefore doeth it ſtande vs in hande, to marke well this doctrine where it is ſayd: Curſed ſhall he be which taketh reward to doe men wrong.

And hereunto anſwereth that which is ſayde in the fifteenth Pſalme: namely, that if wee will be Gods houſhold folk, and dwel in his Church, Pſal.15.5. wee muſt beware of taking rewardes to hurt the guiltleſſe. If God baniſh all ſuch out of his kingdome, dome, and from the company of the faithfull, as haue gone about to miſbehaue themſelues, after that faſhion, by ſetting themſelues to ſale and hire through their couetouſneſſe: what remaineth for them but vtter curſedneſſe? For when God once diſclaymeth vs,& acknowledgeth vs no longer for any of his: needes muſt we be accurſed. Wherein lyeth all our happineſſe? Pſal.33.12. It is ſayde in the pſalme, Right happie bee thoſe folke whoſe God is the euerlaſting. The way then for vs to bee happie, is to be taken of God into his flocke: And if hee caſt vs out; needes muſt all miſcheefe light vpon our heades. Sith it is ſo, let vs learne ſo much the more to reſtraine our ſelues, and let euery of vs bee contented with that which he hath, and let vs not ſeeke to aduaunce our ſelues by vnlawefull meanes; leaſt the profite which wee haue gryped to our ſelues, become as Cudgels or rather as ſtabbes with a dagger to yͤ poore, whom wee ſhall haue wounded by raking ſo to our ſelues by hooke or by crooke. Therefore let vs learne to haue both our heartes and our handes cleane from all anoyance and miſdealing, if wee will bee bleſſed of God, and taken to bee of the number of the faithfull. Thus yee ſee in effect what this ſentence importeth.

Nowe for a concluſion it is ſayd; Curſed ſhall hee bee which confirmeth not the wordes of this lawe by performing them. Heere wee ſee yet better the thing which hath beene declared heeretofore: namely that GOD meant to authoriſe his whole Lawe in generall, without excepting any one point of it, notwithſtanding that hee haue ſet downe but ſome particular examples thereof. The point then whereunto the ſolemnitie redoundeth which God cauſed to be made vpon Mount Eball, and likewiſe oueragainſt it on Mount Garizim; is, that the people ſhould know that this Lawe is the Rule of all perfection, and that God who is the authour thereof is not to be dallyed with; but rather that it is to bee receaued with all reuerence, yea and that euery man ought to proteſt with his mouth, that it is good reaſon that GOD ſhould be obeyed; and that all the tranſgreſſours of his will ſhoulde condemne themſelues, without making any reply in their owne excuſe; and willingly acknowledge themſelues woorthie of death and of all miſcheefe, vnleſſe they ſubmitted themſelues obediently to the ſeruing of God. For this cauſe therefore it is ſayde; Curſed ſhall hee bee which confirmeth not the woordes of this Lawe. Hee ſpeaketh not heere of ſome one commaundement or twayne, or of ſome parte of them: but of the whole Law, and of euery parte and parcell thereof, without any exception. And indeede, wee ought to bethinke Iames.2.11. vs howe Saint Iames ſayeth, that hee which hath forbidden to ſteale, hath allſo forbidden to commit adulterie: and that hee which hath forbidden Murder, hath alſo forbidden falſewitneſſing. Wee muſt not then rent Gods Iuſtice in peeces. After what ſorte ſoeuer we offende, ſurely wee violate GODS Lawe, and deſpyſe his maieſtie. But hee will bee acknowledged in his Lawe throughout in all poyntes, and not in part, as I haue tolde you afore. Seeing it is ſo, let vs marke that God hath knit his commaundementes together, to ſhewe vs that it is not for man to put them aſunder, as wee ſee many doe, who will needes indent with GOD to abſtayne from ſome one ſinne, and doe beare themſelues in hande that they bee diſcharged when they can ſay, Well, yet haue I not offended in all poyntes; Indeede I am blameworthy for ſuch a ſinne; but as for in all the reſt, I haue obeyed God. The theefe will boaſt that hee is no whoremonger; the murderer will ſay hee is no ſwearer; the whorehunter will likewiſe haue his excuſe, that hee ouerſhooteth not himſelfe in other thinges, as that hee is not cruell, or ſuch like. But what? As I ſayde afore, God will not haue his lawe to be canteled after that faſhion into peeces and gobbets: it is a righteouſneſſe which conſiſteth of ten commaundementes knitte together in one bonde. God therefore muſt be hearkened vnto, both in the firſt word and in the laſt, and as well in the fourth as in the ſecond. Seeing it is ſo, let vs remember how it is ſayd heere, that God will haue vs to confirme the wordes, that are conteyned in his Lawe: ſo as it is not ynough for a man to haue diſcharged himſelfe of ſome peece; God will not content himſelfe with that, neither will hee take ſuch ſeruice for payment: but hee will haue men to giue themſelues wholly vnto him. And with what condition? Lord, ſeeing that thy will is conteyned in thy Lawe: let our lyfe be conformable thereunto. For it belongeth not to vs to part them aſunder, we haue no ſuch libertie. Alſo (as I haue declared afore,) it is too groſſe a folly to thinke that wee can beare God in hand that we haue a good will to honour him, and in the meane while deſpiſe him in one thing or other.

And it is ſayde heere, To confirme the woordes by perfourming them. Heere Moſes ſheweth after what ſort we accept the doctrine which is deliuered vs in the name of GOD. It is not in laying our eare to it, or in confeſſing with our mouth that it is true & rightfull: that is not ynough. For all is but hypocriſie if our lyfe bee repugnaunt thereunto: And it will fall out accordyng to this ſaying of Saint Paule, Titus.1.16. that whereas wee confeſſe with our mouthes that wee beleeue in GOD; wee denye him in our lyfe. Wherefore let vs marke well, that the true tryall of our fayth and obedience, is to haue our lyfe aunſwerable thereunto, and to ſhewe by our dooinges, that wee haue not beene taught in vaine. That is the thing which wee haue to marke vpon this ſpeach where Moſes ſayth, That we muſt confirme the wordes of this Law by performing them; yea verily, by performing them, not by onely proteſting yͭ they bee good and rightfull, (for that were but a ſmal matter;) but by ſtraining our ſelues to ſerue God, by applying our whole indeuor that way, & by faſhioning all our woorkes according to his will. That is the good confirmation: that is the way for vs to proteſt that God is righteous, & that he hath giuen vs a good, ſure, and infallible rule, ſuch as wee ought to obſerue. Nowe wee ſee in effect the contents of this ſentence; wherby wee muſt vnderſtand, that God hath not inioyned vs a peeced obedience; but will haue vs to receiue his law to the vttermoſt in all pointes without exception. Wee ſee likewiſe that it is not ynough for vs to ſay, that GOD hath not commaunded any thing which is not righteous; but that we alſo muſt ſhewe an accord and conſent thereunto in our life, by framing it after all his commaundementes.

Moreouer it behoueth vs nowe to ſee in what taking wee ſhould bee, if this Curſe ſhould take place vpon vs. Certaine it is that all men are heere denounced accurſed. And this curſe importeth as much as if it were ſayde, that all are damned, all are loſt, all are forlorne. Take the righteouſeſt perſons that euer were in the worlde; and by this ſentence they deſerue to be caſt away. There is neither Abraham, nor any of the patriarkes: nor Dauid, nor all the Prophets, that can be exempted from this condem- Ezech.14.16 nation. God by his Prophet auoucheth Iob, Daniell, and Samuell for the righteouſeſt, and for ſuch as were in maner vnblamable: & yet muſt euen they alſo bee wrapped in this ſame curſe. Pſal.143.2. And as for Dauid, he confeſſeth it with his owne mouth, ſaying: Lorde, enter not into account with thy Seruaunt, for no man liuing ſhall bee iuſtified in thy ſight. There Dauid ſpeaketh not of the common people onely; but hee putteth himſelfe alſo in the number. True it is that in other places hee declareth ſufficiently, that it was his whole ſeeking to ſerue God; and that his deſire tended that way: yet notwithſtanding he acknowledged that he came far ſhort of diſcharging himſelfe, or of hauing ſuch perfection as were requiſite. If he yeelded himſelfe guiltie as well as other men: what ſhall we doe now? But heere is a dreadfull ſentence, and ſuch a one as ought to make the haires ſtand ſtiffe vppon our heads: Curſed ſhall he be which performeth not all the words of this law. And who is he that ſpeaketh this? It is God. Then is it ſuch a definitiue ſentence, as admitteth no appeale from it. For he wil haue al men to confeſſe it to be ſo; yea he wil haue euery man to cōfeſſe it with his own mouth. And what remaineth then for vs to do? Where is the hope of ſaluation? Hereby wee ſee, that if we had but the ten commandements of the law: we ſhould vtterly be vndone & periſh; and ẏ it behoueth vs to haue recourſe to his mercy, which out- Iam.2.13. goeth his iuſtice, as ſaith S.Iames. Gods goodnes then muſt take place towards vs, to deliuer vs frō the confuſion wherin al of vs ſhould haue bin, if the ſaid ſentence ſhould ſtand, and ẏ there ſhold be no grace to outgo it. And truly S.Paule in the Gal.3,10. third to the Galathians proueth by this text, that wee cannot become righteous by our workes, but that it behoueth vs to bee made righteous by fayth onely; that is to ſay, by the meere grace of God, bicauſe we be cōdemned euerichone of vs, if God enter into account with vs. For why? Curſed ſhall hee bee which performeth not all the wordes of the lawe. If a man reply, yea, but if a man doe performe them, why ſhould he not become righteous thereby? And why ſhould hee not be payde his hire at Gods hande, according to his deſertes? Saint Paule preſuppoſeth that there was neuer yet any man found, nor any can poſſibly be found, which performeth al the words of the law, and all that euer God commaundeth. Indeede it hath beene a common ſaying, That GODS Lawe is not vnpoſſible. And at this day when the Papiſtes reaſon againſt vs, they thinke it an vnuincible argument to prooue their freewill. Why ſhould GOD haue commaunded vs to loue him with all our hearte, if we bee not able to doe it? It were too repugnaunt, that GOD ſhould exact more of men than they are able to doe: nay, [in ſo dooing] hee ſhoulde bee vniuſt and cruell. After that maner doe the Papiſtes reaſon. But Saint Paule on the contrary part ſayeth, Curſed ſhall he bee which performeth not all the Commaundementes. And he preſuppoſeth (as I ſayde afore) that no man performeth them, and that it is vnpoſſible for to finde any ſuch man. Whereupon he inferreth his concluſion, Then is all mankinde vndoone, if they enter into examination of workes ſo as men muſt bee puniſhed according to their deſeruinges: GOD muſt needes caſt them off and vtterly damne them. And ſo wee haue an excellent leſſon in this text. For it is as much as if GOD ſtrake downe all the Children of Adam with one blowe of a beetle, yea and thundred downe vpon them to fling them into ſuch a dungeon of confuſion, as they might perceiue that in themſelues they are all damned and periſhed. But wee tary not there. For when God hath once humbled vs; he giueth vs the fitte meane of deliuerance from the condemnation, as ſhall bee ſhewed more plainely heereafter. But eare we proceed ſo farre, let vs conſider howe the Papiſtes deceiue themſelues. They ſee wellynough that no man performeth ẏ law of God: and although they forge the fantaſticall arguments which I ſpake of; ſaying that God commaundeth not any thing which is not in the power of men to doe: yet are they conuicted euen by their owne experience, that all men are ſinners; that all men haue doone amiſſe, (as the holy ſcripture alſo telleth vs;) that there is not any man liuing vpon the earth (as Salomon ſayeth) which ſinneth not; and that all men haue neede of the grace of God. The Papiſtes then although they well ſee this; yet do they wrangle ſtill, ſaying that that is before wee be regenerated againe by Gods ſpirite. Neuertheleſſe, if they be preſſed, they muſt needs confeſſe in the ſecond place, that euen the holyeſt folke are ſtill vnperfect, and ẏ there is ſome frailty in them. And though they would not confeſſe it, yet doth the holy ſcripture ſhew it, and euery man feeles it in himſelfe. Now then, wherfore do the Papiſts ſo greatly mayntaine the righteouſneſſe of works, & beare themſelues in hand that we deſerue well to be recompenced, and that we purchace or earne ẏ kingdome of heauen? How cōmeth it to paſſe that they be ſo brutiſh and ſo beaſtly? It is bicauſe they imagine that although we performe not the law: yet neuertheleſſe we faile not to merite or deſerue; & this they terme a righteouſneſſe in part. They ſay that all men doe amiſſe in deede; that is true: and that in that reſpect they be faultie before God, and through rigour doe well deſerue to be condemned: Neuertheleſſe, yͭ when they haue the righteouſnes in part, that is to ſay, when they doe partly obey the law: that doing of theirs is worthie to be accepted, and to be put into the account and reckoning. And that is the thing wherein they glorie ſo much. After that maner then there are deſeruings in men, though they performe not the whole law. That is for one point.

Againe they haue another diueliſh imagination; which is, that when they haue doone amiſſe, they can make amendes vnto GOD by their owne ſatisfactions, and can raunſome themſelues, ſo as they ſhall goe ſcotfree, at leaſtwyſe in their owne ſeeming. They will well confeſſe in one woorde, wee bee indaungered: but yet doeth it not followe that wee haue no meane to ſhifte it off, and to make GOD to accept in exchaunge, whatſoeuer wee bring vnto him. Heereuppon haue they founded all their good deuotions as they terme them, as Pilgrimages, Maſſes, and Yeremindes, with all their freewill deuotions, as their faſtinges and diuerſe other thinges; in ſo much that euen their Shrift is put among their woorkes of ſatisfaction. Againe the pratling of ſome Paternoſters, the babling before a Puppet, the chaunting of ſome Maſſe, the ſetting vp of ſome Tapers, and ſuch other things, are all of them ſuch recompences as GOD can not finde any fault at all with them, howbeit, bycauſe they ſee themſelues ouercharged with thoſe thinges: they forge a ſort of petie inuentions, wherewith to play with GOD. And therefore they haue deuiſed veniall ſinnes; in ſo much that if a man be tempted to wicked deſires, yet he ſhall not haue offended God, vntill he be willing and perfectly conſenting to yͤ performance therof. If a mā be tempted in himſelf, if a man bee mooued to doe euill; all this is no deadly ſinne, ſay the Papiſts; it is but veniall ſin, and one ſprinkle of holy water is ynough to waſh it cleane away. But contrariwiſe, wee knowe Deut.10.12. howe it is ſayde; O Iſrael, what is it that thy GOD requireth of thee; but that thou ſhouldeſt loue him with all thy heart? Heere yee ſee howe the righteouſneſſe of the Lawe is, that a man loue GOD with all his heart. But hee that hath offended is accurſed. And all of vs offende; and are not all of vs then in daunger of death? There is not that man vpon whome GOD pronounceth not this curſe. Nowe when men haue thought euill, ſo as they haue beene prouoked to doe naughtily: it is no ſinne (ſay the Papiſtes,) they bee righteous ſtill for all that. See how the Papiſtes do fully mocke God, in that they thinke yͭ by ſome fond ceremonie, or by a Meaculpa, they be diſcharged of their ſins, & make account of thē as of a thing of nothing. Theſe are the ſtartingholes which they haue to mocke God withal as a yong babe; and that is a dreadfull thing. But yet is it put in vre in al their ſchooles. Neuertheleſſe, we muſt not goe to worke after that faſhion; but we muſt rather bethinke vs howe the Apoſtle ſayeth, Heb.10.31. That it is a dreadfull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing God. Therefore we muſt not in this caſe breake the bondes and yoke which hee hath layde vppon our neckes: we muſt not play the wilde beaſtes: we muſt not thinke to beguile him by ſome faire ſhow in making countenance to ſerue him, hauing in the meane while no good will to ſerue him indeede. For in the ende hee will ſhewe that his vengeance ſhall light vppon al ſuch as haue liued like hypocrites and dubble hearted diſſemblers before him. What is to be doone then? We muſt frankely refuſe this gloſe of righteouſneſſe in part, which the Papiſtes haue forged: for it is a deuice of Sathans, and euen they themſelues will well confeſſe, that wee cannot merite by any inwarde worthineſſe which is in our woorkes. They ſay that all the worthyneſſe of our woorkes commeth onely of this, that God is acquainted with vs; inſomuch that when men haue doone all that is poſſible, yet will there euer bee ſome fault to bee founde in their woorkes, when they come before GOD. Not that all Papiſtes are of that minde, there is not paſt one of a thouſande that thinketh ſo: but there is yet a farre finer and ſubtler doctrine of Poperie; which is, that woorkes are not worthy of themſelues, but bycauſe of the promiſe of the Lawe. But what maner a one is this promiſe? Let vs come to that point. Beholde, GOD offereth himſelfe to all men, and ſayeth that whoſoeuer performeth the Lawe ſhall bee bleſſed; and contrariwiſe that they ſhall bee curſed which ſtep away from it. Thus ye ſee that the perfect righteouſnes is the performing of yͤ law. But as I haue told you already, no man performeth it; and therefore God is quitte of his promiſe towardes vs. Seeing that wee on our ſide fayle in our condition; hee for his parte oweth vs nothing. After the ſame maner alſo ſpeaketh S. Paule thereof, ſaying; If righteouſneſſe depende Rom.4.14. vpon the workes of the lawe, then is the promiſe to no purpoſe. Saint Paule in that place toucheth the matter to the quicke. For why? Who performeth the Lawe of God, that he can ſay, I haue attained vnto perfect righteouſneſſe in my workes? There is no ſuch man to bee founde. Then is there no more certaintie in the promiſes ſaith he: & ſo conſequently we be all damned, if wee will needes ground our ſelues vppon our woorkes. After that maner ſpeaketh hee thereof, as well to the Romanes as to the Galathians. Rom. 4. Gal. 3. And ſo let vs marke, that God denounceth vs to bee all condemned by this ſentence, where he ſayth, Curſed ſhall he bee which performeth not all the thinges that are contayned in the booke of my Lawe. As for the pelting traſhe which the Papiſtes call ſatiſfactions, they bee but mockeries. For GOD will bee ſerued with obedience. Moreouer the releaſing of our ſinnes is free beeſtowed, as the holye Scripture ſheweth. And as for all the Satisfactions (as they terme them) which men haue forged; they ſerue to no purpoſe, neither doeth GOD accept any of them. When wee fall to breeding of our owne lykinges in our owne braynes, hee refuſeth euerywhit of it. Therefore let vs holde vs to the grace of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, knowing that wee bee waſhed and clenſed by his bloude: and it is the onely remedie that GOD ſetteth foorth vnto vs.

Thus haue wee two thinges to marke: the one is, that if wee ſhould bee iudged by the Law of God, there needed no more but this foreſaide ſentence to damne vs all, yea euen the holyeſt Saintes that euer were in the worlde. For no man hath ſatisfied GODS Lawe; and therefore are wee all condemned. For if the holy fathers which had an Angelicall holyneſſe in this worlde, were notwithſtanding faultie before GOD: what ſhall become of vs? Let vs nowe make compariſon betweene vs and them. Howe farre off are wee from the holyneſſe of Abraham, the pureneſſe of Dauid, the ſoundneſſe of Iob, and the perfectneſſe of Daniel? When theſe may bee condemned, what ſhall wee bee? And therefore let vs learne to ſhrinke in our hornes, and let euerie of vs keepe his mouth ſhutte, as ſayeth Rom. 3.19. Saint Paule when hee bringeth vs to the righteouſneſſe of fayth, and to the mercie of God. The thing then which we haue to beare in mind is that God hath bereft vs of all righteouſneſſe, to the intent to rid vs of al preſumption & pride, and that we ſhould no more pretend to come to account with him, to bind him vnto vs, but that we ſhould willingly condemne our ſelues. Let that ſerue for one point. Nowe heereupon wee haue to conſider the remedie which God hath left: which is that yet neuertheleſſe we be righteous by meanes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For hee hath deliuered vs from the curſe which was due vnto vs: and for that cauſe was hee hanged Gal. 3.13. vppon tree, as ſayth S. Paule. We haue ſeene heeretofore in the one and twentith chapter, that as many as were hanged vpon tree were all accurſed. Now when GOD made that Lawe, knewe hee not what hee had ordayned afore concerning his owne only ſonne, who was to be hanged on tree? Surely it was an vnchaungeable decree, made euen before the creation of the worlde. Seeing it is ſo; wee bee redeemed from the curſe by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; and wee muſt nowe match this ſentence with the other which wee haue ſeene in the one and twentyth Chapter. Whereas it is ſayde heere, Curſed ſhall hee bee which performeth not all theſe ſayinges: yee ſee well that for want of performing them, wee bee confounded and of ryght as good as damned. But yet heerewithall, wee muſt alſo imbrace our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, who was curſed for our ſakes. And if that this Curſe bee not in vaine, then muſt wee nowe bee needes ſette free. What a thing were it, that the ſonne of GOD ſhould bee curſed without cauſe; and yet no fruite redounde thereof to vs? That hee which is the fountaine of all bleſſedneſſe, ſhould bee accurſed; and yet wee not knowe wherefore, but that it ſhould bee vnprofitable? Nowe then ſeeing that the curſe which Ieſus Chriſt ſuffered in his owne perſon, is not vaine and to no purpoſe: let vs knowe that by the ſame meane wee bee deliuered before GOD. And ſo yee ſee howe wee ought to make thoſe two textes to agree.

Furthermore wee knowe alſo that hee became ſubiect to the Lawe, Gal. 4.4. to the intent to performe all maner of obedience to the full, as it were in our perſon. And the righteouſneſſe which hee hath gotten in himſelfe, is at this day allowed vnto vs, as if euery of vs had diſcharged our ſelues towardes God. The way then for vs to bee deliuered from our curſedneſſe, is this: After wee haue beene aſhamed and as it were plunged in deſpaire; wee may take heart againe to vs to bee aſſured of our ſaluation, and offer our ſelues before the Maieſtie of our God, with aſſured truſt that hee will accept vs for his children, and alſo like well of vs: and moreouer that ſeeing our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath fulfilled the Lawe, and not fayled in any one point or iote therof: now we be clothed againe with his righteouſnes, and the ſame is allowed vnto vs as our owne. And therefore let vs go boldly before God, and call vpon him as our father: yea verily, ſo wee put not our pureneſſe in our owne woorkes, nor imagine that GOD oweth vs any thing, nor pretende to bring any deſert or merite of our owne: but that beeing vtterly emptie, wee call vpon GOD to vouchſafe, not onely to fill vp that which wanteth in our ſelues in parte, by the meanes of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: but to giue vs the righteouſneſſe wherof we be vtterly deſtitute and vnpurueyed. And let vs marke further, that when we be once ſo receiued into fauour; then ſhall our workes alſo bee accepted. The way then for vs to ſerue God to his lyking, is that being iuſtified by faith, that is to ſay, that hauing obtayned forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, yea and hauing obtained it bicauſe that dayly yea and all the tyme of our life wee haue neede thereof: and alſo hauing recourſe to GODS attonement with vs of his owne free goodneſſe by meanes of the death, paſſion, and ſacrifice of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt offered vp vnto him: wee hauing ſo doone, bee then alſo deſirous to ſerue God; for then ſhall wee doe well, and then will hee accept the ſeruice which we yeelde vnto him; whereas without that, wee can haue no fayth in Ieſus Chriſt. But when we indeuour to ſerue GOD; although there bee ſomewhat amiſſe, and our affections turne vs nowe one way nowe another: yet doeth not our God ceaſſe to allowe our life. And why? Bycauſe our ſinnes are not imputed vnto vs. True it is that in very rigour, this ſaying, (Curſed ſhall hee bee which performeth not all theſe words,) will ſtand in force: but behold, Ieſus Chriſt is our borow, and payeth for vs out of hand, deliuering vs from our curſednes, and making ſatisfaction to God his father. For we know yͤ his death & paſſion are accepted for the price and raunſome of our ſaluation, that by that meanes we ſhould be reconciled vnto God. Yee ſee then how that on the one ſide it behooueth vs to feele our own curſednes, that we may be afraide of Gods iudgements: and that on the other ſide we muſt take courage, not doubting but that ſeeing our Lord Ieſus Chriſt anſwereth for vs, we ſhalbe receiued for his ſake, and God will accept vs together with our works, notwithſtanding that they bee not ſo exquiſite as they ſhould be, but haue ſome blottes and blemiſhes in them, ſo as they deſerue to bee condemned & vtterly reiected. To be ſhort, the faithfull being iuſtified by the grace of God, haue therewithall this benefit and priuiledge, that God accepteth their woorkes, and chargeth them not with this curſe which they haue deſerued. After that manner then ought we to put this text in practiſe.

But I haue tolde you that on the one ſide wee muſt mourne and bee afraid at the ſight of our curſedneſſe before God: and that on the other ſide we muſt truſt in ẏ grace which Ieſus Chriſt offereth vs. For if we ſhould ſooth our ſelues bycauſe God forgiueth vs our ſinnes; what a dealing were that? Wee ſhoulde ſtill enter into the ſayde parting of ſtakes which men weene to make, when they think to diſcharge themſelues towardes God in part. Now then, it behooueth vs to be ſorie for all our ſinnes: and if wee perceyue any vice in vs, wee muſt not ſuffer it to raigne. True it is that wee come ſhort, I ſay not in ſome one part onely, but in all. There is not any one poynt of the law, wherein we fayle not. As for him that thinkes himſelfe cleare from couetouſneſſe, and to bee a deſpiſer of worldly goods: ſurely he hath yet ſome other affection in his heart, which holdeth him backe in the world. He that is chaſt and honeſt of his body, hath yet ſome vanities that will cary him away. He that foſtreth not any hatred or rancor in his heart, is not ſo vtterly cleere from all wicked affection, that he liueth ſo perfectly as he ought to do. To be ſhort, we ſhalbe found guilty, not in one or two points onely, [but in all:] ſo as there is not any part or peece of the law, wherin God might not condemne vs. And therfore (as I ſaid) ſeeing we perceiue ſuch vnperfectneſſe in vs, we muſt not ſtand in our own conceits, but mourne before God: and hauing mourned, we muſt indeuor to giue our ſelues ouer vnto him, prayng him to increaſe in vs the power and grace of his holy ſpirite, that we may ſo manfully fight againſt our ſinnes, as we may ſubdue them, ouercome them, and get the vpper hand of them, to triumph ouer them once when we be quite and cleane rid of them. Thus ye ſee how we ought to proceede in that behalfe.

And this ought to make the faithfull to reioyce; that although they perceiue their owne imperfections, yet muſt they not therfore ceaſſe to imbrace Gods promiſes with gladneſſe, aſſuring themſelues that they ſhal not be diſappointed of them. And why? Bycauſe they haue the inioying of all good thinges in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, by whom and by whoſe meanes the curſe that was due to them is done away. Ye ſee then howe that on the one ſide it behoueth the faithfull to be vtterly caſt downe: and againe that on the other ſide they bee lifted vp againe in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, foraſmuch as they know that looke what they haue not in themſelues, they ſhall finde it, if they ſeeke it there, whither God ſendeth them. And therefore let vs not beguile our ſelues any more with the fanſies of Sathan which raigne in the Popedome, of being deſirous to offer our owne merites vnto God, and to indent with him as though wee had perfourmed his lawe: aſſuring our ſelues that on our part, all the couenants which are made in the lawe, are vtterly vaine; and that al the promiſes which import any condition of well doing & of holy conuerſation, ſhoulde bee vnauailable towardes vs, and neuer come to effect; vnleſſe wee reſorted to this free promiſe, Whoſoeuer beleeueth that Ieſus Chriſt dyed for our ſinnes, and that God by his power hath raiſed him againe to make vs righteous, beleeuing the ſame in his heart and confeſſing it with his mouth; ſhal be ſaued. And thereunto alſo doth S. Paul bring vs backe in the tenth Chapter to the Romanes, which is the verie expoſition that will giue vs the vnderſtanding of this place. The righteouſneſſe of the law ſheweth vs that we be all accurſed, & that there is not any maner of way to ſaue vs, ſo long as we ſtay there. What are wee to doe then, that wee may haue acceſſe vnto God? Let vs with our heartes beleeue vnto righteouſneſſe, and with our mouthes confeſſe vnto ſaluation, that wee put our whole truſt in him which hath acquitted vs towardes God his father; and let vs imbrace the righteous obedience which he hath yeelded vnto God, and likewiſe his ſuſtaining of the curſe which was due vnto vs, to the intent to ſet vs free from it.

Rom. 10. 9

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our ſinnes; praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue done, that we may be more & more touched with the true repentance which mortifieth all our fleſhly affections: and to draw vs from the delightes of this world, and to lift vs vp into a true deſire of giuing our ſelues wholly to his lawe, ſo as wee may dayly profite thereby, knowing that the true perfection of all faithfull folke, is to know how farre they be off from perfection; to the end that all mouthes may be ſtopped, and none acknowledged for righteous but onely God; and that when Chriſtes righteouſneſſe once ſhineth vppon vs, we ſhall not bee bereft thereof, aſſuring our ſelues that therin lyeth all our perfection. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the x. of March, 1556.

The CLiij. Sermon, which is the firſt vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

IF thou obey the voyce of the Lorde thy God, in keeping and doeing all his commaundementes which I commaunde thee this day, then will the Lord thy God make thee head ouer al the nations of the earth.

2 And al theſe bleſſings ſhall come vpon thee, and incloſe thee round about, if thou obey the voyce of the Lord thy God.

WE haue ſeen heretofore, howe God hath couenanted with his people, of purpoſe to bynde them: that euerye one ſhold know his duetie, and bee the better diſpoſed to doe the ſame. Now he ſpeaketh as a Iudge hauing all authoritie. It ſkilles not whether folke doe pleade guiltie or no, when they haue doone amiſſe: for God giueth heere his determinate ſentence, though they conſent not thereunto. Neyther doeth the caſe concerne altogether the condemning of thoſe that offend the lawe; but he beginneth with another matter, to wit, with right amiable promiſes: therby to allure and to win mens heartes vnto him. Thus therefore doeth he ſay: If ye hearken vnto my voyce to obey my commaundementes, and bee carefull to keepe them: you ſhalbe bleſſed all maner of wayes, and yee ſhall be enuironed through my fauour, with all maner of welfare and proſperitie. I haue already tolde you, that GOD ſheweth great goodneſſe towardes men, when hee goeth about by ſuch meanes to winne them: for it were ſufficient for him to ſay, This is your duty: and al creatures ſhould tremble at his ſpeaking. Therefore when hee addeth any promiſes, hee forbeareth part of his right, and therein humbleth himſelfe, that wee ſhould bee the more inclyned and better diſpoſed to ſerue him. If wee had doone all that wee can, yea and more than wee are able: is GOD bound to recompence vs? Surely no. Wee muſt alwaies reſort to that which our Lorde Ieſus alleageth in Saint Luke, namely: That if a man Luke.17.7. haue a bond ſeruant, and he ſend him to labour in the feelde all the day long, when the ſeruant commeth home at night; wil he ſay: Wel, nowe muſt I doe my turne; thou ſhalt ſit downe at the Table, and I will prepare thy ſupper, and giue thee thy meate and drinke, bycauſe thou haſt laboured for mee, and my courſe is nowe come to ſerue thee? Will the Maiſter ſay ſo? No truly. But when the ſeruant is come home, the Maiſter will ſay vnto him, Couer the table, dreſſe my ſupper, and giue me drinke. Euen ſo ſayth Ieſus Chriſt, When you haue doone all that is poſſible for you to do: thinke not in your ſelues, that God my father oweth you aught at all, or that hee is beholden vnto you: but proceede on ſtill, and acknowledge, that all that euer yee can doe is but duetie towardes him. And indeede ſeeing that God hath made vs, what is hee that can do too much for the ſeruice of him? We ſee then ẏ God might ſay playnly: Thus it it pleaſeth me, & this is my will, follow you ẏ way. And therfore whereas he telleth vs ẏ we ſhalbe bleſſed & not looſe our labour, but haue rewarde for our ſeruing of him: It is not to be doubted, but ẏ in ſo dooing, hee forbeareth ſome part of his right. In the meane whyle, wee may ſee that he playeth the good and kinde hearted Father to win his Children. For although a father woteth well that his children are bounde to obey him to the vttermoſt; and that hee for his part, is not any way bounde to them: yet will hee not refuſe to ſaye: Loe, I loue you, and I deſire but your owne welfare: doe but ſo as I may haue lyking of you, and I will not forſake you. A father will be liberall of promyſe, ſaying: Goe to, yee knowe that all that euer I haue is for you: for whome elſe doe I trauayle? And to what other ende? And if I ſee you take good wayes, I will vſe you accordingly. Thus doeth the father that humbleth himſelfe in his authoritie. And wherefore? Bycauſe hee woulde that his children ſhoulde ſerue him of free good will, rather than bee compelled thereunto by rigorous extremitie. Let vs marke therefore, that all the promiſes contayned in holy Scripture, be as it were ſo many teſtimonies of the fatherly loue of our GOD; ſhewing himſelfe to haue a care of our health and welfare, in that hee vouchſafeth thus to apply and faſhion himſelfe vnto vs. By meanes whereof the Lawe of GOD becommeth the more amyable vnto vs; for as much as wee ſee that in keeping of the ſame wee bee not diſappoynted of a good rewarde, yea farre greater than we can wiſh. For vnder this woorde Bleſſing, is comprehended all manner of proſperitie.

Moreouer whẽ God doeth make vs to proſper in this world: it is for none other purpoſe,but to giue vs a taſt of his loue towards vs.Howbeit,this is not the cheefe point whereupon hee woulde haue vs to ſtay: but he leadeth vs euer further: Inſomuch that when we feele his goodneſſe in this preſent life, and that hee hath care of vs,& that hee reacheth foorth his hande to prouide for vs al thinges that are neceſſarie: wee ought thereuppon to conclude much more ſtronglie, that when hee hath taken vs out of this preſent worlde, hee will then powre vppon vs the Riches of his goodneſſe, in other manner of ſorte than wee be nowe able to comprehende. Indeede wee haue in this life ſome ſmall ſhewe thereof, but the aboundant accompliſhment of the ſame ſhall bee in the kingdome of heauen. Thus ye ſee what wee haue to conſider, in that our GOD deliuereth foorth his promiſes to traine vs the better to ſerue him of free good will.

Neuerthelatter, howſoeuer the worlde goe, let vs marke, that all the promiſes which God maketh vs vppon condition,ſtand vs in no ſteed (as it was told you yeſterday) if wee ſtay there. For why? Truely, God is faithfull: and his ſpeaking is not to deceyue vs: but yet let vs looke to our ſelues. What is hee that ſo diſchargeth him of his duetie, that hee may hope to bee bleſſed of God? It is not ſaide: You ſhal bee bleſſed in keeping part of my law: but it is ſaid in the text: If you heare my voice, and be diligent in keeping all my commaundementes, and fulfill them all: then I will bleſſe you. Nowe that men endeuour themſelues in all that is poſſible to keepe the lawe of God, I ſpeake not of their owne power or naturall motion. For ſo farre off are they which bee not regenerate by the holy Ghoſt, from atteyning to ſerue God, that they canne no ſkil ſo much as to conceyue a good thought. What is the inclination of man, but a ſtriuing againſt God, and all his righteouſneſſe? So Gen.6.5. long as men followe the leading of their owne Rom.8.7. ſpirite, they doe nothing elſe but fight againſt 2.Cor.3.5. God, as vtter rebelles to his whole wil. To bee ſhort, we bee not apt (as Saint Paul ſayeth) ſo much as to thinke to doe well. To thinke is a verie ſmall thing: and yet Saint Paul cutteth vs off from that power, and ſheweth that wee bee ſo corrupted and frowardely bent, that in all thinges wee drawe contrarie to that which God commaundeth vs. Inſomuch that euen when God hath reformed vs by his holy ſpirite, and changed our malice and rebellion, whereunto wee bee wholie inclined: yet can it not bee ſaide that wee proceede to the obeying of him in all perfection: for there is alwayes ſome infirmitie to let vs: ſo that in ſteede of running wee doe but halt, and trayle our legges after vs: in ſteede of going right forwarde, wee reele from one ſide to an other: and it happeneth often to vs, to trippe and to ſtumble, as euerie man may well finde in himſelfe. Howe then can wee hope to bee bleſſed of our GOD, beeing ſo farre wide from keeping of his lawe? That is the cauſe why I ſayde, that all the promiſes which bee vppon condition are vtterlie vnauaylable, and ſhall neuer come to their effect, if God ſhoulde reſt vppon that point. Indeede this matter was expounded yeſterday, and this place was expreſly alleaged by Saint Paul, where it is ſayde, that if ſaluation come by workes, and the inheritaunce proceede of the Rom.4.14 lawe: then ſhall there bee no performance of the promiſes. For wee doe faile on our part, and therefore the couenant is voide, that God hath made with vs: yet may it not hereby bee concluded that God mocketh vs, in ſetting downe theſe promiſes: as the Papiſtes doe at the firſt daſh, ſtarting out of their boundes, and playing the madde men. For when it is ſaide, that all the promiſes conteyned in holy ſcriptures, bee not effectuall, otherwiſe than by meane of the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes through the free goodneſſe of God, and that wee are iuſtifyed by faith onely: What (ſay they?) Seeing it is ſaide, I wil bleſſe you, ſo you ſerue mee and honour mee: it ſeemeth that God vſeth but hypocriſie, and maketh a daliaunce with men. To what purpoſe (ſaith he ſo?) Thus do the Papiſtes accuſe GOD of falſehoode, and blaſpheme him, if they be not able to deſerue the promiſes which hee hath made them. For otherwiſe [they thinke] it is but a mockerie, to make men beleeue that he woulde bleſſe them. But let vs beware of ſuch maddeneſſe, and let vs rather vnderſtande to what ende God hath giuen his promiſes vnto men: and wee ſhall ſee that it is not in vaine. I ſaide heretofore, that God hath ſhewed his great goodneſſe, in humbling himſelfe ſo louingly vnto vs. We perteyne wholy to him, wee are altogether his, and yet woulde hee not ſimplie commaund; but commaunde with promiſes, and gentleneſſe to win vs. If a man doe hereupon replie and ſay, What doeth it profite vs? Truely it profiteth vs nothing at all, if wee ſtay there: but wee muſt goe further. When wee heare the promiſes that God hath offered vnto vs, & ſee that all his ſeeking is to winne vs through loue, and that hee meaneth not to enforce vs through neceſſitie, it condemneth vs of vnthankefulneſſe, if we bend not ourſelues wholy towardes him. But wee cannot doe it. Wherefore? Are wee then excuſed? No. For it is our owne naughtineſſe that doth let vs. Euerie man ſhal condemne him- Iames.1.14 ſelfe, ſaith Saint Iames, becauſe there is nothing that prouoketh vs to euill, but the concupiſcence of our owne fleſhe. Seeing then that the fault is in vs, wee muſt make no more allegations, and here yee ſee wee bee confounded before God. Thus then haue wee cauſe to bee twiſe the more lowely. Firſt of all, for that wee bee ſo leawde, that Gods goodneſſe mooueth vs not to come neere him, and to put our ſelues vnder his leading: And ſecondlie for that we ſearch not out the bottome of the ſinne that is in vs, after this manner: Alas, ſeeing I haue euerie day ſo innumerable thoughtes, ſo many deſires and motions, ſuch ſtore of affections, which ſerue altogether to turne mee away from that good whereunto God doeth call mee:by reaſon whereof I ceaſſe not to offende God in all thinges, ſo as nothing can bee drawen from mee, but vtter euill, all offence, and al iniquitie: alas in what taking am I? Men, when they ſee this, muſt needes feele themſelues double confounded. And when they haue well examined themſelues, [they muſt needes bee driuen to thinke thus,] Well, God hath layde before mee all the meanes that I can wiſh, for to attayne ſaluation, if I were not altogether corrupt and peruerſe. And now cannot I pleade ignoraunce, ſeeing that the lawe is giuen vnto mee, and the way ſhewed mee, howe I ought to gouerne mee and howe to leade my life. And to the ende that I ſhould bee the more willing thereunto; my God trayneth mee to it by gentleneſſe, promiſing that I ſhalbee rewarded for ſeruing him. Is it ſo? What is then to be done? I muſt not in this caſe make any further proteſtation, nor ſtande pleading any more againſt GOD: for I am too much too blame already. Now when men finde themſelues thus condemned, then are they forced to ſeeke their ſaluation out of themſelues, and to reſort to this ſecond remedie; Alas Lord, if the caſe were ſo that I ſhoulde obteyne ſaluation by ſeruing of thee, thou haſt giuen mee thy lawe, and alſo ioyned thereunto thy promiſes; howbeit theſe thinges auaile mee nothing: I muſt therefore forſake my ſelfe, acknowledging that I am quite ſhutte out of all hope of life, vnleſſe I finde ſome other better helpe. See heere I ſay, how wee bee ledde to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and made to embrace the grace which is offered vnto vs in him: that by obteining forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, wee may be ſure to bee bleſſed of God. When wee haue once gotten that fauour, that God is at one with vs by meanes of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; then doeth hee accept our vnperfect woorkes, as though we had accompliſhed all the lawe. Although the good which the faithfull doe, bee not woorthy to bee receiued of God: yet doeth hee accept it in good woorth. And wherefore? For he of his owne goodneſſe wipeth away all the faultes that are in them. So then, when wee labour to doe well, notwithſtanding that it lyeth not in our power to attayne to perfection, becauſe of the ouermuch frailtie of our nature: yet wil God receiue our ſeruice as acceptable, as though hee had nothing to ſay againſt it: and ſo are wee made partakers of the bleſſinges that are heere mentioned. As howe? We haue not fulfilled all: It is true: but yet God paſſeth it in his accounts, as if al were performed, forſomuch as wee bee made cleane by the bloud of Ieſus Chriſt. And like as wee bee cleanſed, ſo be our workes alſo, and when they come before God, hee accepteth them, as though they were thorowly good, righteous and perfect. Here therefore wee perceiue that the promiſes bee not giuen in vaine, but that they haue their effect in the faithfull: not at the firſt daſh, but when we come thereunto by degrees, and circumſtances, for then wee ſhall feele the effect and force of them. As concerning the misbeleeuers, the promiſes ſtande them in no ſteade; but to make them the more vnexcuſable before God in the laſt day. For what ſhall they be able to pleade, ſeeing that God hath ſo familiarly offered himſelfe vnto them, requiring nothing but to haue the fruition of their whole life: that they might obey him: and yet they continue hardhearted? See yee not howe they bee double confounded? And therefore the promiſes and threateninges of the lawe, bee alwayes good and righteous, neither ſhall they bee vnprofitable, if a man can skill to take them as it were meete they ſhoulde. But this ſhalbee better perceiued by the diſcourſe which I ſhall make thereof particularly. Now let vs proceede to expound the wordes that Moſes doeth vſe. If thou wilt heare the voyce of the Lorde thy God, and bee carefull to fulfill all the commaundementes which I commaund thee this day: all theſe bleſſinges ſhall come vpon thee and compaſſe thee rounde about. As touching the firſt point, Moſes ſheweth that which wee ſawe before, namely, that the beginning to liue well, is to hearken vnto God. For men muſt not haue the rule ouer themſelues, ſaying, I will gouerne my ſelfe after mine owne liking: wee muſt not take ſuch libertie: For hee that taketh too much vppon himſelfe, ſhall at the laſt bee reiected of GOD, for not yeelding him this obedience, which is the foundation whereon wee ought to builde. Let vs marke therefore, that all they which followe their owne fooliſh deuotions (as they cal them,) are miſliked of God. For this text of the Prophet Eſay muſt take place. Who hath required theſe thinges at your handes? Let vs acknowledge Eſa.1.12. therefore, that it is an ineſtimable benefite when God ſheweth vs his will, and that the ſtate of the Papiſts is accurſed. For when they intend to doe well, they knowe not which way to turne them, but euery one followeth his owne fancie with, I hope it wilbee well, for my meaning is good: and againe common cuſtome alloweth it, and our holy mother the Church doth commaunde it: but in the meane while the lawe of God remaineth forgotten. Whereby we may learne that there is nothing but confuſion in the life of man, in which is nought elſe but a mingling without order, vntill they bee taught of God, as wee ſhall ſee hereafter. This is the way, walke in it. It is ſaid that we muſt be carefull. This word was ſet downe once afore by Mo- Deut.30.15 ſes, and not without cauſe is it here againe repeated, For we be warned by it, that vnleſſe men bee very heedeful in obeying God, and inforce themſelues thereunto, and ſet their whole ſtudie thereon in good earneſt, they ſhal neuer atteine to keepe the lawe. And we ourſelues ſee what weakeneſſe there is in vs, yea euen albeit that God doe gouerne vs, and although we be reformed by his holy Spirit. For as for the vnfaithful, they bee ſo caried away and ſo furious in their wilfull ſtubborneſſe, that a man woulde thinke they ſhould runne madde againſt God. Yea and although that wee bee gouerned by the holy Ghoſt; yet are we ſo frayle as is pitie to ſee. God requireth a great perfection, when he willeth vs to loue him with all our heart, to eſchue all the vanities of this world, and all our fleſhly luſtes; and (to be ſhorte,) to forſake our ſelues, and to be altogether changed. This is a matter ouer high and difficult. Now let vs conſider what Sathan doth deuiſe and practiſe to turne vs away from the ſeruice of God: how many ſorts of tẽptations be there? They be infinite. Againe, how ſore are the aſſaultes that Sathan prepareth againſt vs? When we haue conſidered of all this; wee may well conclude, that it is not without cauſe, that God ſayth, that we muſt be carefull, that euery one of vs muſt ſtrengthen himſelfe, and gather all our forces together; and not thinke to ſet foorth negligently to the ſeruice of our God. For when we ſuppoſe to march one ſtep foreward, we ſhall goe an hundred backward, if we bee not very ſtoute and couragious, holding our ſelues in awe and reſtreyning our ſelues, & gathering our wits to vs in ſuch ſort, as we bend our mindes wholly thereunto, and euen as yee would ſay) labour for breath in trauelling about it.

And moreouer ſeeing we be forlaide with ambuſhes on euery ſide, and ſhoulde bee ſoone ſurpriſed, ſo as we ſhould fall into the ſnares of Satan ere we were aware: let vs take heede and be watchfull. That is the thing whereof we be warned. And would God we could well cary away this leſſon. For then, whereas we now apply all our power, and all our endeuours to thinges not onely friuolous, but altogether hurtfull, tending to none other ende but to deceiue vs to our deſtruction: euery of vs woulde be vigilant to walke in the obedience of GOD, and to giue himſelfe wholly thereunto. And ſeeing that wee bee warned thereof, there is no excuſe. Will we then obey our God, and ſhewe that our affection is ſo bent without diſſembling? Let euery one of vs incline to that which is giuen him in commaundement: namely to bee carefull, vigilant and attentiue.

Nowe he addeth: To keepe all the commaundementes which I ſet before thee this day, or which I ordeyne for thee. Although Moſes be the ſpeaker hereof: yet taketh hee the aucthoritie and power to commaund, and to ſubdue men not to any thing of his owne forging, as who ſhould ſay, it ought therefore to bee receiued without gaineſaying: but to God, becauſe GOD ſpeaketh by his mouth, and for that hee himſelfe doeth faithfully deliuer the doctrine that was to him committed. Therefore ſpeaketh hee in ſuch a high ſtyle, inſomuch as he ſaith, that they ſhould keepe his ordinaunces. It lieth not in the power of a mortal man to binde folks conſciences. And yet is that yͤ thing which wholly corrupted the Church; in that men haue vſurped the office of God in making lawes and ſtatutes, for ſpirituall gouernement of mens ſoules. And that is a point of high treaſon to Godward. For the creature vſurpeth to himſelfe the thing which appertaineth to GOD onely, whom the Prophet Eſay termeth the lawgiuer, and in likewiſe Saint Iames, to the ende that wee ſhould learne to hearken vnto him, and wholly to depend vpon his worde. Let vs marke wel then, that it is not lawful for men to inioine lawes vnto mens ſoules. But whereas Moſes ſaith, I ordeine vnto thee, he preſuppoſeth that he preferred not any thing of his owne, ne forged any law of his owne brayne, or added any thing to that which God had committed vnto him: but foraſmuch as hee did his office faithfully, he might well ſay, I ordeyne for thee. As when wee ſet forth the pure word of God, the ſame very worde is a ſoueraigne commaundement. Now it is not meant hereby, that we ſhould vſurp any dominion or ſoueraintie ouer mens ſoules. But that in dooing ſeruice to GOD, wee may commaund in his name and in his perſon. Thus wee ſee heere what the meaning of Moſes was. And in deede, doth it lie in vs to promiſe men life euerlaſting, or to denounce vnto them the vengeance of God? And yet wee doe it neuertheleſſe. Yea verily, howbeit no further foorth than the worde of God is put into our mouth, and that wee haue the teſtimonie of him, being his witneſſe bearers and his heraulds: his witneſſes (I meane) to aſſure the faithfull of the grace and ſaluation which is promiſed vnto thẽ; and his heralds to pronounce and to publiſh his ſentence againſt al the vnbeleeuing ſort and rebels. Therefore to be ſhort, God meant to ſhew forth the maieſtie of his word, when he appointed Moſes to ſpeake in that manner. And it was to the end that we ſhould receiue the woorde of God with ſo much the more lowlineſſe and reuerence, when it is preached vnto vs: not reſpecting the perſon, as who would ſay, hee is but a man that ſpeaketh, he is like vnto vs, and as wee are, ſo is he: but as though we thought thus with our ſelues, It is God that ſpeaketh by the mouth of this man: therefore let vs tremble at his preſence, let vs ſtoope, and receiue that which hee ſaith: and ſeeing he calleth vs before him, let it ſerue to bring vs to ſuch obedience, that we may doe him homage; thereby to ſhewe that we embrace that which proceedeth from his maieſtie. This is the ſumme of that which wee haue to keepe in memorie touching this text.

Eſa. 33.22.
Iam. 4.12.

Now here might a queſtion be moued, why it is ſaid: When you haue kept al my commandementes: For it is impoſſible for vs to fulfil the law, ſo long as we ſtand cloathed with this mortall fleſh. As I ſaid afore, we ſhal euer be ful of vices and imperfections. It ſeemeth then, that it is to no purpoſe for God to require ſuch a fulfilling of the lawe, ſeeing it is impoſſible. But here we muſt remember what hath bin ſpoken of afore: To wit, that God in his law reſpecteth not our might, power, or abilitie, but our dutie, & after what maner our life ought to be gouerned. And yͤ ſame ought to ſuffice vs, inaſmuch as we ſay yͭ a man ſhal neuer attaine to yͤ perfect obedience of God, but yͭ we be euer farre from the end of our way: the cauſe whereof, is our corrupt nature, being ſo infected through original ſinne, yͭ when we think on God, we be troubled with many euil fanſies: & whẽ we haue any good motiõ, we are by & by pluckt back from it, & we neede not any other thing to draw vs to the cleane contrarie. But nowe by the way, doth the impoſſibilitie of dooing it, diſcharge vs of our ſeruice which wee bee bound to doe vnto God? No. For the euil commeth of ourſelues. It is no maruel then, that God in his lawe ſhoulde haue no regard to mãs abilitie or vnabilitie, but rather to the dutie which we owe him, or that he ſhoulde require the right that belongeth vnto him: for who is he ẏ can denie it him? Hee muſt not change his nature. If wee bee froward, what hath he to do to meddle with our ſteines & fylthines? But he ſetteth forth ſuch a righteouſnes, as we are not able to replie againſt. And in his law he ſetteth not down ſuch a righteouſnes as is in himſelf, he hath not reſpect to his own righteouſneſſe, but vnto the righteouſneſſe that ought to bee in his creatures, namely, ſuch as is in his Angels. If wee had continued in our integritie, and not beene peruerted and corrupted through ſinne, then ſhould we haue beene able to haue diſcharged all that God requireth of vs in his lawe. That is certaine. Now then we ſee how it is not without cauſe that God will haue vs to keepe his whole law. And yet we be not able to performe it. It is true: but the default proceedeth of the ſinne which dwelleth in vs, as I haue ſhewed heeretofore.

Now herewithal we haue to mark, that ſeeing God promiſeth nothing, but vnto thẽ that haue obeyed al ẏ law, it were too doltiſh follie to ſuppoſe that we can merit or deſerue by doing this thing or that thing: we muſt firſt of all haue kept al the law, which is impoſſible. And whereas the Papiſts prate of their merits, enabling thẽſelues to purchaſe the kingdome of heauen; they think that whẽ they haue done anie good to their own ſeeming, God is bound to them. Oh (ſay they) I haue beene deuoutly at Maſſe. It is certaine that they prouoke the wrath of God by ſo dooing: for we know that it is a diueliſh abhomination. Againe, I haue ſerued ſuch a Saint my Patron (ſay they,) I haue builded ſuch a Chappell: and they beare themſelues in hand that in ſo dooing they earne heauen. Truely al theſe things are but a ſpiting of God: they bee diueliſh ſuperſtitions, whereby the ſeruice of God is quite defaced. But put the caſe that the Papiſts did wel in their dalying ſo with ſuch pelting ſtuffe: were God euer the more bound vnto them for it? It woulde behoue them to conſider firſt before what notarie that euidence did paſſe. For it is not for vs to bridle him, or to tie him to ẏ ſtake, or to ſubdue him to our fantaſies. It muſt proceed of his own good wil. Now then, what ſaith hee? When you ſhal haue kept al my cõmandements, thẽ ſhal theſe bleſſings come vpon you. Let euery of vs looke how he hath kept ẏ cõmandements of God. Let ẏ Papiſts brag as much as they liſt, can they ſay ẏ they haue accõpliſhed ẏ hundreth part of thẽ? If they haue kept one of Gods cõmandements, they haue offended him in a hundred ſins for it: & if there be but one fault cõmitted, though it be neuer ſo litle a one, they be faultie in al, according as S. Iames ſaith: he ẏ faileth in any one only point, is a breaker of ẏ whole law. Seeing then ẏ they bee offenders, they are depriued & baniſhed from al the bleſſings ẏ God hath ſet forth, yea euen ẏ concerne but this preſent tranſitorie life: much leſſe therefore are they able to win ẏ kingdome of heauen (as they imagin) being not able to deſerue one morſel of breade to put into their mouth. Thus are they ſhut out of al. And why? For God hath not promiſed any thing but vnto them that keepe al his whole law. How ſhal we do then? We muſt heare God ſpeake after an other faſhion: to wit: we muſt harken vnto him ſpeaking of the free promiſes which hee offereth vnto vs in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. God in ẏ holy ſcripture vſeth a double ſpeach: And whẽ I ſpeake of double ſpeach, I meane not ẏ he doubleth on his part, or ẏ he is contrarie to himſelfe, or ẏ one ſaying of his is repugnant to an other: for God keepeth alwaies at one ſtay, and (as I haue ſaid afore) hee changeth not: all ẏ ſpeeches ẏ proceed from him do very wel agree together, without any contradictiõ. Neuertheles, as touching his law, there he hath ſpoken as a Iudge & not as a father. In his law he ſpeaketh as a Iudge, ſaying: He ẏ liueth as he ought, ſhal not bee deceiued, he ſhal not leeſe his labor: for when you haue done me ſeruice, I wil cauſe you to proſper. After ſuch maner doth God ſpeake in the perſon of a Iudge. And when wee haue receiued this word, behold we are confounded, howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth. And wherefore? For that in ſtead of abilitie to obteine the grace ẏ is offered vnto vs, wee ceaſſe not to kindle Gods wrath againſt vs; and therefore we be all damned. What is to be done then? God commeth ſpeaking as a father, and ſaith: Well then, I am contented to forbeare this rigour of mine, which I might execute vpon you by my law; howbeit ẏ the ſame is not ouer great: for I haue applied my ſelfe ſo far vnto you, as to promiſe that which is not your due: I haue bin willing as it were to entice you by amiable meanes: but I haue wonne nothing therby, becauſe of your frowardnes. What remedy then? I come now to tel you, ẏ if you wil beleeue in my Son, I wil releaſe you of al your debts. If you will receiue him for your Shepheard, ẏ he may guide you quietly, you ſhall perceiue ẏ I deſire not to win you otherwiſe thã by gentle & friendly dealing, as if I ſhould ſay, Come vnto mee, & I will forgiue you al your ſins, & accept you into fauor. And albeit ẏ you are miſerable creatures, deſeruing vtter damnatiõ: yet wil I quite forget & bury al your offences: when I haue ſo doone, I promiſe to beget you anew, by my holy ſpirite: and this grace ſhalbee giuen vnto you by meanes of mine onely ſon, if you labour to come vnto him. And therupõ although you be driuen to ſtriue againſt many temptatiõs, and ẏ at ẏ firſt encounter ye haue not ful victorie ouer them, but that ye be encompaſſed with many ſpottes and vices ſtill: yet will I not lay any of al theſe thinges to your chardge; I forgiue you your ſinnes: and the good ẏ you doe, ſhalbee acceptable to mee thorow my fauour, although it deſerueth it not. Loe heere the ſecond order of ſpeeche that God vſeth vnto vs in the holy Scripture.

Iames.2.10.

Let vs marke therefore, that when we heare the voyce of our GOD, and knowe what wee owe vnto him, and haue hearde the promiſes that he hath made vs in his lawe:we muſt needes reſt there confounded and condemned, forſomuch as none of al thoſe things can auaile vs by reaſon of our vnthankfulnes:wherupon we muſt haue our refuge to the free mercie which is offred vnto vs in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt:& hearken vnto God when he ſpeaketh vnto vs,which thing he doth both in the Law,in the Prophets,and in ẏ Goſpell,ſaying, I of mine owne mere goodnes am become your Sauiour:& you muſt ſeek your ſaluatiō frō ſomewhere elſe,than in yourſelues. For the redeemer which God promiſed, was euer had in mind,ẏ men might reſt thē vpō him. And for ẏ cauſe were the ſacrifices ordeined in ẏ time of the law.For although Chriſt was not yet vttered openly to the worlde: yet did the Iewes vnderſtand ẏ all the hope of their ſaluation depended vppon their reconcilement to God by meane of the ſacrifice ẏ was to be offered. They brought brute beaſts to the Temple:was that to cleanſe ẏ vncleannes of their ſoules?No:for what can corrupt bloud doe,what ſhal ſtinking greace do,can thoſe things purge ẏ ſoule of her iniquitie?No truely.But vnder thoſe figures the Iewes ſaw how they ſhould be deliuered from the curſe of God,& admitted into his fauor, and ẏ al their life ſhould be acceptable vnto him. And nowe haue wee a more ſure teſtimonie thereof in the Goſpel,for there we ſee the thing it ſelf fully accompliſhed vnto vs:namely ẏ although we haue not kept ẏ commaundementes of God,yet Ieſus Chriſt hath kept thē.And wherefore was it? Becauſe hee was ſubiect to it?No. But hee became ſubiect to the law:yea, but ẏ was for our ſakes.So then let vs haue our recourſe vnto our Lord Ieſus Chriſt,and let vs heare God ſpeaking in ſuch a phraſe,whereby he doth not only ſay, theſe be the things ẏ I commaund you,and if ye do them thē you ſhal proſper & be bleſſed;but alſo where hee ſaith,Beholde I am your father, come vnto me,but come in the name of my only Son, whō I haue appointed to be your mediator:& acknowledge ẏ there is nought elſe in you but corruptiō: and truſt not in your own power,nor in your own freewil:but caſting away all fooliſhe fantaſies of vaine preſumption,come with lowlines to ſeek ẏ grace of my ſpirit:and then ye ſhalbe ſure ẏ I wil alwaies vphold you by my goodnes,& from day to day confirme you in my feare, and make you to walke in my waies, ſo as I wil not lay to your charge ẏ faults of your works,they ſhal not hinder my bleſſing toward you:not ẏ you ſhould not confeſſe your tranſgreſſions,& alwaies acknowledge before me ẏ you are faultie; but that your ſins ſhal not bee laide to your charge, although there be occaſion why that they ſhould bee called to reckoning,and to be reproued by me.Loe there the ſecond voice of God, to the which we muſt hearken,if wee deſire to become partakers of the bleſſings ẏ be here conteined. But by the way we haue to note for a concluſion,ẏ although the faithful be exempted from the curſe of God, and that he wil not deale rigorouſly with them, but rather vphold them and make them to inioy the bleſſings which he hath promiſed in his law, as though they had fully accompliſhed ẏ ſame: yet ceaſſe they not to ſuffer many ſtripes of his rods,& our Lorde chaſtiſeth them continually, exerciſing ſome after one maner,and ſome after an other,ſo ẏ al are ſmitten.And al the chaſtiſements which God ſendeth vs, bee curſes euerychone of thē,I meane as to outward apparance. If we be ſick,if we be hungrie or thirſtie,if we be tormented in this preſent world, if we be troubled and perſecuted:al theſe are ẏ curſes of God. Our enemies ſcoffe at vs, we bee in reproche,in pouertie,in vexation,& in many anguiſhes: one is troubled in his houſe by his wife, an other by his children,and an other by his neighbor: finally,the faithful be many waies depriued of ẏ bleſſings of God. It is ſure ſo.Howbeit this letteth not but ẏ we be euermore bleſſed of him,by reaſon ẏ we haue a continual taſt of his goodnes, to allure vs vnto him.Let vs therefore note well, ẏ when he cutteth off his bleſſings, and giueth thē not as we do wiſh,the ſame is for our profite: becauſe he ſeeth we haue need of ſome quickening vp to make vs to come vnto him.And foraſmuch as euery of vs do fal aſleepe in our ſinnes:God is faine to waken vs, and to make vs feele,that ſo ſoone as we withdraw vs from his ſeruice, he wil in likewiſe abſent himſelfe from vs, and that his grace ſhalbe taken away from vs, and wee ſtand diſpoſſeſſed of the ſame;howbeit neuer ſo vtterly,but ẏ the bleſſing of God ſhal alwais ſurmoūt, ſo as we may ioy therein,acknowledging him to be merciful,& wayting vpon his fatherly goodnes,more amply to be ſhewed when he ſhal take vs hence againe to himſelfe. Thus ye ſee howe we may poſſeſſe and enioy the bleſſings of God, which are ſet forth for vs in his lawe,inſomuch that although our Lord doth enterlace the ſame with many afflictions,and many corrections, as though he had curſed vs: his ſo doing is but to prouoke vs day by day to repentance, & to keep vs from falling aſleepe in this preſent worlde: as we wel know ẏ our delightes make vs drunken & vnmindful of God,except hee conſtraine vs by pricking and ſpurring vs foreward. Thus yee ſee how the thinges which at the firſt ſight ſeemed contraries,agree very wel.And in ẏ reſpect doth Moſes ſay ẏ theſe bleſſings ſhal light vpon vs,& encompaſſe vs round about,as if hee had ſaide ẏ we ſhal alwaies be ſure of Gods fauour,yea euen ſo ſure of it that it ſhal neuer faile vs,if wee ſerue him.For the word Encompaſſe,or to light vpon vs, doth import that ẏ grace of God is not fleeting, as though it fel at al aduenture, & as though we could not catch it ſoone ynough.No(ſaith hee) You ſhalbe encompaſſed therewith. And therefore let vs aſſure ourſelues of the goodnes of our God, and ẏ it ſhal neuer faile vs,ſo that we for our part do come vnto him.But let vs note well,that wee can neuer come there, vnleſſe he drawe vs vnto him.And that forſomuch as we bee ſubiect to ſo many infirmities and vices, he by his bearing with vs, ſheweth vs ẏ we muſt haue our recourſe to his free goodneſſe,for the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes by the reconciliation that hee hath made in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: and that we in ſtreyning ourſelues to doe well, ſhall perceiue that the goodneſſe of God ceaſſeth not to bee free vnto vs, without owing vs any thing at all.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, praying him to make vs feele them better than wee haue doone, that beeing beaten downe, yea and as it were drowned in deſpaire, wee may bee drawen to the faith in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; and knowing that wee bee altogether emptie and naked of al goodneſſe, let vs beſeech him to renue vs by his holy ſpirit, euen till wee be fully chaunged, and that wee may bee more and more encreaſed in his graces, ſo that wee may haue teſtimonie that GOD regardeth vs, and is neere vnto vs, yea and dwelleth in vs: & that we may bee ſo confirmed in his adoption, that wee may alwaies waite for the heauenly inheritaunce, and not be weary in this worlde to walke in his obedience: That it may pleaſe him to beſtowe this grace not only vpon vs, but alſo vpon al people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xj. of March, 1556.

The CLIIII. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

2 And they ſhall come vpon thee, &c.

3 Thou ſhalt be bleſſed in the Towne, and bleſſed in the fielde.

4 The fruite of thy wombe ſhalbe bleſſed, and the fruite of thy grounde, and the fruite of thy Cattell, and the encreaſe of thy kine, and of the flockes of thy Sheepe.

5 Thy basket ſhall bee bleſſed, and thy ſtore.

6 Thou ſhalt bee bleſſed at thy comming in, and bleſſed at thy going foorth.

7 The Lorde will make thine enemies to fall before thee, which doe riſe vp againſt thee: if they come forth againſt thee one way, they ſhall flee before thee ſeuen wayes.

8 The Lorde will commaund his bleſſing to bee with thee in thy Cellers, and in all that thou putteſt thy hande vnto: and he will bleſſe thee in the Land which the Lorde thy God giueth thee.

IT is to bee meruelled, that men cannot bee perſuaded that they ſhall proſper by well dooing. But it proceedeth of vnbeleefe, becauſe they doe not acknowledge their life to be in the power and direction of GOD, and that it is his peculiar office to gouerne vs. For if wee were well aſſured that all creatures bee in the hand of God, and alſo that hee hath care of vs: it is certeine that euery of vs woulde reſt vppon him, wayting to receiue all goodneſſe from him, which is the thing that ſhoulde encourage vs to ſerue him, and to direct ourſelues after his will. But although euery man ſeeke and deſire his owne eaſe, yet wee vnderſtand not that GOD is hee from whom wee muſt looke for it. Wee can ſay it well ynough: but the thing it ſelfe ſheweth that wee can not iudge nor conceiue it to bee ſo. Euery man woulde bee riche by leawde practiſes: euery man ſetteth his felicitie in offending God. Wee muſt needes therefore bee without ſenſe and reaſon, ſeeing that this article, wherein wee ſhould bee reſolued, cannot bee imprinted in our mindes, to witte, that all welfare proceedeth from the hande of GOD, and that there is no meane to proſper, but by giuing ouer our ſelues vnto him, and vnto his ſeruice. Yet notwithſtanding, GOD hath alwayes left this engrauen in the heartes of men, that the wretchedneſſe and miſeries whereunto wee bee ſubiect, doe proceede of the corruption of mankinde, inſomuch ẏ the very Paynims haue had the ſame opinion common amongeſt them. It is certaine that they were not taught concerning the fall of Adam; they vnderſtood not howe all mankind was accurſed; for the diuel through his wilineſſe, had put that out of knowledge. Yet notwithſtanding, it was vnderſtoode among them, and written, and theſe thinges were common vnto them, namely that all the ſickeneſſes and wretchedneſſe that men indure, all the famines, and plagues, and ſuch like things, proceeded of this, that men will needes robbe GOD of more wiſedome than is belonging vnto them. They knew not ẏ this came from the tree of the knowledge of good & euill: they wiſt nothing of that.

Neuertheleſſe God hath not permitted that knowledge ſo wholly to be buried, but that it remained amongſt the Heathen, and Infidels, ſo as they vnderſtoode, that becauſe man woulde haue vſurped vnto himſelfe more knowledge than was lawfull for him, that now all thinges are confounded in this worlde, and the life of man is become miſerable, and ſo ſubdued to ſo many aduerſities as is horrible. Now, this is ſufficient to make vs altogether vnexcuſable: but yet will God haue vs, (vs I meane whome God hath choſen to be of his houſholde) to bee more familiarly taught. This doth god ſpeak as it were mouth to mouth: and looke what the Infidels had but by imagination, the ſame doeth he tell and teſtifie vnto vs: I ſay, he telleth it vs, that we might know it familiarly: & he teſtifieth it vnto vs, that we ſhoulde be thereof aſſured. That is the cauſe why hee ſaith that he woulde make all maner of felicitie to reigne vpon vs, ſo we would hearken to his voyce. Wherby he ſheweth, that if it were not long of our ſelues, he were readie and forwarde to entreate vs as a father doth his children: and that hee delighteth not to vex vs with multitudes of euils, but that hee meaneth rather to make vs feele his goodneſſe in all reſpectes. Let vs therefore be aduiſed to walke in the obedience of our God, if wee meane that he ſhould powre vpon vs the treaſures of his grace, in ſuch wiſe as all our life may bee bleſſed. Neuertheleſſe, it is certaine that God oftentimes afflicteth his people for other cauſes, than their ſinnes: as we ſee it happened to Iob, which is a notable myrrour for vs. Wee ſee the like in the holy Patriarks, who although they did endeuour and trauaile to ſerue God, yet were they in as great troubles and griefes as could be. The ſame is yet more manifeſt in the newe Teſtament. For ſeeing that God hath reueiled more fully, what is the perfect happineſſe of men: It behooueth the faithfull to bee exerciſed vnder many aduerſities in this tranſitorie life. But let vs marke firſt of all, that if God doe not puniſh the ſinnes of the faithfull, hee doeth it to preſerue them, as the Phyſition that waiteth not alwayes till the ſickeneſſe do appeare, but if hee perceiue any likelyhood that a man is in daunger, he will preuent it. God then, in not puniſhing the ſinnes that be preſently committed by his children, doth vſe chaſtiſements towardes them, as preſeruatiue medicines. It may euery day fall out, that a man hath not offended againſt God in ſome particular ſins. But what? If he were alwayes in proſperitie, he woulde forget himſelfe: God therefore doeth cure ſuch diſeaſes by withdrawing his bleſſings: hee will not ſuffer the fat to blinde mens eyes, or to hinder our comming vnto him, leaſt it ſhoulde ſtay vs too long in this worlde: he will not ſuffer vs to bee ſo intangled in our delightes, as to fall altogether on ſleepe in the ſame.

There is yet a ſeconde point, to wit: that when God forbeareth to puniſh vs for our ſins, it is not for that hee hath not alwayes iuſt cauſe ſo to doe if he liſted. Let the perfecteſt folke in the worlde bee choſen out, and yet if GOD woulde deale with them by rygour, he ſhoulde lay many harde knockes vppon their pates. But truely wee thinke it not ſo: for wee bee not ſo ſharpe ſighted, as to knowe the faultes which God doth marke. But yet muſt wee aſſure our ſelues, that GOD vttereth his patience and goodneſſe in that hee ſpareth men, and puniſheth them not, I meane, the moſt righteous that can bee founde. As for example, when Dauid was cruelly perſecuted of Saul and of all his enimies; when Abraham was ſtinged and vexed ſo many wayes; likewiſe when Iſaac and Iacob, and al the Prophets were afflicted by the wicked and by the deſpiſers of God, euen to the verie death: and finally when the Apoſtles and all the faithfull [were cruelly delt with,] it was not for their ſinnes. No verily. But had it pleaſed God to haue called them to account, hee might haue puniſhed them an hundred times more, and they ſhold haue had no cauſe to haue accuſed him of crueltie. Hee ſpared them, and in ſo doeing hee did them the honour to ſuffer for his name: or rather hee tried their obedience, killed their carnall affections, and drew them neere vnto himſelf. As for example, wheras it pleaſed God to make Iob a myrrour of patience, yet neuertheleſſe he made him acquainted with his owne frailtie: but howſoeuer it were, yet was it his intent to make him to ſerue for an example to vs all. Wee perceiue then that God hath other meanings in afflicting his people, than onely to puniſh their ſinnes; neuertheleſſe he ceaſeth not to vpholde them, euen by his own meere grace. And yet muſt wee on our ſide reſort backe to this point, that the originall of all the miſeries that we ſuffer in this preſent world, doth proceede of ſinne. And why ſo? For were not this corruption in our nature, which God condemneth, and of the which alſo wee be conuicted: wee ſhoulde inioy heere a bleſſed life: all this whole worlde ſhould be vnto vs an earthly Paradiſe. For we muſt not thinke that Adam was cooped vp in a little corner for himſelfe alone, but that all the whole earth was bleſſed of God, and that we ſhould haue felt the ſame to the end of the worlde. But where is the earthly paradiſe nowe? It is no where at all: For in verie deede, the earth is accurſed. It was the ſentence that God pronounced vpon Adam & vpon all his offſpring. And therefore we muſt vnderſtand, that all the miſeries whereunto wee be ſubiect in this preſent worlde, doe growe from this roote, that we continue not in the perfection, wherein Adã was created. And that God reformeth vs, when wee haue done amiſſe, or rather beholdeth the vices wherof he intendeth to purge vs by fit medicines, & tarieth not til we haue offended him and prouoked his vengeance, but preuenteth vs and miniſtreth the remedie in ſuch ſeaſon as he knoweth beſt. And in very deede, when hee afflicteth vs for ſome other conſideration, than for our ſinnes; the ſame is a great honour, and a ſpeciall preeminence vnto vs: and wee haue cauſe to praiſe him in that hee vouchſafeth to marke vs, and to make his adoption apparant in vs by making vs to ſuffer for the Teſtimonie of

Moreouer let vs marke, that it is not in vaine that God promiſeth that they which ſerue him ſhall leade a happie life euen in this worlde. Not that they ſhall bee exempted from all aduerſitie, for that is impoſſible, yea and alſo againſt our ſaluation. But hee will ſo diſpoſe our life as wee ſhall perceiue that hee meant not to feede vs with a vaine hope, when hee ſaide that he wil cauſe all them to proſper that harken vnto his voice. But by the way we muſt remember, that the bleſſings which bee heere contained, ſerue not to ſhewe what the ſoueraigne felicitie of men is: but to giue vs a taſt of the heauenly life, to the ende wee ſhoulde ſeeke for the celeſtiall inheritance which is promiſed vs, there to ſet our reſt. This muſt bee laide foorth more particularly, or elſe it will be darke. It is true, that there is difference betwixte vs and the fathers that liued vnder the Lawe: For God did there entreat them as little children: and it was meet ſo to bee. For they had not yet our Lorde Ieſus, who hath nowe ſet open the gates of heauen to bring vs into the life and glorie of heauen. Indeede they had as good part therein as we, but they were faine to walke in ſhadowes and figures to vnderſtande it; therefore they had neede of ſome aide, whereof we at this time haue no neede at all; neither may we thinke our ſtate to bee therefore the worſe; as many doe complaine at this day, becauſe that God doeth not dandle them, and that they bee not (as ſeemeth to themſelues) ſo much at their eaſe as the olde fathers were: ſurely they deceiue themſelues in this compariſon. For if any one of vs ſhoulde recken vp what he ſuffered all the dayes of his life, and therewithall looke vpon the ſtate either of Abraham or of Dauid: doubtles he ſhal finde himſelfe to be in better caſe than were the Heb.11.13. holy fathers: For they (as ſaieth the Apoſtle) did but ſee the thinges afarre of, which wee beholde before our eyes. God promiſed to be their Sauiour, he had choſen them, to be, as it were, of his houſholde; But where was hee in the meane while that was promiſed to bee the redeemer? Where was the doctrine that is made ſo manifeſt vnto vs in the Goſpell concerning the reſurrection? They knewe the ſame a farre off: but nowe it is declared vnto vs in the Goſpel, in ſuch maner, as we may indeede ſay, as our Lord Ieſus Matt.13.18. Chriſt gaue vs alſo to vnderſtande, That bleſſed be the eares which heare the things that are tolde vs concerning him, and the eyes that ſee the things which we ſee: for the holy kinges and Prophetes haue longed for the ſame, and coulde not obtaine it. Wee therefore haue a much more excellent ſtate, than they had which liued vnder the lawe. This is the difference whereof I ſpeake, which had neede to bee ſupplied by God, for the imperfection that was in the doctrine concerning the reueiling of the heauenly life, which the fathers knewe but by outwarde tokens, albeit that they were deare vnto God. Nowe that Ieſus Chriſt is come downe hither, and hath ſhewed vs howe wee ought to followe him, by ſuffering many afflictions, as it is tolde vs, and that we muſt be faſhioned after his image Mat.16.24. Rom.8.29. in bearing pouertie and reproch, and all ſuch like thinges; and to bee ſhort, that our life muſt bee as a kinde of death: foraſmuch as we knowe all this, and the infinite power of God is vttered in his raiſing vp Ieſus Chriſt from death, and in his exalting of him to the glorie of heauen; ſhoulde not wee thereuppon take good courage? And ought it not to bee a ſweetening to all the afflictions that we can ſuffer? Haue not we cauſe to reioyce in the middeſt of our ſorrowes? Let vs note then that if the olde fathers were more bleſſed of God than wee bee, as touching this preſent life, wee ought not to wonder at it at all. For the reaſon thereof is apparant. But howſoeuer the worlde goe, yet is this ſaying of Saint Paul alwayes verified, That the feare of GOD 1.Tim.4.8. hath the promiſes not onely of the life to come, but of this preſent life alſo. Let vs walke therefore in the obedience of God, and then ſhall we bee aſſured that hee will ſhewe himſelfe a father vnto vs, yea euen in the maintenance of our bodies, at leaſtwiſe ſo farre forth as concerneth the keeping and preſeruing of vs in peace, the deliuering of vs from all euils, and the ſuccoring of vs in all our neceſſities. God (I ſay) will make vs to feele his bleſſing in all theſe things, ſo that we walke in his feare.

Yet notwithſtanding wee muſt returne to this point, that God, in making vs to taſte of his fauour heere, meaneth not that wee ſhoulde be ſo glutted therewith, that wee ſhoulde forget the euerlaſting reſt whereunto hee inuiteth vs. And ſo all the benefites of GOD which belong vnto this tranſitorie life, muſt ſerue vs for ladders to mount vpwarde, and not for Cuſhions to fall a ſleepe vppon in this worlde. When God giueth a man wherewith to liue, indewing him with health, and ſuffering him not to bee vexed of his enemies; what elſe ſhoulde ſuch a man doe but bee drawen by the grace of God, to endeuour to ſerue him ſo much the more, and not miſbehaue himſelfe in this worlde; but go on foreward, vſing that which is giuen him, as though he vſed it not at al, ſo as no 1.Cor.7.31. thing ſtoppe him from keeping on his way ſtill vnto God? But wee doe all things cleane contrarie, and therefore wee ought to bee wakefuller. When we heare the promiſes that be heere contained, let vs not thinke, that the meaning of God was to pamper the olde people in their tranſitorie pleaſures: but rather that the ſame ſhoulde bee a meane, to drawe them vp on high as hee meaneth nowadayes towardes vs: For all the good that wee receiue of him, hath this end and intent, that our mindes ſhoulde alwayes bee raiſed vp to the heauenly life. Doth God giue vs breade to eate? Therein hee ſheweth himſelfe to bee our father. Yea, but yet for all that wee beeing his children, ceaſe not to bee as wanderers in this worlde, hauing alwayes one foote lifted vp, and we haue here no reſt. Therefore let vs haue an eye to the inheritance of the kingdome of heauen, and let the bread breade which we eate to nouriſh vs, be a meane to direct vs thither. After the ſame manner is it with all other thinges. Nowe let vs come to that which is heere contained in the text of Moſes, and then in the ende we ſhall the better vnderſtande what hath beene ſaide. Moſes ſaith heere, That God will bleſſe his people both in the towne and in the fielde, he will bleſſe them in the ſeede of their bodie: he will bleſſe them in their cattle, hee will bleſſe them in the fruite of their lande, hee will bleſſe them in their baskets and in their ſtores and in their Graineries, he will bleſſe them in giuing them victorie againſt their enimies. We knowe that the happineſſe of this preſent life, that is to ſay, ſuch happines as may be in this worlde, is for men to haue wherewith to maintaine themſelues quietly, and to be preſerued from their enemies. Here God ſetteth downe both the one, and the other: For touching the one he ſaith, Thou ſhalt bee bleſſed aſwell in the towne as alſo in the field: and ſhalt be bleſſed in the fruite of thy wombe, and in the fruite of thy lande, and in the fruite of thy cattle. It is certaine that the chiefe bleſſing which wee can deſire of GOD, is in our owne perſons: that hee prouide vs of ſuch thinges as are requiſite for this tranſitorie life. And that is the cauſe why hee beginneth at our perſons, and then commeth to our children, and from thence deſcendeth to our cattle, to the fruit of the earth, and to all prouiſions. It ſeemeth here at the firſt ſhew that God meant to pamper his people, as though he woulde ſet them vp in a ſtye, and there cram their bellies, as it were to lay them a ſleepe at their eaſe, and to be ſhort, that they ſhoulde be heere as in a Paradiſe. But I haue told you heretofore, that it behoued God to beſtowe his benefites more largely vpon the fathers that liued vnder the Lawe, becauſe they coulde not otherwiſe be drawen vnto him, ſeeing that the promiſes of the Eternall life, were yet obſcure vnto them. Howbeit wee haue to note herewithall, that when God ſpeaketh after this manner, hee meaneth not onely to giue men hope that they ſhal be bleſſed in al reſpects; but alſo to admoniſh vs, that nothing letteth vs from enioying a ſoueraigne and perfect felicitie in this world, whileſt we waite for the life of heauen, but only that wee bee wrapped in vices and corruptions. And ſo did God thereby meane to traine the faithful, that they ſhould thinke thus with themſelues: Let vs ſerue God, and wee ſhall want no maner of thing: And if we bee vexed, and haue not all our deſires, if the earth doe not yeelde ſuch fruitefulneſſe as may content vs, or if our cattle proſper not as wee woulde; let vs vnderſtande that this commeth to paſſe, becauſe we be wretched creatures, and cannot abide the bleſſing of God ſo perfect as it might be amongſt vs, by meanes whereof he is faine to withdrawe his hande, and to giue vs but a portion of his bleſſings, becauſe that if wee ſhould haue ſo much, as he could finde in his heart to beſtowe vppon vs, it ſhoulde glutte vs, and in the ende wee ſhoulde be choaked therewith. This is the cauſe then why God doth heere ſo greatly magnifie his bleſſinges; it is doone, not for that men haue euer beene bleſſed in all manner of reſpectes, without feeling of any euill to vex them: this (I ſay) neuer happened. And wherfore then doth God promiſe it? As wee haue ſaide afore, it is to make vs vnderſtande, that whenſoeuer our life is not ſo bleſſed as we couet, wee ſhoulde conſider that God knoweth vs to be vnable to receiue the fulneſſe of his benefits, and therefore is faine to diſtribute them vnto vs by peece meales, after the manner of ſicke folkes or little children, which for want of diſcretion, are faine to bee gouerned by others. But we be leſſe aduiſed than the infants, or ſicke folkes: for we woulde deuour the bleſſings that God doeth ſende, if hee helde vs not in order, for our luſtes are miſerablie corrupted. God beſtoweth his bleſſings vppon vs ſufficiently: but we like ſicke folkes doe refuſe good meate, and fall to foule feeding, which cannot but hurt vs: thus are wee caried away by our wicked affections, and are neuer able to direct the vſe of Gods benefites, nor to gouerne them as behoueth; for wee woulde infect and defile all, if hee prouided not for it aforehande. Let vs marke therefore that God doeth heere warne vs to call our ſinnes to remembrance, and to bewaile them as often as wee enioy not ſuch fulneſſe of his bleſſings, as is heere mentioned: Neuertheleſſe hee woulde haue vs to hope, that by ſeruing of him wee ſhall proſper, and haue ynough for our contentment.

And indeede, wee ſee howe all the faithfull haue in that behalfe behaued themſelues. It is ſure (as wee haue ſaide) that Dauid was diuers wayes in perplexitie, and afflicted: no man more: but did hee in all that while murmure againſt God? No. True it is that hee vttered his griefes and paſſions: but that was with all meekeneſſe: and yet in the meane while hee omitted not to ſay, that the anger of GOD laſted but a little while, and that when hee afflicteth Pſal. 30.6. his people, he hath done in yͤ turning of a hand: but his goodneſſe laſteth long, and continueth vnto life. As howe? If wee looke into the whole life of Dauid, what ſhall wee finde therein? Beholde, in his infancie hee was brought vp as a Shepheardes ſonne of the countrie, and God 1.Sam.16.11. ſaieth that hee tooke him from the flockes, as hee was among his cattle. When hee came to the court of Saul, it is certaine that, beyond 2.Sam.17.8. all hope and opinion of the worlde, hee was aduanced to bee the kinges ſonne in lawe: but it had beene better for him to haue continued ſtill a ſhepeherd in the field, than to haue beene in ſuch trauaile and miſerie, ſo long time as we perceiue he was: they ſought his death by al means, and his life did not onely hang as it were by a thred, but he was alſo had in reproch. In ſo much that they counted him the moſt wicked caitife in the worlde, a Traitor to his Prince, a diſloy- 1.Sam.25. all man to his King. Yee ſee then that Dauid 10. was as it were, abhomminable to euerie bo- 2.Sam.16.7. die. And when God had ſet him at peace 2.Sam.11. [that way] then was hee vexed with forraine 2.Sam.21.15 2.Sam 15. warre, inſomuch as hee had no ſooner done 2.Sam.16.5. with one people, but hee was faine to turne him about to another; and to make vp the meaſure, his owne naturall ſonne chaſed him out of his kingdome, meaning no leſſe than to cut his throate: and we ſee what other conſpiracies hee ſuffered, as the conſpiracie of Semei. Yet did Dauid always confeſſe without faning, that all the chaſtiſements, miſeries and afflictions that God ſent him, were nothing vnto him, and that they laſted but the turning of a hand, or for a minute of an houre, whereas his bleſſings endured for euer. For why? Dauid had not in him ſuch vnthankefulneſſe as we haue. Wee imbace Gods gracious dealinges and make no account of them: of euery little harme wee make a great mountaine: when God chaſtiſeth vs, wee ſhrinke away our ſhoulders, making great complaints and outcries. But let vs learn to eſteeme better of Gods goodnes towards vs, in ſuch wiſe as we bee not founde vnthankfull for his grace. This is the cauſe (ſay I) why wee conceiue not the value of the bleſſings that are contained here: For why? If God ſende vs any vexation, we ſhut our heartes againſt it, inſomuch that there is none of vs which fretteth not againſt him. And though wee murmure not in ſpeech, yet faile wee not to haue ſome bitterneſſe lurking in our heartes: there needes but one affliction in all our life, to put the grace of God quite out of taſt with vs. And when he hath done vs all the good that can be deuiſed, yet doth it euer runne in our rememberance, we ſaying: yea but I haue ſuſteined ſuch a harme: and our minde is neuer off, of it.

Thus are Gods benefites vnſauerie to vs, ſo as we paſſe them ouer or let them ſlip. Contrariwiſe therefore, when our Lorde afflicteth vs, let vs receiue the comforts that he giueth vs to moderate our heauineſſe: and then ſhall we continue to walke on our way. And albeit we be faine to endure many thinges, and that by reaſon of our frailtie and feebleneſſe, wee be not able to ouercome the temptations at the firſt blow: yet notwithſtanding through the grace of God wee may get the vpper hande. And when wee bee ſo oppreſſed with our miſeries, then wil wee eſteeme of Gods grace in ſuch ſort that euen in the middes of darkeneſſe wee ſhall perceiue what light God giueth vs, ſo as wee ſhall alwayes feele him to bee our father. Now when wee finde this, to wit, that God is our father; it is out of doubt that hee will ſufficiently bleſſe vs, ſo farre foorth as is fit for our ſaluation. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to doe and to practiſe, if wee will rightly vnderſtande, that GOD hath not ſaide in vaine, that hee will bleſſe his people, So they harken to his voice.

Moreouer wee bee warned heereby, not to ſeeke any thing that wee deſire, but at the hande of GOD. And this alſo is another verie profitable admonition. For wee ſee howe men doe erre, when they deſire to bee at their eaſe. It is the naturall inclination of all men, to couet to be this and that, but in that while, what courſe holde wee? No doubt, but wee turne our backes on God, and kicke againſt him. Hee that meaneth to bee rich, vſeth rauin and crueltie, deceites and wicked practiſes: hee that deſireth to attaine to credite and authoritie, practiſeth treaſon, indirect wyles, and other ſleightes. To bee ſhort, Ambition ruleth him altogether: and finally hee that woulde compaſſe any other luſtes of his, cannot but prouoke the anger of God. See at what point wee bee. And thus doeth our faithleſneſſe diſcouer it ſelfe euery way, as I haue ſpoken heere before. Therefore haue wee neede to bee mindfull of this leſſon, to wit, that if wee will proſper, yea euen in this preſent life, there is none other meane for it, but to put our ſelues vnder Gods guiding, who hath all goods in his power to beſtowe on whome it pleaſeth him: hoping alſo that hee will not be nigarly in diſtributing his gracious gifts vnto vs, at leaſtwiſe, ſo wee hearken vnto his voice. For (as I ſaide euen nowe,) ſeeing that wee be his children, can we thinke that he taketh pleaſure to vexe vs? Moreouer hee diminiſheth not; bee hee neuer ſo liberall towards vs, yet hee feareth not that hee ſhall haue aught the leſſe, or that hee ſhall feele any want. For hee is a fountaine that can neuer bee drawen drie.

Let vs therefore bee perſwaded, that our life ſhall alwayes bee accurſed, vnleſſe wee returne to this point where to Moſes leadeth vs, namely, to hearken to the voyce of our God, to be thereby mooued, and continually confirmed, that hee hath care of our ſaluation, yea not onely of the eternal ſaluation of our ſoules, but alſo to maintaine vs in the ſtate of this earthly life, to make vs to taſt preſently of his loue and goodneſſe, in ſuch ſorte as may content and ſuffice vs, waiting till wee may haue our fill thereof, and beholde the thing face to face which we be faine as now to looke vpon as it were through a glaſſe and in the darke. That is one thing more which wee haue to remember vppon this texte, where it is ſaide that wee ſhall bee bleſſed, if wee harken to the voice of the Lorde our God.

1.Cor.13,12

And this is to bee applied to all the partes of our life: as for example when a man woulde proſper in his owne perſon, ſo as hee is deſirous to imploy himſelfe in the ſeruice of God, and to obtaine ſome grace, to the ende hee may not bee vnprofitable heere, but that GOD may bee honoured by him: let him bethinke himſelfe thus, Lorde I am thine, diſpoſe thou of mee, beholde here I am readie to obey thee: for that is the point whereat wee muſt beginne, if wee deſire that GOD ſhoulde take vs to his guiding, and diſpoſe of vs to ſerue him, in ſuch wiſe as his bleſſing may appeare and lighten vppon vs, and vppon our perſons. So is it concerning euery mans houſhold.

When a man is deſirous to liue in peace and concorde with his wife, or to haue children in whom to reioyce; let him vnderſtande that all this is in the hand of God, and that it lyeth not in our owne power nor ſkill to order our houſeholde after our heartes deſire. For they that thinke to compaſſe it by their owne power, deceiue themſelues very much, and commit ſacriledge in robbing God of the honour that hee hath reſerued to himſelfe. It is ſaide that the Pſal.127.3. fruite of the wombe is a ſpeciall gift of God, and ſo is euery thing els that pertaineth to houſeholde: According whereunto it is ſaide, to be but Pſal.127.1. vanitie for a man to build vnleſſe God builde alſo with him. They therefore that will poſſeſſe a quiet ſtate for themſelues and their children, let them turne vnto God, and commit themſelues wholy vnto him and to his guiding: knowing that there is none other meane, to attaine to the ſame, but by his bleſſing: ſo is it alſo, as concerning cattle, foode, and all other thinges. For wee ſee heere was nothing forgotten. And God meant to make vs to perceiue his infinite goodneſſe, in that hee declareth that hee will deale with our ſmalleſt buſineſſe, which one of our own equals would be loath to meddle withall. If wee haue a friende, wee woulde be verie loath, yea, and aſhamed to vſe his helpe, vnleſſe it were in a matter of ſome importance. But ſee heere, God goeth into our ſheepefoldes and into the ſtalles of our Kyne and Oxen, and hee goeth into our fieldes: yea hee hath care of all things elſe. For as much then as wee ſee him abaſe himſelfe ſo farre, ought not we to bee rauiſhed to honour him and to magnifie his bountie?

Moreouer let vs conclude, that whereas God ſaith, that he will bleſſe vs in the fruite of the earth, that he will bleſſe vs in the fruite of our cattell: it is a moſt ſure argument that hee will not forget the principal. Theſe thinges be contemptible and of ſmal reputation, and many times mortal men doe diſpiſe them; and yet wee ſee that God notwithſtanding taketh care of them. Seeing that it is ſo, will hee forget our ſoules, the which hee hath created after his owne ymage, the which alſo hee hath ſo dearely redeemed with the ſacred bloude of his ſonne? Surely no. Firſt of all therefore let vs acknowledge Gods fauour towards vs, in abaſing himſelfe ſo farre as to direct and to gouerne euery thing that belongeth to our life and ſuſtenance; and from thence let vs mount vp higher, and vnderſtande that hee will not faile vs in the thinges that ſurpaſſe this preſent life: but rather that in the chiefe things that belong to our life, yea euen in this worlde, God will ſtretch forth his hande to furniſh vs alwayes with all things that are needefull.

There is the ſeconde point: which is; that we ſhalbe vpholden againſt our enemies. Wee haue ſaid, ẏ the firſt point is, that God prouideth for vs, ſo as we want not any thing that is requiſite for the paſſing of our life in this worlde. But if our Grainers were neuer ſo full, our Cellers neuer ſo thorowly furniſhed, and our purſe neuer ſo well ſtuffed, ſo as we want no manner of thing: yet if in the meane while our enemies be able to ſcratch out our eyes, and we be as people ſet out to the ſpoyle, ſo as wee bee dayly aſſaulted, and haue no defence; what booteth vs our great aboundance? Therefore it was Gods will, ſhortly to ſhewe heere, that his bleſſings ſhoulde extende themſelues ſo farre and wide in all caſes and all reſpectes; that nothing ſhould be miſſing to ſuch as doe him honour and ſeruice. But let vs marke, that God hath not exempted vs quite from our enimies, neither did hee exempt the people of olde time. For why? It is impoſſible for vs to liue in this world without ſome vexation at other mens hands. True it is that as much Rom.12.18. as in vs lyeth wee ought to procure peace, for our part. But foraſmuch as the diuell is Prince Iohn.16.11. of this worlde, hee will not leaue Gods children in reſt. And hee hath ſupporters ynowe to ſerue his turne: for al the diſpiſers of God, al the wicked, and all the hypocrites that be in this world; the number of whom is in maner infinite, are ſatans darts, ſwordes, and arrowes.

Seeing then that wee muſt dwell amongſt the contemners of God, and amongſt the wicked; let vs make our reckoning that wee ſhall be troubled, and haue enemies, let vs endeuour to appeaſe them ſo much as we can, and let vs giue them none occaſion of hatred: but yet in the meane while let vs not be vnprouided, howſoeuer the matter ſtandeth. Thus much concerning that one point. For God hath not ſaide, I will vtterly roote out your enemies, ſo as you ſhall haue the worlde by your ſelues, wherein to leade a happie and quiet life, and to haue all the felicitie that can bee wiſhed: hee ſaieth not ſo: but hee ſaith, Albeit that you bee compaſſed rounde about with your enemies, yet will I not ſuffer them to haue the vpper hand ouer you.

Nowe hee ſaieth further, that if our enemies come foorth by one way, they ſhall flee ſeuen wayes. Whereby hee giueth vs to vnderſtande, that our enemies may well conſpire by great numbers, ſo as it may bee like that wee ſhoulde bee ſwallowed vp of them; but yet they ſhall bee filled with feare, as ſhalbe ſhewed more at large in another text. Heere wee haue to marke, that the ſuſteining and maintaining of our life is in the hande of God, and that our reſt and quietneſſe depende alſo of him. And although that men doe continually deuiſe to hurt and annoy vs, yet is God euer ſtrong ynough to diſappoint them when hee hath once receiued vs into his protection, and to hinder them, ſo as they ſhalbe able to attempt nothing againſt vs, but the ſame ſhalbe ouerthrowen. That is a thing which we haue to beare in remembrance. Nowe when God permitteth vs to haue enemies, thereby he calleth vs vnto himſelfe, & we ought to be the more prouoked to call vpon him when wee ſee our ſelues driuen thereto by neceſſitie. For if the worlde ſhoulde laugh on vs, and reioyce at vs on all partes: it woulde ſeeme vnto vs, that wee had no more neede of Gods protection. But when we be beſet with perils and daungers, and ſee that men lye in waite for vs, ſeeking nothing elſe but to come in to vex vs; it ſtandeth vs in hande to reſort to God, and to commit vs to his tuition, praying him to be our ſhielde and fortreſſe, and (finally) to be our defendour. Let vs marke therefore that God, in permitting vs to haue enemies, doeth thereby drawe vs vnto him, that wee ſhould pray him alwayes to ſuccour and defend vs.

But to conclude, we muſt remember that God is mightie ynough to maintaine vs. As howe? If our enemies came vpon vs with great fierceneſſe, it were ynough to daunt vs and to put vs out of courage: but howſoeuer we fare, although hee ſuffer them to riſe againſt vs, and to bee as furious as wilde beaſtes; yet ſhall they not know what to doe, but bee as folke amaſed. And although they haue neuer ſo greate aduauntage at the beginning, and bee neuer ſo full of craft and wilineſſe; yet will God ſtoppe their eyes, ſo as they ſhall caſt themſelues wilfully into the ſnare, and there bee taken. Againe, euen when they bee armed with malice and boldeneſſe to ſet vppon vs, God will in the end confounde them, no man can tell howe: hee will deſtroy all their deuiſes and attemptes, yea and when they bande themſelues againſt vs, & haue neuer ſo great multitudes on their ſides, yet wil God ſcatter them. Like as when we ſee a cloude threatening raine, and it ſeemeth that all ſhoulde bee drowned; God ſcattereth it, and the tempeſt is gone; euen ſo will hee deale with our enemies. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to remember concerning this text, where it is ſaide that wee ſhall bee defended againſt all ſuch as ſet themſelues againſt vs, and that our God will make them flee before our faces, if we doe him the honour to acknowledge him to bee the Lorde of hoaſtes, and that his power is infinite, and that therefore the whole worlde can nothing preuaile againſt him. Finally, what haue wee nowe to doe but to ſubmit our ſelues vnder the obedience of our God? Alſo let vs vnderſtande, that all the misbeleeuing, and all the deſpiſers of Gods maieſtie (albeit that for a time their life may ſeeme happie) are appointed to perdition, and that all the goods which they poſſeſſe, ſhal become a curſe vnto thē, ſo as they muſt needs be in a forlorn ſtate: according to this ſaying, yͭ their very Table ſhalbe turned into ſnares and gynnes wherewith to take them, and all the benefits of God ſhall become deadly poyſon vnto them. Lo what wee haue to carie in minde.

Moreouer ſo often as wee bee afflicted, let vs humble our ſelues, and acknowledge our ſins, & bewaile them before God: and in the meane ſpace let vs not omitte to qualifie our griefes, knowing that amidſt the afflictions which hee ſendeth vs, there alwayes appeareth a certaine teſtimonie of his goodneſſe, and that it is neceſſarie that he ſhould ſo holde vs in awe. Yet notwithſtanding, we muſt not be caſt downe nor be diſcouraged, when we bee vexed and troubled though we be enuironed with neuer ſo many miſeries. And why? Becauſe God faileth not for all that, to ſhew himſelfe a father towards vs. That is the thing whereon we muſt altogether reſt, ſo as al the afflictions of this world may quicken vs vp to aſpire to the heauenly heritage: and when we haue bewailed our ſins, let vs not doubt, but God of his mercy will bleſſe vs, euen in Ieſus Chriſt the fountaine of al goodneſſe and bleſſedneſſe, by whom all curſes are quite taken away. To proue that it is ſo: what may bee the chiefe curſe that is falne vppon mankinde, but death? And yet wee ſee that the ſame is become an entrance into life. And wherefore? For that in the perſon of Ieſus Chriſt it is nowe made bleſſed. Wherefore let vs learne to reioyce, ſith wee ſee that God hath ſo prouided for our ſaluation, that although he make vs to feele our ſins, and would haue vs touched with ſome ſorrowe, thereby to bring vs to repentance, yet hee ceaſeth not amidſt all theſe to ſhewe himſelfe a father euermore, & by al meanes to aduance our ſaluation.

Now let vs humble our ſelues before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of ſinnes, praying him to touch vs to the quicke more and more, that we may miſlike them: and that acknowledging the euill which is in vs, wee may ſeeke his mercie: not onely to forgiue vs the ſins that we haue alredie committed, but alſo to mortifie vs, and by the power of his ſpirite to giue vs grace ſo to forſake our ſelues, as wee may ſeeke his righteouſneſſe, and more and more profite therein, vntill it be perfect in vs, at ſuch time as hee ſhall haue taken vs out of this world: And ſo let vs al ſay, Almightie God, heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xij. of March, 1556.

The CLV. Sermon which is the third vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

9 The Lorde thy God will make thee a holy people to himſelfe, as hee hath ſworne vnto thee, if thou keepe the commaundements of the Lord thy God and walke in his wayes.

10 And all the nations of the earth ſhall ſee that the name of the Lorde is called vppon ouer thee, and they ſhall bee afraide of thee.

11 And the Lord thy GOD will make thee to abound in ſubſtance, in the fruite of thy wombe, in the fruite of thy cattel, and in the fruit of thy ground, in the land which the Lord thy GOD hath ſworne to thy fathers to giue thee.

12 The Lord thy GOD will open vnto thee his good treaſure, euen the heauens, to ſend downe raine vpon thy land in due ſeaſon: and to bleſſe all the worke of thy handes, and thou ſhalt lende vnto many people and borrowe of none.

13 The Lorde God will make thee the head, and not the tayle: And thou ſhalt be onely aboue, and not beneath, if thou obey the commaundements of the Lord thy God, which I commaund thee this day to keepe and to doe them.

14 And that you ſwarue not, neither to the right hand nor to the left, from any of al the wordes which I commaund you this day, in walking after other gods to ſerue them.

MOſes continuing the matter which was handled yeſterday, ſheweth vppon what condition GOD choſeth vs, when hee taketh vs to bee of his Church: that is, that wee ſhould bee ſeparated, and ſet far off from the common curſe of mankinde. True it is that Gods goodneſſe extendeth ouer all the men of the worlde, wee ſee how all are fedde and maintayned by his liberalitie: but in the meane while wee ſee to how many miſeries men be ſubiect. For this cauſe it behoueth vs to bee ſundered, and that God watch ouer vs, and beare vs a ſpeciall loue, as to his owne children: for without that, all our lyfe is confuſed, as it is ſeene howe the wretched infidelles, albeeit that GOD beſtowe neuer ſo many bleſſinges vppon them, yet can they not profite by them, but they ſtand alwayes in doubt; and not without cauſe. For wherevppon may they repoſe their hope, ſeeing they bee not certifyed of the loue of GOD? How can they holde him for their father? Therefore it is a worde well worth the marking, where Moſes ſayth that GOD hath ſeparated vs from all other nations of the worlde. It is certaine that this worde holyneſſe doth importe, that the image of GOD ſhoulde ſhine forth in vs, and that wee ſhould ſerue him purely in vertuous conuerſation: but yet from thence hee proceedeth farther, as hee doth in this text; namely that God will giue vnto his people a certeine marke, to ſhewe that they bee priuiledged aboue all other folke. Therefore in beholding what the ſtate of man is in this preſent lyfe, let vs learne to reſorte alwayes to this promiſe, that God hath not onely created vs after the common courſe of the brood of all Adams children: but that hee hath alſo choſen vs to himſelfe for his heritage. And let vs not doubt at all, but that he watcheth ouer vs, and wil make vs to perceiue that wee be of his houſholde, and that he is nigh vnto vs to ſuccour vs: let vs bee well reſolued in this.

Moreouer Moſes addeth, Other people ſhall ſee that the name of the Lorde thy GOD is called vppon ouer thee, and they ſhall be afraide. It is certaine that the Idolaters can vaunt themſelues enough of the name of God: and we ſee howe they pretend it, euen in their fighting againſt him, when they caſt off all doctrine: Inſomuch that being as fierce as wilde beaſtes, yet they looke to bee counted of the Church. But Moſes dooth here take the worde call vppon, for naming, or calling vpon: yea and that in trueth; meaning that the people were truely and in deed called after God his name; or named his People. If wee walke in the feare of our God, and frame our life after his calling, then ſhall it be ſeene how it is not in vaine that hee calleth himſelfe our God, & auoweth vs to be his people. Now it is certain that this word dooth preſuppoſe that wee haue our recourſe to God, as being vnder his protection. For it is ſayd that a man is called vppon or named after the name of a prince, when hee is become his ſubiect, and is vnder his tuition. Euen ſo it is ſayd, that the faithfull haue GOD his name called vppon ouer them in proteſting that they bee his, and that, there they bee all ſafe vnder his winges. And this cannot bee vnleſſe we call vppon GOD, and haue our refuge vnto him in all our neceſſities. But whence commeth ſuch boldneſſe, that wee glory in this: that wee belong vnto God, more than any other? For wee know that the ſtate of men is alyke by nature. Wherefore then be we preferred before them that are deſcended of the ſelf ſame race? It commeth through Gods election: It may not begin of vs. For what is he yͤ can aduaunce himſelf to come nigher vnto God, thã others come? What deſert can any man bring wͭ him? [None at all.] Thẽ muſt God make choice of vs through his own meere goodnes: & whẽ he clared himſelfe to be our God, then may wee alſo of our parte bee bolde, in all aſſurance and without doubt to call vppon his name. Nowe wee ſee what is the effect of this ſentence. And Moſes meaneth to declare, what preheminence G O D giueth vnto thoſe whome hee hath adopted for his children: to wit, that albeit they be mingled amongeſt men, and encompaſſed with many miſeries; yet be they preſerued, as being vnder his hand and protection, euen becauſe hee doth holde and auowe them to bee of his houſhold: not for any other cauſe than onely his own good pleaſure. Let vs therfore courageouſly defie Sathan, when wee ſee that hee practiſeth all that hee poſſibly can againſt vs, and let vs count our ſelues aſſured againſt all the dangers of this world, ſeeing that God hath done vs ſuch fauor, as not to leaue vs to fortune, as the vnbeleeuers doe imagine. And why? For wee bee vnto him a holy people. And from whence ſhall wee fetche this preeminence? Wee haue it becauſe hee hath teſtified vnto vs that hee is our G O D. If wee had not gotten this worde of him, we ſhould bee alwayes in perplexitie, wee ſhoulde ſtill doubt, through queſtioning of this and that, and our lyfe ſhould hang as it were by a threed; as wee ſhall ſee in this Chapter. But ſeeing that God hath vttered his fatherly loue vnto vs, and it hath pleaſed him to open his mouth, to make vs to vnderſtand that hee hath giuen vs familiar acceſſe vnto him: ſeeing (I ſay) that wee haue ſuch aſſurance: let vs call vppon him (that is to ſay) let vs not doubt to glorie in this: that hee is our Sauiour: and that ſeeing we are his, wee cannot periſh. Howebeit let vs beware that wee call not vppon the name of God falſly, as all they doe which abuſe it, and yet in the meane while doe make a mocke of him, and are deſpiſers of his maieſtie. If wee clayme the name of God, let it bee, becauſe we be grounded vppon his promiſes, and haue receiued them through faith: and then let vs call vppon him, let him bee our refuge, and let vs not giue our ſelues to fond bragging as they doe which thinke it enough for them to beare the bare name of Chriſtians. Nay, let vs followe the call of our G O D: as Moſes ſheweth here; ſaying: If thou wilt keepe the commaundementes of thy G O D, as I doe ſet them afore thee this day. For it is good reaſon that ſeeing God hath ſo bound himſelfe vnto vs, wee in lykewiſe for our parte ſhould yeelde our ſelues to his direction. And that wee ſhould not onely profeſſe with our mouthes that wee bee his people, but alſo ſhewe it by framing our whole lyfe agreeable to the ſame, and by keeping his commaundementes, make it apparant that we haue receiued the grace which hee offered vs: For that is the true proofe thereof.

Now hee ſayth moreouer, That other people ſhall ſee how the name of God is called vppon ouer vs, and that they ſhall feare vs. It is not enough for vs that G O D doe promiſe vs to make vs to feele that wee bee in his keeping: but he ſaith, that euen the Paynims our mortall enemies, and the deſpiſers of his maieſtie ſhall bee made to know the ſame. Now it is certaine that the Infidels knowe not the arme of G O D, in ſuch wiſe, as it ought to bee knowen vnto vs: they come far ſhort of it. For in ſeeing, they ſee not a whit: and how then ſhould it be poſſible that they ſhould perceiue that G O D hath bleſſed vs, that we liue of his fauor, and that we be nouriſhed at his coſt? For they bee blockiſh, and thinke not that any thing commeth vnto them from the hand of God. Wee ſee well how the Infidels be fedde and cloathed, they enioy the light of the Sunne, yea, and they haue aboundance of goods. But as for the worſhipping and ſeeking of God, there is no tidinges at all among them thereof. And if beſides their deſpiſing of the benefites of their God, they haue no vnderſtanding whence they come vnto them: howe ſhould they then knowe that the name of God is called vppon ouer vs? Their knowing of it is not through any perſwaſion of minde, or through any ſuch true vnderſtanding of it, as we ought to haue: but Moſes ſayth that they ſhall haue it proued to their faces: as for example, wee ſee the wicked grinde their teeth when they behold the faithfull to proſper, and ſee that God vpholdeth and keepeth them. And whence commeth that? Truely they ſhall be aſtoniſhed at it: and they ſhal not be able to think otherwiſe, but that God fauoreth the contrarie parte: not that they doe ſettle vppon it, or bee rightly reſolued thereof in their heartes: but for that they be confounded in their owne ſelues.

Hee ſayth, that they ſhall perceaue that Gods name is claymed [or called vppon] ouer vs: and that it ſhall put them in feare. For albeit that they feare not God: yet doth he bridle them ſecretly, inſomuch that when they would practiſe any thing againſt his people, they cannot, for they feele their courage broken. This is to be wondred at, that God ſometimes doth giue the wicked the bridle ſo far as to caſt out the fome of their rage againſt vs: they deuiſe what they can, and worke their ſpite. But haue they once done that: then ſhall it appeare that they are vnderlings to him, and cannot withſtand him. And what is the cauſe thereof? If God ſhould ſuffer the faythleſſe to haue their owne will, it is certaine that the worlde ſhould not laſt three dayes, but that they would beare downe all things before them. Therefore it is neceſſarie that hee ſhoulde reſtraine them with ſome ſecret bridle, and not ſuffer their headyneſſe to haue full ſcope. And we ſee it before our eyes. Whereof comes it that we haue not bin ſwallowed vp a hundred thowſand times within theſe twentie or thirtie yeeres laſt paſt? Onely of Gods defence, which conſiſteth not in ſignes that may be ſeene, but in his ſecret holding of the wicked as it were in priſon, maugre all the miſchieuouſneſſe that is in them. By reaſon whereof, when they haue deuiſed any thing, they waſh away lyke water, & all their thoughtes doe vaniſh, and they ly as with their armes broken, and though they vndertake great thinges, yet can they not attaine to their purpoſe. And ſo yee ſee what Moſes meant in ſaying, that the wicked, (forſomuch as they bee our enemies) ſhall perceiue that the name of God is called vppon ouer vs, and thereby bee ſtricken in feare. Whereby wee ſee, that there is no ſuch fortreſſe nor defence as to haue our recourſe to God. So long as hee taketh the care vpon him to ſaue vs, let vs boldely truſt that wee ſtand in ſafetie, yea albeit that the wicked conſpire againſt vs, and lye in waite and watch for vs: yet ſhall we be as in an inuincible fortreſſe, ſo we can call vppon the name of our GOD, and be throughly aſſured in ourſelues that he auoweth vs to be his people, whereof wee haue good warrant, ſo wee breake not our faith which on our part we haue plighted vnto him. But wee muſt feele the protection of GOD otherwiſe than the wicked doe; that is to ſay, in hearing his woorde, wee muſt embrace the grace which is preſented vnto vs, and reſt wholy vppon it. After that manner muſt we bee aſcerteyned that the name of God is called vppon ouer vs.

Now Moſes doth repeate againe that which he had ſayd concerning the fruite of the womb, of Cattell, and of the Earth. Truely it had bin ſufficient, to haue promiſed at once, ȳ al bodily bleſſings proceede from God. But on the one ſide we ſee the miſtruſt that is in men, how that when God ſpeaketh vnto them, they ceaſe not to argue and to reply; Yea, but ſhall I be ſure of it? And therefore to reſolue vs the better, God confirmeth the matter which he had ſpoken of. Againe we ſee our vnthankfulneſſe to be ſuch, that we attribute the thinges to Fortune, and to our owne skill and trauel, which God hath done for vs. Therefore he calleth vs vnto him, and ſheweth that it is he which doth it: and on the other ſide he would haue vs to vnderſtand, that if we intend to proſper in all pointes, wee muſt hearken to him and obey him. For all men, yea euen the wickeddeſt in the world are deſirous to haue iſſue of their owne bodies, increaſe of cattell, and great reuenewes. But what? In the meane while wee deſpiſe God the author of all goodneſſe, and ſeeme as though wee laboured of purpoſe to thruſt his hand far frō vs: which is aſmuch as if I ſhould aske a man an almes, and giue him a whyrret on the eare: or as if hee ſhould come to ſuccour mee, and I ſhould ſpit in his face: euen ſo deale wee with our God. God therefore perceiuing ſuch a malice in vs, and that wee cannot be taught at the firſt, but doe ſtop our eares againſt that which he ſaith; repeteth the ſame thinges againe which he had ſpoken to vs before. Whereby hee warneth vs, that if wee want any thing, wee muſt lay the blame thereof vppon our owne ſinne, and not vppon him. Why ſo? Becauſe hee is ready for his part, to bleſſe vs as well in iſſue of our bodies, as in reuenue of land, and in cattell, and is liberall and rich enough for vs, neither will hee bee ſtreite laced towards vs of the bleſſings that be in his poſſeſſion. Let vs therefore acknowledge, that the fault is in vs, when hee withdraweth his benefites, and giueth them not vnto vs ſo largely as wee would.

Moreouer it is a notable manner of ſpeach, when he ſayth, That God wil open his good treaſure, namely the heauen, to giue vs rayne, that the earth may bring forth foode. Here Moſes ſetteth forth the order of nature which wee ſee with our eyes, that wee might the better vnderſtand how God is our father and our nouriſher: and that although the ſuſtenance whereon wee feed is gathered from the earth: yet is it onely God that ſendeth all thinges. How ſo? The earth in deede hath nature giuen vnto it, to bring forth fruite; but if it ſhould continue dry, what woulde come of it? Wee ſee that vnleſſe there fall both rayne and dewe, the earth dooth open, as though it would cry out that it were a thirſt, and it dryeth vp for want of moyſture. And therefore Dauid intending to vtter his earneſt deſire of Gods grace, vſeth this ſimilitude, ſaying: Lorde I am vnto thee as a dry grounde. Pſal.143.6. Wee ſee before our eyes how the earth becommeth barreine and parcheth for want of moyſture, and finally hath neither ſtrength nor ſubſtance. Had it ſo pleaſed God, coulde not hee haue giuen propertie to the earth, to haue of it ſelfe ſubſtance enough? For as wee reade in Geneſis, there was not ſuch raine in the beginning as wee haue in theſe dayes: Gen.2.6. but GOD cauſed a certaine vapor to riſe vp to moyſten the earth: and cannot hee doe the ſame now, or elſe that the earth ſhoulde haue ſome certaine moyſture proceeding from vnderneath? And in deede, wherehence commeth the rayne? If yee aske the Philoſophers, they will ſay that the rayne commeth of the vapors that aſcend out of ȳ earth, which being drawen vp into the ayre, bee ſent downe againe vppon the earth. Thus then, after ȳ opinion of the Philoſophers, the vapors doe aſcend: But now wherefore commeth it, that GOD cannot make the heauens to yeelde rayne except it come firſt out of the earth: or the earth to keepe ſtill that moyſture which it hath, ſo that it may alwayes haue ſtrength and ſubſtance of it ſelfe? What is the cauſe of this riſing vp of the vapors, that when the earth hath yeelded them forth, they bee held vp in the ayre as in Bottles: as is mentioned in the Pſalme? What is the cauſe of all this? It is Pſal.18.12. for that he ſeeth vs to be ſo blockiſh and groſſe, that although hee ſhewe as with his fingar, that it is at his hand that wee receiue all goodneſſe; yet is it his meaning to make vs to perceiue it in a more viſible maner. And that is the cauſe alſo why hee ſayth, That he will heare the heauens, Oſee.2.21. and the heauens ſhall heare the earth, and the earth ſhall heare the corne, and all the ſeedes ȳ be committed vnto it. When the husbandman ſoweth his graine well, he layeth it vp as it were in priſon: & it ſeemeth to be as at the mercie of the earth. The earth then muſt cōceiue ȳ corne, nouriſh it, & make it to ſpring, & in likewiſe giue it ſubſtance. But doth ȳ earth heare the Corne? It is deafe: that is to ſay, it hath no power to make it to proſper, except it be heard of others. And how is that? The earth as I haue ſayd, looketh vp to heauen, and after a ſort openeth her mouth, it cleaueth when it feeleth extreme heate, and is not watered as it woulde. The heauen then muſt bee faine to aunſwere to the earth. The heauen? What can that doe? Can the heauen giue water? It hath none except G O D drawe it vnto it by his ſecrete power. In very deede wee ſhall ſee hereafter Leui.26.19. Deut.28.23 how God threatneth to giue a braſen heauen: It is needefull then that God do heare the heauen, and that we repaire thither. So then, as often as it reineth, wee muſt vnderſtand that God openeth his Treaſures, which are elſe ſhut vp. God (as I haue ſayd) could euen without rayne or deawe) cauſe the earth to bring forth fruite: but hee vſeth ſuch meane, as he knoweth to be conuenient for our dulneſſe: and hee doth ſo, to the intent that we ſhould haue the leſſe excuſe: that if we be vnthankfull vnto him, and cloſe our eyes againſt ſo apparant a matter: wee ſhould be ſo much the more blameworthie at the laſt day, and bee ſure to yeelde account for our wilfulneſſe in refuſing to knowe the thing which ought to bee throughly knowen vnto vs. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to beare in minde.

Whereupon Saint Paul ſpeaking of the ig- Act.14.16. norance which was in the olde world, before the Goſpel was preached: ſayth that all people went aſtray lyke brute beaſtes: And what was the reaſon? Becauſe the doctrine was not yet taught, which is the true light to ſhewe vs the Deut.30.15 way of ſauing health: as we ſhall ſee in the thirtith Chapter. Notwithſtanding he addeth, that Act.14.17. God neuertheleſſe leaſt not himſelfe without witneſſe. And his vſing of this manner of ſpeach Hee leſte not himſelfe without witneſſe, is as much as if hee ſayd: Wherefore? For hee hath ſent rayne vppon the earth in due time and ſeaſon: hee hath ſent faire weather alſo. Theſe be Gods witneſſes, which declare, that as hee hath created the world, euen ſo hee doth vpholde and preſerue it: theſe bee the witneſſes that ſpeake with a lowde and cleare voyce, ſaying that wee muſt looke vnto G O D for all the nouriſhment that hee giueth vs. And that is the cauſe, why I ſayd, that we ſhould marke well this ſaying: that God wil open his Treaſures. For although wee ſee what great riches God hath ſet in this world, what ſundry ſortes of beaſtes, what hearbes, what trees, and what a number of all other thinges: yet ſhould all theſe thinges go to decay, vnleſſe God ſent vs dayly from heauen the thinges that are requiſite for the preſeruation of this lyfe. Could wee abide three dayes without the light of the Sauiour? If God gaue not the naturall vertue to euery ſeede, what were it? Wee ſhould quickly periſhe. And if there were none other matter, but that whereof I ſpake euen nowe concerning the earth, it woulde ſoone dry vp, vnleſſe God remedied it. Theſe therefore be the good Treaſures, which God beſtoweth on vs. And when it is his will to ſhewe himſelfe a father towardes vs: he layeth the heauens before vs, that wee might ſee it there. And it is aſmuch as if God ſhould lift vs vp by the chin, and ſay; Poore creatures, when ye ſeeke to bee fedde; you looke whether you haue laide corne enough into the ground or no. Indeed that is a thing which you muſt looke vnto: but yet you muſt firſt of all goe higher, and lift vp your eyes to mee, and euen nature it ſelfe doeth compell you ſo to doe. For ye knowe that without rayne the earth cannot proſper. And therefore forget not the thinges which I ſhewe you day by day, and whereof you bee conuicted by experience. This is the good Treaſure whereof Moſes ſpeaketh: & he expreſſely addeth, The heauen. For what cauſe? For if hee had ſayde, G O D will vtter his bountifulneſſe, both from aboue and from beneath; truely it ought well to haue contented vs: but yet bycauſe of our infirmitie, wee ſee howe God is fayne to expreſſe the matter more plainely: as hee alſo ſheweth that wee muſt come vnto him, and looke vp to the heauens bycauſe hee calleth vs thither, and hath ſet ſuch order that he will haue vs to thinke our ſelues to be as barraine and hungerſtarued folke, vntill hee hath powred his goodneſſe vpon vs from aboue.

Nowe hauing ſpoken of this good Treaſure, hee ſayeth: Hee will giue rayne in dewe time, and will bleſſe the woorke [or labor] of thy handes. By ſpeaking of due ſeaſon, hee ſheweth vnto vs that this Gods giuing of rayne vnto vs in due time, proceedeth of a ſpeciall care. For ſometimes rayne is verie hurtfull, as wee ſee before our eyes. Whereuppon wee muſt conclude, that if G O D had not the power and ſkill to ſtay the rayne, the fruites of the earth and alſo the bodyes of men ſhoulde rotte. What doeth the raine of it ſelfe? It engendereth but rottenneſſe. On the otherſide wee ſee that the raine refreſheth in ſeaſon, & giueth ſtrength vnto the ground:, whereby wee ſee that it is the Treaſure of God for to giue vs ſuſtenance. And why is that? Bycauſe God knoweth it is good for vs, that hee cauſe it to raine. Let vs therfore when wee ſee it rayne out of ſeaſon, let vs marke how G O D ſheweth vs that it is verie requiſite for vs that he doe watch ouer vs, and that no drop of rayne fall without his commaundement; according to this which we haue heard before, namely: Pſal.18.12 That he holdeth the waters aboue, as it were in bottles. The cloudes be dreadfull bottles. But the Prophet woulde haue vs to conſider, that it muſt needes be a wonderful power whereby the rayne is ſhut vp there, or elſe wee ſhoulde bee drowned out of hand: at leaſtwiſe it would ſerue but to rotte vs, as I haue ſayde alreadie. And here by the way wee be admoniſhed, as ſhall be ſayde hereafter, to conſider our ſinnes and treſpaſſes: and to thinke that when God giueth vs extraordinarie raines, they be as puniſhmentes for our offences. Moreouer when the raine commeth in ſeaſon, let vs acknowledge that there falleth not one drop but by Gods appointment, aſſuring our ſelues that it is neceſſarie for vs. That is the cauſe why Moſes did expreſly adde that ſaying.

Afterward he ſaith that God will bleſſe the labor of our handes: Pſal.127.2. to doe vs to vnderſtande (as hee hath ſhewed in another Text) that it is not our owne labour and trauell that feedeth vs, as Deut.8.17. wee haue ſeene in the eyght Chapter, where he ſaieth thus: When thou art come into the land which G O D giueth thee, remember that by the ſpace of fortie yeeres thou waſt fed with Manna that fell from heauen, to the end thou ſhouldeſt not ſay: It is mine owne labor that findeth me. Let vs therefore learne by theſe texts that when wee haue traueiled, and beſtowed our labour to till the earth, and conſideration is had of al that we ſee requiſite yet neuertheles wee muſt lift vppe our eyes, and not ſtand in our owne conceit to ſay, I haue doone this, it is mine owne labor and policie: but acknowledge that it is Gods office to giue increaſe, and that without that, all our labor is in vaine: as we might wel enough breake our armes and our legges, and yet in ſteade of going foreward wee ſhould ſtill goe backewarde. The ſumme of the matter which God meant to ſhew vs, is that we ſhould labor in al lowelineſſe, and that when euery of vs hath trauailed for his liuing, wee ſhould vnderſtand, that it is not in vs to giue the ſucceſſe, but that GOD muſt wholly guide it, and giue it good iſſue: not onely to ẏ harbage of the earth, but to all things els in generall. So then, when a man applyeth him to any kinde of labor, let him not go about it preſumptuouſly; but let him call vpon GOD to helpe him, ſaying, Lorde it is thy pleaſure that I ſhoulde take paine: well, I goe about it; but I knowe that I ſhall not preuaile, vnleſſe thou guide me, & vnles thou giue me good ſucceſſe: Through thy meere grace and goodnes, let my labor proſper. That is the thing whereof wee bee admoniſhed in this text. Let vs not then thinke, that mans care & skill, or his trauell and endeuour can make the ground fertile: but that the bleſſing of GOD ruleth all. Yet notwithſtanding it putteth vs in mind of our dutie, to wit, that GOD will ſo helpe vs, as wee may not bee idle: for wee bee not made as logges of wood: men muſt (I ſay) imploye them ſelues when GOD promiſeth them his bleſſing. For theſe two poyntes goe together, namely that the Lorde will bleſſe thee, and yet neuertheleſſe that he will haue thee alſo to labor. It is certaine that GOD canne feede vs, though our armes were broken, he coulde make vs to liue without any care, and without hauing regarde to maintaine our houſhold: GOD (I ſay) coulde giue vs foode of free coſt: but it is his pleaſure to exerciſe vs, with care and trauel, and that euery man according to his vocation, ſhould apply himſelf to that which he ſeeth meete for him. I ſay that Gods matching of his bleſſings with our trauell, is to ſhewe that hee will not haue vs to bee ſluggerds, ſo as euery man ſhoulde ſitte on his taile, and neither deale with tilling of the ground nor with any other trade of occupying, & take the bridle in our teeth: but that we ſhould doe this honour vnto GOD, to ſay, Lorde, albeit we haue doone what we can, yet is it nothing, vnleſſe thy gratious goodneſſe rule it. But this is ill put in vre. For we ſee how men are giuen to darken the grace of God vnder colour that they doe ſome thing of themſelues: for ſo they beare themſelues in hande.

And this deuilliſh arrogancie is not onely in matters concerning the nouriſhment of our bodies, but alſo touching the ſaluatiō of our ſoules. Whereupon is it, that freewil is grounded? Euen vppon this, that God requireth men to ſtudie and labour to doe good, to withſtand temptations, to haue ſuch a feruent zeale as to giue thēſelues wholy vnto him, & to forſake themſelues. Foraſmuch as God requireth all theſe thinges, it ſeemeth that we can doe them. Yea but we conſider not, that God for all his commaunding, ſayth alſo that hee worketh by his holy ſpirite, ſo as he is faine to write his lawes in our harts, & to engraue them in our mindes, and to make vs walke according as he commaundeth. O it is true, but yet therewithall, we alſo muſt doe our endeuor. And whence commeth that endeuor? Theſe wretches doe not vnderſtand, that it is God that driueth vs foreward and ſtirreth vs vp, and that all the endeuoring wherewith men indeuor, is that they be inſtrumentes of the holy Ghoſt. Now then, foraſmuch as vnder this colour of working wee ſeeke nothing elſe but to darken the grace of God, ſo much the more diligently ought we to note this doctrine, whereby GOD doth ſtirre vs vp, and would haue vs to worke, and yet ſheweth vs therewithall that we cannot profit, vnleſſe he giue vs good ſucceſſe. Truely there is great difference betwixt ẏ handy worke, and that which the faithful do in indeuoring to liue well. For (as I haue ſayd) men are created to labour by nature: but wee be ſo wicked & froward, that in ſtead of obeying god, we be borne to nothing but to offend God, vntill he hath reformed vs, and made vs new creatures. So then God doth not onely bleſſe our labor, when we endeuor to ſerue him, through the grace of his holy ſpirit: but we labor alſo through his only vertue, according as he doth guide and gouerne vs. This is the ſumme of that which we haue to beare in minde concerning this text.

Iere. 31. 33
Ezech. 11. 19

Now it is alſo ſayd, That God will make them the head and not the taile, namely them that indeuour to ſerue him: hee will ſet them aboue, and not beneath. This is as it were the toppe of all proſperitie. Now ſurely it was more behoouefull (as it was treated of yeſterday) that the olde fathers vnder the lawe, ſhould haue moe promiſes concerning the tranſitory lyfe, than we haue. For they had not ſuch opening of the heauenly lyfe as is giuen vs in the Goſpel. Therefore it was Gods will to drawe them after that faſhion lyke little children. For inaſmuch as an infant is not of capacitie to vnderſtand the goodneſſe of his father: therfore to encourage him, he will ſay vnto him; I will giue thee a trim cappe, and I will buy thee a gay newe cote: this is agreeable to the capacitie of the childe, and becauſe his heart is tender, ſuch talke is vſed vnto him: howbeit the father meaneth to lead him on farther. Euen ſo did God deale with the olde fathers: He did ſet forth his benefites which they ſhould enioy in this worlde: meaning to drawe them from thence to a higher hope, namely, to the hope of the heauenly heritage. And ſo the Iewes were made as a head when the kingdome floriſhed amongeſt them, when they ouercame their enemies, and when God ſhewed himſelfe to fight for them. As nowadayes wee muſt not loke to haue either kingdomes or principalities as they had; neither haue wee in lyke manner the temporall kingdome of Dauid: it is ſufficient for vs that Ieſus Chriſt is giuen vs, and that we reigne with him, and ỳ he being our king, cauſeth vs to floriſh vnder his conduction: I ſay it ought to ſuffice vs, that we bee a kingly Prieſthood 1.Pet.2.9. vnder our head; which is the ſonne of God Neuertheleſſe, our Lorde hath made promiſe to all the faithfull, that if they walke in his obedience, they ſhall not be oppreſſed by the tyrannie of men, but bee mainteined in libertie, which is alſo a bleſſing as much to be deſired as any can be in this world. Knowing therefore that this is a ſpeciall gift of God, as it is here ſhewed, let vs learne to ſerue him and to giue him the whole authoritie ouer vs: that by his gouerning of vs, we may bee ſet free from bondage of men. Wee ſhall ſee hereafter in this preſent Deut.28.37 Chapter, how hee threatneth them that will not feare him nor ſhrinke at his terribleneſſe, Pſal.105.38 accordingly as is ſayd in the pſalme; God muſt needes lay the feare of men vppon all them that will not feare him, and be his willing ſubiectes. Let vs marke therefore, that if in caſe we yeeld to the reigning of God ouer vs, wee ſhall bee maintained by him, in ſuch ſorte, as men ſhall not bee able to oppreſſe vs. And if at any time the wicked haue their ſcope, and ſeeme to ſet their feete as it were vppon our throtes; let vs vnderſtand that God doth bring vs lowe, becauſe wee haue offended him, and becauſe wee haue not rendred him the praiſe that belongeth vnto him; and that hee chaſtiſeth vs according to our deſertes. But yet muſt wee euer come backe to this point, that if we caſt not off GOD, wee ſhall bee receiued of him, in ſuch wiſe as hee will be vnto vs as an armie, and make vs able to walke with Pſal.3.4. our heades vpright: as it is ſayd in the third pſalme. So then, this bleſſing ſerued not onely for the fathers that liued vnder the lawe, but it continueth alſo vnto the end of the world, and wee ſhall vnderſtand that it is not vaine, ſo wee followe in lykewiſe that which is added here: Keepe the commaundementes which I ſette before thee this day, (ſayth Moſes) that thou ſwarue not neither to the right hand nor to the left, to goe to ſeeke ſtraunge Gods and to worſhip them. Wee ſee how GOD doth euer put vs in minde of obedience to his worde: and that is to the end wee ſhould ſerue him, not in hypocriſie, whereunto wee bee too much enclined. Let vs remember therefore this leſſon, which is, that to worſhip our GOD ſyncerely, we muſt euermore begin at the hearkening to his voyce, and of giuing eare to that which he commaundeth vs; for if euery man goe after his owne way, wee ſhall wander, wee may well runne, but wee ſhall bee neuer a whit the neerer to the right way, but rather the further off from it. And God will not onely bee heard, but alſo obeyed of all men without exception, yea euen without adding any thing to his worde, or without taking any thing from it. And this is expreſly ſayd: For that men dare be ſo bold as to bring in their newe manner of ſeruing GOD, and to doe that which they ſuppoſe to bee good. Contrariwiſe let vs vnderſtand that when GOD hath once ſhewed what he will haue vs to doe, wee muſt ſimply holde vs there, without preſuming to adde thereunto or to diminiſh it by any meanes at all. But aboue all thinges hee would haue vs to acknowledge him to bee our GOD. For the very cauſe that maketh men to ſtray, and altogether to vaniſh in ſo many ſuperſtitions and idolatries, is that they knowe not what GOD they ought to worſhip. Wee haue therefore profited greatly in the Goſpell, in the Lawe and in the Prophets, when we haue the skill to ſay, This is the GOD that ſhewed himſelfe to Abraham, the GOD that ſhewed himſelfe by Moſes, the God that laſtly ſhewed himſelfe fully in the perſon of his onely ſonne, and the ſame is hee that is our God. As it is alſo ſayde in the Prophet Eſay, where hee ſpeaketh of the manifeſtation of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Loe, this is hee; Loe, Eſa.25.9. this is our GOD. Then let vs haue a ſetled faith, that wee be not rouers; let vs not bee like vnto little children, nor lyke wauering Reedes that are caryed euery way; but let our faith be well ſtayed, by taking roote in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, beſeeching him ſo to teach vs with true repentance, that we may bewaile them, and be heartily ſory for our corruption, to the end to withdrawe vs more and more, and therein to reforme vs. And foraſmuch as we bee not onely fraile but alſo altogether froward: it may pleaſe him to bring vs home againe vnto him, and to vnderproppe our weakeneſſe with his mightineſſe, ſo as we may ouercome all the hinderances that ſerue to turne vs from him; and that we may with perfect conſtancie go on to the marke whereunto he calleth vs, vntill we attaine to the perfection of all righteouſneſſe. And that in the meane while, it may pleaſe him to vpholde vs in ſuch ſorte, as that albeit we ſhould faile, yet he ceaſe not to take vs ſtill for his children, and make vs to vnderſtand more and more, that he dooth confirme vs in the truſt of our ſaluation. That it may pleaſe him, to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Friday the xiij. of March, 1556.

The CLVI. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

15 But if thou wilt not obey the voyce of the Lorde thy God, in keeping and doing all his commaundementes and ordinances, which I commaund thee this day, then ſhall all theſe curſes come vpon thee and take holde of thee.

16 Thou ſhalt bee curſed in the citie and likewiſe curſed in the feelde.

17 Thy basket ſhalbee curſed and thy ſtore.

18 Curſed ſhalbee the fruite of thy wombe, and the fruite of thy lande, the increaſe of thy kyne, and of the flocks of thy ſheepe.

19 Thou ſhalt bee curſed in thy comming in, and curſed in thy going out.

20 The Lorde will ſende vppon thee curſedneſſe, trouble, and deſtruction in all that euer thou putteſt thine hande vnto, and in all that thou doeſt, vntill hee hath deſtroyed thee, and thou quickely periſh, becauſe of thy euil inuentions, through the which thou haſt forſaken mee.

21 The Lorde will make the peſtilence to cleaue vnto thee, till it hath conſumed thee from the lande, which thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it.

22 The Lorde will ſtrike thee with ſwellings and with the feuers, and with whote diſeaſes, and with burning ſickeneſſes, and with drought, and with ſworde, and with blaſting windes, and with the yellowe Iaundis, and hee will purſue thee vntill hee haue vtterly deſtroyed thee.

23 And the heauen which is ouer thy head, ſhalbee braſſe, and the earth vnderneath thee ſhalbee yron.

24 In ſteede of rayning vppon the earth, the Lorde will giue thee duſt and aſhes: and hee will come downe from heauen vppon thee, vntill thou bee deſtroyed.

WE haue ſeen theſe other dayes paſt, howe God entreated his people by promiſes: nowe on the contrarie part hee addeth threatenings. And that is not without cauſe, for we ſee what ſlowneſſe is in vs, when the caſe concerneth the ſubmitting of our ſelues to the obeying of God. Our feete are ſwifte ynough to runne to euill, as the Prophet Eſay ſayeth, and as it is ſpoken in the Prouerbes; but God cannot make vs to ſet foorth one ſteppe, to behaue our ſelues as becommeth vs: and therefore wee muſt bee compelled to it, as of force. Neuertheleſſe, it is certaine that God beginneth with gentlenes and goodneſſe. And that is the cauſe why hee keepeth this order of ſetting foorth his bleſſings vnto them that ſerue him. Hee mought very well haue begunne with threateninges, but hee did it not. And why? Hee tryeth to ſee whether wee bee apt to bee taught, by ſhewing himſelfe fatherly towards vs, and by making it to bee ſeene, that hee ſeeketh nothing but our benefite and welfare, proſperitie, and quietneſſe.

Iſay.59.7.
Prou.1.16.
Rom.3.14.

Thus wee ſee howe God doeth firſt make a tryall of vs: and if that preuaile not; then hee vſeth threatenings; and it behoooueth thoſe two to goe ioyntly togither. For to what purpoſe is it, if wee ſerue not God with a free will? Albeit that men cannot fynde any fault with vs: yet, if wee goe to it vnwillingly, all our life is deteſtable. For the cheefe poynt is that wee haue a pure and free good wil, to giue our ſelues ouer vnto God. For wee muſt not haue our eye to the rewarde: and therefore doth it much more followe in reaſon, that if we goe to it by conſtraynt, all our life is curſed. Yet notwithſtanding, this deſire of ſeruing God becauſe it is not loſt labour, is not all that wee haue to do. For when wee bee come to that poynt, wee are but at the halfe way. Although a man receiue the promiſes which bee heere contayned, and offer himſelfe to God to ſerue him: yet his ſo dooing is vnperfect, and deſerueth to bee caſt off. Wherefore? Becauſe (as I haue ſayde) wee may not bee hyrelings: but our yeelding of our ſelues vnto our God, muſt bee becauſe wee bee his, and becauſe hee is woorthie to haue our lyfe employed in his obedience, and ſpecially for that hee is our father. Hee beginneth at the promiſes becauſe of our infirmitie, to ſet vs the more forwarde. And when hee hath brought vs on ſo farre, then he manifeſteth vnto vs a greater perfection.

But to be ſhort, we haue to marke, that there are three ſorts of people which keepe the law of God in outwarde ſhewe. One ſort dooth it by compulſion, with gnaſhing their teeth at it, and they doe diſcharge it after a faſhion. And wherefore? Becauſe they knowe well that they cannot eſcape the hande of God, they feare his anger and his vengeance; and therefore doe they ſerue him; but that is by compulſion. But as I haue ſayde, all this is reprooued. Another ſort takes the middle way: for they knowe that God is faithfull, and that ſuch as ſerue him ſhall not loſe their labour: theſe harken to the promiſes which bee expreſſed in holy Scripture. And ſo a great many doe yeelde themſelues to ſerue God, becauſe hee allureth them thereunto by promiſing them reward, as we haue ſeene before. But, as I ſayde, wee may not ſtay there; but wee muſt rather conſider, that foraſmuch as God hath made and faſhioned vs, redeemed vs, and is our father, the ſame ought to ſuffice vs although we had no reſpect vnto that which hee promiſeth vs: and foraſmuch as hee hath preuented vs with his mercie: and ſheweth him ſelfe ſo bountifull towards vs: his ſo doing ought to inflame vs with an ardent affection to ſerue him. This is one of the principall poyntes of our life. But (as I ſayde afore) our Lorde in his lawe hath reſpect to our rawneſſe: and therfore hee promiſeth to rewarde vs, to the intent wee ſhoulde haue the better courage. And in deede though wee ſerue God with affection neuer ſo pure and freely imployed, yet muſt wee alwayes wayt for that which is promiſed vs, and ſtaye thereupon. Wee muſt (I ſay) hope for his bleſſing, when we haue ſerued him with a good courage: but wee may not doe it to that end: wee muſt not bee drawne by this reſpect onely. For (as I haue ſayde) wee muſt bee his children, and honour him as our father. And as it is hee that doeth vpholde vs: ſo muſt wee aſſure our ſelues that it is not for vs to imagine any merite in our ſelues, but that hee accepteth vs of his owne onely infinite goodnes; and therefore that wee for our parte, muſt ſeeke nothing but to vowe and dedicate our ſelues wholly vnto him. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, let vs learne, that when God hath ſet his promiſes before vs, hee muſt alſo bee fayne to ſpurre vs forwarde. Wherefore? Becauſe our nature is full of rebellion againſt him: wee bee not onely ſlowe: but alſo there is in vs an inclination to drawe quite backewarde from that which GOD commaundeth vs. If there were no more but ſlouthfulneſſe, yet were that ſuch a vice as were woorthie to bee corrected, and therefore wee ſhould haue neede of the threatenings that are mentioned heere. But ſeeing wee be ſo frowarde to bee ruled, that wee bee alwayes kicking, ſo as God cannot reclayme vs nor inure vs to his yoke: it appeareth that the manaces bee double neceſſarie. And heerein there is very iuſt cauſe to condemne vs, ſeeing that God cannot winne vs to loue, but is fayne to ſhewe himſelfe dreadfull, to make vs afrayde, without the which wee woulde lye ſtill aſleepe. Seeing then that God doeth ſo litle preuayle with vs, when hee traineth vs gently, ſeeking nothing but to make vs to followe him with a willing heart; let vs acknowledge our frowardneſſe and condemne our ſelues: and therewithal let vs alſo confeſſe the fatherly care that God hath of our ſaluation, ſeeing he vſeth all yͤ meanes which hee knoweth to be meete for vs. For it is all one, as if hee ſhould (as yee woulde ſay) transfigure himſelfe. His onely reſpect is to reclayme vs. One whyle hee ſmyleth on vs; and another whyle hee frowneth at vs. But yet all tendeth to this poynt, namely, that we may bee drawen vnto him, to giue ouer our ſelues to his ſeruice.

Now will ſome man ſay, Seeing that it is ſo yͤ our life diſpleaſeth God, & that he reproueth yͤ ſame when we ſerue him by compulſion: if the threatnings leaue vs there, what do they auaile? It were better that God ſhould forbeare them. But let vs marke that he trayneth vs by degrees according as he knoweth it neceſſary for vs. It is certaine, yͤ if nothing but feare doe bring vs to ſerue god, it is nought worth: howbeit it is a good preparatiue, yͤ leadeth vs farther on, after hauing begun at it. As for example: before yͤ God hath meekened vs, we be ful of pryde, & our fleſh is altogither rebellious: & to be ſhort, wee be as coltes that were neuer ſadled nor bitted. God muſt be faine to prepare vs & to bring vs in order, which thing to do, he vſeth threatnings. But this (as I haue ſaid) were nothing at al, vnleſſe he inured vs to a voluntarie obedience & ſubiectiō afterward. And when we tend thitherwarde, we haue greatly profited in yͤ this pryde of ours is beaten down, & we be no more ſo wyldheaded, but yͤ we know yͤ there is a Iudge before whome we muſt make account; & that the ſame conſideration reſtraineth vs from vſing ſuch looſenes any more, & from being ſo heady in doing euil, as we haue bin. This is a beginning, & in deede it is but a beginning; in ſo much yͤ if we ſhold ſtay there, wee were not yet plucked out of the mire. But when we haue thus begun, then doth yͤ lord match his threatnings with a taſt of his goodnes in ſuch ſort as we be drawn vnto him. And in ſo doing he ſheweth himſelf to be our father. Now when we vnderſtand yͤ God in deede is ready to rewarde vs when wee haue ſerued him, albeeit that wee bee not able to deſerue any thing, but rather doe prouoke his wrath: thereuppon wee muſt haue our refuge to his mere mercie, to obtayne remiſſion of our ſinnes, as it is offered vnto vs in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and as hee hath purchaſed it for vs by his death & paſſion. When we be thus reformed, and rid of all truſt in our owne woorkes, then ought wee to offer vp our ſelues willingly in ſacrifice vnto GOD, as Saint Paul alſo doth exhort vs in the twelfth Chapter to the Romanes. Hee ſetteth vs forth no rewarde, but ſaith: I beſeeche you brethren, by the mercie and compaſſion that God hath ſhewed towardes you, that euery one of you renounce this worlde, and alſo himſelfe, that you become liuely ſacrifices vnto GOD: for that is your reaſonable ſeruice. Rom.12.1.

But yet ſome man will reply againe and ſaye: If threatenings make vs readie for the promiſes of God, it ſeemeth that they ſhoulde bee placed in the firſt ranke, and that the promiſes ſhoulde followe them. But the anſwere to this dout is: that God will holde vs more conuicted before him, when hee beginneth with vs by his promiſes. For wee cannot ſay but that there is a ſhamefull thankleſnes in vs, ſeeing that wheras our Lorde ſeeketh onely to winne vs by loue, wee notwithſtanding deale frowardly with him, and drawe backewarde, when hee commeth ſo louingly towardes vs. Yee ſee then howe the promiſes are ſet before vs in the firſt place, that wee might bee the better reprooued of our frowardneſſe. But hath God ſhewed vs that his goodneſſe would not auayle vs, except he threatened vs? then doeth he vſe rigour, and ỹ ſame rigour doeth profite vs, forſomuch as wee bee touched therewith, and our hearts are daunted. I meane not all; for there be many that take the brydle in their teeth to ſtryue againſt God: but I meane the faithfull. Thoſe are they that bee prepared for ỹ promiſes of God, through threatninges. Afterwarde God turneth yet agayne, and allureth them newe agayne with his goodneſſe, as is ſayde afore: in ſo much that when he hath ſtoong them with his threateninges, to tame the ſtubbornneſſe of their fleſh; (as ſurely it is requiſite that God ſhoulde ſhewe ſome ſigne of his wrath:) thereuppon hee ſetteth before vs his mercie, which is the accompliſhment of al, to the ende (as I haue ſayde) that wee ſhoulde learne to yeeld our ſelues wholly vnto him with a free diſpoſed affection.

Nowe let vs come to the wordes that bee ſet downe heere. If thou wilt not obey the voyce of the Lord thy God, to keepe his commandements & ſtatutes which I ſet before thee this day: all theſe curſes ſhall come vppon thee, and take holde of thee. Heere Moſes ſpeaketh expreſſely to ſuch as haue been trayned in the worde of God. True it is that they which offend without the lawe, ſhall periſh neuertheleſſe, as Saint Paul ſayth in the ſecond Chapter to the Romanes. Rom.2.12. And in verie deede wee ſee that the ignorant and blynde ſcape not vnpuniſhed at Gods hande. Albeit that they might pleade that they were not taught: yet are they faultie vnough. But let vs note, that heere our Lorde doeth double his curſe vppon thoſe vnto whome hee hath ſhewed ſuch fauour, as to manifeſt his wil vnto them, and to ſhew them the waye of ſauing health, had they obeyed him, and yeelded themſelues vnto his doctrin. This then is not generall to all men. But God doeth firſt of all ſhewe, that when hee hath giuen his lawe, and publiſhed it abroade. The fault is in the people that they vnderſtande it not. This is the cauſe why Moſes doeth expreſſely ſay: the commaundementes and ſtatutes, which I ſet before you this day. When hee ſayeth, Commaundements and ſtatutes, it ſerueth to ſhewe that they conteyne a ſufficient inſtruction, accordingly as wee haue tolde you heere before; that God hath not ſpoken by halues: but that hee hath ſo taught his people, as they cannot reply and ſay, Wee wote not what theſe things meane. Loe heere the Statutes & commaundements which I ſet before you, ſayeth Moſes. If you applye your indeuour to them, you cannot doe amiſſe. And therefore let vs beare well in mynde, that according as God hath deliuered vs his worde, our vngodlineſſe is doubled before him, and our puniſhment muſt bee ſo much the more grieuous, if wee bee not willing to doe good, yea, and alſo profite therein, and from day to day bee eſtabliſhed in his obedience. That is the thing which wee haue to conſider vppon that ſaying.

Moreouer when hee ſayeth: If thou wilt obey the voyce of the Lorde thy God: it ſerueth to touch vs throughly to the quicke. For ſeeing that God vouchesafeth to ſpeake vnto vs: is it not meete that wee ſhoulde at the leaſt giue eare vnto him? And if wee play the deafe folkes, is it not a matter contrary to nature? For if wee woulde not heare our equall, hee woulde take it in diſdayne, and much more woulde our ſuperiour. And whereas God hath all ſoueraigne dominion ouer vs, and hath done vs the fauour to deliuer vs his worde, and acquainteth himſelfe familiarly with vs, if hee fynde vs ſtubborne againſt him, diſdayning to heare him; is it not meete that hee ſhoulde auenge him of ſuch a contempt? Specially when hee ſeeth ſuch a villaynous ſtatelyneſſe in vs, which bee but wormes of the earth. The thing then which wee haue to remember vppon this text, is that heere Moſes intended to condemne the vngodlineſſe of men that doe ſtill continue hardhearted, notwithſtanding that God giue them the meane to returne, by ſetting his woorde before them.

Nowe, when hee ſayeth that theſe curſes ſhall take holde of vs; it behooueth vs to remember that which was ſpoken of here before. Deut. 28. 2. For in ſpeaking of the bleſſings of GOD, hee ſayde; Thou ſhalt bee compaſſed round about; and nowe hee doeth in like wiſe ioyne the curſes in the ſame manner, ſo that wee may not thinke to eſcape the hande of God. Howe ſlye ſo euer wee bee, wee ſhalbee alwayes entrapped, it wil not boote vs to ſeeke ſtarting holes, according to this ſaying of his by his Prophet, If thou goe into thy houſe, and ſhut thy doore and double barre it, yet ſhall the ſerpent come in and ſting thee there. Amos.5.19. & 9.1.2.3.4. If thou goe into the feeld, & ſeek means to eſcape, thou ſhalt meet wͭ a lyon vpon ỹ way: if thou ſlip aſide from ỹ lyon, a Beare ſhall meete thee, and to bee ſhort, whatſoeuer men doe, when God is againſt them, & is become, as it were, their enimie, they muſt needes fynde that they bee ſurpriſed, caught, and entrapped, and enuironed rounde about with theſe curſes, without any hope to get out. Therefore, let vs not deceiue our ſelues in ſeeking worldly meanes to ſaue vs: for if the hand of God bee lifted vp againſt vs, (as wee ſhall ſee in the ſong heere at hande) Hee hath his ſtore-Deut.32,23 houſe full of roddes, and not of three or foure ſortes onely, but of infinite: and if wee ſuppoſe that wee are eſcaped, when wee haue ouercome ſome one euill; then wee deceiue our ſelues: for God hath by and by an hundred moe. Let vs then looke for all manner of woe, if wee obey not Gods lawe. But it were a miſerable appeale if wee ſhoulde come vnto God by compulſion, onely for feare of his puniſhments. What muſt wee then doe? Wee muſt ſubmit our ſelues willingly vnto him, praying him to keepe vs from procuring his wrath, and from warring againſt him, and from inforcing him to come to defie vs. That were as if ſome petie lorde woulde attempt warre againſt a great Prince; hauing neither ſtrong towne, nor munition, nor ought els: and yet woulde needes preſume to defye one that is able to ſwallowe him vp, if hee did but lift vp his finger againſt him; and were not that a madneſſe? Likewiſe, when wee prouoke our God, by ſetting our ſelues againſt him wittingly, hee muſt needes beſette vs, and holde vs as in priſon. Wherefore, let vs pray him not to ſuffer vs to bee ſo farre ouerſeene, as to fall to defying of him: but that wee ſimply obey him, ſo as wee may bee crowned and encompaſſed with his bleſſings; according as it is ſayde in the two and thirtith Pſalme. Hee that put-Pſal. 32. 10. teth his truſt in God, ſhalbee crowned with his benefites: that is to ſay, God will make him to poſſeſſe his bleſſings rounde about him, and hee ſhalbee ſo throughly fenced on all ſides with his ſauegarde, that hee ſhall not neede to feare. Albeit that wee bee layde open to neuer ſo many dangers, yet ſhall wee be preſerued through his goodnes. Now as touching that which he addeth; we haue expounded here before.

Concerning the curſes, he ſayth: Thou ſhalt bee curſed in the towne, thou ſhalt bee curſed in the feelde, thy comming in ſhalbee curſed, thy going forth ſhalbee curſed, the fruite of thy wombe ſhalbee curſed, and the fruite of thy cattle and of all thy flockes. Hereby are wee againe done to vnderſtande, that all the euil which wee ſee in this worlde, proceedeth from the hande of God. By the worde euils I vnderſtande all the puniſhmentes, and all the wretchedneſſe whereunto wee bee ſubiect, according alſo as he ſpeaketh thereof by his Pro-
Eſa.45 7. phet Eſay, ſaying: I am the Lorde which made both light and darkeneſſe, which haue in my power both life and death, and which doeth both the good and the euill. Hee vſeth this kinde of ſpeeche purpoſely: not that the euill, whereof wee bee faultie, doeth proceede from God, nor that it ought to bee imputed vnto him: it is not ſo. But hee meaneth that all the miſeries and calamities which wee ſuffer in this worlde, be as it were ſo many chaſticementes: wee may not attribute them to haphazarde, as ſhalbee more plainly touched hereafter; where God ſayeth, Leu.26. 23.
If you will needes come againſt mee at all aduenture, I will in like wiſe come againſt you at al aduenture. Hee vſeth the ſame verie woordes. And wherefore? Becauſe that men doe bleare their owne eyes, and ſaye; Loe, what miſfortune is befallen me? When they be any wayes afflicted, they caſt out ſpyteful ſpeeches againſt God and ouerſhoote themſelues, not conſidering that God is a Iudge, and gouerneth the worlde by his prouidence; they are not able to perceiue that, ſo dull and ſenſeleſſe bee they. And that is the cauſe why Moſes vſeth this kind of declaration, and ſo large in this text. And it ſerueth to bring vs to that which I alleged euen nowe out of the Prophet Eſaye; where GOD ſheweth that hee made both light and darkeneſſe, and did both the good and the euill. Wee may not heere conceiue vayne thoughtes, ſaying, Whence commeth this vnto mee? It is a misfortune. Woulde God it were not ſo. But wee muſt acknowledge the hand that ſmyteth vs; for that is greate wiſedome. And for the ſame cauſe doeth God complayne thus by his other Prophete: This people haue not regar- Eſa.9.13.
ded the hande that ſmote them. Yee ſee then howe wee muſt vnderſtande that all the afflictions and miſeries which wee endure in this worlde, bee verie ſtrokes of Gods owne hande. And euen in that reſpect is it ſayde by the Prophet Amos: Is there any euill in the city which Amos. 3.6.
God hath not done? That is to ſaye, can there happen either warre, or peſtilence, or famine, or diſeaſes, or pouertie, or any other calamitie whatſoeuer it bee, that commeth not to you from God? Wretched people, bee you ſo fooliſh and beaſtly, as to imagine, that God which created the worlde, doeth leaue it at randon, and hath no care to watche ouer his creatures, or to beſtowe on them, that which hee thinketh meete for them, ſometimes to ſhewe his goodneſſe, and ſometimes to make them feele that hee is a Iudge, and to puniſh mens ſinnes, and to make them to knowe what his office is? Thinke you that hee dwelleth ydle in heauen, and that he vttereth not his vertue, or that the worlde is not guyded and gouerned by his prouidence? So then, like as heretofore God hath ſhewed that wee cannot proſper, but through Deut. 8. 18.
his grace and loue that hee beareth vs, in that hee hath choſen vs for his children, and wil alſo accept our ſeruice; ſo nowe hee ſheweth in like wiſe, that if there bee any affliction, pouertie, or other miſerie, they come not by happehazarde: but are very puniſhmentes of Gods ſending: and therefore when thinges fall not out after our liking, wee muſt fall to conſidering & examining of our ſinnes. If wee bee grieued with any manner of thing, ſo as one is troubled with his houſholde, an other with the loſſe of his goods, another with ſome diſeaſe, another with ſome vexation of mynde, and an other with the forgoing of ſome thing that he loued:

let vs acknowledge, ſaying; Loe, it is our God that hath lifted vp his hand, & holdeth it vp ſtil. And wherefore? Becauſe that wee haue offended him. The firſt point then is, that men may not flatter them ſelues when God viſiteth them: but they muſt know, that by this meanes they are made to vnderſtande their offences, to the end to humble themſelues, and to bewayle them. Thus much for one point.

The ſeconde poynt is, that wee muſt not thinke to eſcape the ſcourges of God, bee wee neuer ſo ſubtile; but that wee ſhall euer bee caught by the backe, if God bee againſt vs. And well may wee make vs ſheeldes, and rampyres: but when wee haue practiſed what wee can: yet will not our Lorde miſſe to finde vs, he needs but to blowe vppon all our defences whereby wee thinke to garde our ſelues againſt him. It is not like as if wee ſhoulde haue to doe with creatures. Againſt them wee might fortifie our ſelues both behynde and before; but God will knocke vs on the pates from heauen. Wee can haue neither ſhielde nor rampaire againſt him, in hope thereby to ſtoppe his hande from touching vs, when it pleaſeth him to puniſh vs.

Againe, to what ende ſhall all the fortifications ſerue that wee are able to buylde againſt him, but to ouerthrowe our ſelues? Let vs therefore vnderſtande, that all that euer men can do againſt God, ſhall turne to their owne confuſion, and vtter ouerthrowe. That is the thing which Moſes meant, when hee ſayde, That wee ſhalbee curſed in the towne and in the feelde, that wee ſhalbee curſed in our going foorth, and in our comming in, if wee obey not the voyce of our God. And as hee ſayde afore, that God will open his good treaſure from heauen, to giue vs rayne in due time; ſo nowe he ſayth, That God will make our heauen as Braſſe, and our earth as Iron, and that in ſteede of rayne hee will ſende vs drought, he will ſende vs duſt and aſhes, and there ſhalbee nothing but barrenneſſe amongeſt vs. Here wee muſt cal againe to mynde the leſſon that hath beene layde out breefely before: that is, that according as euery one of vs is viſited by the hande of God, wee ſhoulde benefite our ſelues thereby and euery man applye that to his owne vſe which is heere mentioned. For God vſeth many wayes to chaſtice vs. One is puniſhed in his owne perſon with diſeaſes, reproche, and I wote not what elſe: an other hath ſome ſecrete heartbyting, ſo that although hee bee whole in bodye, yet hee ceaſeth not to bee tormented in minde: another is plagued with his wife or with his children: and another is troubled with his ſubſtance. According therefore as euery one fyndeth him ſelfe afflicted, ſo let him reſort to this that is tolde vs heare, ſaying: Alas, I ſee howe my God calleth mee vnto him, I may not nowe prouoke him: for what ſhall I winne by vſing many wyndlaſſes as the worldlinges doe, who deſire to fall a ſleepe in their miſeries: and the onely comfort which they ſeeke, is to haue no regarde to God. Nowe if wee doe ſo; then muſt that which is ſpoken in the two & thirtith Pſalme bee practiſed vppon vs, to wit, that God will deale with ſturdie and hardharted folkes Pſal.32.9. as with reſtiue horſes, and madde moyles. As hereafter wee ſhall ſee more at length. So then yet muſt wee come to the ſayde poynt of feeling of Gods hande, according as euery one is afflicted, firſt in his owne behalfe, and then in common. When we ſee a drought, let vs not accuſe the heauen nor yet the ayre, ſaying it was the diſpoſition of them. Let vs not doe, as the fantaſticall folke doe, which looke no higher than the ſtarres; but let vs thinke vppon the hande of God: that as many afflictions as fall vppon vs, may bee vnto vs as viſible ſignes and markes that God executeth the office of a Iudge towarde vs: and that although hee condemneth vs, as often as hee puniſheth vs, yet the ſame is not a condemnation to the death; but a ſummoning of vs to appeare before him, there to frame newe proceſſe againſt vs. This is a poynt which wee ought to marke well. Therefore when wee feele any euill or greefe; let vs vnderſtande that we haue offended God: but let vs thinke therewithall, that God neuertheleſſe meaneth not to execute a finall ſentence vppon vs; when hee calleth vs againe vnto him. To what ende then is it? Is it to condemne vs without mercie? No: but hee doeth vs this fauour, that wee might bee our owne Iudges. When hee doeth ſummon vs, it is to the ende that euery one ſhoulde plead guiltie of his owne good will, and thereupon aske him forgiueneſſe, and flee for refuge to his mercie. Loe heere an ineſtimable priuilege. And ſo let vs benefite our ſelues both priuately and publikely by the things that are tolde vs heere: That when wee ſee the heauens burning hote, and wee aske rayne, and yet goe without it, ſo as the fruites doe fayle vppon the grounde, and the heate dryeth vp all thinges: let vs vnderſtande that it is the hande of GOD which viſiteth vs, and let vs confeſſe our ſinnes with one common accorde. And if any man feele anye houſholde vexation, let him confeſſe; Well, GOD doeth waken mee by this viſitation, becauſe I haue offended him. Thus the cheefe ſtudie, wherein God woulde haue the faithfull to exerciſe themſelues, is the examining of their ſinnes, after this manner: whereby it will come to paſſe, that (as Salomon ſayeth) Bleſſed is the man which doeth trouble and quicken vp himſelfe, Pro.28.14. not that wee muſt ſo trouble our ſelues, as to fall into vnmeaſurable deſpaire: but wee muſt quicken vp our ſelues with feare, becauſe the diuell ſeeketh nothing elſe, but to make vs dull and blockiſh, to the ende wee ſhoulde offende God, and bleare out our tongues againſt him like as wee ſee theſe deſpiſers doe; which ſet themſelues againſt him, daſhing at him with their hornes, and vomiting out their blaſphemies. To the intent therefore that wee come not to that paſſe, wee muſt quicken vp our ſelues with feare and trembling: which can not bee done, vnleſſe wee profite vnder the correction of our God, and conſider, that when hee viſiteth vs, it is to call vs vnto him.

It is to the ende that wee ſhould make our owne inditement, and not tarry the laſt laying of his hande vpon vs, but preuent him, that (as ſayeth Saint Paul) they which condemne themſelues, may not bee condemned of him. 1.Cor.11.31.

Nowe finally it is here declared vnto vs, that the courſe of nature, as we call it, is nothing but the diſpoſition of the will of God, and that hee beareth ſuch rule ouer both heauen and earth, and ouer raine and faire weather: that he changeth them at his owne pleaſure, and yet ſendeth them not without cauſe. If there were a permanent order in nature, it woulde ſeeme vnto vs that God medled not with it; wee woulde graunt that hee hath made the worlde, but yet woulde wee ſay that hee doeth not gouerne vs: wee woulde thinke thus: What? when the ſpring time commeth, wee ſee that the reſt of the yere goeth on in one egall courſe, as did the yeare laſt before paſt. It is always one. But we ſee one winter longer, and another winter later, and an other rather, and laſt longer: wee ſee one winter raynie, and another drye: we ſee abundance of ſnowe in one yeare, and another yeare none at all: one yeare whote, and another cold. Nowe, doeth not ſuch inequalitie make it manifeſt that God muſt needes woorke? For the Sunne doeth his office in one yeare aſwell as in another, and euer keepeth his iuſt compaſſe, better than the beſt ruled clocke in the worlde. And how then commeth ſuch a varietie? It is Gods dooing to call vs vnto him. Truely the Philoſophers doe ſeeke out the cauſes (as they terme them) there is ſuch a meeting of ſtarres (ſay they,) and this proceedeth of ſuch coniunctions. But whence commeth all this? Euen from the hand of God. Wee muſt euer reſort to the firſt cauſe. And in deede, they bee more than beaſtes, if they will not yeelde to that. Yet is it not ſufficient to knowe that God guydeth all his creatures, and that hee holdeth them brydeled to make them to bowe, as a horſe man maketh his horſe to turne on this hande and on that hand, to ſtoppe, & to runne. All reſteth not in knowing that God looſeth & holdeth, and ſendeth ſuch changes as him liſteth: but we muſt vnderſtande further that God doth nothing without cauſe. For if wee ſay that God gouerneth the worlde, and know not wherfore hee doeth plague vs, wee ſhalbee quickely enclyned to murmure againſt him: and in the meane whyle wee ſhall not profite vnder his chaſticementes and corrections, but continue ſtill dulled in our ſinnes. So then let vs marke, that in ſhutting vp the heauen ſo as it yeeldeth no rayne, and in drying vp the earth, as it were Iron: thereby hee doeth ſhewe vs our ſinnes, & that hee is our Iudge. This is it that wee haue to beare in mynde as concerning the courſe of nature, according as it is heere declared vnto vs.

Neither is God contented to ſaye that the heauen ſhalbee as braſſe, but hee ſayeth alſo, That hee will ſende vs aſhes and grauell or ſande in ſteede of raine. Like as wee ſee the Caterpillers that eate, marre, and deſtroy all that is on the earth: there needeth but one blaſting or mildewe to eate the corne and to conſume it within. And it is more than if God ſhoulde ſowe ſalt. And theſe blaſtings or mildewes come not but of the dewe or elſe of the rayne, at leaſtwiſe they bee none other ſubſtance. But God needeth not but to make a little change, and to ſende a little ſharpe colde, and the ſame colde will make cleane riddance of all. When wee ſee ſuch thinges, let vs euermore take warning by this doctrine, and let vs bee no more intangled in our follies, to ſaye: Ah euill fortune, euill fortune: but let vs vnderſtande that our Lorde doeth call vs backe vnto him, and hath his hande ſtretched out: and let vs knowe that it is hee that ſmyteth; as if hee ſhoulde ſaye: I haue gone about to drawe you vnto me by faire meanes, but you haue not humbled you before mee. Seeing then that you will not be brought to it willingly, I will now compel you, as though I drewe you by the hayre of the head. Let vs (I ſay) bee admoniſhed by this teaching, that is here mentioned, to preuent the wrath and vengeance of God, ſo often as hee giueth vs aduertiſement of the ſame.

Againe, when God maketh the earth fruitful, let vs acknowledge it to bee his worke, and that there ſpringeth not a blade of graſſe, but hee hath put thereunto his hande. Let vs then take our dayly foode of him: that is to ſaye, let vs not cramme our ſelues like bruite beaſtes, which fill their bellies, not knowing whether there bee a Creator that cauſeth the earth to bring them foorth foode: but let vs vnderſtande that God bleſſeth the earth, and cauſeth it to yeelde fruite for our nouriſhment and ſuſtenance; let vs beare it ſo in mynde, that aſwell in affliction as in proſperitie wee may turne our eyes euermore vnto God. And it is expreſſely ſayde further, That God will make the peſtilence to cleaue vnto vs, and that hee will ſende other diſeaſes, and that they ſhall continue vpon vs, vntill we bee conſumed by them. This ſhoulde yet a little better waken vs, ſeeing that God ſtriketh not (as it were) a blowe, and away; but that his curſes ſhal followe vs, and cleaue vnto vs, vnleſſe wee forſake our ſinnes and wickedneſſe. Finally let vs learne, that they which indent with God, and fleete away againe from day to morrowe, doe deceiue themſelues. As for example, wee ſee many which when God doeth ſende them any affliction, will haue ſome regarde of it: but they haue doone with it by and by. They doe but ſhake their eares, and thinke they haue ouercome it. And like as a dogge that hath a yerke with a whippe, they turne their backe and runne away, bearing themſelues in hande that they may pacifie God by ſome ſhift. Thus dealeth the worlde. But let vs beware of ſuch blockiſhneſſe. For wee ſee what is ſayde expreſſely in this place. After that God hath ſpoken of his curſes, and added that they ſhal be hemmed in with thē; he cōcludeth ẏ they ſhal cleaue vnto vs. And wherefore? If we cleaue to our iniquities, ſo as they raigne in our bones and in our marow, and be fixed in our heartes and mindes; then muſt the curſes of God followe vs alſo. When a man will not doe away his euill affections, but is delighted in them and continueth ſaping in them, God for his part muſt needes ſhut him vp in it, and when we doe ſo; he muſt needes ſende vs his curſes to ſticke faſt vnto vs like a leproſie that it may conſume vs vtterly; ſo that it ſhal be to no purpoſe to lay playſters thereunto, for the healing of that which is to deeply rooted within and is become in manner vncurable. Therefore lette vs bee afraide at the hearing of theſe thinges. And ſo we ſee nowe to what purpoſe Moſes addeth that the curſes of God ſhal cleaue vnto vs: namely to warne vs, that if the miſchiefe haue taken roote, we muſt ſtraine ourſelues the more in praying to God, to ſhewe to vs the fauour that his holy Spirite may cleanſe vs, as to 1.Cor.14.25 whom it belongeth to ſearch the bottome of our ſecrete affections; that it may pleaſe him to reproue vs, in ſuch wiſe, as this feare may ſerue vs for a maruellous purgation, to expulſe our ſinnes from vs, and that we may no more be ſo wedded vnto them as we haue beene.

And therewithall let vs knowe, that when diſeaſes beginne to reigne, or any other afflictions, it is not for vs to hope for any ende thereof, vnleſſe we ceaſe to offende our God. It is ſayde in a common prouerbe, that diſeaſes come on horſebacke, that is to ſay very quickely, and that they returne againe on foote; that is to ſay verie ſlowely. But we conſider not the cauſe though it be neuer ſo apparant. And that is (as I haue ſayde afore) becauſe we looke not to the hande that ſmyteth vs; neither can God winne vs vnto him with the firſt ſtroke, when he puniſheth vs. Surely wee will make him fayre proteſtations. When a man is ſicke, hee will proteſt that his whole deſire is to ſerue God, and that if he may recouer his health, the worlde ſhall ſee him a newe man. But all is quickely forgotten. Therfore it is no wonder though in ſteede of mitigating our puniſhmentes, God doe diuers times increaſe them, and ſuffer vs to languiſhe in our aduerſities. It is becauſe he ſeeth that our diſeaſes be deepe rooted, that he muſt come again oftener than once or twiſe to purge vs of them. And therefore let vs learne to pray vnto him, to vouchſafe to cure our faultes in ſuch wiſe, as they may not proceede to the extremitie here expreſſed: but that ſo ſoone as wee feele a litle ſtroke of the rod of his hande, the ſame may be ſufficient to bring vs againe vnto him: yea euen with ſuch repentaunce, as may ſhewe that we deale not fainedly: but that it be done in ſimple trueth, and we alſo continue therein to the ende.

Now let vs fall down in the ſight of our good God, accuſing our whole life of the malice and rebellion that is therein: beſeeching him to vouchſafe to chaſtice vs in ſuchwiſe with gẽtleneſſe, and to ſpare vs in ſuch ſorte, as wee be not caſt downe into diſpaire; but that we may rather be brought home againe vnto him. And therewithall, foraſmuch as wee ceaſe not to offende him: and it is alſo neceſſarie that he ſhould daily call vpon vs, and waken vs, that we may fare the better by his corrections; let vs continue to lament and mourne, vntill the time that he haue ridde vs from all the corruptions of our fleſh, & haue brought vs to the perfect righteouſneſſe, wherein lyeth our true reſt: to wit, the heauenly bleſſedneſſe which we hope and looke for. And foraſmuch as we can not obtaine any ſuch matter, but by the meanes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: it may pleaſe him to reconcile vs to God his father, by his death and paſſion, and in the meane ſpace ſo to mortifie our old Adam, that his owne Image may be reſtored in vs, and his glory ſhine forth in ẏ ſame. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely vnto vs, but alſo to all people and Nations vpon earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xviij. of March, 1556.

The CLvj. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

25 And the Lorde will cauſe thee to bee beaten downe before thine enemies: Thou ſhalt goe foorth one way againſt them, and flee before them ſeuen wayes, and thou ſhalt be carried away into al the kingdomes of the earth.

26 And thy carkeſſe ſhalbe meate vnto all the foules of the ayre, and to the beaſtes of the earth, and no man ſhall skarre them away.

27 And the Lorde ſhall ſmite thee with the Botch of Egypt, with the Emerodes, and with ſcabbes, and with itch, whereof thou canneſt not be healed.

28 The Lorde alſo will ſtrike thee with madneſſe, and with blindeneſſe, and with aſtoniſhment of heart.

29 And thou ſhalt goe groping at nooneday, as a blinde body gropeth in the darke, & he will not make thy life proſperous: and thou ſhalt but ſuffer wrong and pollinges all day long, and no man ſhall deliuer thee.

IF we were threatned by a mortall man, as God threatneth vs in his lawe: ſurely we would be moued, albeit that hee had no great power ouer vs: wherein our vngodlineſſe is to be ſeene, inſomuch that although we endeuor to cloke it, yet it bewrayeth it ſelf, in that we attribute more power to mortall creatures, than we doe to the liuing God. But heereby God intended to try the honour and obedience that we beare him: to wit, namely in this, ỷ hee aſſureth vs of his loue, we ſhould reſt all wholely thereupon, and hold ourſelues contented therewith. And in likewiſe on the contrary ſide, that when he giueth vs any certaine token of his anger, we ſhould quake thereat. Let vs take good heede therefore of the thing that is heere mentioned: namely that we be not ſo blockiſh as to make a ſkorne of gods wrath. But let vs returne to that which hath beene ſayde already, to wit, that his hande muſt needes be againſt vs, if we liue not according to his lawe. It is certaine that men will naturally giue libertie to their luſtes, to doe whatſoeuer God hath forbidden thẽ, and that they will not ſticke to make warre againſt him. In deede they will not ſay ſo, yet doeth the thing ſhewe it ſelfe to be ſo. For when wee on our part haue defied him and aſſaulted him; is it not reaſon that he ſhould arme himſelfe againſt vs? True it is, that ſo long as we liue in this preſent worlde, the infirmitie of our fleſh is ſuch, as wee are not able in all reſpectes to ſatiſfie the lawe of God. Neuertheleſſe when men paſſe their bounds ſo farre that good and euill is to them all one; and that they ſtriue not at all againſt their luſtes: they ſhew themſelues open enimies vnto God. And to that end alſo is it that Moſes ſpeaketh. Albeit that wee doe our endeuour to reſiſt the euill, and that the feare of God doth brydle vs, yet ceaſe we not to deſerue to be chaſtized of him: as wee ſee the faithfull be not exempted from many afflictions: and that God reclaimeth them much rather than he doth the deſpiſers of his maieſtie. For as they be his children, ſo hath hee the greater care ouer them: and therefore doth he chaſtiſe them the more earneſtly. Howbeit Moſes in this place ſpeaketh but of ſuch as harden themſelues in ſtubbornneſſe, flinging out of courſe in ſuch wiſe, as they make no conſcience at all to doe euill. They neuer thinke that there is a Iudge in heauen, vntill he make them to feele his hande. And therefore he ſaith not; God will chaſtiſe you as a father doeth his children: but God will ſtrike you mainely; you ſhall feele his hande, ſo roughly and liuely, ỷ you ſhall not be able to abide it: and that not for one day but continually til ye be conſumed and periſhed. Seeing then that we heare ſuch threatninges; let vs vnderſtande that they be prepared for ſuch as are hardened in euill, and be not reſtrained with any feare, to ſigh when they feele any euil temptation in themſelues: but goe on, taking the bridle in their teeth, and make a mocke of God. And what ſhall followe of that? Ouer and beſides the thinges which we haue ſeene heere before; Moſes addeth, that God will ſmite ſuch deſpiſers with diuerſe plagues. Firſt that he will ſende them enemies; and giue them power, to deſtroy and to conſume them, inſomuch that they ſhal perſecute them euen in their dead carcaſſes, ſo as when they be diſcomfited, hee will not do them the honour to ſuffer them to be buryed, but leaue them for meate for the crowes, and for the beaſtes of the earth: and moreouer that he hath diuers other means to plague them in their bodies; by ſending them diuerſe diſeaſes, as cankers, and other bottes and ſcabbes, wherby they ſhall be brought to ſuch an afterdeele, that they ſhall not haue as it were any more vnderſtãding, but be vtterly out of their right wit, ſo as they ſhall grope at nooneday, as the blind doe in the darke. And ſurely the ſoreſt point of Gods vengeãce, is when men be ſo ouerthrowen that they haue no more the heart to returne vnto him, ne be able to recouer themſelues to acknowledge their faultes, and to perceiue that when the hande of God doeth viſite them, there is no helpe, except they make their refuge to his mercie: but abide aſtoniſhed as men beſides thẽſelues. By which meanes God ſheweth himſelfe to be mortall enemie vnto them.

Now as touching that which Moſes ſpeaketh here of enemies: we ſee againe howe God holdeth the heartes of men in his hande: ſo that if we be in peace and anon warre is made againſt vs, and we wote not wherfore: (as I haue already ſhewed) it is becauſe God is angry with vs: and that foraſmuch as wee haue ſpited him, hee muſt alſo warre againſt vs. He hath ſouldiers ynowe. As ſoone as he maketh any ſigne (as ſaith Eſa.5.26. the Prophete) all the earth is moued; yea euen though a litle while before, no man thought to haue ſtirred. Let vs therefore vnderſtand, that when warres are towarde in the worlde, God ſheweth tokens of his wrath. It is certaine, (as we haue already ſayde) that albeit we ſerue God faithfully, and ſtande in his protection: yet wee ſhall not ceaſe to haue enemies. For it is his will to exerciſe vs by that meanes: and it is the ſtate of the Church, as it hath alſo alwayes bin. But this good commeth thereof, that God will maintaine vs againſt our enemies. When they haue deuiſed wonders againſt vs, yet ſhall they not bring their purpoſe about. They ſhalbe diſappointed. And though they be as fierce as lyons, and full of deſperate rage: yet will GOD tame them at the laſt: and though they continue in purpoſe to deuour vs, yet they ſhall not haue the power to doe it: But (as hath beene ſayde afore) Deut.28.7. if they come againſt vs one way, they ſhall flee ſeuen wayes. But nowe it is ſayde contrariwiſe that althogh we be of power aboue our enemies, and doe ſet vpon them in neuer ſo good order: ſo as the victory may ſeeme to be already gotten on our ſide, (as we ſee howe the wicked be enflamed with pride and preſumption) yet when wee thinke our ſelues to haue gotten the goale, God will touch vs with ſuch a feare as wee ſhall not knowe which way to runne faſt ynough, but euery of vs ſhall be at his wittes ende. Let vs vnderſtande hereby, that when God ſtirreth vp warres to chaſtice vs, though wee be neuer ſo well furniſhed, and haue all the meanes that may be to reſiſt; yet muſt we needs periſh if God be againſt vs . . For victorie is not obtained by the force and valure of men, but by the power of G O D, Iſa,1.24. who for that cauſe is called the Lorde of hoſtes. And there is none other helpe for vs, but to bee at peace with God, that he may broode vs vnder his winges: accordingly as he vſeth the ſame ſi- Mat.23,37. militude, that he wil play the part of a henne towardes her chickinges. For then ſhall we be ſafe though all the world conſpired our deſtruction. And albeit that our enemies be neuer ſo mightie and ſtrong, and fully minded in their malice to deſtroy vs vtterly: yet is it ſufficient ẏ God doth warrãt vs: and ẏ albeit we haue no ſuccour of mé, yet are we ſufficiétly fortified by his only power. But if we proceede to offende him: and he ſeeth that when he hath ſpared vs to recouer vs vnto him; we haue leauer to be aduerſaries vnto him and to continue in our rebellion: then after hee hath borne with vs long ynough, he muſt needs bring vs to this point of being conſumed by the hande of our enemies. And although others ſeeme as wicked as we, & that God doe not proſper them more than vs: let not that deceiue vs. For God will ſometime giue victory to the wicked, which be no better than we, but paraduenture worſe; yet will hee not faile to deſtroye vs by their handes, and yet they ſhall haue their turne as well as we. But in the meane while, we muſt not thinke that this threatning is deliuered in vaine. Therefore let vs not compare our ſelues with others, ſaying, O, are not they offenders aſwell as we? And hath not G O D good cauſe to puniſh them? Yes, hee hath ſo: but he knoweth the due time and ſeaſon, and he can vſe them as ſeemeth good to himſelfe: but let vs prepare ourſelues to abide his blowes, if we ſtoppe our eares againſt his threatninges, and ſleepe when he would waken vs. For if we giue no credit to his threatninges, wee muſt feele by effect, that hee which pronounceth them, hath power to put them in execution, and that he ſpeaketh not, as they ſay, to ſcarre litle children. It is certaine that G O D will threaten often, before he execute iudgement. But Pſal. 86. 15. therein let vs conſider his long patience in tar- Rom.2.4. rying for vs. And if we abuſe the ſame; it will be nought elſe but a heaping vppe and a doubling of Gods wrath towardes vs: inſomuch that it had beene better for vs that hee had rooted vs out the firſt day, than ſo long to haue forborne vs. Let ſcoffers ſay, that reſpit is worth golde. But there is no reſpit ſo long which we would not redeeme with a hundred deathes, if it were poſſible, when wee haue beene ſo ſtubborne againſt our G O D, and ſo diſobedient to his worde, that we haue made but a laughing matter of his giuing of ſome token of his anger. Let vs therefore conſider, that whileſt that G O D doeth ſpare vs, hee giueth vs leaſure to returne vnto him: and that if our enemies haue forborne vs, it is of his fauour ſhewed vnto vs, that we might preuent his wrath. But if wee will not heare him when he ſpeaketh, nor receiue his warninges: it behoueth vs to giue eare to theſe his threatninges heere denounced, and he muſt be faine to ſende vs to an other ſchoole. It is the wonderful goodneſſe of our God, that when we haue thus prouoked him, as we ſee; yet hee forbeareth vs, and all to recouer vs vnto him, not by forcing vs with mayne ſtrokes, but by alluring vs after a louing manner, beeing ready to receiue vs to mercie, as though hee were not a Iudge to vexe vs and to condemne vs. But what? When wee haue contemned all this, it muſt fall out in the ende (as I haue ſayde afore) that our Lorde muſt ſtirre vs vppe other maiſters, ſo as the wicked may riſe vp againſt vs, and ſeeke to make a ſlaughter of vs by butcherly murthering of vs, beeing in verie deede the executours of Goddes vengeaunce, whereof wee were warned long aforehande, and made but a laughing game of it, continuing ſtill in our ſinnes and wickedneſſe. That is the cauſe why I ſayde, that ſo long as G O D ſpeaketh vnto vs, and wee condemne ourſelues, and acknowledge our ſinnes, and ſeeke attonement with our G O D that wee may liue in peace in this worlde: although it be Gods will, that wee ſhoulde haue enemies and be kept occupied with warres, yet notwithſtanding he holdeth vs ſtill in his keeping, and wee be maintained and defended by his power and goodneſſe.

Nowe as touching that which Moſes addeth, That the dead carcaſſes ſhould be eaten of crowes and of wilde beaſtes, and that there ſhall be no man to driue them away: it ſeemeth to be a vaine threatning: for it is no matter whether it bee ſo or no. If a man be buried when hee is dead, what is he either the better or the worſe for it? It ſeemeth then at the firſt bluſh, that this ſhoulde not be greatly regarded. But G O D ment to ſhewe that he will make his wrath felt euen in the bodies of them that be dead. And in verie deede buriall is a priueledge that G O D hath giuen to mankinde for a warrant of the reſurrection. Lette vs not thinke that the vſe of burying the dead is proceeded of a fooliſhe ſuperſtition, or that men deuiſed it. It is true that the heathen haue vſed it, and that was a witneſſe againſt them: And at the laſt day they ſhall be conuicted by their vſing of that Ceremonie, which ſhould haue taught them to looke for the laſt reſurrection; and their not conſidering of it is vnexcuſable. For our buriall ought to be vnto vs as a liuely glaſſe or portrayture, to ſhewe vnto vs, that wee bee not created to goe after ſuch a ſorte in corruption, as though there were not an other life, and that we ſhoulde not be reſtored vnto a newe ſtate. And it ſerueth alwayes for a larger declaration, that mankinde periſheth but for a time, and that their bodies ſhall be renewed. Nowe foraſmuch as buriall is as a memoriall of the Reſurrection as I ſayde afore; therefore is it giuen to men as a prerogatiue, to be buried: in reſpect whereof there is vſed an honeſt comelineſſe, as who ſhoulde ſay that wee which remaine are taught as it were by eyeſight to looke continually for a ſeconde life. For the dead alſo doeth beare a certaine marke in his body, that he is as it were layde vppe in ſafe keeping, vntill the day come that GOD will rayſe the dead againe. Nowe on the contrarie ſide: whereas it is ſayde that men ſhall not be buried, but that they ſhall be eaten of beaſtes and foules: it is as much as if God ment to depriue them of the common benefite, that he hadde graunted to all mankinde: and as if he had ſhewed openly that both in life and in death they were accurſed of him. And that is the cauſe why it is ſayde: Thou ſhalt be Ier.22.19. buried with the buriall of an Aſſe: which thing was ſpoken by the Prophet to a King, euen the King of Iudah. But yet, becauſe he would not be corrected, and that whereas GOD hadde giuen him the honour to beare in his life time the figure of Ieſus Chriſt: yet notwithſtanding forasmuch as he had abuſed the ſame and giuen ouer himſelfe to all vngodlineſſe: thou ſhalt be buried with the buriall of an aſſe (ſayeth the Prophete.) Wee be heereby warned to haue verie great regarde of all the corrections that GOD ſendeth vs: yea euen of the verie leaſt: that wee may be alwayes ſtirred to feare. For what is the cauſe, that wee paſſe ouer ſo many chaſtiſementes of GOD, without profiting by them? Becauſe wee ſhutte our eyes wilfully, and vnleſſe we be compelled by vtter force and neceſſitie, we are contẽted to beare ourſelues in hande, that it is not GOD that chaſtiſeth vs: and (as we ſhall ſee heereafter) we fall to ſuch blockiſheneſſe, as to attribute all to fortune. Lette vs therefore be admoniſhed to marke all the corrections which GOD ſendeth vs, both vppon ourſelues, and vpon our neighbours, that we may receiue warning by them. It ſeemeth to be but a ſmall matter, not to be buried: yea but yet will God haue it noted, and to be vnderſtoode that it is his hande, and that he ſheweth himſelfe a Iudge againſt ſuch as haue offended him. Seeing that GOD will haue his Iudgementes knowen in ſo ſmall thinges: lette vs bee aduiſed to haue more witte and diſcretion. As often as GOD giueth vs (as yee would ſay) but a ſilluppe, let vs be moued to thinke on him and not tarrie vntill hee drawe his ſworde, or bende his bowe to hit vs with a mortall wounde: but let vs by all manner of meanes humble ourſelues vnder his hande. Moreouer wee haue heere, a Teſtimonie of the life euerlaſting. True it is that this point was not ſo plainlie declared in the lawe, as it is to vs in the Goſpell, neither that we ſhould riſe againe to the heauenly glory, nor that we ſhould liue with God after our death. But yet for all that, the olde fathers did not leade the life of beaſtes, neither did God leaue them in ſuch ignoraunce, as to haue their faith cloſed vppe in this preſent worlde and in this tranſſitorie life. For heere we haue a recorde, that when we haue finiſhed the courſe of this life, there is yet a greater Iudgement prepared for all men. And if GOD doe forebeare vs heere, and notwithſtanding that wee eſcape all the curſes mentioned in the lawe, euen to the ende: yet muſt we come to a greater reckening. For it were a needeleſſe matter, for GOD to ſpeake of depriuing menne of their buriall, if (as I ſayde euen nowe) he had not a farther meaning in it. Therefore lette vs ſo vſe this doctrine, as we may be prouoked to haue an eye to the life that is yet hydden from vs, and which wee looke for by faith; and let vs not thinke it ſhall greatly auaile vs, when GOD puniſheth vs not in this worlde. For it is farre better for vs to linger heere beneath, and to be alwayes in miſeries: than to enioye our eaſe and delightes, and that in the meane whyle GOD ſhould but tarrie for vs, to thunder vppon vs when he hath taken vs out of this worlde. Thus yee ſee whereto this Texte of Moſes doeth ſerue vs, where he ſayeth, That the birdes and beaſtes ſhall eate our carceſſes, and that no man ſhall driue them away.

Nowe if God giue ſuch tokens of his wrath on the bodyes that haue no feeling: what ſhall become of the ſoules, wherein is the verie ſeat of euill, and the kingdome of Sathan? For our handes, our feete, our eyes, and our eares, offende not of their owne proper mouing; but by the direction and prouocation of our wicked thoughtes and affections. And where ly all thoſe things, or whence proceede they but from our ſoules? Seeing then that the bodyes which were but inſtrumentes, doe feele the wrath of GOD, and doe aunſwere to the ſame as we ſee: lette vs not ſuppoſe that the ſoules goe quit. Lette vs therefore looke euermore higher than to this tranſitorie life for to waken vs, and to make vs to walke in ſuch obedience, that after we haue fought againſt ſinne, and againſt Sathan, and haue beene exerciſed in patience, and in diuerſe afflictions in this worlde, hauing doone our endeuour to ſerue GOD with all diligence, our ſoules may be taken vp to reſt, and that our Lorde in likewiſe may ſhew the ſelfe ſame fauour vppon our dead bodyes. Notwithſtanding, this fauour and bleſſedneſſe of hauing their bodyes buried, doth not alwaies happen to the faithfull, whereas it falleth out that many of the wicked are verie honourably buried; howebeit that the ſame is nothing to them, neither is their ſtate any whit bettered thereby. We ſee what is ſayde in the Pſalme concerning them that haue faithfully ſerued Pſal.79.3. GOD: namely, that their bodies were layde out for a praye to the foules, and the beaſtes: and yet were they the children of GOD. And albeit that this bee a teſtimonie of Gods wrath vpon the wicked: yet may it oftentimes come to paſſe, that our Lorde will vſe the ſame manner of chaſtiſementes vppon his owne people: And yet it ſhall bee nothing to their hurt.

True it is, that wee muſt euermote humble ourſelues, when ſuch a thing happeneth, and we muſt vnderſtande that ſuch thinges bee as it were markes of Adames ſinne, and of the corruption that is in vs, and alſo of the offences which we haue committed: and yet for all that our Lorde in the meane ſpace turneth this euill to good, when he permitteth the faithfull to be depriued of buriall. We ſee what is ſayd of the wicked riche man and of Lazarus. It is Luke.16.22. ſayde, that the riche man dyed and was buryed: beholde howe the worldely pompe is beſtowed on the reprobate. It ſeemeth that his ſoule ſhould haue beene receiued into paradiſe when his body was ſumptuouſly caryed and vſed with great ceremonies. And what of Lazarus? He dyed too. But what mention is there of his buriall? None at all. Whereby our Lorde Ieſus doeth vs to vnderſtande, (for it is he that ſpeaketh it) that we muſt not ſtay altogether vppon theſe viſible thinges. But yet this threatening (howe ſo euer the caſe ſtandeth) is not in vaine. What is to be doone then? Lette vs gather generally (as we haue ſayde) that buriall ſerueth to leade vs to the hope of the heauenly life, and of the reſurrection which wee muſt hope for. Thus much concerning that point.

When we burie them that be dead before vs, lette it ſerue alwayes to prouoke and to ſtirre vs to vnderſtande that wee bee not created to liue onely in this worlde: but that there is an other better life prepared for vs. And againe, when when wee ſee that our Lorde depriueth any of their buriall, let vs vnderſtande that he therein ſheweth his wrath. Neuertheleſſe it is better ſometimes for a man to bee deuoured of beaſtes and birdes, and to bee chaſtiſed of GOD after that ſorte in his bodie for the ſparing of his ſoule, and to haue a temporall condemnation, than to periſhe for euer more: It is better ſometimes for a wicked man to bee hanged, than to dye in his bedde. For howe manie doe we ſee to gnaſhe their teeth againſt GOD, when he hath patiently tarryed for them, and giuen them ſo many playne and apparant tokens of his wrath for their conuerſion; and yet neuertheleſſe they make a mocke of him, and ſtill continue obſtinate in their rebellion? When a wretched ill doer is condemned by men, hee is aſhamed of it and caſt downe in himſelfe, and acknowledgeth and bewayleth his ſinnes. This condẽnation then, which he beareth in his body, albeit that it is an execution of that which is heere ſpoken by Moſes: doeth ſerue to his ſaluation; and therefore let vs beare away theſe thinges. Moreouer when the faithfull, euen the very martyrs bee burned, and their bodyes conſumed to aſhes, ſo as they haue not yͤ which ſhould bee common to all mankinde: let vs vnderſtande that GOD conuerteth the ſame to their welfare, and that their glorie is thereby doubled. As howe? It is certaine that this is a threatning of God, as be alſo all diſeaſes. But when our Lorde ſayeth ſo, hee meaneth that they be the ordinarie meanes, which hee vſeth to correct our ſinnes: but yet neuertheleſſe hee fayleth not to chaſtiſe thoſe ſo with his owne hande, which haue not offended him: or at leaſtwiſe whome hee meaneth not to purſue with rigour. This is in ſumme that which we haue to beare in minde concerning this Text.

Nowe let vs come to that which Moſes ſayth farther. He ſayeth that GOD will ſtrike the deſpiſers of his lawe with many diſeaſes. He hath ſpoken heeretofore of feuers, and of the whotte diſeaſe, and of the yelowe iaundis, and of ſuch others: nowe hee ſpeaketh of the Itch and canker and of other wormes and ſcabbes. Where alſo mention is made of the Emorodes, as ſome doe expounde them; all theſe foreſayde thinges be the weapons of GOD, to puniſh the offenders of the Lawe. To be ſhort, they be his men of warre to incounter with vs, when he ſeeth that we take heart of graſſe againſt him. And truely when we fauour our owne luſtes to violate his righteouſneſſe, and to breake the order which he hath eſtabliſhed among vs: and when hee ſeeth our luſtes to bee ſo inordinate which are theeues and robbers: he armeth his people and ſubſtitutes which bee the diſeaſes that are heere ſpoken of, and other ſortes. Lette vs therefore learne, that whatſoeuer diſeaſes we ſuffer in our bodyes, the ſame be all meſſages of GOD to make vs to feele his wrath, becauſe wee haue offended him: but ſpecially the extraordinarie diſeaſes, as when GOD ſendeth vppon vs the ſickeneſſes that are not vſuall amongſt men, for the curing whereof they can hardely finde any meane, or elſe it is altogether impoſſible to doe it, by reaſon of the ſtraungeneſſe of the thinges: then meaneth GOD to make vs to feele his anger towarde vs double, and to ſhewe vs that wee haue prouoked him too too much. But we thinke verie ſlenderly of this. For contrariwiſe concerning the common diſeaſes, the ordinarie hauing of them maketh vs to thinke that they proceede not from God. They ſaye: there is a man that hath a feuer: and there is an other that hath the murre & the poze, or ſome ſuch other diſeaſe. Wel, theſe be thinges wherein we be hardened. As howe? By cuſtome. And muſt God in the mean while leeſe the poſſeſſion of his right? If he doe ſtill ſhewe himſelfe a Iudge towards vs, in chaſtiſing vs: is that a reaſon why wee ſhould forget him, and haue no regarde of his hande? But howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth, ſuch is our blockiſhneſſe. I woulde God that the examples therof were not ſo notorious as they be. But let euery one looke to himſelfe, and ſee if the cuſtomableneſſe of ſickeneſſes cauſe vs not to turne our backe vpon God, & to haue the leſſe regarde of his iudgements and of our owne ſins, ſo as none of vs findeth any fault with himſelfe. Thus much touching the cõmon and vſual ſickneſſes. And as for the extraordinary diſeaſes, we ſee howe men are hardened by them alſo. I pray you haue we not ſeene that God within theſe fiftie yeares hath brought vp new diſeaſes, againſt whoredome? Whence commeth the pockes and all theſe other filthy diſeaſes, which are not to be reckened vp at this time? Whence come all theſe thinges but from GOD, who vttereth ſuch vengeaunce as earſt was neuer knowen? The worlde wondered at it, and for a time, men were greatly afrayde of it: but yet of all this whyle they haue hadde no conſideration of the hande of God. And at this day it is become ſo ordinarie a matter, that the deſpiſers of GOD, I meane the lecherous ſort and the whore hunters, which giue ouer themſelues to all leaudeneſſe, doe but wring their groines at it. Though GOD ſmyte them with that kinde of leproſie (for it is a kinde of leproſie in very deede) ſo as they be eaten with the fretting thereof and with other filthyneſſe; yet they ceaſe not to folowe their trade ſtill and to mocke at it: and truely it ſeemeth a verie ſtraunge caſe, that ſuch a puniſhment of GOD ſhoulde be ſo turned to a ſcoffe. What a ieſting make they nowadayes of their baudry when they bee thus puniſhed at the hande of God? How commeth it to paſſe, that they themſelues doe make a ieſting and ſcoffing at it, as it were in ſpite of God, and that whereas hee calleth them to humble themſelues in ſackecloth and aſhes, they doe but blurt out their tongues at him, and are ſo farre from being aſhamed of their dooings, that euen as it were in ſpite, they make a ſporte of their owne filthineſſe and miſeries. Wee ſee then howe frowarde men be, ſeeing that they can profite no better in Gods ſchoole. I meane not in the ſchoole of his doctrine, where hee ſpeaketh vnto them, but when hee ſmyteth with heauy ſtrokes, and alſo raiſeth vppe warres and troubles, which ought to make menne beſides themſelues for feare: but yet in the meane whyle this is not written in vaine. Let vs therefore be better aduiſed: and when GOD ſendeth vs any ſtraunge diſeaſes; lette vs vnderſtande that our ſinnes be multiplyed, and that GOD muſt therefore be more moued than euer he was. Wherefore let the ſame bring vs to repentaunce, and let vs not double our iniquities: for in the ende, wee ſhall finde the thing by experience, which we ſawe euen nowe; namely, that when the euill ſhall ſticke vnto vs, yea euen in our marrowe and in our bones, vntill we be vtterly conſumed. Beſides this God hath other manner of meanes to puniſh vs, and when he perceiueth that the vſuall meanes preuaile not, then hath he other roddes layde vp in his ſtorehouſes; as it is ſayd in the Canticle. Yea and we ſhall ſee what it is to walke at all aduentures againſt him: namely that in the ende hee will ouertake thoſe folke ouerthwartely with a crooked meaſure, which playe the ignoraunt fooles after that faſhion, and doe nothing but ſcoffe and ſhake their eares, when he hath puniſhed them one way or other. Lette vs not tarry therefore till GOD vſe ſuch extremitie towardes vs: but beeing warned afore hande by that which is mentioned heere, let vs looke to it, and conſider that looke howe many ſortes of diſeaſes he ſendeth vs, ſo many witneſſes he ſendeth to prooue that we'haue ſinned againſt him: that we might thinke thereon and turne to him againe with all lowlineſſe.

I ſayde erewhiles, that the verie vttermoſt of all, is this which Moſes addeth in the ende: to witte, That GOD will ſmite vs with aſtoniſhment, and that we ſhall be blinde groping at full midde day, as the blinde in the darke, and that our heart ſhall be amazed. Hitherto wee haue ſeene that God ſheweth a ſingular fauour towardes men, in afflicting them in their bodyes, when they haue their mindes ſtill in quiet, that they may be patient. For they feele their ſinnes and bewaile them, and they ceaſe not to call vpon him that chaſtiſeth them. And in verie deede it is ſometimes ſeene, that the grace of GOD is much more manifeſted towardes ſuch people, than if they hadde no ſuch great afflictions. As for example: If GOD ſpare a man, and he ſerue God: wee ſee that God bleſſeth him. When we ſee a ſounde and holy life in one, we will ſay, heere is a man that ſerueth GOD, and God alſo ſheweth himſelfe gratious towardes him. Againe we ſee an other that is viſited with great diſeaſes, euerie man hath pitie and compaſſion on him; he pineth continually, and hath vehement paines, he is vexed with diuerſe maladies, and the verie remedies that are giuen him be ſo greeuous that nothing can be more: yet notwithſtanding this man ceaſeth not to hold himſelfe in quiet, confeſſing his ſinnes and crauing pardon of GOD: wee ſee ſuch a patience as mooueth vs to glorifie God; and the partie continueth ſtill in prayers and ſupplications. When a man is thus mortified, and GOD holdeth his heart ſtill in awe, ſo as the partie continueth in obedience vnder his hande; then perceiue we a great grace of GOD in the middeſt of thoſe chaſtiſementes. But when we be without reaſon in our ſickneſſe, and play the madde bedlems, and ſtande chawing vppon the brydle and wote not which way to turne vs; and of all the while neuer make any countenance of fleeing vnto God for reliefe, it is euen the full meaſure of all miſerie.

Therefore it is not without cauſe, that Moſes hauing ſpoken of the ſickeneſſes and griefes that GOD ſendeth vppon mennes bodies, and in likewiſe of extraordinarie chaſtiſementes, which conſtraine men in ſpite of their beardes, to feele their ſinnes, addeth heere; God will ſtrike thee with blindeneſſe, yea and hee will ſo ſtrike thee, that thy wittes ſhall be amazed: thou ſhalt grope at noonedayes as in the darke: thou ſhalt haue no more ſenſe or feeling in thy hearte: but thou ſhalt be altogether blockiſhe. And heere wee be warned againe, that the chaſtiſements which happen to vs in our mindes ſhoulde be more dreadfull vnto vs, than all that we can ſuffer in our bodyes. It is true that our nature draweth vs cleane contrary; for wee be ſo tender and nice in our bodyes, that as ſoone as wee feele anie griefe, by and by we cry out, and leeſe our patience; and therein we ſee a part of our brutiſhneſſe. For if we hadde any droppe of ſtayed vnderſtanding, we would a hundreth times bee more afrayde of the chaſtiſementes that God threatneth to our ſoules, than of all that euer we can endure in our bodies. In what caſe is a man, when he is forſaken of GOD, ſo as he ſeeketh him not any more, but indeuoreth by al meanes to hyde him from his preſence? Surely when we come to that point, if we coulde plucke God out of his ſeate, we would gladly doe it. Hee that ſeeketh ſuch hydingholes to conuey himſelfe, ſelfe from comming vnto God; doeth what hee can to robbe him of his maieſtie, and hee is loath to come to preſent himſelfe before ſuch a Iudge.

And truely, although a man haue no further harme than this blockiſhneſſe, ſo as hee feeleth not his owne miſerie; is it not a token that God hath alreadie giuen him ouer to a reprobate mind? Yes: for there is not a more euident ſigne of reprobation, than to bee without remorſe or ſcruple of conſcience. Moreouer, when a man is frighted and out of his right wittes, in ſuch wiſe as he woteth not which way to turne him, and hath no more taſte or feeling of God, nor can any skill to lament for his ſinnes, or to aske forgiueneſſe of them, and to repent him of them: but gnaſheth his teeth, and byteth the brydle like a Mule: is not that a dreadful thing? When wee beholde ſuch glaſſes, our hayres ſtande vp right, and euen nature forceth vs to it. And yet for all that, if wee thinke not vpon it, that wee may ſtande in awe, and walke in feare and humilitie, is it not a tempting of God? Let vs learne therefore not to harden our ſelues in ſuch wiſe as God ſhoulde bee forced to fall to this rigour, wherewith he doeth here threaten his people: namely, that hee will make them grope as the blinde in the darke, and that they ſhall haue neither vnderſtanding in them nor diſcretion: that hee will make them to fall in ſuch a feare, as they ſhall not knowe whether they be liuing creatures or no: nor perceiue whether there bee a God that will receiue them to mercie, and whether they ſhall preuaile in calling vpon his name, or not. Let vs not tarrie till ſuch euil doe come vppon vs. For it is a deepe pitte, out of the which verie fewe can get foorth. In deede God will ſome times bring his people to that poynt that they ſhall not knowe where they be, and they ſhalbee ſo greatly afrayd, and ſo troubled therewith, that they ſhall become dull & blockiſh: this is well ſeene. But hee lifteth them vp againe after that hee hath brought them lowe. Howbeit for as much as this example is very rare, let vs not tempt our God; but when hee afflicteth vs in our bodyes, let vs vnderſtande that hee ſpareth vs greatly, and that hee mitigateth the rigour of his wrath, and let vs bee no more ſo impatient as wee haue bin wonted to bee. Albeit that the griefe bee hard and bitter to vs, yet let vs confeſſe: alas: but yet God hath not touched mee in my ſoule. Let this come alwayes in our rememberaunce, to the ende that wee acknowledging the goodnes of our God in that hee doeth forbeare vs: may returne vnto him; and not dout, but that hee is readie to take pitie vppon vs, when wee ſeeke vnto him vnfaynedly. Let that ſerue for one poynt which wee haue to remember in this leſſon, where mention is made of the ſayde blockiſhneſſe.

Nowe Moſes ſayeth expreſſely, that the tranſgreſſors of Gods lawe, ſhall grope at noone day. As if he ſhoulde ſay: notwithſtanding that God giue them many occaſions to reioyce, yet ſhall they be frighted in ſuch ſort, as they ſhall not take hold of any grace, but be as blinde wretches. Seeing it is ſo, let vs mark farther that although God doe mitigate our greefes, and comforteth vs; yet doeth that ſerue vs to no purpoſe, if he giue vs not the wiſedome to vnderſtande his goodneſſe. And we muſt vnderſtand, that wee are not able to enioye the good that GOD offereth vnto vs, when wee be deſtitute of his holy Spirite. And this is one execution of that threatning that is here mentioned. True it is that we ſhoulde alwayes returne to this poynt, that our Lorde deſireth not the vtter confuſion of ſinners: but yͤ forſomuch as ſuch miſeries doe happen oftentimes, we ſhould not tarie till they light vpon our heads; but rather ſeeke the remedie, to the end that God haue not occaſion to withdrawe himſelfe from vs. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth, let vs firſt of all marke, that God directeth this doctrine to ſuch as haue bin trained in his worde, as we haue already ſayd. It is certaine that he is Iudge of the world: yet notwithſtanding wee well deſerue to bee chaſtiſed, after a more boyſtrous faſhion, when wee haue beene taught at his mouth, and haue reiected his will, and bee ſo farre foorth corrupted that wee make but a ieſt of his word: and that whereas hee ſought to retayne vs as his people; wee haue deſpiſed him. It is verie meete therefore that wee ſhoulde bee grieuouſly puniſhed, and therefore let vs thinke, that ſeeing God doeth vs the fauour to let vs haue the pure doctrine of the holy ſcripture, the ſame ſerueth to bereaue vs of all excuſes, and alſo to quicken vs vp to walke ſo much the more in feare.

But herewithall let vs marke farther, that God doth not onely vſe threatnings towards vs, but alſo dayly exhort and allure vs vnto him, to reconcile vs to him: ſhewing that for his parte, hee is readie to come to attonement, ſo wee condemne our ſinnes, and returne to his mercie. What elſe is the Goſpell, that wee heare euery daye, but a meſſage of reconciliation, as Saint Paul calleth it in the ſeconde to the Corinthians? 2.Cor.5. Seeing then that God ſendeth vs a herault to declare peace vnto vs, and to ſhewe that he is ready to doe away all our offences, let vs take heede, that wee vſe this time of our Saluation, to receiue yͤ grace that is offered vnto vs in due ſeaſon, as the Prophet Eſay telleth vs, and as Saint Paul ſayth, vſing the ſame teſtimonie: 2.Cor.6. Againe when we haue bin ouermuch hardened, and that God hath patiently wayted for vs, and wee ſtill continue in our ſinnes: let vs not thinke that he in the end hath either giuen ouer or forgotten his office. We muſt needs yeeld an account of ſuch vnthankfulneſſe. When wee forſake the Saluation whereunto he called vs, and deſpiſe him out of meaſure: ſuch wilful ſtubburneſſe muſt of neceſſitie come to reckening. Then let vs ſtande in feare: and as often as wee heare ſpeaking of the grace of God which is offered vnto vs in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, let our heartes be enclined to receiue it: and let vs giue way vnto God to come in. And when wee goe vnto him, let it bee doone with bewayling our ſinnes, and with yeelding ourſelues guiltie, not onely in worde of mouth, but alſo with ſuch griefe of heart, as may prooue that the euil diſpleaſeth vs. And when wee thus miſlike of our ſelues, let vs not abyde till our Lorde put in execution the threatenings that hee ſetteth foorth heere, but let vs turne them to our commoditie. And when wee heare the promiſes of the Goſpell, let vs remember the threatenings alſo: that wee may bee ſo much the more prouoked, and euery man make haſte to receiue the good which is offered vnto vs to enioy and to poſſeſſe, vnleſſe the fault bee in our ſelues.

Nowe let vs caſt downe our ſelues before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes: beſeeching him to make vs to feele them yet better, vntill wee bee vtterly beaten downe in our ſelues; and ſeeke for the remedie whereunto hee calleth vs: namely, that beeing guyded by his holy ſpirite, wee may increaſe and profite more and more in all holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and that wee may endeuour ſo to glorifie him in all our whole life; as in the ende wee may attayne to that ſame euerlaſting glory, vnto the which hee calleth vs: And ſo let vs all ſay: Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the xxiij. of March, 1556.

The CLVIII. Sermon, which is the ſixt vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

29 And thou ſhalt alwayes ſuffer iniurie and oppreſſion, and no man ſhall deliuer thee.

30 Thou ſhalt mary a wyfe, and an other man ſhall lye with her: thou ſhalt buylde a houſe, but thou ſhalt not dwell in it: thou ſhalt plant a vyne, but thou ſhalt not gather the fruite thereof.

31 Thyne oxe ſhalbe killed before thine eyes, but thou ſhalt not eate of it: thyne Aſſe ſhalbee taken away before thy face, and it ſhall not be reſtored vnto thee: thy ſheepe ſhalbe deliuered to thyne enemies, and there ſhalbe no bodie to ſaue them.

32 Thy ſonnes and thy daughters ſhalbe giuen to another people, thyne eyes ſhall ſee it, and daſle at it all the day long, and thy hande ſhall haue no ſtrength.

33 And a people which thou haſt not knowen, ſhall eat the fruite of thy land, and all thy labour: and thou ſhalt doe nothing but ſuffer reuylinges and oppreſſions alwayes.

34 And thou ſhalt be amaſed at the ſight of thoſe things which thyne eyes ſhal beholde.

35 The Lord wil ſmite thee with a ſore ſwelling in the knees, and in the legs, of the which thou ſhalt not bee healed from the ſole of thy foote to the crowne of thy head.

VE ought well to rememember the meaning of Moſes, whereof wee haue ſpoken heeretofore; namely; wherefore hee continueth in vttering ſo many curſes: For wee are ſlowe to bee mooued: when our Lorde doeth threaten vs, wee make a game of it: and albeit wee confeſſe that wee ſhoulde thinke thereon, yet doeth it eſcape vs. And furthermore, wee ſuppoſe that wee ſhall alwayes fynde ſtarting holes, and that if God doe followe vs one way, wee by flying another way ſhalbee able to void his blowes. Thus doe men deceiue themſelues, and thereuppon waxe hardhearted. Nowe Moſes (or rather the ſpirite of GOD ſpeaking by his mouth) perceiuing that men be ſo careleſſe, and that they ſhrinke not at the firſt, when the iudgement of God is ſet before them, continueth his matter ſtill and addeth threatenings vppon threatenings. Againe, on the other ſide, perceiuing alſo that men ſeeke ſtartingholes, and thereby deceiue themſelues, bearing themſelues in hande, that they can ſaue themſelues by flinging ouer the Fenne (as they ſay:) hee ſheweth that God hath infinite meanes to puniſh vs withall, both aboue and beneath, before and behynde, on the right hande and the lefte, and that wee ſhalbee ſo hemmed in on all ſides, that it ſhall not be poſſible for vs to eſcape his hand.

Nowe after the threatenings, which we haue ſeene heere before, hee preſently addeth that they which ſo reſiſt God ſhalbee afflicted and tormented, ſo as men ſhall ſpoyle them, and they ſhalbee layde open to all vyolence for euer, and no man ſhall deliuer them. Wee ſee heere that God ſerueth his owne turne by the wicked, and that although their intent bee nothing ſo, yet doeth hee apply them to a good vſe, when hee liſteth to puniſh vs. Whereas there bee theeues and robbers, albeeit that they bee giuen ouer to Sathan, yet fayle they not to ſerue Gods purpoſe; yea truely, for wee ſee in this text that our Lorde leaueth them not at randon, to robbe and to ſpoyle, whether hee will or no: but hee threateneth his people, ſaying, They that diſobey mee, ſhalbee vexed and robbed. And whence proceedeth that? It muſt needes, come from him.

Nowe albeit that God ſuffereth oppreſſions, robberies, and violence to bee done, hee can very well condemne them, according as hee is righteous, and muſt needes hate Iniuſtice: yet notwithſtanding, by his wonderfull wiſedome which to vs is incomprehenſible, hee turneth thoſe things to his owne ſeruice: ſo that when wee haue offended him, he muſt needs puniſhe vs by the hand of the moſt wicked: which is the more to our reproche. For if he himſelfe ſhoulde haue puniſhed vs, and we ſawe before our eyes, ỷ he reuengeth him of our iniquities, wel would wee ſay, ſeeing that wee haue offended him, it is good reaſon that wee ſhould come to account for it. But when hee ſturreth vppe leawd folke, and deſpiſers of his maieſtie, and ſuch as are giuen to all naughtineſſe, and maketh them our Iudges: it is to make vs ſo much the more aſhamed. Let vs therefore conſider, that whenceſoeuer the euill commeth, wee haue euermore to deale with GOD: and wee muſt thinke that there is nothing done in this worlde but by his direction. And thereupon let vs enter into the examination of our faults. For it is not ynough to know that God ruleth al things: but euery one of vs muſt alſo make his owne inditement, and conſider that all afflictions and aduerſities, are tokens of Gods wrath. Nowe when wee ſpeake of his wrath, wee muſt in like wiſe remember his iuſtice; and thereuppon conclude that wee verie well deſerue to bee puniſhed. But yet he threateneth vs before hee ſtrike, to the ende that wee ſhoulde not ſtand gaping til the things were come to paſſe; but rather preuent them aforehande, as Saynt Paul alſo doeth admoniſh vs. 1.Cor.11.31 Whileſt God ſpareth vs, let vs bee aduiſed, ſo to walke in his feare, that wee prouoke him not to ſtirre vp theeues to torment and vexe vs: but that rather (if men attempt ſuch iniuries againſt vs) wee may ſtande in his protection, according as hee promiſeth to vpholde all them that walke in his obedience. Then let vs ſee that wee doe ſo; and let vs remember that which is ſpoken by the Prophet Eſaye, to wit, that they which haue robbed, muſt bee ſerued with the ſame ſawce. Eſa.33.1. And that is the cauſe why violences and extortions doe ſo continue in the worlde.

Men wonder to ſee that the miſchiefe growes woorſe and woorſe: but they ſhoulde note the cauſe thereof. For they that beare chiefe ſway and preheminence, doe let themſelues looſe, ſeeking nothing but to enriche themſelues, and to ſwallowe vp other mennes ſubſtance. But haue they robbed? God muſt ſende a reuolution, ſo as other robbers ſhall come and bereaue theſe of their booties: and afterwarde, a thirde ſorte muſt ſtep vp to ſpoile them againe. And ſo there is neuer any ende. And why? Becauſe the worlde neuer ceaſſeth to prouoke the wrath of God. And for ſo much as wee bee headſtrong, it is reaſon, that our Lorde ſhoulde continue to ſhewe himſelfe our Iudge. But (as I ſayde euen nowe) let vs bee well ware to walke in ſuch wiſe, as innocent bloud crye not out for vengeance againſt vs. Let vs not doe iniurie or outrage to any perſon, that our Lorde may bleſſe vs for ſo dooing, and not pay vs with like meaſure, according as wee ſee howe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſayeth, that it ſhall come ſo to paſſe. Matt.7.2. Let euery of vs therefore brydle him ſelfe in ſuch wiſe, as this curſe come not vppon vs, to bee robbed for vſing of robberie and extortion againſt the innocentes. But for as much as men imagine that their aduerſitie ſhalbee ſhort, and that they ſhalbee ſoone ridde of it: Moſes addeth, That it ſhal bee for euer, and that when the hande of God is againſt vs, no man ſhalbee able to ſaue vs.

It is certayne, that like as God is ſlowe to anger, ſo is hee ſoone pacified; but that is but towardes the faithfull. Pſal.103.8. Pſal.18.27. As for the wicked, hee muſt holde on with them, and they muſt feele their burden euery day heauyer than other. And wherefore? According as they harden their heartes againſt God, they muſt in like wiſe feele him the harder againſt them. And albeeit that this is not alwayes, yet doe wee ſee it often come to paſſe, God will at ſome times withdrawe his hande after hee hath menaced the wicked; or elſe when hee hath giuen them ſome ſtrypes with his rodde, hee will let them goe againe: and that is, as it were a reſpyte, that they may haue leaſure to turne to repentance. Notwithſtanding, becauſe hee knoweth them to bee vnrefourmable: that dealing of his muſt of neceſſitie bee turned to their ſorer condemnation. If GOD then do ſpare the deſpiſers of his lawe, and them that bee obſtinate in malice, it doeth not therefore followe, that they ſhall bee ſaued: but it is to the ende that the plague ſhall come double vppon their heades, for their abuſing of his patience after that manner. For when hee hath waited for them, and they proceede ſtill from euill to woorſe: hee muſt needes put to his hande at the laſt. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth, it is not in vayne that Moſes telleth vs heere, that when GOD is our enemie, our life ſhall not bee miſerable only for a day, or yet for a little while; wee muſt not limit our ſelues any terme in that caſe: but we muſt looke for one miſchieefe to drawe another, and that there ſhall bee none ende, vntill hee hath layde vs quyte vnder foote, vnleſſe wee turne to him to obtayne mercie. Wherefore let vs weye well this woorde which Moſes addeth, where hee ſayeth, that if GOD doe beginne to ſmyte vs for deſpyſing of his iuſtice: it ſhall not continue for a little whyle, but wee muſt bee miſerable for euer. And why? For in as much as the maieſtie of God is euerlaſting, he muſt needes take endeleſſe vengeaunce of them that deſpiſe his iuſtice. Therefore ſo ſoone as wee ſee the blowes come neere vs, let vs bee afrayde, and let euery of vs make haſte to returne vnto him, whome wee haue offended, to wit, our GOD, to obtayne forgiueneſſe of our treſpaſſes. That is the onely remedie, without which there will bee neyther ende nor meaſure of our afflictions, except wee take order to reconcile our ſelues to our God.

Nowe where hee alleageth, that none ſhall ſaue them: That is to cut off all the vayne hopes which men doe forge to them ſelues in their owne braynes, when hee puniſheth them. They looke hither and thither, and if they finde any comfort in this worlde, it ſeemeth vnto them, that they ſhall make a ſcappage againſt God, and that they ſhall bee able to winne the goale in the ende. In deede they will not ſay ſo; for it is a blaſphemie which all of vs doe holde accurſed; but yet wee bee ſo doltiſh, that wee hope to turne away the hande of GOD when wee finde any helpe heere: in ſo much that if men beare vs any fauour, and wee bee ſupported in any thing, wee arme our ſelues therewith againſt God. But Moſes telleth vs heere, that it is in vayne for men to ſeeke dyuers ſuccours after that faſhion, when GOD warreth vppon them. For why? All creatures are in his hande, and without him they can doe nothing. More ouer, that which is for our benefite, ſhall become our bane, and all thinges ſhall redounde to our confuſion. Let vs not therefore looke to bee ſaued by anye meanes that may bee, when our Lorde taketh parte againſt vs: but let vs returne vnto him, ſeeing that there is none other remedie but that, and let vs ridde our ſelues of all ſuch thinges as may hinder vs to come to repentance.

Let vs then bee quickened vp by theſe two ſayings of Moſes, that wee ſleepe no more in our vayne fantaſies, as wee haue beene earſt too much accuſtomed. But what? There are very fewe which thinke vppon that. For euery man martyreth himſelfe, if his griefe continue, and hee fynde no helpe in men. In all our afflictions, wee can complayne welynough: but wee conſider not that GOD withholdeth mennes helpe from vs, when hee intendeth to puniſh vs, in ſuch wiſe that wee ſhall (after a ſorte) bee vtterly ouerwhelmed. And againe, if our ſorrowe continue; it is, becauſe wee haue perſiſted too much in our ſtubbornneſſe. Wee thinke not a whit of all this. But yet are not theſe thinges written in vayne. And therfore let vs learne to profite better thereby, than wee haue done in times paſt.

Finally, Moſes ſetteth foorth by this threatening, howe wee ſhalbee vexed and robbed, if wee offende againſt the lawe of God. Hee ſayeth: Thou ſhalt marry a wife and not lye with her: Thou ſhalt buylde a houſe, and not dwell therein: Thou ſhalt plant a vyneyarde, and not gather the fruite thereof. Yea, they ſhall take thy Beefes and thy Muttons, and kill them, and thou ſhalt continue ſtill a hungred: and not onely all thy cattell ſhall bee made a praye and a bootie: but thy verie children alſo ſhall bee deliuered into the handes of thine enimies, and thou ſhalt yerne after them, and thine eyes ſhall daſle for verie greefe and ſorrowe, & in the meane whyle, thy hande ſhalbee without ſtrength or power to recouer them. It had beene ynough to haue ſayde in one worde, Thou ſhalt ſuffer robberies, extortions, and wronges: but becauſe men are ſlowe, it behooueth them to bee ſo much the better touched, and to beholde the thing as it were before their eyes. That is the cauſe why Moſes ſpeaketh heere of houſes and vyneyeardes, of wiues and children, and of cattell. As if hee ſhoulde ſay: Some ſhall bewayle the taking away of their houſes which they had builded, the putting of them from their vyneyeardes and their other poſſeſſions, the ſpoyling of their goods, and the driuing away of their cattell: And otherſome ſhall bewayle the wrong that is done vnto them in their children, and in their very wiues. But wee bee to conſider that all theſe thinges bee the ſcourges of God, wherewith hee puniſheth vs for our ſinnes.

It is certayne (as I haue ſayde alreadie heretofore) that GOD at ſometimes, for the exerciſing of the faithfull in patience, doeth ſende them the verye chaſticementes heere mentioned, and yet puniſheth them not for their offences. For Iob was not puniſhed for his ſinnes: Not that GOD had not iuſt cauſe ſo to doe, but for that hee had no reſpect to that: howe ſo euer the caſe ſtand, ſurely it is an ordinarie matter.

In deede wee may alleage many examples of men that are tormented and vexed by the wicked, ſo as they bee driuen from poſt to piller, and robbed of their goods : ſuch examples doe happen euery day : but this prooueth not, that this doctrine taketh not place, and that it is not true in it ſelfe, as an ordinarie rule, to wit, that God puniſheth mens ſins by ſuch meanes. Nowe when wee haue walked in the feare of God, and endeuoured to ſerue him : and yet notwithſtanding, our ſubſtaunce is taken away, and the robbers poſſeſſe it : let vs conſider, that if this bee not doone for our ſinnes, our Lorde giueth vs a great preeminence. For firſt of all, of whome was it long that wee offended him not? We were preſerued by his holy ſpirite. And moreouer, notwithſtanding any good affection and zeale that wee haue had to liue vprightly and vncorruptly ; yet wee ceaſe not to be guiltie before God. But what for that? Hee ſpareth vs, and yet hee meaneth to trye our patience, for to humble vs. When it is his will that wee ſhall beare the miſeries, which bee puniſhmentes for them that deſpiſe his lawe, and that wee muſt feele them: well, wee muſt ſtoope. And thereby hee tryeth vs, howe pliable wee bee vnder his hande to yeeld vnto his gouernement, as ſhall ſtande with his good pleaſure. Moreouer, this alwayes taketh place, (as wee haue ſayde afore) that our Lord puniſheth the offences and transgreſſions of his lawe, by the things that are ſpecified here. So then, when a man buildeth, let him take heede that hee buylde not with extortion, pilling, polling, and robberie, vnleſſe it bee his meaning to haue his houſe taken from him, according as it is ſpoken by the Prophet Abacuc. For the Prophet bringeth in the walles ſinging and anſwering one another. For in as much as mens Palaces and houſes, bee oftentimes buylded with bloud, robberie, extortion, and wicked practiſes : and the verie walles them ſelues doe crye out that they were buylded with pilling and polling : it muſt needes waken vp Gods wrath and vengeance againſt ſuch buylders. Deſire wee then to bee harboured in peace? Let vs looke that wee buylde without doyng wrong to any body, whatſoeuer hee bee.

Abac. 2, 11.

And moreouer let euery of vs in his dwelling, dedicate himſelfe in ſuch wiſe to God, as hee may dwell with vs. For they that are driuen out of their dwellings, haue commonly driuen God out before : that is to ſay, they haue followed ſome lewde trade, ſo as GOD hath not reigned there. Is it then any wonder, if they bee driuen thence in the ende? No: For why? Shall GOD bee thruſt from his right; and wee in the meane while poſſeſſe euery man his dwelling in reſt? Were that reaſon? Therefore, when wee ſee ſuch changes to happen, as they bee to bee ſeene in the worlde: let vs vnderſtande that GOD driueth them out, which earſt woulde giue him no lodging : and let ſuch examples admoniſh vs to ſtande in feare of the threatenings heere ſpecified. And let vs not tarrie till our Lorde baniſh vs from the place where wee bee harboured : but let vs rather endeuour to ſerue him, ſo as hee may continue alwayes with vs to maintayne vs. And if it come to paſſe, that wee bee driuen out, let vs vnderſtande that the ſame is for our ſinnes: for it is better late than neuer. Moreouer, if we bee driuen out for any other cauſe, as at this day wee ſee the poore faithfull people, in ſtate like a byrde on the bough, as though the earth coulde not beare them : as Saint Paul ſpeaketh of his time, and as it is knowen at this preſent time that the children of God bee as vagabondes, hauing not a hole to hyde themſelues in : when wee beholde theſe things, let vs vnderſtande, that foraſmuch as our Lorde leadeth vs this walke, hee doeth vs great fauour that the ſame is not becauſe of our ſinnes, but for his names ſake, and for our better eſtabliſhment in the hope of the heauenly inheritance, ſeeing that there is nothing ſure nor ſtable in this preſent worlde, but that wee muſt alwayes aſpire to the eternall life, and to the reſt that is prepared for vs on high. Let vs then acknowledge the good that hee doeth vnto vs in this poynt. But in any wiſe, let vs take good heede that wee prouoke not his wrath againſt vs in ſuch ſort as I haue ſaide afore.

1.Cor.4.13.

Nowe, whereas hee ſayth: Thou ſhalt marrie a wife, and another ſhall lye with her : let euery man take heede to walke in ſuch chaſtitie, as hee drawe not vppon him this curſe of God, in ſuch wiſe as to bee depriued of the wife that he thinkes to haue : and the wiues in like caſe of their husbandes. Wee ſee howe men bee giuen ouer to all vnchaſtitie, and God muſt needs yeelde them their rewarde accordingly. Dauid himſelfe was not ſpared in this caſe. Wee heare howe it was ſayde vnto him : Thou haſt done this in ſecrete, but that ſhalbee done openly. Hee was fayne to abyde reproche before all the worlde, in hauing his wiues rauiſhed openly. Sith it is ſo then; let vs take good heede, that wee walke in ſuch chaſtitie, that when men take wiues, they may ſo liue together as they may feele the bleſſing of God, and that their marryages bee not broken through the committing of any offence. For, as I haue ſayde : it is no wonder that there bee ſo confuſed changes in the worlde at this day, becauſe men doe more and more kindle the wrath and vengeance of God. It is euen in like caſe with adulteries. For what is the cauſe that they reygne ſo ryfe, and are come (as yee woulde ſay) to their full pryde? It is becauſe wedlocke is ſo little regarded, and that there is no feare of God : there is neither faith nor trueth : and therefore muſt men needes plunge themſelues in all misfortune, ſo that in the ende there will bee nothing but diſorder. So much the more therefore ought wee to take warning to walke ſo in all cleanneſſe of life, as euery one may keepe him to his owne wife, and the Lorde bleſſe their marryages and mayntayne

2.Sam.12.12

Moreouer, ſeeing that God is matched with vs in the perſon of his onely ſonne, and woulde haue vs to keepe faſt the faith of wedlocke towardes him, according to the ſimplicitie of his Goſpell: let vs ſticke throughly to that which hee hath commaunded vs: and to bee ſhort, let vs be halowed vnto him, and followe his holy calling. For if wee doe ſo, our Lorde will graunt vnto husbandes the grace to liue quietly with their wiues and houſholds, and vnto the wiues that they ſhall learne to liue in good agreement with their husbandes. For wee muſt marke, that if man and wife doe not ioyne in one mynde, there muſt needes bee diſcorde in the whole houſe, and one ſhall byte and ſnatch at another like dogges and cattes, and the one woulde wiſh the other a hundred foote vnder the ground, ſo as they ſhall liue in continuall miſerie and diſquietnes. And why? Becauſe that neither the one nor the other hath any regarde to God, to yeelde themſelues to his direction. Therefore let vs learne, not to prouoke any more the vengeance of God in this caſe.

As concerning the landes and poſſeſſions he ſayeth: That the tranſgreſſours of the law of God ſhall plant vines, but they ſhall neuer gather the fruite of them. Nowe wee ſee that they which haue thus offended God, bee the ſtouteſt and boldeſt ſort, bearing themſelues in hand that no harme can come neere them. And that is the cauſe why wee ſee that the greateſt getters, & the doers of greateſt enterpriſes, are thoſe which wilfully giue them ſelues to pilling and polling by hooke and by crooke, hauing no care what polling and extorſion they commit, and offending both God and man without ende or meaſure. Such perſons as theſe therefore muſt afterward yeelde an account. [They beare themſelues in hand] that when they haue plãted vyneyeards, they ſhall inioy them without controuerſie: and that when they haue buylded houſes, they ſhall dwel in them without putting out againe. Thus do men hardẽ thẽſelues againſt God. But Moſes cõtrariwiſe declareth: That when they haue planted vines, other men ſhall gather the fruite of them. And in deede, whereas wee ſee at this day ſo much theeuerie in the worlde; let vs vnderſtand, that it is becauſe there bee ſo fewe that haue cleane handes, and are able to proteſt that they haue not encroched vppon the goods of other men by vniuſt meanes. Soothely there is ſo vnmeaſurable diſorder nowadayes, that the children of God bee fleeced though they abſtayne from all manner of iniuries. But we muſt euermore haue recourſe to the ordinarie courſe whereof I haue ſpoken, to wit, that our Lorde will not fayle to puniſh the ſinnes that breake out after that faſhion like a waterfloud. As for them that haue landes and poſſeſſions, they will not goe to ſteale otherfolkes goods, nor to picke a fewe grapes: they will not go filchingly to cut down a patche of medowe: it is for beggers to doe ſo: and wee ſee in theſe dayes, that the moſt parte of poore folkes are pilferers, filching and ſtealing all that euer they can finger. But yet they that haue landes and poſſeſſions, bee the greateſt theeues: for the things which they poſſeſſe, they get by vnlawfull meanes. It is no wonder then, if God do requite them with the like; and that they bee ſo vexed in their goods and poſſeſſions. God therefore ſheweth vs by experience, that his vttering of ſuch ſpeeches is not in vayne; but wee thinke not thereon. Men can well ynough complayne, as I haue ſayde afore: but they haue no regarde to the principall poynt, which is; that GOD putteth the thinges in execution which hee ſpake by the mouth of Moſes. Let vs therefore bethinke our ſelues; and whereas wee ſee ſo much ſtealing, both of vynes, of corne, and of ſuch other things; let vs vnderſtande that our Lorde puniſheth the rauenouſneſſe and extortion that is committed both in marchandize, and in all other trades of occupying: and let vs not tarye till GOD doe puniſh vs in verie deede; but let vs walke vprightly, if wee will haue him to defende vs. For although that all places bee neuer ſo full of theeues; yet will our Lorde keepe our goods in ſafetie, if wee walke in his feare, and abſtayne from all manner of euill doing. That is the thing whereunto we muſt haue our recourſe; and wee muſt not thinke to eſcape euill, by euill doing: but wee muſt vſe the remedie which our Lorde ſetteth foorth in this text. As much is to bee ſayde of our cattell, and alſo of our children. Yea, and Moſes proceedeth ſtill with inlarging, to the ende that men ſhoulde ſo much the better perceiue, what the effect is of this ſpeeche which hee vſeth: namely, that this ſhalbee for euer. As if hee ſhoulde ſaye, that the hande of God ſhall euer waxe heauier and heauier. In ſo much that if a man which is driuen from his dwelling, doe thinke to remooue to his poſſeſſions, and to his landes; GOD will perſecute him euen there: and if hee thinke to cheere himſelfe with his wife, ſhee ſhalbee taken from him by force: and if hee thinke to fynde ſome comfort in his children, they ſhalbe deliuered into the hands of his enimies; and if hee thinke to haue any recourſe to his cattell, they ſhalbee all ſtolne or taken away by force. Moſes therefore beſetteth vs heere on all ſides, to the ende wee ſhoulde learne to reſort vnto our God; foraſmuch as it is in vayne, for vs to labour to eſcape by any other way. This is the matter in effect which wee haue to beare in minde of this text.

Nowe hee addeth moreouer, to the increaſe of the miſcheefe; That the fruits of the earth and the labour of our handes, ſhalbee eaten by a people which wee haue not knowen: and that wee our ſelues ſhalbee diſtraughted by reaſon of the miſeries which ſhall ſo light vppon vs. That is to ſay, wee ſhalbee as out of our wittes, beholding the miſchiefe before our eyes; and beeing amazed thereat, whereby wee ſhalbee enforced to perceiue that the hande of God is againſt vs. That is in effect the matter which hee meant to ſay in this text.

Nowe I haue tolde you that the miſerie is ſo much the more greeuous to beare, when a people vnknowen commeth to ranſacke all. Truely if we be robbed by our owne neighbours, and by them that ſhould bee at amitie with vs: the ſame is verie harde to beare. But if there come a ſtraunge people, there is leſſe mercie. For when men bee ſo ſeparated one from the other, and haue no intercōmoning at al: there is the leſſe likelihoode of any meanes of ſafetie. And wee ſee howe this repetition heere is often founde in the Prophetes: inſomuch as it is ſaide Iſa.33.19. ſometimes, that the people which ſhall perſecute vs, ſhall be a barbarous people without language whereby to haue any talke with vs: by reaſon whereof, when we ſhall aske them mercie, and cry alas, it ſhall ſeeme vnto them that wee curſe them; and that ſhall be an increaſe of their crueltie. So then lette vs marke, that his ſpeaking thus of a ſtraunge people, is to make vs to vnderſtande, that GOD will ſende vs ſuch chaſtiſers as will haue no pitie nor compaſſion of vs, vntill they haue quite and cleane rooted vs out.

And nowe by the way we be warned, that although the plague be not yet come neere vs, we muſt not therefore fall aſleepe. For wee doe alwayes meaſure Gods threateninges, by our owne conceiuing of them, and by the thinges that offer themſelues to our ſight. When men ſpeake of warre, and doe threaten vs with the Turke, But how can he come at vs ſay we? He is too farre off. Againe, can ſuch a Prince inuade vs? Tuſh, he ſhall be letted by ſuch a meane: the plague can not come that way, by reaſon of ſuch a cauſe. He may be dealt withall by ſuch a meane: it can not be. When wee haue ſuch kinde of worldely ſhiftes to defende our ſelues withall, thereupon wee deſpiſe GOD, not in worde, but in deede, for wee continue vnreformable and frowarde, and feare not that the plague can come at vs. Therefore ſayeth God, that he will ſtirre vppe ſtraunge people againſt vs, euen people of farre Countryes. When men doubt it leaſt, then ſhall they wonder to ſee howe GOD will come in vppon them on that ſide which they neuer thought of, and bring them enemies to ſpoyle them. Lette vs then marke by this texte, that Gods ſcourges lye ſometimes hidden, and breake out vppon a ſuddaine, ſo as men are taken tardie by them, ac-
Ier.9.24. cording to this ſaying, that they be like to a woman that is childe bearing. For a woman that is with childe, is vtterly abaſhed when her houre is come; euen ſo fareth it with them that are puffed vp with their iniquities, and delight in them: they forecaſt not that the hande of God
1.Theſſ.5.3. is neere them. It commeth vppon them like a tempeſt; when they ſay, Peace and all is ſafe, then commeth their ruine and vtter deſtruction. Therefore whereas we be tolde of ſtrange people, lette vs learne to looke farre beefore vs when GOD doeth threaten vs; for like as faith muſt aduaunce it ſelfe aboue the worlde to take holde of Gods promiſes, that it may reſt altogether vppon them: ſo likewiſe when GOD threatneth vs, our fayth muſt looke further off than we can ſee with our eyes, and we miſtruſt the thing which wee ſee not at all: like as wee may perceiue that Noe tarryed not till the floude brake out, and that GOD did vnlocke the Raine of heauen, and opened Gen.6.22.
the waterſpringes of the earth: but as ſoone as hee hearde the woorde, hee did nothing but thinke vpon the vengeaunce of GOD: and by vertue of that worde, he behelde the floude as if it hadde beene preſent: and hee liued in ſuch feare and carefulneſſe, as if he had ſeene the rayne both euening and morning to deſtroy all thinges before his eyes. Euen ſo ſhould we doe and we be warned thereof by this ſaying, where God ſpeaketh of farre countries.

Moreouer wee bee therewithall warned to liue in peace and concorde. For ſeeing that GOD hath aſſociated vs and wee be intermingled together: we muſt learne to liue in ſuch vnitie, as our Lorde neede not to bring ſtraunge enemies to chaſtiſe our churliſhneſſe in reſembling cats and dogs. For when men which ought to agree together, doe vexe one another, it cauſeth GOD to ſtirre vp ſtraungers to bee their enemies; becauſe that the neerer that our Lord commeth vnto vs, the more would he haue vs giuen to doe good one to another. And if wee doe the contrarie, then muſt GOD ſtirre vp a people to come to ſpoyle vs, becauſe we haue not liued in peace like brethren, ne knitte our ſelues together like fingers of one hande. This is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde touching this text.

Nowe where he ſayeth, And you ſhall be amazed at the ſights which you ſhall ſee: it is according to that which was ſayde before; namely: that Deut.28.29.
men ſhold be diſtraughted, and grope at noone day, as doeth the blinde in the darke. For if wee be borne withall ſo farre as to gather and plucke vppe our ſpirites to call vppon GOD, and to bee patient in our afflictions; it is a great grace, and ſuch a one as can not bee ſufficiently eſteemed. But if our Lorde incourage vs not to repentaunce, ne giue vs wherewith to aſſwage and diminiſh our ſorrowes, but all hope is taken away, and we be as folke already forlorne, ſo as we bee beſides our wittes to ſee the naked ſword continually before vs, hauing no meane of remedie or ſuccour at all: that is a dreadfull threatning. Neuertheleſſe it is not ſent without cauſe, conſidering the hardeneſſe of hearte which is to bee ſeene in all men. For vntill GOD haue brought vs to this ſtraughtedneſſe, we be altogether blockiſh, and we haue the contrarie vice, which is, that we can verie well complayne when any thing doeth trouble vs: yea, and ſometimes we lye as beaten downe, but yet doeth not that make vs to come againe to God: for we ſee howe euery man taketh the bridle in his teeth, ſo as they ſhake off all feare, and neuer thinke vpon that which is ſet downe heere. And ſo we ſee howe men become blockiſh. Now our Lorde would faine drawe them to repentance, taunce, at leaſtwiſe if they were teacheable, that is to ſay, if they were not wilfull ſtubborne. For he tryeth all manner of wayes to drawe vs vnto him. This is the cauſe why hee doeth correct vs gently, and as it were within compaſſe, as with his litle finger. But when hee ſeeth that that will nothing preuayle; then muſt he bring vs to this kinde of woodneſſe. For vntill he hath left vs as men diſtraughted, we wil neuer haue our minds peaceable and obedient, we will neuer be wunne.

Therefore let vs marke well that this threatning is directed to ſuch as ſtoope not at the firſt blowe when GOD hath warned them, but goe on from euill to worſe: for then muſt they of neceſſitie come to this woodeneſſe. Nowe he ſpeaketh expreſly concerning the ſightes of the eyes. For men doe blinde themſelues (as I haue ſayde heeretofore) perſuading with themſelues that they can eſcape by ſome mean: inſomuch that although wee ſee the euill at hande, yet ye woulde wonder to ſee howe wee holde on our courſe, and care not for it, according as the prophet Eſaie ſpeaketh of the wicked: Iſa.28.15. ſaying that when the ſcourge paſſeth ouer the whole earth, and the ſtorme ouer taketh them all, they bee not any whit mooued thereat. After that manner doe the deſpiſers of GOD ſpeake, and the number of them is infinite. So then, when men doe thus blinde their eyes, and haue no reſpect at all to the plagues whereunto they be ſubiect: but notwithſtanding that they fall into infinite troubles out of the which they can not get out againe, yet they holde on ſtil: foraſmuch as they be ſo frowarde, Moſes ſayeth expreſſely in this texte: You ſhall haue a ſight before your eyes: that is to ſay, after that you haue beene a long while hardened in your vaine fantaſies, and haue flattered yourſelues in your ſinnes, imagining that GOD ſhould ſpare you and that you be (as it were his mates, and haue made a league with death and Iſa.28.15. with the graue, according as the Prophet ſpeaketh of it: when as you haue beene thus a long while vntouched with any awe, and haue deceiued yourſelues in bearing yourſelues in hande that your plague ſhall not laſt: There ſhall come a ſight that ſhall make your eyes to dazle in beholding the infinite miſchiefes which you muſt bee faine to endure: and which way ſo euer you turne your eyes, whether it bee vpwarde or downeward, foreward or backeward, you ſhal ſee Gods hande continually purſewing you; by reaſon whereof you ſhal be driuen into a madnes. Let vs learne therefore to conuert this text to our benefite: and whyle GOD doeth forbeare vs, or at the leaſt ſo moderate his plagues that wee be not thereby altogether ouerthrowen; let vs feare him, and lette vs bethinke ourſelues howe ſundrie wayes wee haue offended GOD: inſomuch that if he liſted to deale rygorouſly with vs, we ſhoulde then periſh euerie minute of an houre. And therewithall lette vs not tarrie till hee thunder downe vppon vs, and powre out his curſes vppon vs in ſuch ſorte as they may ſinke into our verie bones: but let vs returne to him and to his goodneſſe. And aboue all thinges when hee giueth vs the grace to foreſee his plagues afarre off, ſo as wee may ſay that others bee puniſhed for our inſtruction: lette vs take warning by their example, and in ſuch wiſe by faith receiue Gods corrections wherewith he threatneth vs, as it may preſerue vs from that ſight whereof Moſes ſpeaketh heere: to the intent that our Lorde ſtrike vs not with ſuch feare, as we can not in anie wiſe thinke to receiue any recorde of his goodneſſe by reaſon of our ſinnes. Nay rather, that by putting this leſſon of obeying him and of ſubmitting our ſelues vnto him in vre, wee may eſchewe this foreſayde amazedneſſe, and not bee ſo oppreſſed as wee ſhoulde become like folke that were out of their wittes. Let vs not come to ſuch an extremitie, neither let vs compell GOD to execute ſuch Threateninges againſt vs.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes; beſeeching him to vouchſafe to make vs ſo to vnderſtande them, as euery one of vs may be his owne iudge, and turne to him, before we be thereunto conſtrayned: and that hauing willingly condẽned ourſelues & bewailed our ſins, we may ſeeke to return to his obedience in ſuch wiſe, as the ſame may be to dedicate vs wholely vnto him. And that in the meane while it may pleaſe him yͤ like as he hath ſent vs the meſſage of reconciliation by his goſpell, he will alſo giue vs yͤ grace to obtaine mercie of him, & forgiuenes of all our ſinnes in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: and that reſting thereupon, we fayle not to walke alwaies in feare: and that his bearing with vs through his fatherly goodnes may not cauſe vs to ſleepe in our ſinnes, and to flatter ourſelues in them: but yͭ euery of vs may quicken vp himſelfe, vntill we be quite and cleane rid of them. And that forſomuch as wee are to paſſe through ſo much filthines in this world, we may be taught to amende our miſdoinges continually vntil that we be throughly ridde of them, for the full vniting of vs to himſelfe, and to make vs pertakers of his heauenly glorie. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not only to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xxiiij. of March, 1556.

The CLIX. Sermon, which is the ſeuenth vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

36 The Lord wil carry thee and thy king which thou ſhalt haue ſet ouer thee, to a people which thou haſt not knowen, neither thou nor thy fathers: and there ſhalt thou ſerue other gods, of wood and of ſtone.

37 And there ſhalt thou be a gazing ſtocke, a skoffing ſtocke, and a byworde to all people, to whom the Lorde ſhall bring thee.

38 Thou ſhalt lay much ſeede in the grounde, and ſhalt gather litle: for the graſſehoppers ſhall deuour it.

39 Thou ſhalt plant a vineyearde and dreſſe it: but thou ſhalt not drinke the wine of it, nor gather any fruite of it: for the wormes ſhall eate it.

40 Thou ſhalt haue Oliue trees in all thy coaſtes, but thou ſhalt not annoint thyſelfe with the oyle of it: for all thine Oliues ſhal be ſhaken off.

41 Thou ſhalt beget ſonnes and daughters, but not to thy ſelfe: for they ſhall goe into Captiuitie.

42 The worme ſhall deſtroy all thy trees, and the fruite of thy lande.

43 The ſtraunger which dwelleth with thee, ſhall riſe aboue thee very high: and thou ſhalt ſtoope vnder him verie lowe.

44 He ſhall lende vnto thee, and not thou vnto him: he ſhalbe the head, and thou ſhalt be the taile.

45 And all theſe curſes ſhall come vpon thee and followe thee and take holde of thee, vntill thou be vtterly rooted out, becauſe thou haſt not obeyed the voice of the Lorde thy God, by keeping his commaundementes and ordinaunces which he hath commaunded thee.

1.Sam.8.20.

WE know when the people of Iſrael choſe thẽ a king, with what affection they were led; euen of pride, for that they would not bee inferiours to their neighbours. Moteouer they thought to be very ſure, by hauing a head ouer thẽ, that ſhould haue the whole authoritie. And ſo ye ſee that the children of Abrahã could not content themſelues with their libertie, but deſired to haue a king. Becauſe they ſawe the Egyptians, the Syrians, the Moabites, yea and the Tyrians, and other like people to haue kinges: they bare themſelues in hand, that if they alſo might haue a head, all would goe well with them. Now like as pride and ambition was the cauſe that they choſe a king in Iſraell: euen ſo became they hardhearted thereupon, ſuppoſing themſelues to be out of all perils, by hauing ſuch a defence: by meane whereof we ſee that they deſpiſed the prophetes, vnder pretence that they thought themſelues well fenſed. The ſpirite of GOD foreſeeing this (albeit that it was not yet come to paſſe) ſayde in this Text, That the king which they ſhall appoint ſhould be lead captiue into a ſtraunge countrey: As if God ſhould haue ſayde that they might well ſeeke ſtartinghooles to ſaue themſelues: but they ſhould ſtande them in no ſteede at all againſt his hande. This is the thing that we touched yeſterday; namely, that when God is our aduerſarie, we may not thinke to maynetaine ourſelues againſt him by the meane of creatures, knowing that he will ſurely apply thẽ to our deſtruction. Therefore let none of vs deceiue himſelfe, neither let vs make our defence of that which is nothing but ſmoke and leaſing. It is true that the king which was firſt choſen by the people of Iſraell, namely king Saule, was not brought to captiuitie: howbeit that he dyed in battayle: but the ſucceſſours of Dauid were handled cruelly & with great reproch, notwithſtanding that God had ordained them, yea and that they were a figure and Image of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And it is a horrible thing, that the kingdome which GOD had dedicated vnto himſelfe, (as witneſſed the annoynting) ſhould be layde foorth to ſuch a reproch. Yee ſee howe the ſucceſſours of Dauid which hadde receiued the promiſe that their ſeate ſhoulde be euerlaſting, and in the meane while were as the figures of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſte: were handeled on ſuch a ſort that they were led priſoners in chains, were arrained as offenders, had their eyes put out, hadde their childrens throtes cutte in their owne preſence, were caſt into a deepe dungeon, there to rotte or to bee eaten to death with vermine: and that, as you ſee is a verie ſtrange matter. But the vengeance of God was to extende ſo farre euen of neceſſitie, becauſe of the frowardeneſſe of the people, whereof was none other remedie. And the more that God had ſuffered them and patiently waited for them, the more were they to bee brought to the extremitie of all confuſion, for deſpiſing ſo great goodneſſe, and for beeing ſo frowarde and hardhearted againſt it. Nowe we may heereby gather a good warning, to witte, that (as was declared yeſterday) albeit that according to the worlde, we ſeeme to ſtande in no perill: yet doeth it behooue vs to ſeeke to haue Gods fauour: for if he be not on our ſide, and we vnder his ſauegarde, curſed are all the helps which we ſuppoſe to haue of creatures; for they ſerue rather to ouerthrowe vs. And therefore lette vs take heede that wee put not our confidence in the greatneſſe of Princes, or in any other defences; for wee ſee howe they bee but meanes to blinde ſuch as might elſe turne to GOD, and obtaine foregiueneſſe of him: and that in the ende it ſhall ouerthrowe them vtterly. Let vs then bee better aduiſed, and though we ſeeme to be neuer ſo wel garded to ÿ worlde: yet let not that be a lette vnto vs to walke alwayes in the feare of God, knowing that all the fauor which we are able to purchaſe in the world is nothing at all; and that if God doe but blowe vppon it all vaniſheth away in the minute of an houre. That is the thing which we haue to mark vpon this text.

Nowe it is ſayde expreſly, That as well the king as the ſubiectes ſhall ſerue ſtraunge Gods, yea euen of ſtone and of woodde, that is to ſay, puppettes and Idolles. No doubt but that God by theſe wordes ment to vtter how dreadfull puniſhment was to come vppon the Iewes. For albeit that the nouriſhment that God giueth vs, and in like wiſe, all the Teſtimonies of his fatherly loue and goodneſſe appertayning to this tranſitorie life, bee to bee highly eſteemed: yet the moſt ſingular benefite that we receiue as long as wee liue in the worlde, is that we haue Religion well ordred, that his ſeruice be pure amongſt vs, that we call vppon him, and that it bee lawefull for vs to claime him as our GOD, and that wee be not berayde and defiled with ſuperſtition and Idolatrie. That (ſay I) is the principall good thing whereunto the faithfull ſhould aſpire: and we be verie blockes and beaſtes, if wee preferre not the ſame before all manner of riches and pleaſures, and before all our eaſe and commodities. Nowe then on the contrarie parte, the plague which ought to be moſt dreadfull to vs, and the horribleſt calamitie that can fall vppon vs, is to be depriued of Gods ſeruice, and to haue our mouth ſhutte, ſo as wee can not call vppon him: and not onely that, but alſo through Tyrannie to be compelled to honour Idolles, and to defile ourſelues with their abhominations, and to peruert that which GOD hath ordayned for the magnifying of his name amongeſt vs. When thinges be thus confounded, let vs vnderſtande that GOD is departed from vs, and declareth himſelfe to bee our mortall enemie, and hath quite forſaken and refuſed vs, and is loath that wee ſhould thencefoorth haue anie token or inkling at all, either of his preſence or of his fauour. And ſo, whereas Moſes ſayeth in this Text, That the Iewes ſhall ſerue ſtraunge Gods, he meaneth to threaten them more dreadfully than before. As if he ſhould ſay; Right greeuous will it be vnto you when you ſhall be famiſhed and want bread to eate, and water to drink, when your enemies ſhall robbe you of all your ſubſtaunce, and make hauocke of all your poſſeſſions, when ye ſhall pine away in griefe and ſorrowe, without any meane to helpe you: ſurely theſe wil be verie hard thinges for you, ſpecially when you can obtaine no fauour of your enemies, who ſhall be as wilde beaſtes againſt you: but yet is all this nothing in compariſon of the other curſe, that whereas in ſteede of honoring the liuing GOD, and of confeſſing that he hath choſen you to be his people, (which is an immeaſurable bleſſing) in ſteede of ſuch thinges I ſay, you ſhould ſerue Idolles, and bee conuerſant amongeſt the ſuperſtitions of the Paynimes, and haue no more prayers neither Pſalmes nor Sacrifices, but be diſperſed and forlorne.

Nowe ſeeing that wee perceiue the naturall ſenſe of Moſes, let vs vnderſtande that amongſt all the bleſſinges of GOD which we enioy in this preſent life, this ought to be preferred aboue all the reſt: namely, to haue libertie to ſerue our GOD, and to make confeſſion of our faith, and to declare that wee bee his people, of his Church and of his flocke. Truely it is ſlenderly knowen: howbeit, it is not in vaine that we be admoniſhed thereof. Seeing then, that it hath beene the will of God to plant his Church amongeſt vs, and that we ſhould haue his worde and his ſacramentes, by the which he declareth that he dwelleth amongeſt vs: lette vs accept ſuch a bleſſing according as it is worthye: It will ſerue vs to a double vſe. Firſt of all, when wee fare the better by the doctrine that is preached vnto vs euery day, ſuch a treaſure periſheth not but through our owne vnthankefulneſſe: as wee ſee that manie folke thinke it ynough to bee at ſermons, and it ſeemeth vnto them, that God hath his duetie, ſo they haue vſed ſome ceremonie. But in the meane while the ſeede of life doeth periſh without yeelding any fruite. To the ende therefore that we may apply the bleſſing that GOD beſtoweth on vs, to this vſe: when as wee haue libertie to heare his doctrine, and to bee trayned therein, and haue the Sacramentes for an eſtabliſhment of our faith, and may declare that it is the liuing God whome wee worſhippe and that hee gouerneth neth vs: I ſay, let the ſame profite vs; and ſo will it, if we acknowledge that our Lord can not beſtowe on vs any greater bleſſing than that is. And in the meane whyle we will take it patiently if other thinges doe faile vs: as where many want their commodities, let them not be greeued at the children of this worlde, which haue their delightes, and do triumph, weltring themſelues in their earthly pleaſures; if the children of God haue not the ſame, let them knowe that they enioy a thing which recompenſeth double, yea an hundreth folde: that is, that they can ſerue God. For to what purpoſe is it, that theſe wretched people which dwell in papiſtrie may lye ſlumbring in their neaſtes, and in the meane while be baniſhed from the kingdome of GOD, and that Chriſt Ieſus himſelfe and his worde be baniſhed from the countrey wherein they dwel? What auayleth it, that they bee ſerued in their houſes, and in the meane while bee not ſuffered to ſerue GOD? What auayleth it, that they haue whereof to eate and drinke till they burſt, and in the meane while be ſtarued for want of ghoſtly foode? What auaileth it, that they be in honour and credite, and in the meane while be conſtrayned to defile themſelues with theſe trecherous dealinges whereby GOD is deſpiſed, and his honour ſpoyled, and conueyed ouer to Idolles, and they be guiltie thereof? Alas: is not this a curſed ſtate? Let vs therefore take it patiently, albeit that we we be had in contempt to the worldewarde, and counted as vnderlings and caſtawayes, not hauing our eaſe, nor that which our fleſhe deſireth: ſeeing that GOD giueth vs this ſpecial libertie, that we may purely worſhippe him and ſerue him, and be deliuered from this curſed ſeruitude of Idolles; let vs be contented, and eſteeme this ſayde benefite, according as it is worthie, ſo as wee be not grieued towarde them that enioy the goods of this worlde, and in he meane while are deſtitute of the grace of God, which remaineth amongſt vs.

Beſides this, heere is a warning that ſeeing God hath put vs in poſſeſſion and fruition of this libertie, we muſt take good heede that wee bee not depriued thereof through our owne leaudeneſſe: for this threatning which was made to the Iewes, is in likewiſe directed vnto vs. Let vs vnderſtande therefore, that ſeeing we haue the Goſpell preached vnto vs, if it preuaile not with vs, God muſt deliuer vs into the handes of other teachers when wee ſhall haue refuſed to obey him. And in verie deede, wee may not thinke that the horrible confuſion which is in the Popedome, befalleth for any other cauſe, than that whereas they haue beene taught the pure doctrine of the Goſpell, yet they haue beene rebelles to God, and haue not bounde their neckes to beare his yoke; and therefore GOD could not otherwiſe doe, than deliuer them ouer to ſuch Tyrannie as wee ſee. And truely the ſame was tolde them aforehand by Saint Paule: It is good reaſon (ſayeth hee) that the worlde, ſeeing that it will not beleeue the truth, ſhould obey lies: and that they which would not be ſubiect to the liuing God, ſhoulde be obedient to the creature, euen to the Idolles, which be nothing. Beholding therefore the examples before our eyes, and hearing the threatning as it lyeth heere: let vs learne, whileſt GOD doeth keepe vs in his ſchoole, ſo to walke in his feare, and awe, as we may not bee bereft of the welfare which we nowe enioy; but that God may rather augment it, and cauſe it to preuaile. Moreouer let vs marke that they which doe ſerue Idolles, ſhall not bee excuſed therefore, although the ſame be a puniſhment of God. We knowe that one ſinne is puniſhed by an other, according as it is ſpoken in diuerſe Textes of ſcripture: and as we ſee it ſpecially auowed in the firſt Chapter to the Romanes, That they which ſerued not GOD in giuing themſelues wholely to cleanneſſe of life, ſhall be ſhaken off and giuen ouer to al maner of ſhamefull luſtes, and haue no more vnderſtanding to diſcerne betwixt euill and good, than brute beaſtes, but ſhall runne into all manner of infamie. Hereby Saint Paule doth very well ſhew that when GOD giueth vs heade to bee plunged in the depth of our iniquities, it is for that we ſhould be the more guiltie before him. They therefore which worſhippe Idolles, notwithſtanding that they be compelled thereto, and doe ſigh and would faine be at libertie: yet ceaſe they not to offende God: and thereby they ſhould vnderſtande the better, howe haynous their ſinnes bee, ſeeing that they muſt receiue ſuch correction for them. As howe? Whereas I ſhould glorifie my God, I muſt offende him, he is faine to caſt me off, becauſe I am not worthie to ſerue him, and he muſt depriue mee of the liberty and mean to dedicate my ſelfe wholly to his obedience. Let all them therefore that be in the captiuitie of poperie and mingled amongſt the ſuperſtitious, vnderſtande that the vengeaunce of GOD lieth vppon them, and that they ſhalbe more and more guiltie for their ſeruing of Idolles. It is a poore reply for them to ſay, we doe it not willingly, wee wiſh that it might pleaſe God that the right and pure Religion were ouer all: but for all this, our Lorde doeth not exempt them from condemnation. And he is the competent Iudge. Let vs therefore reſt vppon his worde: and ſeeke no more ſtartingholes, but let them that indure ſuch a ſtate, vnderſtande that it is nowe time or neuer, to turne to God, foraſmuch as they bee as good as drowned therein, and haue a token of his wrath, againſt them, in that he is gone farre away from them. Therefore let them thinke thereuppon, and bee moued therewith to the quicke: according as the meaning of GOD is in this Text, and as we haue touched it heretofore.

Rom.1,24.

Nowe Moſes ſayeth: That this people ſhall bee a gazing ſtocke, and an example, and a byworde, and a skoffing ſtock vnto the nations, amongeſt whom they ſhall bee diſperſed. Heere our Lorde ſheweth that as his goodneſſe ſhoulde be knowen in the people of Iſraell, and euery man ſhould reioyce in the ſeede of Abraham, ſo ſhoulde the verie ſame people be abhorred and deteſted. The promiſe was thus: Al Nations ſhall be bleſſed Gen.22.18. in thy ſeede. The trueth is that we muſt reſort to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, which is the verie bonde of the ſeede of Abraham; or elſe this bleſſing hath no place, nor grounde to ſtande vpon. Yet notwithſtanding, they which were deſcended of the race of Abraham, ſhoulde haue beene bleſſed of GOD, ſo as they might haue been an example, that euery one deſiring grace might haue ſayde, O God take pitie vppon me, as vpon the children of Abraham, whome hee hath choſen and adopted. Such was the promiſe. See heere the threatning that was layde againſt it, that ſeeing GOD did ſmite ſo rigorouſly vpon the people whome hee hadde choſen, men might bee aſtoniſhed at it and thinke thus with themſelues: Is it poſſible that they whome GOD hath choſen, ſhould now be caſt off, and be perſecuted and throwen vnder foote with all manner of reproch? And hereuppon men may ſay: O God keepe mee that I fall not to ſuch caſe as this people is in, or elſe when they intende to curſe, they might ſay, GOD doe vnto thee as hee hath doone to theſe vile Iewes. This much is to be vnderſtoode of this place.

Nowe let vs marke that whereas the holy ghoſt ſpake thus by the mouth of Moſes, it was not his meaning that this doctrine ſhoulde ſerue onely for two thouſand yeares or thereabouts, which time the law laſted vntill the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: but ẏ we at this day muſt apply the ſame to our owne vſe: that inſomuch as God is come nigh vs, wee muſt walke in his feare in deſpite of Sathan, ſo as his goodneſſe may ſhine in vs, and be perceyued to remaine vpon vs: and contrariwiſe that when wee bee vnthankfull, and our God is as it were mocked of vs, it behoueth vs then to thinke thus: Wel may wee ſhrinke backe, but wee ſhall gaine nothing by all our ſhiftes: for in the ende wee ſhall not faile to come to ſhame. Verily wee ſee how Eſa.52.5. it is ſayde that the name of God ſhalbe blaſphemed amongſt ẏ miſbeleeuers, becauſe that they which were counted faithfull before, bee ſo caſt downe, as GOD may ſeeme to haue falſified his promiſe and to haue deluded them, ſo farre foorth muſt the vengeaunce of GOD extend. Nowe ſeeing it is ſo, let vs learne to ſubmit ourſelues to our Lorde while hee allureth vs vnto him with gentleneſſe, and ſo to holde vs vnder his obedience, as we may not become a byword and a ieſting ſtocke to all the wicked, which ſeeke nothing but to blaſpheme GOD and to make a mocke of vs. Let vs (I ſay) looke well to that.

Moreouer, where Moſes ſayeth, That GOD will thus diſperſe his people: it ſerueth ſtill to confirme his matter, to the ende that the Iewes, ſhoulde not thinke that they were carried away by a ſtorme, as it were by happe hazarde; but that they ſhould vnderſtande that it is the hand of GOD that is vppon them: and that foraſmuch as this threatening preuayled not with them, therefore the thing that is happened vnto them ſhould ſtande vs in ſome ſteede. For looke what vengeance we heare GOD ſpeake of in this place; the ſame we ſee executed before our eyes. Is it not a horrible thing that the Iewes be abhorred at this day throughout the whole worlde? Yet were they the people whom GOD hadde ſanctified for himſelfe, they were his heritage, they were the royal prieſthoode, according as they bee termed in Exodus, and Exod.19.6. they were the bleſſed Generation, and yet for 1.Pet.2.9. all this, they be reiected of all men, inſomuch that men doe as it were ſhudder to behold them as though they ought to be cutte off from mankinde. If it be ſayde, O this may verie well happen to the faithfull, and the like befell euen to the holy Patriarkes; it did ſo in deede, howbeit after an other ſorte. For the faithfull may well be put in feare, according as it is ſayde in the prophet Eſay, that folke ſhall point at them Eſa.8.18. with the finger, and ſhunne them afarre off: and that is becauſe GOD is not knowen, and his grace is deſpiſed. But whereas we ſpeake of the Iewes at this day, it is very well ſeene that God is againſt them: for they be as rotten members, and their bodie is torne in peeces, and there remaineth not any token of this bleſſing which God hadde beſtowed on them. Therefore when we beholde ſuch a lookingglaſſe, let vs learne to make our commoditie thereof, and lette the example of them ſerue to ſeale this doctrine and to ratifie it, that wee tempt not GOD, and that wee continue not hardehearted ſo long till he bee faine to wrappe vs vp in reproch with all the reſt of the nations of the worlde. After this, Moſes returneth to that which hee hadde touched afore: which is, That the people hauing Deut.28.38 tylled their groundes and their poſſeſſions, ſhall not drinke of the wine of their grapes, nor eate of the corne of their harueſt, nor enioy the fruites of their trees. This hath beene ſpoken afore: but there is heere a certaine difference to be noted. For therefore God had ſhewed, that when the Iewes had laboured for corne and wine, the enemies ſhould come and take all away, and that all the ſame ſhould be made a pray: but nowe he ſayth, that without any force of man, and without any troubles of warre, they ſhould neuertheleſſe not faile to bee famiſhed, and to bee deſtitute of all thinges that might doe them good. Why ſo? Becauſe that wormes, beaſtes, Caterpillers, locuſtes, and all other thinges ſhall eate vppe the fruite of the earth. Loe what armies God ſtirreth vp againſt the wretched. Againe, on the other ſide, there ſhal come blaſting and ſindging, ſo that all muſt needes periſh: albeit that men touch not the Iewes, but let them alone in reſt, yet ſhall they vnderſtande that GOD hath other meanes to puniſh them, and that hee is alwayes armed infinite wayes. That is the thing which GOD meant to declare. And therefore lette vs take warning by this Text, that when wee haue eſcaped one plague, GOD will finde out an other for vs: and if we ſtep aſide to the left hand, & he neuertheles is armed againſt vs, and before wee haue gone three paſes, hee ſtoppeth vs of our way. Loe how men preuaile, when they ſeeke lurkingholes; according as we Esa.29.15. ſee how the Prophete Eſay mocketh them that thinke by their ſubtiltie to eſcape the hande of God. Dreame on, dreame on your fill (ſaith he) yet ſhall the curſe always ouertake you. And in like caſe, althogh we haue no enemies to trouble vs, & to riſe vp againſt vs to ſpoile our ſubſtance: yet let vs vnderſtand ỷ God hath other meanes, which we know not, for to bereaue vs of ỷ which he hath put into our hands, and that we ſhall be abaſhed, to thinke how wee haue wherewith to ſatisfie vs, and yet that the bread ſhall be pluckt out of our mouthes: and that when we thinke to drinke, we ſhall be drie. And whereof commeth that? Euen of this, that it is our Lorde which giueth increaſe to the corne when it is ſowen in the ground: It is he that ſendeth the Grapes; It is hee alſo that cauſeth all thinges to proſper for our nouriſhment. We be taught by this text, firſt of all, that when we till the fieldes, ſowe them & reape them, we muſt make prayers alwayes vnto God to bleſſe the earth, that wee may be fed through his grace; and wee muſt holde it for a certayntie, that it is his peculiar office to feede vs like as a father doeth his litle children. Thus much concerning that poynt. Whereof becauſe I haue treated more at large heretofore, it ſufficeth as nowe to touch it in one word.

Now furthermore let vs marke, that whereas God ſpeaketh here of Locuſtes, wormes, Caterpillers, & other beaſts, & wheras he ſpeaketh of blaſting & of burning which cõmeth therof, hee ſheweth ỷ he hath men of warre of a ſtraunge ſort, when hee vouchſafeth not to doe men good: & this alſo ſerueth to pull downe the pride of men. For if we be ſpoyled by the enemies: verie well (will men ſay) this was doone by violence and plaine force. As for example when warre is, the whole countrie is ſpoyled, the richeſt foolke become beggers: and all this is wited vppon the warre, man is not blamed for it. But when it commeth to paſſe by other accidentes, ſo as men wote not by what meane their ſubſtãce is waſted, though they ſee it melte away before their eyes, one yeare by haile, an other yeare by froſt, and one while one way & another while an other, ſo as al thinges conſume betwixt their handes; God by this meane maketh it more manifeſt vnto men, that hee meaneth to confounde them vtterly. Exod 7.8.9.10. And indeed if we marke the courſe that he kept with the Egyptians, wee ſhall perceiue it much better. For we diſcerne Gods iugdementes better in other men than in our ſelues. If God had ſtirred vp a great armie againſt the Egyptiãs, in ſteede of the lyce and vermine: they would ſtill haue continued in their pride and preſumption: and albeit that they had beene a hundred times diſcomfited, yet woulde they not haue fayled to haue beene ſtiffenecked ſtill. When they were perſecuted with lice, and that there were ſuch Souldiers in Egypt; they ſhoulde haue beene aſhamed. Therefore let vs well note, that God by ſending men ſuch chaſtiſementes as be ſet downe here doth warne them to thinke on their frailtie. If Herod had beene ſlaine with a thunder bolt from heauen; it had not beene ſo fit a puniſhment for the blaſphemie which he committed in ſuffering himſelfe to be called a God, Act.12.23. and not a man, as when God cauſed him to bee eaten and conſumed with vermine, till hee was as rotten as coulde bee, inſomuch as hee was compelled by that diſeaſe to ſay (as hee that liued at that time and was his familiar beareth Ioſeph. de Ant.17.lib. witnes:) Oh ſee here a goodly God, which is ſo rotten that he is inforced to feele that the hand of God doeth perſecute him for his pride. Let vs therefore marke well, that God, after he had threatened the Iewes to ſende them enemies, which by violence and force of armes ſhoulde ſpoyle the countrie of all manner of foode: now hee addeth moreouer that although they were not vexed nor troubled at al by mans hand, nor anie thing were attẽpted by man againſt their poſſeſſions and lands; yet notwithſtanding they ſhoulde not boote themſelues by their labours, nor by the well tilling of their groundes. And why? Becauſe the vermine ſhall waſt all. And hee ſaith againe expreſſely, Thou ſhalt ſow much and gather nothing, whereby hee ſheweth that when men make neuer ſo good prouiſion aforehande, thinking vndoubtedly that all ſhall goe as they woulde wiſhe, yet ſhall they bee neuer the better for it. And it ſerueth to this end that we ſhoulde not fall aſleepe when wee ſee fayre likelihoodes, according as wee bee commonly woont to deſpiſe God: as who ſhould ſay, that if there bee a good ſeedtime, wee are paſt danger, and God had no more to deale with the thinges that bee vppon the earth, or if we haue reapt and laide vp the Corne in our barnes, it ſhoulde make vs to be the more proude, becauſe we ſee no likelihoode of any more daunger. But in ſteade of this, wee ſhoulde euermoe haue an eye to Godwarde, ſaying, Lorde, beholde, the earth waiteth for raine as though it were a thirſte, and when thou giueſt it, it is to make it to bring foorth ſuſtenance for our nouriſhment. Againe, ſuch ſtormes might fall from heauen as woulde waſhe away all from vs, and one warre woulde be enough to bereaue vs of all that wee haue. Thus is all in thy hande O Lorde, and wee muſt depend vppon thy mercie, and bee all our life long in thy cuſtodie; or elſe we muſt periſhe, and all the prouiſions that we haue ſhall profite vs nothing. Thus then muſt we call vppon God with diligence, and walke in his feare, ſeeing he is ſo gratious as to bee our forſterfather, and vouchſafeth to ſtoope ſo low vnto vs. Therefore hath Moſes verie wel declared in this text, ỷ wee muſt not be beguiled by the goodly likelihoods & faire prouiſions which we are able to haue. As for example, when we ſee ỷ corne to bee faire vpon the ground, we muſt not bee too luſtie as though all were won, no not euen when the corne is gathered in. For God will be then called vpon, according as we are bound to make our dayly ſute vnto him, ſaying, Giue vs our daily breade O Lorde, that day by day hee may feede Matt. 6.11.

vs. For albeit we haue neuer ſo much to day, yet to morrowe we may ſtarue. For when it pleaſeth God, he is able not only to deſtroy ÿ corne and wine in the fieldes; but alſo he can make thẽ to bee worth nothing, euen when we haue them in our garners and Cellers. Nay, we heare the threatnings that he maketh, ſaying, You ſhall carie corne to the mill by meaſure, and ÿ bread to the ouen by weight, and yet for all that, you Ezec.4.16. ſhall be ſtil emptie and hungrie, when you haue eaten neuer ſo much, there ſhall be no vertue at al in the meat, neither ſhal you be ſufficed therewith. Seeing our Lord telleth vs that he hath ſo manie wayes to famiſh vs, let vs not bee harde hearted: but let it rather waken vs, that we may altogether depende vpon him, and walke in his feare, and be his children, if we intend that hee ſhall ſtill continue to do the office of a father toward vs. That is the effect of the thinges which we haue to remember. Here againe Moſes repeateth theſe threatenings, whereof he had ſpoken afore, ſaying: That the Iewes and their linage ſhall be caried away into captiuitie. Now certainly there can nothing more bitter happen vnto men, than to ſee their children taken away by force, eaten, and deuoured by the enemies, and cruelly dealt withal: they had rather to haue buried them a hundred times. Now then let vs marke in fewe words that God meant to declare in this text, that although he haue beene neuer ſo bountifull towardes vs, and filled vs with his bleſſinges, ſo as we be fenced in on all ſides: yet he can verie well bereaue vs of them all againe, and that plague ſhal be much more greeuous vnto vs, than if we had neuer knowẽ, what his goodneſſe meaneth. Wherefore the largelier ÿ God beſtoweth his bleſſinges vpon vs, yea euen thoſe bleſſings that concerne this tranſitorie life, let vs looke that wee bee alwayes ſo much the more prouoked to honour him and to ſerue him. For he for his part, will not ceaſe to do vs good, ſo we turne not tayle, & giue him ouer. But ſeeing he allureth vs ſo gentlie, if we be willing to come vnto him; let vs aſſure our ſelues that his hande ſhall euermore be ſtretched forth to augment the giftes and bleſſinges that we haue receiued of him.

In the end he returneth to the matter which we ſaw heretofore. All theſe curſes ſhal come vppon thee, they ſhal ſeaſe vpon thee, & thou ſhalt be caught and beſieged by them on all ſides, vntill that God hath quite conſumed thee: euen becauſe thou haſt not hearkened to his voice, to obey his ſtatutes and commandementes, which he hath giuen thee. I haue tolde you herebefore howe that Moſes hath oftentimes ſhewed to the Iewes, that no euill or aduerſitie came vpon them but by the hande of God. But it behooueth vs alſo to knowe the cauſe. True it is that ſometime God doth viſite vs, and we cannot perceiue the cauſe thereof: for hee doeth it not for our ſins, not for that he might not doe it, but for that he ſpareth vs. Yet is this alwayes to be looked vnto, that when we ſuſteyne any afflictions, we muſt thinke on our ſins, & enter into examination of them to condemne our ſelues before God: yea & we muſt not tary ſo long: but we muſt benefit our ſelues by al manner of calamities which we ſee throughout ÿ worlde, knowing ÿ God puniſheth mens ſins by ſuch meanes: and thereupon bridling our ſelues from the like. The matter then whereunto Moſes doth nowe returne, is, that hauing ſhewed vs howe it is the Lord that withdraweth all maner of bleſſinges from vs, it is he that curſeth our poſſeſſions, and the fruites of the earth, it is he that ſendeth vermine, ſtormes and tempeſts, to deſtroy all: it is he ÿ giueth power to our enemies: hee ſheweth wherfore all this is done: to wit, becauſe we haue rebelled againſt him, becauſe we haue deſpiſed his law. That is ÿ verie cauſe why theſe plagues of vengeance do ſo purſue vs. Now then, let vs beare in minde the doctrine which hath beene ſufficiently ſet foorth hereaboue: which is, that when God doeth afflict vs, we muſt ſhutte our mouthes from replying or entring into plea: for we ſhal win nothing by ſtanding in contention with him. Nay rather we muſt condemne our ſelues, confeſſing that hee dealeth iuſtlie. Although it be his will to proue our patience, and to trie vs to the vttermoſt; yet notwithſtanding we muſt yeeld ourſelues as guiltie before him, & vnderſtand that our ſinnes deſerue to bee thus roughly handled at his hands. Here is wherwith to cauſe all ÿ blaſphemies, murmurings and cõplaints to ceaſe which are daily heard in ÿ world. Whẽ there happeneth any aduerſitie or anie other afflictiõ, it is to the end we ſhold think on ÿ ſinnes that we haue committed. Marke that for one point. And whereas mention is made of the commandements and ſtatutes which God hath ordeined, the ſame expreſſely and purpoſely cõcerneth vs. For albeit that the Papiſtes haue the law, yet is it buried in them: the Iewes (as ſaith 2.Cor.3.14. Saint Paul) haue a vaile before their eyes, ſo as they vnderſtand nothing. The Turkes walke in their owne ignorance, ſo doe all the reſt of the heathen. Now our Lord doth inlighten vs, and ſhew vs the way. There is therefore a more vilanous rebellion in vs, when we do not according as we be taught, and alſo wee deſerue that God ſhoulde vſe greater rigor toward vs, and powre vppon vs the plagues of vengeance which bee here conteyned. Therefore let vs benefite our ſelues by the things that are ſaide here, concerning the commandements & ſtatutes that God hath ordeined. And ſeeing it is ſo, ÿ hee ſpeaketh dayly vnto vs, declaring vnto vs his wil ſo familiarly: let euerie of vs ſubmit himſelfe obediently therunto. And whereas Moſes ſaith further, That theſe curſes ſhall catch holde vpon vs, and that wee ſhalbe hemmed in round about by them, vntil they haue conſumed vs: it is a warning to vs ÿ we ſhould not be ſelfe willed againſt God: for wel may we ſeeke ſtarting holes: but it ſhal nothing boote vs, (as hath beene ſaide heretofore) for the end ſhal be euer vnhappie for vs. And therfore let vs remẽber the complaint that God maketh by his Prophet Eſay. He ſaith in that text (as we heard yeſterday) Iſa.1.6. that from the crowne of the heade to the ſole of the foot, God muſt needs ſmite hard vpon all them that haue rebelled. And hauing ſpoken ſo by his Prophete Eſay, he ſaith: What may I doe more? I haue not ceaſed to chaſtice my children: inſomuch that from the crowne of the head to the ſole of the foote, I haue ſo beaten them, that there is no whole nor ſounde place, and yet they continue hardhearted ſtill. Alas, what ſhall I doe? I muſt cruſhe them and breake them all too peeces. Then let vs be afraid to ſtande ſo wilful froward againſt our God, and let vs preuent the condemnatiō here pronounced. And ſo ſoone as God beginneth to correct vs, let vs beſtirre vs to returne vnto him, yea and let vs not tarie ſo long neither, but being admoniſhed by his worde, let vs fall to bewaile our ſinnes, and to be ſorie for them, and moreouer let vs aske forgiueneſſe of them in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowlegement of our ſins: beſeeching him not to ſuffer vs to bee ſo blinded in this mortall life, as not to know that al yͤ miſeries & wretchednes which we ſuffer, be warnings giuen vnto vs, to make vs to thinke vppon ourſelues & vpon our liues: & alſo to moue vs to repentance. And therfore that if we be afflicted at his hand, it may not make vs to blaſpheme his holy name, nor moue vs to impatiencie: but rather taine vs, ſo as we may fare the better by al his corrections, and turne againe vnto him. And that for aſmuch as we ſee the wretched world at this day to be ſo full of wretchednes and miſeries, as is horrible, and alſo do behold the wrath of God for the ſinnes that raigne therein: it may be a meane to hold vs in awe, praying God not to vſe any ſuch rigour toward vs: but rather that we fleeing for refuge to his mercie in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, may be touched with true repentance: & increaſe and proſper more and more therein, vntill that, beeing deliuered from all our imperfections and ſins, our God do cloath vs with his righteouſnes vnto the which wee bee daylie called. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxv. of March, 1556.

The CLx. Sermon which is the eight vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

46. And theſe things ſhalbe for tokens and woonders to thee and to thy ſeede for euer, 47 Becauſe thou haſt not ſerued the Lorde thy God with ioye, and with a good heart, for the aboundance of all maner of thinges.

48 And thou ſhalt ſerue thine Enemy, whom the Lorde thy God will ſend againſt thee: I ſay thou ſhalt ſerue him in hunger and thirſt, in nakedneſſe and in all maner of want. And he will lay a yoke of yron vpon thy necke, vntill he haue rooted thee out.

49 The Lord will bring a people vpon thee from a farre, and from the end of the earth, which ſhal fly as the Eagle: a people whoſe language thou ſhalt not vnderſtand.

50 A people of a ſhameles countenance, which wil not reuerence the perſon of the aged, nor take pitie vpon the young.

BEcauſe that things bee ſo greatly confuſed in this worlde, that it is heard to diſcerne who they bee whome God meaneth to puniſhe for their ſins; or to whō hee meaneth to ſhewe his loue: Moſes ſayth expreſſely, that God will ſend ſuch apparant tokens vpon them that bee ſtubborne againſt him, as ſhall bee wonderfull to them: Inſomuch as they ſhall be compelled to vnderſtande, that the ſame commeth to paſſe neither by fortune, nor by common meanes; but that they bee extraordinarie thinges, and that God doth ſhewe foorth his power therein. It is true (as wee haue ſaide heretofore) that at the firſt ſight it cannot bee well diſcerned, who they be whome God loueth, and who they bee whome hee miſliketh: becauſe that (as Salomon ſaith) both the good and the euil is common vnto all. Hee that ſerueth God doeth ſome times proſper; and oftentimes hee is afflicted: And ſo is a deſpiſer of God alſo. This is the cauſe ſaith he yͤ men become hardhearted, for it ſeemeth vnto them yͤ they win nothing by ſeruing of god: or rather that it is but loſt labor. Moreouer it is oftē Eccle.9.a.

ſeene that the children of God bee ſometimes more hardly handled than the moſt wicked in ẏ worlde, and therefore it is to bee gathered after carnall capacitie, that it is much better to deſpiſe God. Pſal.73.2. Dauid confeſſed, that hee ſtaggered as vpon the Ice, when he beheld the courſe of thinges to be ſuch as that the good, and they that endeuored to walke in all maner of integritie, muſt be conſtrayned to drinke the water of troubles, to eate the bread of heauineſſe, and to moiſten themſelues with teares: and in the meane while the wicked, which ceaſe not to doe euill, to liue at their eaſe and in pleaſure: whereby it ſhould ſeeme that God loueth them. And what a dealing were that? But our Lorde declareth in this place, that in the ende he will make it apparant to thē that be corrected at his hand, that their ſinnes are the cauſe why they ſuffer ſmarte, howbeit that it be not ſo quickely perceiued. We haue ſeene heretofore among other Deut.28.44 curſes which Moſes denounced, ẏ they which caſt off the worde of God be conſtrayned to borow, and to be euer in neede: and that the others which ſhoulde borowe of them, haue wherewith to help thēſelues. But we ſee how al the children of God fall into neceſſitie, and find not any ẏ wil comfort thē: they make many turns before they meete with a man that wil vſe gentlenes toward them: and this ſeemeth cleane contrarie to the other. But yet doeth God exerciſe his people after ẏ maner: and in that reſpect it is that I ſaid, that when we bee afflicted, whether it bee with pouertie, or with ſickeneſſe, or anie other way, we muſt not fail to enter into accoūt with God, that is, to examine our life, and to ſee whether wee haue not committed manie faultes or no: & then ſhal euerie one of vs finde himſelfe faultie.

Againe on the otherſide, if wee perceiue not the cauſe why that God is mooued to vſe rigour towardes vs: let vs content our ſelues, that hee knoweth the ſame to be profitable for vs: and ẏ if we had not alreadie offended him, yet were we in way to do it: and he hath preuented it: and that all theſe corrections bee to bring vs lowe, to the end that we ſhoulde walke vnder him in feare, and that our fleſhe ſhoulde not be ouerluſtie, as it is thereunto enclined: for God doeth ſome times foreſee the pride of a man, and then he taketh away the occaſions and the obiectes. Beſides this he knoweth that a man will be too iolie in his pompes and delightes; and therefore he cutteth off the occaſion aforehande, whereby the partie is letted, ſo as hee cannot doe as hee woulde. Seeing that our Lord prouideth aforehand for our welfare after ſuch manner, let vs thinke on the faultes which we haue earſt committed. Moreouer if there were no further meaning in it, than to exhort vs to repentance; euen that were much: but we haue alwayes to conſider, howe God cannot too much prouoke vs to come vnto him: for euerie ſtrawe is enough to ſtay vs in this world, and in the meane while wee haue no minde of the heauenly life; or if we thinke thereon, it is ſo coldly, that our trauelling towardes it is not with ſo earneſt affection as it ought to be; and therefore God is faine to deale with vs by manie afflictions. After this manner ought euerie of vs to behaue himſelfe toward him. As touching others, we may not at the firſt daſh condemne them whome God doth puniſhe: but we muſt remember that which is ſaide in the Pſalme; Bleſſed is the man that deemeth wiſely of ẏ afflicted in the day of his trouble. Pſal.41.1. But wee be wonderfull haſtie in that point. As ſoone as wee ſee a poore man in miſerie and wretchedneſſe, O ſay wee, God plagueth him, and he hath deſerued it: we be in that caſe verie raſhe Iudges. If God ſmite vs; after that he hath beſtowed many ſtripes vppon vs, we will hardely remember that wee haue ſinned: but as concerning others, our tongues be verie quicke to condemne them. But we ſhoulde much rather encline to gentleneſſe: as for example, when we ſee the faithfull to ſuffer, we ſhould thinke thus: Behold howe God dealeth with his children, inſtructing vs thereby, that there is no reſt in this world, and that our happineſſe is in heauen, and it is thither that wee ought to lifte vp our hearts. And againe, if this happen to the greene Luk.23.31. trees, what ſhall become of the drie wood? If God ſpare not them which haue indeuoured to followe his worde, as appeareth vnto vs, what Eſa.51.21. ſhall become of the ſkorners thereof, as ſayth the Prophet? If iugdement beginne at the houſe of God: miſerable then ſhall they be which haue hardened themſelues againſt him. Saint Peter 1.Pet.4.17. alſo doeth admoniſhe vs to put the ſame in vre. And ſo yee ſee howe wee ought to deale in this matter. Moreouer, if wee haue patience, and meekeneſſe and bee apt to bee taught, it is certaine that wee ſhall euermore feele a taſt of the goodneſſe of God in the middeſt of the afflictions which hee ſendeth vs. True it is that oftentimes wee ſhall bee put in feare by them. There will be a kinde of vnquietneſſe in vs which will ſo vexe vs that we ſhall thinke our ſelues vtterly forlorne vnleſſe G O D withdrawe his hande very quicklie. If he prolong our afflictions; then we be altogether blancke, our courage faileth vs: ſo that if we be not held in with ẏ feare of God, and with patience, to be altogether quiet vnder his hande: we be euermore wandering. But if we holde vs ſtill there, then ſhall wee vnderſtand ẏ he chaſtiſeth vs in his mercie and goodneſſe: according as it is ſaide in the Prophet Abacuc, Abac.2,4. That the faithfull after they haue beene in heauineſſe, doe in deede vnderſtande, that God doeth neuertheleſſe vphold them, and forgetteth them not but doeth alwayes temper & mitigate their afflictions, ſo as they feele his fatherly goodnes towardes them, and therewithall doe comfort themſelues, and can well ſay with Dauid, Lord if thou wilt bee angrie, it Pſal.30.6. is but for a little while: but thy goodnes endureth all our life long. Beholde (I ſay) here wee may alwayes haue matter wherewith to cheere our ſelues, and to reioyce in the middeſt of our afflictions: ſo as we may perceiue indeede that our Lorde will not faile to be mercifull vnto vs, notwithſtanding that hee vſeth ſome rigour towarde vs, to trye our patience, and to quicken vs vppe to come vnto him, and to labour to the celeſtiall life. But we muſt euermore haue an eye to the ende, according as Dauid ſaith. Pſal.37.1. And therfore in the pſalme 37. hee exhorteth vs not to be greeued at ẏ proſperitie of the wicked: for he knoweth that our eies be as it were daſled. When we ſee a wicked body to be at eaſe and to haue all wiſhes, we ſtreight waies conclude that God hath no regard to deale with mē according as they be worthy: by meanes wherof we ſtagger and are in ſuch perplexitie as we wote not what ſhal becom of vs. Now Dauid ſaith, that in thinking ſo, he played the beaſt, and was out of his wittes, and hee confeſſeth that hee was in that point, bereft of reaſon and iudgement, affirming Pſal.73.22. that he did wrong to al the generation of Gods children, vntil he had looked into the Sanctuarie. It is true, that in the thirty & ſeuenth Pſalme which I alleadged here before, he ſaith, I paſſed by and ſawe the wicked floriſh and growe high like a Cedar tree of Lebanon: and after that I had turned me about, he was cut downe as a tree that had no more left but ẏ drie ſtocke vpon the earth: ſo as there remained no ſigne of him at al. Such changes do we ſee in this world; but put ẏ caſe we ſawe none: yet muſt we enter into the Pſal.73.17. Sanctuarie of God, as it is ſaid in the threeſcore and thirteenth Pſalm. And there we muſt wayte patiently till God make it apparant vnto vs that al afflictions be profitable for his children: and that hee ſendeth them as medicines for their health: and contrariwiſe, ẏ the proſperitie which he permitteth to the contemners of his law and iuſtice, ſhall bee conuerted to their great confuſion. We muſt therefore learne to hold our wits and ſenſes in awe, that we wander not in the afflictions which God doth ſend vs.

But to returne to the purpoſe of Moſes: let vs note well howe hee ſaith that the puniſhmentes which God ſendeth vppon them that haue rebelled againſt him to the vttermoſt, and woulde not be corrected: ſhall be as tokens and wonders to them and to their poſteritie: that is to ſay, he wil puniſh them after a ſtraunge faſhion, and as hath not beene wonted amongeſt men: ſo as they ſhal be compelled in ſpite of their teeth to ſay: This is the verie hande of God. And indeed can there be a more beaſtly contempt of God found, than that which was in Pharao? Hee was a man not onely drunken with pride, but altogether ſenſeleſſe: he was a man that deſpiſed the maieſtie of God, and a man ſo rebellious, as was not in any wiſe to be dealt withall. When he heard Moſes and Aaron ſpeake, he laughed them to ſkorn: his feeling of the firſt ſtrokes coulde not make him to yeelde. And in the ende hee needed not a Prophet to admoniſh him: for he himſelfe could Exod.8.19. ſay, Surely this is the finger of God. Wee ſee therefore howe God doeth oftentimes expreſſe his power in ſuch wiſe, that euen the moſt fierce are conſtrained to perceiue and to thinke that there is ſome maieſtie in heauen, which afore that time they had not accompted of, and thereupon to enter into conſideration of their ſinnes and to confeſſe them, and to be the more liuely touched therewith. That is it which Moſes meaneth here concerning ſignes and woonders.

This matter is worthie to be marked. For (as I haue ſaide) if God beginne to puniſh men, it is euermore ſaide to be fortune, this is agreeable to our ſtate, (ſay they:) we know that mans life is ſubiect to much wretchednes, and in ẏ meane while the hand of God is not regarded. And though he double it, yet do men continue dull, & ſeeme as though they could euermore hide them, & ſcape away, becauſe they enter not into their conſciences to ſearche out the ſinnes that be there, but are loath to knowe them, as if a man ſhould goe hide himſelfe in a darke corner of ſet purpoſe to ſhun the brightneſſe of the ſun at noone days. Euen ſo doe we in al the chaſtiſements which God doth ſend vs to warne vs of our ſins and to drawe vs to repentance. But in the end God doth augment his puniſhments in ſuch ſort, as they become miracles: that is to ſay, they exceede the common meaſure, order and courſe of nature, ſo as we might be rauiſhed with aſtoniſhment, and thereby perceiue that God doth then ſhewe himſelfe, as though his hand appeared vnto vs frō heauen. And that is the thing which he declareth more fully in the xxvi. Chapter of Leui. For after he hath pronoūced the ſentence vpon them that reiect the doctrine of ſaluation, he ſaith, I will ſend vpon you ſeuentimes as much, if I perceiue that nothing Leuit.26.8. do preuaile with you: If my puniſhing of you amend you not, I will ad there to ſeuentimes as much. And hee repeateth this ſentence againe in the end; & ſaith, If you will walke at al aduenture againſt me, I will walke alſo at all aduenture againſt you. Now this word, Aduenture, hath relation to the blockiſhnes that is in vs, which we haue touched here before. For we ſee very well the aduerſities that doe befall vs in this worlde, & wading yet further we confeſſe that it is God that puniſheth vs: but to thinke thereon in good earneſt, and to iudge euerie man himſelfe by calling our ſinnes to remembrance ſo often as God giueth any incling of them; it is the furtheſt part of our thought. Let euery man looke to himſelfe: How many afflictions haue we in the yere which ſhold be teſtimonies vnto vs of ẏ wrath of God, & as it were ſummons of apparance before him, warning vs to ſue to him for pardon, and to haue pitie vpon vs? Scarſely doth any one day paſſe, but that a man is warned fiue or ſixe times as if God ſhould ſay vnto him; Wretched creature, why haſt thou no minde of thy ſoule? Why haſt thou no care to beſeech me to receiue thee to mercie? But ſcarſe once in a moneth wil a mā enter into examination of his life to condemne himſelfe; and if we doe it, it is but coldly. But we ought to be ſo aſhamed and ſo vexed at the feeling of Gods wrath as though we ſaw hell lie open before our eyes. But wee ſee that very few doe thinke thereon: for euerie of vs forgetteth himſelfe. That is the thing which God meaneth by this worde of walking at all aduentures againſt vs. Yet doe wee follow on our courſe ſtill, as though no harme had touched vs, we ſwallowe vp our afflictions. They indeede trouble vs, when they pinch vs, at do we nothing but ſhake our eares (as they ſay) and followe ſtill our owne way . Then goe wee at all aduentures, yea euen with exceſſiue ouerweening, when we acknowledge not the hande of God, ne perceiue that hee is a iudge, to the ende that we might miſſelike of our ſinnes, and euerie man labour and indeuour to withdrawe himſelfe therefrom. Our Lorde therefore ſaith, I will come againſt you at all aduentures, as if he ſhould ſay, I will croſſe you and ouertwhart you, & thinke not to gaine anie thing either by your hardening of your heartes, and by your kicking againſt me, or by your dulneſſe in that yee perceiue not howe it is my hande that muſt bring you againe: No no, (ſaith hee) I will bee as ſtout and headſtrong as you, yea and more ſtout and headſtrong to. For I will come at all aduentures, I will let my plagues runne out at randon, ſo as I will breake your neckes, and beate you both backe and bellie, and that without pitie. Nowe we ſee howe much this word ought to wey with vs, where Moſes ſaith: That the plagues ſhall bee for tokens and wonders, to all skorners: inſomuch that when they haue bleared out their tongues at the threatenings of God, and haue nodded their heade againſt the firſt corrections which he ſendeth them, & haue bitten on the bridle: he proceedeth on ſtil & ceaſeth not to wring them, but driueth them in the end to come to a reckening do the worſt they can, & to ſay openly, It is the hand of God that preſſeth vs; theſe are the miracles, they be no ordinarie things nor according to the courſe of nature.

Now therfore, let vs learn, not to prouoke Gods wrath ſo far againſt vs; but let vs ſuffer ourſelues to be tamed by him; and let vs yeelde our ſelues conformable & gentle ſo ſoone as he hath ſummoned vs, let vs yeeld ourſelues guiltie without vſing any ſtartingholes: for we ſhall win nothing thereby. There is nothing better than to enter into pure and free confeſſion, ſaying, Lord what wilt thou do to theſe frail & wretched creatures? It is true yͤ we haue a hundred folde deſerued to be suncken: but yet for all that, wee flee vnto thy mercy: wherefore haue pitie vpon vs. When we haue thus condemned our ſelues, it is a meane to pacifie the anger of God, which thing will not be done by hardening of our hearts. For then he will euer more proceede farther, vntill hee haue brought vs to theſe ſignes and wonders, that be here mentioned. Again God muſt needs do the like alſo in reſpect of mens ſlouthfulnes & negligence, or rather vtter ſenſeleſnes. If wee could be ſubdued at yͤ firſt blow: God would take no pleaſure in laying plague vpon plague. But when he ſeeth that there is ſuch a kinde of ſtoutnes, and ſuch a preſumption in vs, that we wil not ſtoope nor bow our necks: he muſt needs hold on vntil he make vs to feel in very deed & after a ſtrange aner, that it is he before whom we muſt yeeld account. Let vs therfore marke wel how the ſtinate malice of the worlde is the cauſe why d ſendeth ſo ſtrange corrections to put vs in And if we conſidered well the ſtate of the at this day, it would make yͤ haires of our o ſtand vpright. Certainely they doe all ſigh at the feeling of the ſtripes, and they complain, howbeit not to any amendmẽt, but rather they bite on yͤ bridle: Inſomuch that when thoſe which be not altogether blockiſh do make compariſon of the preſent ſtate, with that which we haue ſeene before the wrath of God was on this wiſe prouoked; they ſee it as it were a ſeagulfe: & that ought to make vs afraid. And ſo let vs come backe againe to that which Moſes declareth, to wit; that God muſt needs haue found the world very rebellious & hardhearted when he augmẽteth his puniſhments in ſuch ſort: for it ſhoulde neuer come to that paſſe, were it not that men were otherwiſe vnreformable. Let vs not accuſe God of crueltie, when we ſee his rigor to exceed in puniſhing vs: but let vs acknowledge that our ſtubbornneſſe is ſo great, that our Lorde muſt needes handle vs after that faſhion: for otherwiſe he ſhould neuer ouermaſter vs.

That is the thing which we haue to beare in mind. Howbeit that is not al: for we muſt alwaies feare that which is to come. And ſith we ſaw that God hath thus increaſed his puniſhmentes not vpon one man only, but vpon the whole world: let vs bethinke vs to call our ſelues home again before he fal to ſtriking of vs with maine blowes to our confuſion and vtter vndoing, without giuing vs any more reſpit to come to the acknowledgement of our ſins. For it is the ſoreſt point of Gods wrath, when ſinners be taken after ſuch a ſort out of this world, yͭ they cannot haue remẽbrance of their ſins, nor take breath to reſort vnto God, or to aske him forgiuenes. Let vs beware leaſt Gods vengeance proceede ſo farre. And forasmuch as we ſee yͭ the aduerſities of theſe daies be verie great, let vs acknowledge that we haue prouoked God verie much, & that it is not for vs to abuſe his patience any longer. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to beare away: ſpecialy whẽ we ſee yͤ ſin doth ouerflow, ſo as all the world is infected with corruption. Although a man doe good, yet neuertheleſſe foraſmuch as it is euermore mixed wͭ ſin, he ſhalbe chaſtiſed, howbeit, not at the firſt daſh: for as I haue ſaid afore, God doeth ſpare the wicked and tarrie for them, and in the meane while puniſh the good that ſeek to walke a right: but yet in the end he alwayes plagueth the diſpiſers of his law & maieſtie. And as touching the good, he will make thẽ to feele his grace to their ioy, ſo that although hee exerciſe thẽ with manie chaſtiſements & aduerſities: yet notwithſtanding, they ſhal not faile to know him to be their God & father ſtil, & to reſt vpon him. As for the wicked they be not diſpoſed to taſt or to feele the loue & goodnes of God: but are rather wood againſt him. But when iniquitie is become as a maine ſea, & al men are corrupted: thẽ the vengeance of God muſt alſo ouerflow, ſo as none may be free from it. We haue ſeen already yͤ threatning yͭ was made here before, namely yͤ yͤ people ſhould be led into captiuitie with their king. When this came to paſſe, were none caried away into captiuitie but the wicked, and ſuch as ſtroue againſt the Prophetes, and ſuch as deſpiſed the good doctrine, and ſuch alſo as were headſtrong againſt God like wilde beaſtes? Deut.28.

Yes,there was Ieremie himſelfe who had called vppon the people fiftie yeeres together and neuer ceaſſed to crie:What do ye,ye wretched people? Yet notwithſtanding wee ſee that while others ſported them,he wept and wailed:and not contented with that, ſaide; Who can turne my Ier.9.1. heade into teares, ſo as my braine may bee as a fountaine guſhing out continually, that I may bewayle the ſinnes and calamities of my people? See how the holy Prophet, (after that he had laboured in the ſeruice of God,and fought againſt al the wicked,and made warre againſt all maner of iniquitie and ſtubbornneſſe:) is faine to be led away captiue aſwell as the reſt, and to be put to reproch,not of being caried to Babilon, for that had beene the beſt that could haue bin wiſhed at that time: but God gaue him not the fauour to be brought thither,but he was faine to be harried into Egypt: Ier.43.6. yet had hee ſayde, Curſed bee they that goe into Egypt: goe ye into Babylon and ſerue the king of Babylon; be quiet and obedient there, Ier.42.15. and beare patiently this puniſhment of God, and in the ende he will take pitie on you. The holy Prophet had not the ſame libertie. So then wee ſee, that when calamities come for the generall corruption of all men,the good are wrapped vp amongſt the euill. And why is that? Bycauſe it is not almoſt poſſible to walke amongſt ſuch infections, and not to bee ſomewhat ſpotted therewith. Albeit that Ieremie reſiſted the euill as much as he coulde: yet ſauored hee of the publique corruptions of the people, and therefore it behoued him to be puniſhed with the reſt; howbeit God did not execute ſuch vengeance vpon him, as he did vppon the deſpiſers of his lawe,no not by a great deale. For Ieremie had alwayes a good teſtimonie,that God did guide him; and when he was in Egypt, he was by a ſpeciall priuiledge free from ẏ curſe that hee had pronounced vppon all them that would goe into Egypt: for they drewe him thyther by force. Ye ſee therefore howe God wrappeth vp his people amongſt the rebels, but yet he ſaueth them after a maruailous maner,which giueth them continuall cauſe of comfort in him. As much is to be ſayd of Daniel. Daniel is ſet forth vnto vs as a myrror of integritie.Ezechiel Ezec.14.14. ſpeaking of him,putteth him for the third of the moſt holy that could be choſen; yet was he caried to Babylon;and was it for the ſinnes of others? He was an hypocrite and had lied vnto God,if it had not bin for his owne ſinnes.For he ſaith Dan.9.5. expreſly in the ninth chapter, I haue made confeſſion as well of mine owne ſinnes as of the ſinnes of my people.He ſayth euen at the firſt,Lord we haue offended thee, & bin diſobedient, we haue rebelled againſt thee, both wee and our fathers, our Kings and Rulers: which wordes of his are ſpoken generally: It may be ſayde, that he put himſelfe in the number with the others. But,to the end that nothing ſhould be replyed thereunto, Dan.9.20. he goeth further and ſayth, I haue confeſſed my ſinnes and the ſinnes of my people. Whereby we ſee that Daniell, whatſoeuer integritie and perfection was in him,was neuertheleſſe ſtained with the common vices,and therefore deſerued to feele his part and portion of the puniſhments that God ſent vppon all the people. Heereby wee are alſo the better warned, to ſtand in feare and to walke in the more warineſſe when we ſee the world ſo corrupted; aſſuring our ſelues, that in the ende wee muſt feele by experience, that God hath ſpoken in good earneſt, where hee ſayeth,that hee will come ſtubbornly againſt vs, if we continue in going ſtubbornly againſt him. This is in effect all that wee haue to remember in this Text, where Moſes ſpeaketh of Signes and myracles. Wherefore let vs open our eyes in this caſe, and let vs not linger vntill GOD compell vs to come to him by force, and ſtretch out his mightie arme againſt vs: but let vs receiue his worde,and let it ſerue vs for Spectacles to beholde his iudgementes afarre off, and let vs not tarie the executing of his extreme rigour.

Nowe he addeth therewith, Bycauſe thou haſt not ſerued thy God with a good will, and cheerefully when thou haddeſt aboundance of all manner of things. Heere doeth hee reprooue the Iewes, for that they coulde not abyde that God ſhould intreate them gently. And it is not all onely to them that hee ſpeaketh, but alſo vnto vs. We haue therefore a generall doctrine to bee gathered of this ſpeeche; namely, that God of his owne nature,is inclyned to allure vs vnto him by gentle and louing meanes, like as a father goeth about to winne his children, by beyng merrie with them, and by giuing them all that they deſire. If a father coulde alwayes laugh with his children, and fulfill their deſires, all his delyght ſhould ſurely be in them: ſuch a one doeth God ſhew himſelfe to be toward vs. In deede he is not paſſionate as men are:we may not thinke ẏ God is like vnto vs;but in ſo much as we comprehend not his maieſtie,bicauſe it is too high, he is faine to humble himſelfe,and to vſe a kinde of ſpeech fitte for our rudeneſſe and for the weakenes of our wittes. Neuertheleſſe it is certaine that the propertie of God is to winne vs gently, as a father endeuoureth to win his children. What is it that God requireth? That wee ſhoulde ſerue him with a franke and free heart, yea and euen with gladneſſe. In what manner? Verily that bicauſe he dealeth gently with vs, and giueth vs al thinges that we neede,we therefore ought to be quiet and well contented, if we be not vnthankfull. And ſo let vs conclude, that all the calamities, troubles, wretchednes and miſeries,which happen in this world, be the fruits of our ſinnes, and that wee driue God to handle vs with ſuch rigor. He is faine (as ye would ſay) to transforme himſelfe,and to forſake his nature to ouermaiſter vs,bicauſe hee ſeeth that ſinne is exceeding great in vs,and that we can no skill to turne the good to our benefite, which he is readie to doe vs. Howbeit (as I haue ſaid afore) God doth not alwayes tarie till we haue offended him:we muſt needes graunt that he preuenteth our ſinnes: he ſeeth that we be in danger to fall, and he doeth remedie it in due time. Yet notwithſtanding,all the corrections which we endure in this world, proceede of our ſinnes: and the filthines that is in vs,is the cauſe why God ſendeth vs not abundance of good thinges according to our deſire. And if there were nothing elſe , but this , ẏ men fall aſleepe , & ſape themſelues in theſe earthly pleaſures, ſo as they be not able to looke to the place which Dauid doth call them to;namely,to ſatisfie our ſelues with the ſight of God, & to reioyce in his preſence. Seeing ẏ men cannot attaine thereunto , but are euer wedded to theſe baſe things:doe not we deſerue that God ſhould withdraw ẏ plenty ẏ he was ready to giue vs, for ẏ he perceiueth that it wold burſt vs:and in ſtead of ſuſteining vs it would ſo ouerload vs ẏ it wold beare vs down to the ground.This is ẏ cauſe why our Lord vſeth not ſuch liberality toward vs as we deſire. For he for his part is not dreined dry, neither doeth hee feare to bee impoueriſhed,by ſending vs plenty of al manner of good thinges. We know he is a fountaine ẏ can neuer bee drawen dry : but when he ſeeth that we waſt & deuour his benefites,and be worſe than drunken,& that beſides the riotouſnes which wee vſe,we be alſo vnthankfull as not onely to fall into forgetfulneſſe, but alſo to ſpurne againſt his maieſty,& to turne our backes vpon him : inſomuch that if wee haue wherwith to maintaine our ſelues well, we fall to Gluttonie, pompouſneſſe,whoredom, and other looſeneſſe, and to be ſhort,the abuſes which we commit in the vſing of Gods bleſſings, are as an vnmeaſurable ſeagulfe : therfore when he ſeeth ſuch things,he withdraweth his hand & ſheweth not himſelfe ſo liberall toward vs . This is the Summe of that we haue to beare in mind. And therefore , ſeeing that God for his part is alwayes readie to multiply vs, & to giue vs plentie of all good things,were it not that we be not able to brooke it : we muſt vnderſtand that wee are as ſicke folke , which muſt haue a ſmall pittance allowed vnto them, and be conſtrained to a diet. And why? Bycauſe they bee not able to brooke their foode. Whereupon we ought well to vnderſtande that which Moſes ſpeaketh to our reproche. For what a ſhame is it , that wee cannot abide that God ſhould vſe vs gently and after a fatherly ſort? Behold , God offereth himſelfe,not onely in woordes , but alſo in deedes: and he offereth to giue vs all that wee deſire. But what ? Hee ſeeth vs not diſpoſed to receiue him, wee deſpiſe him , and thruſt away his grace; muſt there not bee then a horrible frowardnes in men ? Let euerie one of vs excuſe himſelfe as much as he will : yet muſt this ſaying needes bee verified,and when we haue kicked and ſpurned neuer ſo much, yet ſhall wee at the laſt bee conuicted of this maliciouſneſſe, that we could not finde in our heartes to ſuffer G O D to deale gently with vs, ne haue ſerued him ioyfully and with a merrie heart . Therefore let vs not woonder though hee doe handle vs as wee deſerue,when wee bee ſo rebellious againſt him. For when hee ſeeth that wee kicke againſt him , hee muſt needes breake vs , and deale with vs after ſuch a faſhion as wee may vnderſtande that hee is our maiſter : not that they which bee puniſhed, doe ſerue G O D : but for that they vnderſtand that hee hath the maiſterie ouer them , when the puniſhmentes come ſo farre that they are become ſignes and wonders. When G O D appeareth vnto them as it were in a viſible manner from heauen ; then doe they perceiue , Alas I cannot flee nor ſcape the hande of G O D. Then doe they vnderſtande that hee hath the Lordſhip ouer them , not that they willingly yeeld themſelues thereunto , but that they lye languiſhing and aſtoniſhed therein, as men locked vp in priſon . The thing then which wee haue to remember, is that ſith wee coulde not bee contented , that God ſhould handle vs gently by bowing vnder his hand, that he might guide vs , turne vs and returne vs which way he liſted : wee muſt bee forced by trouble and ſorrowe,to vnderſtand that he hath full ſoueraintẏ ouer vs, and that his vtter breaking and ouerthrowing of vs,is bycauſe wee could not abide to bee gouerned by his hande, when hee was ready to guide vs . This is the matter that we haue to note in the ſecond place.

Gen.1.26.
Gen.3.18.

Wee ſee the very ſame in all mankinde; not only touching the afflictions of this preſent life; but alſo wee haue this reproch layde vppon vs, that we bee ſtill as it were, famiſhed for want of ſpirituall bleſſinges . For our father Adam was created in ſuch ſtate , that the worlde was an earthly Paradiſe : The whole earth yeelded him all good thinges to his wiſhe : hee endured neither heate nor colde , nor any greeuous want . Thus was our father Adam appointed Lorde and Maiſter ouer all the worlde, all the Elementes and all the beaſtes of the earth ſerued him quietly ; and all fruites ſerued his taſt and ſauour . What was hee in his perſon ? Hee bare the Image of God, and was of ſo great nobleneſſe and worthineſſe that hee was as the Angels of heauen : and hee had dwelled in this worlde , with all his lynage, as in a place where hee ſhoulde haue had no troubles but hee could not abide to bee ſo gently entreated . When God had thus enriched him with his benefites, hee muſt needes miſtake himſelfe, hee could not ſerue God with a good heart nor with ioy . What could haue greeued him? For God ſhewed him a ſweete and a gratious countenance,and powred out the treaſures of his fatherly loue towards him;but Adam could not abyde that,but through his vnthankfulneſſe he alyenated himſelfe from God . And in what caſe are wee nowe ? We muſt ſerue God in hungar and thurſt , in nakedneſſe and reproche, for the earth is curſed vnto vs . When we haue tilled it , it muſt bring vs foorth thiſtles and thornes . Wee ſee the ſeaſons contrary ; when we waite for a good yeere, we ſee hayle or froſt, drought or rayne,which ſerue to pluck the bread out of our mouthes, and to diſappoint vs of our foode . We ſee the ayre troubled, and infections which oftentimes engender diſeaſes . Great is the toyle of men . For when they haue gotten foode with greate diſtreſſe ; yet want they wherwith to cloath themſelues.See there (I ſay) in what taking we be . And wherefore ? Bicauſe wee would not ſerue our God cheerefully and with a good hart,when he gaue vs abundance of all maner of bleſſings. But this is not the cheefe matter, (as I haue ſayde heeretofore:) for wee are deſtitute of the righteouſneſſe of God. Our very true ornament, was that wee could haue faſhioned our ſelues to all manner of right; and nowe we be ſpoyled thereof. As then wee had reaſon and vnderſtanding: but nowe bee wee become beaſtly, for the brightneſſe that ſhoulde ſhine in vs, is but darkeneſſe. Againe, wee bee couered with reproche: and whereas the Image of God ſhoulde ſhyne in vs, now we haue the markes of ſinne; ſo that euen our very bare bodyes muſt giue vs to vnderſtand of the ſame: inſomuch that if a man bee naked, hee is aſhamed of himſelfe. And why? God doeth by this meane ſhewe vnto vs what infection there is in our ſoules, in that wee bee fayne to hyde vs, as not beeing worthy to bee numbred amongſt his creatures. Finally wee bee like dry earth. Trueth it is that wee bee ouer fruitefull in euill: but of goodneſſe, what is founde in vs? Seeing wee bee thus vnfurniſhed of all graces, it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde languiſh in this fraile lyfe, bycauſe wee could not ſerue our God with ioy and a good heart, at ſuch tyme as hee had powred out all his riches moſt perfectly vpon vs.

Nowe ſith wee beholde the euill that is in all mankynde; let vs alſo apply the ſame particularly to our ſelues. Therefore when as our Lorde viſiteth vs, and maketh vs to feele afflictions that bee ſtraunge vnto vs; let vs caſt down our heads, and enter into ſuch examination of our ſelues as this: Goe to, whereas GOD hath giuen vs wherewith to ſerue him, howe doe wee diſcharge our ſelues thereof? If there come an ill yeere that bringeth dearth of Corne or wine, ſo that famine doth threaten vs; let vs looke howe wee honoured GOD in the tyme that hee gaue vs plentie. If wee ſee there is aboundaunce of wine, then drunkenneſſe hath his full ſcope, ſo that men cannot bee reſtrayned from breaking out into all maner of diſorder, and (which worſe is,) they ſticke not to blaſpheme the name of GOD, and to ruſh out into al diſorder, and to take leaue to ſurfeitting and glutting of themſelues out of all meaſure. In aboundaunce of Corne wee ſee the lyke; men bee ſo proude therof that they cannot abyde either warning or diſcipline, but they kicke againſt GOD, and their pryde is moreouer matched with crueltie, ſo as euery man taketh to himſelfe; hee that hath the moſt, will if hee can playe the Tyrant ouer his neighbours, in taking no pitie vppon them that bee in want. At this poynt are wee in the tyme of plentie. Therefore is our Lorde fayne to chaunge his Copie, and to manyfeſt his Maieſtie vnto vs, and to compell vs to vnderſtande what ſoueraintie and dominion hee hath ouer vs; ſeeing wee cannot finde in our heartes to ſerue him with a cheerefull heart and with a good will, nor to giue ouer our ſelues vnto him. Are wee in reſt? All our indeuour is howe to plucke out one an others eyes, and to torment our ſelues lyke Cattes and Dogges. And if wee warre not with men, wee fight againſt GOD, which is farre worſe. And if wee holde on, let vs not bee greeued that wee bee confounded altogether, ſeeing wee ſet vp our ſelues agaynſt the Maieſtie of him, vnder whome wee ought to bowe. Nay, wee ſee that moſt commonly men make warre againſt GOD, when hee giueth them reſt: wee ſhall ſee both generally and particularly that they which bee at leaſure to doe euill, doe perſecute the Church, and torment the poore faythfull ones. As ſoone as GOD giueth them any reſpite, they ſeeke nothing but occaſion to doe hurt and to exerciſe their crueltie. And this is to be ſeene, not onely in the enemies of the Church, but alſo in all others: inſomuch that both greate and ſmall, when GOD hath left vs in reſt, and wee haue made an ende of warring one againſt another, wee fall to deſpiſing of GOD one way or other. Let vs not wonder therefore, if when a warre is finiſhed; it beginne againe immediatly. For it is needefull that GOD ſhould deale with vs in ſuch maner. otherwiſe he cannot rule vs.

And let vs marke well howe it is ſayde heere moreouer, That GOD will raiſe vp a barbarous people againſt ſuch as woulde not bee obedient vnto him. Such is Gods raigning ouer vs, that hee deſireth to bee as a father vnto vs, rather than to bee a dreadfull King or Prince ouer vs. It is true that wee muſt doe him homage as to our ſoueraigne Lorde, and that wee muſt behaue our ſelues as his people in all ſubiection and humilitie, ſubmitting our ſelues vnder his obedience: but yet therewithall hee doeth the office of a father towarde vs, and will bee knowen to bee a father. For hee ſpeaketh after an amiable maner, inſomuch that although his commaundementes be harde vnto vs, bicauſe of our malice and rebellion as concerning the fleſhe: yet notwithſtanding after hee hath declared his will vnto vs, hee exhorteth vs, he warneth vs, he rebuketh vs: and all theſe things hee doeth with ſuch myldeneſſe, as wee muſt needes ſhewe our ſelues to want both witte and reaſon, if wee bee not benefited by the goodneſſe hee vſeth. But will wee not hearken to our GOD when hee ſpeaketh vnto vs in ſo gentle and gratious a manner? Then wil hee talke with vs with maine ſtrokes of halbardes, pykes, and hagbuts. Wee ſhall there vnderſtande nothing, the language of them will bee very ſtraunge vnto vs. And wherefore? Bycauſe wee had no eares to heare when GOD ſpake gratiouſly vnto vs, yea and when hee ſtooped ſo lowe, as to teache vs lyke little children, that are taught their A, B, C. Go too then, let vs vnderſtande that when wee bee ſo deafe againſt God: hee muſt talke with vs in an other language, and hee muſt ſtirre vp ſome barbarous and braſen faced people, that haue neyther reuerence, reaſon, nor equitie: to whom when yee ſhall pray for pitie and compaſſion: it ſhall be but in vaine, they will giue no eare vnto you, you ſhall goe that way in ſpite of your beardes. And what is the remedie of all theſe euils? Let vs enter, let vs enter into our conſciences, let vs not grynde our teeth at men, as wee are wont to doe, let vs not ſtriue with them. For our combate is not there. But let vs vnderſtand that God meaneth to chaſtiſe vs by men, bycauſe wee haue beene ſtubborne towardes him, and would not bee edifyed by his woorde, according as his meaning was. And therefore let vs benefite our ſelues by all theſe warninges, and corrections which GOD doeth ſende vs. And let vs not abyde till wee feele the knockes; but whenſoeuer GOD doeth vs the fauour to teach vs at other mens coſt, let vs receiue profite thereby: and when he ſpareth vs, let vs not abuſe his patience. And for as much as the meane to reconcile vs vnto him, is to accept the promiſe that hee offereth vs in the Goſpell, let vs imbrace our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, which is our peace, to the ende that wee may be entreated after a fatherly ſorte; at the handes of our God. Eph.2.14

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our miſdeedes, beſeeching him to make vs to perceiue them yet better; and therewithall to beare with vs in ſuch ſort, and that his chaſtiſements and corrections may bee ſo fatherly and meaſurable towarde vs, as wee may bee reduced to the obedience of his righteouſneſſe, and that he will euermore ſo comfort vs, as wee may haue whereof to reioyce in him, and to glorifie him, for his procuring of our ſaluation by all meanes. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

The CLXI. Sermon which is the ninth vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

49.50 The Lord will ſtirre vp, &c.

51 The ſame ſhall eate the fruite of thy Cattel, and the fruite of thy land, vntil thou bee rooted out, and hee ſhall leaue thee neither Corne, wine, nor Oyle, nor any fruite of thy Cattel, nor of the flocks of thy ſheepe, vntil he haue brought thee to nought.

52 And hee ſhall beſiege thee in all thy Townes, vntill hee haue caſt downe thy high and ſtrong walles, wherein thou dyddeſt put thy truſt throughout all thy lande: and hee ſhall beſiege thee in all thy Townes throughout al the lande that the Lord thy God hath giuen thee.

53 Thou ſhalt eate the fruite of thy wombe euen the fleſhe of thy ſonnes and daughters, which the Lorde thy God hath giuen thee, in the ſiege and diſtreſſe wherewith thine enemie ſhall ſtraiten thee.

54 In ſo much that the man which is tender and exceeding daintie among you ſhall bee grieued to looke vpon his brother, and vpon the wife in his boſome, and vpon the reſt of his children that be left,

55 And ſhall not giue vnto them of the fleſh of his children, whereof hee himſelfe eateth, for feare leaſt he ſhould leaue nothing at al for himſelfe, by reaſon of the ſiege and ſtraitneſſe wherewith thine enemie ſhall diſtreſſe thee in all thy Cities.

56 Yea and the woman that is ſo tender and nyce among you, that ſhee will not venter to ſet the ſole of hir foote vppon the grounde, bicauſe of hir tendernes and nyceneſſe, ſhall bee grieued to looke vpon the husband that lyeth in hir boſome, and vpon hir ſonne and vpon hir daughter, 57 And vppon the afterbirth which is come out from betwixt hir legges, and vpon the babes which ſhee hath brought forth: for ſhee ſhall eate them priuily for want of all manner of things, in the ſiege and ſtraitnes, wherewith thine enemie ſhall diſtreſſe thee in thy Cities.

58 If thou doe not keepe and perfourme all the wordes of this Law, which be written in this booke, and feare this glorious and dreadfull name of the Lorde thy God,

WEe muſt remember what was touched yeſterday, and alſo what Moſes doeth ſtill continue to ſpeake of: that is, that if men bee rough and cruell vnto vs, God doeth ſtirre them vp thereunto: bycauſe he hath found vs rebellious towardes him. And therefore whenſoeuer men deale not ſo myldely with vs as we woulde, let vs looke whether we haue anſwered God, & whether wee haue meekely imbraced all that he hath commaunded vs: for if any of vs doe finde himſelfe to haue made warre and to haue ſet vp himſelfe againſt God; it is not to be wondered at, if God pay him with the like againe, on the behalfe of men. But wee ſhall neuer be perſwaded of this doctrine, vnleſſe we vnderſtande, that God holdeth the hearts of men in his hand to ſoften them, when it pleaſeth him be they neuer ſo hard hearted; and on the contrarie part to harden them, though they bore vs neuer ſo much good will before. Let vs not therfore truſt to ẏ loue of men, vnleſſe we walke in the feare of God. For it lieth in him ſo to change their hearts as they ſhal beare rancor toward vs, & be quite & cleane ẇdrawen frõ vs for leſſe than nothing, in ſo much as the worlde ſhall ſee ẏ they which were moſt foreward to helpe vs, ſhall become moſt againſt vs. And on ẏ otherſide let vs vnderſtand, ẏ our Lord can well qualifie al malice, yea though they be as fierce as a Lion, he will make them mylde & friendly towardes vs. There was neuer nation ſo proude & cruell as ẏ Egyptians: and in ſpecial, how ſpiteful were they againſt the children of Iſrael? It ſeemed ẏ this poore people ſhould neuer haue founde any mercy. And yet God wrought in ſuch wiſe, ẏ the Egyptians gaue them all their treaſures, & all that euer was excellent in their houſes, there was neither ſiluer nor gold ſpared. And whereof came that? Before ẏ time they had held the Iewes in bondage, they had vexed them out of all meaſure: they wold haue plucked ẏ bread out of their mouths, yea & haue cut ẏ throtes of thẽ all. A litle afore
Exod.1.16. they had killed their children as ſoone as they came out of their mothers wombs, of purpoſe to haue deſtroyed ẏ whole ſtock of them: & wherof then came this ſoudaine myldnes ẏ euery man
Exod.11.2. brought them ẏ things ẏ were moſt precious in his houſe? It was god ẏ cõuerted their harts. And Ioſua.11.20 likewiſe on ẏ cõtrary ſide, it is ſaid ẏ he hardned the hearts of kings, when ẏ people were to enter into ẏ land of Canaan: whereas they ſhold haue bin ſuffered to paſſe, there were many gaineſayers ẏ reſiſted them. Whence came that? Euen of this, ẏ they had reſiſted their God. Let vs therefore learne (as I haue ſaide heretofore) ſo to behaue our ſelues in obedience towardes God, ẏ men alſo for their partes may be friendly vnto vs. For there is none ſo great nor ſo mightie, but he ſhal finde ſome miſerie to riſe vp againſt him, when he wil needes play the ſtout fellow in ſtriuing againſt God. And we haue ſeene that they which are drunken ẇ their owne greatnes, muſt in ẏ end bee puniſhed, not by ſuch as are in any authoritie, or by ſuch as are of eſtimation in this world: but by raſcals & naughtipacks: ſuch folke muſt euen ſpit in their faces. And ſuch examples are to be ſeen euen in princes, & men of greateſt ſtate. For when they yeelde not themſelues to be gouerned of God, he is faine to ſtirre vp gouernours to ẏ contrary, to ſhame ſuch as wil not be obedient vnto him. Yet notwẏſtanding when men yeeld not thẽſelues tractable; then muſt we vnderſtand ẏ god manageth the matter by a ſecret meane; and that he doth it to make vs to ſtoope. Therefore let vs not deceiue our ſelues in the creatures, ſaying; What fortune is this? In deede we may ſay ſo, but wee muſt go yet one ſtep farther: & we muſt vnderſtand ẏ it commeth not to paſſe without ẏ direction of God. And thereupon wee muſt repaire to ẏ remedie, that is to wit, wee muſt ſtoope vnder the word & hand of God, and conſider, ẏ if it pleaſe him, he can turne ẏ minds of men ẏ were ſo ſpitefull againſt vs, & make thẽ to become friendly to vs. And ẏ is a thing more than neceſſarie. For when wee haue to doe with them ẏ be rough & intractable, we be by and by out of heart, & would, (if we could poſſibly) ridde our ſelues of all troubles, and be ſet free from thẽ at the firſt daſh. But we ſhould rather returne vnto God, acknowledging ẏ thoſe things proceede from his hand. And ſo, when men ſhew thẽſelues ſo vnfaithful and cruell towarde vs, handling vs ſcornefully & opprobriouſly, ſo as we cãnot get one whit of right or reaſon at their hands, but we ſee how their whole ſeeking is to ſet their feete on our throtes, & they haue ſuch a beaſtly ſhameleſnes (as it is ſaid here,) ẏ they be not aſhamed of any thing ẏ is ſaid vnto them, but they take ẏ bridle in their teeth, & play the wilde beaſtes, ſo as there is neither grace nor honeſtie in them; when wee ſee ſuch barbarous beaſtlineſſe, let vs learne to reſort vnto our God, & to acknowledge ẏ we deſerue to be ſo tamed by him. Moreouer ẏ onely meane to appeaſe ſuch furie, & to aſſwage thoſe which are ſo hot and haſtie; is to call vpon our God, and to pray him to touche thoſe inwardly with his holy ſpirite, which are ſo cruell and cannot yeelde to doe vs good, bycauſe wee haue ſet vp our ſelues againſt our God. That is the thing whereof we are admoniſhed in this Text.

Nowe Moſes repeateth that which hath beene touched heeretofore: namely, That God will bring vs enemyes from a farre Countrie, and that they ſhall flie as Eagles, to the intent wee ſhoulde not thinke that GOD needeth to make any preparation long aforehand. As if a man ſhould threaten vs: we would looke whether he had a ſword in his hand, and whether he be in readines to execute ẏ which he hath ſaid. But if God doe but whiſtle (as he often ſpeaketh by his Prophets,) by and by hee hath his men of warre in Eſa.5.26.
readines; he needeth not to make muſters, or to inrolle them, or to ſounde the drum: he needeth none of al this: onely at his whiſtle (for he vſeth that ſimilitude;) all the whole earth muſt needes bee moued. Therefore let vs not looke whether things be in a readines, nor whether any hurt or harme be done vs. Let vs not looke whether any worldly meanes bee prepared thereunto: but let vs vnderſtand that ere we can conceiue what euill may happen vnto vs, we ſhall be preſently ouerthrowne. And wherefore? Bycauſe it is God that ſpeaketh, which maketh men to flye as birds, euen from yͤ one end of the earth to the other. There is neither ſea nor mountains able to ſaue vs from the experience of yͭ which we neuer beleeued. Howbeit God hath ſo diſpoſed things, yea & euen amongſt the heathen is oftentimes ſeene incredible ſpeedines, when God is diſpoſed to chaſtiſe the greateſt part of yͤ world: inſomuch that ſome one man hath riſen with a ſmal number of people, to chaſtice an infinite multitude yͭ did ſet themſelues againſt him: and that not for one time onely, but twiſe or thriſe one after another, with taking of Townes & Fortreſſes, which ſeemed to be ſo wel appointed, yea and ſtrong by naturall ſituation, that they could not be approched vnto, & yet haue they bin ſacked as if God had meant to renue a great part of the worlde. It hath bin in likewiſe ſeene, that a people without renoune or eſtimation, haue riſen and made the moſt mighty to tremble. In this dooing God giueth examples of that which is written heere: to wit, that he can ſurely bring our enemies vpon the ſoudayne, and that they ſhal make ſuch diſpatch, as if they came ſwifter againſt vs than by poſt: and that when we ſuppoſe to haue ſome reſpit, by truce for one moneth, for one yeere or for al our lifetime, we ſhal be ſoudenly ſurpriſed in a morning before we thinke thereon. Let vs therfore vnderſtand, that as ſoone as God ſpeaketh, wee muſt haue an eye vnto the infinite power (that is in him, yea and which is incredible to mans vnderſtanding,) & to tremble at his very word, and to yeeld vnto him: knowing well that if we delay from day to day, wee may be preuented, & then will it be too late. Let vs therfore be aduiſed to humble our ſelues in due time, and to craue pardon when we haue offended him.

Moſes ſayeth expreſſely, That they which are diſobedient vnto God, ſhal be beſieged & ſhut vp within their walles, vntill all their fortreſſes in which they truſted, be beaten downe. Here we ſee how God reproueth the falſe and curſed preſumption wherby men deceiue themſelues, in thinking themſelues to be well fenced againſt him. It is a ſacriledge whereby God is robbed of his honor, whē we attribute vnto the creatures, yͤ meane to vphold vs. It is certaine yͭ God ſerueth himſelfe by meanes, & we muſt alſo apply thē vnto our vſe: but in the meane while to ſettle our truſt vppon them, were a robbing of God of his maieſtie. For he wil haue vs to hold al things of him, and to do him homage for them. So then it is an intollerable preſumption for vs to put our truſt in creatures & to ground our ſelues on them: and yet there is no fault more common in yͤ world. We can ſay wel ynough, yͭ it is not lawfull, & that we ought not to doe it: but in the meane while euerie one doth it. Now let vs remēber our ſelues, for there is nothing yͭ God holdeth more deare, or whereof he maketh greater account than his honour. Neither is it ſufficient for vs to leaue him the title & name of God: but he muſt alſo be knowne as he is, yͭ is to ſay, that al power lieth in him, that he is the fountaine of all manner of grace & goodnes: that it is his proper office to maintaine and preſerue vs: that our life is in his hand, & all things that belong therto. When we haue well thought vpon this, let vs take order to gather our wits ſo about vs, as we be not grounded vpon creatures. Surely the miſchiefe is double when we ſhield our ſelues with yͤ creatures againſt God, & therby to become ſtubborne whē he threateneth vs, & to hold on ſtill when he vttereth forth tokens of his diſpleaſure: let vs conſider that the offence is then much more grieuous. But yet is this ouer common. For whileſt we perceiue not any daunger towardes, as in reſpect of the world; doe not wee continue in our ſinnes? And doe we not abide in ſtubbornneſſe? God ſpeaketh: but we regard him not. So yͭ men doe fauour vs, & ſo we haue wherewith to fortifie our ſelues, we thinke that yͤ hand of God can not come at vs. And therefore it is not without cauſe yͭ our Lord reproueth the frowardnes of al ſuch as are diſobedient towardes him: that is to ſay, that they put their truſt in their fortreſſes, in their high walles, in their munitions, and in ſuch like things. Now foraſmuch as we bee ſubiect to theſe things, it were better for vs yͭ we had neyther hedge nor aught elſe, than to be wel fenced with walles and bulworkes. For they ſerue but to blinde our eyes, that haue no more reſpect to our God: but be bewitched by Sathan to put our truſt in things which ſhalbe our confuſion. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtandeth, let vs aduiſedly holde this rule in generall; that is, yͭ God be euermore our fortreſſe: as we ſee he promiſeth by his Prophet Eſay, aſwel in the 12. Chapter, as alſo from yͤ 55. vnto the end: for it tendeth al to this point. And it is ſo commō a doctrine in the holy ſcripture, that we can ſcarſe turne a leafe, but we ſhal ſee ſome text, wherein God telleth vs yͭ he wil be our rampyres, our wals, our ditches, yea & double ditches, our towers, and whatſoeuer elſe is needefull for our defence. And why? For (as I haue heretofore ſaid,) our mindes do forthwith ſlide into vanitie ſo as God is not able to hold vs backe to himſelfe; and to make account that we will put our whole truſt in him. What muſt wee then doe? Firſt of all, if we bee deſtitute of mans aide, let vs vnderſtand that God alone is ſufficient, if wee returne vnto him, [& ſay:] Ah Lord, it is certaine yͭ we are ſet for a pray, we haue not wherewͭ to ſaue our ſelues, for all the world doth faile vs: but yet it is ynough yͭ thou art our ſuccour. After yͤ maner ſhould wee learne to reſort vnto him. And ſo ſhoulde wee take occaſion to yeelde our ſelues wholly vnto him when the things of this worlde doe fayle vs. And by the way, although wee haue walles, and artillerie, money and munition, and all that wee can wiſh for, yea and people alſo, and all thinges elſe: yet let vs vnderſtande that wee muſt in the meane while ſo vſe them, as our Lorde may bee alway our truſt, and we giue him euermore this honor, that it is his office to defend vs, and that thereupon wee wade no farther. It is certayne that wee may ſerue our turne with the things which hee putteth into our handes: but yet in the meane meane while, our hearts and mindes muſt bee rayſed vp aboue all the worlde, and hee alone muſt bee our ſhooteanker. Thirdely, wee muſt not vaunt our ſelues of the force ot the helpes that he giueth vs: for a ſpeare of a bramble (as they ſay) is enough to make vs beleeue that wee bee inuincible. What [ſay wee?] Is it poſſible that they ſhould preuaile againſt vs? All this is nothing: no not worth the pill of an Onyon, as they ſay: yet will wee needes ſtreine our wittes to giue it price and the glory. Nay contrariwiſe, let vs acknowledge our debilitie and weakeneſſe, that we may repaire vnto God, and let nothing hinder vs from yeelding our ſelues wholy vnto him and vnto his protection: let vs not deceiue our ſelues with ſuch vaine confidence, as the Iewes had in their high wals. Nowe heerewithall hee ſheweth alſo that all that euer wee can deuiſe for our ſtrength and ſafegarde, can doe nothing againſt his power: but that wee ſhall continue beſieged, vntill wee bee altogether waſted. Yea and wee may gather by this Text, that it were much better for vs to bee deliuered at the firſt into the handes of our enemies, than to haue meanes to reſiſt, whereby wee may bee made to languiſh in ſuch wiſe as wee may not dye a ſimple death [out of hand]: for the poore people that be abroad in the fieldes, are ſpoyled at the firſt, and ſo are diſpatched of it. Surely it is a pitious caſe, to beholde their throates cut and all ſet on fire: but yet for all that, by that meanes they are deliuered from their miſeries, ſo as they pine not away in them. But as for them that are in ſtrong Townes, they muſt bee faine to abide a long ſiege, they muſt languiſhe and pine away by peecemeale, not for a moneth or two, but euen vntill they can holde out no more: and that is aſmuch as if they ſhould paſſe a hundred deaths. Thus doth our Lorde reuenge himſelfe of them that thinke themſelues to bee diſpatched, when God doth not roote them out at the firſt. No, ſaieth hee, bethinke your ſelues whether of theſe fruites doe ſpeede beſt; they that are brought to the market in their prime, and eaten out of hand; or they that are kept for a time, and in the ende doe rotte? It were better then for you to bee ouercome and vanquiſhed by your enemies at the firſt. Let vs therfore conſider well, that when wee haue wherewith to defend vs to the worldeward, where it ſhould profite vs, it ſhall turne to our double confuſion if wee truſt therein: for wee muſt grone a great while vnder the burden, and bee waſted by little and little. For when wee bee diſobedient and wil not be reformed, our Lorde wil neuer leaue vntil he haue vtterly brought vs to nought, as he ſheweth here ſo oftentimes. And ẏ is yet better expreſſed by this that Moſes addeth. The man (ſaith he) that is tender and delicate among you, ſhall bee greeued at his brother, and at the wife which lyeth in his armes, becauſe hee cannot bee ſuffered to eate his owne children alone. The woman which is ſo nice that ſhee dare not touch the ground with her foote (for ſo are the very woordes of Moſes) ſhall ſeeke to deſtroy and to ſpoile her own children; yea, they ſhall no ſooner bee borne out of her wombe, but ſhee ſhall bee deſirous to deuoure them; and if ſhee haue brought them vp to ſome bigneſſe, ſhee will ſpare them neuer the more. Theſe bee dreadfull thinges: for it is not ſayd alonely, You ſhal bee beſieged, and tarie a long while in famine, ſo as you ſhall bee driuen to eate, Horſes, Rattes, mice, ſhooeleathers; yea and the very doung of byrdes (as it hath bin ſeene) and all theſe thinges ſhall bee your 2.Kin.6.25. meate. Neither is it ſayd that men and women ſhould bee eaten: but that euery man ſhall eate his owne children. Seeing that God ſpeaketh in this maner, were it not enough to make our hayre ſtand vpright? Yes verily; and yet here is nothing declared by Moſes, which hath not bin ſeene in execution. It is not for a man to ſay, it is not credible, it is repugnant to nature, a man would plucke the bread out of his owne mouth, when hee is in extremitie, to giue it vnto his children, he would dy to helpe them, inſomuch that wee ſee that Agar could not abide to ſee the death of her childe, but ſhee left him alone, and Gen.21.16. wiſhed her owne death. But wee neede not to alledge examples of theſe thinges: for the common affection doth ſufficiently declare, that euery man would rather dy, than eate his owne children: but yet was ſuch crueltie ſeene among the Iewes. They which were inſtructed in ẏ lawe of God, and ſhould haue had much more humanity and compaſſion, than the Paganes and infidels, euen they forgot al maner of honeſtie, and were ouercome with this madnes. It was meete that this blindeneſſe, whereof the Prophets had Eſa.6.9.& Deut.28. ſpoken, and which wee ſee here before touched alſo by Moſes, ſhould bee then accompliſhed in them, and that they ſhould bee rauiſhed of their wittes: For when GOD taketh away all reaſon and vprightneſſe from men: then hee leaueth them to a kinde of madneſſe. Such furie then muſt needes be in them, when they did eate their owne children.

Hereby wee bee ſpecially warned, that they which bee reſerued for the laſt caſt, bee in no better caſe than they, whom God hath chaſticed long afore. And this is a profitable warning. For ſo ſoone as God ſtriketh ſome, and forbeareth otherſome: And why not theſe alſo, ſay we? Haue not theſe deſerued aſmuch? We haue not the patience to ſuffer God to execute his iudgementes in ſuch order as ſeemeth good vnto him ſelfe: but wee ſurmiſe, that thoſe whome hee dooth reſpit, and whom hee for a little while forbeareth, bee priuiledged more than wee. But it is contrary: for it had bin better for them to haue bin puniſhed ſooner than to be ſo reſerued. And therefore let vs not enuy them becauſe that God forbeareth them for a time, as though they were exempted from all plagues, but let vs tary till God fetch them about at their turne: for it had bin farre better for them, to haue bin diſpatched out of hand. And therewithall let euery of vs looke to himſelfe. Let vs not truſt to the patience that God vſeth toward vs, to deceiue our ſelues therewith. In deede when God hath bin patient, and forborne vs, it ſhoulde giue vs the better diſpoſition, to reſorte vnto him, and to hope to finde him pitiful, to forgiue vs our faultes and treſpaſſes. But we muſt not fal aſleepe thereupon, to dally with him, and to ſay: O, hee hath taried for vs, he will yet doe the lyke hereafter; as wee ſee the wicked doe, which doe but ſhake their head at it: when they ſee that God hath ſpared them, they thinke they be diſcharged. Let vs beware that. For wee ſee how he ſaith, that when we be well appointed, and haue fortreſſes as it were inuincible, all muſt fall on our heades, and wee ſhall be ſo much the more grieuouſly puniſhed. Thus much haue we to remember touching this text.

Now let vs marke further, that when we forget our God, wee muſt alſo forget all the courſe of nature, and he muſt needes bereaue vs of our Epheſ. 3. 15. wittes: for it is hee on whom all fatherhood dependeth, he is the welſpring thereof. We ſhould not knowe what the duetie of the parents is towarde their children, nor what reuerence children doe owe to their parentes and ſuperiors, vnleſſe God did beare the ſouereintie. If we referre not all vnto him, he wil make vs to become blockiſh, ſo as wee ſhall not vnderſtand what this fatherly affectiō toward our children ſhould meane. Thus much for one poynt.

But by the way wee haue to note, that the men which did ſo deuour their owne children, were not ſo blockiſh but that they were pinched with terrible heartbitings, and vexed with ſuch furious fearefulnes, as made them euen to abhor that which they did. True it is that they were caryed away by force, and had no reaſon in them; but yet for all that they had certaine ſecret ſtings and prickinges inwardly, and God held them as it were vppon the racke or torture, as if he ſhould haue ſayd vnto them, What wilt thou doe; thou wretched creature? It had bin better for thee to haue bin borne afore thy time, and ẏ the earth had ſwalowed thee vp a hundred times, than thou ſhouldeſt haue cōmitted ſo terrible a fact: but yet muſt neceſſitie needs get the vpper hand of thee. Let vs marke therefore, that when wee be not meekened by the hand of God, wee muſt then fall into ſuch a woodnes, as ſhall ouermaiſter vs, and make vs torment our ſelues without the helpe of any other executioner, ſo as euery of vs ſhall execute Gods vengeance vppon himſelfe, which he had skorned afore and ſkoffed at. I haue ſayd, that here is nothing ſpoken of, which hath not bin ſeene in effect: to wit, that the fathers haue eaten their own children, and in lyke caſe the mothers. But like as the Iewes had moſt exceedingly prouoked God; euen ſo came they to the fulneſſe of iniquitie, and conſequently it behooued God ſo to vtter his wrath toward them with extremitie, as it was ſeene when they were beſieged with their enemies; for then did they eate Pygions doung, and bought it by golde weight; yee ſhall ſee that they committed actes againſt nature in eating one another. But when they had once reiected the ſonne of God, & had vtterly cut themſelues off from the hope of ſaluation by forſaking the redeemer vppon whome were grounded all the promiſes which had bin made vnto them concerning the goodneſſe of God; then was it of neceſſitie that thoſe thinges ſhould bee the more accompliſhed. For if yee reade the hiſtories, euen of them that were of the ſame nation, and which were preſent witneſſes of the matter; yee would thinke that yee heard dreames or fables; and yet for all that, thoſe thinges were then notoriouſly knowen, and noted to bee true, and God intended as it were to ſet vp ſcaffoldes, that it might be ſeene how his threatning of his people after that manner, was not in vaine, as wee ſee, and that all men ſhould take example thereat. For they bee horrible thinges, and ſuch as may make our hayres to ſtand vpright, when it is ſayd that the husband ſhall deceiue the wife and ſteale away the children iſſued of the bodies of them both, and that ẏ wife lykewiſe ſhal ſeeke ſome ſecret place to cut the throat of her childe in, as if ſhee ſhoulde ſay, I will locke vp this for my ſelfe: and that both the husbandes and the wiues ſhould bee ſo madde as to ſay, I will eate mine owne childe. Seeing that all theſe things were accompliſhed; and that our Lord hath executed ſuch vengeance: let vs vnderſtand that wee ought not to reade theſe thinges at this day without trembling, euen as if GOD ſhould lay forth his foredenounced vengeance before vs in a paynted table. Moreouer let vs vnderſtand, that when God had pronounced ſuch ſentence againſt the Iewes, it was not executed at the firſt day. For he waited for them with ſo long patience, that it ſeemed that no miſchief ſhould light vppon them. But when the ſore was burſt, then was the rottenneſſe perceiued which lay hiddē afore and the diſeaſe was the more deadly. Alſo let vs marke, that if God doe beare with vs, and afterward do diuers wayes correct vs, and yet not ſtrike ſo roughly as to come to extremitie: wee muſt not thinke that wee are thereby eſcaped his hand, but we muſt returne vnto him, and not tary till hee ſee our diſobedience vnreformable, and ſo be faine to proceede to the extremitie of his threatninges. Thus much haue wee to remember touching this text.

Now finally Moſes ſayth: If thou keepe not all the wordes of this lawe for to doe them, and feare not this dreadfull and glorious name: that is to ſay the eternall thy God. Verily it ſeemeth at the firſt ſight, that Moſes requireth of men aboue meaſure, that which is not in their power: for who is hee that can fulfill all the lawe of God? And againe, though a man miſſe in ſome certaine poyntes, ſhould GOD vſe ſuch rigor? I haue tolde you heretofore, that hee directeth this talk towardes them that be altogether giuen ouer to euil, and to ſuch as bee deſpiſers of God to break his lawe by all meanes they can. To what ende then dooth hee require ſuch a perfection? Let vs firſt of all marke that GOD will not haue his law chopped into peeces & gobbets: for therein he ſetteth forth his righteouſnes vnto vs. Men therefore muſt not make a parting of ſtakes in this caſe at their own pleaſure, as who wold ſay, I wil, for Gods honor, abſtain from whoredome, Iames.2.11. but yet I will ſteale: I will abſtaine from murther, but yet I will bee a blaſphemer: No, but ſeeing that he which hath forbidden to robbe, hath alſo forbidden to kil; and hee which hath forbidden fornication, hath in lykewiſe forbidden to blaſpheme: let vs learne to obey him in all poyntes and all reſpectes, let vs reſtreine our ſenſes, and bridle our affections, and to bee ſhorte, let vs come to the poynt to giue ouer our ſelues wholy to the ſeruice of our God. So ought we to doe: and that is the thing alſo whereunto Moſes hath reſpect. For if we miſſe in any one poynt, wee be accurſed of God, and deſerue the rigor which is mentioned here. Neuertheleſſe he of his mercie ceaſeth not to beare with vs: yea and he will neuer vſe the great ſeueritie that is ſpoken of here, but towards ſuch as ſet themſelues altogether ſtubbornely againſt him. Yet notwithſtanding, it is not without cauſe, that Moſes dooth here exhorte the Iewes to the perfect obſeruation of the law. A Phiſition preſcribing an order, giueth not the bridle to the appetite of his patient, to doe any thing amiſſe how little ſoeuer it bee: but he ſaith, I will haue you to doe thus, and thus. Now if the ſicke man doe ſtep any whit aſide, very well, hee is not yet incurable, the Phiſition will haue a care of him ſtill. But if hee will needes ſet all at ſixe and at ſeuen (as they ſay,) and caſt off all order, and play the madman; well, hee ſhall haue his payment as hee deſerueth. And in like wiſe will our Lorde haue vs at his commaundement in all caſes: and good reaſon. Howbeit there is ſo great infirmitie (I meane euen in them which bee gouerned by the holy Ghoſt, and which ſtreine themſelues to bee obedient vnto him) that they faile in many reſpectes: but yet howſoauer the world goe, ſinne ouermaiſtereth them not, they ſtriue not of ſet purpoſe to tranſgreſſe the Lawe; but they proceede and go foreward ſtil: and albeit that they do it limpingly, yet doe they hold on ſtill toward God. As touching theſe they bee borne withall. True is that GOD will chaſtiſe them: and in what Sam.7.14. maner? Euen in forgiuing them: according to this ſaying of his, If thy children tranſgreſſe my commaundementes, I will viſite their iniquities; but it ſhall bee with the rodde of men, and not with extremitie: I will not deale with them as with enemies, I will not take away my mercie from them, albeit that I doe correct them. Thus doth God deale in that behalfe. But if our hearts bee vtterly hardened: then will hee warre vpon vs, and deſtroy vs without ſparing: & although hee beare with vs, yet ſhall all turne to our confuſion. That is one thing that wee haue to remember concerning this Text.

Alſo it is a notable poynt to bee obſerued, where Moſes ſpeaketh of the yoke of yron. For hee ſaith, That the Lorde will lay a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all miſbeleeuers vntill they bee altogether conſumed. And that is to the ende wee ſhoulde learne to receiue the correctiõs which we heare of, and not kicke againſt them. For wee ſee er.28.16. what befell to Ananias, when hee mocked at the threatninges of Ieremy, and came to breake the yoke which hee had vppon his necke, which was a yoke of wood and of cordes. The Prophet did weare that yoke, to moue the people to conſider that they ſhoulde all become captiues, and ſo to beholde their owne ſtate in the perſon of the Prophet. Now this wicked one that was poſſeſſed of the diuel, (to make the worde of God to bee naught ſet by) came to breake the bandes of Ieremy, and ſayd, euen thus wil God breake the yoke of Nabuchodonoſer: and albeit ỹ he beſiege you, and doe what hee can to cary you away captiues into a ſtraunge land: yet ſhal you bee preſerued by the grace of your God. God threatned, and this fellowe mocked all his threatninges: and thereto tooke the ſhadowe of the name of God to abuſe the people. Well then, what wanne hee by ſuch rebellion? It was ſayd to the Prophet, Take a yoke of yron: for Ier.28.14. whereas the bondage ſhoulde haue bin gentle and tollerable; it muſt now be ſo cruel, as they ſhal not be able to endure any more. See here how hee dealeth with all ſuch as harden their heartes againſt GOD, and will not abide to bee meekened by his hand. Then let vs bee afraid of this yoke of yron. Firſt of all wee know that Gods yoke is amiable vnto all ſuch as willingly yeelde themſelues vnto it, and ſuffer thẽſelues to bee gouerned by the hand of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Wee haue the teſtimony of the ſonne of GOD, My yoke (ſayth hee) is eaſie, Matt.11.30. and my burden is light. Come to me, and learne that I am lowly and meeke. Seeing that our Lord Ieſus declareth, that they which be teachable and obedient ſhall perceiue that there is neither burthen, nor weight, nor griefe in his yoke, to ouerpreſſe them withall: it ought to moue vs to yeeld our necks vnto it and to pray God, to put vs vnder it, and alſo to ſuffer him to chaſtice vs whẽ we haue offended him. In deed the ſtrokes wil be greeuous vnto vs, as ỹ Apoſtle ſayth, and we ſhall neuer finde the corrections Heb.12.11. pleaſant during the time ỹ God ſtryketh vs. We bee lyke little children when they bee corrected; wee feele it greeuous, becauſe our nature doth repugne againſt it. But howſoeuer wee lyke of it, yet God will vſe that fatherly meane, and by little and little teach vs to returne vnto him. But if wee will needes tempt his patience to the vttermoſt, hee muſt then vſe the yron rodde to breake our heades withall, as it is ſayd in the Pſalme: Wee ſhall bee driuen to feele the yron, Pſal.2.9. which ſhall ſerue, not to reclayme vs withall, but to breake vs in peeces and to conſume vs vtterly. And iuſtly. For wee doe heare what is ſayd here: If thou wilt not feare the glorious & dreadfull name of the eternall thy God. Whence come the deſpiſing and contempt of good doctrine, and the boldneſſe that wee take to ſinne, but of this, that wee are deafe to all admonitions? In deede if wee could yeelde our ſelues obedient to our God, with a good heart, and with a good affection, and abide at that point continually: wee ſhould no ſooner heare theſe threatnings but wee ſhould conſider thus: Alas, haue wee not deſerued a greeuous curſe at Gods hand, ſeeing wee haue thus ſtriuen againſt him? We ſee then that all the euill deedes and diſobedience which is committed, doe ſpring of ignorance and of the contempt of GOD, for that wee haue not regarded his maieſtie. Certainely this kinde of ſtubborneneſſe is not alwayes directly of ſet purpoſe and foredetermined malice: but yet is there ſuch rudeneſſe in vs, that wee yeelde not ſuch a reuerence to God, as is requiſite, nor the obedience whereby wee ſhould indeuour to ſubmit our ſelues to his worde. And becauſe wee bee ſo dulheaded that nothing can quicken vs vp, when wee be called vppon to ſubmit our ſelues vnto GOD: Moſes ſayth expreſly, This dreadfull name, this glorious name, to wit, The eternall, thy God. Whereas he ſayth, The eternall or Euerlaſting: that woorde importeth all glorie and Maieſtie; and therefore ought to rauiſh vs with aſtoniſhment: yea truely; for wee ſhoulde not haue this name of GOD alonely to vſe it coldely, for to ſay, GOD, GOD, as they doe which haue it continually in their lippes, and afterward doe let it vaniſh, as though it were a thing of nothing: but wee muſt ioyne both twaine together thus, GOD, euen the ſame that created vs; the ſame that holdeth all thinges in his hand, the ſame that is honored of the Angels, the ſame that is of glory infinite, the very ſame whome all the principalities of heauen cannot abide, at the ſight of whome all manner of creatures muſt be faine to caſt downe their eyes, euen the ſame which with one onely worde can make all the earth to tremble, the ſame that can remoue mountaines with his onely blaſte, that ſame that giueth being to all maner of creatures, finally the ſame that maintaineth and gouerneth all thinges, and ordereth all thinges wel, righteouſly, and with wiſedome: the ſame is hee that ſpeaketh vnto vs. And ſo yee ſee after what manner we vſe the wordes of Moſes, where hee ſaith, The eternall thy God, this is hee that ſpeaketh nowe vnto thee. Let vs therefore heare him ſpeake, in ſuch ſorte, as his maieſtie may poſſeſſe all our wittes, and that thereby wee may bee ſo humbled vnder the ſame, that when wee haue worſhipped him, wee may ſo remaine vnder his hand, as wee ſuffer our ſelues to bee gouerned by him, to followe the rule that hee hath deliuered vnto vs.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the Iudgement ſeate of our God, acknowledging the infinite faultes whereof wee bee guiltie, if hee liſted to execute the office of a Iudge againſt vs: and therewithall let vs pray him, not to omit to bee our father for our Lord Ieſus Chriſtes ſake: And that forſomuch as wee bee guiltie of many offences: wee may ſuffer our ſelues to be dayly cutte off from our ſinnes, ſo as nothing may hinder our comming to him to yeeld our ſelues in ſuch ſorte vnto him, as wee may renounce all our wicked affections more and more, vntil wee bee throughly ridde of them, and bee clothed with his heauenly righteouſneſſe. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almighty GOD heauenly father, &c.

On Fryday the xxvii. of March, 1556.

The CLxii. Sermon which is the tenth vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

59 Then will the Lorde make thy plagues marueilous, and the plagues of thy ſeede, greate plagues and ſure: euill and ſure diſeaſes.

60 And hee ſhall turne vpon thee all the plagues of Egypt, the preſence whereof thou diddeſt feare, and they ſhall cleaue vnto thee.

61 Alſo all the diſeaſes and all the plagues which be not written in the booke of this Lawe, the Lorde will cauſe to come vpon thee, vntil thou be deſtroyed.

62 And where as thou waſt in multitude as the ſtarres of heauen, thou ſhalt bee fewe in number, becauſe thou haſt not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde thy God.

63 And it ſhall come to paſſe, that like as the Lorde thy God reioyced ouer thee to doe thee good, and to multiplie thee: euen ſo will the Lorde reioyce ouer you to deſtroy you, and to bring you to nought: and thou ſhalt bee rooted out of the land to the which thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it.

64 And the Lorde will ſcatter thee among all people, from the one ende of the earth to the other ende of the earth. And there thou ſhalt ſerue other goddes, which neither thou nor thy fathers haue knowen: euen goddes of wood and of ſtone.

I Haue ſhewed here before, how ſlowe men are to bee taught by the chaſtiſementes which God doth ſend them. For vntill they perceiue the hand of God, and be driuen to vnderſtand, that it is hee with whome they haue to doe: of themſelues they waxe hardhearted: and which worſe is, they labour to cloke that which they ought to feele and ſee as it were before the eye: namely, that they bee ſmitten for their ſinnes. Foraſmuch therefore as men doe neuer willingly come to the knowledge of themſelues: GOD is faine to enforce them to it. This is the cauſe why Moſes, ouer and beſides that which hee repeateth afore, doth adde, That God will make the plagues of the deſpiſers of his Lawe, wonderfull. That is to ſay, they ſhall bee ſo notable, that euen in ſpite of their teeth, they ſhall be afraide of them as of thinges that were neuer knowen, nor in vſe. For wee ſee that accuſtomed thinges are deſpiſed: and euen ſo is it alſo with Gods benefites. Foraſmuch as the Sunne doth dayly riſe to lighten vs: who is hee that thinketh of the change and intercourſe which GOD maketh betweene the night and the day? according to the ſaying of the nineteenth pſalme, Pſal.19.2. that it is as if God ſhould waken vs vp euery morning, and tell vs with a lowde voyce how it is good reaſon, that his infinite goodnes, wiſedome and power ſhould bee knowen. But wee haue no eares to heare. What is the reaſon? It is becauſe the ſunne appeareth euery day in lyke order, by meanes whereof wee bee hardened with it: and becauſe it is ordinarie, we make none account of it: euen ſo is it concerning puniſhmentes. For the more our Lorde prouoketh vs to come vnto him, the more doe we take heart to become vnreformable. And therefore it is needefull for vs that his plagues ſhoulde bee woonderfull vnto vs, that wee may bee made afraide of them ſpite of our teeth. And againe hee addeth, That they ſhall bee great and certaine. The laſt worde that Moſes vſeth, dooth ſignify true or faithfull. Whereby GOD dooth vs to vnderſtand, that his plagues ſhall holde on ſtill, lyke as hee ſayd alſo that they ſhoulde cleaue vnto thē that were rebellious and could not bee wonne by gentleneſſe: theſe plagues muſt bee rooted in them: and for that cauſe dooth hee terme them Certaine. Here haue wee to conſider our owne hardneſſe, that euery of vs may bee the more vigilant in looking to the hand of GOD and conceiue the better thereof. Foraſmuch as wee bee ſo dull of nature, we muſt learne to ſtirre vp our ſelues. And let vs feare leaſt GOD ſhould accompliſh that which is pronounced in this text: Namely that when his accuſtomed puniſhmēts profit vs not, then hee muſt needes proceede againſt vs after ſuch a ſtraunge and horrible manner, as ſhall make vs afraide, and cauſe the hayre of all them to ſtand vp which doe but heare ſpeake of it: yea, and (as the Prophet r.19.3. Ieremy ſayth) to make mens eares tingle, whē the reporte thereof commeth into foraine Countries.

Let vs bee afraide therefore, leaſt God doe worke after that maner, when hee perceaueth ſuch ſtubbornneſſe in vs, as hee cannot winne vs by meaſurable and tollerable corrections. And therewithal let vs alſo take warning by this word Of ſure plagues; that when God hath followed vs to reduce vs to the way of ſaluatiō, and we haue ſtill fled from him, the plagues muſt alſo continue to the vttermoſt both vpon vs and vpon all our lynage, inſomuch that when wee thinke to ſee an end therof, we ſhal not haue yet begunne. Let vs not therefore make account to eſcape, when the plague hath laſted a while: for accordingly as wee proceede on in our naughtineſſe; ſo muſt God proceede with his rigor and augment it more and more, according as hee ſeeth vs to waxe worſe and worſe. Then let vs not doe as we ſee moſt men doe, which cry out and ſtorme at it, ſaying: And when ſhall this haue an end? How happeneth it that God taketh no pitie on mee to eaſe me of my paynes? But in the meane while haue they any minde to reconcile themſelues to God? Do they cōfeſſe their faults and bewaile them? Nay rather they be at the very poynt to defy him. Yet doe they talke of their afflictions, and make complaintes: but in the meane while no man looketh to the ground of the miſchief to amend it. Therefore when we haue bin ſtubborne againſt our God, let vs not thinke it ſtraunge, that he ſhould purſue vs with ſuch rigour: but let vs acknowledge that it is expedient for vs. In the meane ſpace, let vs not forget this that is written here: namely, that God threatneth ſinners, to the ende to bring them backe againe, notwithſtanding that they haue bin as folke forlorne and paſt hope of recouery. For God ſpeaketh not to ſuch as had committed but one onely fault, or ſome two or three faultes, or to ſuch as hauing done amiſſe, did not wholy giue themſelues ouer to wickedneſſe: but he ſpeaketh vnto ſuch offenders, as had made warre long time againſt him, and deſpiſed his word, and bin deafe to all his warnings, and had made but a mock of them. Yet notwithſtanding he doth not ceaſe to threaten them ſtil. And to what end and purpoſe? Euen to winne them by his amiable goodnes. So then although we haue bin miſaduiſed for a time, yet is it better for vs to turne late than neuer: and ſo ſhall wee fare the better by that which is ſhewed vs here by Moſes. Now conſequently hee ſayth, That God will cauſe the plagues of Egypt to turne vppon the Iewes. Wee vnderſtand that God did ſo afflict the Egyptians, as that they were a terror vnto his own people, inſomuch that the Iewes themſelues were aſtoniſhed thereat, notwithſtanding that they were exempted from the euil. When the Egyptians were oppreſſed to the vttermoſt, thereby the Iewes vnderſtoode that God ſpared them, and that hee held them in his protection, becauſe hee ſmote their enemies, and in the meane ſpace did keepe thē in peace and reſt. And this wee ſee chiefely in his killing of all the firſt borne of Egypt: For GOD had commaunded, that the doore poſtes of the Exod.12.7. houſes ſhould be marked with the bloud of the Paſchall Lambe. There God gaue a ſingular teſtimonie vnto the Iewes that hee woulde ſpare them; and during that while he turned his wrath and vengeance againſt their enemies. But now he ſaith here cleane contrary, That God will cauſe thoſe very plagues to returne backe. For the worde that Moſes vſeth doth importe as much as if he ſhoulde ſay, Thy fathers ſawe howe God turned his wrath againſt the Egyptians, but nowe they muſt returne backe againe vppon thee, becauſe thou makeſt none account to honor and ſerue him, which hath loued thee ſo much, and to whome thou art ſo greatly bound. By this ſaying we be admoniſhed, that when God hath forborne vs for a time, and moreouer for the loue that he beareth towardes vs, hath puniſhed our enemies, and ſhewed himſelf a contrarie partie againſt them for to maintaine vs: wee muſt not therefore flatter our ſelues, but rather bee more diligent to walke in his feare. For when we will not acknowledge ſuch grace, but rather abuſe it quite contrarie: it is good reaſon that our Lorde ſhould cauſe the thinges to returne backe vppon vs, which hee had ſent vppon our enemies, thereby to ſhewe vs that hee held vs in his defence and ſafegarde. It is ſayd that the people of God ſhall be as a fyre kindled to conſume all the wicked and vnbeleeuers. And God will ſhewe the ſame in very deede. But if we will needes kindle his wrath through our ſinnes and tranſgreſſions: then the fyre that ſhoulde haue bin vppon the vnfaithful, muſt fall backe vppon our ſelues, and we muſt periſhe therewith. Let vs therefore conſider well of this worde, and let this which is recited concerning the land of Egypt be vnto vs a myrror and a learning, that we at this day may apply it to our owne vſe; according as all theſe thinges bee written for vs. Let vs marke (I ſay) what our Lorde did in olde time for the Iewes, and let vs vnderſtand that thereby he gaue record what loue hee beareth to his Church. But yet therewithal, let vs take warning to yeelde our ſelues in ſuch wiſe obedient vnto him, as he may continue to doe vs good, and that this couenant may be confirmed betweene Exo.23.22. him and vs, Namely, I will bee a friend vnto thy friends, and an enemy vnto thyne enemyes. It is certaine that this promiſe was giuen to Abraham: howbeit, to the ende that wee alſo ſhould inioy the ſame. Now if we cãnot ſuffer God to be our friend, but rather wil make war againſt him, and breake the faith and aliance that is eſtabliſhed betwixt vs: then whereas afore, hee did ſet himſelfe againſt our enemies, now hee muſt be faine to fall vpon vs, and to make vs to feele his infinite power, vntill wee be quite confounded and brought to nought. Therefore while our Lorde ſpareth vs, let vs acknowledge his goodneſſe, and not prouoke his wrath to make vs to feele his power in ſmiting vs. And moreouer, when as we ſee, that whereas the vnfaythful ſhoulde be ſtriken at his hand, wee feele the firſt blowes: let vs acknowledge that it is meete it ſhould be ſo, becauſe we haue broken the peace which he had made with vs. Let vs not thereupon be diſcouraged, howſoeuer the worlde goe, but let vs ſtick to him ſtil. Furthermore let vs not tary till he proceede to extremitie. And if we be not ſo wiſe as to haue that diſcretion at the firſt, yet at leaſtwiſe let vs benefite our ſelues by the aduertiſements which are ſet down in this place. After that manner ſhoulde wee put this text in vre.

Now Moſes ſaith expreſly, that the Iewes feared the plagues of the Egyptians, and that they had good cauſe to ſtand the more in dread of them, for that in beholding them vpon their enemies, they were then aſtoniſhed at them, & therefore it was good reaſon that they ſhould magnifie the goodneſſe of God: but howſoeuer the caſe ſtoode, the plagues which God ſent vpon the Egyptians, were ſo great and ſo horrible, that the Iewes muſt needes be amazed at them, albeit that they themſelues were free from thẽ, becauſe they beheld ſuch an alteratiõ of nature. Nowe if they feared the wrath of God whileſt it was vppon their enemies, and had therein a teſtimonie of his loue & goodneſſe: what ought they then to doe when God ruſheth vpon their heades, and that they muſt be faine to feele the ſelfe ſame plagues which came vppon the Egyptians? Muſt they not needes be doubly diſmaied? Yes: and therefore we ſee that this threatning is not ſuperfluous; but ſerueth to waken them, according as we haue ſayd herebefore, and as experience ſheweth that we be too much deafe, yea and as it were ſenſeleſſe, when God doeth warne vs; and that he muſt ſmite vppon vs as it were with a hammer, or elſe will wee neuer vnderſtand what he ſaith. And ſo ye ſee the reaſon why this word is expreſly ſet downe. Now when we ſee that God puniſheth the wicked, let vs learne to haue ſuch feare of his vengeance, as we doe not tarie till he wrappe vs vp amongeſt thoſe whom wee haue ſeene puniſhed afore vs. This is the thing that S. Paul meant in ſaying, Deceiue not your ſelues, neither let any man abuſe you with vaine words: for the wrath of God Eph.5.6. hath bin woont to fall vppon the vnbeleeuers & diſobedient for ſuch offences. Hereby S. Paul ſheweth to the faithfull, that they ſhoulde not feare the hand of God alonly when they ſee it armed againſt them, and when it toucheth their perſõs: but they ought to vſe the opportunitie in reforming thẽſelues, euen when God is ſo good vnto them as to puniſh the reprobates & rebels before their eyes. Let vs therfore be afraid when God puniſheth the wicked, and let vs be aduiſed to acknowledge him for our Iudge aforehand; and that we haue wel deſerued to be handled as ſeuerely as they, were it not that he of his goodnes forbeareth vs. Let this touch vs to the quick, that we may be brought to repentance. Thus ſhoulde we yet further put this ſaying of Moſes in practiſe.

Nowe hee addeth, that God (ouer & beſide all this which he hath declared,) will ſende yet other aduerſities and afflictions vpon the Iewes. In deede Moſes did recken vp many ſortes of plagues heretofore, and hee thought it not ynough to haue ſaide at once, God will chaſtiſe thee after ſuch and ſuch manner: but he redoubled it, becauſe he ſawe men ſo groſſe and heauy that they bee not ſo moued at the firſt, as were to be wiſhed. But our Lordes intent heere, is to declare that hee hath meanes of vengeance incomprehenſible, and moe than can bee vttered by wordes; inſomuch that if a man ſhould make a Roll of them, and rehearſe a whole million of ſeuerall ſorts of them, yet ſhoulde he not comprife them al: for God hath other hidden means vnknowen to men, wherewith to puniſh them that doe ſtill rancle in malice againſt him. And that is according as wee ſhall ſee in the two and thirtith chapter, in the ſolemne ſong that Moſes maketh there. Theſe thinges are laide vp Deut.32.34 in my Treaſurie (ſaith the Lord) ſo as I haue my whole Cheſtes full of horrible plagues, ſuch as neuer were imagined nor vnderſtood by men. As much is ſaide in this text.

And ſo let vs remember two thinges, to wit, when wee haue had experience of the power of God by his doings, or reade the threatenings that he hath made againſt the tranſgreſſours of his lawe, and doe beholde the practiſe and execution thereof: let vs bee amaſed thereat and ſay, How now? What a thing is it to prouoke the Lorde? For if hee ſpare vs on the one ſide, hee can well aſſaile vs on the other; and when wee bee deliuered from one hundred of afflictions, he hath three hundred others readie for vs: and when wee haue eſcaped all thoſe, yet haue wee gotten nothing. Let vs therefore thinke vpon theſe thinges. Nowe let vs looke what a ſort of threatenings there are in the holy Scripture, howe many ſortes of deathes there bee that God hath denounced againſt the deſpiſers of his maieſtie, and againſt all them that deſpiſe and ſet light by his worde: it woulde wearie vs to recite them. And in reading the hyſtories, wee ſee the examples that God hath giuen vs of his wrath: and that not in one ſort; wee ſhoulde needes bee at our wittes ende if wee ſhoulde thinke but vppon the tenth part of them. And if wee ſhoulde ſet our mindes to marke and to note them all: what a thing were it? The firſt thing therefore which wee haue to doe, is to be diligent to cal to rememberance all the threatnings whereby God woulde tame our wicked affections, and holde vs enbridled: and therewithall to compare the thinges that are ſet downe vnto vs, howe that God hath not threatened in vaine, but hath accompliſhed whatſoeuer hee hath ſaide. Let vs thinke on that. And moreouer let vs vnderſtand, that beſides the meanes which are contained in the holy ſcripture, God hath yet a great many of other meanes to puniſh men; and we ſee how he doeth dayly bring vp newe. If we had eyes, or rather woulde open them, wee might well ſee that God doeth daily ſende newe kindes of his wrath: and that is to the end which I haue touched heretofore, namely to make his plagues wonderful, that men may be inforced to thinke vppon them becauſe they ſee that God worketh not after the ordinary courſe of nature: but after a ſort that hath not bin earſt knowen. When euery of vs hath well ſtudied all the leſſons that be declared vnto vs in the holy Scripture; and made our cõmoditie of the examples & puniſhments yͤ bee there mentioned; let vs conclude yͤ God hath yet a great many mo meanes than be expreſſed, which men neuer thought vpõ. And yͤ thing he hath made manifeſt euer ſince yͤ the law was written: and he doth not yet ceaſſe to do the ſame ſtill, that al maner of excuſe may be taken from vs. If a man looke vpon the diſeaſes that bee at this day in the worlde, hee ſhall ſee that there be many which were not expreſſed in the law of Moſes, or in yͤ dayes of our fathers. Howe hath whoredome bin puniſhed by diſeaſes that be come vppe of late? Who knewe the pocks a hundred yeres ago? That is one horrible plague which God hath ſent vpon yͤ worlde. And it is aſmuch as if hee had ſtretched his arme out of heauen, and ſayde, No, they knowe mee no more to be their Iudge, they harden their harts againſt al the plagues yͤ men did know & receiue afore time, they make but a figge at it; but now I will make them to vnderſtand; that in my Coffers, and in my ſtorehouſes there are yet other roddes that be incomprehenſible to them. God ſheweth this: and wee perceiue that wee cannot take a better courſe to profite by this doctrine, than to feare the rods and puniſhments, which be not written in the booke of the lawe: otherwiſe, it is meete that we vnderſtand that GOD is ſtil our Iudge, howeſoeuer the world goe.

Now he addeth: That albeit they were as many in number as the ſtars of heauen, God would waſt them in ſuch wiſe as there ſhould but a handfull of them remaine. Here muſt we remember that which was ſpoken of herebefore. For whereas God vſeth this ſimilitude of the ſtarres of heauen, he hath reſpect to the promiſe which he had made to his ſeruant Abraham: namely yͤ his ſeede ſhould be in number like the ſtarres of heauen. So God ſpake. But now, to the end yͤ the Iewes ſhould not preſume to thinke yͤ God was alwayes bound to multiply them, he ſayth, No, I wil conſume you whatſoeuer come of it, and you ſhalbee but a handfull of people. It ſeemeth at the firſt ſight that here is contrarietie. For where as God promiſed ſo great a ſeed vnto his ſeruant Abrahã, it was not grounded vpon the mirites of men. And why? For ſeeing that the promiſe dependeth vpon the free goodneſſe of God, muſt it not be kept, albeit that men be wicked? Yes in deede. But we haue to conſider, that God doeth not alwayes accompliſh his promiſes after our faſhion, nor according to our carnall capacitie: he hath means incredible to vs, & which we vnderſtand not, vntill they appeare by effect. Whereas he promiſeth to multiply his Church, that is to ſay, to make it to proſper, if he ſee that vnder colour thereof the hypocrits take libertie to doe euil, he withdraweth his hand. Let vs therefore conſider wel, that foraſmuch as the Iewes were puft vp wͭ a fooliſh preſumption, and thought it impoſſible for God to diminiſh them, ſeeing he had ſpoken the worde that he woulde increaſe them: foraſmuch I ſay as they abuſed the goodnes of GOD and falſified his promiſe through their hypocriſie, hee conſumed them and brought them to a ſmall number. Neuertheleſſe, of that ſmall number, there came a great ofſpring againe, yea and ſo great a one, that men might ſo much the better perceiue his trueth and mercie, howbeit after an other maner. Therefore ſaieth hee by his Prophet E- Eſa.10.22. ſay in the tenth Chapter: Although you were as the ſande of the ſea; (for he did alwayes ſend them backe to the promiſe made to Abraham,) although thy ſeede (as I ſaide) be as the ſande of the ſea; yet ſhall but a ſmall remnant bee ſaued. But when ye are altogether conſumed, yet ſhall that little remnant bee diſperſed ouer all the earth, as if out of a little fountaine ſhoulde iſſue forth a greate riuer, or a great lake, wherewith verie many lands ſhold be watered. So ſhal it be. Nowe then wee perceiue, that although GOD puniſh the hypocrites which abuſe his promiſes, yet faileth hee not to performe his ſayings ſtill, howbeit by an extraordinary meane; as we haue ſeene it in the Popedome, and as is to bee ſeene yet ſtil. For the Papiſts haue ouerflowed the whole worlde with ſuperſtition and ydolatrie, and all manner of euill: yea and moreouer thy harden their heartes in pride, and ſcoffe at God with open mouth. Howe nowe, ſay they? Are not we the church? Is it not ſaid that Ieſus Chriſt Matt.28.20 ſhalbe with vs vnto the end of the worlde? Can he forſake his Church? Yet do they continually crucifie him as much as in them lieth, they ſpit in his face, and doe him all the reproch in the worlde; they make him as if hee were a priſoner or a bondſlaue amongſt them: and they conſider not that ſuch a horrible deſtruction happeneth throughout ẏ whole worlde, through Gods iuſt vengeance for the ſhameleſſe hypocriſie which hath beene in them that haue rebelled againſt the Goſpel: yet notwithſtanding, GOD hath not omitted to ſaue his people, as it were vnder the earth. And in our dayes he hath raiſed his Church, as if ẏ bones of rotten bodies ſhold recouer fleſh and ſtrength againe. For what were we through our vnbeliefe? Yee ſee howe it is a meruailous reſurrection that God hath wrought in that behalfe. Marke well therefore that when our Lorde promiſeth to maintaine his Church and to preſerue it, the ſame belongeth nothing to them that abuſe his name falſely, nor to them that come to deſpiſe him vnder colour that hee is gentle and mercifull. For they ſhall euermore be diſappointed of that fauour which God hath ſo reſerued vnto his people: for they bereaue themſelues thereof through their owne malice and vnthankfulneſſe. Yet notwithſtanding howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, God is euer faithful, and wil find incomprehenſible meanes to giue place to his trueth, by fighting againſt the malice of men. That is the thing which we haue to remember concerning this text, where he ſaith: That he will waſt the Iewes though they were as the ſtarres in the skie.

And in verie deede the ſame appeared euen in Ieſus Chriſt the head of the church. And therfore we ought not to thinke it ſtraunge that the members of the bodie ſhould be faſhioned like vnto him. Whence came Ieſus Chriſt when God his father ſent him to be the Redeemer? The Prophet Eſay ſaieth that hee ſhoulde ſpring from a ſtocke, as if a tree were hewen Eſa.11.1. downe and there remained but the ſtub within the grounde, in ſuch ſort as men might tread vpon it. It is not ſaide that hee ſhould come out of houſe of Dauid, but out of the houſe of Ieſſee, who was a Neatheard and a man deſpiſed. The ſame was I ſay the father of Dauid a man of no eſtimation. Albeit that Dauid was ſo excellent a king, that he was choſen of God to be magnified to the skies; yet the Prophet ſheweth, that when Ieſus Chriſt ſhoulde come into the worlde, it ſhould not bee with any ſhewe of that royal maieſtie that was in Dauid, but he ſhould come out of the houſe of Iſay, as if he ſhould come out of a heard. And that euen then alſo hee ſhould not come of a tree, but of a ſtocke, that were cut off. And in what manner? And after what faſhion? As a little braunch, ſaith he. Nowe ſeeing that God did thus to the head of the church, we muſt vnderſtande that all the bodie muſt be ſutelike: but this maketh not that the hypocrites ſhall be partakers of that which God reſerueth to his elect, and whom he hath choſen, and indeed doe ſhewe themſelues to be his children, and bee obedient vnto him, as to their father: which alſo come not alonely with all confidence, but alſo are drawen with a right affection to honor him. And wheras we perceiue ẏ God doth at this day ſende horrible deſtructions into the worlde; let vs vnderſtande that he practiſeth that which is heere declared: yet let vs not doubt, but that he doth euermore preſerue his Church: let vs not doubt but he doth vpholde vs as oft as wee haue our recourſe to him, according to this ſaying, that whoſoeuer calleth vppon the name of the Ioel.2.32. Lord ſhalbe ſaued, yea euen amiddeſt the greateſt troubles that may be. Though heauen and earth ſhould run together, yet are wee ſure that by calling vppon the name of God, we ſhall bee preſerued. But let vs take heede, that wee abuſe not his name, to make thereof a fained cloake: for he can waſt vs well ynough. And if we boaſt that wee bee of his Church; when he hath cut vs off, he can quickely rayſe him a new people: and augment them in ſuch wiſe as his trueth ſhall not be defaced, and yet we ſhall periſh.

After that Moſes hath thus ſpoken, he addeth: That like as God had taken pleaſure in dooing good to the Iewes, euen ſo he woulde take pleaſure in perſecuting them, vntill he had conſumed them and vtterly rooted them out. Heere Moſes doeth firſt of all ſhewe what affection GOD beareth towardes theſe whome hee hath choſen out for himſelfe, and meaneth to take for his flock. It is certaine that God is not ſubiect to any humane paſſions: yet can not he ſufficiently manifeſt either the goodneſſe or the loue that he hath towards vs, but by transfiguring himſelf, as if he were a mortall man, ſaying that he woulde take pleaſure in doing vs good. Let vs vnderſtand therefore that God holdeth vs ſo deere as if a father ſhoulde ſhoulde delight and reioyce to doe good to his children. When hee ſeeth them according to his minde, and to doe him honour, and to bee obedient vnto him: then his feeding of them, and his clothing of them, is a comfort to him, and it doeth him good to ſee them in their brauerie; for that is the very felicitie of a father. GOD likeneth himſelfe to mortall men, and ſaieth that hee will delight to doe vs good. And therefore wee cannot magnifie the ineſtimable goodneſſe of our God too much, ſeeing hee ſtoopeth ſo lowe as to tell vs, that his whole delight is in making vs to inioy his benefites, and in demeaning himſelfe in ſuch wiſe towards vs, as wee may haue cauſe to praiſe him, and finally, in yeelding to all our deſires. But what? Wee cannot away with it: we are not able to apprehende that, for wee bee not able to conſider it.

Wee ſee that God is (as yee woulde ſay) waywarde towardes vs, wee ſee that hee doeth not onely bereaue vs of his bleſſings, but is alſo angrie with vs: and to be ſhort, wee perceiue in him nothing, but all manner of rigour. And what is the cauſe hereof? Verily that wee ſhut the gate againſt his goodneſſe, and will not ſuffer him to vſe (as yee would ſay) his naturall diſpoſition. Loe heere a thing that ſhould make vs the better to acknowledge our faultes, and not to accuſe GOD of any acceſſiue crueltie, when hee dealeth not with vs after our lyking. For it is certaine that hee will take pleaſure in doing vs good: but on the otherſide let vs conſider alſo, that hee muſt in likewiſe delight to doe vs euill. And why ſo? Verily becauſe that he is iuſt. In deede, if wee did ſuffer GOD to vſe his owne inclination towardes vs; he would beſtowe infinite benefites vppon vs, and we lyuing in this worlde ſhoulde bee as in Paradiſe: but becauſe of our ſinnes, wee muſt liue heere like wretched wanderers, wee muſt languiſh in many miſeries, wee muſt dwell in continuall feare and in doubt, and wee muſt grone in great vnreſt: it muſt bee euen ſo. And wherefore? Becauſe God is iuſt.

This is the verie pleaſure that is ſpoken of in this texte. According whereunto it is ſaide, Eſa.1.24. that GOD will reioyce and bee gladde, when hee hath puniſhed the wicked, and maintained his maieſtie againſt them, for that they haue deſpiſed him and ſet him at nought. Neuertheleſſe, it is likewiſe true that hee ſaieth by his Prophet Eſay, that hee doeth it vnwillingly. Alas (ſaieth hee) muſt I needes reuenge mee of mine enimies? GOD crieth there alas, as if hee were in ſorrowe and anguiſh for it. I muſt (ſaieth hee) take comfort in auenging mee of mine enemies. Thoſe whom hee termeth his enemies, are the children whome hee had adopted, and which boaſted themſelues to bee his people. And howe doeth hee comfort himſelfe in them? Euen by giuing them ouer, and by driuing them away. But in the meane while, hee ſheweth that it is againſt his will, when hee muſt ſo beate men downe with maine ſtrokes, howbeit that hee can none otherwiſe doe. Yet notwithſtanding, in verie deede God is able to tame the heartes of men without any great violence: for (as wee haue ſaide) hee is not ſubiect to our paſſions. But heereby we be to conſider howe his intent is to declare, that our vnreformable naughtineſſe is the cauſe why hee is faine to purſue vs after ſuch manner as is ſpoken of heere, and that hee is faine to take pleaſure in doing vs harme, wherein the order of nature is after a ſort quite altered and chaunged: but all is through our owne fault, and wee our ſelues are to blame for it, and it is not for vs to ſeeke any other reaſon thereof than our owne ſinne, which hath kindeled his vengeance to the vttermoſt. Thus much concerning that ſentence.

Nowe for a concluſion it is ſayde, That God will roote out this people from the lande wherein hee had planted them, and that he would diſperſe them amongeſt all the nations of the world. And that there this wretched people, (which were earſt in a countrey of freedome, wherein God had ſette them to the ende that his ſeruice and pure Religion ſhoulde dwell there) ſhall ſerue ſtraunge Gods, euen ydols of Wodde and Stone. Firſt we ſee that albeit the Land of Chanaan was giuen in Inheritance to the people of Iſrael, yet they failed not to bee put out and baniſhed, when they abuſed the fauour that had beene ſhewed vnto them. GOD had planted them there, euen as though hee had ſet them at his owne hande. Loe (ſaide hee) heere is my reſtingplace and yours: hee intended to dwell amongſt them himſelfe, and thereuppon hee promiſed to Pſal.132.14 giue them reſt there, inſomuch that although all other people ſhoulde bee diſplaced and remoued too and fro, yet ſhoulde the children of Abraham inioy the heritage of that lande ſtill. Notwithſtanding, this letted not God to driue them out againe, and to ſcatter them abroade with the winde, becauſe they had defiled that lande, which ſhoulde haue beene kept holy to his name.

Nowe ſith it is ſo, let vs not thinke it ſtraunge though God at this day doe ſende many changes into the worlde: for he hath giuen no ſuch priuiledge to any Nation as to ſay vnto them, You ſhal inhabite this lande, as the Lande of Chanaan was giuen to the linage of Abraham. But wee ſee howe GOD is offended, wee ſee mens miſdoings as haynous as can bee. Nowe then if GOD remooue men, let vs vnderſtande that it is for their ſinnes. Moreouer, let vs returne to the eternall reſt, whereunto the Apoſtle leadeth vs in the Epiſtle to the Hebrues, Hebr.4.9.& & 11.26. Hauing ſpoken of the reſt of the land of Chanaan, hee ſaieth that wee muſt looke vnto a reſt that is higher. For the children of GOD are commonly as wayfarers in this worlde, as Sainct Paul termeth them, putting himſelfe in the number: but let vs euermore direct our courſe and indeuour to this heritage, which is promiſed vs in heauen: for wee 2.Cor.5.6. ſhall not bee diſappointed of that heritage, ſo wee continue in our vocation whereunto

God hath called vs. Neuertheleſſe it is ſaid, that Exod. 32. 34 they which giue themſelues ouer vnto wickedneſſe ſhalbe wiped out of the booke of life. Not that Gods choſen ſhall euer periſh: but it is ſpoken in reſpect of ſuch folke as thinke it ynough for them to beare ẏ name of Gods children, and to haue beene baptiſed, and to receiue the Lords ſupper, and ſuch like thinges: and make no further regarde. But our Lorde telleth vs that although it ſeeme for a time that they be written and enrolled in his Regiſter, becauſe they bee taken to be of the company of the faithfull: yet ſhall they not faile to be wiped out. So then let vs aduiſe our ſelues, and ſo long as it ſhall pleaſe God to keepe vs in this worlde, let vs walke ſo vnder his obedience, as his hande may euer bee ſtretched out to preſerue and maintaine vs: Let vs ſo ſticke vnto him as wee may haue libertie to honour and ſerue him. For it is a dreadfull deſolation which Moſes ſpeaketh of heere, namely to be no more of the body of the church nor to haue any more the ſhewe or ſhape of Religion: and yet is this ſeene throughout the worlde at this day. Therefore let vs marke, that one of the greateſt benefites which GOD can beſtowe vppon vs in this tranſitorie life, is to let vs haue ſome little corner wherein to aſſemble our ſelues in his name, to call vpon him and to profeſſe our ſelues to be his people. This ought to be more eſteemed amongſt vs than either meate or drinke or any thing elſe. Howbeit verie few do think thereon. Yet notwithſtanding we muſt needs confeſſe, that albeit we haue ſufficient foode, and in the meane while forget God, our ſtate is miſerable. And if we think not thereon, we bewray our owne beaſtlyneſſe: for God telleth vs that this benefite which is ſpoken of here, is farre greater than all the reſt, that is to wit that we may worſhip him in pureneſſe, & be gathered together vnder that head which he hath appointed vnto vs, namely our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore while wee haue ſuch priuiledge to heare the worde of God, to call vpon his name, and to walke according to his Goſpell: let vs harken vnto it, for feare leaſt God diſperſe & ſcatter vs abroad in like ſort as he hath diſperſed the Iewes. And ſpecially let vs ſtande in feare of this threatning, namely, to bee made ſuch beaſts, as to honour ydols againe, as we ſee it is become of others, who are a good preſident to vs of the vengeance of God, whereof wee our ſelues alſo haue felt our part. For wee haue beene as bondſlaues vnder ydolatrie, and vnderlings vnto the abhominations of the Popedome; and that was for our ſins, and for the ſins of our fathers. Seeing we haue earſt felt the blowes, yea, and beene as looking glaſſes vnto others: ſhoulde wee nowe be ſo brutiſh, to prouoke our God in ſuch wiſe, as he ſhoulde bee forced as it were, to depriue vs of the grace that he hath giuen vs? Let vs then vſe this benefite and treaſure of the Goſpel, whileſt our Lord giueth vs place where to hide vs as it were vnder his hand while he doeth gouerne and guide vs, and while we be knit together in one bodie: that hee may bee magnified amongſt vs with one accorde not onely with the mouth, but alſo ſpecially with our life: to the ende that vppon our indeuouring of our ſelues to honour him, hee on his ſide may continue his good doing towardes vs: and that this threatening bee not executed vppon our heads, that is; to bee diſperſed heere and there, and to bee conſtrained againe to worſhippe ydoles, and other deade and ſenſeleſſe things.

Nowe let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God, with acknowledgement of our ſinnes; beſeeching him to touch vs with ſuch repentance, as being aſhamed of our ſinnes, wee may ſeeke altogether to put our ſelues wholly into his handes, and that by obtaining forgiueneſſe of him, we may alſo feele that hee hath reformed vs, and that wee bee in his fauour, to giue ouer our ſelues altogether to his holy will. And that albeit there is alwayes much to bee amended in vs, and that our luſtes and affections doe drawe vs quite away from that which hee commaundeth vs; yet neuertheleſſe wee may not ceaſſe to ſtriue againſt them, and to yeelde our ſelues wholly vnto him, and to inforce our ſelues thereunto more and more, knowing that the ſame is our ſoueraine welfare: and that although hee ſhewe vs nowe and then ſome tokens of rigour in correcting vs, yet wee may learne to profite thereby, to the amending of our ſinnes, ſo as wee may bee brought to the perfection wherunto hee dayly calleth vs. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the xxviij. of March, 1556.

The CLXIII. Sermon, which is the eleuenth vpon the eight and twentith Chapter.

65 Amongeſt theſe people alſo ſhalt thou haue no reſt, neither ſhall there bee any reſt to the ſole of thy foote. Moreouer the Lorde wil giue thee a trembling heart, and dymneſſe of eyes, and a heauineſſe of minde.

66 And thy life ſhalbe hanging before thee: thou ſhalt be afeard day & night, and be vncertaine of thy life.

67 Thou ſhalt ſay in the morning,O that it were night: and at night thou ſhalt ſay, O that it were morning: becauſe of the fearefulneſſe of thy heart,wherewith thou ſhalt bee afraide, and becauſe of the ſight of thine eyes, which thou ſhalt ſee.

68 And the Lorde will make thee to returne into Egypt by ſhippes, by the way, whereof I haue ſaid vnto thee, that thou ſhouldeſt not go about to ſee it any more: and there ſhalt thou bee ſolde to thine enemies for bondmen and bondwomen,and none ſhall bye thee.

AMongſt the benefites that we deſire in this preſent life, one is to haue ſome reſtingplace and ſome harbor to lodge in. Though a man be poore yea and troubled on all ſides: yet if he haue ſome little hole to hide his heade in, that he may reſort thither: he careth not for all the reſt. But if we knowe not where to become, nor haue any friend to receiue vs,nor any nooke nor corner wherein to reſt vs; our ſtate is then extremely miſerable. That is the cauſe why Moſes now (after hee hath declared that God woulde driue away and baniſh the Iewes out of the lande which hee had giuen them to inherite and to reſt in for euer) addeth,that they ſhall be as vagabondes and haue no certaine dwelling place, but be toſſed from poſt to piller.

Nowe it is certaine,as we haue alreadie ſaide yͤ this ſhal oftentimes happen to the faithful,but it is for another purpoſe:& God doth in yͤ mean ſpace comfort them, & it is behoueful that their patience ſhould be tried after that maner. For the thing wherein wee ſhewe our obedience towarde God; is when as hee mingleth vs among the wicked, ſo as wee ſeeme not to differ a whit from them,but all goes to hauocke (as they ſay) and yet notwithſtanding we continue ſounde in heart,and commit our ſelues into the handes of our God, knowing that hee hath not forgotten vs,though hē ſuffer vs to be ſo toſſed. Contrariwiſe all deſpiſers of the Lawe doe beare their mark, as if they were burned with a ſearingyron in their hearts, and do know that God is againſt them, and that their ſinnes doe reproue them. Albeit that men doe not accuſe them, yet doe they feele a ſufficient teſtimonie in themſelues to confound them withall. And that is it that Moſes doth farther adde,ſaying: That vnto ſuch as are hard hearted againſt Gods worde,God will giue a trembling heart, a ſorowfull minde, and daſeling eyes, ſo as in the morning they ſhall ſay: May I ſee night? And when night is come: Alas,how ſhall I paſſe it ouer? Can I continue vntill the morning? Inſomuch that their life ſhall as it were hang before them, and they ſhalbe in miſerable vnquietneſſe. That is the thing wherein the faithfull doe chiefly differ from the deſpiſers of God, and wherein their ſtate doth varie. For albeit that yͤ faithfull do ſuffer much trouble in this worlde, yet haue they euermore wherewith to comfort themſelues: according as our Iohn.16.30. Lorde Ieſus ſaieth in Saint Iohn. You ſhalbee vexed in this worlde (ſaieth hee) but yet ſhall ye not faile to haue comfort in me. Wee muſt conſider what is the grounde of our comfort; namely that they which ſtande aſſured in the protection of God,do euermore commit their life into his hands, as we ſee Dauid did when hee was beſet on all ſides. When he was threatened with a hundred deaths,he ſaid, Lord,I commend my ſoule vnto thee, thou art faithfull and thou haſt Pſal.31.6. redeemed mee. He knewe that God had maintained him euen vnto that houre; and that indeede without the marueilous power of him,hee coulde not haue liued ſo long. And thereupon he concludeth thus:becauſe that God is faithful, hee will ſurely haue pitie on mee: and therefore I commit my ſoule to his keeping. Loe at what point the faithfull are. They verie well perceiue the daungers wherewith they be beſet:they perceiue that their life is but a ſmoke that might vaniſh away out of hand: they ſee there bee many ambuſhes laide for them, inſomuch that all the worlde is againſt them, and that they cannot ſafely ſteppe forwarde one ſtep without incountring of ſome miſerie. The faithfull vnderſtande all this: ouer and beſide, that they bee ſubiect to all the chaunges of this humaine life, and that they bee fraile as all the children of Adam bee, they ſee well there is no reſtingplace for them heere. But yet heerewithall they knowe that God hath care ouer them, and that hee is their protector. That is the thing which they reſt vppon. Hauing ſuch a ſtay,they holde on their way forward:but yet are they not careleſſe; for we muſt not be ſo blockiſh as to caſt no perils: for we coulde not call vppon God if wee ſawe not the perils wherein we bee. And it prouoketh vs to ſeeke vnto our God,when wee ſee that without him wee ſhoulde periſh euerie minute of an houre. The faithfull then muſt not be without feare, but reſting vppon the tuition of God,they muſt ſticke vnto him,& aſſure themſelues that he will neuer forſake them. That is it wherein they reioyce. Yea and they goe yet farther. For although they be to go among thorns; although they bee driuen to make many leapes, although they catch now & then ſome knocks; yea and although they bee altogether ſhut vp & haue no way out: yet notwithſtanding through the power of faith they euermore reioyce euen in the midſt of all their ſorowes & perplexities. On the contrary ſide, the deſpiſers of God be as blind as is poſſible,and do cloſe their eyes, leaſt they might ſee their infirmities, & ſo do harden thẽſelues. Yet for all this,God compelleth them to look vnto thẽſelues,& then are they vndone: they be ouerraught with feare & amaſedneſſe. It is not their manner to make their recourſe vnto God. For they vnderſtand nothing of his protection, nay contrariwiſe they ſhunne him, & flee as far from him as they can, bycauſe they conceiue nothing in him but dreadfull maieſtie, which putteth them quite out of hart. As for the wicked therfore, and all ſuch as haue rebelled agaynſt God; they after long hardening of thẽſelues, when God waketh them, know not where to become. For they paſſe not of comming vnto him, but doe rather vtter their rage by ſpyting him and by gnaſhing their teeth at him. And becauſe they finde no ende of their miſeries, nor haue any reſt, this terrour which God caſteth vppon them is an incurable diſeaſe. As for to call vppon him, or to betake their liues into his hands, they haue no power: but rather foraſmuch as they knowe that they haue warred againſt him, they bee likewiſe driuen to vnderſtande, that in ſteede of helping them, hee will ſurely vexe them. That is the thing which we ſee heere in this text, where Moſes ſaieth, God will giue thee a trembling heart, a ſorowful minde, and daſeling eyes.

Nowe here may a queſtion bee demaunded. For we perceiue that Gods children, euen they that bee moſt deare vnto him, and which haue ſerued him in the righteſt and ſoundeſt manner; euen verie they are oftentimes in ſuch diſtreſſe, as doth amaſe them & make them beſides them ſelues. What complaints maketh Dauid? That Pſal.6.7. his eyes are forworne; that he is as good as conſumed with mourning, that the marowe of his bones is dried vp; that all his ſtrength is faded; that he is in ſo great feare, that to his owne ſeeming hee was ſwallowed vp into a bottomleſſe gulfe. This happeneth ſomtimes to Gods children. How ſo? This threatning is made to them that deſpiſe him, to them that cannot by any good meane bee reclaimed, and which haue alwayes withſtoode God. I haue tolde you already heeretofore, that God to trie his people to the quicke, ſuffereth them to bee altogether in like caſe as the wicked, inſomuch that euen they themſelues doe thinke ſo too. But yet doth God therewith reach them his hande, and although he doth not qualifie their griefes at the firſt, yet he holdeth them at ſuch ſtay that they ſhall not quaile. There lyeth ſtill ſome ſeede of Gods ſpirite hidden in them, which at length vttereth it ſelfe more fully, ſo they ſee well that God ſuſteined them in the middeſt of thoſe extremities, and in the end it appeareth vnto them, as it were in a viſible manner. Let vs marke it well then, that when the children of God bee toſſed and troubled with afflictions and haue ſo grieuous and harde temptations as were able to make them thinke, that God is their enemie, ſo as they dare not open their mouth to call vpon him, but are vtterly aſtoniſhed: inſomuch that although he alledge vnto them the promiſes of his grace; yet they cannot taſt of them, but doe ſomtimes euen refuſe them like the vnbeleeuers, as though they were fully determined to ſhut themſelues out of all hope of ſaluation: when they bee at this point, then doeth our Lorde worke in them, in ſuch wiſe as he ſuffereth them not to bee quite ouerthrowen with temptation. And that is Saint Paules mea- 2.Cor.4.8. ning where he ſaith, We be afflicted, but we periſh not, wee bee oppreſſed, but yet howſoeuer the worlde goe, wee bee not ouercome: for wee beare the mortifying of Ieſus Chriſt in our fleſh. Whereas hee ſaieth, that the faithfull may indeede be pent vp in afflictions, he ſaith alſo that yet notwithſtanding they quaile not for euer: albeit that they are made to ſtoope vnder the burden, and to grone as though they were cruſhed and broken; yet notwithſtanding, al thoſe heartbreakings breede not any deadly fall. Hee addeth the reaſon. Namely that it is the mortifying of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that they beare. As if hee ſhould ſay, that God doeth euermore ſeparate them from the misbeleeuing and reprobates, and from the deſpiſers of his maieſty, and that hee printeth in vs the marke of his only ſonne. It is true, that in this caſe they ſeeme as dead, but the ſame death is holy, for God ſanctifieth it, for that they bee members of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: and thereby they attaine to the reſurrection. True it is, that Saint Paul ſpeaketh not alonely of the laſt reſurrection, but he beginneth at the comfort which GOD giueth preſently to his children to trayne them on ſtill to the port of ſaluation. Now then, they enter into the middes of death, euen while they bee aliue. And therefore let vs marke, that although God doe now and then ſo afflict ſuch as haue walked in his feare and haue put their truſt in him, that they bee ſtricken with terror and toſſed with vnquietneſſe: yet notwithſtanding hee holdeth them vp by the ſecret operation of his ſpirit: and moreouer comforteth and gladdeth them in the ende, accompliſhing that which he ſaith in an other text: That the more they were 2.Cor.1.5. diſtreſſed, the more doeth hee ſet their heartes Rom.5.5. at libertie, that they may freely come vnto him: and ſo conſequently maketh them to vnderſtande that he neuer forſooke them. Lo howe our Lorde tempereth the troubles, and afflictions of the faithfull: ſo as although they indure neuer ſo great paines, and doe euen pant in comming vnto him, as folke ſcarce able to open their mouthes to call vppon him: yet when they haue ended their conflict againſt their tẽptations, albeit that at the firſt they cannot get the vpper hande, yet ſhall they get the victorie in the end. But as for them that haue played the reſtie iades, they remaine pent vp in their miſeries, without any remedie, becauſe God doeth ſtill ſet himſelfe againſt them more and more vntill they become frantike, and gnaſh their teeth at him, and finally fall into vtter deſpaire. To be ſhort, we ſee that which is ſpoken by the Prophet Eſay, dayly accompliſhed: namely, that there is no peace for the wicked; but that Iſa.48.22. their mindes are toſſed like the waues of the ſea: when there is any ſtorme, the waues bee troubled and the water is full of mudde: and euen ſo is it with them that deſpiſe God. Becauſe they make warre againſt him, therefore muſt he alſo trouble them: Inſomuch that euen without enemie, yea and without any body to fray Prou.28.1. them, they of themſelues be frighted, and beate and bounce themſelues, as if they were at warre within themſelues, ſo as there is no calmeneſſe at all in them, but all is full of trouble and diſorder. For whereas the faithfull be inlightened in the middeſt of their darkeneſſe, and GOD doth ſtill reſort vnto them to giue them ſome litle ſparke of light, in ſuch wiſe as they may beholde him; and albeit they attaine not thereunto at the firſt, yet notwithſtanding they ſtill ſtreine themſelues and holde on their way thitherwarde: in ſteede of this, the misbeleeuers are troubled at the very heart roote, and can none otherwiſe conceiue, but that they muſt needes periſh in deſpaire: and when they bee at the laſt caſt, then fall they to ſpiting of God, and blaſpheme him with open mouth. To be ſhort, here wee ſee that the grieuouſeſt curſe that God can ſende vpon men in this tranſitorie life, is that they cannot reſt vppon him, to acknowledge him to bee the keeper of their life: but contrariwiſe, are caſt vp at aduenture, by reaſon whereof they bee euer in doubt of their liues, and bee ſo caried away with miſtruſt, that they wote not where to become. When men be in this caſe, it is the greateſt curſe that can light vpon them. Not without cauſe therefore doth Moſes declare heere for a concluſion as it were in way of ſumming vp the reſt of all the curſes which wee haue heard of heertofore, that there is nothing ſo dreadfull, as when men are become blockiſh, ÿ there is in them no vnderſtanding, as who woulde ſay, God maketh not any more reckening of them as of his creatures, but they may well perceiue that hee doeth not guide nor gouerne them any more. When men are come to this point, and that their life, (notwithſtanding that it bee allowed of men,) is neuertheleſſe hainous and deteſtable before God, and moreouer they haue no taſt of his fatherly loue, nor of the care that he hath of other men, but they be as in the dungeon of deſpaire: when men (I ſay) bee come to ſuch an extremitie, it were better for them that they had beene borne before their time, and that they had neuer enioyed this preſent life. And euen that is the verie cauſe why wee heare it threatened that they Luk.23.30. ſhal ſay, O ye mountaines fall vpon vs; and that they ſhall wiſh that the bottomleſſe pittes had ſwallowed them vp. And why? For they finde that all creatures bee againſt them, when they haue no more acceſſe to God. When men perceiue once that hee will not maintaine them, but ſheweth himſelfe to bee armed againſt them: then do they vnderſtand, that al creatures be their enemies, and it grieueth them to behold the ſunne: then be they ſo poſſeſſed with feare, that they wiſhe there were no worlde at all: or rather that they were rooted out of it.

Nowe ſith wee heare ſo horrible threatnings, let vs learne to walke in the feare of our God: for there is no other way to liue in reſt, and to bee comforted in the middeſt of our ſorrowes and aduerſities, but to come with a free will to yeelde our ſelues obedient to our God, and to doe him ſuch reuerence as is due vnto him. For when we acknowledge him to be our iudge, wee will not play the Rebels; but bee willing to bee reclaimed, that we bee not in the ende comprehended and wrapped vp in the number of them that haue reſiſted him. Yee ſee then howe the way that wee ſhoulde keepe is that we muſt willingly hearken vnto God when hee menaceth vs, and that wee muſt bee moued thereat, and bee touched therewith to the quicke: and that thereuppon wee endeuour to ſerue him, and to obey his worde. For it may well bee that we ſhall ſometimes bee vexed with feare and vnquietneſſe: but yet will GOD deliuer vs from them. It is certaine that wee ſhalbe weakened by that meane, and it is good for vs ſo to bee: but yet howe ſoeuer wee fare, God will ſo keepe vs that wee ſhall not fall into vtter deſpaire. Moreouer, when wee ſomtimes feele any vnquietneſſe in our ſelues, and wee haue not power to call vppon God, but are tormented with diſtruſt: let vs vnderſtande that it is the fruite of our ſinnes, and let vs deſire God to make vs to perceiue that we haue not kept touch with him as wee ought to haue done, and that therefore hee caſteth vs into that vexation and diſtreſſe. But let vs not ſo tempt our God, as he ſhoulde proceede to this rigour that is here mentioned: namely, wee ſhoulde haue no power to commit our life into his handes. So then, whereas heere is mention made of a trembling heart, let vs conſider wherein our true reſt doth remain, namely euen in this ÿ God is our father, and that wee be his children. Likewiſe whereas mention is made of daſeling or ſunken eyes; let vs vnderſtande that we muſt looke vpwards, as often as wee be in any feare: and that there is no other remedie to qualifie our griefes, but to lifte vp our eyes to heauen. For as long as men looke downewarde, what ſhall they finde there but an infinite maſſe and maſe of miſeries able to ſcare them out of their wittes, ſo as they ſhall not knowe where to become? Let vs therefore ſeeke vnto this meane: that is to lift vp our eyes to heauen, knowing that God hath his hande ſtreatched foorth, to vpholde them that returne vnto him. Where mention is made of a ſorrowfull minde; let vs vnderſtande that it is the proper office of GOD to ſet our heartes at libertie, to the end that no temptation may vtterly vanquiſh and ouerwhelme vs. And this ſhalbe treated of yet more fully.

Let vs come to that which Moſes addeth; Namely, that in the morning they ſhall ſay, What is hee that will make mee ſee the night: and at euening, howe ſhall wee attaine to the morning? For thy life (ſaith hee) ſhalbe hanging before thee, as at a threede. Heere we ſee yet better that which hath beene ſaide afore. For what is the cauſe that men bee thus in a continuall feare, but that they cannot commende their life into the hand of GOD? In verie deede and to ſpeake properly, the liues of vs all are euermore, as it were hanging at a Threede, but yet the deſpiſers of God doe moſt peculiarly finde it ſo; and well worthie, for that they haue warred againſt him that ſhoulde haue ſet them in reſt and ſafetie. Their life is as it were hanging by a threede, becauſe that in ſteede of life there is euermore this feare of death in their heartes, and reaſon good. For what is the life of man? A ſmoke that paſſeth and vaniſheth away. And moreouer let vs ſee howe many deathes beſet vs on all ſides. So then as long as wee remaine in our naturall ſtate, without hauing reſpect to GOD, our life is alwayes, as it were hanging at a Threede. Yea ſurely. Though wee bee neuer touched outwardly, how manie diſeaſes beare wee in vs? A man needes not to goe out of himſelfe, nor to ſeeke farre, to learne to howe many miſeries and wretchedneſſe hee is ſubiect: for euen in his owne ſelfe hee ſhall foorthwith finde an infinite number of deathes. Seeing then that it is ſo, let vs knowe, that vntill wee haue learned to reſt vs in the prouidence of God, our life muſt of neceſſitie bee as it were flittering before our eyes, and altogether vncertaine: and to bee ſhort we beare it continually as it were in our hands: Iob.13.14. according as it is ſaide in Iob and in the hundred Pſal.119.109 and nineteenth Pſalme.

Nowe when it is ſaide that wee carrie our life in our handes, it is to ſhewe, that where as life ſhoulde beare the man, the man beareth the life: that is to ſay, the life is left vp to the hazarde of all misfortune. Euen ſo it is with al men naturally, and as we haue alreadie ſaide, the verie faithfull are not free from it, and that doe wee ſee by example in Iob, and Dauid. Notwithſtanding, the deſpiſers of God are they that feele moſt howe their life hangeth by a Threede. And wherefore? For God euen ſpite of their teeth inforceth them to perceiue the perils that beſet them: they ſee it is good reaſon, that all manner of creatures ſhoulde become their enemies, by reaſon whereof they ſtart when they heare but the falling of a leafe, and they bee afraide when no bodie purſueth them, as it is ſaide in another Prou.28.1. place of the Prouerbes. Thus doeth God open the eyes of them that are puffed vp with pride, and are drunken with the delightes of this worlde, and ſpecially which haue hardened themſelues in ſtubbornneſſe againſt him. Hee openeth their eyes, that they may knowe howe their life is leſſe than nothing, and that all theſe ſhadowes, leaſings, and vaine hopes whereupon men are wont to reſt, are but baites to beguile them. See heere I pray you whereunto they come which doe ſkorne God and his worde, and are wholly giuen to this worlde, repoſing their truſt on earthly meanes and on the creatures. Needs they muſt at the laſt be caught with ſuch feare as will teach them double and trebble to vnderſtand their owne ſtate.
